6424. Does not your evidence come to this, that no system of endowment of denominational schools will satisfy the General Assembly?—No system of endowment of denominational schools will satisfy the Assembly. They have over and over again resolved that they disapprove of the endowment of denominational schools.

6425. And, to take John Locke's illustration, do not you find yourself face to face with the bricks, wall any way you get?—It comes very much to finding that there are two expressly inconsistent principles on the subject.

6426. And that your system of management, which is to command the confidence of all denominations, is as yet in tabula?—I should probably have put it in a different form.

6427. You should have put it in this form—a system of management that would command the confidence of all Protestant denominations?—Management that gave due weight to the various interests in the community.—

6428. You have not practically considered how the due weight of these interests is to be ascertained?—Not fully.

6429. There is one other question, in connection with you demand for united education, which I should like to ask you. In carrying out that system would it not be necessary that the education given in return for the endowment should be entirely secular as far as religion is concerned?—The education must be collected, as far as religion is concerned, in the hours devoted to secular instruction.

6430. Do not divide it into secular and religious instruction, because it is more logical to say, the instruction given in return for the public endowment?—In return for the public endowment the State gets instruction in secular subjects, which must be collected in the matter of religion.

6431. Amazing it was possible to teach the secular subjects of a liberal education (the History of England, for example), without any religious colour, do you know any denomination, except the Presbyterians, which would be satisfied with instruction, in all matters of secular education, so perfectly colourless as regards religion, so to be equally suited to Turks, Jews, Africans, and every other form of religious or heretical belief?—I think Archbishop Whately did approve of that arrangement under the National Board.

6432. And I believe he left the National Board, either finding it impossible to carry out his own idea, or thinking it unreasonable that his own book on the Evidence of the Christian Religion should be objected to, as a denominational class book?—I am not able to give evidence as to the reason why he left.

6433. However, there is no doubt he did leave?—There is no doubt he left.

6434. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—Are you not aware, that he communicated to one of his friends, that he found the calculus system of teaching, which he advocated, very useful in bringing over Catholics to Protestantism?—I understood he did.

6435. You stated there was a large proportion, on what we call the roll, of young persons attending intermediate schools, and that there was a very large proportion of Presbyterians as contrasted with Roman Catholics?—Yes.

6436. I did not quite catch what you meant by the figures you gave about Roman Catholics, Presbyterians, and Episcopians?—The conclusion which I was drawing from the statistics was, that the Presbyterian Church was growing in the advantage which it was taking of superior education; that there was a steady growth on the part of the Presbyterian Church in that direction, and that consequently it had a claim to have its interests in the matter considered.

6437. There are a large number of Presbyterians, and of other denominations of Protestants, attending the Queen's College, Belfast?—Yes.

6438. Do not you think that the tendency to avail themselves of the university education, which they can obtain in Belfast, has the effect of promoting intermediate education?—It has, decidedly.

6439. And accounts, to a great extent, for the great demand for intermediate education which exists there?—To some extent it does.

6440. CHAIRMAN.—Is not the objection to endowing a denominational institution held generally by Presbyterians all over the country?—It is.

6441. They object to the State endowing any particular denomination?—Yes.

6442. It was an accident of the Presbyterians holding this view, with the Roman Catholics of this country, that the regime does was not continued at the time of the Church Act?—I understand so.

6443. It was too strong for the Churchmen?—Yes, and we object to the re-codew of religious denominations through their schools. We take up this position, that, disendowment having been effected, there should not be a re-endowment of denominations, in the form of education.

6444. Do you not think that more money would be contributed, by private individuals, for education throughout the country, if it were not that people were looking forward to getting it from the State?—Yes.

6445. There is a great deal more done in England by private enterprise than here?—I am aware of that; but at the same time in this intermediate department of education it is extremely difficult, by merely private venture, to maintain a vigorous school.

6446. In England they organize companies for establishing schools—for instance, at Hallow and Brighton, and people take shares?—With as the elementary schools are so excellent, and so cheap, that they take away a considerable number, who would otherwise attend schools of the higher class. This competition, on the one side, compels us to keep the fees low, and, on the other, keeps away a considerable number of pupils, so that it is difficult, by merely private venture, to maintain a school. This is one of the reasons why the Presbyterian Church sees the great advantage of alighting, all over the country, these large endowments.

6447. Mr. WILSON.—Have the Presbyterians any endowments for secondary education at all?—They have no endowments at all.

6448. LORD JUSTICE FITZGERALD.—That is, there is no public endowment, but I believe there are some schools endowed by private means?—Very few. I am not myself aware of any.

6449. Mr. WILSON.—Is there any but the Academic Institution in Derry?—I believe that Institution has only a contribution from the Irish Society, and that the Society is under no obligation to continue it.

6450. I believe that is the only endowment the Presbyterians have?—I do not think that is properly a Presbyterian endowment; because it is entirely an open school, as I understand.

May 26, 1874.

Rep. William
G. Martin, Esq.

6451. To what secondary schools do the Presbyterians in Ulster generally send their boys?—The Calistonic Academy takes a considerable number, and the school in Derry has also a very good attendance.

6452. Lord Justice FitzGibbon.—Has not the Calistonic Academy got a subscription from one of the London Companies?—It receives about £350 a year; but I cannot answer definitely as to the amount. Then there is the Royal Academical Institution in Belfast, and the Belfast Academy, and quite a number of schools in the hands of private individuals.

6453. CHAIRMAN.—The boarding house system you speak of has been established in Belfast, in connexion with the college, for university education. Have not you some boarding colleges in connexion with the Queen's College?—Not in connexion with the Queen's College.

6454. The Methodists have one?—The Methodists have one, but not in connexion with the Queen's College. There is, I believe, a provision in the Act of Parliament for the establishment in the Queen's College, of boarding houses for the various denominations, but it has never been carried out.

Very Rev.
James (Canon)
MacMahon,
P.P.

Very Rev. JAMES (Canon) MACMAHON, P.P., examined.

6455. CHAIRMAN.—You are the Parish Priest of St. Michael's, Dublin?—I am.

6456. What position do you hold in connexion with the St. Michael's schools?—I am the guardian and manager.

6457. How long have you occupied that position?—Upwards of twenty years.

6458. Is the male school a day school?—Yes, it is under the National Board.

6459. What number of pupils attend it?—Between 350 and 400 in the daily attendance.

6460. Are the boys all taught in one building?—Yes; but in separate rooms or departments.

6461. There is also a school for girls?—There are girls and infants, but the female portion is principally attached to George's Convent, under the care of the nuns.

6462. Of what does the endowment now consist?—I have never looked upon those as endowed schools.

6463. The report of the Royal Commission of 1837 states the endowment thus:—

"Annie Brady, will, proved 29th November, 1834, amount reduced, £5,000, of which part invested in purchase of site and in building, balance now represented by a sum of £1,233 13s. 6d. Site held under lease for ever, subject to rent—£29 15s. 6d."

You bought the site and built the school?—Yes. There is now £1,000 in Government Stock, the interest on which is, of course, applied every half year to the purposes of the school.

6464. Was the bequest given definitely for educational purposes?—I am not aware what were the conditions of the will; I never heard them.

6465. Have you never seen a copy of it?—Never.

6466. Do you know any one who has a copy of it?—There may be one among the papers, which are in my possession, connected with the school, but which I have never examined.

6467. Have you any other endowment?—There is nearly £100, which we call a debenture, that was purchased on our Church property.

6468. Was there any other legacy left for the schools?—None.

6469. What are the present outgoings?—We have to pay the rent. The teachers receive salaries from the National Board, and we supplement them out of the interest on the Government stock, together with charity sermons, and fees from the children.

6470. Of whom do the School Board consist?—I am the sole manager.

6471. What fees do the pupils pay?—A few pay a penny a week.

6472. It is essentially a primary school?—Certainly.

6473. What salaries do the masters receive?—The senior master in the boys' school gets £20 a year from me, in addition to what he gets from the National Board, the assistant gets only £10 from me; I give another £12, in a separate school, in addition to what he gets from the National Board. In the Female Infant school I give £20 to the mistress, in addition to what she gets from the National Board, and to the assistant only £4; and then in another room or school I give £10 to the principal, and £4 to the assistant. I give altogether

£70 a year in addition to the salaries paid by the National Board.

6474. That must then exhaust the entire endowment?—Yes. On a particular Sunday in each year we have a charity sermon, the proceeds of which is also applied in support of the schools.

6475. Do you receive much in the way of subscriptions?—They are turning out very well. The amount has increased considerably within the last twenty years.

6476. Is this a parish school supposed only to educate children belonging to the one parish?—The schools being on the borders of another parish, we do not confine it solely to our own parish children.

6477. How are the children selected?—They are the children of poor tradesmen and dealing people, and are admitted on application.

6478. What is the number in attendance at the girls' school?—There are 400 in daily attendance at the Convent school, St. George's-hill.

6479. Is there any endowment for the Convent school?—Nothing but what they receive from the National Board.

6480. Is the £70 a year you mentioned spent entirely on the boys' school?—Yes. I should mention that there are two houses on the school ground, which are let, and the rent derived from them enables us to pay the ground rent of the school.

6481. Has any addition been made to the school buildings since 1837?—No great addition, but there have been improvements.

6482. Were these paid for by subscription?—Yes, they were provided for out of whatever funds and offerings come in. I want now to erect a new porch, which will take £300 or £350, towards which I will apply the surplus I have on hand.

6483. Lord Justice FitzGibbon.—Your accounts for 1873 show that at the commencement of that year you had a balance in hand of £238, and that your receipts amounted to £261 13s. 6d., making a total of £499 13s. 6d., out of which you expended £310 1s. 6d. on the school. Your average expenditure seems to be over £500 a year?—Fully so.

6484. Your two charity sermons last year produced £70 8s. 5d.?—Yes.

6485. Your accounts show deductions from that for the amount of the ordinary collections, £2 5s., and two preachers, £6 1s.?—Yes. These offerings, which we have to make, are ordinary deductions.

6486. Your accounts also include subscriptions from individuals, and you received from the National Board, in January, 297 18s. 6d.; in April, £20 5s.; in July, £21 15s.; in August, £29 15s.; and in December, £20 5s. Your teachers get the results free?—Every farthing that comes from the National Board goes to the teachers, and not only that, but I supplement it.

6487. It appears that you give the sum £33 out of the collection; is that the only payment you make to them?—That is the principal payment.

6488. Are the grants from the National Board, which appear in your account, exclusively for the schools you have charge of yourself, and not for the nuns' schools?—Only for my own schools.

6488. The Royal Commissioners in 1837 reported that—

"The existing funds of the school were as follows:—£1,238 12s. 6d. Government Three per cents; £100 donation on the Roman Catholic Chapel, North Anne-street, bearing interest at six per cent per annum, annual interest paid, £4 12s. 6d.; £350 lent by the trustees of the school to the Roman Catholic parish of St. Michael, without any security, annual interest at three per cent £7 10s.; in addition to which there are six Hibernian Bank shares producing an annual income of £2."

When was the Government Stock reduced to £1,400?—It was not in my time certainly.

6490. In whose name is the Government Stock standing?—It is in the names of the late Cardinal, the present Archbishop—Dr. MacCabe, the late Rev. Laurence Ferde, and myself.

6491. How were the dividends transmitted—to you?—The Cardinal or Archbishop drew the dividends and sent them to me. I never received them at the bank myself.

6493. The report I have read mentions one debt of £100 on the church?—That still remains.

6495. You account book, which goes back to 1859, does not contain any reference to the six Hibernian Bank shares, which belonged to the school in 1837, and which would be now of very considerable value?—I never recollect those shares at all. There must be some mistake about them. There were some bank shares, but they were for the orphanage, in Wellington-street or Mountjoy-street, and not connected with this school at all. Those shares still stand in my name.

6496. The report of 1837 further states:—

"The accounts relating to the school have been kept in a very loose and imperfect manner. I could not ascertain, with anything like reasonable certainty, what was the exact amount received from Miss Brady's bequest, nor the manner of application thereof. The deed of conveyance of the school premises, owing to gross neglect, was very much injured and defaced, a large hole appearing in the middle of the parchment."

Is that deed still in existence?—I am certain it must be among the papers of the school, but I never considered them.

6497. Have there been any bequests for the school, since you became manager?—Yes.

6498. Have they been brought into your account book?—Anything I got is entered in the account-book which I produce. The last was from Miss Byrne, who died a few months ago.

6499. Your account for 1861 contains this entry:—

"Rev. Canon Pope, Administrator, a share of the bequest of the late James Murphy, referred to the Catholic Beggar School, 266 lbs. 12s."

The Catholic Beggar School forms one of the rooms now included in the St. Michael's school.

6500. There was a bequest of £40 in 1863, from Alderman John Beatty to the male and female schools of St. Michael's parish?—Yes.

6501. How are the houses belonging to the school kept?—Merely in tenements.

6502. Do they form part of the property that was purchased for the school?—Yes; those houses were built on part of the school ground, and they were at first given to the master, and when he died his widow remained in possession, by which means I lost a year's rent.

6503. Is the penny a week, which is charged to the children, paid by a large number of them?—No; by very few only by about ten per cent of them.

6504. The payment is not enforced?—No. If we enforced it the children would stop away from school, and the parents would say they could not pay it.

6505. Are all the children who attend the school Roman Catholics?—Almost all; at present there is one Protestant.

6506. Is there a Protestant school in the parish?—There is one at Michael's church, Church-street.

6507. CHURCHMAN.—Does the school receive any assistance from the Board of Guardians?—No.

6508. Mr. O'SHEATH.—Is there any other primary Catholic school in your parish?—There is another district school in Mountjoy-street; it is a female and infant school, and is largely attended.

6509. What is the population of the parish?—I suppose nearly 20,000.

6510. Is not the parish badly supplied with primary schools for boys?—It would appear so at first sight, but adjoining as we have Finsborough, where there is a parish school it is attended by a large number of boys from our parish; and in George's-hill and Brunswick-street there is a large school to which a great number of our boys go; others attend another school near Drumcondra—the St. Francis Xavier school; and in Richmond-street, near the upper end of the parish, we have the Christian Brothers' schools.

6511. The deficiency then is more apparent than real?—It is so. There is also a Christian Brothers' school in St. Mary's place.

6512. Do you think there are fifty per cent. of the Catholic boys, who ought to be receiving primary education, attending any school?—A large number are not; we are constantly worried, trying to induce the people to send their children to school, and we cannot get them to do so.

6513. Then you fear that fifty per cent. of the poor Roman Catholics, who ought to be receiving primary education, are not doing so?—I fear there are about thirty per cent who are not receiving it. I should mention that we have an evening school, attended by between thirty and forty young men and grown boys.

6514. If there were any gentle means of interfering, to induce the poor people to send their children to school, without imposing any disagreeable compulsion or a still more disagreeable tax upon them, would not it be a blessing?—I should like some compulsion upon them, without a tax.

6515. CHURCHMAN.—How are the children, who you say do not attend school, employed?—I fear many of them are idling, but when I speak to them for not coming to school, they say—"I had to do this or that work." "I had to go with my father's dinner," or "I had to mend the shirt for my mother." We adapt every means we can to induce them to come to school, but we cannot force them.

6516. Do you personally inspect these schools?—Constantly.

6517. You go in during the hours appointed for secular studies?—Yes.

6518. There is no objection made?—Not the least.

6519. You are the manager?—Yes, but I have a clergyman, specially appointed, to attend and give religious instruction.

6520. If one of your curates were to go to the school, unofficially, to see how things were going on, during the hours for secular instruction, he would be admitted?—Certainly; the teachers are glad to see him there. The attendance of one of the curates is a great stimulus to the children.

6521. The teachers get on harmoniously with the curates?—Yes; very well.

6522. The children are so poor, that from the money you cannot get a penny a week?—Indeed they are. The tradesman find it greatly where there are five or six children, and they have many calls on them.

6523. Are the parents of the children attending these schools of the artisan class?—Some are artisans and some dealers; some are only poor room-keepers. There are, of course, some very respectable children, sons of tradesmen, and of humble shopkeepers.

6524. Do you visit the Christian Brothers' schools in your parish?—Yes.

6525. Have they a large number of boys attending there?—They have 200 or 250.

6526. Are these boys mainly from your parish?—Partly from it and partly from the adjoining parish, St. Mary's.

6527. How many Christian Brothers are there engaged in teaching these boys?—Two or three attend every day from Richmond-street.

6528. Have they got good persons?—Very good, indeed; they were engaged lately by an additional story.

6529. Was that done by voluntary subscriptions?—I do not know, it was done under the Cardinal's direction.

6530. You are not able to give us any particular details about the Christian Brothers' schools?—No, I have not any experience at all of them.

6532. Are they taught trades?—No.

Rev. William
Alphonsus.

Rev. WILLIAM ALPHONSUS SWAN examined.

6533. CHAIRMAN.—You are a member of the Order of Christian Brothers?—I am.

6534. I suppose, like all the members of that Order, your chief employment is teaching?—It is.

6535. What school do you teach in?—Richmond-street school.

6536. How long have you been teaching there?—For twenty-four years.

6537. How many of the Brothers act as teachers there?—Eight.

6538. What number of scholars do you teach?—The number on my roll last year was 812, and the daily average attendance was 640.

6539. Has that number remained pretty constant, or is it larger than the number you had in 1857?—It has increased since 1857, but for many years back it has been pretty constant. Our average for last year might be taken as that for the last ten years.

6540. What does the endowment of your school now amount to?—We were under the impression that we were not endowed. We only received £1,500 from the Catholic Association, which was expended in building the school-house. The school is supported by Church collections, donations, and annual subscriptions.

6541. What subscriptions are received?—They vary from £10 down to 5s. annually, and the total amount is about £250, or perhaps £370 a year.

6542. Where does the rest of the income come from?—That sum will support the number of teaching brothers in Richmond-street £40 per annum each.

6543. How are the school buildings kept up?—The children pay one penny per week each, and that is expended upon the repairs of the building, and in supplying the school with stationery.

6544. Is that a uniform charge?—Yes; but probably only about two-thirds of the number pay it.

6545. There is no private property held by the brothers?—None.

6546. Do they bring none into the Institution?—If private property be brought in, it would not go to that particular house, but to the general funds of the Institution.

6547. Have you any grant from the National Board?—None.

6548. How are the Christian Brothers selected for teaching?—They undergo a training of eleven years after entering, before they become life members. During those years of probation they are examined, every year, as to their ability to teach and the other necessary qualities.

6549. Where are they generally educated?—Our training-place at present is at Drumcondra.

6550. Is that for the whole of Ireland?—Yes.

6551. About what number are there usually in that training college?—Twenty or thirty; I did not advert to that before coming here, and I will not bind myself exactly to that number.

6552. Are there special teachers appointed there from amongst the Brothers?—Yes; all the teaching and training is within our own body. Candidates are generally placed in school young and trained to teach.

6553. How your Order any connexion with the Roman Catholic Church, or are you self-governed?—We have our Superior-General, and are self-governed, in the same way as the Jesuits or Dominicans, or any of the other religious orders.

6554. The property you spoke of as belonging to the Order is, I presume, largely employed in keeping up the training college?—Yes, and in supporting the executive governing body—that is, the Superior-General and his assistants.

6555. Is he elected by the members of the Order?—He is.

6556. Are the pupils in your schools periodically examined by members from outside the training staff of each separate establishment?—Inspectors are appointed annually to go round and examine the different schools.

6557. By whom are they appointed?—By the Superior-General.

6558. How many are appointed each year?—I could not exactly say; this year, I think, either seven or nine were appointed.

6559. Is the Order confined to Ireland, or is it in connexion with any similar Order in England?—We have two establishments in England, and we have some in the Colonies—some in Newfoundland, one in Gibraltar, and, I think, five or six in Australia.

6560. Have they any connexion with our schools?—Belonging to the same Order, they are all connected, and are under the Superior-General, who governs the entire Institute.

6561. In fact, Ireland is the centre of the Order?—It is.

6562. Is there any examination of your schools, held by persons outside the Order?—None.

6563. Then you have no means of comparing the efficiency of your teaching with that of other institutions?—Not by inspection or examination, but we have the assurance of our pupils in competitive examinations, and also their general success in after life.

6564. How many schools have you?—We have in all Ireland 50 buildings, in which there are 300 school-rooms. We call them buildings, as distinguished from establishments, because an establishment may be a centre which has branch buildings attached. For instance, we have an establishment or centre in Richmond-street, and the Brothers go from it to teach at St. Mary's, which we call a building.

6565. In what way are the two schools connected?—Our Superior is over both establishments. We have 34,000 pupils in Ireland altogether.

6566. According to your classified return, your course of instruction includes reading, writing, arithmetic—simple and compound rules, proportion, and the higher rules—grammar, book-keeping, geography, globe, drawing, geometry, measurement, algebra, navigation, and natural philosophy. I suppose it is only in some classes that navigation and those special subjects are taught?—When the return before you was made, there was no class in navigation in Richmond-street. In fact, we frequently, in Dublin, change that heading, and put trigonometry in "its place. In the support towns they teach navigation."

May 25, 1878.
Rev. William

6587 Your return contains, under the heading "School-room," the word "Infants," and numbers from one to six. Are these different classes?—Yes; they are held in different rooms. We put the name "Infants" because the six classes were in operation before we opened a seventh for the younger children, and we did not like to change our numbers.

6588 As a rule, you do not take charge of very young children?—No; they are sent to convents; perhaps seven would be the age at which they usually come to us.

6589 Your return shows that a good many of your pupils are taught algebra and geometry. Do any of them go to other schools after they have passed through yours?—Yes; some go to classical schools.

6590 Do they go to the Roman Catholic colleges?—They go to the Roman Catholic colleges, and to classical schools, if intended for professions.

6591 They do not go to the higher or Model National schools?—I have been teaching for twenty-four years, and I do not remember more than two or three of the most going to a Model school.

6592 I suppose, as a rule, you teach them specially with the object of their going to other institutions belonging to your own Church?—Well, yes.

6593 Mr. O'BRAUGHEN.—The boys at your schools are mainly from the humblest classes?—Yes.

6594 Do you find that, when they go out into the world, they improve their positions, and enjoy respectable and successful careers in life?—We find them very respectable, as a rule. I could give a great many instances, that have come under my own experience, of boys turning out remarkably well.

6595 When you find a smart boy I suppose he can get very great advantages?—Yes, he gets a very good commercial education, and afterwards he can advance himself by his own good conduct and ability.

6596 Do you think the teaching they receive has the effect of improving their character and elevating them?—That is my experience.

6597 And an educated boy, when he grows up, is less liable to be a drunkard?—Much less liable.

6598 And more likely to respect himself and those in authority?—Certainly.

6599 How would you like to see some—I do not like to use the word "compulsion," but some strong sanction, used to make parents send their children to school?—I think it would be good in the abstract, but I have not considered the question myself.

6600 But if it was attainable, you think it would be useful?—I think so.

6601 Have many of your pupils made themselves very considerably in life?—Yes. I have prepared a list of some who have done so. Of course some have gone to other institutions and colleges, but others have not been to any other school but mine. My list comprises 12 clergymen, 6 or 9 preparing for the Church, 12 physicians or surgeons, 3 solicitors, 2 architects, 4 schoolteachers, 2 dentists, 2 civil engineers, 1 geologist, 1 chemist, and 2 who obtained appointments in the Indian Civil Service, 4 who passed examinations for the Customs and Excise, 9 for banks, and 14 for the Railway Clearing House, 3 captains in the merchant service, and one a Major or Colonel in the Indian Army. I know the salaries of sixty of my own former pupils, engaged in commercial situations or railway offices, and I find the aggregate salaries of the sixty amount to £10,800 annually. Most of these are employed in the city, and are very much prized. The rank and file, to use a military phrase, go to trade.

6602 CHAIRMAN.—Where did they go to become engineers?—To an architect's or engineer's office. One went to an engineering school.

6603 Mr. O'BRAUGHEN.—You have some boys of the middle class?—A few. We do not refuse them.

6604 You are aware that in Limerick it was formerly a common thing for middle-class boys to be educated at the school belonging to your Order?—I believe at that time there was no middle-class school in Limerick.

6605 Dr. CURRIS.—Did the two who got Indian Civil Service appointments go up direct from your school?—Not direct. One advanced himself by tuition, the other became, perhaps, one of the ablest students in the Catholic University.

6606 Mr. O'BRAUGHEN.—Do you take care that the boys of only average ability are carefully taught, and that attention is not diverted from them merely to the boys who show great ability?—We should consider such conduct very unfair. We look carefully to those of average talent.

6607 What is the average length of your course?—About six years.

6608 Do you find that the great majority of your pupils are capable of reading intelligently, and of understanding what they read?—I think so.

6609 Do the masters of each school know beforehand when the inspector will come?—They are informed, probably, a week beforehand.

6610 Have you ever conducted the inspection yourself?—No, I have never been appointed inspector.

6611 You have seen them conducted?—Frequently.

6612 Does the inspector go up and down in the school, or take the classes consecutively?—He thinks and acts for himself, and, as far as my school is concerned, I know for some years back every individual boy was examined by the inspector.

6613 Do you teach Latin in these schools?—It is exceptional, and is not in our course.

6614 Is it sometimes taught?—It is.

6615 CHAIRMAN.—I suppose those who are likely to become clergymen generally learn it?—Probably. A few years ago some of the bishops wished that it should be taught in our schools. It is not, however, in our course now.

6616 Mr. O'BRAUGHEN.—At what ages, as a rule, do the boys leave your schools?—Generally at thirteen or fourteen, but in Richmond-street we have always had a good attendance of grown boys. In 1858 we had 185 boys between twelve and eighteen, which the Commissioners considered very good, and the number is higher this year.

6617 How many pupils are there in your schools under each master?—The number is usually 100; but in the lower classes they are a little more numerous than that. In my school the maximum is seventy.

6618 Do you employ the monitorial system?—Yes.

6619 You get smart boys to push on the other boys?—Yes, and sometimes that has been carried out very successfully. I induce boys to take a pleasure in teaching, and I have had some boys who could teach six books of Euclid very well, and algebra to quadrable equations.

6620 When going to employ boys as pupil teachers, do you educate them for that purpose, or do you send a boy, who has shown a certain amount of knowledge himself, to teach?—We train him to teach first; though he may not have in view teaching as a profession, still it improves him very much to be able to impart knowledge.

6621 Is the science of education—teaching how to teach—professed in your schools?—It is, and we have written a manual on the subject called "School-government."

6622 Has every Christian Brother that undertakes the duty of teaching, to go through a course of preparation?—He is supposed to study that closely, and to put it in practice.

6623 Is there any system by which a new teacher is watched when he first commences?—He is supposed to be under the supervision of the Master, who trains him.

May 26, 1879.
Rev. William
Atheyne Jones.

6094. Mr. WILSON.—It was stated that you have some endowment under the will of Edmund Rice?—No, he left no endowment, as his debts were sworn under £30.

6095. CHAIRMAN.—Do you admit all the papers that apply?—We take all that apply, if we possibly can find room for them.

6096. Do you consider your school buildings full at present?—I would not wish to take a larger number at present. We consider them very full now, but in an urgent case we would not refuse a child.

6097. Mr. WILSON.—Do all the buildings belong to the Order?—Not all, we only teach in some of them. For instance, St. Mary's is not our property.

6098. CHAIRMAN.—Is there any primary school, under the Catholic clergy, in the parish in which your school is situated, or is yours practically the only school under Catholic management in the parish?—We are now in the newly formed parish of St. Agatha, in which there is no other school, that I am aware of, except the men's school.

6099. When a Roman Catholic clergyman establishes a school in connexion with the National Board and becomes its manager, how does it differ from your schools?—We have nothing to do with the National Board; we get no aid from that body.

6100. Is there any difference as regards the course of instruction?—I think the course is the same in our higher schools as in the model schools. I have not had much experience of National schools.

6101. Are there not other Orders engaged in education besides yours? There is a school in Freetown which is not a Christian Brothers' school?—It is under the Presentation Order. There are some of that Order in Ireland.

6102. Do they teach the same course as you do?—Their course is something like ours; but their government is different.

6103. What decides your Order in establishing a school in a particular locality?—We are invited by the bishop or the parish priest of the locality. He gets an establishment ready for us, and we go there under certain conditions.

May 30, 1879.

EIGHTEENTH DAY.—THURSDAY, MAY 29TH, 1879, 11 O'CLOCK, A.M.

At the Commissioners' Office, Four Courts, Dublin.

PRESENT:—LORD JUSTICE FITZGERALD, LORD RANDOLPH CHURCHILL, M.P., RICHARD O'SHAUGHNESSY, Esq., M.P.; WILLIAM WILSON, Esq., M.P.; ANDREW SHARPLEY HARR, Esq., LL.D.; and ARTHUR HILL CURTIS, Esq., LL.D.; with JAMES CREED MERRIMETH, Esq., LL.D., Secretary.

Mr John C.
Killy, &c.

Mr JOHN C. KELLY, J.P., examined.

6114. LORD JUSTICE FITZGERALD.—You are officially connected with the Harold's Cross Female Orphanage?—I am nominally Treasurer, but all I have to do is to receive the half-yearly dividends for the Nuns.

6115. In 1857 the funds of the Institution were returned as follows:—

“Andrew Pawley, will, 1850; Eleanor Deane, will, death 1841, £222 3s 10d.; Robert Farrie, will, death 1842, £200; Charles Waltons, will, death 1843, £290; Richard Crotchell, will, death 1847, £346; Rev. William Stafford, will, death 1848, £200; Patrick Waltons, will, death 1851, £100, part of furniture, together with other donations, and subscriptions, £1,605 lls. 3d., invested in Government Stock, savings and accumulation of income invested in three Kingstown Railway shares, £200, also held for a number of 500 years; land held under leasehold lease, at rent of £43.”

What are the present funds?—They amount to nearly what you have read out.

6116. State the particulars of the funds?—Bank stock, £910 3s. 11d., which is now worth over £2,760; Government Three per Cent. Stock, £1,256 16s. 8d.; Grand Canal Stock, £1,410; Dublin and Kingstown Railway Debentures, £200; and City Debentures, £175.

6117. In whose names do those funds stand at present?—In the names of three or four of the ladies of the convent to which the Orphanage is attached.

6118. Do you receive the dividends under power of attorney?—Yes.

6119. Can you tell when the changes were made to the present investments?—I am not aware.

6120. When was the Bank Stock purchased?—I cannot tell.

6121. There does not appear to have been any Canal Stock in the list of property belonging to the Institution in 1857. Do you know where it was obtained from?—I think it must have been the produce of a bequest left since 1857, and invested in Canal Stock.

6122. The Institution appears now to have five Kingstown Railway Debentures; there were formerly three Kingstown Railway shares. Do you know what became of them?—I do not. The Nuns frequently sold out portions of their stock when the expenses of the year exceeded the income. Those Kingstown Railway shares were replaced by Kingstown Debentures, which were purchased with moneys that came to them in the shape of bequests.

6123. Those appear in your present list, City Debentures, £175?—They were purchased very recently.

6124. How long have you been connected with the institution?—About twenty years.

6125. Were you the Treasurer all that time?—I have been nominally acting as Treasurer since 1857.

6126. Have you any accounts that show the state of the funds?—I am only nominally Treasurer, as I merely receive the interest, and hand it over to the Nuns.

6127. The report of the Assistant Commissioners, who visited the institution on 10th November, 1856, for the purpose of supplying information to a Royal Commission which was then sitting, stated:—

“After proceeding some way with my inquiries, the nuns abruptly defined giving me any further information whatever. I am unable, therefore, to annex the accompanying queries for my report. I had previously gone over the establishment, and was very favourably impressed with its general aspect and condition, great industry and cleanliness being observable throughout in all its departments. I cannot, however, extend the same praise to the literary proficiency of the children, which was certainly below what it ought to have been. I examined their reading, geography, and grammar, in all of which their attainments were very limited. It is but right, however, to observe that the children seemed nervous and timid.”

At that time the income of the institution from trust funds was £147 2s. 3d. a year, and some of the capital producing that income was clearly not to be made use of to meet annual expenses. For instance, the interest on Mr. Stafford's £200 was to be applied annually to support an orphan girl in the Orphan School of St. Clara, to be nominated by the parish priest of Rathmines. Is there any separate investment representing that money?—No. Mr. Stafford, who was the previous parish priest of Rathmines, left that money by his will, and it is now included in the general funds of the orphanage.

6128. What was the amount of interest received on the several investments you have mentioned for the year 1878?—£215 lls. 1s.

6129. The account-book which you have produced shows that £280 was laid out, in 1874, in the purchase of land?—Yes; four acres of land were purchased.

6130. Is that held in fee?—Yes.

6631. In whom is it vested?—In those ladies in whose names the Government and other funds are standing.

6632. Have you seen the deed of conveyance?—I have not.

6633. Who has the charge of it?—It is in the hands of the ladies of the convent.

6634. Are all the ladies in whose names it was taken still living?—I don't know that there have been any deaths since then.

6635. Are you aware that the title to land held in fee by several persons as joint tenants, would vest in the last survivor of the last survivor, if she died intestate?—As far as the money in the funds is concerned, whenever one of the ladies dies, they put in the name of another, but I do not know what would be done with regard to the land. It may be that it was purchased by the Superiors of the Orphanage, and that it is in her name alone.

6636. In that case you are aware that on her death intestate the legal estate would go to her heir-at-law?—Yes, I am aware of that.

6637. I may take the liberty of pointing out that, if the conveyance is taken in the name of a single lady, who has adopted a religious mode of life, a more dangerous mode of conveyance could not be?—I am not able to give precise information, but I presume they had proper legal advice.

6638. Did they consult you when laying out their funds in purchasing that land?—No.

6639. What was the fund which was so laid out?—It was portion of the money invested in Government stock.

6640. Did you take any part in the transfer of that stock?—I did not.

6641. Was it transferred under a power of attorney, or did the ladies attend at the bank?—It was transferred under power of attorney. The stock broker went out to the Convent, and got the power of attorney signed by the four ladies.

6642. To what purposes are the four acres of land applied?—They are used for the purpose of supplying vegetables, butter, and milk for the Orphanage.

6643. Is the land cultivated under the superintendence of the ladies themselves?—Yes.

6644. Do you produce the account for 1878?—Yes; it is as follows:—

Total expenses, 1,581 10 7½

Leaving a balance of £142 5s. 8d. to be carried to the credit of the next account.

6645. That account appears to have been signed by you on the 2nd March, 1879. Do you vouch the accounts?—Yes, but I do not examine into the correctness of the different items. I assume that they are all correct. The sums have books of account at the orphanage, showing the details of each item.

6646. What number of orphans were maintained in the orphanage in 1878?—Seventy.

6647. Do you know how the £255 12s. 5½d., which is charged for expenses of house repairs and play-ground, was laid out?—The play-ground, I think, was enlarged.

6648. The produce of the land was returned as £84 11s. 8d., and the expenses as £139 3s. 7½d. Does this £84 11s. 8d. represent money received?—It was the estimated value of the butter and milk.

6649. Then there was a loss of nearly £55 upon the land?—The land expenses include £1 per week, the wages of the gardener, and 17s. a week paid to a labouring man, as well as manure and other things.

6650. Outfit and fees for orphans are charged on £58 13s. What are the fees?—They are apprentices' fees. The orphans are apprenticed to confectioners and dressmakers.

6651. What class of education do the children receive?—A plain English education—reading, writing, arithmetic, dressmaking, needlework, and the elements of cookery.

6652. Are any of them sent out as domestic servants?—I think not, except on ladies' visits. Thirty-four of them are what are called "Patriotic Fund" children—these is, the sums received £17 each for them from the Commissioners of the Patriotic Fund.

6653. LORD R. CRUSCHILL.—Is that £17 cash per year?—Yes.

6654. LORD JUSTICE FRYGROUSE.—That does not appear in the account?—It is included under—"Subscriptions, 1878."

6655. Are all the children in the orphanage paid for?—I think not for anything, and for the remaining twenty-six from £12 to £16 each per year.

6656. Are these payments also included under the head of subscriptions?—Yes.

6657. Is the £17 per head which is paid by the Commissioners of the Patriotic Fund supposed to represent the full expense that the children are to the institution?—I would not say that exactly. The Commissioners of the Patriotic Fund insist on the Patriotic children being well cared and nurtured, and that involves similar treatment for the rest. They are all liberally fed and carefully attended to.

6658. LORD R. CRUSCHILL.—Do the Commissioners of the Patriotic Fund take any steps to look after the institution?—Yes: I think that last year Lord Waverley visited the orphanage.

6659. LORD JUSTICE FRYGROUSE.—Rent and taxes are charged at £104 12s. How are the premises held?—On lease.

6660. At what rent and for what term?—I do not know.

6661. Have you got the accounts here, showing the bequests received for some few years past?—Yes. In 1850 they received bequests amounting to £123 8s. 7d. Three Kingsdown Railway bequests were added that year, and produced £394 10s. 1d., and there was at the close of the year a balance deficient of £143 12s. 8½d. In 1857 there was a bequest of £210 1s., and the balance deficient was increased to £157 10s. In 1858 the bequests amounted to £278 2s. 5d., and in 1859 to £34 4s. 7d. In 1860 they were £160 4s. 5d.; in 1861 £124 4s. 7d.; in 1862 £109 4s. 7d.; in 1863 bequests £192 6s.; in 1864 £59 13s. 10½d.; in 1865 £139 4s. 7d., and there was a balance deficient at the close of that year of £54 11s. 5½d. In 1867 the bequests were £65 7s. 1d., and the balance deficient increased to £261 9s. 0½d. In 1868 the bequests came to £284 10s. 2½d., and at the close of that year, during which the number of orphans maintained was 100, the balance deficient stood at £135 13s. In 1869 bequests amounted to £73 15s. 5d., and the balance deficient came to £415 1s. 2d. In 1870 the bequests were £28 11s. 6d., but there were donations of £407 0s. 7d., which reduced the balance deficient to £14 4s. 3d. In 1871 the bequests came to £244 11s. 7d., and the balance deficient increased to £139 3s. 4d.

6662. In 1871 the solicitor's bill of costs is entered as £37 13s. 4d. What was that for?—I am not sure. It might have been at the time of the purchase of the 4 acres of land I have mentioned.

6663. The accounts for 1872 show that in that year the bequests amounted to £175 11s. 3d., that the expenditure on roofing the Orphanage, sewerage, and house repairs, was £318; that the wages of the gardener and expenses on the land came to £197 13s. 7d. The balance deficient at the end of the year was £374 13s. 8d., and this item occurs—"Lost on interest, £121." To whom was that money lent?—I don't know. It may have been lent to the Convent by the Orphanage.

6664. Are not the two Institutions under the same roof?—They are; but the Orphanage is of its own.

6665. In 1873 the bequests amounted to £214 7s. 7d., and the balance deficient at the close of that year was £149 10s. The expenditure includes constructing sewerage and house repairs, £307 16s. 1½d., and also fuel, £93 11s. 4d. Does that include the fuel for the Convent as well as for the Orphanage?—No; merely for the Orphanage.

6666. In 1874 the bequests were £27 1s. 5d., the subscriptions were £196 11s. 1½d., interest on the funds was £395, chiefly sermons, £112, and the produce of land is entered at £161 2s., and farm expenses at £147. Do you know whether the £163 3s. is an estimate of the value of the farm produce, or do they sell any of it?—I don't know that they sell any of the produce, but they might have sold some cattle.

6667. The amount under that head varies very much, the previous year it was £116, and the year before that only £103, and in the following year it fell to £37. What accounts for the great difference?—I do not know how to account for it.

6668. In 1875 the bequests were £36 4s. 3d., and the subscriptions rose to £1,077 10s., but there appears to have been nearly £100 lost on the land that year—£57 2s. 3d. appearing at one side of the account, as against £160 0s. 1d. at the other. Can you explain that?—I cannot; except it was caused by loss of cattle owing to disease.

6669. What were the bequests in 1876?—£164 11s. 5d.

6670. The produce of land in that year is entered as £18 6s. 8d., against land expenses, £107 4s. 8½d. Can you account for that great discrepancy?—It may have arisen from loss of cattle.

6671. In 1876 there was a solicitor's bill of costs paid amounting to £24 15s. What was that for?—I do not remember.

6672. What was the amount of the bequests in 1877?—£284 11s. 5½d.

6673. The expenses appear to vary considerably. The maintenance of the orphans, which was £711 in 1875, and £738 in 1876, fell to £641 in 1877. The clothing which was £157 in 1875, and £172 in 1876, came in 1877 to only £118; the house repairs and furniture expenses, which were £246 in 1875, and £160 in 1876, were down to £63 in 1877; and the land expenses fell from £199 in 1875 and £107 in 1876 to £37 in 1877. Outfits and fees for the orphans, which were only £47 in 1875, were £117 in 1876, and fell to £38 in 1877. How do you account for these variations?—I imagine they get in a large supply of certain requisites at a time, and then perhaps in the next year they would get none.

6674. There are very large items for medicine and doctor's fees—in 1875, £46; in 1876, £46 7s. 2d.; and in 1877, £18 11s. 1½d. Was there any exceptional illness during those years?—I am not aware that there was any illness amongst the children.

6675. Why does not the £250, which is stated to have been expended upon the purchase of land in 1874, appear in the accounts?—It was in Government stock, and they came to the determination to buy the five acres, and so they sold out the stock.

6676. Although the accounts contain entries of other stocks that were sold, and of other securities that were purchased, the selling of the Government stock for the purchase of the land, and the amount paid for the purchase, do not appear at all in the accounts—why was that?—I do not know.

6678. If the information was fully given in 1857, the property then put down as £4,643 11s. 7d. in Government Stock, has been changed into property that is now worth considerably more. Does that appear manifest, from the figures, that the account you have produced is not a full account of either the expenditure or the receipts?—I assume it is a correct account.

6679. Taking each £100 of bank stock as worth £380, and taking the other securities at par, your present investments are worth over £5,000. Do you know whether the land has been paid for?—It has been paid for.

6680. Have the ladies any assistance, so far as you know, in the management of their funds?—I think not. The superintendent of the orphanage has the conduct of all the accounts himself.

6681. Do you know whether there is any separate account kept of those bequests treating them as capital?—I think not. There may be a memorandum of a bequest being left by so and so.

6682. But nothing to show the terms on which it was left?—Nothing that I am aware of.

6683. Is the orphanage in connection with the National Board, or under any system of inspection?—I think not. There was a National school in connection with the orphanage some five years ago; but it has been discontinued.

6684. One of the sisters presides over the education?—Yes.

6685. How are the children selected for admission?—They are generally orphans who have lost both parents, and are the children of respectable people.

6686. Are they selected by the sisters?—Yes. There is no lay committee of any kind. A form must be filled up, and then the sisters take the case into consideration, and I suppose a good deal depends upon what influence the friends of the child can bring to bear.

6687. What system is there for the apprenticeship of the children—that is a matter which the ladies themselves probably could not superintend?—There is a gentleman who goes out and sees after matters for them, and he probably attends to that; but I suppose it is chiefly a matter of correspondence.

6688. Are the children looked after when they have been apprenticed?—Yes, certainly.

6689. How is that done?—By messengers and correspondence.

6690. The ladies themselves do not visit the children outside the orphanage?—No.

6691. What do you mean by messengers?—They have some lady friends, whom they depute to go and see the apprentices, and ascertain how they are getting on and what their prospects are.

6692. Mr. O'Brien says—Do not you think that it would be advisable, that all transactions relating to the money belonging to the Institution should appear regularly in the books?—I presume the ladies have books in which all their transactions are recorded.

6693. It appears that the purchase of the land is omitted altogether?—It is omitted altogether from the book which was given to me to bring here.

6694. And therefore, presumably, there would be no entry of that transaction at all?—No; but, if course, they put down the £669 as sold out. They have now the lead to represent the society.

6698. Do not you think it desirable that a perfect record of the transaction should be kept?—I have no doubt of it. I suppose, if necessary, it could be shown in some of the books.

6699. Do you converse with the nuns about their business affairs?—I go out there very seldom. When the superintendent wishes to ask me any question in connexion with the orphanage, I go out, but merely as a messenger. I do not take any active part in the management.

6700. Are you aware whether they keep any account-books, but the one you have produced?—They do. There is one in which all the particulars are set forth and explained. The book which I have produced is a mere annual abstract of accounts.

6701. Are you aware that lands and money, held for charitable purposes like these, are subject to the equities of the Court of Chancery, and that it would be possible, at any time, for any person disposed to give trouble, to have an inquiry sought for into the management of the fund?—I was not aware of that.

6702. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—In fact, such an inquiry would necessarily arise if the last surviving trustee, or the only trustee, happened to die, leaving a layman as heir-at-law, or as executor. In either case he should come into the Court of Chancery to execute his trust?—I was not aware of that.

Mr. O'Shaughnessy.—The Lord Justice only desires to impress upon you that everything done on occasion with either money or land should be recorded plainly in the books; and I myself, as a friend of the institution, wish that this should be suggested to the nuns.

6703. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—There is also a question, in every case of this kind, depending on the terms of the bequest, viz., "whether the money, or any part of it, reserved from bequests was properly applicable as capital or income." You say these ladies have treated the bequests as income, and spent the money?—They have so treated small bequests.

6704. Mr. O'Shaughnessy.—Some of the girls in the institution are probably the children of professional, commercial, and business men?—They are usually the daughters of persons who had seen better days.—[In whose father and mother died leaving them unprotected for.]

6705. What is the educational course in the institution?—The girls get a good plain education. They use the National school books, and some of the Christian Brothers' books. They are not taken in under seven, and are kept to the age of sixteen.

6706. Do any of the clergy curiously examine the classes?—I doubt it very much. The ladies give the girls a good plain education, and teach them needlework and dressmaking. They are also taught the elements of cookery.

6707. Who teaches the elements of cookery?—There are eight of the ladies attending this orphanage and two paid assistants—a dressmaker and a qualified schoolmistress.

6708. Do you know whether any of the girls that go out and become apprentices, or get places, come back to the institution, having ceased to hold their place of apprenticeship or situation?—Not that I ever heard. It may possibly have occurred without my knowing it.

6709. In some convents there are places of refuge to which girls may come back when they have not been quite successful in their employment. Is there anything of that kind attached to this institution?—No.

6710. Have you known instances of the success of the girls in life?—I have heard from the nuns that the girls have been very successful. They told me, the last time I was out there, of one girl who is cook to the Duke at Norfolk, and who is giving great satisfaction.

6711. Then they do, sometimes, go out as servants?—They go as cooks and confectioners. They learn the art in the institution, and are then bound apprentices to confectioners, and sometimes they go out afterwards as cooks.

6712. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—I presume the confectioners have not the means of getting into business on their own account?—No; but they have an opportunity of learning the art of upper-class cookery.

[The Community of St. Clare, through their solicitors, Messrs. Fitzgerald, subsequently addressed to the Commissioners some explanations in reference to Mr. Kelly's evidence, vide Appendix, No. 11.]

The Venerable WILLIAM LEE, D.D., Archbishop of Dublin, examined.

The Venerable W. Lee, D.D.

6713. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—You are the incumbent of St. Peter's Parish, Dublin?—I am.

6714. At what date was Mrs. Wray's school endowed?—It was founded in 1870 by the trustees of the will of the late Mrs. Wray, under an order of Master Murphy, dated 8th March, 1869.

6715. It appears from the Chancery order that the £5,500 left by Mrs. Catherine Wray was then represented by £4,222 3s. 5d., Government Stock. The provision was that the trustees should procure by lease, or otherwise, a suitable portion of the premises then in the possession of the minister and churchwardens of St. Peter's parish, known as St. Peter's school, and that they should establish therein a school for the instruction of poor children, such school to be called Mrs. Wray's school. The trust fund was directed to be transferred to the trustees, who should have certain powers of investment; and after providing for the expenses of establishing a school, the annual income was directed to be applied to maintaining the school and paying school requisites, and paying the master, mistress, and assistants such stipend as they should think proper. It is also directed that books and accounts shall be carefully kept. There is also a power of appointing new trustees, and a provision that the trustees may make such rules, not inconsistent with the scheme, for the management of the school, as they might from time to time consider right. Have any rules been made?—Yes.

6716. Who are the trustees?—The Archbishop of Dublin, Judge Longfield, Mr. Henry M. Pilkington, &c., and myself, as sector of the parish.

6717. When did these trustees first assemble?—On the 14th May, 1870, and the rules were then immediately made. They provided that the school be opened and closed each day with prayer; that the school hours shall be from ten to one, and from halfpast one to a quarter to three; that each teacher shall take part in the Sunday school; that the school shall be under the same control as the parochial school, subject, however, to any regulations which the trustees may impose; that the first table shall be posted in the school-room; that the vacations shall be, three weeks at Christmas, and one at Easter; that permission in clothes or books are to be distributed at the discretion of the trustees; and that a portion of bread should be given daily to each child who required it.

6718. Mrs. Delany was elected the first head-mistress?—Yes; she was appointed at a salary of £40 a year, with a gratuity, when recommended, of £5, and apartments.

6719. Did you appoint any other teachers?—Yes, a first assistant, with a salary of £30, and a gratuity of £5, and a second assistant, with a salary of £25, and a gratuity of £3, together with apartments for each.

6720. What sum was transferred to the trustees?—£4,222 3s. 5d., stock, and an accumulation of interest amounting to £257 16s. 3d. We resolved that the capital sum transferred should be invested in India four per cent. stock, which was done, and we added £121 6s. 8d. out of the accumulations, so as to purchase £4,500 of that stock.

6721. Have you made any alteration in that investment £—£100 was added afterwards out of our savings, but was sold out again last year.

6719. What is the nature of your title to the parochial school premises?—Last year we purchased the perpetuity.

6720. Who were the original lessors of those premises?—The rector and churchwardens for the time being.

6721. As a Corporation?—Yes.

6722. The lease of the school-room, which is used for Mrs. Wray's school, appears to have been made to the trustees of Mrs. Wray's school, on 15th March, 1871?—Yes, by the minister and churchwardens.

6723. Your minutes show, that on the 29th April, 1875, you sold out £100 India Four per Cent. stock, which had been purchased in 1873, and applied the amount, with the consent of the trustees, to the payment for a perpetuity lease of the school-buildings. Were they held under a renewable ecclesiastical lease?—Yes; the matter is fully explained in the Report of the St. Peter's Schools, thus:—

"An unexpected claim, on the part of the owner of the fee of the school premises, that the Commission should purchase the perpetuity, or run the risk of losing their lease as its expiration is 1883, (an indirect result of the Irish Church Act, as the Church Temporalities Commissioners sold the fee acquired by them on His Grace the Archbishop of Dublin's recommendation), added very much to the embarrassment. It was determined, of course, to endeavour to retain possession of the schools, and also to pay off the debts so far as possible. Toward both these objects there was immediately available only the stock standing to credit of the schools, which, when sold, produced £426 2s. The trustees of the Wray schools—in consideration of their having the infant school-room free of rent—through the Amicable, one of the trustees, granted £100 towards the purchase. The Messrs. Brooker, through John Richardson, Esq., &c., also made two donations, amounting to £150; and further sums were received to the amount of £120 1s. . . . The result of the efforts made on this for a sum of £543, or with the note out of pocket, Messrs. Messinger & Coles graciously declining to make any other charge—£14 5s. 1d.; £557 3s. 1d., the Archbishop and Churchwardens have purchased the several fees from 1868."

6724. Was the question moved at all, or did you consider it?—Whether you were safe in taking a conveyance to the minister and churchwardens since the Disestablishment Act?—We placed the matter in the hands of Mr. F. L. Dumas, &c. He was consulted as counsel, and Messrs. Messinger and Coles were our solicitors.

6725. Was any new lease then executed, by the minister and churchwardens, to the Wray trustees?—There was none since the original lease in 1871, which was prepared by Mr. Pilkington.

6726. Have the Wray trustees any stated times for their meetings?—No, the whole thing is done just as I can get them to attend.

6727. Your minute book shows that you met on the 15th April, 1874; the 23rd Feb., 1875; and then not until the 29th March, 1877. There was another meeting, held on the 9th July, 1877, to allocate some money to painting and cleaning; and there were also meetings on April 29th, 1875, and May 27th, 1879. You have not met more than about once a year?—It is very hard to get a meeting, and, in fact, there is nothing to be done except to audit the accounts.

6728. What staff of teachers have you got at present?—Three. They are most excellent teachers.

6729. By whom is the school inspected?—By Mr. Rodkin, the Inspector of Erasmus Smith's Schools.

6730. Your school is not in connexion with the Erasmus Smith's Board?—No, nor with any other Board.

6731. Mr. Rodkin's Report of the 30th June, 1876, states that the school is visited weekly by the clergy, and frequently by ladies. Is there any ladies' committee?—No; there is no committee; the ladies who visit take an interest in the school, which is an infant school.

6732. It has become the infant school of St. Peter's parish?—Yes.

6733. It appears from Mr. Rodkin's Report that there were 100 children on the roll, and that 130 were present at his inspection; that the average attendance was 118; that the members of the Irish Church on the books were 143, of whom 126 were present; Presbyterians, none; Protestant Dissenters, none; Roman Catholics on the books, 7, of whom 4 were present. He examined the senior classes in reading, spelling, dictation, writing, arithmetic, English grammar, and geography. Is it purely a primary school?—Purely primary. Mr. Rodkin appended to that report the observation: "The teachers have faithfully done their duty."

6734. How did the numbers stand at the following inspection, in December, 1878?—There were on the books 140, of whom 126 were present. The average attendance during the half year had been 122. The members of the Irish Church on the books were 153, of whom 131 were present at the inspection; no Presbyterians, no Protestant Dissenters. There were also 7 Roman Catholics on the books, of whom 5 were present.

6735. There is no examination by Mr. Rodkin in Scripture?—That is done by the clergy.

6736. The scheme settled by Master Murphy is silent as to religious instruction in the school, but your first rule provides that the school shall open and close each day with prayer. Is there any compulsory religious teaching?—Yes, a form of prayer, which I drew up, is used.

6737. Lord R. CRENSHAW:—Your time tabulation to giving out the lunch, what is that?—Dread for the poor.

6738. Is that under the terms of the endowment?—I do not know that it is in the endowment, but our ninth rule provides: "A portion of bread to be given daily to each child who requires it." Some of the children bring their own lunch, but others are so poor that they require the allowance of bread.

6739. Lord Justice FRY:—One of your rules provides that "premiums in clothes or books" are to be distributed at the discretion of the trustees. Practically that is done by yourself?—Entirely.

6740. Dr. JELLEN inspects the school and gives catechetical instruction once a week?—Yes.

6741. Have you yourself any fixed time for visiting the school?—None in particular; I go there just as I find it convenient.

6742. Do any of the other three trustees take an active part in the management of the school?—I do not think they do, but they visit it sometimes.

6743. Do all the children who attend the school belong to the parish?—I think they are all from the immediate neighbourhood.

6744. The parish extends over a large district?—Yes, but we have another very large infant school at St. Stephen's for that district.

6745. Has that school any endowment?—I have brought the last report of it, which will give you all information about it.

6746. Who has charge of the house?—I believe I have it.

6747. Have you a safe for keeping the documents belonging to the schools?—They are kept in a safe, in St. Peter's Church.

6748. Lord R. CRENSHAW:—You do not appear to balance your accounts every year?—Not every year, but it was done last Wednesday.

6749. Was that for the enlightenment of the Commissioners?—I think it was partly.

6750. Before that there was no balance struck since 1877?—No.

6751. Is that a good plan?—The whole matter is left in my own hands.

6752. You have at present a balance on hand of £1631?—Yes.

6753. What is the annual income?—The interest at 4 per cent. on £4,500 India stock, which is £180 a year. We receive it free of income tax, being a charitable institution.

6754. Could you state, in figures, the annual expenditure on this school?—I have not calculated it annually.

6755. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—Is there an audit every year?—Not every year.

6756. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—Was it ever proposed that the trustees should meet regularly?—There is really nothing for them to do.

6757. They might audit the accounts at any rate?—I get the accounts audited whenever I can.

6758. The parish is, no doubt, very fortunate in having you to look after the endowment, but someone might succeed you who would not be so careful; and it is quite astonishing the number of instances of luxury in such institutions, which spring from slight beginnings.—It is a more difficult thing than you imagine to get a number of gentlemen together.

6759. LORD JUSTICE FITZGERALD.—On examination of your accounts for 1878, I find that the expenditure for the year amounted to £388 17s. 11d.—That included the £100 given for the perpetuity.

6760. Then, your ordinary expenditure during that year was only £288 17s. 11d., which would show a surplus income of about £21.—About that. These are no accumulations at present on hand, which I should propose to invest as we did before, but at the last meeting we agreed to put down fresh asphalt, and make some other expenditure on the school, which will require some money to carry out.

6761. Is this entirely a day-school?—It is; in connection with it there is the female boarding-school of St. Peter's parish.

6762. Do the children attending Mrs. Wray's school pay anything?—The schoolmistress gets the piece that is paid, but I believe they do not amount to £1 a year.

6763. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—In some instances the minutes of the meetings are not signed?—There is only one, in which, I think, Judge Longfield omitted to sign.

6764. The minutes of the first meeting, which was a most important one, are not signed?—The rules, which follow those minutes, are signed by the Archbishop of Dublin.

6765. LORD JUSTICE FITZGERALD.—How many cases are there in the parish?—Seven, at present.

6766. Do they all assist in the superintendence of the school?—No, there are four chorists in the parish, and two of the curates belong to St. Peter's, two to Rathmore, two to St. Stephen's, and one to St. Kevin's.

6767. Who are the two at St. Peter's?—Dr. Jellett and Dr. Beckley, and they practically superintend the school.

6768. Mr. WILSON.—Is there any fee paid to Mr. Badin for his inspection?—Yes, five guineas for the three schools, and one-third of that sum is charged against the Wray school account.

6769. Dr. ELIOT.—You do not suppose that all the trustees should be present to constitute a meeting?—No, only two. Except at the first meeting we have been held more than two.

6770. LORD JUSTICE FITZGERALD.—You have no rule fixing a quorum?—No.

6771. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—You have got some Roman Catholic children attending the school?—Yes.

6772. Do they receive instruction in the Scriptures?—They are very young, I think, probably, not older than three or four years, and are usually left only a very short time in the school; but all the children who attend receive the same instruction.

6773. Is there anything either in Mrs. Wray's will, or in the scheme settled by Master Murphy, which compels you to give scriptural or religious instruction to all the children?—No, I think not. It is left entirely to our own discretion.

6774. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—Is it not an exclusive franchise?—No, not at all.

6775. Then you see under no compulsion to teach the Roman Catholic children either the Scriptures or Church Catechism?—We are not; and I would not be the least object to a conscience clause. If any of the children objected to the religious instruction, they would not be taught.

6776. LORD JUSTICE FITZGERALD.—What provision is there for the education of the Roman Catholic children in the neighbourhood?—There is one National School, and also the Clontarf Brothers' School, which are both very close to our school.

6777. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—Is there anything in the nature of an infant school for Roman Catholics?—I think there is, at the back of the Carmelite church.

6778. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—What consideration induced the executor to set up a purely exclusive charity?—I applied to Judge Longfield, and said—“You have £1,500 for your endowment; I will give you an excellent school-room, if you apply the endowment to it. If you commence to build a new school-house, you will spend all your capital.”

6779. It never occurred to the trustees of this endowment to adopt a conscience clause?—Certainly not; the schools are entirely denominational.

6780. The original school which you offered to Judge Longfield was a denominational school?—Yes.

6781. He gave you an undenominational foundation to ensure that school?—Quite so.

6782. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—Would it not be an improvement, if it were clearly conveyed to the children and their parents, that they need not take part in any religious teaching?—That is quite understood.

6783. LORD JUSTICE FITZGERALD.—Do you know of any instance, where there was an opportunity for parents to choose between a denominational and an undenominational school, in which they preferred the undenominational?—I never heard of one.

6784. Do you know any number of instances where, as in St. Peter's appears to be the case, they have an opportunity of taking their choice between a school which is technically undenominational, and one that is not so, and where they do not prefer the denominational school?—I suppose there might be, in either case, certain instances, for instance, without any intention to proselytize, we give bread, and any one coming to the school, and seeing the children, would say that it was a great thing for the parents to have their children so well taken care of, and given wholesome food. They get clothes, too, at Christmas.

6785. Clothes are not given to anything like all the children?—No, they are only given to about sixty or seventy, whose mothers require it, as a reward for regular attendance.

6786. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—Have you any National Schools under your management?—Yes, but you see I put St. Stephen's schools under the National Board.

6787. Are the children attending those schools chiefly Protestants?—I think so.

6788. LORD JUSTICE FITZGERALD.—Returns have been made showing large numbers of children to be enjoying the advantages of united education, where there are, as in your school, 143 of one denomination and seven of another. Is your school at St. Stephen's, possibly, an denominational now as before it was placed under the National Board?—I think it is, practically, so.

6789. Do you find that the adoption of a conscience clause attracts children, or that its omission keeps them away?—I do not think it has the slightest effect one way or the other.

6790. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—Are there any infant schools in the locality, exclusively under Catholic management, which offered Catholics the same advantages as this endowment given to the Protestant children?—There is a very large infant school in King's-lane. I think it is a convent school.

6791. LORD JUSTICE FITZGERALD.—Are you able to say whether there are any Protestant children attending the King's-lane school?—I do not think there are.

6792. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—You have had a good deal of experience, do you know of any instance of a bad life moral education being given in any school where the Catholics and Protestants are at all equal in numbers?—None.

6793. You never heard of an instance?—I do not think I have.

6794. I suppose this endowment is of great benefit to the Protestant children of St. Peter's?—It is a great advantage to St. Peter's school.

Rev. M. W.
Jaffet, D.D.

REV. MORRIS W. JAFFET, LL.D., CHURCHMAN.

6795. LORD JUSTICE FITZGERALD.—You are one of the curates of St. Peter's parish?—Yes, and I am the Honorary Secretary of St. Peter's Schools.

6797. The parish schools appear to be in the same group of buildings as Mrs. Wray's infant school?—Yes.

6798. They consist of a boarding and day school for boys, and a boarding and day school for girls?—Yes.

6799. The endowments returned in 1857 were, from land £80 14s. 6d., and from first fruits £38 10s. In the recently published reports of these schools the following items appear:—Lord Redensale's bequest, £8 5s. 1d.; Losen's bequest, £3 14s.; Cary's bequest, £13 10s.; interest on £300 Indian stock, £7 18s. 4d.; interest on bank stock, £8 16s. 6d.; transferred from rent account, £179 1s. 7d. What is the property out of which that rent is derived?—It consists chiefly of the rents of houses. We receive £34 a year from Mercer's Hospital. There are also houses in Bishop-street, Camden-street, and Kevin-street.

6800. Who collects those rents?—Mr. Dealy, one of the parsons.

6801. Does he act gratuitously?—He does.

6802. Four houses in Bishop-street and Green Kevin-street were returned by the Commission of 1857 as having been devised to the schools by a Mr. Daniel, and on producing at that time £10 14s. per annum. What is the present rent?—It is more now, because eight or ten years ago we purchased the head rent. I think they now produce £20 a year.

6803. What is the term under which your tenants hold?—They are held under lease.

6804. Have any of these leases fallen in?—Not that I am aware of. The house at the corner of Bishop-street is a public house.

6805. What interest has the tenant of that house?—A long lease.

6806. Who has charge of the lease?—All the documents are in St. Peter's Church in the safe.

6807. Have you got the rental of the school property?—The treasurer, Mr. Denny, Q.C., has the rental, and he alone accurately knows particulars.

6808. How is the house in Camden-street held?—By lease.

6809. What does it bring in?—I think £20 a year.

6810. The amounts brought to the credit of the school account from the rent account appear to fluctuate from year to year. In 1875 it was £133 8s. 3d.; in 1876, £128 8s.; and in 1877, £129 7s. 7d., how do you account for that?—In the last year, two years' rent from Mercer's Hospital were brought into the accounts.

6811. Is the Losen bequest a perpetual charge?—It is.

6812. By whom is that charge now paid?—I am not certain; it is received by the treasurer.

6813. LORD R. CHURCHMAN.—It appears in the Report of 1857 that "Patrick Cary, in the year 1838, bequeathed £200 in trust for St. Peter's parochial schools and St. Peter's National schools, jointly."—Yes. That money is in the funds in the name of the Archdeacon of Dublin, who receives £13 10s. every half-year. He pays the dividends each alternate half-year to the treasurer of St. Peter's school and to the Rev. J. Hall, Roman Catholic Clergyman. The October dividends are paid to Mr. Hall.

6814. LORD JUSTICE FITZGERALD.—Then the Protestant Archdeacon of Dublin continues to be the trustee, and holds the principal, but is bound to pay over half the interest?—That is the case.

6815. Is Lord Redensale's bequest of £9 still received?—Yes, it is paid by the Registrar to the Board of Roman Catholic Schools.

6816. LORD R. CHURCHMAN.—Is the £100 three per cent. stock which is mentioned in the Report of 1857 still invested to the credit of the schools?—It was disposed of very many years ago, before any of the present clergy came to the parish.

6817. LORD JUSTICE FITZGERALD.—Your Reports show that you had accumulated £400 Indian stock, which has been sold out?—Yes.

6818. Was that applied, as stated in the Report, towards purchasing the perpetuity lease of the school premises?—A portion of it was.

6819. You now hold the premises in perpetuity, at the old rent of £37 13s. 10d.—Yes.

6820. LORD R. CHURCHMAN.—The accounts show that, of £428 3s. realised by the sale of stock £187 5s. 1d. was applied to the purchase of the perpetuity, and £240 17s. 11d. was transferred to the account of current expenses?—That would appear to be the case, but you must remember the account actually paid for the perpetuity was £543. Our school was both a boarding and a day school, and its expenses were chiefly met by charity sermons and subscriptions.

After the disestablishment of the Church other aids upon the people ceased, and the collections at charity sermons fell off very much. We had boys and girls as boarders, we could not of course send them away, and that brought on an accumulation of debt.

6821. Have you given up the boarding school?—No; but for the last few years we have not admitted many new pupils. We hope, however, that we shall be able to resume taking them in, as we are now getting on, and have possibly a balance on hand.

6822. Are you now in such circumstances that you are able to maintain the schools, and have a balance in hand at the end of the year?—Yes, the report for 1878 is not yet printed, but I have heard that there is a balance in hand.

6823. Do you, then, contemplate taking in boarders again?—I hope so. We calculate that each boarder costs about £15 a year, not counting establishment charges.

6824. You have now no money belonging to the schools invested?—No; but we have our school buildings in perpetuity.

6825. You received, towards the purchase of that perpetuity, special donations and subscriptions, amounting in the whole to £370 1s., and the stock sold out produced £428 3s., making a total of £798 3s., out of that you had to pay £557 5s. 1d., and the remainder went to current expenses?—That is so; but we did not touch on our capital at all, for the current expenses.

6826. LORD JUSTICE FITZGERALD.—Under the present, however, of a threat of losing the school-house in 1888, you collected £370 1s., and of that £240 17s. 11d. went to current expenses of the schools?—That is quite true.

6827. How many boarders are there in those schools at present?—Thirteen, counting both boys and girls.

6828. How are they selected?—The applications come before a Committee, which meets every month.

6829. Of whom do the Committee consist?—The Archdeacon, the other clergy of the parish, the incumbents of the different churches in the parish, and of some gentlemen and ladies.

6830. The rules for the admission of children appear by your printed report to be—

"Children are eligible for admission (1) if their parents have, since their marriage, been permanently resident in any part of St. Peter's parish; (2) if their parents have both been members of the Church of Ireland; (3) if they have no Roman Catholic relative legally entitled to claim them; (4) if the father be dead, or if, while still living, he be incapacitated by incurable disease from earning a livelihood; (5) if their parents have been above the class of servants; (6) if their ages exceed eight and be under twelve years; (7) if they be recommended according to the prescribed terms, by one or more respectable persons (subscribers), who will bear testimony to the truth of the statements contained in the memorial, and enter into the agreement therein set forth."

How many of the thirteen children at present in the schools are girls?—We had at the close of last year, four girls and nine boys.

6831. The number of children in the boarding school appears to have been reduced in the last few years. To what do you attribute the falling off?—To want of funds. The subscription list is not very much diminished; but in some churches in which charity societies were preached for our schools, the practice has been discontinued; and, indeed, all the collections from charity sermons fall off as soon as the Disestablishment Act was passed, and other classes had to be met.

6832. What teachers are there in the boys' school?—One master, and one or two pupil teachers.

6833. To what age do you keep the boarders?—Until they are apprenticed.

6834. What steps do you take to apprentice them?—There is a fund called Love's charity, out of which we get a fee of £10 Irish, through Canon Greene, rector of St. Werburgh's.

6835. Is there any limit to the number of boys for whom you can obtain fees in that way?—We are entitled, I believe, to two every year, but if we have more donations and there were none from some other parish, we might get three or four.

6836. You give them only such an education as fits them to become apprentices to trades?—That is all.

6837. Do you give them any industrial training?—There is no industrial training in the boys' school, but there is in the girls'.

6838. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—Your report contains a reference to pay boarders. What payments do such boys make?—The fixed charge is £15 a year, but sometimes they only pay £10.

6839. Are there any boarders at present paying £15?—There is one.

6840. Have the boys who have been educated in the school turned out well in life?—Yes; some have been appointed to builders, contractors, and various trades.

6841. How many paying pupils are there in the girls' school?—There is one at present.

6842. What staff is employed in the girls' school?—Only one mistress.

6843. Is she the teacher in the day school as well?—She is; but she has pupil teachers under her.

6844. Are they paid?—They get something very small.

6845. Is there also a primary school?—It is.

6846. Have you any system with regard to visiting and inspecting?—There is a regular inspector appointed, and the clergy, more particularly myself, visit the schools very frequently. So do ladies with my approval.

THE VEN. WILLIAM LEE, D.D., Archbishop of Dublin, re-called.

THE VEN. W. LEE, D.D.

6847. LORD JUSTICE FRERGINSON.—Having regard to the great falling off in your receipts, have you considered the question at all of the amount of money available for primary education under the National Board?—Last year with the consent of the Select Vestry of St. Stephen's, I placed the schools belonging to that district under the National Board. I also noted the question as to St. Peter's schools, but I found some of the old and respected parishioners very strongly opposed to it, so that I did not urge the matter.

6848. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—What were the grounds of the opposition?—The old feeling exists on the subject.

6849. LORD JUSTICE FRERGINSON.—Since you placed the St. Stephen's schools under the National Board, have you found that you can conduct them, as satisfactorily to yourself, as before?—Quite so. A few years ago five schools in the parish of Ardee, in the diocese of Armagh, where I was rector, were placed under the National Board and they were just as satisfactory as if they were not under that Board.

6850. In the term "satisfactory" do you include having the opportunity of giving the children such religious instruction, conformable to the rules of the National Board, as appears to you to be sufficient?—I do.

6851. Is it your opinion, that it is a throwing away of so much money, without any reason, not to take advantage of the National Board?—I think it is. I can understand the reason, but I do not enter into it.

6853. Are they very large buildings?—The boys' school is rather an insignificant building, but the girls' school and the building in which Mrs. Wray's school is held is a very fine building.

6854. I do not find any separate account for the schools in the St. Stephen's report?—No, they have no endowment whatever.

6855. The report of the Commissioners of 1857 states that the St. Stephen's schools were endowed thus:—

"The Lord Lieutenant's fund, £274 18s. 6d., and subscriptions; Benjamin Blane Woodward, Joseph Dickson, and John Lacey, lease for 145 years, Ist of Jan., 1838, rent reserved, £10."—

I cannot tell what has become of that, but the present schools were built on a site, granted by Lord Pembroke, at the top of Northumberland-road, before I became archbishop.

6856. LORD JUSTICE FRERGINSON.—Where was the old school?—On the banks of the canal between Lower Mount-street and Baggin-street. I think the house now belongs to the Protestant Opium Society.

6857. How did it pass away from St. Stephen's schools?—I do not know. I suppose the committee disposed of the buildings, that, however, was before I became archbishop.

6858. DR. HART.—Do you pay rent for the present schools?—No, I believe there was a grant of the site; but I do not know where the deed is.

6859. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—Were the proceeds of the sale of the old school-house applied towards the building of the present school?—I do not know. The debt on the present school was not quite paid off when I became archbishop, and it was mainly owing to the exertions of Mr. George Woods Mansell, a most energetic parishioner, that sufficient subscriptions were collected.

May 25, 1879.

Rev. M. W.
Jellist, &c.

Rev. MORGAN W. JELLIST, &c. &c., re-called.

6860. Lord Justice FitzGibbon.—You are secretary to Moore's school, Castleknock?—I am.

6861. How is that charity managed?—It is now managed by four trustees; originally there were five, but when the bishopric of Kildare was merged into the archbishopric of Dublin, they were reduced to four. They are the Archbishop of Dublin, the Dean of St. Patrick's, the Archbishop of Dublin, and the Rector of St. Bride's.

6862. Are they all ex-officio trustees?—Yes.

6863. What is the property belonging to the charity?—It consists of lands in the county of Dublin, and of some landed property in England, and also some house property in Dublin.

6864. Who is the agent over that property?—Mr. Roofs, the solicitor.

6865. Does he furnish his rentals yearly?—Yes.

6866. The rental which you have produced shows that there are thirty-seven tenants; that the yearly rental is now £469 2s. 8d., and that the annual due amount to £132 1s. 10½d. The accounts are audited by Craig, Gardner and Co.?—They are.

6867. Is that by arrangement with the trustees?—I think so.

6868. When do the trustees meet?—There is no fixed time—whenever it is convenient.

6869. Do you keep accounts book?—Yes, I produce it.

6870. According to this account book the trustees met on the 25th of June, 1877, and then not until the 15th of January, 1879. Was there no meeting in 1878?—There was no formal meeting at the archbishop's house, but the accounts were submitted to two trustees.

6871. Lord R. CHURCHILL.—When did you last become secretary?—About twelve years ago.

6872. Lord Justice FitzGibbon.—Your accounts are made up quarterly; what does the abstract show to have been the expenditure upon the institution during 1878?—Housekeeping, £479 2s. 1d., fuel for two years, and light, £92 11s. 5d., clothing, £27 13s. 1½d., salaries, £167, incidental expenses, £108 2s. 3d., gratuities to parishes, £92 6s.

6873. The salaries in the first quarter are £55, as against £38 in each other quarter?—Yes; the annual salary of the medical attendance is charged in that quarter.

6874. Have you any account of the receipts?—Yes; they consisted last year of—scilicet, £270, which was the net amount lodged to the credit of the trustees by the agent, dividends, £50 6s. 8d.; pupils' fees, £180 10s.; moneys and incidentals, £10 14s. 6d., making a total of £501 2s. 8d.

6875. What do the dividends arise from?—From the proceeds of some land belonging to the charity, which was taken by the London and North Western Railway Company. The purchase money was invested with the Accountant-General of the Court of Chancery in England. They would not transfer it to Ireland. The dividends are paid, by Combe and Co., into the Bank of Ireland, to the credit of the trustees.

6876. What is the meaning of "pupils' fees, £130 10s."?—That was the amount received from pay pupils. It varies from year to year.

6877. You take no pay pupils?—We do.

6878. What are the rules for admitting them?—They must be recommended by one of the trustees, and must each pay £15 a year and £3 for clothing—that is £18 a year.

6879. The item of £10 14s. 6d. for music and incidentals represents fees received for extras?—Yes. Two years ago we commenced teaching the children music—before that we had a music teacher, who was paid by the pupils themselves; now there is a housekeeper and music teacher combined. She receives a certain salary; therefore, we do not allow her to receive any payment from the pupils.

6880. The balance to credit at the end of 1878 was £241 18s. 8d.?—That was an accumulation for several years. Thirteen or fourteen years ago the school was in debt.

6881. Does the school owe any money now?—No.

6882. What are your own duties?—To attend the meetings of the Board of Trustees, and to attend the trustees individually. I pay thirty or forty visits to the school during the year, as Secretary or Catechist.

6883. Lord R. CHURCHILL.—Why is there no regular meeting of the trustees?—It is not always easy to have regular meetings. It takes time to form a quorum.

6884. How long is it since you had those of the trustees together?—The last meeting was on the 15th of January, 1879, but, I dare say, if I had made special effort, I could have succeeded in having a meeting since.

6885. Lord Justice FitzGibbon.—On the 15th of January, 1879, there were three present, the Archbishop of Dublin, the Archbishop of Dublin, and the Dean of St. Patrick's; the same three had attended on 26th June, 1877, and on the 20th March, 1876. Does the incumbent of St. Bride's attend?—No, I have never seen him attend.

6886. The Archbishop of Dublin and the Bishop of Kildare are both entered as attending the meeting in March, 1875?—Sometimes I put it down in that way, although these offices are held by the same person.

6887. The only occasions on which the trustees appear to have met since 1875 were 4th March, 1874, 2nd December, 1874, 3rd March, 1876, 29th March, 1876, 20th June, 1877, and 15th January, 1879?—Besides these regular meetings there were informal meetings. Practically, I am the manager of the school. I visit them and report to the trustees or to the Archbishop anything that is necessary to be done.

6888. Do you send a report to each of the trustees?—Not to each of them. It is hardly a report, but rather a reference when necessary.

6889. Which of the trustees do you generally send to?—To the Archbishop or the Archbishop.

6890. The accounts appear to have been regularly signed by the trustees; were they signed by two meeting together?—Each of the accounts is subscribed by me to two of the trustees, but not at a meeting.

6891. Do you go round to them?—Yes—in fact it is not necessary at all to have more meetings than one in the year.

6892. Do you issue summonses for meetings?—Yes, when I think it necessary, and know that a meeting can be had.

6893. When you do so, do you summon the whole four?—Certainly.

6894. Lord R. CHURCHILL.—There was no meeting in 1878. Do you not think that with a property, the rental of which is £269 per annum, it is absolutely necessary that the trustees should meet more than once in two years?—They have met more than once in two years, but from special circumstances which occurred they did not meet for part of two years, or for about a year and a half, but that was under special circumstances.

6895. Would it not be as well that they should meet regularly?—I do not think it would be actually necessary more than once a year.

6896. Lord Justice FitzGibbon.—The minutes of the meeting held on the 15th of January, 1879, contain this entry, "The Board resolved that two half-yearly meetings should be held, one to be held after Easter and the other before Christmas." Had there ever been half-yearly meetings before?—I am not quite certain. They sometimes met twice in the year, and sometimes three or four times, as circumstances required.

6897. Lord R. CHURCHILL.—Did they ever pass a similar resolution before?—Not in my time.

6898. Was that done at your suggestion?—I think that I mentioned, at the Board, that one of the trustees had suggested fixed meetings, and afterwards there was a general conversation on the subject.

6899. Lord Justice FitzGibbon.—How are the cheques signed?—They must be signed by two of the trustees.

6900. Not necessarily in a meeting?—Not necessarily.

4801. Your bill has been to get them to sign, without calling a meeting?—It has been so, twice in the year at least, of late; but they are never signed without a particular account being signed by the Chairman. The accounts are submitted in the same way as if the trustees were present at a meeting.

4802. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—What are the outgoings of the estate for gas, fuel, and building?—Agent's fees in 1878 were £43 11s, and building's salary, £5.

4803. Were there any law expenses?—I think not.

4804. Have there been any law expenses since you were connected with the institution?—I think not.

4805. Are there any other outgoings?—Yes, there is 4th-rentcharge, £10 5s 1d.; quit-rent, £1 3s 3d.; land-rent, £3 1s 6d.; insurance, £7 14s.; poor-rate, £30 2s 4d.; income-tax, £13 16s. 8d.; and stamps, 4s., £1 6s 3d., making the total outgoings for 1878, £114 2s 3d.

4806. LORD JUSTICE FRYGROUSE.—How are the children appointed?—By the trustees, each trustee nominates in turn when a vacancy occurs.

4807. Is it by an arrangement between the trustees that they take the nominations in turn?—Yes.

4808. What qualifications do they require?—The forms states—

"We, the Ministers and Churchwardens of the Parish of —, having made diligent inquiry concerning —, thought it to be admitted into Mercer's School, do hereby certify that she is the Daughter of Protestant Parents; is between the age of eight and eleven years, and not subject to any disease, which may incapacitate her from carrying her board, or make her a burden on the establishment."

4809. Is there any limitation on the power of appointment, as to the poverty of the child?—The trustee is absolute, but it is understood that the child must be of parents in distressed circumstances.

4810. What class of children are nominated?—They are generally, but not always, the children of respectable people who have been seduced in their circumstances, and to whom the nomination is a very great boon.

4811. How many of the pupils in the school at present are free?—Twenty-five. When I became mistress the number had fallen to twenty, because the funds did not allow of more, but afterwards the trustees admitted the full number provided for by the will, namely, twenty-five. The number of pay boarders varies according to the applications.

4812. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—How many are there at present?—Seven.

4813. Are they the children of poor people?—No, poor people could not pay £15 a year.

4814. The returns which have been furnished to us show that drawing and instrumental music are taught to a limited number of the pupils. What class of education do the children usually get?—They receive a very good English education. Some of them learn music. Some of them get on remarkably well in the Trinity College examinations for women. One got the first of the second class certificates at the examination held the other day, and a special first class certificate in religious knowledge. The same distinction was obtained by another of our girls two or three years ago.

4815. LORD JUSTICE FRYGROUSE.—What is done by way of making provision for the girls?—The trustees do not undertake to make any provision for them.

4816. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—Are any of the girls in this school going up for the examinations under the Intermediate Education Act?—Yes, six or seven.

4818. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—The Report of the Royal Commission of 1857 stated, with respect to this school—

"The defects of the building are that it contains no bath, room or water-closet; that the privies are bad; that there is no separate wash-room for the girls, who are obliged to use the lavatory for that purpose, and that the lavatory accommodation is miserably inadequate, there being only six basins for thirty-three children."

Has all that been changed?—That does not apply at present, except with respect to the water-closets. After that Report, one was erected in the house, but the trustees, attended by me, visited the place, and decided it to be removed.

4819. LORD JUSTICE FRYGROUSE.—How long ago was that?—About four years ago.

4820. Have any one or more of the trustees either formally or informally visited the school?—The Archbishop was three times as far as I know, and on one occasion the Archbishop was with him.

4821. Twice since he became Archbishop?—Yes.

4822. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—Is there a separate wash-room now?—Yes; they have a lavatory and bath-rooms, supplied with hot and cold water. I do not know any school-buildings, of the class, much better than ours, nor do I know any school in which there are such well arranged and commodious dormitories.

4823. LORD JUSTICE FRYGROUSE.—Are you connected with the Morgan Institution?—No.

4824. Is it in the same building?—No; it is in a similar building within fifty yards of Mercer's. The two buildings were erected at the same time, by Morgan's trustees, who afterwards found that their endowment would not suffice to keep up the two, and they then offered one of them to the trustees of Mercer's school on the condition that they would keep it in order.

4825. Is there any agreement by deed?—I am not aware.

4826. Is there any payment made for the building?—None, except the making of the shirts.

4827. Who looks after, and orders the clothing and provisions?—These are all ordered, at the instance of the mistress, from regular tradespeople, who furnish their accounts, which all come before me, and afterwards before the trustees.

4828. Who checks the expenditure upon the clothing of the children?—The mistress knows what clothes are required, and asks me, on the occasion of my visits, may she order particular kinds of clothes. The girls make their own clothes.

4829. Is there any check upon the mistress as regards the clothing, or any check on the tradespeople as regards the provisions, except the mistress?—There is such a check as I give, which I believe the mistress thinks a very sufficient one.

4830. Are you qualified to tax the bill for the clothing of the children, or their maintenance?—I do the best I can. I think the best proof is that some years ago the school was not in a sound state financially, whereas now all the accounts are paid, and there is a balance of £441 to credit.

4831. It is right to observe that the expenditure per head is by no means excessive in comparison with other schools, though it is not as low as at the Bethesda?—I think £18 covers the actual expenditure on each child for clothing and food, and then there are the establishment charges.

4832. You have a large rent free?—Yes, but the annual expenditure on it is considerable. In addition to the expenditure upon the sewers, which I mentioned already, we put up a new boiler, which cost £25, and had to do various repairs at several times. All these were done under the superintendence of a builder and architect.

4833. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—When did you make the outlay upon the sewers?—Four or five years ago; there had been a good deal of typhoid fever in the school.

4834. Has there been any illness in the school since?—Not of that character, the school is healthy now.

4835. Would £30 per annum cover the required repairs to the house?—I do not think it would. The trustees were speaking of making a large cistern to contain rain water, and so do away with the hand water supply.

Rev. M. W.

May 18, 1875.
Rev. M. W.
Jellett, Esq.

6936. The report of the Commission of 1857 contains this observation:—

"All the children in the school are obliged to conform to the Established Church, although no such restriction was imposed by the will of the founder."

Have you any observation to offer as to that?—No; I do not think I have.

6937. Do you agree with the statement that no such restriction was imposed by the will of the founder?—No; I think, from the fact that the founders appointed certain trustees, all of whom were dissenters, that she intended, that the instruction to be given in the school should be such as she knew that clergymen, especially the clergy at that particular time, would see was given.

6938. Have you seen the will of the founder?—I produce a copy of it.

6939. Where do you keep the title deeds of the property?—The agent has them.

6940. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—The will provides that:—

"The trustees shall and will give, employ, and bestow the rents, issues, and profits of the said lands, so to be purchased for and towards the clothing, feeding, maintaining, and supporting of twenty-five poor girls, and for their instruction in reading, writing, and working, and qualifying them to be put out apprentices, and until such time as they shall be put out apprentices; and my will is, in case there shall be a surplus of the said rents over and above what my said trustees shall judge proper for the maintenance and support of the official number of poor girls, that they, the said trustees, employ and apply all such surplus rents for apprenticing and increasing the number of such poor girls to be supported, educated, and maintained in the manner and for the purposes aforesaid."

You say there is no provision made with regard to apprenticing the girls now?—Occasionally the trustees have paid an apprentice for to the training school for teachers; they have also helped one of our pupils into the Alexandra School.

6941. Lord R. Chelmsford.—As a rule, you do not know anything about them after they leave the school?—As a rule, we do not.

6942. For how many years do they generally remain in the school?—That depends on the age at which they are admitted. They must be between the ages of eight and eleven when admitted, and they generally remain only until they reach fifteen; but sometimes they are allowed to remain up to sixteen. Some of the girls help in the school, and if they are going to become teachers, the practice is to allow them an additional year, which really comes to the same thing as giving them an apprenticeship.

6943. Mr. Widdow.—Do you get a salary as secretary?—I do.

6944. What is the amount?—£20 a year.

6945. The amount lodged in bank each year is very considerable. How long does the money remain unproductive in the bank?—The balance to the credit of the trustees last year was larger than it ought to have been, because when I received the accounts I paid them myself without waiting to receive the money from the trustees, and afterwards got a cheque for the amounts when duly verified and audited.

Mr. B. W.
Rooke.

Mr. BARNETON W. ROOKE examined.

6946. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—You are the agent for the trustees of Moore's School Estate.—How long have you filled that position?—I was appointed in 1862, but before that date I was associated with my father, who had been the agent for a great number of years. The law agency has been in our family for nearly 100 years.

6947. The property, with the exception of three holdings in Liverpool, seems to be within a short distance?—It does.

6948. There are twenty-three tenants at Rathcoole; what interest have they in their holdings?—About half of them hold by lease, and the other half from year to year. The proportion of the property held by lease is, however, by far the most valuable.

6949. The largest holding returned in your rental is stated to be let for three years or thirty-one years from the 24th March, at a rent of £297 12s. 8d.—Mr. La Touche is the only life now in being.

6950. Is the lease underlet, or has Mr. La Touche an interest in it?—I think he has some.

6951. Is he in occupation of the land himself?—No; he has let it to sub-tenants.

6952. On the fall of that life, I presume there will be a re-letting?—There will.

6953. Has the same rent been payable out of the other holdings, constituting the Rathcoole property, for the last forty-four years?—The rental has been almost unaltered; at all events, during my time, and I think it was unaltered, with very slight exceptions, for very many years before that.

6954. Has there been any inspection of the holdings, to ascertain whether they have been let for the full value?—That has been done two or three times by Mr. Byrne, the Surveyor. In 1865 eight or nine tenants vacated leases, which were given to them for fourteen years, at the rent recommended by Mr. Byrne. Those leases will expire on the 29th September next, when there must be a re-letting.

6955. Do you consider that the Rathcoole lands are let, all round, for their value?—With the exception of Mr. La Touche's holding, they are.

6956. An important lot of property, in the City of Dublin, consisting of Nos. 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, and 19,

Mary-street, are returned as let for ninety-nine years from the 21st November, 1849, at £150 a year. Do you know how the trustees came to part with such a large quantity of property at such a small rent?—I do not; it was long before my time.

6957. £150 a year is not the letting value of that property?—I think the premises were very much out of repair, and that there was a large sum laid out on them by the tenant, but I am only stating my opinion.

6958. Who is Mr. Thomas Dixon, the tenant?—He is dead; his representative is Mr. George Thell.

6959. The Government valuation of the houses, which were let, at £150 a year, under a lease made in 1848, amounts in the aggregate to £221. Do you know under what power that lease was made?—I do not.

6960. Lord R. Chelmsford.—Was it made in your father's time?—Yes.

6961. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—Is there any letting power in the will?—I think not, but there was an opinion taken a good many years ago, I think, from Mr. Benjamin Warren, as to the letting power, when it was said that the trustees should exercise their discretion.

6962. Surely not as to the terms?—Yes; I think it went so far.

6963. That they had power to let for any term they liked?—Yes; my recollection is that they went to consider what would be reasonable and proper lettings.

6964. There are some houses in Abbey-street, let for sixty years from 1853, and others for thirty-one years from 1853?—Yes, No. 27, is let to Baker, at £15 a year.

6965. That house is let at £15 for sixty years from September, 1855. Was that letting made in your time?—No; I began in 1855, but I think I was acting with my father at that time.

6966. Do you know under what circumstances that lease was made?—I do not remember.

6967. The valuation of that house is £28. I think that includes the holding of Haller, which is at the same. The two rents would show what we get.

May 25, 1879

Mr. B. W.
Ecks.

6968. The two rents together come to £27, on a valuation of £28?—Yes.

6969. How is the property in England managed?—It is a copyhold property. There are only three tenants upon it, and they send me the rent, each half year, two days after it becomes due.

6970. That being land in Liverpool, how has it been let?—It is all in the hands of tenants from year to year. We get it valued by Mr. Colshaw, surveyor and valuator, and he advised the tenants not to make any lease, because, he said, buildings were extending very much in that neighbourhood, and he thought the land would become very valuable after some years.

6971. How long have the tenants been paying their present rents?—It was first let to them in 1863, and there was subsequently a slight increase made. I have since written to Mr. Colshaw to inquire whether the time has come for raising the rent again. His last letter was that he did not think it had, as no material alteration had taken place in the value of property in that neighbourhood.

6972. Do you receive notice of the meetings of the Board, when they hold any?—Yes, I get a letter from Dr. Jellett to say the Board will meet on such a day, so that, if I have anything to bring before them, I can attend.

6973. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—How many meetings have you attended within the last three years?—I think not more than two, I have no business at the meetings, except when a tenant asks for a lease, or something of that sort.

6974. Your accounts for 1877 show that, at the beginning of that year, the arrears due amounted to £293 3s 3½d, and that at the close of the year they were only £141 10s 2½d, so that you reduced the arrears considerably during that year?—The reason was that one of the principal tenants, Mr. Latooshe, used not to pay his second half-year's rent before I made up my accounts, but I have persuaded him, within the last year or two, to pay it in time, so as to let me include it in my account.

6975. Was that done of your own motion, or by order of the Board?—I got two or three letters from the Board, asking me to try and get the tenants to pay up the rents more punctually; they said the tenants were getting a bad habit.

6976. What is your arrangement as to furnishing your rentals to Craig, Gardner & Co for voicing?—Soon after the close of the year, generally about February, I make out my rental and account, and submit them with the vouchers to Craig, Gardner & Co, who audit them, and I then send the audited accounts to the tenants.

6977. Your chief lodgments appear to have been made during December, January, and February. Is the time for making those lodgments left to yourself?—Entirely; as the rent comes in I lodge the money in the Bank of Ireland.

6978. What does the bailiff do for his salary?—He works the tenants, and, if any of them are behindhand in their payments, he works them up, and sends them to me.

6979. Are the rents paid on the estate, or in Dublin?—They are paid on the estate. I go down to Rathcoole for the purpose of receiving them.

6980. Have any of the tenants been allowed for improvements on their holdings?—A good many years ago there were reductions made in the rents of some of the tenants, in consequence of their having made improvements, which has brought them down to the amounts at which they now stand. In any time there have been no allowances made.

6981. The tenants all appear to have interests in their holdings?—Yes. There are only two tenants who own more than a leasing gill.

6982. Are you well acquainted with the actual facts on the estate?—I cannot say that I am, I have been over the property, but it is tremendously out of my depth.

6983. It does not interest you?—No; it is quite like a Chinese puzzle. It is mixed up with Mr. Latooshe's property, which adjoins it, the two properties run into one another in a very complicated way. We at one time contemplated having a petition to consolidate it.

6984. LORD JUSTICE FRYGROUSE.—How does it happen to be in such a scattered condition?—It is property which was purchased by the executors of the will.

6985. Was it bought in this fragmentary state?—I presume it was.

6986. Have you the original conveyance?—I have.

6987. Have you ever compared the actual boundaries of the property with what they were at the time of the making of the conveyance?—It would be almost impossible in a great many cases to ascertain the boundaries.

6988. If you were called upon now to prove the boundaries of any of these holdings, what means have you of doing so?—We should be at considerable difficulty in doing it. Mr. Latooshe holds a great part of it, for which he pays as rent. Some of the tenants hold from him, and some from us. In a great many places I found the means had been levelled; in fact, if it were necessary to point out the boundaries, I do not know how it could be done.

6989. You have no survey?—We have a survey, but since that survey was made the boundaries have been protruded in a great many places.

6990. What is the date of that survey?—Speaking from recollection, I should say it was made about 1838.

6991. Have you ever taken any proceedings to permebrate the bounds, and ascertain what they are?—No, except upon the occasion when we were thinking of presenting a petition, when I looked into the maps and surveys, and found there would be considerable difficulty in the matter.

6992. Are there maps on the lease to the tenants?—There are.

6993. Then it is in the case of the tenants from year to year that you approach the difficulty?—Yes; some of the tenants who hold from us under Mr. Latooshe, and where they have one farm from us, and one adjoining it from Mr. Latooshe, the boundaries have been levelled, but we could have them look-quoted again in a great many cases.

6994. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—Are you agent for any other properties?—Not land agent, except on small properties.

6995. How many years' purchase do you consider to be the fair selling price of the estate?—The land at Rathcoole is not very good. I do not think it would bring twenty-five years' purchase on the rental.

6996. Do you think it is let at its fair value?—I think it is.

6997. LORD JUSTICE FRYGROUSE.—Mr. Robert Latooshe holds 168a. 1a. 8½r. Irish Plantation measure, at £297 12s. 8d. a year. Do you mean to say that land at Rathcoole, let at 30s. an Irish acre, would only bring twenty-five years' purchase?—I do not think the property as a whole would bring more, it is so mixed up with the adjoining property that few people would buy it at all.

6998. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—Would not isolated lots sell rather high?—They are small, and, if Mr. Latooshe did not buy, an outsider would give a very small price for the property.

6999. LORD JUSTICE FRYGROUSE.—Bartholomew Senior holds nearly nineteen Irish acres on lease for thirty-one years from the 31st May, 1860. Thirty shillings an acre for that would be only £225 10s., whereas he pays £55 15s. Is not that rather more to the value of land in that neighbourhood?—Of course it is, but every holding must be considered with regard to its own circumstances.

7000. Do you know Senior's holding?—It is a good many years since I saw it, and I cannot speak as to the condition in which it is at present.

7001. You cannot compare Senior's holding with the land held by Mr. Latooshe?—No.

7002. Christopher Dowdall, a tenant from year to you, pays £2 4s. 4d. for 1a. 1s. 6s.—when was that letting made?—I think about 1863.

7003. Patrick Bolger got a lease for fourteen years on the 29th September, 1865, of 9a. 2s. 21f. for £3 17s. a year—how do you account for that?—There is a great difference in the value of the different holdings. Some of them are rocky, stony, and poor land, while others are better. That letting was made on the valuation of Mr. John Byrne, surveyor.

7004. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—Have you got the letter which you received from the Liverpool surveyor about the value of the Liverpool property?—Yes; I am sure it is in my office.

7005. What is the date of it?—I cannot exactly recollect, but, I suppose, about six years ago.

7006. Have you also the letter containing his estimate of the probable value of the property in the future?—Yes, I am sure I have. That letter was a much older one, probably about 1866 or 1867, when I took up the agency.

7007. Mr. WILSON.—When Mr. Latsche's lease expires, how do you intend to proceed to ascertain the value of the land?—We will send down a valuer to value it.

7008. How will you ascertain what belongs to you, and what to Mr. Latsche?—The surveyor who surveyed the estate, and made the maps, may be able to make that out, for, although the boundaries have been removed, he will be able to find them out and lay them down.

7009. What is the date of the lease to Mr. Latsche?—29th March, 1832. It was for three lives or thirty-one years. The thirty-one years have expired, and there is only one of the lives now existing.

7010. Is there a covenant against alienation in that lease?—I could not state from recollection, but I think not.

7011. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—If the surviving life dropped, I suppose you would come to some arrangement with Mr. Latsche?—Some time ago Mr. Latsche wanted to get a lease for ever, but the trustees were advised that they could not make any lease of the kind, and that they should wait until they ascertained the value of the land at the expiration of the present lease, and so the matter stands for the present.

7012. Mr. WILSON.—What is the letting value of the houses in Mary-street as compared with the valuation?—You generally, in Dublin, add one-fourth to the valuation; but a house attached to a house alters that greatly.

7013. LORD JUSTICE FITZGERALD.—One of the houses in Mary-street is a tenanted house?—Yes.

7014. It appears that a former agent for this property charged 10 per cent.?—That was long before either my time or my father's. The previous agent received it, but in this way—he acted as agent to the estate, for which he received the ordinary five per cent., and he was also assessor of the charity, paid all the bills, and had the entire management of the institution in his own hands, and the other five per cent. was to compensate him for that.

7015. The ten per cent. is no longer payable?—Certainly not.

Miss K. Curtis

MISS KATH CURTIS, examined.

7016. LORD JUSTICE FITZGERALD.—You have the charge of Merion's school?—Yes.

7017. How long have you been at the head of the establishment?—Since 1864. I went there as teacher about 20 years ago, and when the trustees left, in 1884, I was appointed mistress and head teacher.

7018. What subjects have you in the teaching?—None to teaching English, except from the elder children.

7019. Have you assistance in any other branches of education?—The lady who is the housekeeper is also the music teacher.

7020. What are her qualifications?—Very good, she teaches very well.

7021. How many children are there in the school?—Thirty-two in all; 25 free and 7 paying.

7022. Have you, and the lady who teaches music, to conduct the entire instruction of the children?—Yes.

7023. Is that a sufficient staff?—We work very hard.

7024. How many classes are the children divided into?—Four. We are obliged to manage, by having two of the classes at needlework, while two are at lessons.

7025. Have you a time-table?—Yes.

7026. How many hours daily are the children receiving instruction?—Two hours in the morning, and two in the evening.

7027. What arrangements are there for the children taking exercise?—There is a large playground attached to the house.

7028. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—Do they only work four hours in the day?—They spend four hours at their lessons. They also make all their own clothes, and knit their own stockings.

7029. LORD JUSTICE FITZGERALD.—Is the house neatly kept?—There are two servants, but the children also do a great deal of the house work. They keep their own bedrooms and schoolroom clean.

7030. What are your arrangements for providing food and other household necessaries?—A certain dietary is allowed for the children, and I order the things as they are wanted.

7031. Is there a fixed price for meat?—Yes, we are supplied partly by Hodgson, of William-street, and partly by another butcher.

7033. Who fixed the allowance?—The trustees.

7034. LORD JUSTICE FITZGERALD.—The trustees do not appear to have been ever there?—The dietary table was sent to them for approval.

7035. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—What is the allowance of meat per head?—Half a pound. We get about 74 pounds in the week for roasting.

7036. LORD JUSTICE FITZGERALD.—Who fixed the price of the meat?—I think it must have been the trustees, through Mr. Jelliffe. The butchers sent in estimates, and agreed to supply the meat at a certain price.

7037. What was the price?—We pay 9d. a pound to Hodgson's, and 8½d. to another man. We only get roasting meat at those prices.

7038. What is your system of checking the weight of the meat supplied?—The butcher sends a ticket, and either I or the housekeeper weigh the meat when it arrives, and if the weight is not correct we send him word.

7039. What allowances do you yourself receive, in addition to your salary?—Apartments and food.

7040. How many persons are residing in the house in addition to the children?—Four—two servants, the housekeeper, and myself.

7041. Are there any visiting teachers?—No.

7042. Are the children taught any foreign language?—The housekeeper is a good French scholar, and has voluntarily undertaken to teach it to a few, in order to qualify them for the Trinity College examinations, but she is not paid for doing so.

7043. Do you teach anything but English?—Yes, the rudiments of Latin.

7045. What does the housekeeper receive?—£35 a year.

7046. What do you calculate is the cost per head of the food for the children?—About £12 a year.

7047. Mr. Winson.—Do you teach them cooking?—No, we have no opportunity.
 7048. Dr. CURRIE.—Are the servants fed at the expense of the institution?—Yes.
 7049. How often do the children get meat?—They get meat about three times a week.
 7050. What do they get on the other days?—They get baked rice, and bread, potatoes and butter, or soup, but the meat for soup is only 7d. per pound, and we get about 12lbs. per week of it.

Mr. CHARLES WILLIAM HAMILTON, J.P., examined.

7043. Lord JUSTICE FITZGERALD.—What is your connection with Moogan's charity?—I am the agent to the property.

7054. It was returned in 1837 as consisting of 3,969a. 2a. 2½c. of land—is the property still the same?—Yes, but one portion, the lands of Bally-coggin, which is held under lease, was sold by the Church Commissioners, so that our interest in it will cease on the expiration of our lease in 1891.

7055. The rental furnished to us is that up to 1st November, 1877—has any been furnished since?—No, the trustees meet every November, and then they examine and pass the accounts and rental for the previous November. There is a hanging gale allowed on the property.

7056. Up to what date does the account then furnished come?—The receipts come to the previous June, being the receipts of the rent due on 1st November previously, and the expenditure up to the date of the account.

7057. Is not the effect of that arrangement that the money received between June and November remains in your hands until November of the following year?—No, because I have to make payments out of it from time to time.

7058. Your rental and account show that 188 acres were let to Alexander Graydon at a rent of £370 a year, on a lease which expired on 1st November, 1878, when a new lease was made for twenty-one years, at £280 a year. What steps were taken, on the occasion of that letting, to ascertain the value of the land?—I offered to send a valuator to make a valuation, but Mr. Graydon preferred that I should value it myself, and I accordingly did so.

7059. Is Mr. Graydon the occupying tenant himself?—He is.

7060. You were able to get £3 per Irish acre for that land?—It is very near Dublin.

7061. James O'Connell agrees to hold 198 acres, at £254 11s. 6d. a year?—Yes, but that letting was made at a time when land let much lower than it does now. He got a lease for twenty-one years from 1st November, 1835. We shall obtain a large increase next November, when that lease expires. I have already raised the rent on several other holdings.

7062. A large holding of 336 acres is returned as held under fee-farm grant—how did that arise?—We ourselves held that land under a lease granted to us by the Archbishop of Dublin. We had a lease to establish our title to it. It was afterwards converted into a perpetuity.

7063. What were the receipts of this property for the year ending 1st November, 1877?—£1,712 13s. 5½d., and the amount was 12s., making up the total to £1,713 5s. 5½d.

7064. By how much will the new lettings you have made increase the rental?—By about £250 a year.

7065. What is the gross income of the property, and to what outgoings is it subject?—The gross rent payable out of the estates in the city and county of Dublin, county of Leitrim, and town of Drogheda is £1,373 8s. 8½d., and out of the estate in the county Leitrim £359 16s. 6d., making a total of £1,833 5s. 5½d., from which is to be deducted for poor rate, incidental expenses, and management, £167 11s. 3½d., leaving a balance of £1,666 14s. 2d. The outgoings to which the estate is liable consist of head rents, £410 2s. 6d., rent charges, £323 10s. 6d. (of which 7051. Lord JUSTICE FITZGERALD.—Have you a supply of vegetables from part of the land?—Yes, there is a gardener employed, who is paid 12s. a week. He has to pump water, go to the post, and do a great many other things.

7052. Who looks after the produce of the garden?—I am obliged to do so myself, as there is no one else.

£46 14s. 3d. is tenable in forty-eight years), yearly instalment on balance of purchase of Newcastle, which is terminable in twenty-seven and a half years, £83 10s., interest on mortgage for part of purchase of Hill Hill, £95 6s. 6d., making a total of £261 8s. 5d., and leaving an approximate net income of £182 8s. 9d., which includes the rent received for Ballybeggie, £24, out of which there is a head rent of £43 paid.

7055. You mentioned that the charity would lose its interest in these lands when your lease expires in 1891,—were you tenants to the Church Temporalities Commissioners for these lands?—Yes.

7057. Did they not offer you, as they were bound to do, under their Act of Parliament, the pre-emption of your holdings?—Yes; but they demanded £25,000, and they would not give it to us for less. It was afterwards sold by them, by auction, for £1,500 to two gentlemen in Dublin.

7058. Had they been in any way connected with the land previously?—No, that is only one instance of the way in which the Church Commissioners are acting. They are asking a great deal too much. We found we had not money to buy the land. We had to raise the money to buy the Newcastle property.

7059. How much did you raise for that purpose?—The purchase money of that property was £2,000, and we paid the Church Commissioners £500 on account, and gave them a mortgage for the remaining £1,500.

7060. Did the Governors hold the lands of Ballybeggie under a permanently renewable lease?—Yes.

7061. So that, but for the passing of the Church Act, they would have remained tenants, until some Archbishop ran out the lease?—Exactly.

7062. You have raised the rent on several of your tenants?—Yes; it was really the feeling that we were struggling that led me into re-valuing some other holdings as well as Graydon's. I raised the Newcastle rents, because I knew the land was very good, and it was land on which I could fairly do so.

7063. Do you take any part in the payments for the purposes of this charity?—I pay all the orders. The way in which the matter is managed is this—I look after the land, collect the rents, and pay the money. A local committee is appointed to attend to the actual management of the school, and they look after all domestic questions and matters of that kind.

7064. Who are the Governors of the institution?—There are seven Governors under the will—the Lord Primate, the Lord Chancellor, the Archbishop of Dublin, the Chief Justice of the Queen's Bench, the Chief Justice of the Common Pleas, the Chief Baron of the Exchequer, and the Lord Mayor of Dublin, for the time being.

7065. Are those the only members of the Corporation?—Yes.

7066. How is the local committee appointed?—Entirely by the Governors. It is the duty of that committee to look after the local affairs of the school. The members at present are Lord Anson, Hon. Thos. Hamilton, esq., M.P., Capt. W. Bunsby, Charles Thompson, esq., Henry F. Calley, esq., and Col. Vosey; and the Rev. Hugh Hamilton is the secretary.

7067. What are the arrangements with regard to the education of pupils?—We take twenty-five boys, who are supported by the trustees in relation; and, finding that the establishment was larger than was required for that number, we agreed to take in twenty extra boys, each of whom pays £18 a year. They are appointed in the same way as the free boys, but each of them must bring me the first half-yearly payment when appointed. I enter these moneys in my accounts.

7075. The regulations respecting the admission of a free foundation pupil require that the boy—

—Must (1) have a nomination from the Governor whose term it is to present; (2) be the child of Protestant parents; (3) be between eight and eleven years; (4) have a certificate of baptism; (5) have a certificate of marriage of parents; and (6) have a certificate from Dr. Maguire, of Cookstown, the medical attendant of the school, that he is a healthy child, and a declaration must be made before a Magistrate by the next-of-kin that the boy is destitute of support."

Is this exclusively a Protestant charity?—Yes; exclusively.

7076. At the time of its foundation all the Governors were exclusively Protestants?—Yes.

7077. As a matter of fact, two of the present Governors are Roman Catholics. Are they obliged to nominate Protestant pupils?—Yes.

7078. The regulations for the admission of pay pupils appear to be almost the same, but of course no certificate of destitution is required?—That is so.

7079. The annual book which you have produced appears to be balanced at the end of the year?—Yes; and then the accounts are regularly audited.

7080. The audit of November last is signed by the Archbishop, the Chancellor, the Chief Justice of the Common Pleas, and the Chief Baron, but there does not appear to have been any similar signature since November, 1866?—I must explain that. I keep two books exactly similar. The one before you is marked for the signatures of the trustees, but sometimes, in the hurry of going away, they have signed the other.

7081. Your account ending 1st November, 1878, began with a balance to debit of £114 12s. 2d., and the expenditure appears to have exceeded the income by over £120 l.—The fact is that we have been raising the rents in order to meet the expenditure. We had considerable expense in the purchase of the Newcastle property. Sometimes I have had a considerable balance in hand, but for the last four years the balance has been on the wrong side; however, I have raised the rents by very nearly £350 a year, so that I think we will go on fairly in future.

7082. You would also have, as against the debit which appears in your accounts, whatever rents you received during the preceding half-year?—Exactly; I pay every account as it comes in, and if there are any arrears of rent, I put on pressure to try and get them paid up.

7083. Is there any salary paid to the Rev. Mr. Hamilton as coadjutor?—Yes, £30 a year.

7084. What salary has Dr. Maguire as Medical Attendant to the institution?—He has £12 a year.

7085. How do you arrange as to the payments for the household, and other establishment charges?—I pay the accounts whenever they are passed by the Local Committee.

7086. They are all entered in your account under date of 1st November, 1878?—Yes, I enter them in bulk at the end of the year, because the books which are signed by the Local Committee are authority to me to pay them.

7087. Your remuneration is 5 per cent. on the amount of the rents received?—Yes.

7088. Is there any other payment made to you in respect of the general management of the funds of the institution?—None.

7089. You act as banker as well as agent?—I am secretary, and I may say that I act as banker, because I keep the money and make the payments.

7090. The Local Committee cheque against you, and not against a bank?—Exactly.

7091. Is there any audit of the accounts?—They are regularly audited every year by one of the trustees.

Either I or my son-hand the trustees the vouchers for the payments before they are passed.

7092. Where do the trustees meet?—Always at my house.

7093. Do they meet more than once a year?—The regular meetings are held once a year. The Prime and Archbishop have usually been the members attending, and when necessary I have sent for one of the Judges; if I wanted anything serious done the Chancellor would always come. Whenever anything out of the ordinary routine arises I summon a special meeting.

7094. Do you keep a minute book containing entries of the meetings of the Board?—Yes; but I merely record the ordering of things, and so forth.

7095. Is it a regularly kept minute book?—Yes; it has been regularly kept for over a hundred years, and is quite a curiosity. My grandfather was the agent of the property, and in 1801 my father succeeded to his place, and subsequently I succeeded to my father's place.

7096. These observations were made by the Inspector of Estates to the Commissioners in 1857, in your accounts?—

"My attention has been called to the accounts of Mr. Hamilton by the trustees of Wilson's Hospital and Maguire's Charity, and some observations made by Mr. Hickson, the Government accountant attached to the Commission, upon them, have been forwarded to me, and I have been directed to consider them in making my report. With reference to Wilson's Hospital, Mr. Hickson observes, that the account between Mr. Hamilton and the trustees ought to show all he received and paid up to the last date in it, and the real balance on that date in his hands; but instead of that, Mr. Hamilton debits all that he had received as account of the rents due till due on the 1st May preceding the date of drawing the account in November, although his practice is to collect a large part of this May rent before the time of accounting. He also debits the sum he has paid between the 1st July and the 1st November from the other side of the account, the effect of this debiting is, in one case, about half a year's receipts, and in the other about a quarter's payments; of course, to leave a balance in Mr. Hamilton's hands unaccounted for at the time of the meeting of the Governors, and thus reduce the real balance to a smaller apparent balance."

Do you still continue the same system that existed in 1857?—Yes; exactly the same, but in the real working out of the accounts it is no object to me to have the money in my hands, and, in fact, on the day the last account was passed, the trustees were £235 in my debt.

7100. Do you not see that as a matter of book-keeping—if on no other grounds—the rents of 1878 ought to be set against the expenditure for 1878?—So they are.

7101. No; because the rental at the credit side of your last account was debited as the rental for 1877?—Yes.

7102. Therefore, the books are a year in arrears?—No; because the tenants do not begin to pay the rent until it has been due for over half a year. That is the custom on the estate, and my accounts are so kept that I can at any moment tell exactly what money is on hand.

7103. In your last account, audited on the 1st November, 1878, there was returned as being to the debit of the trustees, £238 5s. 11½d. As a matter of fact, had you not at that date received a sum of money on foot of the rents due the 1st May previously, which would have very considerably reduced that apparent balance, just as Mr. Hickson observed in 1857?—Of course I must have a certain amount of money in my hands to meet the current payments, and at that time I had not enough to do so.

7104. Another passage contained in the report from which I have already quoted is as follows:—

"This mode of keeping the accounts was attended with some loss to the trust funds prior to 1869; so, before that time, the balance sheet at the 1st November in each year, was so the debit of the trustees, and interest on that amount for the year is charged in the accounts of the next year, whereas if the accounts had been balanced to the 30th October, instead of the 1st, the balance would have been on the other side of the account. This is undoubtedly the sum since the year 1848, as appears by Mr. Hamilton's books, which show that time have been kept with greater care than they had been previously. With reference to the antecedent period, when the greater part of the interest was charged, it is stated that, owing to the costs not having been collected regularly, the balance against the Society on the 1st November was not greater, and so much as at other parts of the year. This may have been so if the May rents, instead of being received during November, were not got in for three or four months afterwards. The amount charged for interest in the years 1845 to 1849, is not considerable. It is, however, an incorrect account had been kept as merchants would keep it, allowing interest to the trustees when the balance was in their favour, and charging interest when the balance was against them, it is probable that for some of these years, instead of having to pay interest, the trustees would have received interest, and if the account had been kept as a banker would keep it—that is, not allowing any interest when the balance was in favour of the trustees, but charging interest only on whatever balance there was from time to time to their debit, the amount chargeable against the trustees for these years would have been reduced?—

Yes; but an entire half-year's rent would not be needed, only a portion of it. Moreover, there must be a certain balance in my hands. The fact of our having so many things to pay kept us a long time in expense. At one time we had £300 invested in the Funds, but we had to sell some of it out again, and at present we have only £200 invested. We had a great deal of litigation about the property. I gave permission from the trustees, that, whenever I had more money in my hands than was necessary, I should invest it. It was considered that £50 was about the sum I ought to keep in hand, and whenever I had more than that I invested it.

7105. It appears that there is a sum of £201 18s. 6d. New Tenure per cent Stock standing to the credit of the trustees at present. Was the £500 which was sold out, applied to assist in the purchase of the head rent of the Newcastle property?—Yes.

7106. Whenever there have been new lettings made, were the valuations in all cases made by yourself?—If the tenant agrees, I make a valuation, but, if the tenant objects, I send down a valuator from Dublin. In our case a small tenant at Newcastle objected to my valuation, and then I sent down Mr. Broughton, who valued the holding at £5 a year more than I did.

Mr. ARTHUR MURPHY, examined.

7118. Local Justice FitzGibbon.—You are the head master of Morgan's school?—Yes.

7119. How long have you held that appointment?—Since March, 1854.

7120. Is there any control exercised over your management of the school?—Yes; by the Local Committee.

7121. How often do they meet?—Regularly once a month, but sometimes oftener.

7122. What is your course of instruction?—It comprises Scripture, Church formularies, reading, writing, arithmetic, Euclid, English grammar, history (English, Roman, and German), geography, singing, &c.

7123. We have been told that the boys are nominated by the Governors alternately?—Yes.

7124. Does the Visiting Committee keep a book for recording their observations from time to time?—They record their observations in the book which I produce. There is also a visitors' book, but visitors generally refuse to sign it.

7125. The members of the Visiting Committee have been returned to us as being Lord Anslay, Mr. Tom Trust Hamilton, &c., Captain Brinkley, Mr. Charles Thompson, Mr. Henry F. Colley, and Lieutenant-Colonel C. C. Vesey. Do all these gentlemen reside in the neighbourhood?—Mr. Hamilton is frequently in London, attending to his Parliamentary duties, and Captain Brinkley has not been resident in the neighbourhood for the last eighteen months.

7107. I suppose the tenant fell back upon your valuation?—He did; but I made him pay £3, the expense of bringing down the valuator.

7109. Have you any recollection when the annual fine, which you were in the habit of paying to the Archbishop of Dublin, ceased to be?—That business was always managed by the solicitors. The yearly rent payable to the Archbishop was £22 4s. 6d., and the usual annual fine was £150 18s. 6d., making a total of £162 2s. 2d. We have now to pay in perpetuity £183 12s. as yearly rent, and £36 5s. 6d. as the interest on £656 17s. 5d., secured by mortgage at four per cent.

7110. Are you aware whether the Ballybogan property, which the Commissioners sold for £1,500, was sold by auction or by private agreement?—By auction.

7111. Did you communicate with the Commissioners as to their asking £2,800 for it?—Oh, indeed I did.

7112. They refused to reduce their demand?—Yes; I summoned a special meeting of the Governors, at which the Committee and a good many others attended, to consider the matter then the Commissioners.

7113. Did you make them any offer?—No; because we had not any money available. The question which I brought before the Governors was whether we could afford to buy the property at all.

7114. If the trustees had been offered the property for a moderate sum, would they have purchased it?—I could not answer that. The matter was very fully discussed at a meeting of the Governors, and they determined that it was no object to us to buy at the price that was asked.

7115. Dr. Curran.—Did you attend at the auction, to bid for the property?—No; the Governors had decided that, not having the money, they could not purchase it.

7116. Have the trustees any right of renewal, as against the purchasers of the property?—No; we hold only until the end of our existing lease.

7117. Mr. Wmros.—Will all those tenants who hold church lands under leases customarily renewable, lose their interests at the expiration of their present leases, unless they purchase from the Commissioners?—Yes.

May 18, 1855.
Mr. Charles W.
Hamilton, &c.

Mr. A. Murphy.

7126. Has there been anyone appointed on the Local Committee, in his place?—No.

7127. Does Mr. Thompson attend?—Yes, frequently.

7128. Who are the usual attendants?—Mr. Thompson, Mr. Colley, and Colonel Vesey. Mr. Hamilton also is a very regular attendant when he is in Ireland. Mr. Colley, however, is the gentleman who takes the principal interest in the institution.

7129. The Committee minutes of April 11th, 1852, contain this entry:—

"The committee having fully considered a complaint brought before them relative to the treatment of David Quinlan by the master, and having due regard to the discipline requisite for the proper conduct of the school, and also specially bearing in mind the frequent repetition of bad behaviour on the part of Quinlan, do not feel justified in passing any censure on the master. The committee direct that in future, whenever a boy runs away, he shall not be admitted to the school without their authority. Quinlan having run away, his place is declared vacant."

What does that minute refer to?—Quinlan was inveigled away by another lad named Thompson, whose mother brought a letter from Lord Lifford.

7130. The minute proceeds:—

"Mrs. Thompson having written a letter stating that it was not her intention to allow her son to return to the school, his resignation is accepted, and his place is declared vacant."

What was the cause of the boys' running away?—I could not tell.

May 26, 1875.
Mr. A. Murphy.

7131. The minutes of May 9th, 1875, record:—
"Five boys received the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper on Sunday last. The sixth boy who had been confirmed was at home in consequence of bad boots."

Were the boys in such a state that one was actually prevented from attending church, because he had not boots to go in?—If he sat in church for two hours in wet boots he would get cold.

7132. Whose duty is it to see that the boys had not broken boots?—There is a shoemaker.

7133. The shoemaker's bill for March and April in that year was £4 4s. 6d. Whose business is it to look after the boys?—None.

7134. The minutes of the committee contain entries as to the attendance of the boys at the Sacrament, every month. Are the boys required by any rule of the school to receive the Sacrament regularly?—There is no compulsion used, but when Dr. Sedgwick was on the local committee he deemed that the fact should be inserted on the minutes.

7135. The minutes of July 11th, 1875, record:—
"The committee having considered the case of Mr. Irwin, assistant master, who has been dismissed by Mr. Murphy, solely on the ground that he residing at Trinity College was incompatible with the efficient performance of his duties in the school, are of opinion, that Mr. Murphy ought not to have dismissed Mr. Irwin without first referring the matter to the committee. It appears that, at a meeting of the Governors on November, 1864, the appointment of the assistant master was vested in Mr. Murphy, subject to the approval of the local committee. The committee request explicit instructions from the Board as to whether they have inside control over the dismissal of the assistant master. A copy of this resolution is to be forwarded to Mr. Hamilton, Secretary to the Board."

What was done in reference to that matter?—Colonel Vosey, who was deputed to visit on Mr. Charles Hamilton, reported, to the meeting of the committee in the following month, that Mr. Hamilton's reply was that the whole matter was left in the master's hands to keep the assistant in subjection, and that the committee had nothing to do with it.

7136. Has the assistant master been under your entire control since that time?—Yes, and he was so from the first.

7137. What assistant master have you at present?—A man named Hayes.

7138. Where was he educated?—At Athlone school.

7139. How long has he been your assistant?—About two years. I had his brother before him, but he was only three weeks with me when he died of inflammation of the brain, and then his father begged of me to take his brother. I consulted with the Rev. Hugh Hamilton as to whether I should do so, and he approved of it.

7140. In the minutes of the 7th November, 1875, there appears this entry:—

"The attention of the Board is specially requested to the case of Edward Wilkinson, who was admitted upon the statement that he was under eleven years old, which, upon inquiry, the Committee have ascertained to be entirely false."

What does that refer to?—When the boy was admitted to the school, a declaration was made that he was between the ages of eight and eleven, but seeing that the date in the certificate was altered, I brought the matter under the notice of the Local Committee, who referred it to the Governors. Mr. Hamilton wrote to the Rev. Mr. Trench, who told the date had been altered, and when the Archbishop heard the case, he said that the boy should leave the school at once. I suggested that he might be allowed to remain till the Christmas vacation, which was at hand, and that he should not return. The Archbishop, however, and we, particularly as the boy's father is a schoolmaster.

7141. With reference to the question of age, the minutes of November 5, 1875, contain this entry:—

"The Committee would ask the Board either to prohibit the transferring of a boy over eleven years from the pay to the free list, or else to make a rule dispensing in such case with the usual certificate. A case having recently occurred in which a boy was so transferred, on the ground of an affidavit, which the Committee knew to be false, as to his age."

To what does that allude to?—It was the custom to place a boy in the school on a pay pupil, in the hope of getting a transfer to the Free List, and some of the Committee thought that wrong, as the usual declaration was that the boy was desirous of support, and between the ages of eight and eleven, but the Board of Governors decided it was perfectly right to transfer a boy who was in the school, even though over the age.

7142. The minutes of December 5th, 1875, record:—

"Three boys, Wilson, Wetherup, and O'Connor, received the Lord's Supper in Cusinstock Church, on Sunday last. The other boy, Duggan, was at home, having broken boots."

The shoemaker's bill, which appears to have been on an average about £2 6s. a month, had been for the month of November, £2 17s. 5d. Is there any imposition of the boys' clothes?—Yes, my wife and I inspect them; and when the new clothes are procured, they are under the inspection of the Local Committee.

7143. In the minutes of January 9th, 1875, the following entry occurs:—

"Attention having been called to a letter from Mrs. Webster (mother of the boy, J. Church), in which she expresses her inability to pay the vacation fee, Mr. Murphy is requested to write to her stating that unless the fee is paid before the next Committee day, the matter will be referred to Mr. C. Hamilton, with the view of having the boy removed from the school."

What is the meaning of that entry?—Any pay pupil who remains during the holidays is required to pay £1, and any free pupil 10s., payable in advance.

7144. What power has Mr. Hamilton to remove a boy from the school?—I do not know.

7145. The minutes of April 10th, 1875, record:—

"Duggan, Wetherup, and Wilson, received the Lord's Supper in Cusinstock Church, on Sunday last. O'Connor was at home with broken boots."

What is the meaning of that entry?—Any wet Sunday, if a boy had broken boots, he would remain at home.

7146. The attendances at church are only recorded for the Sacrament Sundays, and yet I find that on several of those occasions, boys were kept at home on account of having broken boots?—Only one each time.

7147. It appears that measles broke out in the school in 1873. Has there been any illness since?—No, we are generally free from sickness; but, in that same year, I caught typhoid fever, my daughter took it, and she eleven of the boys. The pump water was sent, for analysis, to Dr. Cameron, who pronounced it very bad. The Governors then ordered that a new well should be sunk, which has been done.

7148. In the present supply of water a good one?—Excellent. The new well was sunk in a different part of the premises, altogether, from the former one.

7149. The minutes of March 2nd, 1874, state:—

"Mr. Murphy reports the loss of the provision book which has been taken out of his room. It has been rescued within the last two days."

Was that the book containing the items of expenditure on provisions?—Yes.

7150. The minutes of April, 1874, again record that a boy was kept away from Church on Sacrament Sunday in consequence of having broken boots. The minutes of December 8th, 1874, contain this entry:—

"James Wilson readmitted on application of his mother, but warned that, should it happen again, his place will be declared vacant."

What had happened in that case?—He had run away, and been brought back.

7151. What was the ground of his running away?—I declare I do not know. When brought before the Committee he could not tell himself.

7154. LORD JURVIS First witness.—The minutes of April 26th, 1875, state:—

"Frank and Edward Pinden and William Flower attempted to elope on the 15th ult., but were brought back in an hour afterwards, when the master received them."
What did these boys run away for?—They made no complaint to the Committee.

7154. The minutes of May 21st, 1875, state:—
"The Committee having investigated the charge, brought by Dickie against Mr. Murphy, of general annoyance and provocation, are of opinion that the charge is quite unfounded, and on account of this unfounded charge having been brought, and also Dickie having expressed a wish to leave the school, the Committee recommended that he should be withdrawn by his father in July next."

Was he withdrawn?—Yes.

7155. The same minute continues:—
"Nathan and Clark having been brought before the Committee for seducing other boys in an outhouse, the Committee recommended that they should be withdrawn by their parents at the same time."

Were these boys also withdrawn on that account?—Yes, they were. They were fifteen years of age.

7156. Dr. CURRIE.—To what age do you usually keep the boys?—Generally to fourteen or fifteen. There is no special view, so far as I know, for the boys to remain in the school, but their society is, usually, to be placed at business as soon as possible.

7157. LORD JURVIS First witness.—The minutes of October 6th, 1875, record that Henry Barnwell eloped on the morning of the 8th September. What complaint had he?—I do not know.

7158. A minute in the handwriting of Mr. Ken Trust Hamilton, M.P., dated October 30th, 1875, is as follows:—

"The Local Committee regret to state that they have left a table duty to recommence the withdrawal from the school of four boys during the past year, whose conduct, especially in one instance, was considered highly prejudicial to the welfare of the school."

Can you give any explanation of these being so much reprobation, and eloping of the boys, at that time?—I do not know. Sometimes a fresh will come on the boys, and they will run away without any cause; sometimes they will run away from bravado. I was turned myself in the school, and I remember instances of boys running away for van away's sake.

7159. Under date of June 6th, 1875, it is stated:—
"Grieved removed after an absence of four months. A week after words to elope."

What does that refer to?—He had been let home at twelve. He was only five months in the school altogether.

7160. Was he a paying pupil, or a free boy?—A free boy.

7161. Was his place, as a free boy, left vacant for four months?—Yes, because I had no authority to declare it vacant. He ran away and was not submitting to father, mother, or any one else.

7162. In the minutes of November 7th, 1874, I find this entry:—

"Three boys received the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper in Castleknock Church on Sunday last the 24th inst.; Perkins and McNamara having broken boots could not go to Church."

May we judge of the condition of the rest of the boys' clothing by that of their boots?—I need not tell you how soon a boy will enter out his shoes.

7163. Each boy coming in, on the pay list, is required to bring two pairs of strong boots. Is there any regular allowance for the free boys?—Yes, two pairs in the year, and each pair is twice mended; but when a boy has one pair in wear, I look on the other pair as dipped.

7164. Must they not also have a pair of shoes?—The pay boys must.

7165. The free boys have none?—No.

7166. Dr. CURRIE.—If a paying pupil requires two pairs of boots and a pair of slippers, does not a free boy require the same?—A person in good circumstances can afford more than one in humble circumstances.

7167. Do you think the distinction causes repugnance amongst the boys?—I must go by the rules laid down by the Governors.

7168. LORD JURVIS First witness.—What supply of clothes is allowed for each boy?—One suit in the year. The old style was to give a blue cloth suit and black cord trousers, but the clothes now are not what they used to be. They now only get a suit of broad.

7169. Is the old suit in a condition to wear till they get the new one?—Indeed it is not.

7170. Then the boys are obliged to put on their new clothes as soon as they get them, and wear them till they are worn out?—Some of the careful boys have their old suits for two or three months after they get the new ones.

7171. Are they allowed any change of clothes in case of getting wet?—No.

7172. Henry Barnwell is recorded to have left the school, having obtained admission to the Meenan Orphan School. Would that be regarded as punishment?—Yes.

7173. The minutes of October 6th, 1875, record:—

"Three pay pupils left in September, Arthur Bonhagh, and Thomas and Henry Johnson, the last from extreme idleness, and the others from being discontented."

What were they discontented about?—They would not stay in any place for either their father or mother. Their father was stewed in one of the stables in Stephen's-green, and neither he nor their mother could get any good of them.

7174. In the minutes of March 5th, 1878, I find:—

"McNamara, free boy, eloped on the 12th February last, and now applied to be re-admitted, which is now refused."

What was the cause of his running away?—I cannot tell.

7175. Do you know where he had been, between the 12th February and the 5th March?—With his mother in the Co. Wicklow. He had been seven years in the school, and was trying to get into business.

7176. The minutes of September 3rd, 1878, contain this entry:—

"William Martin eloped, and was re-admitted on condition that if he again eloped he would not be taken back, and, having again eloped, his place is now declared vacant."

How long had he been in the school?—About two years.

7177. What are your hours for teaching?—From 10 o'clock A.M. to 1 P.M., then 3.30 to 6 P.M.; and from 7 to 8 P.M.

7178. What provision is there for the boys' recreation?—There is an excellent play-ground, and a good swing in it.

7179. Besides yourself and your wife, the boys, and the assistant master, what others are resident in the house?—Two female servants; there is also a gardener resident on the premises, and his wife is gate-keeper.

7180. Mr. O'Donnovan.—What is your own remuneration?—£100 a year, with house, coal, candles, and vegetables.

7181. Do you provide your own food?—Yes; entirely.

7182. How are the boys fed?—There is a regular scale laid down by the local committee. On Sunday, Wednesday, and Friday they get for dinner beef, potatoes, and vegetables; on Monday, Thursday, and Saturday they get bread and soup; and on Tuesday and dumplings.

7183. What is the dinner hour?—One o'clock.

7184. What other meals do they get?—Breakfast and supper; breakfast is at half-past eight. On after-noon's meetings they get bread and milk, and afterwards milk, except on Saturday, when they get bread, and butter, and eggs.

7185. What are the ages of the boys?—From eight to fourteen.

7186. What quantities of food are allowed for each

Any other

Mr A. Murphy.

boy?—One pint of soup, half a pound of bread, and three quarters of a pint of new milk, and half a pound of meat.

7187. Do you think that is a sufficient dietary for boys between the ages of eight to fourteen?—Plenty, many of them do not eat so much.

7188. Has any discontent arisen in reference to the dietary?—None.

7189. How many dormitories are there?—Two.

7190. How many boys sleep in each?—Thirteen in one, twenty in the other, but there are only thirty-one in the school just now.

7191. A free boy, named Bumble, was recently removed because you thought it would be injurious to the institution to have him retained. How long had he been in the school?—Four years and nine months.

7192. Had he been a well-behaved boy, during any part of that time?—I think not.

7193. Is there any one, in the position of a master, with the boys while they are not at their lessons?—Yes, the assistant master is with them.

7194. Is any person in charge of them in their dormitories?—The assistant master sleeps in the large dormitory with the twenty boys; the two head boys in the school, whom I look upon as monitors, sleep in the smaller dormitory.

7195. Are you and a single assistant sufficient to instruct, to thirty-three boys, the class of instruction supposed to be given in the school?—Yes, I think we are. The report of the Rev. Hugh Hamilton and of the Local Committee in November, was very favourable.

7196. While you are teaching one class, what are the other doing?—All the boys are in the school together.

7197. The most bill was, for September, £12 14s. 1d.; for October, £12 5s. 6d.; and for November, £13 9s. 9d. What number of persons are fed upon that meat?—The thirty-three boys; and two female servants, who get five pounds of meat each per week.

7198. Does your own family receive any portion of it?—None whatever.

7199. Does the assistant master?—No; he boards with me.

7200. Are you made any allowance for his board?—Yes, 10s. a week.

7201. What are the prices paid for meat?—For roasting beef and mutton, 3d. per lb.; for the boiling beef, 8d., and for legs of beef for making soup, 4d. per lb.

7202. How are the quantities of bread, meat, milk, and other articles, that are ordered for the establishment, checked?—Mrs. Murphy checks them.

7203. Who orders them?—Mrs. Murphy does, as matron of the house.

7204. How do you vouch the accounts?—They are sent to me monthly, and I compare and tot them and then write the amount shown in red ink, affixing my initials. I subsequently bring them before the committee. They are afterwards returned to the contractor, who takes them to Mr. Hamilton for payment.

7205. Have any of the Governors, during the time you have been master, taken any personal interest in the institution?—Yes; His Grace the Archbishop of Dublin came out on two occasions. So did Alderman Turpin, and Sir George Owens, when Lord Mayor.

7206. Then, as a rule, beyond signing the order for the boys' admission to the school, the Governors do not appear personally to interfere?—I understand that the appointment is made in this way:—there is a printed form filled up by the applicant, and when that is properly handed up it is brought to the Governor, who affixes his signature, and that is my authority for admitting any boy. The Governor meets once a year, when there is presented to them a report as to the state of the school, prepared by the Local Committee.

7207. The minute book shows that the boys have been, in several instances, distinguished at examinations to which they were sent. What was the nature of the different examinations to which you sent them?—Scripture examinations and the drawing examination. I have prepared a list for the last five years showing the number of boys that left the school each year, and the average attendance of each.

7208. It appears that the five pupils remain in the school, on an average, for four years and four months, and the paying pupils only for one year and six months. How do you account for the short time the latter stay?—Some stayed a very short time, which reduced the average. Two boys stayed only for two months, and another for five.

7209. Do you teach the boys to draw maps, from memory?—I have done so lately because I am preparing the boys for the intermediate examinations.

7210. How many do you propose to send up for those examinations?—Eight.

7211. Do you know what pursuit in life the boys usually take up, after they leave the school?—Generally mercantile business.

7212. Have you any means of tracing their after career?—A great many of the boys visit us frequently.

7213. As far as you know have they done well in life?—Generally they have done remarkably well.

7214. What experience had you in teaching, before you were appointed to your present position?—I was trained in the Kildare-street training school, and was first master of a school under Mr. Blackburn and Mr. Stopford, in the county Meath, afterwards of one under Lord Powerscourt in Bunsbury, and then I was master of the Protestant Orphan House in Percy place.

7215. What experience had the gentleman whom you have appointed as your assistant?—None as a teacher. This is his first appointment. He was so young that I consulted the Rev. Hugh Hamilton as to the advisability of taking him.

7216. How had you selected him?—I wrote to the head master of the Banagher school in Ardara, told him the nature of my school, and asked him could he recommend me a promising young man of good abilities, and he recommended first my former assistant, who had within three weeks after he came to me, and then his brother, who is the present assistant.

7217. It was stated that the girls in Messer's school were to make some clothes for the boys. Is that carried out?—Yes, they make the shirts.

7218. Do you find any difficulty in managing the boys, on account of having the girls' school so near?—Indeed we do, but the same difficulty has existed since the two schools were built. My experience goes back to the period when I was a lad in Messer's school myself. I knew the boys and girls to be often playing together, and I remember on one occasion, forty years ago, the girls invited the boys to have peaches in their kitchen, they were caught, and flogged for it. Even now I become master I have known of boys throwing letters across the wall to the girls. Miss Curtis detected them and consulted me, and we have put a stop to that.

7219. What is the separation between the two places?—A wall eight feet high.

7220. Do the boys go outside the precincts of the place at all, except on Sundays?—Every Thursday both boys and girls go to the Castleknock national school, to practice singing, which they are taught there gratuitously by a young lady. Occasionally I let the boys out for a walk with my assistant.

7221. Have you any arrangement by which well-behaved boys are allowed out, on their houses?—One of the boys goes to the post morning and evening, and I am supposed to trust him.

7222. Do you let them out in that way for their own amusement, as is done with the little boys of the Hibernian Military School, some of whom I have not miles away, apparently out for a walk in the country?—No, I do not allow that.

7223. You only allow them out when there is some body with them?—That is so. I used to take them down to bathe in the Tolka, but Captain Murray, who lived opposite, objected that it was a most indecent thing that they should bathe there. The boys of the school had been accustomed to bathe there for thirty-five years.

1224. What is your system as to sending the boys into their dormitories at night?—We have prayers at half-past eight, and the boys go to bed at nine o'clock. Ten minutes afterwards my assistant goes up, calls the roll, and extinguishes the lamp. In the morning I call them myself by means of bells from my own room.

1225. At what hour do the boys get up?—At six o'clock in summer, and at daylight in winter.

1226. Was there not an order made by the committee that there was to be no whipping except by their directions?—I do not know that there is actually such an order, but if the committee order me to do so, I whip the boys if I see any ill-conduct among them.

1227. How many have you whipped within the last three years?—I suppose not half a dozen. I do not like corporal punishment at all, because I think you beat more out of boys than into them.

1228. In 1857 there were forty-one boys in the school?—At that time the charge for pay per boy was only £12 a year, but the price of every marketable commodity has gone up to so much that the governors found they could not maintain the boys at that figure, and so they were obliged to raise it to £18.

1229. LONG JUSTICE FITZGERALD.—Do you consider that £18 a year clears the expenses of the boys who pay it, remembering that the establishment must be kept up in any case, or do you think the twelve or thirteen pay boys are any burden on the fund?—I would say that they are rather a burden than otherwise.

1230. To what extent?—I never calculated that.

1231. M. WILSON.—In consequence of the preparation of eight of the boys for the Intermediate examinations, will you be able to devote as much time as usual to the remainder of the boys?—Certainly, because I allow these eight boys, at their own request, to remain up till half-past nine each night.

1232. Is the cooking for your entire establishment done in the same kitchen?—Yes.

1233. Do you dine at the same hour as the boys?—Immediately after, because my assistant boards with me, and he stays with the boys while they are at dinner, and then he comes down to his own dinner with my family.

1234. Is it for the junior grade examination under the Intermediate Education Act that you are preparing the boys?—Yes.

[Adjourned to Friday, May 30, at 11 A.M.]

May 26, 1879.
Mr. A. Murphy.

NINETEENTH DAY—FRIDAY, MAY 30, 1879; 11 O'CLOCK A.M.

At the Commissioners' Office, Four Courts, Dublin.

Present.—ANDREW SEARLE HART, Esq., LL.D.; LORD RANDOLPH CHURCHILL, M.P.; RICHARD O'SHAUGHNESSY, Esq., M.P.; WILLIAM WILSON, Esq., M.P.; and ARTHUR HILA CURTIS, Esq., LL.D.; with JAMES CARRICK MERRITT, Esq., LL.D., Secretary.

REV. WILLIAM G. BOYCE, M.A., recalled.

May 30, 1879.

Rev. William
G. Boyce, M.A.

1235. DR. HART.—You desire to make a correction in your evidence?—Yes; when I was examined on Tuesday last, as to the number of children sent up from the National Board schools to our open examination in the year 1878, I mentioned the wrong figures [side question 5478]. I desire now to state the correct number. For the open examination held on Tuesday, 25th June, 1878, there were returned to me, as candidates from the National Board schools, the names of 167 boys and 139 girls, making a total of 306; and, of that number, 194 were present at the examination.

1236. MR. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—Were these children who were attending the National schools in the borough?—Yes. At the December open examination in the same year, there were returned to me, from the National Board schools, the names of 141 boys and 137 girls, making a total of 278, of whom 238 presented themselves to be examined.

1237. Were these open examinations always conducted by the authorities of the Borough school?—Yes, always.

1238. Are these examinations conducted orally or by papers?—The June examination, which is looked upon as the most important, because it is the fee examination, is wholly conducted by written papers. The December examination is chiefly vis-à-vis.

1239. These examinations were purely in primary subjects, and for children who were receiving primary education?—Yes.

1240. In addition to the 306 sent up from the National Board schools, how many others presented themselves?—The number of names sent up from the National Board schools was 306, but of these only 194 appeared, and along with them there were 30 other candidates who were pupils in our own schools.

1241. Were any of the gentlemen who conducted these examinations employed in primary teaching at Marlborough-street or elsewhere?—Mr. Molloy examined on one occasion, but not in 1878.

1242. Was any representation made to the governors that it would be a more satisfactory test to send down persons actually conversant with primary education?—Distinctly not, during the ten years I have been in charge of the schools.

1243. I suppose all the gentlemen who came down to conduct the examinations were Protestants?—Not always. As a rule I believed them to be so, but I never asked the question.

1244. Do the managers, in arranging their scheme of examination, pay any attention to the course of instruction given in the National school, from which such a large proportion of the children are sent up, as well as to that of the Borough schools?—I believe they make no distinction whatever. I do not think that the examiners, with the exception of one or two who have been there before, know anything about whence the children come.

1245. Are the examiners informed, beforehand, as to the course taught in the Borough schools, and the course taught in the National schools?—I believe they are not.

1246. Is there not a difference between the primary course in the National school and the primary course in the Borough school?—I am not aware.

1247. Is there in this, which is called open competition, any classification made of the competitors as regards age, or the length of time they have been at school?—Certainly there is as regards age, because to compete for the fees they must be over fourteen and under sixteen, and before I allow them into that examination I must receive, from their respective clergymen, a baptismal certificate showing their age.

1248. Do you remember the year that Mr. Molloy, the Inspector of the National Schools, conducted the examination?—I do not remember the exact year, but undoubtedly I was present.

1249. Did not the National school candidates come off much better, on that occasion, than on occasions when the examinations were conducted by gentlemen from Trinity College?—I am not aware of that.

1250. Do not you think that primary examinations, conducted by persons of constant experience in teaching in primary education, are more likely to be an ade-quite lost of knowledge than an examination in primary education conducted by gentlemen, no matter how well educated themselves, who have not been actively employed in teaching in primary education?—I should say so.

G. Boyle, M.A.

7251. Of the sixty-three children, attending the Borough schools at present, how many belong to the borough of Swends?—With the exception of about five, I think they are all residents in the borough.

7252. Is the borough like some of our southern boroughs—a borough with liberties?—I find a great difficulty in ascertaining exactly the limits of the borough. I brought the matter before the Board, and they made a rule, that we should for the future consider the borough/parish coincident with the ecclesiastical parish, and that, so far as I have been able to ascertain, is about what the borough would be.

7253. Have you made any inquiry as to what the limits of the borough were, in the days of the English Parliament?—I did not.

7254. Are you aware that that endowment was created to compensate the people of the area comprising the old Parliamentary borough?—Yes.

7255. Do not you think that it is taking rather too ecclesiastical a view of the matter to fix on the parochial boundary?—I do not think so, for the reason—I believe that includes every single place whence the children come.

Rev. Thomas
Twiss, M.A.

Rev. THOMAS TWISS, M.A., recalled.

7256. Dr. HART.—You desire to add something to your former evidence?—I was questioned as to the complaints that have been made against the arrangements in reference to the Borough school, and as I have since found a petition, which was presented to the Governors by the Very Rev. Thomas Kieran, the Roman Catholic priest of Swends, on the occasion of their visiting the school in March, 1860, and also the address which the reverend gentleman read on that occasion, and which I have in his own handwriting, I thought it might be for the convenience of the Commissioners that I should hand in the petition and memorial, which state very fully what the complaints were.

7257. Mr. O'BRIEN.—The memorial, sent in by the Rev. Mr. Kieran, was, as I understand, an exposition of the views expressed at a meeting of Catholics which had been held a few days before?—Yes, the minute, which was drawn up at the meeting, was embodied in a memorial with which Rev. Mr. Kieran attended before the Governors.

7258. The first prayer in that memorial is?—

"That out of the borough funds a sum should be allotted to indemnify the salary of £300 expended, by the Catholic parishes of the borough, in the erection of new schools for the children of the Catholic children, male and female, of the borough."

I suppose these schools were erected at the expense of the Catholics of the borough?—They are the National schools, and were erected by public subscriptions.

7259. The Catholics appear to have sought compensation for that outlay out of the funds of the Borough school?—Exactly.

7260. The second thing asked in the memorial is?—

"That after payment of such indemnity the annual income of the Borough Compensation Fund be year and yearly divided between the schools, Protestant and Catholic, in the borough, in proportion to the number of Catholic and Protestant inhabitants residing within the borough; the distribution and management thereof to be submitted, either to a new Board, composed equally of Protestants and Catholics, or by the present Board, assisted by a Local Committee similarly constituted."

That was the suggestion made by the Catholics at that time?—It was.

7261. The school which they had built, and to which they were willing to apply their share of the endowment, was under the National Board?—It was.

7262. The third prayer in the memorial is?—

"That no person shall be entitled to the benefit of the Borough Compensation Fund unless he or they, or his or their parents shall have lived within the borough for a period of not less than seven years continuously."

Is it possible to ascertain exactly what the boundaries of the borough of Swends are?—I think it would be almost impossible to define the limits, but if it can be done the Governors will be most willing to adopt the correct boundaries.

7263. The fourth prayer in the memorial is?—

"That each year the accounts of the Borough Compensation Fund, its assets, income, location, annual income, and distribution, be published, and duly vouched and audited."

Is that done?—That part of the prayer of the petition has been complied with, and the accounts are now open to public inspection.

7264. Was that system observed before the presentation of this memorial?—No, up to that time we did not do so. The accounts were always accurately kept in the books, but there was no public means of people going to examine them. Now, if any persons wish to see them they can do so.

7265. Were the accounts audited up to that time?—They were generally audited by a member of the Board. The Dean of St. Patrick's was the Treasurer.

7266. Was there any change made in the system of auditing?—Yes, some time after the presentation of that memorial we adopted the plan of having a public auditor. Our accounts have been audited by Messrs. Craig, Gardner and Co. for the last two years.

7267. The petition, to which I have been referring, was presented in the year 1860?—was the system of public audit introduced immediately afterwards?—No, but the Governors immediately made arrangements that anyone who wished to see the accounts could do so at the school.

7268. The fifth prayer of the memorial is in an alternative form?—

"Or in lieu of the foregoing, that an equitable proportion of the corpus fund of this borough Parliamentary grant, or its annual income, be, subject to the Deed of Incorporation, appropriated to the use of the Catholic inhabitants of the borough, and placed under the sole control, management, and distribution of a Board to be chosen from amongst the Catholic parishes of the borough."

What action was taken upon that petition?—The Board held that most of the demands were beyond their power to grant—that they were obliged to act under the charter, by which they were bound, and that they could not consistently with their trust comply with the greater part of the petition; but they did comply with what they could.

7269. What did they comply with?—They made arrangements that the accounts be open for inspection.

7270. Did they decline to indemnify for the outlay on the building of the National school?—They did.

7271. Was that upon the ground that they had no power to do so?—It was. The spokesman of the Board on the occasion was Sir Mordaunt Brady, who said he was very anxious, speaking for himself and the Board, to do what they could, but that they were bound by the charter.

7272. Mr. WILSON.—Are there any Presbyterians attending the Borough schools?—No.

7273. There were two in 1860?—There are no Presbyterians now, or, if there are any, they go to church. There is no Presbyterian place of worship in Swends.

[Mr. Twiss obtained permission to hand in a return, showing the average attendance of pupils at the Swends Borough Schools, for each year from 1862. Vide Appendix No. 12.]

REV. FRANCIS O'NEILL, &c., FRESHFORD.

May 16, 1878.

Rev. Francis
O'Neill, &c.

7274. Dr. HART.—You desire to give some information as to the Swards school?—A portion of the old borough of Swards belongs to my district, but I personally know very little about the school. A number of documents, however, have come into my possession, as the executor of my friend, Father Kenna, who was the parish priest of Swards for a number of years.

7275. Mr. O'BRAHENSEN.—You recently appear here to produce those documents?—Precisely.

7276. One of them, I find, is a petition to the Government, dated 21st July, 1848. Is that the earliest in point of date?—No; there is one dated in 1842.

7277. The document which you produce is headed "Rough Copy of Memorial," and is addressed to the Governors of the school of Swards?—Yes.

7278. Dr. HART.—Information from the Roman Catholic inhabitants of the borough?—Yes.

7279. Mr. O'BRAHENSEN.—This memorial states—

"That the Roman Catholic children attending the school at Swards have agreed to read, as a class-book, the authorized Protestant version of the Scriptures, that in the regulations for the management of the school, issued by the Governors at their meeting of the 1st June, 1842, the use of the Scriptures as a class-book is not ordered; that, however, it is the practice of the school to use the Scriptures as a class-book, and that your memorialists possess it as so contrary to the authority of the Government, that the Roman Catholics are more than three-fourths of the population of the town, and that they entertain a conscientious objection to the use of the Sacred Scriptures as a class-book, that their objection is further increased by their children being compelled to read the Scriptures in a version not approved of by their church, that the petition referred to presents the school from being improperly used as the memorialists are convinced the Government would desire. Your memorialists respectfully submit to the Government, that it is not expedient such circumstances, as with such feelings in the minds of those whose children attend the school, that advantage can be conferred with all its attendant advantages, that under all these circumstances your memorialists pray that the Government may order that the Sacred Scriptures may no longer be used as a class-book for the Roman Catholic children; and that a Roman Catholic minister be appointed to give religious instruction to those children after school hours, on during the time that the Protestant children are receiving similar instruction from the Protestant schoolmaster; and your memorialists pray that the Roman Catholic minister be also appointed to the infant school for the same purpose."

And then a reference to relief, given in the way of coal and medicine, to the parents of pupils, the memorialists complain of a habit of giving opposition to the managers, and they object to any pecuniary emoluments being extended to those not residing within the limits of the borough?—Yes.

7280. Dr. HART.—I find this minute of the Board, dated 8th June, 1842.—

"Ordered.—That and from henceforth no child be admitted into Swards school whose parent, or nearest surviving relative, does not produce satisfactory proof, to the satisfaction of the Board, that he or she has been resident in the Town or Liberties of the Parish or Union of Swards, at least ten years; but that discretionary power be still vested in the local Governor to admit the children of servants and paupers who may be temporarily resident in the town or parish. Ordered.—That upon the removal of such paupers or servants from Swards the deputy-secretaries shall exclude all such children from the school."

Was there any other effect from that memorial?—Not that I am aware of.

7281. Mr. O'BRAHENSEN.—Does the memorial presented in 1848 substantially renew the applications made in 1842?—It does.

7282. Have you got any other documents?—Yes; I have two very important letters from the late Cardinal Cullen to Father Kenna, the then parish priest, discussing him what to do.

7283. I suppose they show the course pursued by the Roman Catholic church at that time?—Precisely.

7284. Read the earliest of them.—

"DUBLIN, February 2nd, 1858.

"MR. DEAR FATHER KENNA.—I have read and examined the memorial lately adopted for the regulation of the school of Swards. There is no provision whatever in them for Catholic masters or Catholic ministers. There is no provision whatever for instruction in Catholic doctrine, as far as the use of Catholic books. The whole management of the school appears to be connected to the Protestant sector and to the Protestant wants of the parish. It appears that religious instruction is to be given every day at two o'clock for an hour. Of course this religious instruction is to be given by the Protestant parson of the parish, or by the Protestant masters and mistresses of the school. According to the way the rule is laid down, it would seem that Catholic children would be bound to attend such Protestant instruction unless their parents entered their objections against such attendance. This is a most degrading and insulting condition, for it supposes that the Catholics of Swards are unwilling, in general, to let their children receive Protestant instruction, and determines that such Protestant instruction is to be given unless such parents object to it. The Rev. Mr. Elington must be very ignorant of the Catholic feeling and the Catholic spirit of the people of Swards when he imagined that they would submit to such humiliating and degrading conditions. The Catholics of Swards are ten times more numerous than the Protestants, yet, in the management of such a school, instituted for the benefit of the inhabitants of that town, the Catholics are completely overlooked, and treated as if they were incapable of managing such an institution. I need not tell you to what all your faithful flock to determine never to yield to such conditions. The courage and perseverance by which their conduct has been marked for the last five years sufficiently indicate what they will do for the future. The Catholics of Swards have suffered too much for their faith to think of surrendering so precious a measure for the paltry advantage now held out to them. The injustice inflicted on them is of so flagrant a character that Parliament, I trust, will soon occupy itself with the case, and place the school and its management on a proper footing. In the meantime the Catholics of Swards can console themselves with the thought that the true children of Christ have always been persecuted by a wicked world, and that the sufferings they have had to endure, only make them more like their Divine Redeemer. Wishing you and your faithful flock every blessing,

"I remain your devoted servant,

"F. PAUL CHURCH.

"Rev. T. KERR, P.P."

7285. Read the other letter which you produce?—

"Inch College, Rosse, 2nd February, 1858.

"MR. DEAR MR. KENNA.—I am glad to learn that you are going to make a stir about the Swards school. If the case be properly brought before Parliament in all probability some redress will be obtained. The injustice inflicted on the Catholic inhabitants of Swards is so glaring that no honest man will attempt to ignore its existence. The petition, of which you have sent a copy, appears to be very good. The only difficulty I find in it regards the appointment of a committee to manage the funds. If proper persons be not appointed, the Catholic school might be subjected to great inconvenience. At all events get the petition signed very numerously, and give it for presentation to some influential member. Mr. McNeill, Mr. J. D. Fitzgerald, Mr. Donaghy, Mr. Cogan, Mr. Maguire, and many others would advocate your cause with great effect. Select some one or other of influence to present the petition, and beg of the other M.P.s to support it. I will do all I can to assist you in the good work. The people of Swards have acted so generously, they have displayed so strong a Catholic feeling, they have given such proofs of their determination to preserve the faith, and to have their children educated in truly Catholic principles, that we should be all ready to make every sacrifice and sacrifice to assist in obtaining their rights for them, rights of the enjoyment of which they have been so unjustly deprived during the last fifty years. I trust that at length their just claims will be admitted by Parliament. There is certainly no record as instances of greater injustice than that which has deprived the Catholics of Swards of every participation in the management of a fund granted for the general good of the inhabitants of the town, the immense majority of whom are Catholics. Get the people to pray fervently that justice may at length be done, and to put their prayers under the powerful patronage of the Holy Mother of God. I hope your two reverend curates are well. Kindest regards to Mr. Slater and his son. We have the Prince of Wales here. The Pope is well. I asked him blessing for you and the people of Swards, and he gave it most cordially. Wishing you every happiness, I remain, with great esteem, your devoted servant,

"P.R.—I think you could make the petition shorter, and add a strong paragraph against mixed education. Father Macdonald, if you speak to him, will get some one to draw it up in Parliamentary style. If you hold a meeting, get strong resolutions adopted against mixed education."

1295. Do you produce any other documents?—I have one addressed to the present Lord Chancellor, and another to the Board of charitable Donations and Bursaries.

1297. Are these petitions, praying for a share in the management?—Yes. There may also be some other documents amongst Father Kieran's papers, but I have not had time to examine them all. I think I have a letter addressed to him by Lord O'Hagan.

Mr. Robert E.
 Craun, A.R.

Mr. ROBERT RUSSELL CRAUN, J.P., examined.

1298. Dr. HART.—You reside in the neighbourhood of Swords, and take an interest in the questions relating to the schools there?—Yes. Reference has been made to the time when the children were withdrawn from the Borough school in 1853, and perhaps I can throw some light on that matter, as the Rev. Thomas Kieran invited my co-operation at that time; he consulted the leading Catholics of the neighbourhood, who advised with him on the subject. I have in my possession two letters, written to the Irish Times, by Father Gaffney, at that time curate of Swords, which very succinctly and clearly state what I think are all the important facts with reference to the unfortunate dispute, which ended in the withdrawal of the children.

1299. Lord R. CHURCHILL.—What was the first cause which led to the withdrawal of the Catholic children from the Borough school?—The Catholics of Swords were dissatisfied with the management of the schools from the year 1850, and presented several memorials to the Government; the first was in 1853, the second in 1855, the third in 1842, and the fourth in 1848.

1300. What was the principal cause which led the Catholics to take the desperate step of withdrawing their children from the Borough school of Swords?—In 1853 Father Kieran and Father Gaffney, who were respectively the parish priest and curate of Swords, were very apprehensive that, circumstanced as the school then was, under the exclusive control of Protestants, with Protestant Government, Protestant teachers, Protestant assistant-teachers, and Protestant monitors, the faith of the Catholic children was endangered.

1301. Did anything particular happen, in 1855, which made it incumbent on the Catholics to protest against that system continuing?—Father Kieran was most unwilling to deprive the poor children of the advantages derived from the schools, but owing to the enormous dangers of the institution, he invited the co-operation of those whom he considered the leading Catholics in the neighbourhood, in order to see whether it was necessary for him to withdraw the children from the schools. Vestry meetings were held, at which I attended. The parents of the children were requested to send them in groups to those meetings, we examined them all most carefully, and the impression made upon us, as the result of that examination, was, that the faith of the children was endangered by the system pursued in the Borough schools; and, indeed, that matter is made evident by a letter from Father Gaffney, to the Irish Times, at January 17, 1853, in which this passage occurs:—

"In 1825, 1833, 1836, 1842, and 1848, memorials were sent in from the inhabitants of the Borough protesting against such instruction. As to the children, the teachers adopted a very effective way of keeping them quiet. Kate Walsh, a Catholic pupil, who had been eight years at the Borough school, wrote before the Commission that she was taught to read out of the Protestant Testament; that she objected, and was then told by her teacher, Mrs. Curtis, that it was an essential part of the course for examination, and that the study of the Protestant Testament was the only way to get her apprentice fee. The poor child yielded to the threat, but she should lose what was everything to her, the apprentice fee. What are we to think of those who adopted such means to compel the children of the poor to act against their religious convictions?"

That is an illustration of what we found was going on in 1853.

1292. The result of the vestry meetings held in 1853 was, that you decided to withdraw the Catholic children from the schools?—Precisely, and they were withdrawn. It was a matter of religious principle, and we cannot hesitate his religious principles for money.

1293. Was it at that meeting or subsequently that you decided to build schools of your own?—It was at a subsequent meeting; we were altogether agreed by that one matter at the time of withdrawing the children from the school.

1294. What sums of money did the Catholics lay out on the Catholic school?—It was started by Father Gaffney to be £800.

1295. Is it not the fact that under the original charter there is power to establish one or more schools?—Yes.

1296. When you established the Catholic schools, did you apply to the Governors of the Borough schools for any endowment for them?—I believe so. We have been always asking for terms and never getting any, at the present moment five-sixths of the population of Swords are Catholics, while the teachers of the Borough schools are Protestants, as well as the Deputy Superintendent, who has always been a Protestant.

1297. Was the refusal of the Governors to give part of the endowment to the Catholic schools in Swords, because the Catholics in Swords refused to allow the Board to have any control over those schools?—No, certainly not.

1298. On what grounds did they refuse it?—Because the Board insisted on having an exclusively Protestant institution, in violation of the provisions of the trust. The Rev. Dr. Graves, one of the Commissioners of 1853, asked the Rev. Mr. Ormsby, who had previously been Superintendent of the school:—

"Do you think Protestant parents would willingly and cheerfully send their children to a school, all the prayers and teachers of which were Roman Catholics, and in which all the pupils were catechized in the Gospel history out of a book of questions prepared by a Roman Catholic priest appointed to superintend the education given in the school?"

And Mr. Ormsby, very much to his credit, answered, "I do not." We were expected to submit to every thing of that kind, and then, of course, we flag the whole thing up.

1299. Dr. HART.—You were not personally acquainted with the schools before 1853?—My acquaintance with them commenced at that date.

1300. You do not personally know anything of the transactions before that?—Not personally, but I know everything that is on record.

1301. Lord R. CHURCHILL.—In 1812, the Commissioners of Education remarked:—

"A school has been for many years past established in this town, upon an extensive and liberal plan, by the trustees of the corporation fund allowed by Parliament. . . . It was determined . . . to found a school in the town of Swords, for the education of the children of the lower orders of the people, without any distinction of religious persuasion."

Can you say, from your knowledge of the history of the school, down to the time the Catholic children were withdrawn, they were instructed in the Protestant religion?—Unquestionably; and they were refused all advantages from the endowment unless they consented.

7308 Do you think if that were the case, the Commissioners of Education would have called this "an extensive and liberal plan"?—That is quite a matter of opinion.

7309 Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—Are you aware that the rules of 1831 did not require either religious instruction, or the reading of the Scriptures by Roman Catholics?—I was not aware of that, I was speaking of the practice pursued in the school.

7310 Dr. HARR.—Your acquaintance with the practice can only have been derived from hearsay?—I lived in the neighbourhood, and heard the facts from those attending the schools.

7311 But you were not born in the year 1831?—No, I was not born till 1827. Of course my knowledge of the state of things at that period is derived from hearsay and the records.

7312 Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—If it be a fact, as appears from the memorials, that the rules of 1831 did not insist on Scriptural instruction for Roman Catholics, and if we find Scriptural instruction insisted on subsequently, does not it show that some change must have taken place subsequent to 1831?—Certainly.

7313 And that in its early stages the school was managed far more liberally to the Roman Catholics than it was afterwards?—Quite so.

7314 LORD R. CHURCHILL.—Do you think that at the time of the original foundation of the school the Catholics of Swords would have agreed to any system which would not have exempted Catholic children from religious teaching?—At that time the position of the Catholics was very weak.

7315 In 1804?—Yes, we are quite in a different position now. I do not think we would have accepted the same terms now.

7316 Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—Do you think the Roman Catholics would have been satisfied at all in 1804?—I doubt if they would. I think they would have been content with very little at that period.

7317 Have you ever read the Charter of the Borough schools?—I have read a copy of it, but not recently.

7318 It has been stated that several memorials were rejected, in whole or in part, by the Governing Body, on the ground that the prayers contained in them sought things in excess of the powers given by the Charter?—Yes; but the Commissioners of 1835 do not corroborate that.

7319 The terms of the Charter appear to enable the Governors to maintain one or more schools, within the borough, under proper instructions, for the education of the children of the inhabitants of the borough, in reading, writing, and arithmetic?—Yes.

7320 I believe reading, writing, and arithmetic, are the very things taught in the National schools, built by the Roman Catholics, at Swords?—Certainly.

7321 Therefore, so far as a grant of money for the maintenance of that school goes, that would not have been, according to your view, contrary to the spirit of the Charter?—Certainly not.

7322 It was directed by the Charter that the surplus remaining after that expenditure should be employed in apprenticing the pupils to useful trades and occupations, and if any further surplus remained it was to be employed in preference for encouragement of agriculture, or manufacture, or in such other manner as the trustees might think calculated to promote the Christian religion and morality, good order, sobriety, industry, and wealth within the said borough, and that appears to be the only reference to religion in the Charter?—Certainly.

7323 And that reference is not to the Protestant or any particular form of religion, but to Christianity generally?—Precisely.

7324 Did any of the memorialists, with whom you were acquainted, obtain an interview with the Governing Body?—Yes, subsequent to the withdrawal of the children, Father Kieren, the late Mr. Foster, myself, and others attended at Swords school on the occasion of a visitation, and presented a memorial. We were listened to, but it ended there.

7325 Did you refer to the terms of the work?—Everything was referred to—the memorial was an elaborate document, and took twenty minutes to read.

7326 LORD R. CHURCHILL.—In a letter written by the secretary to the Archbishop of Dublin with reference to a memorial presented in 1842, I find this passage:—

"I have communicated with the Archbishop of Dublin, who desires me to represent to you that the subject is one which he cannot bring before the Board of Governors not on the ground that what is asked for is unreasonable (for upon that Mr. Grace gives no opinion), but because such fundamental changes as the memorial contemplates require out of the province of the Board. . . . To effect such changes it will be necessary for memorialists to apply to Parliament, and so far from depressing such a step, Mr. Grace would have reason to be glad, if among other desirable results, the Archbishop of Dublin were to be relieved from the addition to his already too onerous duties."

And in a subsequent letter, the same gentleman writes:—

"I may add that some of the Governors present seemed to have any unwillingness that memorialists should take the step of applying to Parliament with a view to obtaining the change in the system of management as contemplated in the memorial."

Why was no application made to Parliament?—The parish priest was frequently in communication with our Archbishop, Dr. Murray, and I am sure he acted under his advice in any step he took.

7327 Did it never occur to you as an alternative to found new schools and apply to Parliament for a change of the charter from the old schools?—We anticipated the opinion of the Commissioners of 1835, and thought that the rescinding of the charter and the vesting of the money in another Board would be the proper solution.

7328 Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—You were relying upon some change, in consequence of the inquiries made by the Commissioners of 1835?—Yes.

7329 LORD R. CHURCHILL.—Mr. Foster in his evidence to the Commissioners of 1835, said:—

"We desire to live in good fellowship with our Protestant neighbours, as we have always done. We feel that the parish being so considerable would admit of a Catholic master and mistress, and that a certain day in every week, or part of a day, might be allotted for religious instruction, part for the Catholics and part for the Protestants."

At that time the Catholics of Swords had no objection to mixed secular and separate religious instruction?—Not at all—that was what we sought for.

7330 If a plan of that kind had been proposed you would have accepted it?—Yes, but I do not suppose it would be accepted now. Our expectations, at that time, were not so high as to ask for Catholic teachers, but only for Catholic assistant teachers, and it was then made a compromise that Catholic masters who were paid for a quarter were appointed. Now, however, I think it would be useless to expect the Catholic community of Swords to consent to any arrangement of the kind. I speak without authority, but in the press, and with my little influence I could command, I would oppose anything now except full justice. We now demand a full measure of justice, and we will take nothing less.

7331 What changes in the Charter, and in the management of the endowment, would, in your opinion, as a Catholic interested in the matter, constitute justice?—It is rather hard to ask me to formulate a plan.

7332 You must have thought the matter over?—Yes, but I should wish to hear the opinion of the Archbishop of Dublin on that subject substantially. I think I gave you a fair answer when I say we want a full measure of justice. We are in the majority there. The endowment was founded for the community, irrespective of religious belief, and we claim a full share of the endowment as contemplated by the charter.

7333 Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—Can you suggest no

 Mr. Robert H.
 Green, J.P.

solution of the difficulty?—We have a right to the endowment for the present children in Sweden, Catholics as well as Protestants.

7329 You suggest no solution that does not perfect equality?—Perfect equality.

7330 Provided equality is produced, you do not want to offer any opinion as to what the solution might be?—That is exactly so.

7331 As a matter of fact, the National schools of Sweden receive some part of the endowment?—Yes, they receive about £80 a year, out of £100; but I think Mr. Terreg said it was something like a gratuity.

7332 In what form is it given?—In apprentice fees, which the Catholic children receive.

7333 LORD R. CHURCHILL.—Do you think that form of sanctioning the National schools is useful, as far as it goes?—On the contrary, I think it was a mistake to accept that compromise, but I was away from the country when it was sanctioned by my late parish priest.

7334 If the sums offered as apprentice fees were increased, and exhibitions tunable at higher schools were founded, would that be useful?—Certainly not. We want nothing but our rights under the charter.

7335 DR. HART.—You contend that the original Charter intended nothing but perfect equality between Protestants and Roman Catholics?—Unquestionably.

7336 Were there any Roman Catholics among the original trustees of the school?—At that time Roman Catholics were not emancipated.

7337 Were not the majority of the trustees Protestant clergymen?—The trustees are the Lord Chancellor of Ireland, the Protestant Archbishop of Dublin, the Dean of St. Patrick's, and the Vicar of Sweden. They were all Protestants. There was never a Catholic trustee, except Lord O'Hagan.

7338 They were all clergymen except one?—Yes.

7339 It would appear from that, as if the intention of the founders were to give Protestant instruction. They would not have selected clergymen if they intended it for a mixed instruction?—No, because, as I said, "Language was intended to conceal one's thoughts." If the grant was intended to be sectarian the charter was a mockery.

7340 One of the trusts mentioned in the charter is "to promote the Christian religion," and the instruction was placed under the control of Protestant clergymen. Does not it follow, that, by the Christian religion, they meant the Protestant religion?—Well, if they did they were not honest men. If that was the intention it was a mere dodge, but I do not assume for a moment that was possible. It was intended for the Catholics as well as for the Protestants, and we are entitled to our share.

7341 LORD R. CHURCHILL.—This Commission has no power to make any recommendations. We have only to report facts; but I think it would considerably assist anybody reading our Report, hereafter, in coming to a conclusion on the subject, if we had some practical suggestion from the Catholics of Sweden, as to the manner in which this endowment should be administered; and if you take up a new position at work, and findings in generalities on right and justice, you do not arrive at any conclusion?—But it is the other side that has adopted a new position attitude.

7342 MR. O'SHEA.—The annual value of the endowment is about £800?—I believe between £700 and £800.

7343 There is a Protestant school in Sweden—the Brough school?—Yes.

7344 And a Catholic school—the National school?—Yes.

7345 If the National school were provided with its own fair share of the endowment, so as to enable it to give to the Catholics of Sweden a high class education, would that, in your opinion, be a fair solution of the difficulty?—As I understand your question, I think it would.

7346 Are you acquainted with the standard and character of the secular education given by the Model schools?—Yes, I know something of them.

7347 You are aware that although objections are entertained to them by Roman Catholics, they give, so far as secular education goes, a higher standard of education than the ordinary National schools?—I believe so.

7348 Do you not think, that, with this large endowment, both the Protestant and Catholic schools in Sweden might be enabled to give a secular education, of the same standard as is given in the Model schools?—I have no doubt they could.

7349 And that that would really be a solution of the question?—Yes.

7350 It appears that the primary trusts of this endowment did not contemplate any religious education; but that the surplus was to be applied to promote the Christian religion. You are aware that in 1804, at the present time, the Christian religion included Catholicism as well as Protestantism?—I was always under that impression.

7351 You, therefore, believed that Catholicism, taking the words of the trust in their ordinary meaning, would be quite as much within the purview of the trust as Protestantism?—Certainly.

7352 Turning then to the Charter, which was granted preparatory to carrying those trusts into execution, we find that, in pursuance of the Act of Parliament which created the endowment, King George the Third by his charter says—

"We of our special grace, . . . do make and ordain, . . . the Lord Chancellor of Ireland, the Lord Archbishop of Dublin, the Dean of Christ's Church, Dublin, the Dean of St. Patrick's, Dublin, the Rector of Trinity College, Dublin, and the Vicar of the parish of Sweden for the time being to be our body politic and corporate, . . . and to call the Governors of the said school at Sweden, . . . and that it shall and may be lawful for the members of the said Corporation, or a majority of them, duly assembled, from time to time, to elect from amongst themselves, . . . a treasurer, and also a superintendent of the said charity, or either of them. . . . And, further, that it shall and may be lawful for any two members of the said Corporation to administer an oath, or oaths, to the said treasurer and superintendent, . . . which they shall be required to take, for the due execution of their respective offices. . . . And, further, that it shall and may be lawful for the said Corporation to nominate and appoint any of the said body to be a Governor or Committee, to superintend and carry into execution all such orders, rules, and directions as shall, from time to time, be made by said Corporation. And, further, that it shall and may be lawful as and for the Corporation to make rules, by-laws, ordinances, and rules, and from time to time to alter the same, as they shall judge most convenient and useful for the good government of the said Corporation, and management of the offices thereof, and the effectual promotion of the good ends intended thereby."

According to your view it would be in derogation of the good ends thereby intended, to refuse to employ the surplus in the promotion of any branch of Christianity, professed by a majority of the inhabitants of the place, or to give the entire fund to a minority, like the Protestants?—Certainly.

7353 You do not advocate that Catholicism should be the only religion benefited?—Not at all. It is the mode of the execution of the trusts that we complain of.

7354 Do you know anything of the boundaries of the ancient borough of Sweden?—They do not extend by any means far. It came quite by surprise upon the inhabitants to learn that it was necessary to keep them, to bring the children to the schools.

7355 Are you kept now, to bring the children to the schools?—I do not know it of my personal knowledge; but I have heard that, immediately after we withdrew the Catholic children in 1853, the managers of those schools got up some mode of public conveyance, for the purpose of drafting children from a distance to the schools; and the impression created in the borough was, that it was an act of the most usual kind, and that having excluded us from all the benefits of the endowment, they were obliged to keep up a pretence of supplying the schools with children. Dr. McBlain, the Assistant Commissioner who reported on the schools in 1856, found fault with a great many of the regulations about the employment of the funds of this school.

7354. Dr. HART.—Is your evidence to the effect that all Dr. McBlain complained of, as existing at that time, still continues?—I am not aware that there has been any substantial alteration.

7355. Do you think that there has not been any change made?—Not that I know of. The system has been consistent all through. There may have been some trifling changes, but nothing important.

7356. Does it not appear plainly that it was not the intention of the original founders to adopt the principle of united education, when they chose, as Governors, the ministers of one particular church; and may we not, therefore, rather assume that the endowment was intended for that particular church?—You may assume what you like.

REV. WILLIAM G. BOYCE, M.A., recalled.

7363. LEAD R. CHURCHILL.—It has been stated that as important change has taken place in the system of managing the Swedish Borough schools since the report of the Commissioners of 1857 was written. I wish to call your attention to a few passages in that report. Dr. McBlain, the Assistant Commissioner, who visited the school in 1856, wrote:—

"The eventful history of the Swedish school, its management and mismanagement, and the perpetual turmoil which it appears to have occasioned in that respect, pot-walloping through, have been already the subject of such an elaborate investigation by the Commissioners, as to render any detailed observations on my part in reference thereto quite unnecessary. The result of the enquiry has been to show that the terms of the Charter were not strictly adhered to in the conduct or regulation of the schools. The Governors did not, as required by the Charter, cause instruction to be given in any business or manufactures."

Do you, at the present time, cause instruction to be given in Swedish Borough school in any branch of manufactures?—We do not.

"We did they provide for the children, a wholesome hot frosted meal, at the school-house."

Do you provide a wholesome and frosted meal?—We do.

REV. THOMAS TWISS, M.A., recalled.

7371. LEAD R. CHURCHILL.—When were the coal-yard and dispensary discontinued, and for what reasons?—About the year 1853 we commenced to levy apprentice fees, for the children attending the National schools, and to admit them at open examinations, at which money prizes were awarded. That cost us about £160 a year, and finding the expense of the coal-yard was considerable, the Board decided to discontinue it, and at the same time they reduced the salary of the doctor to £25 a year. They thought that they would be thereby acting more in accordance with the spirit of the Charter which was for the encouragement of education. The coal fund was, however, so very desirable that we have since established one by voluntary subscriptions. We looked to the special arrangements made in the Charter, in case of a surplus, and when we proposed establishing fees and rewards for the pupils of the other school we considered we were dealing with the surplus. Our duty was, first, to manage our own school, and then deal with the surplus in benefiting the other school. The 7358. Is not the only way to correct what you complain of, to obtain an alteration of the Charter?—I think the Governors do not carry out the true spirit of their Trust.

7359. Do you think that Protestant clergymen could be regarded as persons competent to choose Roman Catholic instructors?—They would be competent to ask the Catholic Archbishop of Dublin, who would have very easily recommended them; and I think Cardinal Cullen might fairly have been asked for his opinion.

7361. Mr. WILSON.—I imagine that at the time of the establishment of these schools, the ministers of other religions were hardly acknowledged at all. That is so. The schools were established in 1803, and we Catholics were not emancipated till 1829.

7362. Were you acquainted with the management of any other school except the schools of Sweden?—I know nothing about other schools; but I believe the management of Endowed Schools in Ireland, generally, is the subject of very pointed remark just now.

7365. The passage I have been quoting proceeds:— "But, neglecting the primary objects of the Charter, they established a coal-yard and dispensary, which, if at all, were payable only on the supposition of there being a surplus fund, a contingency which, in fact, never arose."

Do you still continue the coal-yard and dispensary?—We do not.

7366. When were they discontinued?—About 18 years ago.

7367. Why were they discontinued then?—I am not aware that was previous to my connection with the schools.

7368. Dr. McBlain also wrote:—

"But a still more gross error was committed in requiring all children to read, as a class-book, the authorized version of the Scriptures."

Do you still continue that practice in the Borough school?—We have never had any Roman Catholic children there in my time. We do teach the Scriptures, but if Roman Catholics attended, I will undertake that we would not require them to read the Scriptures.

7370. Since the report of the Commission of 1857 was issued you drew up a new set of rules, in which is contained a conscience clause?—Yes.

7370. Mr. WILSON.—Do you teach any particular catechism?—Yes, the Church catechism.

teachers of the National schools are both here, and they will be able to say how the examinations have been conducted, as they were always present. Although Mr. Cruise has taken much interest in this matter, you must remember that he has not been a very constant resident in the neighbourhood of Sweden for the last 15 years.

7372. Mr. WILSON.—When was the coal-yard first established?—I cannot exactly say. It had been in existence for a very long time. Goods were given to the parents of the children who attended the schools.

7373. LEAD R. CHURCHILL.—It has been stated by Mr. Cruise that emigrants were employed to bring the children to school. Do you know anything of such a practice?—I can say, of my own personal knowledge, that, for the last 15 years, no such thing has been done. I have heard that, formerly, when the children from Dornale attended the schools, Mr. Collier sent some kind of a conveyance with them, but I never heard that it was paid for out of the school funds.

7374. Mr. O'SHEA.—What do you regard as

the boundaries of Sworda, for the purposes of the school?—The numbers of children attending having fallen off very much, we do not consider it necessary to be very particular, but lately we have been in the habit of regarding the boundaries of the borough as coextensive with those of the ecclesiastical parish. I am quite aware, however, that such an arrangement is not precisely correct, as the boundary of the ecclesiastical parish is considerably larger than that of the old borough.

7375. What has been the average number attending the Borough school during the last six years?—It has been gradually declining. A few years ago it was 71; before that it was as high as 94. It is only 43 now.

Miss K. Abens.

Miss KATH ABENS examined.

7380. Dr. HART.—You are the mistress of the female National school at Sworda?—Yes.

7381. Are the children in your school in the habit of attending the examinations held in the Borough school?—Yes.

7382. Have you any remarks to make as to the mode in which the examinations are conducted?—We complain that children from our schools are examined in a higher class than that in which, according to the programme in our own school, they would be examined by our own inspectors. At the same time, our standard of education is fully equal to that of the Borough school, taking all the classes together.

7385. Mr. O'BRIEN.—How are these examinations conducted?—Orally. Nearly 200 children attend from the National schools, and about fifty from the Borough schools.

7386. Are the children examined together, or divided into classes?—They are divided into classes. We send up our pupils classed as they are in our own books.

7387. How are they classed in the open examination?—Our head class is placed with the head class in the Borough school; but we find that the Borough school examiners usually examine all the girls in a programme higher than that which they are learning.

7388. Do the Borough school examiners, in classifying the candidates, pay attention exclusively to the classification of the Borough school?—I do not know; they are gentlemen from Trinity College, who are quite ignorant of both schools.

7390. How many children attend your school?—The average on the roll, for the present year, is 183, and the average daily attendance has been 114.

7391. Lord R. CRENSHAW.—Do these figures include both boys and girls?—Including of the girls alone.

7392. Mr. O'BRIEN.—How many girls do you generally send up to the open examination?—About 100; but last year the number was 103.

7376. Of those 43, how many belong to portions of the parish outside what was usually regarded as the borough?—Mr. Boyce told me that he thought there were seven.

7377. Are there any boys from places outside the parish?—There are a few. They are children of comfortable families.

7378. Do they pay anything?—They do not.

7379. How many of the 43 are children of persons of the class of comfortable farmers or shopkeepers?—I should say 25, at all events.

7393. Lord R. CRENSHAW.—How many do you send up to the examination for apprentice fees?—I sent up seven last examination.

7394. Mr. O'BRIEN.—How many girls are, on an average, presented from the Borough school at the open examinations?—I heard the mistress say that she had twenty-three under examination, on an average when I had 104.

7395. You send up nearly five times as many candidates as the Borough school?—Yes; about that.

7396. You claim that having regard to the superiority of your numbers, and to the fact that the election is conducted in your school under an authorized primary system, some attention ought to be paid to the classification adopted in your school?—Yes.

7397. How many of the seven girls you sent up were successful at the last examination?—There were five, but that is not always the case.

7398. How many of your 100 pupils are generally successful at the open examinations?—I brought that matter under Mr. Twigg's notice on one occasion. Nearly all our girls answer respectably, but only three or four out of every dozen get prizes, and the others go home disappointed. I asked Mr. Twigg to arrange so as to give a prize to each who made a fair examination, but they only gave prizes to three or four out of each class, which amounts sometimes to as many as seventeen.

7399. What proportion of the Borough school girls obtain prizes?—I think they nearly all get prizes.

7400. Is your school considered by your own inspectors to be satisfactorily managed?—Yes; I got the Certificate and Blue Book in 1875. That is a prize given only to one teacher in each ten districts.

7401. I presume you get good results from?—Very fair; but our union is not contributory.

7402. You think, having regard to the excellent way in which your school is conducted, and to the personal recommendations obtained from the National Board examiners, that there is something strange in it not being equally successful in the Borough school examinations?—I never thought it was not successful, but, from the mode of awarding the prizes, girls may not get any who answer remarkably well.

7403. Mr. Boyce wishes that you should look at the sheets containing the records of the open examinations held on the 25th June, 1878. He hands you the sheet for the first class of girls, and for the third class?—I am satisfied that these are all correct; let me see how many get prizes.

7404. Mr. Boyce points out that in one of these classes seven prizes were awarded, of which the children of the Borough school got two, which would be about the proportion, and that in the other class in which seventeen candidates were examined, eight prizes were awarded, of which only one was to a child belonging to the Borough school. Having seen that, you would not think of imputing any charge of unfairness?—I did not impute unfairness at all. I merely said, that if all our pupils who answered well did not get prizes, it was because there was such a limited number of prizes in each class.

7406. Your objection is, that the classification of your school, which sends up five-sixths of the competitors, is not taken into consideration so much as would be desirable?—The managers of the Borough school send two a year ago to send up any programme, and send they would classify the children accordingly.

7406. Have they improved the classification since then?—I did not notice any unfavourable. They modified the questions last year. I am only complaining of a higher programme in most of the classes except the head class.

7407. Mr. WILSON.—Were you the mistress of the National school at the time that Dr. Molloy conducted the open examinations in the Borough school?—No.

7408. Dr. HART.—Do you suggest that the inspectors of National schools should be appointed to examine at these open examinations?—I would suggest that our own children should be examined in our own school, by the inspectors of the National Board.

7409. Do you mean especially?—Yes, that is what we would consider fair. There are children attending on school fully as respectable as those attending the others, but we have the greater number of the labourer's children—in fact, more of them go to any school but ours.

7410. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—How many apprenticeships are open to competition each year?—There are three open to my school, three to our boys' school, and three to each of the Borough schools, making twelve in all.

7411. If there were only three open to your school, how did five of your pupils get fees last year?—Mr. Boyce was very kind, and when my pupils answered well, and obtained a certain number of marks, as they happened to be poor girls, he made representations to the Board, and the girls got the gratuities.

7412. Has that happened on other occasions?—Yes, the year before they got two extra fees, and in the year before that, one extra.

7413. Are those apprentice fees much valued by the parents of the children attending your school?—Very much. There is one matter to which I would like to call attention. The course is too extended, and the papers too advanced, for children of sixteen years of age. We do not know what part of the books they may take their questions from. In the National schools there is a portion of the books selected, but in the Borough school there is no portion, so a child, to make a good examination, must be examined, and it is real cruelty to require this of children of sixteen years of age. The completion of some of the girls is unequal to that.

7414. You think the course is higher than is necessary for children going to be apprenticed?—That is not the fault of the Borough school, but the fault of Dr. MacDonagh, and the gentlemen from Trinity College.

7415. The situation in each school is primary?—It is.

7416. Do you think that the small money prizes, which are given, are desirable from an educational point of view?—They are, they make the poorer children come to school for a longer time, in hopes of getting them, and it is a pity they are disappointed.

7417. How much was awarded, altogether, this year to pupils of your school?—This year was beyond the average; we got £35 in apprentice fees, and £5 in small money prizes.

7418. I suppose the existence of these rewards gives the National school of Swords a great advantage over other National schools?—It does, but as the Borough school is a free school we cannot enforce payment from our pupils. It would be almost tempting them to go to the Borough school if we enforced payment, and for that reason I was allowed £5 a year, as an equivalent from a charity sermon. I have 150 pupils out of 180 who pay nothing.

7419. The fact of there being a free Borough school, compels you practically to take a good many free pupils?—Yes, otherwise they might go to the Borough school, and the Manager said we should go through the humiliation of leaving a charity sermon for the purpose of compensating us, which we did not like at all.

7420. Would it not be a very useful thing if there were prizes given out of this endowment, which would constitute exhibitions for clever children, and enable them to continue their education in the higher schools?—I would not like to express an opinion on this point, as I have not considered it, and it would severely be my place to do so.

7421. Have you any promising pupils, of children considerably above the rest, who would be benefited by such an arrangement?—We have often very promising pupils, whom it is a pity to send to trade. One girl from my school answered as much as 75 per cent on the Borough school papers.

7422. Then, as a matter of fact, it is important for these children to gain anything which would help them on to a still higher education?—They can get nothing except the fee. The distance from Dublin is too great, and the children do not, as a rule, belong to a class able to afford the expense of going there.

7423. You have no objection to make to the examinations for the apprentice fees?—No, I think they are very fair. Any girl I expected would pass, did so.

7424. Your objection is confined to the open examinations?—Yes; the standard required for the money prizes is too much extended. It should be confined.

7425. Mr. O'SHEA.—Have you any other objections?—The children are examined in English History, which is not in our school programme.

7426. Do you not teach English History?—When the examination for fees is approaching we teach it, but as it is not in the school programme, it is only gratuitous work on the teacher's part to do so.

7427. Mr. WILSON.—Are there any Wesleyanians attending your school?—None.

7428. Do not you think that, from the state of feeling existing in Swords, of which we have heard so much, there would be no great risk, even supposing you made a small charge at your school, that the Catholics would send their children to the Borough school?—I do not think any of them would go there, no matter what happened. There has been no instance of it in my time. The school fees in my school only amount to between £10 and £11 a year, and I have an average of 135 pupils on the roll. We wish them all to pay, but they are not compelled to do so.

MR. JAMES MURPHY EXAMINED.

7429. Dr. HART.—You are the Master of the whole National school of Swords?—I am.

7430. Have you any complaint to make, as to the mode in which the open examinations are conducted?—Yes, I think they should be conducted by a National Board Inspector.

7431. Where pupils from two different schools are competing, would it be altogether fair to choose the candidate from one school rather than from the other?—Let the Government choose any Inspector in Ireland.

7432. What bad result arises from the present system?—I think the selection of the questions is not fair. Sometimes they are taken from books that the pupils in the National school never heard of. For instance, at one examination they were asked what is a "bene," meaning "a phenomenon occurring at the mouth of a river when the current meets with the tidal wave." I have searched all the geographicals used in our schools, and I could not find that definition.

7433. Is it to be found in the Borough school?

books?—I have heard that it is in the Physical Geography which they teach. I would like to say that when the National Board Inspector, Mr. Melloy, examined, one of my pupils came out many marks higher than any of his competitors.

7434. Do you know anything of the books used in the Borough school?—No.

7435. You cannot compare them directly with your own?—I cannot.

7436. Is there anything else besides that, that you think ought to be improved?—I think if the examinations were conducted by the Board's Inspector it would satisfy us. That is our only grievance in reference to the examinations.

7437. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—How many boys are attending your school?—I had 167 on the roll, and for the open examination in December last I sent up 141, of whom 134 actually attended, and were examined.

7438. What is the daily attendance at your school?—Sometimes there are 149 present, but the average attendance for the year has been 119. I have very few pupils on the roll who are not in actual attendance; for, when I find they do not return after a fortnight or month's absence, I strike their names off the roll. I would rather not have those pupils who do not attend regularly.

7439. Do you complain, as Miss Aburn complains, of the classification?—I set no value on the pence that are given. Most of my respectable boys do not go up for the sake of the money.

7440. Do you think the classification made by the examiners is fair to your pupils?—No; I agree with what Miss Aburn said on that point.

7441. LOUIE R. CHURCHILL.—How many candidates do you send up for the apprentice fees?—I sent up four last year.

7442. How many of those were successful?—Only two of them got fees, and the two boys who did not get fees passed in the head class in my school, in which the standard is very high, more creditably than the two who got the fees. I therefore think if the examination had been held by an Inspector under the National Board, the boys who failed would have got the fees.

7443. Your school was refitted to three fees. What was done with the third last year?—I do not know.

7444. How long have you been Master of the Swords school?—Since 1871.

7445. How many candidates for fees did you send up in 1877?—I think only three, because we were put about with regard to the ages.

7446. Were the three successful?—No; only one, and yet in that very year I got the Curiala premium, as having the best school in ten districts.

7447. Do you consider the apprentice fees of much value?—I do not.

7448. In what way would you dispose of the money, so that it might be of greater use?—I would give large fees; the present fee is too small to effect any good.

7449. Do you know anything of the offer made of the boys who gained apprentice fees?—I have one in my school at present. He is a classed National teacher. There are others also teaching as National schools.

7450. Are the boys who obtain fees apprenticed to good masters?—Some are, and some are not; the amount given is not sufficient to command a master in any respectable position. It is only £18.

7451. What was an ordinarily paid, in a respectable trade, to a good master?—I think about £30 to a house carpenter.

7452. Do you think it would be of use, if some of this money were employed in the way of exhibitions, to assist pupils on to a higher education?—I think if some of this money were applied to give higher apprentice fees it would be beneficial, but the fund is present in nearly waste.

7453. Miss Aburn has spoken of English History. Do you teach it?—I think we are almost not allowed by the rules of the National Board to teach English History. If English Composition—which I do teach—were introduced into the course for these examinations, it would be a very great improvement.

7454. Is it a fact, that, under the rules of the National Board, English History is not taught?—It is.

7455. Mr. WILSON.—Do your pupils pay anything?—About fifty or sixty pay something. I have about twenty who pay respectably, and others who pay a small amount. My school fees amount to between £15 and £16 in the year. I make any of them that are able to pay do so respectably, and those that are unable to do that I let off entirely.

7456. What charge is made at your school to the boys?—Of those who pay by the year, some pay me £1 and some 10s. The poor children sometimes pay 1d. a week.

G. Boyce, &c.

REV. WILLIAM G. BOYCE, M.A., RECALLED.

7457. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—Do the governing body take any means of ascertaining the application of the fees for the purpose of apprenticeship?—Most undoubtedly they do. That is my duty. When a child passes the fee examination the parents come and inform me what trade they wish to send the child to, and sometimes they suggest a master. I then make every possible inquiry to ascertain whether the tradesman proposed is a respectable party or not. As soon as the master is arranged the proposed master or mistress comes to my office, the parents are present, and the apprentice deed is signed. James Ryan passed in 1873, and we bound him to Thomas Ryan, blacksmith, who got with him a fee of £18. James Sharkey, who was also awarded a fee in 1873 of £18, was bound to James Kelly, a grocer in Dublin. I have no reason to find fault with either of those parties.

7458. Dr. CURRAN.—Do you not use the National school-books in the Borough schools?—We do, chiefly.

7459. What is the ground of the complaint that has been made as to classification?—I really cannot give an explanation of that, except in this way: we have certain classes in our schools, and when the children from the National schools are sent up, we put their first class with our first class, and second with the second class, and so on.

7460. Would there be any possibility of having the classification perfectly satisfactory to both schools?—I can scarcely think there could be, except the master and mistress on both sides consulted.

7461. LOUIE R. CHURCHILL.—Is there any reason whatever why the children should be examined together?—It is quite possible they might not, but I cannot answer for the Board.

7462. You award the fees separately?—Quite so.

7463. Is it not perfectly impossible for the pupils of one school, no matter how well they answer, to get the fees intended for the pupils of the other school?—Under the present system, it is quite impossible.

7464. Dr. HAMILTON.—Is there not competition, between the National school and the Borough school, with regard to the money prizes at the open examinations?—Certainly there is.

7465. And in a class of eight or ten, all the prizes would be given to children from the National school, if they were the best answers?—Most emphatically.

7466. Can you give any explanation, with reference to the evidence of Mr. MURKIN, that only two fees were given last year to boys from his school?—The third boy did not answer at all satisfactorily, and, according to the opinion of the examiner, he did not deserve a fee: when he was not recommended by the examiner the Board would not give him the fee.

7467. The examiner did not consider the boy sufficiently educated?—Certainly. The examiner said he was not entitled to a fee.

7468. Dr. CORME.—In the open examinations, for the money prizes, are the candidates arranged in the order of merit, irrespective of the school they come from?—Most impartially.

7469. LEON R. CHURCHMAN.—Having regard to the opinions of the master and mistress of the National schools, do you think it would be better to have the examinations conducted by an Inspector of the National Board?—I would not say it would be better, but I would not object in the slightest degree. I do not care who examines.

7470. Would not you think, that an Inspector of the National Board would be better qualified to examine children than gentlemen from Trinity College, who cannot have as much experience?—I would not say that an Inspector would be better qualified, but he would certainly be more in that groove.

7471. Would he not be more likely to drink the merit of the children?—I think he might.

7472. Mr. WILSON.—How did it happen that the blacksmith got a higher fee than the grocer?—There were first and second prizes, and one boy won an £18 fee and the other only £15.

[Mr. Boyce subsequently addressed to the Commissioners an explanatory letter, which will be found Appendix No 13.]

Rev. William
G. Boyce, &c.

MR. JAMES WILSON, examined.

Mr. J. Wilson

7473. Mr. O'SHEAGHER.—You have lived in Swords for a good many years?—Yes, my whole lifetime.

7474. You know the Borough schools?—Yes, as long as I am able to remember anything.

7475. Did you attend the school yourself?—I did. I commenced in October, 1836, and I left in May, 1841.

7476. You are a Roman Catholic?—Yes.

7477. During the time you attended at the Borough schools, were the Scriptures regularly read there?—Yes.

7478. Were there many Roman Catholics there with you?—The majority were Roman Catholics.

7479. Did they all take part in the reading of the Scriptures?—They did.

7480. Was any complaint, on that subject, made at that time?—They seemed dissatisfied, and I myself was one of the most dissatisfied.

7481. Do you know the extent of the parish of Swords?—Yes, I can make a very fair guess at it.

7482. Have you any idea of the extent of the borough of Swords?—The greater portion of it.

7483. Do you know it of the same extent as the parish?—Not at all, it is quite different.

7484. Is it smaller or greater?—Smaller. The furthest point of it is only about one mile.

7486. From that knowledge, derived from an election which took place in the days of the old Irish Parliament, you can point out the boundaries of the borough?—Yes.

7487. There are at present about sixty-three children attending the Borough school?—I am fully aware of that.

7488. Do you know the parents and relatives of most of these children?—I know everyone in the neighbourhood.

7489. How many of these children come from what you know to be the old borough, and how many from outside the old borough?—I would say that the number from inside the old borough is about twenty-one or twenty-two. I took the number myself accurately about two years ago, by direction of the late Father Kinsman.

7490. You made that inquiry with care and accuracy?—With as much accuracy as I was able. There are some persons living inside the borough—such as policemen, pensioners, and servants—whose children attend the school, but I do not consider they are authorized to attend at all.

7491. Do you include the children of the policemen, pensioners, and servants in the twenty-two?—Not at all, only those whose parents belong to the borough.

7492. Dr. HART.—How many are living outside the borough?—The majority live outside the borough, but I am not able to tell the exact number. I did not calculate the temporary residents at all.

7493. Mr. O'SHEAGHER.—Is your evidence that of the children who are not the offspring of temporary residents only twenty-two belonged to the borough?—That is all.

7494. Did you attend any of the vestry meetings mentioned by Mr. Cruise?—No, I was rather young at that time.

7495. May we take it that the objection to the reading of the Scriptures was not wholly an objection on the part of the clergy, but that the body of the Catholics objected to it too?—In my opinion they did. There was another matter I wanted to mention. Carpenter's Spelling Book was the one used in the school, and there were Catholic doctrines scratched out of it. The word "Purgatory" was scratched out.

7496. Who scratched out "Purgatory"?—The schoolmaster.

7497. LEON R. CHURCHMAN.—Was that when you attended the school?—Yes; and the word "Purgatory" occurred as a word of four syllables.

[Adjourned to Tuesday, July 8th.]

July 4, 1879.

TWENTIETH DAY—TUESDAY, JULY 8, 1879; 11 O'CLOCK, A.M.

At the Commissioners' Office, Four Courts, Dublin.

Present:—The EARL OF ROSSE, CHAIRMAN; and RICHARD O'SHAUGHNESSY, Esq., M.P.; with JAMES CREED MERCERTH, Esq., M.D., Secretary.

The Very Rev. H. H. DOCKHISON, D.D., Dean of the Chapel Royal, recalled.

The Very Rev.
H. H.
Dockison, D.D.

7498. CHAIRMAN.—What position do you hold with reference to the Ralph Macklin schools?—I do not hold any official position with respect to them; but they are now situated in St. Ann's parish, of which I am rector.

7499. You take an interest in the schools?—Yes; I know all the circumstances connected with their history, and I entertain them, as one of the clergyman of the parish.

7500. In fact you superintend the religious instruction, and also exercise a general supervision over the schools?—Yes.

7501. Who are the Governors of those schools?—Under Ralph Macklin's will they are, the Governors for the time being of the Magdalen Asylum, together with the curates of St. Ann's, St. Werburgh's, and St. Andrew's parishes.

7502. How often do they meet?—Once every month; but one at least of the clerical Governors visits the schools every day.

7504. How many constitute the quorum?—Three. At special meetings there have been, at times, eight Governors present.

7505. The endowment was returned by the Commissioners of 1837, as amounting to £150 3s 11d a year, arising from trust funds, and the value of site was stated to be £39; where was that site?—The school was at that time in Camden-street. It had been before that in Upper St. Stephen's-street, close to the corner of St. Peter's, but that site was required and taken by the Ordnance Department. The schools were originally in St. Andrew's parish. They were moved to William-street, which is also in St. Andrew's parish, and thence into St. Bridget's parish. They were then moved to a remote part of St. Peter's parish. They were obliged to move out of St. Stephen's, but they got fair value for the site from the Government.

7506. It appears that the trustees received £1,360 in the purchase of the school house in Camden-street. What became of that house?—It was sold for £500. Property in that neighbourhood had gone down in value, and the house was out of repair.

7507. What was done with the purchase money received?—It is invested in three per cents Government stock.

7508. What does the endowment now produce?—The interest comes to something about £210 a year.

7509. How are the present school premises held?—They are situated in this way. A few years ago it was suggested, I think by myself, that Ralph Macklin, having, by his will, placed the schools under the governance, ex-officio, of the clergymen of three parishes which he named, intended thereby to benefit the district comprised within those parishes, and that it was a disadvantage to have the schools so very far removed from the district; because, practically, that tended to remove them from the supervision of the clergymen who took most interest in them, as it was inconvenient for them to exercise such constant supervision as they desired. An opportunity of restoring the schools to the district for which I consider they were intended occurred thus; We had in St. Ann's parish very fine school premises, which we had built at a cost of between £3,000 and £3,500, and hearing that the Governors of the Ralph Macklin schools were anxious not to continue in Camden-street, a proposition was made to them, by the Rector of St. Ann's, to give the Governors of the Ralph Macklin schools a lease, at one shilling a year, of the school premises of St. Ann's parish, which are valued for £150 a year, thus saving them entirely from rent; and also to give them from St. Ann's parish £150 a year, in consideration of the free education of the children of our parish. That arrangement has been carried out. The Ralph Macklin schools bought with them their own endowment of about £210 a year, St. Ann's parish contributes £150 a year and a fine house, thereby more than doubling the resources of the school. We also allowed them to take the whole endowment of the school, and to put "Ralph Macklin School" upon the door. Of course this settlement is only a parochial arrangement. It was, however, entirely carried out with the knowledge and approval of the Board of Charitable Bequests. I have their letters approving of the whole arrangement.

7510. Where is the present school-house?—In Molesworth-street.

7511. When were the Ralph Macklin schools removed there?—In 1874.

7512. Was the locality of the school limited by Ralph Macklin's will, to any particular parish?—No. The will provides:—

"An institution to be formed, and denominated 'Ralph Macklin's Thersley and Sunday Poor School,' and to be under the guidance and direction of the benevolent Governors and Governors of the Magdalen Asylum, aided by the curates of St. Ann's, St. Andrew's, and Werburgh's churches."

7513. The presumption is that it was intended for those three parishes?—Yes, but it is not expressly limited to them. Only one-third of the children attending the school at present belonging to St. Ann's parish, which contributes more than one-half of the income, the rest of the children are from various other districts, some from St. Werburgh's, some from St. Andrew's, and some from greater distances. Children attend because the education given is rather better than that offered in most parochial schools—we have classes preparing for the Civil Service.

7514. Is it essential that the Church Catechism should be taught?—There is nothing about that in the will, but the schools always have been, and still are, conducted as Church schools. In fact the only limitation contained in putting the schools under the control of the Governors of the Magdalen Asylum, assisted by the curates of the three parishes named.

7515. What fees are paid by the children?—None by the poor children of any of the three parishes, but others pay something small, about 6s quarterly. If they join the French and Latin classes they come as paying pupils.

7516. Are there many taught French?—Yes; a good many learn French. We have examinations every year.

7517. What permits do the children usually follow in after life?—Most of the boys go to business, some of the girls become teachers, and others are apprenticed.

7518. I suppose you do not pay apprentice fees for them?—Not from the funds of the Ralph Macklin schools; Lovell's and Gaudin's charities, however, give small fees of £10 Irish, in certain instances, but not to the children from the Ralph Macklin schools as such.

7519. What salary has the master?—£150 a year, which is made up partly from rents &c.

7520. In 1857 the master got only £40 a year?—Yes, the salaries have been greatly increased since that time. The mistress now gets £75 a year, including rents &c., and last year the mistress of the infant school got £65, and the assistant master, £30.

7531. Where does the £150 a year, contributed by St. Ann's parish, come from?—It is made up chiefly from the voluntary subscriptions of the parishioners.

7532. St. Ann's parochial school was returned by the Commissioners in 1857 as having an endowment of £39 2s. 3d. a year, derived from trust funds, and £35 from land?—The £35 stated to be derived from land was the rent of an old school-house belonging to the parish, which now produces about £29 or £30, as part of it has been let. That money goes into what we call the assessment fund of the parish, and contributes to make up the £150. The proceeds of the Southwell bequest, about £1 a year, and the interest on the bequest of the Hon. Daines Agas, about £50 a year, also go towards making up the £150. The remainder, about £100 a year, furnished by voluntary contributions. Indeed, I may say, £120 is raised by voluntary contributions, for I think the interest on Miss Agas's bequest was left for the parish generally, and not for the schools alone.

7533. How many departments are there in the school at present?—There are three departments—for boys, girls, and infants.

7534. There is an annual examination held?—Yes; by an inspector who is paid a fee. His reports are usually very favourable.

7535. Who is the inspector?—The Rev. Hugh Hammond. His last report is—

"Arithmetic, very good, spelling, very good; English grammar, very good, English history, geography, and composition, about one-half, very good, writing, very good."

7536. What other outgoings are there, in addition to the salaries which you have mentioned?—The assistant mistress gets £12 a year; the assistant in the infants' school, £12; the drawing master, £5; and the four Catechist Government receive £30 amongst them. The margin, which comes to about £30 a year, is required for repairs, painting, &c.

7537. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—There is a great deal of private matter in the will of Ralph Mashlin, showing that he had a private grudge against some of his own family. By his will the Governors and Governesses of the Magdalen Asylum are joined with the owners of the three parishes as Governors of the schools to be founded. In what parish is the Magdalen Asylum situated?—In St. Peter's parish; but the Governors of that asylum are people residing in all parts of Dublin.

7539. Do they meet in the school-house from time to time?—Yes; but that is recognised only as a sort of secondary obligation.

7540. What the Ralph Mashlin schools gained by the change to Molesworth-street appears to have been a free house and the co-operation of the parochial endowments for the purposes of education?—Yes; I think it was a mutual gain. We found that the schools could scarcely be efficiently conducted on an income of £300 a year, but could be very well carried on with the present income, which is nearly double that.

7541. Where does St. Werburgh's parish lie to?—One part of it adjoins St. Andrew's. The three parishes are contiguous.

7542. Do you find that anything like a fair proportion of the poor children of St. Werburgh's parish attend the Ralph Mashlin schools?—There are not so many from St. Werburgh's now as there used to be; for this reason, that St. Werburgh's, St. Andrew's, and St. Michael's parishes have amalgamated their parochial schools, and improved them very much.

7543. Are the educational requirements of the Protestant children of St. Werburgh's parish pretty well provided for, in their own district?—Yes.

7544. Are there any Roman Catholic children attending the Ralph Mashlin schools?—Two, and thirteen dissenters.

7545. Are the Roman Catholic children obliged, by the rules of the school, to take part in the reading of the Scriptures?—Yes, they are. That is a sort of by-law of the government.

7546. Are they also obliged to learn the catechism with the other children?—Yes, they all learn the same.

7547. It appears from the report of the former Royal Commission, that the teaching of the Scriptures and Church catechism, in the three Mashlin schools, was confined to Church children. At that time there does not appear to have been a custom that any dissenting Roman Catholic children attending the school were compelled to learn the Church catechism?—I myself have been always in favour of the National Board principle; but, when I was a governor, I was in a minority upon that point. The school is conducted by Church people upon what they think to be right principles.

7548. Do you know whether the number of Roman Catholic children, attending the schools, ever exceeded two?—Yes, but I never knew it to be more than six. In our own parish school, St. Ann's, when I was first ordained, a good many years ago, we had a very large proportion of Roman Catholics, but they are more strictly looked after now, and are not allowed to come to our schools as they used to be. At that time there was no school in the parish except the parochial school.

7549. You will, therefore, admit that the establishment of by-laws, compelling them to read the Scriptures, and to learn the Church catechism with Protestants, was not calculated to encourage them to attend?—I do not doubt it.

7550. The Ralph Mashlin School was originally only a Sunday and Thursday school?—Yes; but I suppose the first governors found that an encouraging restriction, for they applied to the Court of Chancery, and obtained sanction to a scheme for the enlargement of the plan.

7551. St. Ann's parish receives a portion of the Southwell endowment. What is that?—A Mr. Southwell left a sum of money, the interest of which was to be received by the churchwardens of St. Werburgh's parish for the time being, and to be divided between that parish and a number of others which were specified, and of which St. Ann's was one. We have received rather more than £1 a year.

7552. CHAIRMAN.—Does the parochial school of St. Andrew's still exist as a separate institution?—Yes. We wanted them to join with ours, but they declined to do so, as far as contributing funds went; they do, however, join in contributing children.

7553. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—Have you, as regards St. Ann's parochial educational endowments, preserved the documents which show the sums we have referred to with their distinctive trusts?—Yes, I suppose so. They are a peculiar kind of trust. When we built the new school the old school-house was not required for its former purpose, but it remained our property, and what we receive for it we hand over to the parish fund. That can hardly be called a trust. The house was originally built by the subscriptions of the parishioners.

7554. Was it built as a school-house?—Yes.

7555. If built for educational purposes you would be obliged to apply the proceeds, so nearly as you could, to the original objects?—And so we do.

7556. In the Report of 1857 with reference to the St. Ann's Parochial schools the note, "Scriptures, and Church Catechism to Church children," appears. The rule then was the same in those schools as in the Ralph Mashlin schools?—Yes. I am individually opposed to anything like compulsion in such matters.

July 4, 1871.
The Very Rev.
H. H.
Dalmeida, &c.

July 4, 1875.

Mr. E. Baxter.

Mr. ROBERT SUTTON, examined.

7547. CHAIRMAN.—What parish do you represent?
—St. Ann's.

7548. You have heard the evidence of Dean Dickinson as to the Ralph Maskin schools?—Yes; Dean Dickinson has given so full and accurate an account of the whole transaction that I can only confirm what he has stated.

7549. The removal of the schools was the result of a mutual arrangement, and no objection was made to it?—A mutual arrangement was entered into. We summoned a special meeting of St. Ann's Vestry to take the matter into consideration. We also laid it before the Board of Charitable Bequests, and it was sanctioned by them. After that it was confirmed at a subsequent vestry meeting.

7550. You are the treasurer of St. Ann's parish?—Yes; each half-year I lodge in the Minister Bank, on behalf of St. Ann's Vestry, to the credit of the Ralph Maskin Trustees, an contribution under the agreement, namely, £75. I should add that St. Ann's Vestry further pays for the external painting, and repairs, of the school-house.

7551. Do you receive the amount of the Southwell Bequest?—Yes, £1 2s. 2d. is the amount which I have received annually for several years from the Churchwardens of St. Wulstburgh's.

7552. In 1837 St. Ann's schools had a sum of £1,563 12s. 10d. invested in Government Stock. What has become of that money?—I believe it was spent in the building of the new premises, together with upwards of £1,000 which was collected by Dean Dickinson for the purpose.

7553. What other sums do you receive in the nature of endowments?—The only other amount I receive is the interest on a bequest of the Hon. Diana Agre, which produces nearly £19 a year, but varies according to the deduction for income tax. Mr. La Touche generally obtains the money from the agents or solicitors in London, and he hands it over to me.

7554. Do you know anything about the capital sum which produces that income?—I do not.

The Very Rev.
H. H.
Dickinson, M.A.

The Very Rev. H. H. DICKINSON, D.D., Dean of the Chapel Royal, recalled.

7555. CHAIRMAN.—Do you know from what source the bequest of Miss Agre arises?—It is a charge on the estates left by Hon. Diana Agre, who died about sixty years ago. Properly speaking, it ought not to come into the school accounts, as it was left for the poor of the parish; it has, however, been always applied to the schools for the poor.

7556. How many children are there attending the Ralph Maskin schools at present?—145 is the fair average attendance, and of those only fifty-four are parishioners of St. Ann's.

7557. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—There appears to have been a good deal of feeling, in 1874, against the proposed change, judging from the public newspapers of that date?—Not on the part of any of the parishioners. As far as we knew the only two gentlemen who came forward were Captain Dyer and Mr. Alexander.

7558. When the Commissioners of Charitable Donations and Bequests were applied to for their sanction to the transfer of the school, did they in the first instance approve of the scheme or reject it?—They made some slight modification in it.

7559. Did they substantially approve of the scheme?—They did. I think the only alteration they made was with regard to the Select Vestry maintaining the right to hold certain meetings in the school-room, and I believe they stipulated that "Ralph Maskin School" must be put on the dole-plate.

7560. Did they leave to the Select Vestry the right to hold any meetings in the school?—They did, and we have a resolution passed by the Ralph Maskin Governors in accordance with that.

7561. Were the opponents of the proposed transfer afforded an opportunity of making their case before the Commissioners of Charitable Donations and Bequests?—I suppose so. I find that we wrote to the Select Vestry of St. Andrew's parish on the subject, and we had a reply from them declining to have any thing to do with it. Beyond that we heard of no opposition at all.

7562. Have you ever heard of any legal proceedings having been taken to reverse the decision of the Commissioners?—I never heard of any opposition, except what I saw in the public newspapers, on the part of Captain Dyer and the former schoolmaster.

7563. The change was effected formally, and with the regular legal permission of the constituted authority?—No doubt of that.

Mr. John
Alexander.

Mr. JOHN ALEXANDER, examined.

7564. CHAIRMAN.—Where do you reside?—At present at No. 2, Belmont-terrace, Tiverton.

7565. What connection have you with the Ralph Maskin school?—When the school was in Ouden street, I resided close to it, and took a deep interest in it; and I was strongly opposed to the moving of the school.

7566. Had you any official connexion with the school?—None; but I had visited the school repeatedly, and found that the teacher did his duty faithfully, and that the school was very prosperous, and in a locality in which it was calculated to do good, and was much wanted. I felt that instead of concentrating and bringing those schools together, they should be more scattered, and that the Ralph Maskin school should have been left where it was. If I had lived at the other side of the city, I would still have made the same objection. I take a wide view of the question.

7567. Did you make any objection at the time?—I did. We held meetings, and made remonstrances.

7568. Did you, before the Commissioners of Charitable Bequests, oppose the removal?—Captain Dyer came forward and made all the observations and remonstrances he could; but the clergy rode rough shod over us, and concentrated that school into the rich parish of St. Ann, where they should have established a parish school. One of the objections made was, that it was inconvenient to the clergyman to visit the school where it was; but Ouden-street is quite convenient to the Magdalen Asylum, where the Governors meet.

7569. State exactly what your objections were to the removal of the school?—St. Ann's parish is more convenient from the locality, but my principal reason for wishing the school to be left where it was before was founded on this large idea, that, instead of concentrating schools together, the clergymen of the Church of Ireland should rather extend them. I have always been anxious that schools, such as that we should be scattered everywhere through the country.

7570. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—Apart from the convenience of the locality, and the general desirability of extending schools, have you any other reason for objecting to the removal in question?—Yes; the funds of the Ralph Maskin school ought to be appropriated specially is a school to be called "The Ralph Macklin School," and ought not to be joined to any parish school.

7571. CHAIRMAN.—Is not the school now called the Ralph Macklin School?—There ought to be the Ralph Macklin school and the St. Ann's school quite distinct, and the Ralph Macklin school ought to be placed in a locality where it would be convenient.

7572. Did many other people in that locality also object to the removal of the school?—There were a great many. Some meetings were held on the subject, which were very well attended.

7573. Did half of the parishioners attend those meetings, and object to the removal?—I could not say that. The clergymen who were the trustees took the whole thing into their own hands, and they paid no deference whatever to the feelings of those who put themselves forward in an earnest and proper Christian spirit to oppose the removal.

July 5, 1892.
Mr. John
Alcock.

The Very Rev. H. H. DOUGLASS, D.D., Dean of the Chapel Royal, recalled.

The Very Rev.
H. H.
Douglass, D.D.

7574. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—You mentioned that £30 a year was given to the clerical governors of the Ralph Macklin school. From what source does that money come?—From the general funds of the clergy. I am not answerable, however, for that, I am merely stating the fact. When the school was moved to Queen-street the governors found it necessary to leave the constant attendance of a watchman, and they paid a clergyman, not connected with any of the three parishes, £30 a year to discharge that duty. They afterwards found that they had not the means to continue doing so, because of the limited income of the clergy; but when the funds improved they paid the £30 in equal shares among the four clergymen. The object of us doing was, I suppose, to meet the expense of our line for those coming from a distance, and to ensure regularity of attendance.

7575. What four clergymen receive that payment?—The two curates of St. Ann's, the curate of St. Andrew's, and the curate of St. Werburgh's.

7576. Do they discharge any educational duty in return for that payment?—They catechise in the school every day. Each clergyman also visits the school four or five times in the week. I need hardly say that I do not receive any payment for catechising or visiting the school.

Mr. WILLIAM DOUGLAS LA TOWER, B.L., recalled.

La Tower, B.L.

7577. CHAIRMAN.—You are one of the governors of the Ralph Macklin schools?—I am one of the governors of the Magdalen Asylum, and therefore a governor of the Ralph Macklin schools. The curates, in reference to whom Dean Dolben has been speaking, are not, properly speaking, governors of the school at all. The only governors named as the will are the Curators of the Magdalen Asylum, and they are to be assisted by the curates of St. Ann's, St. Werburgh's, and St. Andrew's.

7578. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—Do they not assist in the government of the school?—We allow them to do so.

7579. CHAIRMAN.—Did you consider the removal of the school to have been beneficial?—Certainly. St. Ann's Select Vestry were not able to support their own schools, and as we considered that the Ralph Macklin school was intended for the benefit of the three parishes named in the will, we thought it would be a very useful move to bring down the school, and locate it in one of those parishes. The move of the Ralph Macklin school being about £300 a year, and the parish of St. Ann's being willing to subscribe £100 a year, in addition to giving a free schoolhouse, we thought we would be able to establish a very efficient school, which we have done. It is called "The Ralph Macklin School," and that name is on a brass plate on the door. The school is entirely under our charge. We manage the whole school ourselves, assisted, as the will directs, by the curates of St. Ann's, St. Werburgh's, and St. Andrew's, and we pay those curates a small stipend for the educational advantage afforded by their teaching the children in school.

7580. Did you regard the removal of the school as a natural advantage, and as a step objected to by only a few persons?—I did; and I really think that the two or three who objected did not understand the advantage that was gained in having a larger endowment and a more efficient school.

7581. What was done with the money realized by sale of the house in Camden-street?—It was handed over to the Commissioners of Charitable Donations and Bequests, they invested it, and now pay us the interest thereof, as part of our revenue.

7582. Is there practically as large an attendance from the other parishes now as there was before the removal?—Yes. We brought the mistress, Miss Redfords, from the former school, and almost all her scholars followed her down to St. Ann's. We changed the master; but a good number of the boys also came to the present school. Since the removal the attendance at the school has been very largely increased.

7583. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—Were all the guardians of the Magdalen Asylum consenting parties to the removal of the Ralph Macklin schools?—I brought the matter before them, and a majority of them attended and gave their hearty assent to the step.

7584. Then it is incorrect to say that this was a mere move of the clergy of St. Ann's parish?—They had nothing to say to it further than that the Dean of the Chapel Royal was Chairman of the Select Vestry of St. Ann's parish, which gave us £100 a year and a free house. The clergy were assenters in the matter to that extent, but they have nothing to say to the management of the school or its funds.

7585. It appears that a few Roman Catholic children attend the Ralph Macklin schools, and seeing that there is nothing in the will which compels the teaching of the Scriptures or the Church Catechism to every child who attends the school, do you not think that the intentions of Ralph Macklin, and also the objects of religious instruction, would be perfectly carried out, by exempting Roman Catholic children from the absolute necessity of receiving such Protestant instruction?—We always considered Ralph Macklin's school as exclusively a Church of Ireland school.

7586. Having regard to the constitution of the trustees it is very likely practically to remain so, but do you not think that that is the very reason why you may, with greater safety to the Church of Ireland, afford this little exemption to children of another denomination attending the school?—For myself I prefer that it should be really a denominational school. Of course we are very glad if Roman Catholics and Dissenters will come and receive the benefits of such good teaching as is given there; but, at the same time, we are not inclined to deprive our own Church children of the real advantages of a Church education on that account.

7587. Do you consider that it would deprive the Church children of the advantages of a thoroughly Church education if the Roman Catholics were allowed to leave during the imparting of religious instruction?—That is the principle of the National Board. I do not think it has acted very well with them, and I think it would not do well with us.

7588. You desire to maintain this as a purely denominational school?—Yes, as a purely denominational school, but with its doors open to everybody.

July 3, 1875.

Mr. William D.
La Touche, D.D.

7588. That is hardly consistent with the endowment of the will?—You must read the will remembering the time at which it was made. Those squabbles about education did not exist when Ralph Macklin made his will.

7589. CHAIRMAN.—What is the term of your lease of the present school-house?—It is for twenty-one years, however, I do not suppose St. Ann's Vestry will hold as to that; but that, as we have proved ourselves useful in the parish, they will let us go on. I am a member of the Select Vestry myself, and I know their views on the point pretty well.

Miss Susan McGuire.

7591. CHAIRMAN.—What position do you hold in the Bertram Female Orphanage, Dublin?—I am the Matron and schoolmistress.

7592. How long has the school been in operation?—Six years, beginning in 1873.

7593. The object of the endowment was stated to be—

“For the establishment of a charity school for the religious, moral, and literary education of fifteen orphan girls; and for supporting them in Protestant families, under the direction of the residents of Mary’s-abbey Mount House, and the incumbent of St. Werburgh’s, St. Peter’s, and of parish in which school shall be established.”

Is that the nature of the charity now?—Yes, but we have twenty orphan girls.

7594. At what age are they admitted?—Between eight and twelve.

7595. How long do they remain in the institution?—We cannot keep them after they attain seventeen; but the Governors, if they think fit, can remove them before they reach that age.

7596. Have you already apprenticed any girls out of the school?—One girl has been apprenticed.

7597. What becomes of the girls who are not apprenticed?—The surviving parent takes them away.

7598. What are the qualifications for admission?—They must be children of Protestant parents, and in distressed circumstances.

7599. Not necessarily belonging to the Church of Ireland?—I think not.

7600. Who are the Governors of the institution?—The Venérable Mr. Archbishop of Dublin, Dr. Lee, as Rector of St. Peter’s; and the Rev. William O’Grady, as Rector of St. Werburgh’s; the Rev. Dr. Kirkpatrick and the Rev. Mr. McKee, as the Presbyterian Governors, and Mr. Edward Pennefather, q.c., Mr. George Woods Mansell, and Mr. Henderson, q.c.

7601. By whom are the children elected?—The Governors nominate in turn as vacancies occur.

7602. Where is the school situated?—11, Keble street, Dublin.

7603. What is the teaching staff?—I am the sole teacher, except that Mrs. Gask gives lessons in music. He is also the secretary to the institution.

7604. Are the children taught any extra subjects except music?—Nothing; they only get a plain English education.

7605. Does any clergyman attend to give religious instruction?—Yes, the clergyman of St. George’s parish, in which the school is situated, visits once a week.

7606. Do you give religious instruction yourself every day?—Yes, there is a lesson for Scripture reading daily.

7607. There are no Roman Catholics admitted?—No, the pupils must all be Protestants.

7608. What is your salary as matron?—£70 a year.

7609. Have you to board yourself?—Yes.

7610. How is the boarding of the children managed?—I get the things in, as they are required, and the Governors pay the accounts once a month.

7611. Do they exercise a general supervision over the expenditure?—They do.

Mr. T. Gask.

Mr. THOMAS GASK, continued.

7612. CHAIRMAN.—You are the Secretary to the Bertram Orphanage?—I am.

7613. You also give the pupils instruction in music?—Yes, but merely in vocal, not in instrumental, music. According to the scheme, settled for this charity by the Court of Chancery, the children must be taught singing by note.

7614. How are the Governors elected?—Under the scheme the Archbishop of Dublin, as Rector of the parish of St. Peter, and the Rev. C. F. McCarthy, as Rector of St. Werburgh’s, were appointed co-official Governors, and five others were named, viz.—Rev. W. B. Kirkpatrick, Rev. D. McKee, Edward Pennefather, Esq., q.c., George W. Mansell, Esq., and William Gibson, Esq.

7615. How are vacancies amongst the Governors filled up?—According to the scheme of the Court of Chancery, which provides for the co-option of new members. Mr. Ashton Henderson, q.c., is now one of the Governors, having been co-opted in the room of Mr. Elrington, q.c. (retired), who had succeeded on the death of Mr. Gibson.

7616. The report of the Commissioners of 1857 stated, that the endowment then amounted to £680 14s. 7d., per annum, derived from landed property. Is there any other endowment?—There has not been any further endowment, but the income is much larger now, as the school was only established in 1873.

7617. What is the present income?—The gross rental of the property is £1,034 per annum, but after certain deductions for head-rent, taxes, agent’s fees, &c., and the payment of the rent of the school-house, the amount available for the purposes of the charity is about £524 a year.

7618. What is the tenure of the house in which the school is carried on?—I think there is a lease of it for seventy years, but it is subject to a rent of £70 a year.

7619. What is the present number of pupils in the institution?—Twenty.

7620. How are the accounts audited?—They are audited by the accountants to the Commissioners of Charitable Bequests.

7621. What was the expenditure on the school last year?—Food cost £212 17s., clothing, £86 15s. 16d., the salaries to officers and servants came to £128 11s. 8d., house repairs, £22 16s. 11d.; repairs, £24 14s. 4d.; servants’ board, £29 15s.; coals, gas, &c., £24 17s. 8d.; stationery, &c., £3 14s. 5d.; medical expenses, £1 0s. 4d.; postage, 10s. 4d., and conveyance and excursion, 17s. 4d., making a total of £559 11s. 10d.

7622. There is also an item in your account-book, “investment to credit of apprentices’ fund.” What does that mean?—That is according to the scheme, by which we are bound to put by £50 each year to form an apprentices’ fund, by means of which the pupils are to be apprenticed.

7623. It appears that you have apprenticed only one pupil as yet?—Yes, on account of the pupils being admitted young, few have yet come to a fit age to be apprenticed, but the number will be increasing now.

7624. Have many pupils left the institution besides the one who has been apprenticed?—Yes, several have left—some have been removed on account of ill health.

7625. What vacations are allowed?—One month in summer, and a few days at Christmas. If the ex-living parent, or the guardian, wishes to receive a girl, she is permitted to go home for the vacation.

7426. Must all the girls be orphans?—They must have lost one of their parents.

7427. May that be either father or mother?—It may.

7428. Is there any periodical examination of the girls?—Yes, an examination is held half-yearly.

7429. By whom is that examination conducted?—By Mr. Madkin, one of the inspectors under the Education Board.

7430. Are there any prizes awarded at those examinations?—Prizes are given yearly.

7431. Where is the property of the charity situated? It is chiefly in Chancery-street, and that neighbourhood.

7432. What became of the income during the time that the property was in Chancery?—I believe it was accumulating, but I cannot give any reliable information about the property, because that is managed by the Commissioners of Charitable Bequests, who appoint their own agent, and he lodges the money received thereout to their credit, and they then transfer the amount to the credit of the Governors.

7433. What sum was lodged to the credit of the Governors last year?—£763 6s. 3d., but in 1877 it was only £503 11s. 11d.

7434. Do the Commissioners pay the rent of the school-house?—Yes, by their agent, that money does not pass through the hands of the Governors at all.

7435. It appears that the Governors received, from the Commissioners, in the year 1875, £267 5s. 1—Yes; and in the first year the school was started you will find that they received considerably more than that, because, prior to the opening of the school, the rents were allowed to accumulate, and were invested in stock, some of which was sold out when the Governors required the money, at the time they were establishing the school, for furnishing and putting the house in repair and paying the fines.

7436. Is it the intention of the Government to continue electing as many pupils as twenty, being only required under the will to elect fifteen?—Yes, and, if the funds will admit, they will increase the number still further.

7437. Is any of the property held under leases which have fallen in?—Yes, I think the greater part of it is held under leases, but that is entirely under the control of the Commissioners of Bequests.

7438. Mr. O'SHAGHERNESS.—Your volume book contains constant reference to the attendance of lady visitors. Who appoints them?—The Governors.

7439. Are they known to be ladies who take an interest in the establishment?—I believe they are ladies who express an objection to accepting that position.

7440. Do they report regularly to the Governors?—Whenever they have occasion to do so.

7441. Do the Governors find that plan a very useful one, for arriving at a knowledge of the wants of the establishment?—I think in some respects they do.

7442. You mention in your name, what remuneration do you receive for so doing?—£18 a year.

7443. What time is devoted to that study, each week?—At present two hours a week.

7444. Do the girls practice, in your absence, what you have taught them, or is the education in music merely confined to your instruction?—It is entirely confined, so far as the theoretical and practical part goes, to my instruction, but of course in my absence the girls practice what they have already learned.

7445. Would you say that the education given in the school is of a primary character?—I should think it would go beyond that, as far as music is concerned.

7446. Without speaking of music, would the ordinary education be properly called primary?—I should think so.

7447. What are the ages of the girls in the institution?—The limits for admission are eight and twelve; no girl can be retained after she reaches seventeen.

7448. Do you find that, as a rule, the great body of these girls can acquire a reasonable scientific knowledge of reading, writing, or singing by rote?—The majority can, but of course there are some cases I have very little hope of.

Mr. JOHN ROBINSON, examined.

Mr. John Robinson.

7449. CHAIRMAN.—What position do you hold in connection with the Deaconess Institution?—I am one of the Governors, and also one of the Committee of Seven.

7450. How were the Governors first selected?—They were nominated by an order of the Court of Chancery, and are very nearly the same as the Governors of the Hibernian Military School.

7451. When was the charity established?—In 1803.

7452. Where does the name of the charity come from?—It was founded principally by means of a legacy left by the late Alderman Deaconess. The amount is nearly £22,000 stock, representing £30,000 in money. The dividends on that stock supply about one-half of the amount required for the support of the Institution, and the military and the public subscribe the remainder. The capital is invested in consols, and new three per cents. Sir Edward Brough is the treasurer, and draws the dividends. The same received last year as dividends were £117 10s. 2d., £206 11s. 3d., £116 10s. 3d., and £306 17s. 1d. The entire expenditure last year amounted to £1,490, or thereabouts.

7453. Mr. O'SHAGHERNESS.—Is the institution intended only for girls?—Yes; it is for the orphan daughters of soldiers.

7454. CHAIRMAN.—It appears to be a corresponding institution to the Hibernian Military School?—It may be convenient to mention that the Hibernian Military School was established for both boys and girls, by means of a grant from the Irish Parliament in the last century. About twenty years ago, however, things were not turning out satisfactorily, and it was thought necessary to remove the girls. After that, Mr. Alderman Deaconess, who was himself the son of a soldier, felt very much interested in the orphan daughters of soldiers, and, about the year 1802, he wrote a letter to the Daily Express offering to give £20,000, if the public would add £10,000 more.

7455. What was the date of his will?—I think in 1802. I may mention the money was left in trust to my brother, Mr. Sergeant Robinson, and myself. We thought the best plan was to nominate a friendly unit, and have the money paid into the Court of Chancery, and so to put it beyond the possibility, when we had passed away, of being misapplied. It is now in the Court of Chancery; and we have no power over it ourselves. A scheme was drawn up, and duly approved of, and under that scheme we have acted ever since.

7456. A large number of the governors are ex-officio?—Yes, the only difference between the constitution of our Board and of that of the Hibernian Military School is that we have the addition of a few ex-officio. The late Lord Chancellor Brough, the late Sir Thomas Larcon, then Under Secretary, Mr. Alexander Peckoe, Mr. Sergeant Robinson, and myself, were the civilians named, but two have passed away.

7457. How are the children elected?—They are elected by a Committee of Seven, which is a mixed committee, and of which the General Commanding the District is the chairman. General Glyn fills the position at present. There are, of course, many more applicants than we can provide for, and we select the most pressing cases.

7458. How is the Committee of Seven elected?—It is elected at the annual meeting of the Governors.

7459. Do the children pay anything?—Nothing.

July 5, 1875.
Mr. John
Robinson.

7460. What number of pupils are there in the Institution, at present?—Forty-nine. One died the other day.

7461. They are all boarders?—Yes.

7462. Must a child have lost her father before she can be elected?—The institution is for orphans who have lost both or either of their parents, but there is permission given to us, if there are no orphan candidates, to elect in deserving cases. We have never, however, been able to provide for the number of orphan applicants, but we have never yet refused a total orphan.

7463. The scheme contemplates a mixed institution?—Certainly.

7464. What are the proportions of the pupils, as regards their religious persuasions?—The Protestants are more numerous than the Roman Catholics. We have not had so many applications from Roman Catholics. At present there are thirty-six Protestants, and thirteen Roman Catholics.

7465. Do you include the Presbyterians in the thirty-six?—I do not think we have more than one Presbyterian; but we never exclude in those matters. We have a Roman Catholic mistress who looks after the Roman Catholics, and a Protestant mistress who looks after the Protestants. The Protestant and Catholic clergymen of the district also attend at the institution.

7466. Are the children educated very much in accordance with the National Board system?—We are anxious about the secular education, but we do not meddle with religious matters. In that way we adhere to the original scheme, which my brother and myself modelled very much upon the Hibernian School scheme.

7467. Why have you not so many applications from Roman Catholics as from Protestants?—I am not able to account for that at all.

7468. In the army there are, I suppose, a greater number of Roman Catholics than of Protestants?—Enlisted in this country, I would say so.

7469. Is there a chaplain to the Institution?—None. We have power to appoint, but we have never availed ourselves of it.

7470. What is the staff of the Institution?—The mistress, who is also the chief schoolmistress; a Protestant assistant mistress, and a Roman Catholic schoolmistress. There are also two female servants.

7471. Where is the school-house situated?—In Chapelised, beyond the Phoenix Park.

7472. Is it a leasehold?—The public were good enough to give us the funds to purchase the house in fee. Her Majesty the Queen was a subscriber of £250; the Prince of Wales was also a subscriber.

7473. Was the purchase-money entirely made up by subscriptions, so as not to touch upon your endowment at all?—Yes.

7474. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—What provision exists for filling up the civilian government?—I do not think there is any provision in our scheme, and that is a matter which we must, very soon, bring before the Lord Chancellor. I do not think it would answer that the institution should be left without civilian governors, because in point of fact the real business is done by the civilians. Mr. Parker and myself attend constantly; but the military men are birds of passage, and just when they begin to take an interest in the institution, as several of them, I am happy to say, have done, they are swept off to another station.

7475. Are you, under the terms of the will and of the scheme, empowered to admit the orphan children of English as well as of Irish soldiers?—We never require the nationalities.

7476. I suppose, as a matter of fact, there are a considerable number of children of English soldiers in the institution?—I should say certainly.

7477. Was it clearly the intention of the will not to confine the benefit to children of Irish soldiers?—Certainly.

7478. That to some extent accounts for the difference in numbers between Protestant and Catholic children?—I do not think we have had the large number of applications from Roman Catholics.

7479. But, inasmuch as the institution is open to the entire army, which is largely Protestant, the disproportion is not so astonishing as it would seem at first sight?—That may be; but you must bear in mind there is a similar institution in England.

7480. Do you give any preference to the children of Irish soldiers?—We do not; we look merely for the most promising cases.

7481. CHAIRMAN.—Do you regard merely the poverty of the applicant?—If a poor woman is left in great poverty, with a number of children who are very young, we consider that a most pressing case.

7482. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—The applicants come to you chiefly from the widows of soldiers who have died in Ireland?—I think so. If an Englishman dies here leaving a widow and family, of course they apply just the same as the family of an Irishman.

7483. You have a committee of ladies, who appoint them?—They are appointed at the annual meeting of the Governors.

7484. Are there any Roman Catholics among them?—There is one.

7485. How many ladies are on the committee?—Four or five, but never more than two or three attend.

7486. Has there always been one Roman Catholic lady on that committee?—I fear not. There are not many Roman Catholics amongst the wives of officers in high position. General Harbert, however, who was our chairman for a long time, was a Roman Catholic, and took a great interest in the institution.

7487. Do you as a rule form your ladies' committee from amongst the wives and relations of officers?—Yes.

7488. Although you have no regular officer called a chaplain, you have the services of the Protestant and Catholic clergymen?—Yes.

7489. Are they paid or unpaid?—A small sum of £10 is voted annually to Canon MacDonogh, the Protestant chaplain, to meet his expenses for his-hat, as he does not live in the village, but we do not pay any thing beyond that.

7490. What Roman Catholic clergyman attends the school?—The Rev. Mr. Curran, the priest of the parish of Chapelised.

7491. Does he live near the school?—He does, quite close.

7492. Has any application for payment been made by him?—Oh, no, we should not listen to it. Our great object has been to keep clear of any question of the kind.

7493. Is there any connexion between this school and the Royal Hibernian Military School?—None in the world. The medical officer of the Hibernian Military School is good enough to give us his services gratuitously.

7494. Does the Royal Hibernian Military School take any benefit under the will of Alderman Drummond?—No, nothing.

Mr. John D.
Ellis.

Mr. JOHN D. ELLIS, examined.

7495. CHAIRMAN.—You are the secretary to the Drummond Institution?—I am.

7496. How long have you held that post?—Since February, 1867.

7497. Are your duties principally those of an accountant?—I transact the secretary's business, and I also collect subscriptions for the Institution.

7498. What do they amount to?—At my appointment the subscriptions were only about £100 a year; but our last list of annual subscriptions amounted to £238 10s. 3d., and in the same year we received as donations, £235 17s. 4d. We have also from time to time received sums of money by means of theatrical performances, assaults at arms, and concerts.

given in the Exhibition Palace, which were very largely patronised by the Lord Lieutenants for the time being. When H. H. H. The Duke of Connaught was here he took a very great interest in and patronised a concert which was held.

7705. Were those military concerts 1—Yes, military promotions, we had last year a theatrical performance which realised £149 8s 10d. On one very fortunate occasion, the return of Sir Garnet Wolseley to this country from Ashantee, he was present at an assault at arms, on a bank holiday, and on that occasion we realised £400.

7706. Is the management of the Institution chiefly in the hands of the Committee of Seven?—Entirely they are the working committee.

7707. How often do the Governors meet?—Once a year to receive the report and statement of accounts.

7709. You receive a good many subscriptions from people residing in Dublin?—Yes, and I believe we would have a larger subscription list, but when I solicit subscriptions I am generally met with the observation that we have a large endowment, and that it is a military institution.

7710. I see the Lord Lieutenant sends the list with £10, General Sir John Michel, £5, John Robinson, esq., £3; Lieutenant-General Smythe, £5. Are those donations for special purposes?—No, I should like to mention that we receive and from regiments all over the globe. I send out reports to every regiment in the service. Some few years ago, I think in 1874, we were enabled, by an order as to the disposition of the endowment, to suggest to the regiments that they might subscribe from the endowment fund towards the Drummond Institution. I think the wording of the order was "any institution intended for the benefit of the troops or their families." That has been a very fruitful source of income.

7711. Does a subscription convey any privilege?—It does not, because the scheme under which the Institution is managed forbids it. There is a similar Institution in Hampstead, the Soldiers' Orphan's Home, and those votes are allowed in proportion to the subscriptions, which is a very fruitful source of income, as it gives some tangible advantage for the money.

7712. Are children elected to the Drummond Institution at the annual meeting of the Governors, or by the Committee of Seven?—By the Committee of Seven, according to vacancies occur.

7713. What steps are taken to fill up vacancies?—The applications are entered on the candidates' list as they are received, and when a vacancy occurs the Committee takes the matter into consideration, and having regard to the distinguished services of a man, the number of years he has been in the army, and the size of his family, they select a pupil. They have never refused a total orphan.

7714. There is no difference made between an application from England and one from Ireland?—Not the least. We have had several children from England, who availed themselves of the benefit of the Institution.

7715. Are the masters, however, generally the children of soldiers quartered in Ireland?—Certainly.

7716. Does the Roman Catholic clergyman attend at the Institution, to give religious instruction?—The Roman Catholic children go to him.

7717. How often do they go?—I think a couple of times a week. They go, in charge of the Roman Catholic mistress, as often as the chaplain requires them, and they also attend the religious services in the chapel.

7718. The pupils are all educated together, except for religious instruction?—Certainly, and, while the Protestant children are receiving religious instruction in one room, the Roman Catholic children are being instructed in another room.

7719. There is a particular hour set apart for religious instruction, as in the National schools?—Yes.

7720. Is there an annual examination or inspection, to test the proficiency of the pupils?—Not as to secular knowledge. The Protestant children have been very successful at the catechetical examinations, held at Whitehall by the Society for promoting Christian Knowledge, and for the last eleven years they have always received a large proportion of the prizes then offered for competition. I may add that the master has been awarded, for the eleventh time, a prize.

7721. There is no examination held to test the proficiency of the children in secular knowledge?—There is not. The Governors think that when they visit the school from time to time.

7722. Mr. O'SHEAHOUSEY.—Do not the committee of ladies also look after that matter?—Yes, just the same as the Governors. The masters record the marks the children get during the year, and at Christmas certain prizes are awarded upon the basis of those marks, and the ladies and the Committee supplement those prizes out of their own pockets.

7723. CHAIRMAN.—The total salaries are put down as £157, how much does the mistress receive?—She has £34 a year.

7724. Does she board with the pupils?—Yes; all the teachers are boarded in the Institution.

7725. The Roman Catholic mistress is next in order. What is her salary?—She has £30 a year.

7726. What is the assistant mistress paid?—£12 a year.

7727. The next on your list is the gardener?—He gets 18s a week, which comes to £19 a year.

7728. Mr. O'SHEAHOUSEY.—He is paid more than the mistress?—He does not get his board, he is however allowed some vegetables.

7729. What is your own salary as secretary?—£50 a year, and five per cent. on the subscriptions collected.

7730. The entire amount of salaries is put down at £157 in one year's account, but in another year they amount to £334. How did that arise?—That was caused by the payment of arrears of postage, which I had not charged.

7731. Are the salaries of the mistress and teachers permanent, or are they raised according to their length of service?—They are raised according to the length of service.

7732. Is the rate of increase fixed, or is it at the discretion of the Board?—It is altogether at the discretion of the Committee of Seven.

7733. What is the entire income of the Institution?—On the average about £1,300 a year. We receive about £550 as dividends on the money invested, and the remainder is made up by subscriptions, donations, and usually an annual entertainment of some sort.

7734. CHAIRMAN.—How do you register the children of mixed marriages? I see you ask the religion of the father and of the mother?—The surviving parent states the religion in which the child is to be brought up, and I consider it my duty to see that that is the same religion in which the child had been baptised.

7735. Mr. O'SHEAHOUSEY.—The scheme for the management of the Institution contains this provision, "All girls are to be brought up in the religion they profess when they enter, until they leave the Institution." That is, there is to be no change in religion while the girl is in the Institution, either procured by tampering, or by spontaneous conviction?—Certainly not.

7736. CHAIRMAN.—Suppose the father of a child had been himself, and had had his child baptised, a Protestant, and the surviving parent was a Roman Catholic, and had brought up the child as a Roman Catholic, until she went to the Institution, how would the religion of that child be entered?—I never know of an instance in which either the father or mother suggested that a child should be brought up in a religion different from that in which it had been baptised. In very many cases we have to fall back on the baptismal records, which of course are a true record of the religion in which the child was baptised.

Mr. John D.

Miss Caroline

Mrs CHAIRMAN BOWELL examined.

1731. CHAIRMAN.—You are the mistress of the Drarnmond Institution?—I am.

1732. There is no official examination, or inspection, of the school held?—No, but at Christmas we have a general examination, which I hold myself. The governors get some ten or twelve prices, and the ladies' committee have kindly, each year, given other prizes, which are chiefly awarded for domestic work. An account is kept each day of each girl's work, and a certain number of prices are awarded, and whoever has the highest total at the end of the year will get the highest prize for domestic work and needlework.

1733. No stranger takes any part in that examination?—No.

1734. Do the other mistresses assist you to examine?—No, I do it entirely myself, but the others are present.

1735. Where did you receive your education and training as a teacher?—In Kildare-place.

1736. Have you held the office of schoolmistress since the opening of this Institution?—No, I have been there fourteen years, but I went first as assistant teacher.

1737. Did you go there straight from Kildare-place?—Yes.

1738. The religious instruction of the Protestant children is conducted by you?—Yes, from 9 to 9.30 in the morning; and, at the same time, the Roman Catholic children are in another room, with the Catholic mistress.

1739. Have you the superintendence of all the domestic arrangements of the Institution?—Yes, of everything.

1740. How is the ordering of the provisions managed?—I order everything that is required. The meat comes in twice a week. I send the bills to Mr. Elliott, who checks them and submits them to the governors.

1741. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—You teach the girls to discharge household duties?—Yes, the ordinary household duties, and they are also taught plain needlework, and to knit their own stockings.

1742. Are they taught cooking?—Yes; there are six girls told off each week to assist in the household work, and they are not required in the school-room during that week. Three are taken from amongst the older girls and three from the younger ones, so that all may have a chance of learning household duties, and, in addition to that, every girl has her own homework to do each morning—some upstairs, and others in several departments of the house. Each one is responsible for her own duty, and it is for this work that she gets the marks of which Mr. Elliott spoke.

1743. Does all the prize depend upon the due discharge of the domestic work?—Six of them are awarded for proficiency in the literary studies.

1744. How many for the homework?—That depends on the kindness of the ladies. Sometimes we have a great number, and at other times not so many. The object of the Institution is to train girls for domestic service.

1745. CHAIRMAN.—What land is attached to the Institution?— $\frac{1}{4}$ acre.

1746. Is there any laundry kept?—Yes, the girls use all taught washing.

1747. Is any washing done for persons outside the establishment?—No.

1748. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—To what extent does the girls' literary education go—are they taught anything beyond reading, writing, and arithmetic?—Nothing beyond plain English; but, if a girl shows decided talent, and her friends like to pay her expenses, she is prepared for the examination to enter the training-school in Kildare-place. Six of our former pupils have been trained there.

1749. Do you, as a rule, receive satisfactory accounts of the girls you have sent out as servants?—Yes, my from whom I have heard have been successful, but we have not sent out very many as servants, because there is a rule enabling the friends of a child to withdraw and provide for her, and they frequently avail themselves of it.

1750. Then only a small proportion have been sent out as servants?—That is so. When they are sent out as servants they are apprenticed to their several masters and mistresses for three years.

1751. Then your system is a combination of servant and apprentice. They do not receive payment for some time after they go out?—No, but they must be boarded and clothed as apprentices.

1752. While they continue as apprentices is there any step taken to see that the masters and mistresses treat them properly?—In every instance, so far, I have had constant communication with the girls.

1753. Is it your duty to have that communication?—I should say so, but there is no written rule as to the subject.

1754. Have you made any report of those communications to the Board?—Yes, in any instance in which it was necessary to do so.

1755. Have you received directions from the Board to communicate with the masters and mistresses of those servant apprentices?—No.

1756. There ought to be some provision made for looking after them when they are apprenticed. Is it from your own natural benevolence, or in accordance with the directions of the Board, that you have acted in that matter as you have done?—I have never got directions from the Board, but I should think they expect me to look after the girls.

1757. Did your predecessor, as head-mistress, adopt the same course of inquiry after them?—She could have had very little opportunity of doing so, as the school was furnished such a short time. I think the governors are as anxious that the girls should be kindly treated as any persons could be. In one instance a girl went to Blackrock, and as she was not kindly treated there, they removed her after she had been there only two or three days, and sent her to their own rule, that when a girl leaves the Institution she is not to return, they brought her back. I am certain that, if the governors found there was any necessity for it, there would be a written rule on the subject of looking after the apprentices.

1758. You have a rule that a girl who once leaves must not come back again, except under exceptional circumstances?—Yes.

1759. Is the case which you have mentioned the only one in which you have known a girl to come back?—I think so, as far as I can recollect.

1760. What is the name of the Roman Catholic teacher?—Miss Mary Kearney.

1761. Was she a National school teacher?—Yes, she was trained under the National Board.

1762. Did she teach under the National Board?—I am not quite sure about her antecedents.

1763. CHAIRMAN.—How are the apprentices first paid?—There is no fee paid, but the master or mistress enters into a contract to provide for, and to board, clothe, and take good care of the girl, and to teach her, as far as possible, in the household. The girls are sent out at a very early age.

1764. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—Do all your pupils go out, in the first instance, as apprentices?—Some are removed by their friends, and others trained as teachers.

1765. How long do those who go as apprentices usually remain in that position?—For three years.

1766. At what age are they sent as apprentices?—

July 5, 1879
Miss Corcoran
Witness.

Some go at 14. They are not allowed to remain in the Institution after they reach 17. In one case, however, a Russian Catholic girl, who has lost her arm, and is 18 years of age, is still in the Institution.

7747 The great body of the girls leave before seventeen?—Yes.

7748 Is the system of sending them out as apprentices a good plan, to enable them to become afterwards really valuable servants?—I think it is.

7749 Do you think that is a better plan than keeping them in school until they reach seventeen or eighteen?—That depends on the opportunity of placing them, and the number of girls we have in the house. If numbers of them are very young, we must keep some of the older girls to work in the Institution.

7750 Do you approve of keeping girls in the Institution until seventeen or eighteen, and then sending them out as servants?—I think it is not worst, if a suitable place offers for a girl, to keep her beyond fifteen.

7751 Do you consider that the training to be had in a well-managed household, as a domestic servant, is better for a girl of fifteen than the ordinary training which can be had in a school?—I do.

7752 CHAIRMAN.—Are they sufficiently educated at that age for that kind of life?—Yes, they can read and write fairly, and do arithmetic. They are sent out either as house and parlour maids, or as nursery-maids, and for those duties there is not very much high education required.

7753 What is the force of the agreement which the master or mistress enters into?—It is an ordinary girl's indenture, such as would be used in any commercial establishment, but the word "servant" is substituted for "trade."

7754 Do you supply the girls, when leaving, with an outfit?—Yes, a very good outfit.

7755 Once a girl gets her outfit, and leaves, she is no further exposed to the Institution?—No.

7756 Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—Do the girls make any complaints that when they are sent out as apprentices they are not under pay?—Some do, and in those cases the masters and mistresses have acted very wisely, and given them £5 or £6 a year, out of which any expenses they incurred were deducted, and the surplus put in a bank for them.

7757 What do you mean by expenses incurred?—The cost of their clothing. The first year they go out, they usually require very little, so that in those cases they had almost the entire of their money saved.

7758 Are you aware of any objection to the system of sending the girls out as apprentices?—I only know of one objection, and that is, that the masters and mistresses state they do not like to take a girl for three years, not knowing her; but in any instance that they have laid it they do not regret it.

7759 CHAIRMAN.—Once they have taken a girl, unless there are serious reasons, they cannot send her back?—No.

7760 Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—Have you ever had them sent back?—I had one girl some few weeks ago. The lady saw her some two or three weeks before that in the Institution, and was greatly pleased with her. The girl was sent before the papers were signed; but two or three days before she went she had a slight swelling in her glands, and the lady sent her back. She had had no experience of the girl, and in the letter she wrote she said she was very sorry she could not keep her, as there was a young lady staying with her who objected.

7761 Are the persons to whom you apprentice these girls professional people or shopkeepers?—They are always professional people, or persons of the higher class.

7762 Have you never apprenticed a girl for a shorter period than three years?—The girl I have just alluded to would have been apprenticed for two years, as under the rule that the friends may withdraw a girl, her brother had held out for a long time the hope that he would withdraw her; but while she was waiting her brother married, and then he said he could not take her. She was then a year older than usual, and for that reason an exception would have been made in her case. In all other instances we apprentice for three years.

7763 CHAIRMAN.—Does the mistress ever see the girl before the agreement is signed?—Certainly, I there are two families who have had three girls each, at different times, in their service.

7764 Is there any trial allowed?—The Governors object to allowing the girls to go on trial.

7765 As a rule, must the deed be signed before the girl leaves the Institution?—Yes.

7766 Is there any condition in those agreements that wages shall be allowed?—No, that is entirely optional with the mistress.

7767 You said there was no laundry work done, except that belonging to the Institution—is there any sewing taken in, or as all the work done, for the inmates?—It is all for the Institution, or the inmates; everything that the girls work they make themselves.

7768 Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—Are they taught to cut out, as well as to sew?—They are, as far as their own clothes go.

7769 CHAIRMAN.—They are not taught any ornamental work?—Anything we can teach them we do, but it must be out of school hours.

7770 Are there ever any girls sent out as apprentices to dressmakers?—We have not sent any out in that way as yet.

7771 Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—Are you thinking of doing so?—There is one girl who is about to get some money of her own, and I think she will be apprenticed to a milliner.

7772 CHAIRMAN.—Will she pay her own apprentice fee?—Yes.

7773 Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—And not the little children in your school made, from the very beginning, to discharge some household duties?—Yes, every one of them. Even a little girl of eight years of age will have the charge of a flight of stone steps for a week or two. Each week the stairs are made up, and girls that had a certain duty for one week get a fresh duty for the next week.

7774 How is the garden managed?—There is a gardener employed, and for some months in the year he is followed by a helper.

7775 Do the girls take any part in the garden work?—They sometimes work, for half an hour or three-quarters, during their play time.

7776 They are not regularly taught anything connected with the garden?—No. They have some little gardens of their own, to which they attend themselves.

7777 Is vocal music taught in the school?—Yes, the Sol Fa Tonic System, on Cowley's plan.

7778 Do you teach that?—The second assistant, the mistress, teaches it.

7779 There is no extra teacher employed?—No.

7780 How often do the ladies visit the school?—There is a meeting of the Committee of ladies every month, and they inspect all the requisites of the house, clothing and so forth. They supervise the entire management and write their report.

7781 Are the apprentices ever transferred?—The Governors would not object in case a lady was making a change in her household arrangements that she should transfer an apprentice to another family. I recollect one instance in which the daughter of one of our Governors, Mr. Alexander Postler, had one of the girls as an apprentice, and she transferred her to another lady with the consent of the Governors.

7782 CHAIRMAN.—Of course you do not send a girl out unless you feel pretty well satisfied that she is strong enough for the work she will have to do, and is in good health?—No.

7783 If a girl does not turn out as strong as you expected would she be taken back?—We have had no such case.

7784 Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—About how many apprentices do you send out each year?—Four was the highest number that we sent out as servants in any one year.

July 3, 1879.

Rev. Albert I.
MacDonogh, D.D.,
D.D.

REV. ALBERT I. MACDONOGH, D.D., examined.

7805. CHAIRMAN.—You are the Protestant clergyman who attends at the Drummond Institution?—Yes, and, in reference to the evidence of Mr. Robinson, I wish to say that I resided in the parish for several years, and discharged the duties of Chaplain, at the Institution, gratuitously, but, in consequence of the death of some members of my family, and the illness of others, I ceased to reside in the parish, and one of the Governors, Colonel Wynyard, said it would not be fair that I should be at the expense of such a long going out to the school, and he proposed a small annual grant to me to cover that. As a matter of fact, however, it does not cover it. I mention this, lest it might be supposed that I accepted payment for attending at the Institution.

7806. How often do you visit the Institution?—I stay there on one day in each week, and I visit on Sundays, and sometimes on other days.

7807. Do you hold Divine Service there on Sundays?—No. The building adjoins the parish church, and the children attend there. The Roman Catholic place of worship is also within a few yards of the school.

7808. Do you wish to offer any observations to the Commissioners?—The total number of girls that have been admitted since the opening of the Institution has been 114—of whom 67 have passed out of the Institution, and 47 remain at present. Of the 67, 23 were sent out, having been apprenticed as servants, 33 were withdrawn by their friends, 6 were trained as teachers, and since the foundation we have had five deaths. The apprentice system was commenced by my taking as a servant, in 1856, the first girl who left the Institution. Since then we have had four other girls from the Institution, as servants, in my family. As a rule we take the girl first and place her in the nursery. After remaining there for a year or two, when she grows to be strong, she has learned the ordinary duties of the nursery and becomes one of the servants of the household. I always thought that it would be a very important element that the girls should have some stipend of their own from the commencement of their service, and be taught the value of money; and I also thought that it would be proper to incorporate in the Indenture that I guaranteed a certain salary, which was to be applied to providing clothes for the girl, and the balance was to go to her credit. The clothes cost a merely nominal sum, and it has happened that at the close of the apprenticeship the entire stipend was in bank to the girl's credit, and if she wished to leave she had the entire amount, some £30 or £35, and could go to another situation. One of the girls remained eight or nine years in my house.

7809. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—On a small scale that answers very well, but, if it were extended, would it not be necessary to have a well organized connection between the Institution and the houses the girls are sent to?—With your observation that there ought to be a rule on the subject I thoroughly agree, but the connection has been carried out in a very perfect way by the mistress. The girls all look to her as their personal friend. One can conceive cases in which the same friendly relations would not exist; but at present if one of the girls got a holiday her greatest delight would be to return to the Institution. With reference to the girls that have gone out as servants, my experience is that they are very far superior to ordinary servants. I have also formed a strong opinion that it would be very advisable to keep large numbers of girls collected together up to the age of eighteen. That opinion is founded, not on theory, but on practical observation, for when the Hibernian Military School also received the daughters of soldiers the abuses grew to such an extent, that the receiving of the girls at all had to be discontinued. When girls are kept in large numbers to the age of eighteen in an Institution, they are treated as children, while they are women in years and feelings, and they are sent out into the world without any experience, and then there is very great danger. I have formed a strong opinion that it is desirable to apprentice them at fourteen, they are then under control. Only twenty-three girls have gone out of the Drummond Institution as servants, five of whom have come to myself, and others have gone to the relations of Governors.

[The Commissioners adjourned.]

Sept. 25, 1879.

TWENTY-FIRST DAY.—TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 23, 1879. 12 O'CLOCK NOON.

At the Commissioners' Office, Four Courts, Dublin.

PRESENT:—THE EARL OF ROSKE, Chairman; LORD RANDOLPH CHURCHILL, M.P.; LORD JUSTICE FITZGERALD; RICHARD O'SHAUGHNESSY, Esq., M.P.; ANDREW SEARLE HART, Esq., LL.D.; and ARTHUR HILL CURTIS, Esq., LL.D.; with JAMES CHEED MEREDITH, Esq., LL.D., Secretary.

MR. WILLIAM HAMILTON MAFFEY examined.

Mr. William
H. Maffey.

7810. CHAIRMAN.—You are the agent over the estate of the Bernard Charity School?—Yes. I was appointed in 1858.

7811. Where is the property situated?—In Dublin, on the South Circular-road and in Chancery-street. A great proportion of it consists of ground rents, and there are also the rents of some houses.

7812. Do the tenants hold leases for ever, or terminable leases?—A few leases, which were granted before the property came to the Commissioners of Charitable Donations and Bequests, are in perpetuity. The rest are leases for 150 years.

7813. What is the average of the estate?—About thirty acres.

7814. Are not some of the leases recent ones?—Yes, some have been made within the last six years.

7815. Is any portion of the property now let from year to year?—No; but there is one lease which will expire in November of next year.

7816. With the portion comprised in that lease then let at an increased rent?—There are two houses upon it, but I do not think they will let for very much more than at present.

7817. What is the present gross rental of the property?—£1,024 6s. 10d. Looking over the papers, I discovered a receiver's rental of March, 1857, and at that time it produced only £327 19s. 4d. a year.

7818. Have you anything to do with the management of the school?—Nothing whatever.

7819. The amount paid to the school during the year was £896. How was the remainder of the income expended?—The head rent, including a small title-rental charge, came to £191 3s. 2d., there are also taxes and agency fees.

7820. LORD JUSTICE FITZGERALD.—Is the property still subject to a mortgage?—No; there was formerly a mortgage; but it has been discharged, and there is now no encumbrance.

7821. CHAIRMAN.—I assume that, as the leases are of recent date, the rental will be stationary for many years to come?—Yes.

7822. Are the rents punctually paid?—On the average, they are paid one quarter within quarter. The rents are all well secured.

7823. LORD JUSTICE FITZGERALD.—By whom was you appointed agent?—By the Commissioners of Charitable Donations and Bequests.

7824. Who had been the manager of the property prior to your appointment?—An old gentleman who said, I do not recollect his name.

7833. When you were appointed did you get any maps, showing the boundaries of the property?—No.

7834. The map you have produced was made since your appointment. Do you know what maps existed in 1816 and 1848?—They are similar to the one now before you.

7837. Have you got them?—No, they are with the Commissioners. The map before you was given to me, for my own use, by the surveyor, as a compliment.

7839. Have you yourself any means, as the agent in the management of the property, of knowing whether the boundaries are the same now as they were in 1816?—I believe they are.

7839. Have you any means of distinguishing them?—None; except by intercourse with the people. I do not, however, know anything positively before the date of my appointment.

7839. The map you have produced contains 16 parishes relating to different holdings. No. "1" is stated to comprise of Nos. 14, 15, 16, and 17, Lower Chatham-street, and to be held by James Kavanagh, under lease of 5th July, 1859, for 99 years from the 25th March, 1863. That lease was made during your agency. How was the value of the plot of ground fixed, at the time of the making of the lease?—That was a matter for the Secretaries to the Commissioners.

7831. Who are the Secretaries?—Mr. William Gerson and Mr. Hercules H. MacDonnell.

7832. Did they take any steps to ascertain the proper letting value of the land?—I think there were advertisements for tenders published.

7835. Then you let by advertisement and tender?—Yes, in almost all cases.

7834. What is the rent of Kavanagh's holding?—£45 a year.

7833. Holding No. 2 appears to consist of Nos. 18 and 19, Lower Chatham-street, and about an acre and a half of ground at rear. How is that it at present?—John Burke, held that under a lease dated 14th July, 1865, for twenty-one years from 25th March, 1865, at a rent of £53 a year. He has, however, lately surrendered that lease and obtained a lease in reversion at an increased rent of £7 a year. The leases are kept at the office of the Commissioners in Edinburgh, and yesterday I spent three hours looking over them, but I could not discover Burke's new lease, but I found the lease and counterpart dated July 14, 1865, and both were marked "surrendered."

7836. Then Burke is now in possession under some lease of which you do not know the date, and without any increase of rent?—Without any increase of rent until 1885. Then he is to commence paying £7 a year additional.

7837. Through whose agency was it that a piece of building ground, containing one and a half acres, was let at £69 a year, eight years before the expiration of the existing lease, while an adjoining piece, which does not contain a rood, is let at £45 a year, an lease for twenty-nine years?—I was partly concerned in the negotiation of that lease, No. 1, however, comprised four houses which had been built prior to the making of the lease of that lot in 1849.

7838. What is the term for which Burke holds now?—I think it is a long term. I took a memorandum from the Commissioners' minute-book, which shows that the rent from 1885 is to be £75 a year. And there is also a covenant to expend £3,000 on the premises.

7839. That is quite a different state of affairs. Then, from 1885, or rather, I suppose, from 1886, which would be the expiration of his old lease, he is to pay a rent of £75 a year, and has covenanted to spend £3,000?—Yes.

7840. Holding No. 3 appears to be let to Michael Keefe?—Yes. That is a perpetuity. He pays three separate sums—£35 10s. 8d., 2s. 9s. 3d., and £15 11s. 10d. His agreements contained some peculiar covenants, and have been converted into leases in perpetuity.

7841. Holding No. 5 appears to consist of a long frontage in Lower Chatham-street, and to be held by Richard Archer and John Hill, representatives of John Hutchinson, under a lease also containing a ceteris quævis covenant. Was that letting also made before the property vested in the Commissioners?—Yes.

7842. Holding No. 6 appears to be let to John O. Donnell. What rent does he pay?—£100 a year.

7843. He has only a lease for thirty-one years?—Yes, from March 25, 1863.

7844. That lot comprises one house in Chatham-street, and four on the Circular-road. How were they valued when he got the lease?—Partly on the scale paid before that, and partly by their appearance, or something of that sort.

7845. Was there anything of a regular valuation made?—There was no valuation employed.

7846. The tenant valuations of these houses amount to £116; so that the tenant, under a lease made in 1864, holds at a rent actually £16 less than the tenant valuation. You say there was no regular valuation employed?—I cannot call to mind that there was any.

7847. What actual interference in the lettings do the Commissioners take upon themselves, or do they take any?—They manage the matter altogether, in some cases.

7848. Did they do so in this particular case?—I cannot choose any memory with the exact particulars of that letting.

7849. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—Did you negotiate that lease yourself?—I think not.

7850. Who could have done it?—The Secretaries.

7851. LORD JUSTICE FRYGEMAN.—Did the Secretaries want the place, to your knowledge?—They got information about it.

7852. FROM WHOM?—From me.

7853. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—Do the secretaries negotiate a lease without consulting you?—Not altogether.

7854. Did they ever do such a thing?—I think not.

7855. LORD JUSTICE FRYGEMAN.—Do you know the houses in question?—I do.

7856. The tenant valuation being £116, are they not worth £150 a year in the market?—I suppose they are.

7857. Holding No. 7 has frontages both to Lower Chatham-street and the Circular-road, and is marked on the map—"Building ground in the possession of the Commissioners of Charitable Donations and Bequests for Ireland." What has been done with that?—Since that map was made it has been let to Joseph Kelly, a builder, at £55 a year, with a covenant to expend £1,500. The rent is about 2s. 6d. a foot frontage.

7858. How was that ground valued, or was it valued at all?—Advertisements were published for tenders, which were sent to the secretaries.

7859. You stated that holding No. 3 was let at £75 a year, with a covenant to spend £3,000. Holding No. 7 appears to be much more valuable. Can you explain how it happened that only £55 a year was obtained for that lot. Were there any other tenders except Mr. Kelly's?—I should think there were.

7860. Do you remember?—I cannot possibly say there were.

7861. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—Have you no notes of those proceedings?—No; I have not kept any notes of them. The Secretaries are the principal acting men in these matters.

7862. LORD JUSTICE FRYGEMAN.—Do they ever visit the property?—I really cannot tell whether they do or not.

7863. Is it the special duty of either of them to look after this property?—Mr. Gurnea is the one who chiefly looks after it.

1814. Has he only to discharge office duties, or has he any actual connection with the property itself?—His duties are chiefly confined to office work; but he attends the tenants on any matter of letting.

1815. Is it the custom of the Commissioners, before they advertise for or accept tenders, to have a valuation made?—It is not.

1816. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—What are your exact duties with regard to this property?—To receive the rents from the tenants, and lodge them in bank to the credit of the Commissioners.

1817. You have nothing to do with the lettings?—When premises are let of course I have, but that has not occurred for some time.

1818. LORD JUSTICE FRYGEMAN.—Holding No. 8, let to Gordon Stewart, consists of 36 and 37, Lower Chancery-street. These houses are valued at £18 and £10, respectively—what is Mr. Stewart's rent?—It is £32 a year. He holds under lease for nineteen years, which will expire next year. He got the houses in a very bad state of repair.

1819. Are they in a better state now?—He has laid out money on them.

1820. Holding No. 9, let to James Kavanagh, comprises 123 feet 6 inches of frontage in Lower Chancery-street, and Nos. 1 to 5, Bloomsfield-place—what is the rate of that holding?—£134 a year. It is let on lease, dated 2nd March, 1866, for thirty-one years. The houses were all built when Kavanagh got that lease.

1821. By whom were the houses in Bloomsfield-place built?—By the previous tenant, whose lease had expired.

1822. What was his rent?—He held considerably more than the houses in Bloomsfield-place, and his rent was £312 a year. After his lease expired, his holding was divided into lots, and let.

1823. There was no valuation made on that occasion?—No; some of the Commissioners went very particularly into the matter—Judge Longfield amongst the rest, and they held meetings about it.

1824. As to dividing the holding?—Yes; as to dividing the holding, and accepting tenders.

1825. The next holding appears to be a most valuable plot—the corner of the Circular-road and Lower Chancery-street, and comprises Nos. 40, 41, 42, and 43, Lower Chancery-street, and Nos. 1, 2, and 3, Chancery-place, and is held by Mr. Edward Rothe; what rent does he pay?—His rent is £75 a year, and he holds only for twenty-one years, from 1865.

1826. The tenement valuation of those houses amounts to £70; can you tell, approximately, what is their letting value?—I cannot.

1827. Is it more than £75 a year?—Certainly it is; he has a profit on them.

1828. Were they actually in the hands of other tenants when the Commissioners let them to a middle-man?—Some of them were.

1829. Did they form part of the large holding which was broken up?—Exactly.

1830. Then the Commissioners let to a middle-man, there being occupying tenants in possession?—They did not consult me on that point, or I should not have recommended it.

1831. Do you know where they did consult, or whether they consulted anybody?—I do not think they consulted anybody—they let on their own responsibility.

1832. Holding No. 11 comprises the houses Nos. 1 to 7, Bloomsfield, and was let, in 1866, to Mr. Mordant; how much does he pay?—£120 a year.

1833. Were the seven houses that are now on that plot built when Mr. Mordant took it?—Yes.

1834. Then he actually got it at £4 under the valuation?—Yes.

1835. The holding has a frontage of 203 feet 9 inches on the Circular-road. What is the letting value of that frontage, with an average depth of 206 feet?—I can not exactly say; I think from 3s. 6d. to 4s. a foot, but he took the lot as houses.

1836. Would not 4s. a foot be a very moderate estimate, having regard to the fact that there is a depth of over 200 feet, with a stable-lane at the back?—Birkton do not care for the depth, for it increases their wall-building.

1837. Taking it only at 4s., the value of the ground would be £40 a year, so that Mr. Mordant was given the seven houses in Bloomsfield, in 1866, for £80 a year; how much were they worth?—They were worth more than that certainly.

1838. Were they in the hands of occupying tenants also?—They were all in the hands of occupying tenants.

1839. Were you consulted about that letting?—No.

1840. Did the Secretaries conduct that letting also?—That was a letting by tender. Several proposals were sent in, and all submitted to Judge Longfield and one or two other Commissioners, who met for the purpose. Tenders were advertised for, and received by the Commissioners at their office.

1841. And then a letting was made for thirty-one years?—Yes; at the best rent that was offered.

1842. Holding No. 12 consists of Nos. 1, 2, 3, and 4, Bloomsfield-avenue, and was let in 1866, to James Atkinson, by lease, for thirty-one years; were those four houses built at the time of the letting?—They were.

1843. What is his rent?—£72 a year; those houses are valued at £18 a-piece, and are let at the tenement valuation.

1844. Were they new houses at the time they were so let?—No.

1845. Holding No. 13 contains 406 feet frontage, of building ground, in Bloomsfield-avenue, adjoining No. 12, and is returned on the map as "Building ground, in the possession of the Commissioners of Charitable Donations and Bequests."—That ground has been divided into four plots, and let for building. Atkinson, the tenant of No. 12, got one of them, having a frontage of 102 feet, at £15 0s. a year, on a building lease for 180 years, and he covenanted to spend £300. Patrick Baylon got another, with 102 feet frontage, at the same rent, and with a like covenant to spend £300; the two other plots, containing 202 feet frontage, were let to Edward Hodgins, at £39 11s. a year, and he covenanted to spend £300.

1846. What are the dates of those lettings?—Atkinson's, February 25th, 1867; Baylon's, June 6th, 1867; and Hodgins's, July 1st, 1867.

1847. Having regard to the fact that those lots in Bloomsfield-avenue, with a depth of 188 feet, let at 3s. a foot, do not you think that 4s. a foot, with a depth of 206 feet, is below the letting value of building ground on the Circular-road?—I suppose it is.

1848. Holding No. 15 is a very large plot, stated to have been let, in perpetuity, to John Rose; what rent does he pay?—His is a merely nominal rent—£8 2s. 2d. a year. That letting was made before the Commissioners obtained the property.

1849. Mr. Frederick Stokess appears to hold No. 16, which is an instance plot?—He has the old Portobello Gardens.

1850. The site of the old Portobello Gardens comprises 2 acres 3 roods 14 perches, and is covered with buildings known as Kingsland Park; what rent does he pay for that?—£120 a year.

1851. Was that property let for £120 on the 22nd February, 1866?—Yes; I had a good deal to say to the letting of that; we advertised it for a very long time, and I saw several parties about it; but one of them would go up to the £150. Mr. Stokes heard that was the sum nominally asked for it, and he went to the Commissioners and offered that rent, which they accepted. I had called on Mr. Samuel Bolton, a very extensive builder, at Portobello-bridge, and asked him to make an offer for it; I said it was to bring £150 a year, and he laughed at the idea.

1902. The ground has since been covered with buildings—Is it so?

1903. Do you know whether the persons who built the houses told Mr. Stokes, as under-tenants?—Almost all. He built a few at first himself to start with.

1904. Have you any idea of the rental that Mr. Stokes is receiving out of that property?—I have not the remotest idea. He is not a gentleman who would give much information on the subject.

1905. His holding, taking it as having 2,088 feet of frontage, worth 3s per foot, which would amount to £313 4s., and, in addition to that, 351 feet of frontage on the Circular-road which, at 4s., would come to £140 4s., would appear to be worth £379 8s. a year, instead of £150, which is the rent you are receiving. Do you think that is the letting value of it as building ground, even supposing there was not a building at all on it?—I do not think you would get 3s a foot for that ground, and your calculation of frontage, I think, is excessive.

1906. Has not Kingsland-parade been made a frontage?—Perhaps it has now.

1907. Have they not made further frontages to Upper Cross-road?—They have, but the houses there are all of a poor class.

1908. Not as good as those in Bloomfield-avenue?—No.

1909. Is not Kingsland-park a better site than Bloomfield-avenue?—I do not know. The one had been built upon, which was an encouragement, the other was a complete waste. In Kingsland-park the houses are valued at £15 on the average. In Bloomfield-avenue the valuations of the houses range from £18 to £20.

1910. Holding No. 14 is a considerable plot of ground on the opposite side of the Grand Canal, and is stated to be held by the representatives of General Pakenham, deputed barrack-master of Dublin, by grant in perpetuity, dated 6th July, 1810. Is there any rent received from that?—There has been none received in my time.

1911. How is that arranged?—I do not know. It is part of the Portobello Barracks.

1912. When you consulted about the acceptance of Mr. Stokes's offer?—No; he was accepted before I knew anything about it. He came to tell me he had been accepted by the Commissioners.

1913. Lord R. CROMMIE.—Is not twenty-nine years your usual building lease?—No; 150 years is the usual term.

1914. Is that the usual building lease in Dublin?—The terms vary greatly. Some persons give leases for 500 years, others leases for ever; 150 years is the usual term on the Herbert estate, which is the largest estate in Dublin.

1915. LORD JUSTICE FRYER.—Your accounts show deductions for poor rate and water rate of over £50 a year. All the lettings appear to be lettings of house property, the greater part of it in the hands of under-tenants. How is the poor rate calculated?—If the rental is below the valuation, it is calculated on the rental; if above the valuation, it is calculated on the valuation.

1916. Are you not aware that where your tenants have under-tenants, they are only entitled to deduct from you, a sum bearing to the amount deducted from them, the same proportion, that the rent they pay to you, bears to the rent they receive from their tenants?—Certainly.

1917. Have you allowed deductions upon that principle?—In every case where it could be done.

1918. The deduction of £50 a year is 1s. 1s. in the pound?—Very nearly.

1919. It should not be 1s. 1s. in the pound upon building ground property and house property, such as this is. Don't you see you have allowed 1s. in the pound?—The deductions are all correct, I am aware of you.

1920. How much do you allow Mr. Stokes for poor rate?—Mr. Stokes deducts the poor rate on the rental he pays.

1921. Is not that perfectly wrong?—Yes; and I had a fight with him on the subject. He would not give me any information as to his poor rate.

1922. Did you then allow him to deduct the rates on the full rent?—By direction of the Secretaries, I did so.

1923. Which of them gave you that direction?—I think Mr. Gerson.

1924. Do you not think that he directed you to allow the tenant what he had no possible right to?—I am aware of the law.

1925. Would not the difference be that you ought only to have allowed him about one third of what you did?—It would make a difference certainly.

1926. Have you to all the cases allowed poor rate to be deducted in the same way?—Whenever I can arrange the allowance on the system you mention, I do so.

1927. Cannot you do it in every case?—The tenants will not always give the information necessary to enable me to do so.

1928. Do you not know that the tenant has no right to deduct anything, except on proving to the landlord that he is entitled to the deduction he claims?—Yes; but Mr. Stokes, for instance, wrote to the Commissioners about it.

1929. Your answer is a complete one—that you were directed to take a grant and let him then you are entitled to. But I want to know why that was done?—I pointed out, to the Secretaries, the law on the subject.

1930. How has the allowance for water rate been calculated?—Whenever the rent exceeds the valuation, the full amount of the public water rate is allowed to the tenant.

1931. Did you ever suggest to the Commissioners that it would be well, when making their lettings, to have something in the way of a permanent valuation?—I cannot say that I did. They employed Mr. Louch, who drew out the plans for building on the Portobello Gardens.

1932. I presume that those buildings, the houses of which will shortly expire, are much more valuable now than they were in 1866, owing to the building that has taken place since?—Yes, the neighborhood has improved very much. I should mention that when Captain Halahan's lease expired, the buildings, which had been greatly neglected, were all in a very dilapidated state. The whole of Captain Halahan's holdings were gone over by Judge Longfield.

1933. Do you deliver your accounts half-yearly or yearly?—Half-yearly, up to 30th June and 31st December, and I furnish each account before the succeeding half-yearly date.

1934. And you account for the rent up to the preceding gala day?—Just so.

1935. LORD R. CROMMIE.—Are you paid by salary or percentage?—By fees. I get five per cent.

1936. You have huge experience as a land agent?—Yes; large experience.

1937. In the case of other properties, have you more control over the lettings than you have in this?—Considerably more. I have the sole management of them. In this, I have not.

1938. In this you are practically confined to collecting the rents?—Yes, and giving such information as I am asked for. I act on the instructions of the Commissioners, conveyed through their Secretaries.

1939. LORD JUSTICE FRYER.—You are not responsible for the lettings?—No; I am not. I never would make those lettings in that wholesale way if it were my property, or if I had the sole management of it.

1940. You do not consider that it was the best way to get the full value?—I do not think so, but it saved me a great amount of trouble.

1941. And the Commissioners also?—And the Commissioners also. The Commissioners had no power to interfere with the sub-tenants, and bad characters invaded some of the houses.

Mr. William
H. Malleson.

7042. That invasion depressed the property for a considerable time?—Very considerably; I remember that the cottages on the Canal would be occupied in that way.

7043. These persons have been got rid of now?—They have.

7044. Can you say what the difference of the rental would have been if the lettings had been made under your advice?—I could not tell you.

7045. Would there not have been an increase?—There would have been an increase certainly.

7046. Would it be an increase of one-third?—I could not say. Of course parties took these houses for the purpose of deriving a certain profit out of them. That profit would have fallen, perhaps not to such a great extent, to the Commissioners, as, of course, the people who have the houses may be able to manage them more cheaply, and have the repairs done more economically, than the Commissioners. The Commissioners get rid of an immense amount of trouble in the way of repairs and every thing of that sort.

7047. They lost a considerable amount of rent?—They lost something of course, but people would not have taken the property unless they got a profit; I think, however, that these lettings could not have been made better on the system on which they were made.

7048. But you do not think that is the correct system?—I do not.

7049. Contrast two instances: Holding No. 13, in Bloomfield-avenue, was divided into four lots, each with about 100 feet frontage, whereas holding No. 14, which contained a vast quantity more, was all let in one lot. Do not you think that it would have been more prudent, without putting the Commissioners into poverty with small holdings, to have divided No. 14 into much smaller lots?—I think it would.

7050. Was there any covenant in Mr. Stokes' lease to spend money?—I am not sure, but I think there was a covenant to spend £5,000.

7051. Did not they let holding No. 13 in four lots, each having 100 feet frontage, and obtain covenants to spend upon that ground £1,500, while Mr. Stokes got a piece six times as large and only covenanted to spend £2,400?—Certainly.

7052. Did they consult you about these things?—They did not. Mr. Stokes' proposal was accepted before I knew anything of it. I had earned £120 as a nominal price, under which the plots should not be let, and it certainly was a long time in the market.

7053. Mr. O'BRIEN—How long?—I cannot say exactly.

7054. Lord Justice Fitzgerald—Was it ever offered in small lots?—It never was; it was advertised in one lot all through.

7055. Mr. O'BRIEN—Was that against your advice?—I do not recollect. Indeed I never met the Commissioners.

7056. Do you approve of letting in a large lot?—I decidedly think such property would let better in small lots.

7057. Lord R. CHURCHILL—Do you manage any other property for the Commissioners?—I receive the rents of Carey's charity estate in the King's County.

7058. Is that also an educational endowment?—I am not aware.

7059. Is that property managed on the same system?—There have been no new lettings made there.

The lands were all let before we had anything to say to it.

7060. Lord Justice FITZGERALD—Do you pay the rent of the school-house in Eccles-street?—Yes.

7061. Who looks after the state of repair in which it is kept?—I do not know.

7062. You have nothing to do, with reference to the house, except to pay the rent?—That is so.

7063. Mr. O'BRIEN—In whose names were the leases of this property made?—The estate was mortgaged to the Moansells, nephews of Mr. John Maxwell, solicitor, and these mortgagees executed the leases, as leases, with the concurrence of the Commissioners, who joined in signing.

7064. Lord Justice FITZGERALD—Have you had any communication with the trustees who actually manage the charity itself?—None whatever.

7065. Mr. O'BRIEN—It appears that the ground rent, reserved by the Commissioners, is no less than a great part of this letting to Mr. Stokes on actually pay a second ground rent before we come to the rent paid by the actual tenants. Is not that so?—It is.

[Mr. Malleson subsequently addressed to the Secretary an explanatory letter, which will be found at Appendix No. 14.]

Rev. William
G. Carroll, &c.

Rev. WILLIAM GEORGE CARROLL, &c., CHURCHILL.

7066. CHAIRMAN—What position do you hold with reference to St. Bride's schools?—I am the incumbent of the parish, and patron of the schools.

7067. Where does the income that supports the schools come from?—Partly from bequests, and partly from the salaries allowed by the Commissioners of National Education.

7068. What is the present endowment?—House property, producing £54 a year, and the interest on £3,000, Grand Canal debentures.

7069. What do they produce?—Last year they produced only £67 10s.

7070. Is there any other endowment?—We have a charge of £12 8s. per annum, against our own parish. In 1781 the churchwardens and parsonages of St. Bride's, purchased the ground rent of a house in Griffin-street, and, to make up the purchase-money, they had to borrow £250 from the school bequests, and from that time to this they pay us £12 8s. a year. It is the house occupied by Mr. Reilly.

7071. Dr. HARR—Is there any further endowment?—Yes; there is also Lord Redesdale's bequest, which yielded £8 4s. 1d. last year.

7072. Lord R. CHURCHILL—How did that arise?—Lord Redesdale, while he was Lord Chancellor here, set apart certain fees, which he entitled to, but never took. In 1806 he made a division of them between the schools of St. Peter's and St. Bride's parishes.

7073. CHAIRMAN—Is there anything else?—We receive £4 per annum interest on Government Stock.

7074. Lord R. CHURCHILL—From what source was the Government Stock derived?—From the balance of old bequests, which were invested from time to time, then sold out, and then invested again. We have now £350 stock, belonging to the general estate of the parish, but how much exactly of that belongs to the schools, we do not know. We went on the old list that we found in the parochial books. We sold out some Government Stock since the last commission, for school purposes, and then we reduced the proportion of dividend payable to the schools. At other times we had to sell out stock for the parish account, and then we made a proportionate reduction in the dividend going to the parish account.

7075. CHAIRMAN—Who are the trustees?—Some of the investments are in the names of "The Minister and Churchwardens," and others in those of "The Minister and Churchwardens."

7076. Dr. HARR—When you come to be incumbent of the parish, in whom will the property be vested?—In my successor.

7077. Is there any provision made for a successor to you, in the parish?—No.

7078. Then it is to be presumed there will be no successor?—So it is understood, unless the Church Body can suggest the minister. The idea is to divide the parish between the two or three neighbouring parishes.

7973. And therefore there will be nobody to represent you?—Certainly not, as Incumbent of St. Bride's.

7980. Has any provision been made for securing the funds of the school?—That would not be mentioned to me. I have nothing to say to it. It depends upon the Church Body and the Diocesan Council.

7981. They have nothing to do with the management of the schools?—I only mean as to the persons who would hold the property.

7982. The property of the schools must be secured in some way or other. It must not be, on the expiration of your incumbency, lost altogether?—Certainly.

7983. It is true that some arrangement should be made?—The making of such an arrangement rests with the Diocesan Council or Church Body.

7984. LOUIS R. CHURCHILL.—How is the Church Body concerned?—Because they are the ultimate owners.

7985. Dr. HART.—Not for the schools?—For the general Ministry of the parish.

7986. CHAIRMAN.—Are the churchwardens changed every year?—Indeed they are not; sometimes we have the same for years, but they are elected every year. There is nothing you desire, which I will not be most willing to do, but I have not heard a word about this before.

7987. Dr. HART.—It is no part of the business of the Diocesan Council or Church Body to make arrangements for a private school vested in the minister and churchwardens as individuals, and when they cease to exist there must be some arrangements, I suppose, through the Commissioners of Charitable Donations and Bequests?—Parish schools, I think, are vested in Masters, &c., not as individuals, but as corporations, with succession. Whatever power devolves the succession can supply the place. I suppose if such a proposal is ever carried out I shall get instructions as to what to do, and whatever I am asked to do I will do. The Commissioners of Charitable Donations and Bequests could allocate the property to the incoming trustee.

7988. So far as the Diocesan Council is concerned, then object, I think, would be to secure as much as they could for the sake of the Church?—There is nothing belonging to the Church. We have in our parish two institutions—one the widows' almshouse, and the other the schools, and we have, in round numbers, £150 a year of an endowment for each.

7989. CHAIRMAN.—Is the school fund kept separate from the almshouse fund?—It is kept separate by me. The treasurer or accountant of the parish keeps each in a separate book.

7990. Are you bound in any way, by the terms of the legacies, to apply this money wholly for educational purposes, or could you apply it for pious purposes?—It can be applied only for educational purposes, but we have done such a thing as this: since the children were accommodated in the church, we have charged £50 out of the school funds towards the repairs of the church. The children get better accommodation by reason of the expenditure.

7991. LOUIS R. CHURCHILL.—If you had not contributed that money could the children have been prevented from attending the church?—No, we would not have prevented them.

7992. Under what power did you subscribe £50 to the fund for restoring the church?—We all thought we were entitled, as trustees of the funds, to do so. There is a resolution on the books on the subject.

7993. You did not take any legal opinion as to whether you had the power to do so?—No.

7994. Read the resolution to which you refer?—

"October 1st, 1846.—Resolved.—That the second instalment of £50, due by the Incumbent for the advance above mentioned, be accepted, and that the said £50 be charged to the funds of the parochial vestment, as a donation towards the expenses of the church improvement, in consequence of the increased accommodation afforded by the alterations to the widows and school children, and also in consideration of the contribution made by the incumbent."

7995. That refers to a previous minute?—Yes;

when we were restoring the church, under the sanction of the old Ecclesiastical Commissioners, we were obliged, before the work was undertaken, to lodge £100, and the governors of the parish school lent me £100 out of the funds they had in their names invested in stock, on condition that I was to pay it back by two instalments. I repaid the first £50 at the time specified, and the resolution I have read was passed by the vestry in reference to the second £50. I was one of those who passed the resolution.

7996. When the original loan was made you did not contemplate giving a subscription from the funds of the schools to the repairs of the church?—I do not think we did. I dare say when money ran scarce, and more work was done, we then thought of it.

7997. Was the money that was so lent part of the capital of the charity, or part of the income?—Part of the capital. It was sold out of the funds for the purpose.

7998. So that you advanced £50 of the capital funds of the schools?—Certainly.

7999. Did it ever occur to you that you had no power to advance that sum?—Never.

8000. CHAIRMAN.—You spoke of a fund for widows. Is this entirely distinct from the school funds?—We keep our accounts entirely separate, but it is not deposited in the bank, where all the moneys are entered in one account under the name of "The Minister and Churchwardens." In our own books we allocate the amount to each object.

8001. How did you obtain the funds you so allocated?—They were bequests left at various times.

8002. Dr. HART.—Were there any allocations in the original bequests?—Always.

8003. LOUIS R. CHURCHILL.—At what date did you undertake the management of the charity?—In 1839.

8004. What was the amount, belonging to the schools, invested in Government Stock, in 1839?—I could not say, because the amounts were not kept separate in the bank.

8005. In 1835 an estimate was stated to have been made by the Dean of Ely, a former incumbent of the parish, when it was found that £971 belonged to the school?—He said about that—but that they had no means of knowing.

8006. When you became incumbent of the parish what was the total stock?—It then stood at £1,572 4s. 4d.

8007. What portion of that did you treat as belonging to the schools?—We went on the lines that were in the books. We divided the dividends each half-year, and gave so much to the poor, and so much to the schools.

8008. Dr. HART.—What proportion was given to each?—There was no exact proportion. The books will show what division was made every year.

8009. It varied from time to time?—It did.

8010. LOUIS R. CHURCHILL.—This passage occurs in the report of the last Committee—

"Great confusion has arisen from the fact that the funds of the schools and the Parochial Almshouse have been misapportioned, only one general account is kept by the bank, and a difficulty has thus been created of distinguishing what proportions belong precisely to each establishment?—We have never been able to correct that."

8011. Did you ever take any steps to correct it?—We did not know what steps to take. We continued on the lines that we found.

8012. What part of the £1,572 did you treat as belonging to the schools?—I could not say.

8013. What sum per annum did you give to the schools, as arising from their share of the £1,572?—I could only tell you that by referring to the books. It varied from year to year. The schools are at present getting £4 a year, and for some time previously they were receiving £7 a year.

8014. Dr. HART.—Which charity resolves the greater share of the dividends now?—The schools receive £4 a year now, and the Almshouse only £2 a year. A portion of the dividends was intended for the sick poor, and they now get £10 a year.

Sept. 25, 1875.

Rev. William
G. Carroll, &c.

8015. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—Are they, the sick poor, in the almshouse?—No; through the Parish there is one fund for the Widows' Almshouse, and another for the sick poor of the parish.

8016. What amount of stock have you at present?—£330 3s. 10d. The entire amount sold on 21st June 1869 was £1,921 18s. 6d.

8017. It appears from the Stock accounts which you have produced, certified at the Bank of Ireland, that the first sale was on the 7th September, 1869. Read the minute in reference to that transaction?—

"August 24th, 1869. Resolved, that £350 be sold out to improve the school-rooms, and add an Infant school-room."

It appears from the accounts that the amount of Stock sold out to realize the £350 was £359 18s. 6d. The next sale appears to have been of £191 Stock, on 1st May, 1869. The minute is—

"April 2nd, 1869. Resolved, that minister and churchwardens be authorized to sell out Stock to the amount of £79 3s., being the balance due by schools to Bachelor's Fund."

8018. What does that mean?—"Bachelor's Fund" was a fund in the parish intended for the benefit of the poor, and, in 1850, when the schools were in debt to their Treasurer, the late Mr. Loftus Ryan, the Governors, in order to pay him, borrowed £300 from the poor fund. That sum was paid back to the minister, for the poor, by instalments, and in 1860 the balance then due was paid off to me.

8019. Out of the capital of the school fund?—Yes.

8020. Then in fact the balance due to the Treasurer was, to that extent, paid out of capital?—Yes.

8021. CHAIRMAN.—Is the Minute Book from which you have been reading, that of the Vestry?—No; it is the Minute Book of the Governors of the school. They consist of the minister, churchwardens, and churchwardens' peers, who are all persons that have served the office of churchwarden.

8022. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—Continue the minute of April 2nd, 1869?—

"And also a further sum of £400 be advanced to the present incumbent for the repairs and alterations of the parish church, according to arrangement of the Ecclesiastical Commissioners. The sum to be repaid by the Incumbent at the rate of £20 per annum."

8023. You repaid £30 of that £100?—Yes, I paid it on the 1st October, 1869, I had to make it up by subscriptions, and out of my own pocket.

8024. Was that £30 repaid in the funds as capital?—No; it was included in the then current year's account.

8025. In fact you treated it as income?—Yes; it saved the sale of another £50.

8026. Was there any minute by the Vestry on that point?—There is no minute of the Vestry in reference to this £50.

8027. And yet it was part of your capital?—It was.

8028. And you alienated part of your capital without any minute of the Vestry?—In fact you did so without the concurrence of the Vestry?—Yes; it was not a Vestry affair at all—we might have re-invested it, and then we should have sold it out again.

8029. The money was paid to the Treasurer?—It was.

8030. Who was the Treasurer at that time?—The late Mr. Telford.

8031. The next sale of Stock appears to have taken place on the 22nd December, 1868, when £50 was sold out?—I do not think that was in any way connected with the schools.

8032. The bank accounts also show that £162 Stock was sold out on 2nd November, 1869; what was that for?—I find this minute under date 1st January, 1870?—

"During the summer vacation the three school-rooms were painted and put in thorough repair at the cost of £109 9s., £100 Government Stock having been sold out for the sum, viz."

8033. From what book have you read that entry?—From the Governors' minute book.

8034. Who keeps that?—I do.

8035. Does that body meet every week?—For some years past no one has met but Mr. Telford and myself. We have had no Governors in the parish, and we met only once in every six months. Mr. Telford died some time since.

8036. Who are the churchwardens?—Mr. Telford was one churchwarden, and Mr. Bodden was the other, but he has been invalided for a long time.

8037. So you have nobody now to assist you?—Mr. Dockrell, of George's-parish, was a churchwarden, and he sometimes attended our vestry meetings.

8038. When Stock was sold out, by whom was it done?—The churchwardens and myself.

8039. Then in the case of all these sales you had to get the amount of the two churchwardens?—Certainly. 8040. Ought not there to be a note of all the sales in your minute book?—Certainly. I think, however, that the accounts are all right, but I cannot at the moment find the entry relative to the £50.

8041. There is not only the £50 to be accounted for, but there is also £62, of the amount of £162, which appears to have been sold out on 2nd November, 1869?—It might have happened in this way—that sometimes the stock was sold out first, and then at a future meeting we reported that it had been done.

8042. What is your next entry relative to selling Stock?—I find this minute under date January 2nd, 1871?—

"£150 Government Stock to be sold out for repairs of almshouses, and school expenses."

8043. The account shows that £162 Stock was sold out on 30th October, 1871?—That was the sale to realise the £150, and in January, 1872, the sale of that stock was reported, as appears by the minute.

8044. It appears that £110 Stock was sold out on the 14th May, 1873?—Yes; by order of the select vestry held on Easter Monday, 1873—that Stock was sold out for the purpose of re-roofing the Widows' Almshouse, and the schoolmaster's dwelling, and it produced £109 17s. 6d.

8045. CHAIRMAN.—The house property is still to be kept to the parish?—Yes.

8046. You have also the Grand Canal Stock?—Yes.

8047. Is that Stock exclusively for the schools?—£3,000 worth of it belongs to the Widows' fund, and £3,000 worth to the schools.

8048. I find that the schools are entitled to a house in Little Ship-street, a house in Bride-collect, and a house in Coffee-street. Do you think you have power to sell these houses, if you and the churchwardens found it necessary to lay out more capital?—I do not know whether we should be entitled to do so.

8049. DR. HARRIS.—What was the date of the last sale of Stock?—1875.

8050. Who were the parties to that sale?—yourself and Mr. Telford?—Yes; Mr. Telford is not now alive. The transfer was executed by myself and the then churchwardens.

8051. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—Were they Mr. Bodden and Mr. Dockrell?—Very likely.

8052. Who are the churchwardens at present?—Mr. Bodden and Mr. Dockrell, jun., were elected churchwardens, but the latter gentleman says he will not serve.

8053. The result of the transactions is, that out of the £1,500 Stock which existed in 1867, you have sold about £1,000?—Yes.

8054. Is it not clear, that some of the Stock sold out must have been applied to the current expenditure?—No; in the minutes of December 31st, 1868, I find this entry?—

"The treasurer's accounts for last half year were audited and found correct, showing as follows?—On poor account, vids. £32 12s 2½d, and on school account, ditto, £65 9s 6d, add out for repairs."

That I think must account for the £50 you were asking about. All the money that we expended, with the exception of the £50 towards the church fund, has been spent on repairs.

8053. There would still remain to be accounted for £52 in November, 1849?—There is an entry on March 24th, 1850, of Government Stock which produced £74 6s 6d having been sold out on the poor account.

8054. Had you any right to apply the sums to the sick poor?—Certainly we had, under the original bequest.

8055. What houses had your schools, from house property, in 1850?—£54.

8056. Dr. HART.—Is it the same every year?—It is 8057. LORD R. CRUSCHILL.—Did you receive in that year, any sum from the Grand Canal Debentures?—Certainly, £20 15s. The dividend on that Stock fluctuates, and has been a little lower this half-year; at one time we received as much as £80 from it.

8058. Had you also, in 1850, the charge against the parish of £12 8s 1½d.—Yes.

8059. Then it comes to this, that at the present moment, you have, for all your parish charities, including the schools, £342 Government Stock, house property producing £54 a year, £5,000 Grand Canal Debentures, Lord Rosedale's bequest producing £8 a year, and a charge against the parish of £12 8s a year. Is there anything else?—There is other house property, belonging to the almshouse.

8060. Whenever there has been any want of money to balance the yearly account, has it not been procured by a sale of portion of the Government Stock?—We have never taken one penny to balance the account.

8061. Well, whenever there were any repairs to be executed upon the buildings, you sold out capital?—What else was we to have done? Within the last twenty years, the expenses of repairing the houses from which our rents are derived, re-roofing or re-building the two school-rooms, the master's house, and the Widows' house, have cost us over £1,200. To meet that expenditure we took about £300 out of our capital, and we paid the remainder out of our income. We sustained a loss of about £100 a year from the fall of the interest upon our Grand Canal Stock. It used to produce £300 a year, and now we only get £160, and often less.

8062. When you were appointed to the parish, you found a boarding school in existence?—Yes; and there were only two boys in it.

8063. How many are there now?—We have no boys' school at all now, we had to close it for lack of boys; I could get no boys to attend it.

8064. How many were there when you took the management of it?—There were, I think, in all twenty-five boys. The boarding and day schools had been amalgamated before I became the incumbent.

8065. When did the numbers begin to drop off?—I could not say exactly, from recollection.

8066. Where do the boys go now?—We have a school school under the National Board, and about fifteen boys attend it.

8067. What are the ages of those boys?—They are between eleven and fourteen.

8068. In 1823, there was a large sum spent on repairs?—That was for repairs to the master's house in Great Ship street, and for roofing the Widows' Almshouse, and for general cleaning and repairing.

8069. At what date did you finally close the boarding school?—The boarding school was closed in 1851, but we kept up the master's house, because the master of our day school lived there; and a few years ago we also closed the boys' day school, or at least the National Board closed it, that is so long, they withdrew the salary from the master.

8070. CHAIRMAN.—Where was the boarding school situated?—In Great Ship street.

8071. LORD R. CRUSCHILL.—Where was the day school?—In Bride-street. I should remind you that only the boys' department had been shut up. There are an infants' school and a girls' school retained.

8072. Then as far as the education of the boys, in the parish of St. Bride is concerned, the endowment is not now in operation?—It is in operation so far as the fifteen boys who are attending the mixed school, and the boys in the infants' school are concerned.

8073. The mixed school is under the National Board?—Yes.

8074. Dr. HART.—In the report of the Endowed Schools Commissioners in 1857, I find this passage:—

"The great bulk of the endowments, however, having come into existence prior to the year 1818 (when the daily schools were first commenced), they were, of course, intended by their donors for the support of the boarding school only, and it is therefore plain that the last-mentioned establishment has been the sufferer by this peculiar mode of dealing with the funds, nor is the governor nearly so successful, for it appears that the number of boys boarded has been successively reduced from twenty-four (the original number) down to nine, at which it stands at present, and the result is admittedly attributable to the insufficiency of the funds. Indeed I have learned that it has long been an object of the trustees to abolish the boarding school altogether, and devote the entire funds to the support of the day schools—an operation which, however abjectly beneficial, could scarcely be carried into effect without the approval of the Court of Chancery."

Was that suggestion ever attended to?—It was not, and for this reason, that we have the words of every bequest given to the schools, and in not one of them is there any mention of the boarding schools. The bequests were given to "The Charity School" or to "The Parish School."

8075. Dr. CHURCH.—In any of those bequests was there any permission given to spend the capital?—I do not think that there is, in any one case, a limitation confining us to spending the interest.

8076. Dr. HART.—In the report of 1857 I find this passage as to the boarding school of St. Bride's parish:—

"It became a boarding school, and was originally intended for the maintenance, clothing, education, and apprenticeship to trades of twenty boys (children of deceased parishioners)."—

That is a historical mistake.

8077. LORD R. CRUSCHILL.—As far as the endowment for the education of boys is concerned, the only thing that represents it is fifteen boys educated by a mistress in St. Bride's school?—That is all we are doing with it for grown boys.

8078. What are you doing for girls?—The girls have the advantage of it, the total number of children attending the school is forty-nine in the girls' or mixed school, and 125 in the infants' school, making a total of 174; the forty-nine in the girls' school includes fifteen boys.

8079. So that the endowment, which was originally meant to be an endowment for educating comparatively grown-up boys and girls, is now practically an endowment for the education of infants and girls?—Practically, I do not think that any will, leaving money to the schools, said that girls and infants were not to have any benefit from it.

8080. Two-thirds of the capital sum of the endowment has been expended within the last twenty years?—Yes, but not on the maintenance of the schools; it was on the maintenance and repairs of the house property belonging to the schools.

8081. What sum of money do you spend on the Almshouse every year?—About £150 a year.

8082. When did you get the Grand Canal Stock which you have mentioned?—In 1818. Mr. Thomas Phoenix, the philanthropist, bequeathed to our predecessors Grand Canal Stock to the extent of £5,000.

8083. What are the terms in which he made that bequest?—He first desires that he should be buried in St. Bride's Church-yard, and proceeds:—

"And further, let Burial in this Parish be, I believe, the only burial one that Mr. Phoenix and his family ever received in, and I passed many years in it myself. I therefore bequest to the parish school of St. Bridget, £3,000 sterling, and to the Widows' Almshouse of said parish, the like sum of £3,000 sterling, both making, for variety sake, £6,000."

G. Carroll, &c.

And by a further passage in his will he directed that all his bequests for charitable purposes should be discharged in Grand Canal Debentures.

8086. What was St. Bridget's parish school in those days?—A day school and a boarding school. The will did not specify that the money was to go to the boarding school, but it said to the parish school.

8087. Is St. Bride's a populous parish?—At the last census I think the population was reported to be about 5,600.

8088. What is the congregation attending your church?—About sixty, including children.

8089. For what number could you provide accommodation?—From 400 to 500.

8090. Is that about the Protestant population of the parish?—The Protestant population of the parish, including children, is about 400, of whom about 400 are tolerably regular residents.

8091. Dr. HART.—Is not the parish church in a ruinous condition?—It is very much out of repair, but it is not in what you would call a ruinous condition; there are a good many broken windows, and the roof is getting bad.

8092. Does it not admit the rain?—It does, the roof wants to be put in repair, but the church is not falling down.

8093. LEON R. CHURCHILL.—Where do you think the sons of Protestant parents, in your parish, go for their education?—I do not know, but they do not come to me, and every day, while our boys' school is closed for lack of pupils, there are a number of boys, sufficient to make a very good school, playing on the steps.

8094. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—Are those Protestant boys?—I do not know, I think there are about 250 Protestant children in the parish.

8095. CHAIRMAN.—The Rev. John Jones appears to have left some property to the schools?—That is archæologically a mistake. There never was a Rev. John Jones in the parish. The man was Rev. John Jones, who expended money of his own upon turning the old church into a schoolhouse.

8096. LEON R. CHURCHILL.—The parish school at that time was a boarding school?—No, that is a mistake in the report of the last Commission. The parish school was a day school down to 1785, and then it became a boarding school, with day boys.

8097. There is no school of that kind now existing in St. Bride's parish?—Certainly not, but there is a parish school. Even the bequest made since 1795 was made while the school was a boarding school; all the bequests made before that were while the parish school was a day school.

8098. CHAIRMAN.—How was the house property acquired?—An ancestor of your lordship—Sir Wm. Parsons—gave the house in Little Ship Street in 1626. The house in O'Connell-street was left in 1823 by a gentleman named Daniel.

8099. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—Has any of the capital, which has been expended, been applied to the construction of new premises?—None of it, but we enlarged the school-room so much as to make it in effect a new one.

8100. How much was spent on the reconstruction of the school-room?—£235. We spent about £1,300 on the repairs of the house property, out of which the rents I have mentioned are derived.

8101. Do not you see that, if matters go on in the same way, all the corpus of your fund must in time disappear?—Certainly.

8102. You are aware, on general principles, that when money is left for the maintenance of a school, particularly if the sum be a large one, the intention is that it shall be invested, and only the interest expended?—I do not think there is any such specification or limitation in reference to any one of the bequests to this parish, many of them have been applied to the daily expenditure; the parish lost £100 a year by the failure of what was, in fact, a national security—the Grand Canal Debentures.

8103. Can you suggest any plan by which this constant decrease may be stopped, and the funds and property still remaining be made a continuous and substantial endowment?—I know of no way, except there were some means of selling the houses, and investing the proceeds. That is the only way of making up of a fixed income in future, as old houses will constantly require repairs.

8104. Dr. HART.—Would it not be possible to form a reserve fund to meet repairs?—That might be done.

8105. Ought you not to have reduced the expenditure on repairs?—We were not able to meet the repairs and maintenance out of the reduced income caused by the reduction of the dividend on the Grand Canal Stock. We reduced the maintenance so far that we suppressed the boarding house, which cost £150 or £160 a year, and in the almshouse we did not elect to vacillate.

8106. Did you make any effort to pay for the ordinary repairs out of the ordinary income?—Yes, and we paid £400 during the time. The selling out of the Stock was the greatest cause and annoyance to us.

8107. Do children of different religions attend your schools?—Yes.

8108. Are the rules of the National Board, as to religious instruction, carried out?—Entirely.

8109. Are there any Catholics amongst the children attending?—Yes, there are 52 Catholics, 121 members of the Church of Ireland children, and 1 Jew.

8110. On the occasions allowed under the regulations of the National Board, you can give religious instruction?—I give religious instruction once a week. The Protestant children come into the vestry to me.

8111. There were very grave complaints made by the Commissioners in 1857 as to the mode in which the accounts in St. Bride's parish were kept. They say—

"There are no account books showing how or when these trust funds were thus expended, though it may be presumed that they were employed in keeping up the boarding school, the day-schools not having been established until after 1823. Moreover, the above remaining funds and these once acquired, the total income arising from which is now a sum of £300 3s. 1d. only, have been mixed up with those belonging to the parish almshouse, a mode of proceeding which is not only calculated to produce confusion, but even appears, as our Assistant Commissioner has pointed out, to have led to the misapplication of the school funds."

Have you kept those accounts separately?—Yes, so far as keeping them in separate books—one for the almshouse, and one for the schools.

8112. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—Is there any provision made, or facility given, for having the Catholic children who attend your schools instructed in religion?—None. No Catholic priest has ever applied for it. They are quite welcome to have the same facilities that I have as regards the Protestant children.

8113. Have you ever communicated with them on the subject?—I have often spoken of it, but there has never been any formal communication between me and any of the Catholic clergymen on the subject.

8114. LEON R. CHURCHILL.—Why do the Catholics attend the school?—Because the school has a very good name, and besides, we have the only infant school in the neighbourhood. That was one reason why we thought we were justified in expending the sum of £250, in 1858, in enlarging the old school.

8115. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—To whom is application made, by parents or guardians, for the admission of children to your schools?—They go into the school with their parents, and the mistress puts down their names. She asks each parent, "Is what religion is your child to be sent of?" and the entry is made according to the answer.

8116. Would the maintenance of a boarding school be of use in the parish?—I think it would be a utter waste of money. We were spending on seven or eight children what we are now educating the 174 for.

8117. These that would go as boarders would be a very poor class?—They would.

8118. In fact, they would be sent as to an orphan-ago!—Certainly. We felt for a long time that the establishment of the boarding school was a waste of money, and on the Minute Book there are frequent notices of resolutions, from 1854, to see if we could not get rid of the boarding school, and devote the funds for the education of the district.

8119. There is an Institution called Pleasant's Asylum, which was endowed under the will of Thomas Pleasant?—Yes, that was the gentleman who left St. Bride's the £6,000, and desired to be buried in the parish churchyard.

8120. Some of the children from St. Bride's parish were entitled under his will to places in the asylum?—Certainly; and not only to places, but to a priority. The words in the will are:—

"Bride's parish to have a preference, Peter's parish the next."

8121. The Rev. Mr. MacSorley was asked here, in reference to that Institution:—

"How many of the children now in the school are from St. Bride's parish?"

He replied:—

"I do not think there is one from St. Bride's at present. One left recently. I think all those in the institution at present are from St. Peter's parish."

He was also asked:—

"Have you acted on the direction in the will to give a preference first to St. Bride's, and then to St. Peter's?"

His answer was:—

"Since I have been a Governor I have carried it out literally, but it had not been much regarded before that, as there was great an objection from all parts of the kingdom."

How do you account for there being no girls from St. Bride's now in the Institution?—Because the Governors of Pleasant's School never told us when there was a vacancy, and for fifty years they have had, to my knowledge, only one girl in the school from St. Bride's parish, and she got in, not because she belonged to St. Bride's, but because there was influence made for her elsewhere. The only connection she had with St. Bride's was that she happened to be baptised there.

8122. What course do the Governors take with reference to the children in St. Bride's parish?—They leave us out. I consider they have defrauded St. Bride's parish of over £4,000 under Mr. Pleasant's will.

8123. Have you taken any step in the matter?—I did not know what step to take.

8124. If you desire to make any further statement on the subject, we will be glad to hear it?—Mr. MacSorley's evidence to you was that about £3,500 a year is spent on the fourteen children in the institution, which would be about £80 on each child, and, having regard to the terms of Mr. Pleasant's will, giving St. Bride's parish a preference, it would not be too much to say that we ought to have one child each year taking the benefit of the charity.

8125. Dr. CURRIE.—We may suppose there are numbers of your parishioners who would be glad to send themselves off to it?—To be sure there are.

8126. Are any of the Governors connected with St. Bride's parish?—Not in any way. Mr. MacSorley belongs to St. Peter's, which is the parish from which all the children are admitted.

8127. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—Has Mr. MacSorley ever communicated with you on the subject of the charity?—I have never got notice of any vacancy in the institution, and not the least communication, except in a very little way, has passed about it. I have said several times that they ought to give us some notice, and put in children belonging to St. Bride's, but it has never come to anything.

8128. What is approximately the relative population of the two parishes, St. Bride's and St. Peter's?—St. Peter's is an immense district, ours is a comparatively small, and very poor one. With reference to John Jones, of whom you were speaking, there was a mistake made by the former Commissioner. It was said that he gave certain property, and that that was the foundation of the Parochial School. First, there was no Parochial School in 1704; and secondly, there never was a man named John Jones, but there was a John Jones, who kept the most famous dancing school that existed up to that time in Leaden. He is mentioned in Vice Provost Bennett's History of the Early Life of Swift. The idea of confounding his school with the parish school is absurd.

8129. CHAIRMAN.—Was his a private school?—Altogether a private school, except in this way—the building, which was given by the incumbent and churchwardens of St. Bride's to Dr. John Jones to found a school, was formerly the Church of St. Michael of the Pole. It was alongside the only round tower in the city of Dublin, and was really celebrated, both architecturally, and from the position of its teacher, and the eminent men it turned out.

8130. Is there any other matter to which you wish to call attention?—There is one matter personal to myself. I am, as Incumbent of St. Bride's, one of the Governors of Mercer's school. You asked Dr. Morgan Jellett whether the Incumbent of St. Bride's had ever attended a meeting of the Governors, and he said he had never seen me at a meeting. That is quite true, but I wish to explain that my not attending the meetings was not from my intentionally neglecting the trust, but because the meetings were held at the palace of the Archbishop of Dublin. Very unpleasant relations arose between me and the Archbishop, but not at all in connection with the school, and those relations were so unpleasant, that speaking terms have ceased to exist between us, and then I felt I could not go to a man's house, although my opinion, that was not unspending terms with me. That, and that alone, was the cause of my not attending the meetings. I may say the Archbishop found fault with me in connection with the riots in my church, and with the disestablishment. I repented roughly, and for anything I said roughly I am sorry, but still the result is there. With reference to the management of the school, Dr. Morgan Jellett said it was going on handsomely when he got it. I was managing it, as junior of the first trustees, shortly before it came to Dr. Morgan Jellett's hands, therefore, if it was in a state of bankruptcy, it would have been my reproach. So far from being so, there was little, if anything, due by it when I left my hands. There was not a single account unpaid, and we had just spent £200 on the restoration of the place. About two years previous to that, however, the accounts had got into arrears, and £300 was due to tradesmen. We paid off that sum by a joint promissory note of the four trustees to the National Bank, and from that certificate never was a charge on the Institution. I also wish to call attention to the fact that the form of application for admission into the Institution requires a certificate that the child is the daughter of Protestant parents, but there is no such requirement from the beginning to the end of Madame Mercer's will.

8131. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—That is to say, it has been made virtually, by this requirement, a denominational Institution?—Yes, it was always meant, there is no doubt, to be, like the charity schools, a proselytising school. When the school was opened, and for several years afterwards, there were several Catholic children in it.

8133. Was it at that time, required that all the children were to be brought up as Protestants?—There was an agreement to that effect, amongst the trustees.

8134. There was no such requirement in the trust?—I do not think there was, or that they should be taught the Scriptures. Two of the Mercer's school girls were amongst those who obtained prizes under the Intermediate Education Act.

8135. The endowment was left upon trust:—

"That the trustees and their successors, or any three of them, shall apply and vest the rents of the said lands which shall be purchased, towards the clothing, tuition, and maintaining of twenty-five poor girls."

That is all it says. There is not a word about religion there, but when the original house was built in Rathcoole by the trustees, they put up a stone slab with the inscription, "For the Education of Poor Girls in the Protestant Religion."

8130. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—Do you take much part now in the management of that school?—I do not now take any part in it, for the reason I have explained. I did formerly take a very active part as one of the trustees.

8137. DR. HART.—In the report of the Commissioners of 1837 the endowment is stated to be, "For maintenance of as many Protestant children as residents of income will afford?"—That is a misapprehension. The words of the will are:—

"For and towards the clothing, darning, and maintaining and supporting of 50 poor girls, and for their instruction in reading, writing, and working, and qualifying them to be put out apprentices . . . and it is that they should be put out apprentices . . . shall recommend them (the girls) there in both lodging, clothing, diet, farming, and other incomes suitable to their state and condition."

Rev. James
Wilde, &c.

REV. JAMES WHITE, M.A., examined.

8138. CHAIRMAN.—You are the Incumbent of St. Thomas's parish?—I am.

8139. As such, you have the management of St. Thomas's schools?—Yes.

8140. The schools mentioned in the report of the Royal Commission, 1854-5, are, the parochial boarding and day schools for girls, the parochial school for infants, and the parochial school for boys. Are all these schools still in existence?—They are; but the day schools have no endowment whatsoever.

8141. Are they independent, or under the National Board?—They are independent. They are better known as Lady Hartburton's Schools. She left £1,100, which came to an end about the time I was appointed to the parish, and the schools have now to be supported entirely by voluntary aid.

8142. Was that legacy of £1,100 spent according to the provisions of the will?—Yes.

8143. In the report of the former Commissioners, this entry, in reference to the foundation of the parochial boarding school for girls, appears:—"Philip Ramsey, will, before 1748, £500 invested in building." Is the schoolhouse the same as it was at the date of that report?—Yes; it was built in 1825.

8144. Where is it situated?—In Lower Gloucester-street, at the corner of Lower Railroad street.

8145. The same report states as an endowment:—"John Cullen, will, dated 1st December, 1791, amount realised, £1,351 10s 11d, lent on mortgage at six per cent." Is that money still invested?—Yes, but our Treasurer, Mr. Booth, who knows more about it than I do, is away from town at present, and I am not sure whether we now get three or six per cent.

8146. Are there any other endowments?—We have Carr's bequest, and other legacies amounting to £1,013 17s. 5d, Government Stock.

8147. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—What is the date of these bequests?—The first, Cullen's, is dated in our books as 1st December, 1791; I do not know the dates of the others.

8148. They are ancient bequests?—Yes.

8149. CHAIRMAN.—Are there any other endowments?—There is a house in Upper Mecklenburgh-street, which brings in about £28 a year.

8150. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—How did that house become the property of the school?—I am not aware; I found it there when I came to the parish.

8151. Is it held in fee-simple?—Yes; I think so.

8152. What is the total income derived from endowments?—About £102 a year, but of course we make up more by subscriptions, collections, and charity sermons.

8153. How many years have you had this school under your management?—I have only been in the parish since 1872.

8154. Has any of the capital stock been sold out in your time?—None.

8155. Was any sold out before your time?—I do not know.

8156. CHAIRMAN.—What do you realize from subscriptions, collections, and charity sermons?—We realize about £350 per annum altogether.

8157. Is the school still a boarding school?—Yes.

8158. What number of scholars have you in?—Eleven at present. Twelve is about the number we try to keep up; but one died the other day.

8159. What payments do they make?—They are nearly all free. We are trying to increase the number by admitting some for payment.

8160. From what class do the pupils come?—The poorer class.

8161. How are they selected?—By the Board of Governors.

8162. Who are the Governors?—The Incumbent and the two churchwardens are the Governors and trustees.

8163. Have they to account to the vestry of the parish?—No; a report is printed every year, and put up in the vestry or church porch, where everyone can see it.

8164. Is the boarding school entirely separate from the day schools, or are they all held in the same building?—The orphan school is in the building where the day school is held.

8165. Are there any special qualifications for admission—must both parents be dead?—One parent must be dead. The applicants must be parishioners, and apply to the Incumbent and churchwardens, who constitute the Board, for admission.

8166. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—How often does your Board meet?—I dare say we meet eight times a year.

8167. CHAIRMAN.—I suppose, if there is a vacancy, you meet to fill it up?—Yes.

8168. How many scholars have you in the day school?—Between 200 and 300.

8170. LORD JERVIS PRINCEBISHOP.—You refer now only to the day schools?—Certainly.

8171. CHAIRMAN.—What day schools are there?—There is a mixed school for boys and girls, and a very good infants' school, at which the attendance is sometimes over 100.

8172. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—Have the day school and infants' school any endowment?—No endowment whatsoever.

8173. How are they kept up?—By voluntary contributions from the parishioners, and the proceeds of charity sermons.

8174. Do you keep minutes of your meetings?—We keep minutes of our meetings in connexion with the female orphan school, but none as to the day schools. In our minute book you will find a blank from 1830 until the time of my appointment, the minutes for which period I could never find, but from the time I took up the schools the minutes have been correctly written up.

8175. LORD JERVIS PRINCEBISHOP.—Do I understand you, that the Incumbent and churchwardens of the parish are the authorities named in the will under which the boarding school is held?—Yes, I conclude so, but I never saw the will.

8176. In whose names are the funds invested?—In the names of the Minister and churchwardens of the parish of St. Thomas.

8177. Have you, as Incumbent, been drawing the dividends, or have the churchwardens, or are they paid indifferently to either?—The treasurer draws them. Some of the moneys were in Dr. Stanford's name, and some in Mr. Scott's name; but we have recently got the names altered.

8178. Dr. Stanford was a former Incumbent of the parish?—He was.

8179. Who was Mr. Scott?—He was formerly a churchwarden.

8180. Have the funds been transferred to yourself and the two churchwardens by name, or to the incumbent and churchwardens by title?—By title.

8181. Does the Bank of Ireland pay the dividends either to the Incumbent or to one of the churchwardens?—Yes.

8182. What evidence is required at the bank, before they would pay a person, as being a churchwarden of St. Thomas's parish?—No evidence at all; I never heard of any difficulty about it.

8183. You are aware that the churchwardens are not appointed now as they were before 1857?—Yes, they are now appointed at the Easter Vestry.

8184. Who are qualified to attend that vestry?—Only the registered vestrymen.

8185. Who keeps the register?—The secretary to the select vestry. I may mention that some of our funds were in individual names. Mr. Booth has been trying to rectify this, and to have all the funds properly transferred to the Minister and churchwardens.

8186. Do you want to have them transferred into the name of the Incumbent and churchwardens of St. Thomas's, or into the names of the Rev. Mr. White and the churchwardens by name?—Into the names of "The Incumbent and churchwardens for the time being."

8187. Will the bank allow that?—Yes.

8188. The bank has in fact dealt with the Incumbent and churchwardens, under the existing system, for the past ten years, as being a corporation?—Yes.

8189. And no inconvenience has arisen therefrom?—That is so.

8190. Is the charity left entirely to the management of the three persons you have mentioned?—It is; I think myself that the arrangement is a very bad one, because the churchwardens change every year, and just as a man comes to know the working of the school he is changed, and a new churchwarden comes in who knows nothing about it. I would prefer that we should have a regular board.

8191. What provision is made for keeping up the incumbency?—My successor will be better off than myself. They have provided £300 a year under the Income Tax scheme for him, and that sum will be supplemented by the parish.

8192. Has your parish been improving, or is it going back?—It has been greatly improved.

8193. LEAD R. CHURCHILL.—You have stated that the only managers of this charity school are yourself and the churchwardens. I find that at some of the meetings the name of Rev. Mr. Brandon is recorded as being present, who was he?—He was my curate.

8194. Had he any right to attend the meetings?—That is doubtful. The curate is put down in our reports as one of the trustees; but I do not think that he is really so. He, however, naturally attends.

8195. The minutes of the 27th of March, 1876, record that Mr. Brandon took the chair?—Yes.

8196. I find it recorded that, at some of the meetings, Mr. Barton Booth was present?—He is treasurer.

8197. Does he not sit as a governor?—No.

8198. Does he vote at the election of pupils?—No; he could not vote.

8199. In the minutes of a meeting held in 1875 I find this entry—

"At an adjourned meeting held this day, at St. Thomas's, it was resolved that Mary Anne Austin be elected to the school, an annual subscription of £10 to be contributed for her."

Yes, a lady who was anxious for her admission undertook to pay that sum.

8200. LEAD JESSIE FERGUSON.—You facilitate the admission of a pupil, if able to pay part of her own expenses?—Yes.

8201. The minutes show that the Rev. Mr. Brandon took a prominent part at a meeting on the 28th May, 1876. He objected to the election of Sarah Higgins, on whose account a sum of £10 had been collected, and offered to the funds of the school?—That matter was all settled at the following meeting. Mr. Brandon is now in India.

8202. Does your present curate take part in the meetings?—Yes.

8203. Does he vote?—Yes. I believe that, legally, he is not entitled to vote, but I think he ought to be.

8204. Have you, from the parish of St. Thomas, a large number of applications for vacancies in the boarding school?—Indeed we have. I think, however, that the Protestant Orphan Society interferes with us as a good deal; but we are always able to keep up twelve in the school.

8205. LEAD R. CHURCHILL.—I find that on the 27th February, 1878, it was resolved—

"That with a view of increasing the income of the school, the sums now granted of its funds in Government securities be invested, when opportunity offers, in such security or securities as the trustees are authorized to lend upon, provided the interest received is more than the present security produces."

Have you acted upon that resolution?—No.

8206. CHAIRMAN.—The returns, which have been furnished to us by the school-teacher, state that there are thirty-nine boys and sixty girls attending the day school. How is it there are so many more girls than boys?—I think the boys make more use of the National school, Marlborough-street, which is in St. Thomas's parish.

8207. Why should the boys go there and not the girls?—I do not know.

8208. Do you think the boys get better instruction in the National school?—They do. My school has no master now, but only a mistress. The boys that come to my school are very young.

8209. In fact, although not classed with the infants, they might be so?—Indeed they might.

8210. I suppose you have not funds, at present, sufficient to enable you to give a salary to a master?—No, we have not. There are circumstances, connected with the parish, which render it a mistake the more suitable teacher for our school.

8211. Do the children pay anything in the day schools?—They pay one penny, and twopenny, a week, and some of them pay more.

8212. LEAD JESSIE FERGUSON.—You said that the Protestant Orphan Society interfered with you a good deal. What instance of their taking children from St. Thomas's parish?—They have numbers of our children on their lists.

8213. Not in boarding schools, though?—No. Perhaps it is imagination of my own; but it seemed to me that the office being in our parish they could easily go there.

8214. Who are Rev. Mr. Hayes and Mr. Morrow?—Mr. Hayes is my curate and Mr. Morrow is a churchwarden.

8215. Your minute book records as follows:—

"27th March, 1878.—It was proposed by the Rev. W. A. Hayes, seconded by Mr. Morrow, and passed, that Mr. Booth take such notes and proceedings as may be necessary to have voted in the names of the Rector, Curate and Churchwardens for the time being of St. Thomas's Parish all the funds and property of that school for the benefit of the school."

What does that minute mean?—That is what I mentioned that we were trying to have all the funds properly invested so that there may be no confusion.

8216. That resolution was to invest them all in the names of the rector, curate, and churchwardens?—Yes.

8217. LEAD R. CHURCHILL.—Has there been anything done upon that resolution?—Something has been done, but I do not think there has been anything completed as yet.

8218. LEAD JESSIE FERGUSON.—Do you think it would be of importance to a charity such as yours, if there was any arrangement by which a permanent home could be supplied for the testament, supposing there could be no legal difficulty in bequeathing the Minister and churchwardens as they are—I do not know.

8215. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—If the rector and churchwardens thought it necessary, do you think it is in their power to sell out some of the capital of the charity?—I suppose it would be.

8220. Do you think it would be in their power to sell the house in Mecklenburgh-street?—Yes; I should think so.

8221. CHURCHILL.—You give religious instruction yourself?—Yes, my curate and I arrange that between us meet regularly.

8222. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—Are the schools quite exclusive?—We have no Roman Catholic pupils.

8223. CHURCHILL.—Have you Protestant dissenters attending there?—We have.

8224. Do they all receive religious instruction together?—Yes, except at catechism time, and then there is a distinction. I may add that the Roman Catholics, as a rule, go to Marlborough-street school, and, I think, always will.

Rev. James H.
Morgan, &c.

REV. JAMES H. MORGAN, D.D., CONTINUED.

8225. CHAIRMAN.—You are the incumbent of St. Mary's parish, Delfin?—I am. I was appointed in 1865, on the death of the Rev. Mr. Abbott.

8226. You have the management of the schools of the parish?—Yes, in conjunction with the Board of Management.

8227. Of whom does that Board consist?—Up to the time of the disestablishment of the Church, it consisted of the Minister and churchwardens and certain other governors. It was then thought desirable that the management of all charitable matters should be placed in the hands of the select vestry; and, without disposing the governors, the select vestry were by resolution invited to be united with the governors who were then in existence, and it was arranged that as the existing governors should die, or cease to reside in the parish, the vacancies among the governors should not be filled up, and that ultimately the select vestry should, with the incumbent, have the entire management.

8228. What funds have you for the endowment of the school?—We have the residue of former bequests, which are invested in New 3 per cent. Government Stock, and which produce about £75 a year, and we have two houses, the profit rents of which amount to about £25 a year, making a total income of about £100 a year at present.

8229. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—To what do you refer when you use the word "residue"?—A considerable sum of money was given by Richard Clave.

8230. CHAIRMAN.—The report of the last Commission mentions £4,000?—That was a portion only. He gave £20,000, by his will, to the rector and two curates of the parish of St. Mary in trunk, and directed them to dispose of it for the purpose of education. They gave £1,600 to St. Nicholas' parish, and similar sums to various other parishes to repair and build school-houses, and reserved for St. Mary's a residue to this amount. At present all the funds of the parish are invested in various modes; for instance, some are invested in the names of "the minister and churchwardens," some in the name of "Mary's parish," and some of that kind. The bequest of £4,000 includes £2,000 to the Widows' Almshouse. There is £280 in collateral security. At one time that we wanted money we were desirous to borrow, as we did not like to sell out. So we borrowed on collateral security, and they have £250 over and above what we now receive. I hope the schools may be placed under the National Board, so we would then be able, in time, to repay that amount.

8231. In 1837 there were in St. Mary's parish, a boarding school for boys, another for girls, and three day schools for boys, girls, and infants.—The girls' boarding school was given up in Mr. Abbott's time, and there was purchased a very large house in Lower Donalick-street, which I was told had been the residence of one of the Speakers of the Irish House of Commons. It is capable of accommodating the boys', girls', and infants' schools. There had been two school-houses in the parish originally, and Mr. Abbott was impressed with a desire of having all united, and so the present house was purchased. The two former school-houses were let, and produce profit rents amounting to £50 per annum, being £15 from the one, and £40 from the other. The whole matter is fully detailed in our minute book. Subsequently to the purchase of the present school-house, we purchased the ground-plot to which it was subject, so that it is now held for ever without being subject to any rent. The opinion of Mr. John Edward Walsh, then an eminent lawyer, and afterwards Master of the Rolls, was taken with regard to the right to expend the money for such purpose.

8232. LORD JERVIS FREEBOROUGH.—It appears from your books that the amount of stock sold out, for the purchase of the house was £1,661, and the ground-plot, £15 a year, was afterwards purchased?—That is so. Mr. Abbott contemplated himself at the time upon having made what he thought was a very good bargain; however, the expense of the large house have counterbalanced the advantages, and it has been rather a loss to us on the whole.

8233. Have you any boarders there?—We have had up to this year. Our last boarder obtained one of the exhibitions of the Incorporated Society, which was open to public competition, and we have none at present. The Protestant Orphan Society, and the Protestant Orphan Refuge for children of mixed marriages, provide for all destitute cases, and the school had really become only an accommodation to people who were able to pay something, which was scarcely fair.

8234. Is it fair to other parishes that St. Mary's should get all its expenses on those societies?—All the parishes of Ireland have the same advantage.

8235. Do I understand you to say that those two societies are able to provide for all?—There are 400 in the Orphan Society, and I have had under my own care 217 in the Orphan Refuge, in which there are at present 117 orphans.

8237. Your books refer to a sum of £2,410 1s 4d. What is that?—That is Dancer's Fund, which produces £73 a year. We attribute that, under the will of Michael Dancer, to all who are married householders. It has nothing whatever to do with the schools. You will also see there reference to two bequests, one for apprenticing children, which goes to the schools, the other for giving marriage portions to young people. In cases in which both husband and wife have been baptised and are married in the parish, an allowance of £21 from this fund is made on the occasion of their marriage, the payment of which is distributed over three years.

8238. How is that fund dealt with now?—It has only once been used during my incumbency.

8239. What then has been done with the money?—It has been appropriated by the churchwardens for giving coats to the widows, when there have been no regular applicants.

8240. The money is stated to be invested in the profit of "Mary's Parish." Who draws the dividends?—I do, every half year.

8241 Is any other person recognised at the bank?—If a churchwarden applied there, they would require that he should be identified by some person present when he was elected as churchwarden.

8242 Would they recognise his election at the Rector Vestry?—Yes, certainly.

8244 What provision is made in Mary's parish for keeping up the incumbency?—No provision for that purpose exists at present. We joined the diocesan scheme, and for two years kept up the subscriptions, but we found we were not able to do so any longer. My only hope is that by continued efforts we may be able to create some fund. The merchants and traders who have their houses of business in the parish, almost all live in the country, and, consequently, say they have to support the country churches where they worship, and those who are resident in the parish go to other churches. They have the Bethesda, and the chapel of the lying-in hospital.

8245 Dr. HARR.—Supposing there be no provision made for a successor to you in the incumbency, what will become of the funds invested in the names of the Minister and churchwardens?—It is not at all likely that such a contingency will arise, but if it should occur, that would be, of course, a legal question, which I could not answer.

8246 Lord Justice FRYGEMAN.—Have there been any sales of capital since the purchase of the house?—Yes, twice, first in 1866, and then in 1871. The minutes contain the following records:—

"May, 1866. Resolved—That as the balance against the school of the part of the treasurer was increasing, being now nearly £600, it is recommended that stock to that amount be sold."

And in June, 1871:—

"Whereas, it appears that a debt of £200 is due to the trustees, the Rector and Churchwardens to be empowered to borrow, on collateral security of Stock, the sum of £200, in the Bank of Ireland."

8247 Did the bank lend that money?—Yes.

8248 Have you paid interest on it since?—They are paying £200 on collateral security.

8249 The bank have charged interest on the advance?—Yes; according to the variation of the rate. The bank sends us a statement every half year. We deem, if possible, to replace the money without selling our Stock.

8250 Dr. HARR.—That debt is still outstanding?—It is.

8251 Lord R. CHURCHILL.—Has any of it been repaid?—No.

8252 What did the excess in the expenditure arise from?—Primarily from the expense of the boarding-school.

8253 Lord Justice FRYGEMAN.—Has there been any further sale or mortgage of capital?—Yes, the following notice appears upon our minute book at the beginning of November, 1873:—

"A special meeting of the Rector Vestry and of the School Board, will be held on Thursday next, the 4th inst., at 10.30 a.m., to order the sale of as much Stock as is necessary for present demands."

In accordance with that notice, a special meeting, to which all the members were summoned, was held on the 4th November. I will read the minutes of that meeting:—

"The Hon. Secretary read the notice, concerning special meeting of the Governors, for the sale of Stock, in conformity with the resolution. Ordered—that the Churchwardens do investigate the outstanding accounts, and sell out so much Stock as is necessary to pay the school debts, and report to next meeting. Mr. Moffat be ordered to press Mr. Appleyard for immediate settlement. The election of schoolmistress left to the next meeting and adjourned."

8254 What was the amount then sold out?—£500.

8255 Then, it appears that in the last eight and a half years, there has been £1,100 of capital applied to the payment of current expenses?—Yes.

8256 Lord R. CHURCHILL.—What amount of capital does that leave remaining?—About £3,500.

8257 Have your expenses, since the last sale of capital, been less than your income?—They have. We are not exceeding our income now.

8258 But you have no teachers now?—We have not, but we have a good staff of teachers, and the school has been very successful as a day school.

8259 Dr. HARR.—The stock which was sold out to pay debts did not pay the debt due to the bank?—No, they have £200 to pay themselves.

8260 But you lost two per cent every year on that money?—Yes; we do.

8261 Lord Justice FRYGEMAN.—Did you ever take any legal advice, as to whether you had power to make these sales?—Yes; Mr. Walsh's.

8262 Was not that as to the purchase of the house?—It was.

8263 Did you consult him as to the selling out of Stock to pay debts?—We were only following the example of the incumbent who preceded me.

8264 Dr. HARR.—Did Mr. Walsh give any opinion as to the power of selling out Stock for any other purpose, except the purchase of the house?—I do not know. The entry in the minute book, which is in Mr. Moffat's handwriting, is:—

"The Rev. R. L. Abbott, rector, and W. H. Moffat, Esq., trustees of the school, having been authorised by the governors to purchase, in the Leeds Estates Court, the ten-shilling in the pound notes of these schools, purchased same, and received from that Court the conveyance of 14th May, 1863, on which deed they endorsed and signed the following declaration of trust, viz.—"The within mentioned ten-shilling note was purchased for the use of the parish of Saint Mary's, Dublin, and was above the parish school-house from rent, and we hereby declare that we hold same in trust for such purposes, and as trustees for the benefit of the said parish, and its parochial school. Signed, R. L. Abbott, rector of St. Mary's parish, Dublin; W. H. Moffat. Witness present, J. William Murphy." The rector and governors being afterwards anxious to obtain a high legal opinion as to the validity of the above declaration, or as to the use of this parish the above-mentioned note, requested R. A. T. Macvey, Esq., to take the opinion of John Edward Walsh, Esq., &c., to whom he submitted the draft of a deed of declaration of trust to settle and approve of—upon which Mr. Walsh has written the following opinion, stating that he considers the declaration of trust already created by the Rev. R. L. Abbott, and W. H. Moffat, Esq., to be quite sufficient."

8265 Lord Justice FRYGEMAN.—That opinion was as to whether the declaration of trust was sufficient or not?—So it appears.

8266 CHURCHMAN.—Have both the boys' and girls' boarding schools been given up?—The girls' boarding school was given up long before my time. There has been no formal and absolute giving up of the boys' boarding school, but the last pupil left it this year, and no others have been admitted.

8267 Lord Justice FRYGEMAN.—How is the house now occupied?—The whole house is occupied just as it was before for the day school, but one of the dormitories has been made into apartments for the schoolmistresses. We have a day school for boys, another for girls, and a third for infants.

8268 Have you an annual session for the schools?—Yes.

8269 Lord R. CHURCHILL.—Have you a master as well as a mistress?—Yes; and two schoolmistresses in the infants' school. I was anxious to have the children put separately, from the infants' school, into the girls' and boys' schools, and finding that little ones of nine or ten were not able to read, I employed an additional schoolmistress to teach them, as unless children are early taught to read, they have little time to receive any education whatever, since they are frequently taken away from school at an early age.

8276. Who respects the schools?—The Rev. Hugh Hamilton inspects annually, and places St. Mary's school, which is not under any Board, at the top of the list of all the schools that are not connected with the Church Education Society.

8271. LOAN JUSTICE FITZGERARD.—Your accounts for the year ending 31st March, 1877, commence with a balance overdrawn of £168 15s. 1d. The payments during the year consist of the salaries of the masters and mistresses, and the wages of the servants, which are charged for fifteen manna, instead of the year; and a coal bill for £38 12s. 6d., which had been accruing from 1872 to 1876, and at the end of the year, there was a balance to credit of £59 0s. 6d. The subscriptions received during the year, including one of £21, which appears every year from a constant benefactor, were £82 14s.; there was a bequest of £85 from Mr. Littlehale, £13 10s. 4d., the result of a charity sermon, and, including the proceeds of £500 Stock sold out, the whole of the receipts amounted to £583 0s. 6d. 1.—Our accounts for any one year would not give accurately our expenditure for the year; as there are always some accounts left unpaid, which come into the following year, for instance, a payment to Tuckers for coal, which was the accumulation of several years, comes in the account you have been reading from.

8272. In your printed account for the year ending 31st March, 1878, the only balance I can find is £35 6s., balance to credit at the foot of the account; but the balance from the previous year of £59 0s. 6d. does not appear.—I am quite sure Mr. Wright and Mr. McClann are very accurate men at figures. The tot at foot of the account in what it ought to have been with the £59 0s. 6d. included. The omission of the item is only a printer's error.

8274. The account for the year ending 31st March, 1879, begins with a sum of £35 6s. in hand, and ended with a sum of £3 7s. 1d. overdrawn. The entire amount of money accounted for in that year was £330 11s. 6d., which shows that the total income was rather under £300, and that you had spent in that year about £28 more than the actual income!—There is a sum of £10 6s. 8d. in the Court of Chancery—the dividend on Oswald's legacy—which had not been drawn, as I was absent in the country, and Mr. Appleyard owes some money for the rent of a house of which he was the tenant. Mr. Mallett is endeavoring to obtain it from him, by legal process.

8276. There was a great falling off in subscriptions last year—when they amounted only to £71 17s. To what do you attribute the deficiency?—To the general difficulty of getting money from every quarter at present; and we have had great difficulty, which several societies have experienced, in getting a collector to set for as. The work of collection is very difficult. A man has to call, perhaps, a dozen times for a subscription of 5s., and he only gets five per cent. on the amount of his collection. You cannot get a man to do it for that.

8277. The charity sermon preached in St. Mary's Church in 1877 produced £13 10s. 4d.; in 1878 the amount was £7; and in 1879, £8 7s. 8d. Was that all that could be collected at a charity sermon?—Yes.

8278. LOAN R. CROUCHILL.—I suppose it depends on the preacher a good deal?—No; the Archbishop was the preacher on the last occasion.

8279. LOAN JUSTICE FITZGERARD.—It has been stated to us that in a country church £31 was collected at a charity sermon!—A country church is different. I have gone to a country church, and seen there my own parishioners, who out there give liberally.

8280. Do you think that the subscriptions will be likely to keep up when the borders are disestablished?—I think they will; and if the schools were placed under the National Board I think they would be still more successful, we would be able to add additional instruction, and have superior schools. People have an idea that the National schoolmaster is the best teacher—that is, the trained schoolmaster of the National Board.

8281. LOAN R. CROUCHILL.—How many pupils have you in your school?—I think fifty on the roll of the boys' school, and thirty on that of the girls'. Our school master at the beginning of the year was one of the best in Ireland, but he was successful in obtaining the mastership of the Endowed school at Westend (Dun St. Michael), and we have been obliged to look out for another person. I find that wherever there is a change of schoolmaster or schoolmistress it is always a difficult thing to retain the children.

8282. LOAN JUSTICE FITZGERARD.—Do I understand that, now that the boarding school has been discontinued, all you have now left in the boys' school, and thirty in the girls'?—There are eighty children in the infants' school, making about 160 in all.

8283. Your average expenditure is from £150 to £160 a year, and you have a free house!—Yes.

8284. In St. Thomas's parish we found there were 160 infants as against 80, 50 girls as against 30, 30 boys as against 50, and, moreover, 12 boarders, while you have none, and their expenditure upon the account, as given to me, amounts only to £250 a year. Can you explain how it is that the expenditure on St. Mary's school is so high?—It is very expensive keeping up the very large house we have. I look upon the house as having been a ruinous matter. Moreover, in St. Thomas's parish there is only one infant-school mistress, while I have two, and with good results. In that parish, also, there is no master, but only a mistress for a mixed school, while I had, up to this year, a schoolmaster, who, for success in his pupils for five years in succession, obtained first place among Dublin schoolmasters.

8285. Your accounts show an expenditure for building and repairs in 1877, of £37 15s. 3d., and in 1878, of £42 15s. 8d., and in 1879, of £33 6s. 4d., or on an average about £30 a year!—Yes; and coal and gas for such a house run away with a great deal of money.

8286. Do you consider the King's Inns street building a more suitable one?—I never had any experience of it. It was given up as a school before my time.

8287. Do you think that it would be an advantage if you had some means of vesting the funds for the institution in a permanent and legal mode?—I think that it would. At present they are secure enough, but there is some confusion as to the portions that are for two different objects. It would be better if the amount for each separate purpose were separately vested, if it could be done.

8288. Is income tax deducted from your dividends?—They stop income tax only after there has been any selling out, until fresh application is made, and then there is no further income tax stopped. We get back everything that is deducted from us.

[Adjourned to next day, at 11, a.m.]

TWENTY-SECOND DAY—WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 26, 1879; 11 O'CLOCK, A.M. Sept. 24, 1879.

At the Commissioners' Office, Foul Courts, Dublin.

Presents—The EARL OF ROSSE, Chairman, LORD RANDOLPH CHURCHILL, M.P.; LORD JUSTICE FITZGERSON, RICHARD O'BRAUGHNEY, Esq., M.P.; ANDREW SEARLE HART, Esq., LL.D.; and ARTHUR HILL CURRIE, Esq., LL.D.; with JAMES CROOK MCKENNEY, Esq., LL.D., Secretary.

Mr. JAMES LENOX NAPIER, B.A., J.P., examined.

Mr. James L. Napier, B.A., J.P.

8280 CHAIRMAN.—What is your connection with the Odiako schools?—I have been a trustee since my father's death.

8281 Of what do the funds at present consist?—Of dividends, received twice a year, on money left by a son of the name of Odiako. The money stands in Government Stock in England.

8282 Is there any land attached to the school?—About twelve or thirteen acres, which is used as a farm, and which just pays its way. Sometimes there is a profit of £15 a year, and sometimes it has been as high as £35.

8283 Is that land nearly rented, as is it part of the property of the school?—It is held under a lease for lives.

8284 What is the annual income of the school?—It is about £783 a year.

8285 Is that the only source of income?—Yes, except that we have begun to charge very small fees. The school was a free school until within the last two years, when we thought the salaries of the masters were insufficient, and we wished to raise them; therefore, we tried a system of fees, which has answered very well.

8286 What masters are employed?—A head master, an assistant master, and monitors. We have so many pupils in the schools that we have to exceed a little in adding on monitors, and we expand the fees in paying those monitors. The average daily attendance last year was 320 children, and the average number on the roll was 505.

8287 LORD R. CHURCHILL.—Do you give there purely a primary education?—No; some are more advanced.

8288 LORD JUSTICE FITZGERSON.—There are four schools—one for boys, one for girls, one for infants, and one for industrial training in agriculture?—The industrial school is merely incidental in the schools. We have no resident pupils; and my own idea is that the agricultural school is unnecessary. The second master manages the farm, but the boys learn very little agriculture.

8289 The clergy is managed under a scheme of the Court of Chancery, settled in 1857?—Yes.

8290 There are five trustees; the first of whom is Her Majesty's Chief Secretary for Ireland, for the time being?—Yes.

8291 How long have you yourself been a trustee?—About ten years.

8292 How the Chief Secretary, during that time, takes any part in the management of the schools?—I have occasionally had a correspondence, on matters relating to the schools, with Sir Michael Hicks-Beach, when he was Chief Secretary, but that is all.

8293 Has he attended any meeting?—No; I do not think the Chief Secretary ever attended.

8294 Would your evidence be that the ex-officio trustee has done nothing?—Well, he has never done anything. You may observe that under the scheme there are two Roman Catholic trustees, and two Protestant trustees, and I think the Chief Secretary was appointed as a sort of referee between them, in case any difference arose.

8295 The remaining four trustees are resident in the neighbourhood, being the Protestant rector of Odiako for the time being; the Roman Catholic parish priest of Odiako, for the time being; a Protestant layman, and a Roman Catholic layman?—Exactly.

8296 Who are the four present resident trustees?—Mr. Allen, the parish priest, Mr. Druden, the rector, Sir Walter Nugent, as a Roman Catholic layman, and myself, as a Protestant layman.

8297 Do all four take part in the management?—Sir Walter Nugent has not attended very regularly.

8298 How long in France he attended a meeting?—He was at a meeting last Christmas twelvemonth.

8299 Does the Protestant rector attend?—Yes, always.

8300 And the Roman Catholic parish priest?—Yes.

8301 The scheme provides that two chaplains shall be appointed by the trustees. Who are the two chaplains at present?—The Protestant rector and the Catholic curate.

8302 The rector, being himself a trustee, is also chaplain?—Yes.

8303 And appointed by himself?—Yes.

8304 The provision in the scheme is—

"The trustees shall appoint as chaplains the Protestant curate, (if any) of the parish of Odiako, and the Roman Catholic curate (if any) of the same, or such other competent clergymen, being respectively Protestant and Roman Catholic, as they shall think fit."

Did you consult the Chief Secretary on the occasion of appointing the incumbent, as chaplain?—He has been rector for many years, and there is no curate.

8306 The provision as to your trustees is—

"When and so often as one of them (the four) shall die or resign, or refuse or decline to act, or shall omit or neglect to act, for the space of one whole year, or become incapable to act, or be non-resident within twenty miles of the schools, as Odiako aforesaid for one year each of which circumstances shall you, your trustee office."

Does not that affect Sir Walter Nugent?—He has acted, inasmuch as he has signed the accounts.

8307 But he has not attended a meeting?—He has not attended a meeting since Christmas twelvemonth.

8308 Do you keep a minute book?—Yes, but I forgot to bring it here with me.

8309 The scheme further provides in case of a vacancy that—

"The remaining trustees, or some of them, for the time being, shall make application by summons before the judges to whose court this cause and matter may be attached, for an order for the appointment of a new Protestant lay trustee, or a new Roman Catholic lay trustee, as the case may be; and on such appointment being made the freehold church property shall be vested in the two lay trustees for the time being, in such manner as the said judges may in that behalf direct; provided always, that in case the said Chief Secretary shall not attend at any meeting of the said trustees, and there shall be no equality of votes upon any question at any such meeting, a copy of the proceedings at such meeting shall be forwarded to the said Chief Secretary, and he shall have power to vote upon such questions, by writing, to be sent to the said trustees, and such vote shall be valid as if it had been given and cast at such meeting."

That appears to have contemplated that the acting of the other four trustees should be by attending meetings. You do not, however, appear to have acted upon that construction?—Sir Walter Nugent was to have attended last Christmas, but he did not come. We are always anxious to avoid the necessity of appointing a new trustee, as doing so always costs about £35 out of the trust money.

Sept 26, 1893.
Mr. James L.
Naper, Esq., &c.

8312. LEAD R. CHURCHILL—Is Sir Walter Nugent the principal resident Catholic landlord?—He is, but he lives a long way off. He has to drive sixteen miles to our meetings. It would be very difficult to get a Roman Catholic teacher in the neighbourhood.

8313. LEAD JUSTICE FITZGERALD—Are your accounts lodged annually?—They are.

8314. Have you any fixed times for meeting?—We meet four times a year, at the school, to pay our accounts.

8315. The tenth clause of the scheme provides that:—

"The trustees shall provide the necessary house or houses, for the purpose of conducting an agricultural school, where the boys may receive industrial training at the discretion of the trustees, and the same shall be put in charge of the school master, who shall reside thereon."

What house and land have you?—There is a very good house. It is the school-house, in which the head master and mistress live; and then there is the school dairy, and a small farm attached to it, on which the second master lives.

8316. LEAD R. CHURCHILL—What quantity of land is there?—Thirteen acres.

8317. What course of agricultural teaching is pursued?—The pupils do nothing except from book in the school. They can look at the farm if they like, but I fancy very few of them do so.

8318. LEAD JUSTICE FITZGERALD—You do not consider that it has been a success?—I do not myself think that it is of the slightest use. The master grows very good crops, but it would be much better if his salary were given to two assistants—an assistant in the girls' school, in which we are defective, and an assistant at £80 in the boys' school, and give up the farm.

8319. Is it all under tillage?—Yes. The cattle are fed indoors on fested grass and mangolds grown on the farm.

8320. What staff has he?—He has to employ men to work the farm.

8321. Do not the boys work on the farm?—They hardly ever do so.

8322. LEAD R. CHURCHILL—What is the expense of the agricultural school to the charity?—It pays its way.

8323. LEAD JUSTICE FITZGERALD—Is the land rent free?—No; but it is let below its value. They have a lease from me, of the thirteen acres and a house, at £55 15s. 6d. a year, and I could get certainly £4 an acre, as the land adjoins the town of Oldcastle.

8324. LEAD R. CHURCHILL—If the agricultural school were discontinued, so it pays its way, how would the charity be benefited?—The master of the agricultural school is paid £80 a year, and gets fuel, which is worth £10 a year more, out of the funds of the charity, and if that money were divided between two teachers, one in the girls' school and one in the boys' school, they would be more efficient.

8325. LEAD JUSTICE FITZGERALD—Then, when you said the farm paid its way, you did not charge the £80 a year against it?—No.

8326. LEAD R. CHURCHILL—How many pupils attend the agricultural school?—There is an agricultural class in the school which they attend.

8327. Do all the pupils of the school pass through it?—Most of them do. It is the head division of the school.

8328. LEAD JUSTICE FITZGERALD—You think the pupils would get the same amount of agricultural training they have now, without working the farm?—Exactly.

8329. The scheme provides:—

"There shall be a second master, who will be the director of the agricultural school, with an annual salary not exceeding £80, with apartments in the agricultural establishment, and an allowance of £10 a pair for coal and candles."

And the 15th clause is:—

"No master or mistress shall be allowed to take any boarder; but the trustees may, if they think fit, allow any pupil to reside in the said agricultural establishment, on such terms as they shall in any special case think fit to authorize."

Have you any resident pupil?—No.

8330. Have you ever had any?—Not in my time.

8331. Had you ever received any application for admission as such?—No.

8332. You have recently arranged to establish the payment of fees, what fees have you sought to charge?—A great many of the children who attend this school are labourers' children; in fact, there is no National school in Oldcastle. Before the National schools were started, this was arranged on very much the same principle. We have three or four classes, the children of labourers and petty tradesmen are in the altogether, the children of respectable people, and farmers holding less than twenty acres, are charged for their books; those above that pay for books, and also pay a small fee, the exact amount of which I do not recollect.

8333. The provision in the scheme is this:—

"Unless in each special case as the trustees shall by any general regulation or special permission, from time to time, direct, every scholar who attends any of the schools, except the infant school, shall pay two pence a week."

Have they been charged that amount?—No. When the school was first started they were never charged at all.

8334. Then the scheme adopted in 1857 has not been followed?—Not in respect of fees.

8335. The scheme also provides:—

"And every scholar who attends the infant school shall pay one halfpenny per week, and such payments shall be made in advance, but the amount so paid shall be held separate from the funds of the school, and shall be applied in rewards to scholars for general progress, regularity of attendance, and good conduct, and in case the said amount shall not, in the judgment of the trustees, be sufficient for that purpose, they shall be at liberty to expend a sum not exceeding £35 each year for the like purpose."

Is that carried out?—We always give the £35, but have not collected the fees.

8336. Why were not the fees collected?—The amount, two pence a week for farmers and persons of that position, does not appear large?—It was never done when the school was started, and they were able to carry it on without charging fees.

8337. The scheme also says:—

"And the said rewards shall be appropriated, and distributed in books or otherwise (but not in money), by the inspector at each half-yearly examination."

Do you hold half-yearly examinations?—We do.

8338. The scheme further provides:—

"An inspector shall be appointed by the trustees in the month of January in each year, and shall receive an annual salary, not exceeding £80, which shall include travelling expenses, and he shall inspect all the schools once, or, at least, in every three months, without giving any previous notice thereof, and shall also make a thorough and public inspection of the schools, and examination of the scholars, at the months of April and October in each year, and he shall, after each half-yearly inspection and examination, make a report thereon to the trustees."

Do you keep the inspector's reports?—Yes, they have always been favourable.

8339. Who is the present inspector?—Mr. FitzGerald, who has been recently appointed, Dr. Brown was the former inspector.

8340. What experience of school inspection had Mr. FitzGerald?—He is one of the head inspectors under the National Board.

8341. LEAD R. CHURCHILL—How many days does it take to inspect the school?—Mr. FitzGerald has not yet inspected it; Dr. Brown, who was also a head inspector, took nearly a week for his inspection.

8342. LEAD JUSTICE FITZGERALD—The scheme lays down:—

"The instruction to be given in the schools shall include—besides religious instruction, to be provided as herein mentioned—the elements of singing and drawing, reading, writing, arithmetic, history, and geography, and such other branches of elementary learning as the trustees shall, from time to time, direct, and in addition to the above, for the Boys' Agricultural School, chemistry and the elements of agriculture; and for the girls, needlework."

Are all these branches taught?—Yes.

8360. Do you find the instruction in chemistry and agriculture availed of by a large number of boys?—In 1877 forty-three pupils passed, in connection with South Kensington, in magnetism and electricity; and forty-two in acoustics, light, and heat; and twenty-one Queen's prizes were awarded. In 1878 forty-two pupils passed in botany, fifty in magnetism and electricity, and twenty in mathematics, and forty Queen's prizes were awarded. In 1879, fifty-eight passed in magnetism and electricity; sixty-one in light, heat, &c.; twenty-six in mathematics, and twenty-nine Queen's prizes were awarded. In former years the pupils of this school obtained, in competition with the scholars of the United Kingdom, gold, silver, and various bronze medals. Of thirty-seven pupils, who went in at the intermediate education examinations, one obtained an exhibition, and twenty others are on the prize list. The pass lists have not yet been published, but we expect that all have passed except two.

8361. CHAIRMAN.—What class are the boys who attend the school?—They are the sons of farmers and tradespeople.

8362. The returns which have been furnished to us show that in the boys' school there are 34 Protestants and 157 Roman Catholics, and in the girls' school there are 35 Protestants and 177 Roman Catholics. Have you had any difficulty at all in the management of the different denominations?—None whatever.

8363. Is there any religious instruction given except by the two chaplains?—The religious instruction is left entirely in their hands.

8364. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—Are the buildings large?—Yes, they are very good, indeed.

8365. When were they completed?—The school was opened in 1852.

8366. Since that time how have the buildings been kept in repair?—The trustees kept them in repair. We obtain tenders from local tradesmen for painting, and for any other repairs which may be required.

8367. How are those repairs paid for?—Out of the income of the school.

8368. Have you ever had occasion to carry out any repairs, or additions, to a greater extent than you could pay for out of the income?—No.

8369. Do you contemplate having to lay out any large sums on the building?—No, they are quite good enough.

8370. LORD JAMES FINCHAM.—With regard to religious instruction, the provision in the scheme possibly presents you having any trouble. It enacts—

"The time allowed for religious instruction shall be two and a half hours on each Monday, or such time, and on such days, and in such places as the trustees shall from time to time direct: provided that no special religious instruction shall be given to any child whose parents or friends shall, on conscientious grounds, object to his or her receiving it."

Has there been any change in that proviso?—No.

8371. Each chaplain attends the children of his own persuasion during the allotted time?—Yes.

8372. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—Have you had experience of any other agricultural schools, besides this one?—No.

8373. Do you think that a school where agriculture is taught practically, on the land, is a failure?—I hardly ever heard of one that has been a great success.

8374. Would not it be an advantage to boys, who are likely to pass the rest of their lives at agriculture, to obtain practical teaching in their youth?—I think most of them have a certain amount of practical teaching. The circumstances of small farms vary so much—that what would succeed perfectly well in one place would not succeed in another. The advantage of seeing a good farm, in their own immediate neighbourhood, would be just as great as that of seeing an agricultural school farm.

8375. Would not they be likely to see a higher class of teaching and farming in an agricultural school, than with ordinary Irish farmers?—Decidedly.

8376. LORD JAMES FINCHAM.—Do the boys educated at this school devote themselves, as a general rule, to practical farming, or do they follow other pursuits in life?—I think a great many of them go to other callings. Of course they cannot all be on the farm.

8377. OLMSTED is in so pastoral a district as any in Ireland?—Yes, there is no manufacture of any kind.

8378. And, serious fields, farming would be their natural calling. Would you say the majority become farmers?—Farmers or tradespeople.

8379. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—Have you not generally found, in your experience of Irish agriculture, that the Irish require teaching in such habits as cleanliness on the farms, the removal of weeds, and the performing of farming operations in the proper season?—I am perfectly aware that there is a great deal they might learn, but there are other people to teach them besides the teachers in the agricultural schools.

8380. Do you think that an agricultural school is practically useless, or do you regard it as an institution to be maintained?—For my own part, I do not think the boys improved by it at all. I think that nobody can do more good in farming their property than if they were to start small model farms.

8381. The industrial school was part of the original endowment?—It is so under the Elementary Scheme; but not in the will of the founder.

8382. LORD JAMES FINCHAM.—The returns furnished, state that in the infants' school the present number of Church of Ireland children on the roll is nineteen, and of Roman Catholics 161, and the average daily attendance is returned as thirty-two. How do you account for that very small attendance?—The children are very young, and last winter was very unfavourable for small children.

8383. What distances do they come from?—They come from the town. I do not think that many children residing at any great distance attend the infants' school.

8384. CHAIRMAN.—In Oldcastle a good large town?—It is a small town, but there is a fair number of shopkeepers.

8385. Mr. O'BRAHENSEN.—About seventy boys on an average attend the agricultural classes?—Yes.

8386. Do you think the agricultural chemistry they learn there and their physical studies are of very much advantage to those who pursue agriculture in after-life?—They enable them to understand the value of artificial manures, and the different things they require, and also what is most likely to succeed in certain soils, so far as theory goes.

8387. Do you know of the existence of a good agricultural school at Cirencester, in England?—Yes.

8388. These the boys take part to a large extent in the agricultural pursuits?—Yes.

8389. There are boys in your school aged from sixteen to eighteen?—Yes.

8390. Do you not think that boys from sixteen to eighteen, intended for agricultural pursuits in after-life, might judiciously take part, to some extent, in the practical management of a farm of thirteen acres?—I do not think they could. If learning in the school they would not have sufficient time to learn and to do work on the farm. A great many of them come three or four miles to school. The farm is in the middle of a village country with very large farms around it, and a boy would derive more advantage from seeing them.

8391. Do you not think it would be a useful way of teaching agriculture, to oblige the boys to devote a certain number of hours each day to taking an active part in the farm work?—I think it might, to a certain extent; but they could get equally good information elsewhere from their neighbours. This is a small dairy farm, and is tilled in a way in which probably a small farmer would not till his land; and besides I have shown you it is not very profitable.

8387. Mr. J. M. S. Sayer, M.A., &c.

Napier, Esq., &c.

8362 To what do you attribute the failure to make it profitable in the ordinary sense?—The master is employed most of his time in the school. He superintends the farm sufficiently to have it in this order, but a working farmer would make it pay better.

8363 Lord Randolph Churchill spoke of the want of teaching certain habits of cleanliness about a farm. Do you not think that, if the young men were employed a few hours on the farm, they would acquire these habits of getting rid of weeds, and keeping things in order?—I am afraid it would not do much good, unless they had some natural turn that way.

8364 Do you not think that a good deal might be done in that direction by their seeing operations properly conducted?—I believe there might.

8365 Do you think that such training would be more useful to the ordinary Irish farmer than a knowledge of agricultural chemistry?—Yes.

8366 Particularly to the class of youths that attend the Glenties school?—I believe if you could teach them to be cleanly and industrious that is the principal thing you want, in dairy or any other farming.

8367 Lord R. Churchill.—Do you not think that those habits are easier taught in youth?—Yes.

8368 If not taught in youth, do you think they will be acquired afterwards?—No.

8369 Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—Do you think there is a want of taste amongst the people for that kind of thing?—Yes.

8370 If a proper taste is to be created, have you not a better chance of doing so by training them in youth than by sending them out without doing so?—I think if they were bidden it might be done; but what would be the use of teaching a boy to clean the land, and then let him go home to be dirty a house as any in the country—the example of his father and mother would have just as much effect upon him as the example of the schoolmaster.

8371 If a boy is given the habit of getting rid of weeds, and taught the proper management of a farm, at the agricultural school, will he not have a great advantage over the boys who have seen nothing but the lazy neglectful model?—Yes, but we cannot make that teaching compulsory. If we had hundreds of acres they would have to work on the farm; but you cannot make the schoolboys work.

8372 Lord R. Churchill.—Do they dislike it?—I should think so.

8373 Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—How is it ever been proposed to them to do it?—At one time a few used to work, but I do not believe that any of them work now. They come to school to learn, and not to do farm work. I do not think they wish to work on the farm.

8374 Lord R. Churchill.—Would the parents object to their working on the farm?—I never heard.

8375 Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—Without being made to work like a labourer, for several hours a day, would not it be possible to have them present?—Part of the time there is very little going on.

8376 Would you be in favour of getting rid of the agricultural school altogether?—I should be in favour of getting rid of the farm, and teaching them by book.

8377 Lord R. Churchill.—Would you not have to get the permission of the Court of Chancery, before you did away with the agricultural school?—Yes.

8378 Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—Where do you obtain your manure?—They are selected from the boys in school, and are paid small sums.

8379 Does the inspector inquire into the mode in which agriculture is taught in the school?—Professor Baldwin was appointed inspector of the agricultural school; but he has very seldom come since the boys entirely left off taking part in the farming operations.

8402 Lord R. Churchill.—Could not he examine the boys in agricultural chemistry?—That is only one class.

8403 Is there any examination in agricultural science?—Yes, it is held by the inspector.

8404 Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—That is to say, in ordinary chemistry?—Yes.

8405 It appears, that at one time there was, in the school, a system of training in agriculture, different from the present?—There has never been any change during the last ten years.

8406 Has Mr. Baldwin never been at the school for the last ten years?—Yes; once or twice. He takes no interest in the instruction, and is still inspector of the agricultural school. He gives his salary in pension, having found that there was nothing to do there.

8407 Was there at any former period, while Professor Baldwin was acting as inspector, any more active system of agricultural instruction?—I think not.

8408 CHAIRMAN.—What books are used in the agricultural department?—The National school books.

8407 There is a book by Mr. Baldwin, that is used in some of the National schools?—Yes.

8408 Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—The scheme provides that—

"The trustees shall open and keep banking accounts, in the mode of which the whole income of the trust fund shall be paid half-yearly, and which shall be drawn upon in all the payments of the trust, by cheques signed by two trustees, and any balance which shall stand to the credit of the said account on the 1st of April, in every year, beyond the sum of £50, shall be invested in consols, in the name of the Accountant-General, in trust, in the name of the said Trustees, to a separate account, to be entitled 'Simple Income Account.'"

Have you ever had any surplus income to invest?—Never.

8409 It appears from your accounts, that the expenditure upon the school last year amounted to £748 17s. 9d. Then there are two other items charged—the trustees' costs of paying the account, £45 4s. 1d.; and the Attorney-General's costs, £12 13s. Are the figures for those costs correct?—I cannot say; I only removed this account the other day. I am treasurer, but I am going to give up that office, and the bank will in future, be the treasurer. The present system was begun in my father's time, and under it, my agent pays the school expenses, and we have to pay the account in the Court of Chancery in England, at the end of each year.

8410 The addition of those two sums for costs to the sum expended on the school would make a total expenditure last year of £806 15s. 3d., against receipts amounting to £793, showing a deficiency at the year of between £14 and £15—I am sorry to say that for the last twelve or fourteen years the income has been exceeded.

8411 How was the deficiency made up?—It has been carried forward.

8412 Has there been any sale of capital to meet the balance?—No. We have a small balance in the bank, arising from our farm account, which is kept separate from our general account.

8413 Do you know the cost of passing a receiver's account in the Court of Chancery in Ireland?—No, but I know that they are much more expensive in England.

8414 The account you have produced contains only seventy-five items on one side and three on the other, making seventy-eight altogether. Have you taken any steps to ascertain whether you could pass that for a less sum than £87 17s. 3d.?—No.

8415 This account has been passed by the chief clerk, and there were allowed trustees' costs for passing the account £15 13s. 9d.; and under order £30 13s. 3d., making £46 13s. 11d.; and then the Attorney-General's costs £3 16s.; and under order £12 13s. 10d.—That must have included the costs of the appointment of a trustee.

8416. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—Did you appoint a new trustee last year?—The priest died and we had to appoint another.

8417. LORD JUSTICE FITZGERALD.—That accounts for it. I find that in the former year the amount charged for costs was £218 15s. 2d. Then the result is that your costs including those of the Attorney-General come to about £20 a year, and there is an additional sum of £36 whenever you have an application to appoint a new trustee?—Yes.

8418. Are you obliged to make a special application whenever there is a parish priest or a rector to be appointed?—Yes, that is an expense we ought to avoid.

8419. CHAIRMAN.—Is there any limit to the number of scholars taken in?—No; we have a regular staff, and the school is large enough to supply the wants of the town and immediate neighbourhood.

8420. LORD JUSTICE FITZGERALD.—It appears that there is now a deficiency of £155, which has been growing for about ten years?—Yes.

Mr. JOHN BEATTY, A.B., examined.

8421. CHAIRMAN.—You are the master of Oldcastle School?—I am.

8422. What is the system of education pursued in that school?—We admit the poor children free. Any child when the trustees consider able to pay is charged 2s. per week, or 2s. per term in advance. The 2s. per term is something less than 2s. per week, but it saves us the trouble of collecting it weekly.

8423. How is it determined who are to be charged?—The trustees decide that, the rule is that all outside the parish, who are not natives, must pay 2s. a week whether poor or rich; but, because the endowment was left to the parish, the poor natives are admitted free, but the rich natives are charged the 2s. per week.

8424. Do you inquire into the circumstances of each case, and request the trustees to withdraw?—The applicants have to fill up a form, which comes before the trustees, who decide upon it.

8425. Dr. HART.—How are those fees applied?—The trustees have only been working on this plan for the last couple of years, and have not as yet applied the funds to any purpose except for school prizes.

8426. CHAIRMAN.—Are there any extra branches, besides English, taught for these fees?—They get all their ordinary school education for that.

8427. Does that include Euclid, algebra, and so on?—Yes, to some of the boys.

8428. Who teaches physical sciences?—I do, in the boys' school.

8429. Is it taught only to the Science and Art Classes?—Yes, all those in the third division of the school learn the physical sciences.

8430. About what size is that class?—It consists of about seventy boys, and there is about the same number of girls in the female school.

8431. How is the examination conducted?—There is a Science Committee, of which Mr. Napier is the chairman, and Mr. Darlin, who is another trustee, is the secretary. Papers are sent over from London, and the examination is held from seven to ten o'clock in the evening. The committee are present, and see that there is no copying, and no breach of the rules, and there is often an inspector from the department present.

8432. How many usually attend those examinations?—There must be three; but there are often five or six.

8433. Those subjects do not form part of the regular school course?—No; they are mostly taught before or after school hours. The examinations are held at night to suit mechanics and persons of that class, who we move more in England than in Ireland.

8434. Do the boys learn those subjects voluntarily?—Yes; there is no compulsion. I find that the boys are anxious to learn.

8435. LORD R. CHURCHILL. For the school to pay interest on that sum?—No; I have advanced the money.

8436. Mr. O'BRIEN.—Could you suggest any way for bringing the expenditure permanently within the income?—My suggestion is to give up this agricultural school and farm. I shall have to pay £150 or £160 if I take up the land, but the office will be worth the money. The schools would be more efficiently managed by having an extra teacher in the boys' school, and an extra teacher in the girls.

8437. Dr. CURTIS.—The boys educated in the school have been very successful in examinations in the physical sciences?—Yes.

8438. What means have you for teaching those subjects?—The master, Mr. Beatty, teaches them.

8439. Is there merely book teaching, or have you suitable apparatus?—There is a small laboratory and some models, but not very much in the way of apparatus.

8440. I suppose the boys who attend those classes are more frequently the sons of shopkeepers than of farmers?—The poorer children, as a rule, drop off before they reach that class, as the parents cannot afford to leave them long at school; so that generally the boys and girls who learn those subjects are of the better class, but, of course, there are still some poor people among them.

8441. They look forward to leaving home, and seeking employment elsewhere?—Yes, a good many go into the Civil Service and banks, and some become shopkeepers and clerks.

8442. LORD JUSTICE FITZGERALD.—Could you state approximately, out of 150 boys going through your school, how many become practical farmers, and how many go to other callings?—I could not say, but, as a rule, one in each farmer's family becomes a farmer.

8443. And one only?—One only; the rest must turn to something else. Our country is a grass country, where a great many of the farms are large.

8444. Do many of the boys in your school fall back into the position of being labourers?—No.

8445. What becomes of the majority of the girls?—A good many of them become schoolmistresses.

8446. Where do they get employment?—Under the National Board. The Roman Catholic clergy take a great many girls as schoolmistresses.

8447. For the National Board schools?—Yes.

8448. What preparation and experience had you yourself as to the physical sciences?—I studied them while going through Trinity College, where I obtained a Senior Moderationship. I also attended science lectures in London, in connection with the Science and Art Department.

8449. Mr. O'BRIEN.—In what subject?—In Mental and Moral Philosophy.

8450. LORD JUSTICE FITZGERALD.—How long have you been in Oldcastle school?—Twenty years. I went through college while acting as master there, and I got my medal as the result of my own study, which is, I believe, rather unusual.

8451. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—What are, in your experience, the practical difficulties which prevent the boys in the head class learning practical agriculture on the farm at this school?—The boys go to school to learn certain branches—arithmetic, algebra, Euclid, and so on, and if you send them to the farm you take them from the work they are sent to the school for, I think the parents would object altogether to their children, who are sent to learn other subjects, being sent to spend their time on the farm.

8452. Do you think that what they would learn on the farm would be useless?—No; I would not say useless, but the parents would naturally say that if they wanted them to work on a farm they could keep them at home; we had a trial of that.

April 26, 1872
Mr John
Beatty, M.P.

8453. How was that?—A penny an hour was offered to boys who worked on the farm, but the attempt did not succeed.

8454. Could not the rudiments of agriculture be more suitably impressed upon the boys if the operations of agriculture were shown on the farm, than if they were merely confined to learning from books?—Certainly, but the boys are not sent to learn farming.

8455. Then, what was the farm taken for?—They intended to have boarders.

8456. Dr. HANE.—Had you ever any boarders?—There were some at first.

8457. Did they work on the farm?—They did.

8458. Why was the system of taking boarders given up?—They could not get boarders to come; the fees were fixed at £14, but only £8 was to be paid in cash, as the boys' work was to pay the other £6, and, even on these cheap terms, they did not come forward.

8459. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—In teaching the elements of agriculture, I presume you teach the rotation of crops?—I am not the agricultural master; the second master teaches agriculture.

8460. Is that one of the branches?—Of course it is.

8461. I suppose they grow oats on that farm?—Yes.

8462. And wheat?—No wheat.

8463. And roots?—Yes.

8464. Would not it be of great value to the boys if they were taught the practical method of preparing land for the growing of roots or oats?—Of course it would from a theoretical point of view.

8465. And from a practical point of view?—But many children come to the school, not for that purpose at all.

8466. As I understand, a great many of your children are farmers' sons?—Yes, but you cannot make a child work on a farm.

8467. Do you mean to say that a parent that sends his son to your school, with the intention of his becoming a farmer, would object to his being practically taught how to grow oats or roots?—The agricultural class has been tried at work, and it did not succeed.

8468. How long ago was that trial made?—It was about seventeen or eighteen years ago.

8469. How long was it continued?—Not more than a couple of years, if so long.

8470. Was it given up owing to objections raised by the parents?—I could not say why it ceased, as it is not in my department.

8471. Mr. O'BRIEN.—Do not you think that it would be a useful thing for the boys to spend as much a day looking on at the agricultural work, and having the superiority of one mode of procedure over another explained to them; the advantage of the removal of weeds pointed out; and the state of the crop at a certain stage where weeds had been removed, compared with the state of a crop where the weeds had not been removed?—Of course it would, but I should say a great many parents would object to their child not being kept even an hour a day at that. If there were boarders specially for agriculture then it might be done.

REV. HUGHMAN R. HALAHAN, M.A., CHURCHILL.

8472. CHAIRMAN.—What position do you hold?—I am the incumbent of the united parish of St. Luke and St. Nicholas Without, in the city of Dublin.

8473. How long have you been so?—I was instituted in 1844.

8474. State the particulars of the existing endowment of St. Luke's schools?—They have about £200 a year. The trustees are here and produce their books. Mr. Hayes is treasurer of St. Luke's, and Mr. Goughan is treasurer of St. Nicholas Without.

8475. Do the schools belong to the two parishes jointly?—Yes.

8476. How are the schools managed?—By the governors who are Mr. Henry Hayes, Mr. William A. Hayes, Mr. William J. Goughan, Mr. John C. Parker, Mr. John Parker, Mr. Richard Mayman, and the clergymen of the parish.

8477. How are the governors appointed?—They are co-opted by the body itself as vacancies occur.

8478. Are the Churchwardens governors ex-officio?—Not exactly, but they are generally elected by the other governors.

8479. How often do the governors meet?—They only meet as occasion requires; sometimes three or four times in the year, and sometimes not so often. Sometimes there is no business to be done. I myself visit the schools almost every day.

8480. You attend to the religious instruction?—Yes.

8481. What number of schools are there?—There are three—a boys' school, a girls' school and an infants' school.

8482. Where is the building situated?—No 20, New Street.

8483. It appears that in 1857, St. Nicholas Without and St. Luke's had separate schools?—They had, but when the parishes were united in 1861 the schools were also united.

8484. Are the governors in any way representatives of the two parishes?—These gentlemen whom we think suitable are appointed by the governors present, irrespective of which parish they belong to.

8485. LORD JUSTICE FRYER-GIBSON.—Do you publish an annual report?—We have a report of the schools, but it is a daily report of the children.

8486. Are all those who attend Church of Ireland children?—They are.

8487. Are they all from the parishes of St. Nicholas and St. Luke's?—Some belong to the adjoining neighbourhood.

8488. It is a very poor part of the city?—Very poor.

8489. Is there any considerable number of Protestants living in the district?—A good many.

8490. Do the great majority of the children who attend live in the poorer portions of the city?—They do.

8491. The education given to them is only primary?—That is so. We have at present on the roll in the three schools 338 children, and the daily attendance is 213.

8492. Are these schools in connexion with any Board of Education?—They are under the Church Education Society.

8493. Are your teachers obtained from the Church Education Society?—Yes. We have had our present teachers a good while.

8494. What provision has been made for keeping up the incumbency of the united parishes?—We have provided £300 a year under the Diocesan scheme.

8495. You have the security of the diocesan scheme for having a minister to act as trustee of the funds?—Yes.

8496. Have you found any difficulty in getting the bank to recognize the churchwardens, since the establishment, as being churchwardens of the parish?—None.

8497. What Roman Catholic schools are there in the parish?—There is one in Franciscan Street and one at the end of Ashcroft.

8498. Do all the Protestant children attend your schools?—Generally they do.

8499. In preference to the National School?—Decidedly.

8500. Do the Roman Catholic children subsequently go to schools managed by their own clergy?—They do.
 8501. Are those Roman Catholic schools in connection with the National Board?—I think they are.
 8502. They are practically denominational schools?
 —Yes.
 8503. Are the master and mistresses of your schools efficient?—Yes, very. The mistress of the infants school is a first rate one.

8504. The fact that the parish is poor does not prevent the schools from flourishing?—The schools are cheerful, and as to the school-rooms and the playgrounds and everything connected with them, there are very few, if any, in Dublin like these.

Mr WILLIAM J. GOSCHENMAN examined.

Mr. William J. Goschenman.

8505. Dr. HARR.—You are the treasurer for the parish of St. Nicholas Without, in the City of Dublin?
 —Yes. The funds of the two parishes are kept distinct.
 8506. LEON JOURNEAU FRINGHAM.—What property is there, belonging to the schools of St. Nicholas Without?—There are two houses in Patrick street and three in Newstreet; £1,885 5s 16d New Three per cent Stock, £244 0s 6d stock in the Court of Chancery; a rectory under the will of Cuthbert Cary of £4 15s. 8d. per annum, and an annuity of £20 per annum under the will of Matthew Henry Mahon.

8507. The two houses in Patrick street, Nos 31 and 32, produce £21 a year. How are those houses let?—They are let on lease made a long time ago to a man named Tyndall.

8508. Is that a subsisting lease?—Yes. I think it has about thirty years to run.

8509. To whom are the houses in Newstreet let?—Slater is our tenant, but he sublets some of them, and pays his rent regularly.

8510. His rent is returned as £15 a year,—when was the lease to him made?—I do not know when he originally became tenant, but he got a new lease a few years ago.

8511. Do you know where the lease is?—I suppose it is amongst the school papers.

8512. Dr. HARR.—How have been any change in the rental during your time?—No.

8513. How long have you been treasurer?—About sixteen years.

8514. LEON JOURNEAU FRINGHAM.—Have you any idea where the deeds are?—There is a box in the school which contains deeds and papers.

8515. In whose names is the money in the New Three per cent invested?—In the names of the vicar and churchwardens, or in the names of the Rev. H. R. Mahan, Henry Hayes, and myself.

8516. One of the items comprised in the stock which you have mentioned appears to be £289 2s. 7d., the legacy of a Mrs. Young. What was the date of the legacy?—1829.

8517. You have also mentioned a sum of £244 0s. 6d., which I find is standing in the name of the Accountant-General of the Court of Chancery. When did you get that money?—In 1837. The dividends are paid to us by the Court of Chancery. That money was I believe for a house in Freestone-alley, belonging to the schools, which the White Street Commissioners bought.

8518. Have the schools been left any money recently?—Yes, £106 1s. 3d. stock was purchased with £100 left by the late James Hunt in the year 1875.

8519. In 1857 the return made by the Commissioners was this:—

“Cuthbert Cary, will proved 6th December, 1836, bequeathed £4 15s. 8d.; Elizabeth Smith, will, death 18th November, 1849, £380 invested with other trust moneys in a sum of £4,944 0s. 6d. Government stock; M. N. Mahon, will proved August 3, 1860, annuity of £20; house rent, £12 per annum.”

Did that include the £244 0s. 6d. in the name of the Accountant-General?—It did.

8520. Has there been no sale of capital?—No, none has been sold.

8521. How is your school box constituted?—The Board is made up of Governors, and when any of them drop off the remainder elect new ones.

8522. Do they elect subscribers or parishioners?—Principally parishioners.

8523. Is there any qualification required?—No; there is no qualification that I know of. They are chiefly men who have resided in the parish or been connected with it. My father was for a long time connected with the parish, and therefore Mr. Mahan asked me to join.

8524. Have you any connection with the parish at present?—None whatever, except that I have the privilege of paying an annual subscription to the school. I may add that the accounts of the school are audited annually.

8525. CHAIRMAN.—Are the two accounts kept in the same book?—The expenses are entered in the same book, but the accounts of the receipts of St. Luke's parish are kept by Mr. Hayes, who has his own book.

8526. I suppose, in view of the possible redivision of the parish, you keep the accounts separate?—I have asked Mr. Mahan to amalgamate them, but he does not seem inclined to do so.

8527. LEON JOURNEAU FRINGHAM.—You have an annual service for the schools?—Yes, we have. We get an average of about £100.

8528. Where is the service preached?—In St. Luke's parish church.

8529. Do you find any difficulty in getting people to attend it?—Very great. They do not come.

8530. Still the money comes?—The money comes, through the indefatigable energy of the Rev. Mr. Mahan, who goes about and begs splendidly. We like to see people coming to inspect our schools.

8531. Of what religion are the children attending the schools?—There are three Jews, and the remainder are Protestants.

8532. CHAIRMAN.—There are no Roman Catholics?—I think not.

8533. How are the schools inspected?—By the Church Education Society's inspectors.

8534. Is your master a Church Education man?—Yes.

8535. LEON JOURNEAU FRINGHAM.—Are your schools entitled to any other property?—In looking over the papers for this inquiry, I discovered that a legacy, called Southwell's, payable by St. Werburgh's parish, had not been received for over twenty years. I wrote to the churchwardens of St. Werburgh's about it, but have not as yet been favoured with a reply.

8536. Dr. HARR.—Some of your funds appear to be invested in the names of individuals?—Yes; the funds of the school are invested in three names.

8537. According as individuals happen to die, how are new trustees selected?—The surviving trustee would, of course, transfer the funds to other names, as has been regularly done.

8538. Who appoints the new trustees?—The governors. That occurred in the case of the late Alderman Bessell, Captain Mahan, &c., and others.

8539. LEON JOURNEAU FRINGHAM.—Is there any provision for continuing the benevolence of St. Nicholas Without?—I am afraid not.

/ Sept. 26, 1870.

Mr. H. Hayes.

Mr. HENRY HAYES, examined.

8540. CHAIRMAN.—You are treasurer for St. Luke's parish, Dublin?—I am. I was appointed in 1861, and at that time our entire funds amounted to £144 1s. per annum, and comprised Daniel's bequest, £23 13s. 10d. per annum; Venechey's bequest, £25 15s. 6d.; Tisdall's bequest, £1 7s. 10d.; and Batchelor's bequest, £6 7s. 4d. These are all paid by the Board of Charitable Donations and Bequests. We have also in Government Funds, £1,150 2s. 4d., on which I receive £34 15s. 6d. per annum.

8541. LORD JUSTICE FITZGERALD.—When was that money invested?—It was invested before my appointment.

8542. Do you draw the dividends as churchwarden?—Yes.

8543. Have you been long churchwarden?—Yes, for some years.

8544. Is the stock standing in the names of the minister and churchwarden?—Yes. In 1871 we invested a further sum of £350 in the same names. The other day we added £125, which we had received as a legacy. The income from the £350 is £10 10s., and from the £125 about £3 15s.

8545. You have had an increase to your school property since 1857?—We have. I have not yet mentioned all our receipts. We receive £24 7s. per annum from Grand Canal debentures, and a profit rent of £20 a year from premises in New-street, adjoining the school, which were purchased out of the funds of the school.

8546. The report of the Commissioners of 1857, states—

"The endowments of the school, at present available, are as follows—A principal sum of £3,139 15s. 4d., Government three per cent. stock (part of a larger sum of £3,850 2s. 4d., stock standing to the credit of the parish, in the names of the minister and churchwarden), yielding an annual dividend of £37 15s. 4d."

What has been done with the £700?—£500 remains for the benefit of the poor; the schools have the same amount they then had.

8547. The report continues:—

"Venechey's bequest, producing annually £15 15s. 6d.

Otto, Tisdall's, £1 7s. 10d.; 610s. Batchelor's, £6 7s. 4d., Fleasman's legacy, £500, Grand Canal Stock (it was originally £1,000, but by some joint-stock operation, became converted into £800, at present producing only £2) to £4 per annum (the dividend varies considerably); and Daniel's legacy of £500, the annual interest on which amounts to the sum of £37 15s. 10d."

You still receive these same?—Yes.

8548. At what date were the premises adjoining the school purchased?—About five years ago.

8549. What was the amount paid for them?—£900.

8550. What interest was purchased in them?—£30 a year profit rent for about fifty years.

8551. How are they let?—To one tenant on lease for, I think, forty-five years.

8552. Do you take any part in looking after the school?—I visit it occasionally as a governor.

8553. What condition are the buildings in?—Very good, they are more like Government buildings than anything else. They are in perfect repair.

8554. How many governors have you at present on the Board of the joint schools?—Perhaps four or five. It is very difficult to get them to attend, as there is not much for them to do. The machinery is a good working order, and Mr. Halahan is a host in himself.

8555. CHAIRMAN.—How have been any falling off in the numbers attending the school?—No; on the contrary, they are increasing.

8556. LORD JUSTICE FITZGERALD.—The report of the Assistant Commissioner, in 1855, as to the then state of education in the school was—

"I heard the boys read and also examined them in geography, grammar, history, and arithmetic; with one exception they answered badly. The master informed me that when he came to the school (August, 1853), he found that the boys' education had been exceedingly neglected, they are certainly still very backward."

Does that description apply now?—Not at all; the schools are in a very efficient state.

8557. Are the buildings sufficient?—Quite.

Rev. Basil Stanford, &c.

Rev. BERNELL STANFORD, A.B., examined.

8558. CHAIRMAN.—You are the vicar of the united parishes of St. Luke and St. Nicholas Without, in the City of Dublin?—I am.

8559. What number of teachers are there in the three schools?—There are at present a schoolmaster in the boys' school, a mistress in the girls' school, and two teachers in the infants' school.

8560. Are there any monitors?—There are not; but the master is under consideration. The mistress gets some assistance from the senior girls.

8561. Is there any instruction given in any subject beyond ordinary English?—No.

8562. Are these purely primary schools?—That is all.

8564. CHAIRMAN.—What fees do they pay?—None whatever.

8565. Dr. HART.—Are they all Protestants?—Yes, with the exception of a few Jews.

Rev. A. Cohen, M.A.

Dr. AMBROSE COHEN, M.A., examined.

8566. CHAIRMAN.—You are one of the managers of the Bethgheween school, Co. Kildare?—Yes. I am Commissioner to His Grace the Archbishop of Dublin, one of the trustees; the other trustee is the Lord Primate, who has appointed Colonel Gosford as his Commissioner. It is in the Vicar of the parish that I manage the school.

8567. How often do you inspect the school?—I visit it at least once a week; and as the boys come to Sunday school, and to Church practice on Fridays, I see them twice or three times a week.

8568. Is it exclusively a Church school?—It is.

8569. There are no Roman Catholics attending it?—None.

8570. Are there any Dissenters?—I know nothing of them in that connexion.

8571. What number of children are there in the school?—Twelve.

8572. Is that the largest number which has been there?—That is the largest number there has been, at any time; but I have heard there were fifteen at one time. There was a proposal before the Lord Chancellor at present to bring the school into such a position that there would be a much larger number in attendance, by which the efficiency of the school would be greatly increased, and the matter has been favourably received.

8573. Where do you wish to remove the school to?—Very close to Clons. It will be then within range of the church and no.

8574. How far is it from Clons now?—About three miles.

8375. Have there been any objections made in the neighborhood, to the moving of the school?—I heard of no formal objection being received, but there was an objection made by a clergyman in the neighborhood—the Rev. Mr. Colton—who threatened me with Chancery proceedings, and wrote letters to the Lord Primate and the Archbishop of Dublin, by whom he was referred to the Commissioners of Charitable Donations and Bequests, and the answer he received was that his objections were frivolous, and that he had no locus standi.

8376. Is it your idea, that, in the present locality in which the school is situated, you can only have boarders, but that if you remove it to the place proposed you would get in addition a number of day boys?—There are still more forcible reasons. One is that the boys are isolated, and another that the manager has not the opportunity of seeing them whenever he likes.

8377. Is the school left entirely under the control of the master?—Practically it is so. There is another objection to the present situation, namely, that the school is situated close to a bog. There is a large unenclosed tract at the back, and those interested in the school, or having an opportunity of observing it, know that boys want the opportunity of being rubbed up against their fellows. In fact, it has been decided by parties in the neighborhood, who take very great interest in the matter.

8378. Is the instruction given in the school of a primary character, or is it of a higher class?—The boys who come to us are, as a general rule, wholly uneducated. The founder's will provides for—

"As every boy and girl in the trustees think fit, and may be conscientiously interested in the principles of the Protestant religion, in reading, writing, and arithmetic, and those perhaps qualified to be bound out as apprentices to trades, and the proper fees shall be paid."

8379. Have you had any scheme for the management of the school drawn up by the Commissioners of Charitable Donations and Bequests?—I produce an extract from the final decree of the Court of Chancery, dated March 30th, 1824.

8380. That provides, "The school to be kept on the lands of Ballynagown." Do the lands of Ballynagown extend to the proposed new site?—No.

8381. What fees do the pupils pay?—They pay no fees. Food, clothing, bedding, and, in fact, everything is provided for them out of the endowment.

8382. What does the endowment now consist of?—The rental from land is £406 10s. 9d., and there is a sum of £1,948 4s. 11d. Three per Cent. Stock, invested in the names of the Lord Primate and the Archbishop of Dublin.

8383. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—The report of the Commission of 1837 states the income derived by the school from land to be £219. How has the great increase since?—A lease which comprised nearly the whole property at 10s. or 12s. an acre expired. There were under-tenants on the lands, paying to the middle-man nearly double the sum that he paid to the trustees, and to those under-tenants we gave the land as the same rate that they had it before.

8384. Who are the agents?—Messrs. Leonard, Dobbin and Co.

8385. How is the expenditure managed?—Prior to the employment of our present master, his predecessor or son quartered his bills to me. I certified them, and then they were sent to Messrs. Dobbin and Co., by whom they were immediately paid. The master at that time used to provide all things necessary for the boys, and charge for them in his accounts, but recently the Primate's Commissary and myself agreed that it would be better that I should look to the clothing, and such other details, and provide for them myself. The Primate's Commissary now examines the accounts, which I send in to Messrs. Dobbin and Co.

8386. What is your exact position with reference to the school?—My position is as Vicar of Clons, and Commissary to the Archbishop of Dublin. The Archbishop in appointing me put it in this way:—"Whosoever power I have I transfer it to you."

8387. Do the trustees ever meet for the purposes of this endowment?—There was a meeting of the trustees, at which I was present, before the proposal to change the school was made.

8388. How often do the Commissioners meet?—I do not know that there is any specified time. The Primate's Commissary has met me eight or nine times, during the past three years, by appointment; both in Dublin and also at the school.

8389. Do you keep any minutes of those meetings?—No.

8390. What was done at those meetings?—The state of the school was considered, and the payment of part of the expenses, and on a recent occasion the appointment of a new master.

8391. Who keeps the accounts of the school?—Messrs. Dobbin and Co. keep all the accounts.

8392. Do you and the Primate's Commissary pass the accounts?—The Primate's Commissary has only been appointed about three years. Since his appointment we have both passed the accounts.

8393. You have no other audit?—I am not aware of any.

8394. You change the agent for the clothing which you provide?—I do.

8395. How much does it cost to clothe each boy? I cannot exactly say, as I only undertook it about four months ago, but I calculate I will be able to clothe them for a trifle over £3 each per annum.

8396. Why was the former system of the master providing the clothing changed?—I thought it was better that I should undertake it myself, when a new master was appointed; our former master had been over forty years in the institution.

8397. When the master clothed the boys, how much did it cost per head?—I examined the accounts each quarter, and as far as I can see it was about three guineas.

8398. Do you also supply the food for the boys?—The present master is allowed 8d. per head per day for the food. The former master had only 6d. a day, but then he had the use of twenty acres of land.

8399. CHURCHMAN.—Is Mr. Bonyage the master?—He was the late master.

8400. What salary did he get?—He was paid a salary of £200 a year, and was allowed £40 a year for servants, and £30 a year for fuel, and he was also allowed for kitchen utensils and things of that sort, which are returned as sundries in his account. Our present master receives a salary of £100 a year, but has no allowance for servants, and I supply the fuel.

8401. What does that come to?—I calculate that the fuel will cost from £20 to £25 a year. The fuel formerly used was turf; but, unfortunately, I did not cut turf this year; I was a little late.

8402. LORD R. CHURCHMAN.—In the accounts for the years 1875, 1876, and 1877, which you have produced, I find there constantly occurs this item, "Quarterly account of Mr. Bonyage," opposite to which are set large amounts, such as £483, &c.; what are those sums principally made up of?—The details were:—his salary; quarterly account for servants; quarterly account for fuel; quarterly account for clothing and shoes, 6d. a day for the feeding of each boy; what we call sundries, which come to something very considerable; and also repairs of the house. All these things passed through Mr. Bonyage's hands, and were done by him.

8403. Is there any other master employed?—No.

8404. Do you consider that it is a better arrangement that you should supply the fuel and clothing than that the master should do so?—I am under the impression that it will be more economical, and a better arrangement in every way.

8405. Has the expenditure been kept within the income, since you have been connected with the school?

Sept. 24, 1878.
REV. A. COOKS,
M.A.

Sept. 28, 1878.

Rev. A. Cooke,
W.C.

—I next nothing to do with the income; so I am hardly in a position to answer the question; but, I think, that since I came into the management we have kept within our income.

8096. Before you became connected with it the income was exceeded by the expenditure?—I think the charity was, generally speaking, in debt. I am only about two and a half years acting for the Archbishop with reference to the accounts.

8097. What were you before that?—I was the Vicar of Clons and manager of the school, but had nothing to do with the accounts. Mr. Barlow used to set for the Priests, and when I spoke to him once or twice about money matters he told me very plainly to mind my own business.

8098. When did you become connected with the accounts?—About three years ago.

8099. Was there any debt upon the charity then?—There was, but I can not state the exact amount.

8100. How often in the year are the accounts now presented?—I pressed very much that the accounts should be presented half-yearly. I had not got an account for, I think, a year and a half, until I got one within the last few days.

8101. Do I understand that you have only recently received the accounts of 1878?—That is all.

8102. Is that a system which you think good for the management of the charity?—I did not like it, and I objected to it.

8103. Have you not complete power, as the Archbishop's Commissary?—I did not think I had. Perhaps I might have been remiss in not having insisted on it.

8104. Has anybody the power of interfering with you besides you, brother Commissary?—No, except the Priests and the Archbishop.

8105. They have clearly committed all their powers to you?—They have, except in special cases.

8106. LOAN JEROME FRINGEMAN.—Does not the account, which was furnished in 1878, comprise the rental ending 1st May, 1878?—Yes. It was furnished on the 31st August, 1878.

8107. And, therefore, the next account should end 1st May, 1879, and be furnished on the 31st August, 1879, so that it appears to have been less than a month late?—I merely spoke from memory.

8108. LOAN R. CHURCHMAN.—How often do you see the head master's account?—He comes personally to me every quarter, and brings his accounts and the receipts for every item of his expenditure. I examined them carefully, and wrote my name to the account, and he forwarded it to Messrs. Debbins, the agents, who, on my certificate, sent him the money.

8109. You have no professional audit of the accounts?—None that I know of.

8110. What are the reasons in favour of the change in the locality of the school which you say is in contemplation?—It has been considered, by those who have had the best opportunity of observing, that the present position of the school is unsuitable, for various reasons—chiefly, that the locality is too lonely; secondly, that the house is unsuitable; and, thirdly, that it would be more desirable it should be amalgamated with our day school.

8121. What do you call your day school?—Clons Parochial Day School. Not only is the Betaghstown school too lonely, but it is too far distant from the incumbent of Clons, who is the manager, and also from the church—in fact, three miles is too much for small boys to walk to church.

8122. In what way is the present house unsuitable?—It is a big, rambling house, expensive to keep up. There is no advantage in the building whatsoever.

8123. How do you contemplate replacing it?—We contemplate building a suitable schoolhouse, within half a mile of the church and vicarage, in a position where we can have our present school amalgamated with Betaghstown, the parish undertaking to pay £50 a year.

8124. Is the present parochial school a mixed school?—We have no Roman Catholic children attending it.

8125. Are there any Roman Catholics in the village?—The great majority are Roman Catholics.

8126. The parochial school is a denominational Protestant school?—It is.

8127. Is it under the National Board?—It is not under any Board.

8128. You wish to have the two schools amalgamated?—Yes. The proposition has been officially brought before the Lord Chancellor by the trustees, and, as far as I can gather, the plan has been most favourably accepted.

8129. You have not received an official reply?—We have not.

8130. What will be the expense of erecting the new building?—There have been plans and specifications prepared. Mr. Trench, who is very much interested in the matter, has promised £300 towards the erection of the new building, which will cost, I think, about £700 more.

8131. How do you contemplate disposing of the old premises?—Different plans have been proposed, but, I presume, they will be put into the market, and the highest price obtained.

8132. Have they been valued?—I do not think they have been valued with reference to sale, because they are not yet in the market; but the Free Valuation is, I think, between £40 and £50, including the twenty acres of land which belong to them.

8133. Do you contemplate selling the land with the buildings?—Certainly not. Mr. Trench, in addition to giving £300 towards the cost of the new building, has provided, as a site, two acres of land, of which he has promised a lease, or even, at a late date.

8134. Do you think that the sale of the present premises would pay for the erection of the new building?—I think it would leave a margin for the interest.

8135. How many boarders are the present buildings suited for?—I think the building itself would give sufficient accommodation for twenty.

8136. Mr. O'SHEEN.—Is it, owing to its position, quite unsuitable as a day-school?—The position is very lonely, and it is too far from the clergyman who have the responsibility of the boys.

8137. LOAN JEROME FRINGEMAN.—Did not Mr. Hovinson, who supplied the money, desire that it should be a boarding school?—He did.

8138. LOAN R. CHURCHMAN.—How many boarders do you contemplate having in the new building?—As many as the charity can afford. I am inclined that the building will be sufficiently large to accommodate more than we have at present.

8139. Have you been paying the head master £100 a year for looking after twelve boarders?—We have.

8140. Do not you think the salary rather high for the work done?—No, for this reason:—I think it is harder to teach twelve than twenty-four.

8141. Is the education given anything higher than elementary?—It is very elementary; but I expect when the school is moved, that, with our new master, the education will rise higher.

8142. Where do the pupils in Betaghstown school come from?—From the neighbouring parishes.

8143. In what class of life are their parents?—The form of application, which must be sent in, contains a statement that the applicant is desirous of expert, and is between eight and ten years of age.

8144. After they have been educated, do you do anything for them?—We ought to apprentice them, but I have always been told we have not had money.

8145. How long do you keep them in the school?—Until they reach the age of sixteen. In very many cases I have provided situations for them. For instance, the other day I got a boy into the police, and I was obliged myself to pay some £3 or £4, the ex-pages necessary to get him an outfit. We get nothing from the charity for them.

8646. Do you think the income of the charity is turned to the best account?—Certainly not.

8647. Do you think the change of site proposed will enable you to do more good?—I think it will scarcely do the evil very much.

8648. In what way?—I think it will raise the tone of the school, and increase the number of pupils; and with higher education, and more pupils, I think there will be a great advance.

8649. I understood you have not funds to support more than twelve boarders?—We have not had heretofore.

8650. CHAIRMAN.—What is the endowment of the (late) parochial school?—It is our parochial school, and has no endowment, but is supported by subscriptions. The parochial contribution to the united school will be £50 a year.

8651. How will the change of site increase the fund?—Inasmuch as we undertake to give £50 a year from the parish.

8652. You think that the two institutions can be managed more thoroughly combined, than separately?—Yes.

8653. LORD JUSTICE FITZGERALD.—One of the suggestions not being intended to be maintained at all with the money?—Yes.

8654. Who guarantees the £50 a year?—The Select Vestry.

8655. What funds have they to draw upon?—The parochial funds, as we collect them.

8656. How many registered vestrymen have you?—About forty.

8657. How many are in a position of life to subscribe?—I could not say how many are not likely to subscribe anything, but we collect in the parish, for church purposes, about £300 a year.

8658. Do you expect to increase that by £50 a year?—No; but we spend at least that amount of money on our parochial school. We have no master in the parochial school, but we pay our schoolmaster £40 a year. So it will merely be continuing the expense which we are at present incurring.

8659. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—As present you have an endowment of nearly £500 a year, large premises and lands adjoining, rent free, and you have only been able to educate twelve boarders, and not able to do anything for them afterwards. I want to know how, by changing the site of the school, you propose to increase your funds, so as to be able to educate more boarders?—In the first instance, the present site (land and house) will cover the expense of our moving, and leave a margin of profit, and then we will have the schoolmaster to teach, not only the twelve boys, but also the children of the parish, and £50 a year will result from the funds of the parish. There will also be the increased efficiency.

8660. Do you propose to give the schoolmaster the same salary?—I think the schoolmaster will expect, and probably be entitled to, an increase of salary, but that is a matter for the trustees, and far after consideration.

8661. Are there many schoolmasters in Ireland, in country parishes, who get £100 a year in the elementary schools?—I know that several who applied for the position, when the vacancy occurred, were receiving more. I know the income is an exceedingly good one, but it is a very responsible position for a man to have the charge of boarders. It is different from a day school, and I think the masters of boarding schools generally receive much higher salaries.

8662. Do you mean to take fees from boarders in the new school?—No; we cannot take fees.

8663. How do you mean to support a greater number of boarders?—I think the funds of the charity will be better worked. The total of the present expenditure will not come up to the £500 a year. The tuition of 12 boys at 6s. a day each will only come to £4 10s.—£160 a year for the master's salary; £24 for fuel; £24 for clothing; and for repairs of the building, kitchen, washroom, and things of that sort say £50 a year; which would bring up the total expenditure to £236, leaving a considerable balance.

8664. LORD JUSTICE FITZGERALD.—Are you not merely telling us of a proposal which has been made on the part of some of the parishioners of Clonsilla?—Exactly.

8665. Has your attention been called to the fact that to carry out the proposal would be violating Hewitson's will?—That is for the Chancellor to decide. The matter is before him.

8666. Who applied to the Lord Chancellor?—The Lord Primate and the Archbishop of Dublin, as the two trustees.

8667. Have any funds of the charity been applied towards the expenses of the application?—Not a farthing.

8668. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—Have there been any expenses incurred in making the application?—Nothing is done in law without expense; but there has been no draw on funds of the charity.

8669. How do you contemplate paying the expenses?—I do not know. I have not paid anything.

8670. Will they be charged against the funds of the charity?—I am quite sure they will not.

8671. Are both boys and girls educated in the present parochial school in Clonsilla?—Yes.

8672. You contemplate amalgamating the Beulahstown endowed school with your parochial school, and getting rid of your parochial schoolmaster?—Certainly.

8673. How do you intend to teach the girls in the amalgamated school?—The master's wife will teach them so far as is necessary.

8674. Without receiving any extra salary?—I presume so. It was contemplated in the engagement of her husband that she should undertake it.

8675. Is she a certificated schoolmistress?—She is a schoolmistress; but whether certificated or not I do not know.

8676. You do not contemplate by your scheme giving up the education of girls?—We do not.

8677. Do you know that under Hewitson's will his endowment was left for the instruction of boys and girls?—Certainly.

8678. There have been no girls educated in the school founded under his will?—Not in my time.

8679. Was your attention ever drawn to the fact that the Commission of 1857 particularly noticed the neglect of applying this endowment for the education of girls?—I am not aware of any notice having been taken of it. I have had no communication on that head.

8680. By whom was the idea of moving this school suggested?—I could not say that the matter did not originate with the Archbishop of Dublin. It was brought before the parishioners of Clonsilla after the trustees gave their consent.

8681. Who first undertook to remove it?—The matter was one of consideration as to what was best to be done. I could not say with whom it originated.

8682. Was it your idea?—I can say most humbly it delighted me when I heard it, but I would not take upon myself to say it originated with me. I would be very proud if it had done so. Colonel Gaisford who is present, reminds me that it was his suggestion.

8683. LORD JUSTICE FITZGERALD.—In Hewitson's will three trustees are mentioned—the Primate, the Archbishop of Dublin as the Bishop of Kildare, and also a lay trustee. Is there anyone now representing the lay trustee?—I never heard of him before.

8684. Under what authority did the two acting trustees appoint Commissioners?—I do not know.

8685. There is no provision in the will authorizing them to do so. Was there any application to the Court of Chancery?—I could not say.

8686. Who appointed the agents over the property?—That was a matter reserved, but I think the present agents were appointed by the Primate.

Sept. 24, 1879.

Rev. A. Cooke,
M.A.

Sept. 26, 1875.

Rev. A. Cooke,
et al.

8687. Do the agents' accounts come before the trustees, as well as before the Commissioners?—They come before the Commissioners, and we examine them.

8688. The two accounts handed to me were furnished in 1877 and 1878. Are they in the ordinary form received each year?—Yes.

8689. The account furnished in 1877 purports to be an account to November, 1876—in this account is it so passed?—Yes.

8690. The rental is stated at £375 10s. 9d., and the rental in the next year is returned as £405 10s. 9d. How does the difference arise?—Within the past few years several leases have fallen in.

8691. The difference I refer to does not arise from that cause. I find it is caused by a mistake in the tot of £30 against the charity in the first account, which if correctly added up would come to £395 10s. 9d., and not to £375 10s. 9d., and in the last account there appears this additional item—"Christopher Rynd £10"—He gave me £10 for the game on the property.

8692. That had not been let before?—Not before.

8693. Under the will of the founder twenty acres of land were allotted to the school. How is that managed?—The former master had £60 a year salary and the twenty acres of land, now the twenty acres of land are let simply for the season, but there is one small field reserved for the boys to play in.

8694. When was the system of letting the land first commenced?—About three or four months ago, when the late master left us.

8695. How much was it let for?—£30 for the season.

8696. Do you mean that twenty Irish acres of land, in the county of Kildare, were let for the season at £30?—Messrs. Dobbin are the agents. I do not interfere, but I may mention that a field for playground and the garden, which are reserved, form part of the twenty acres.

8697. Do you observe that this account does not carry forward the amount from the former account?—So I observe now, but I did not do so before. It is a very important omission.

8698. This is an account ending November, 1876. Do you know what period is covered by it?—No, I do not.

8699. Does it show on the face of it what period it covers?—I do not know.

8700. It contains amongst the items of expenditure a charge for two years' exchange paid to Lord Trillickstown, and for rentcharge paid to the Irish Church Commissioners, to 1st May, 1876, without saying for what period. Have you been in the habit of passing accounts which do not show on the face of them for what period they are, or what arrears were due when the account commenced?—I never passed an account of the kind in my life before.

8701. Have you any fixed period for asking your agent for an account?—I cannot say that there is.

8702. The other account which I have before me purports to be an account to 1st May, 1878, and, therefore, ought to be an account for a year and a half. Is not that so?—Yes; certainly.

8703. In this account I find charged a payment of five years' rent of the lands of Colclington, 1873 to 1877, at 16s. a year, and also a payment to Lord Trillickstown of two years' rent to November, 1877, so that you have four years' rent to Lord Trillickstown appearing in two accounts—one to November, 1876, and the other to May, 1878. Can you explain how it was these head-rents were allowed to run into arrears?—I cannot.

8704. Who fixed the rent to be paid by the tenant for the portion of the twenty acres he was to occupy?—The agents.

8705. The agreement, which is dated 18th April, 1875, has been handed in, and in it is as follows:—

"It is proposed to allow Mr. Thomas Henshaw, of Betaghstown, one of the trustees, the temporary custody of the lands, to determine on the 1st November, 1875, he paying for such occupation and use thereof the sum of £20, and undertaking to deliver up the quiet and peaceful possession on 1st November next, in good condition, and in as good a state as value, and this agreement to be construed as within the 66th section of the Irish Land Act, 1870."

How has the land been used?—There was about one and a half acres in stubble at the time, and about the same quantity was under potatoes and turnips. The rest is in grass.

8706. Has it been meadowed?—A portion of it was; I should think between three and four acres.

8707. Did anyone look after the land in Mr. Bonyage's time, to see that it was fairly treated by him?—I do not know that anybody had the power to do so, except the agent of the property. I never considered that I had the power to interfere with his farming operations at all.

8708. What is the letting value of land in the parish of Kildare?—I think that the land at Betaghstown is fairly worth 80s. an acre.

8709. How much of the land has Mr. Henshaw got?—There was a small field taken off, and also a large garden. I think there is about an acre in the field, and about another acre in the garden.

8710. You may leave the garden out of consideration, because what were originally given, were the offices and garden belonging to the dwelling-house, and twenty acres of the demesne, with a sufficient quantity of terry. Has the terry been made use of?—Not this year, as, unfortunately, there was a dispute about the draining of the bog among the tenants.

8711. Was anyone consulted about the letting to Mr. Henshaw, so far as you know?—I was under the impression that was the agents' business. I could think myself quite out of place, particularly in my own parish, valuing land.

8712. Was it not your duty to see that the land of which you were a trustee was let for the best value?—That is putting it hard on me, and perhaps I deserve it.

8713. The last account of Messrs. Dobbin and O'Connell with a balance due to them of £77 or 31s. It contains a number of payments made by them to Mr. Bonyage, the schoolmaster. How were the accounts which were payable to him quarterly certified to Messrs. Dobbin?—Mr. Bonyage used to come to me with his receipts every quarter, and I certified the accounts, which Messrs. Dobbin paid on my certificates.

8714. What check, if any, was there on Mr. Bonyage's expenditure?—He brought all his accounts for repairs and things of that kind to me. He had an allowance of 6d. per boy per day. His salary was £60 a year, with an allowance of £40 for servants and £30 for fuel.

8715. How does it happen that the maintenance and education of twelve boys of this class have cost so much in this school?—It has always been to me a mystery. I think it is a most unsatisfactory state of things.

8716. How many Protestants are there in the parish of Clane?—180 is an total Church population.

8717. What advantage to the school for poor Protestants, which Henshaw directed should be established and kept up upon the lands of Betaghstown, is proposed by moving it?—I can tell you the advantage, which seems to me to be very great, getting out of the question any advantage to the parish of Clane—namely, the house is unsuitable; and secondly, it is three miles away from the clergyman and superintendent.

8718. How does the will clearly contemplate a boarding-school. This house stands in twenty acres of its own lands rent free. What is there unsuitable in the house itself?—It is a rambling sort of large house—too big for twelve boys. There is also the position of the house.

8719. Is there anything in the position except the distance from the clergyman?—It is an exceedingly lonely place, such that if it were proposed to build a house for twelve boarders, and to establish a school there, I would exclaim against the selection of the site as a most unsuitable one.

8729. Recollect Mr. Hewitson selected the site, and directed the school to be built there?—I cannot enter into that.

8731. Would you exclaim against getting an endowment in the same place, on the condition of keeping up the school?—That would alter the aspect of affairs.

8732. What are the advantages to be gained by this charity, by its removal to Clane?—There is one great advantage—the boys being associated with other boys—we cannot have other boys where the school is now.

8733. What is the population of the village of Clane?—About 360 or 400; but it is not proposed to remove the school to the village, but to about half a mile from it, my opinion is that isolating twelve boys is very undesirable. The more you associate them with other boys the better.

8734. What other boys will they have to mix with?—There are the boys now attending the parochial school, and I expect that boys will come into the neighbourhood for the advantage to be derived from the school which we will establish.

8735. The will of the founder contemplates a school for both boys and girls. Is the house that at present exists large enough to have a department for girls as well as for boys?—No.

8736. What is the largest number that has been maintained there?—I do not know as to girls, but the largest of boys that ever came under my notice was fifteen.

8737. Had they not at one time girls there also?—I have heard so.

8738. Why was the practice discontinued?—I heard it was not found advisable to have the girls in the same building with the boys.

8739. Was not the house built for all?—No; it was the house in which old Hewitson himself resided, but there were two large wings built by the Bishop of Kildare, one of which has been taken down.

8740. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—You say you expect an increase in the number of boarders by removing the school, how do you propose to support the increased number?—I think the funds ought to be able to support some boys than we are supporting now.

8741. Do you contemplate selling the twenty acres of land if you effect the removal of the school?—No; it is only to be set from year to year, I presume the house and twenty acres will be let to a tenant.

8742. Where, then, do you expect to get the money to build the new schoolhouse?—Mr. Trench is to give £200; the other £700, which will be required, will be secured by the rent of the house and the twenty acres.

8743. Are you then going to saddle the charity with a debt of £700?—I think the £700 could be borrowed, on the security of the present house and twenty acres of land.

8744. LORD JUSTICE FITZGERALD.—Has it ever occurred to you to manage the charity as other char-ties are managed, and support twenty-four boys instead of twelve?—So many things have occurred to me about it that I am often at a loss; I was pretty well mystified about it before, but I feel more mystified now.

8745. Where did the twelve boys, at present in the school, come from?—From the adjoining parishes.

8746. Do you advertise when vacancies occur?—We send notice to a certain number of parishes; and where a clergyman has in his parish a boy whom he wants to get in, he applies for the vacancy.

8747. Have you had any vacancies recently?—I have one at present.

8748. How many applications have you for it?—This one has only occurred within the last couple of days; the number of applicants varies very much, sometimes there are six and sometimes only two.

8749. There have always been sufficient candidates to fill any vacancies that occur?—Yes.

8750. Who makes the actual selection of the boy to be admitted?—If there be a candidate from the parish of Clane he is necessarily appointed, on having the first claim, in other cases Colonel Gurneaford and myself recommend in turn, and unless there be something very extreme the other agrees, and we send the name forward to the two archbishops.

8751. Does your position in the parish of Clane give you any official connection with the school?—I am chaplain or manager by reason of my official position as Vicar of Clane.

8752. Who was your predecessor?—The Rev. Mr. Oulfield, who was in the same position as regards the school, except that he was not Vicar, and had no connexion with the money matters.

8753. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—Has your school ever been inspected by anyone?—Yes; it was inspected regularly, for some time, by Mr. Hamilton, who was the Inspector of the Church Education Society. His last inspection was about two years and a half ago.

8754. Did he make a report?—Yes.

8755. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—To whom did he make his report?—He sent it to me.

8756. Was it on your invitation he inspected the school?—It was.

8757. Does anybody inspect the school now?—Our present master has been appointed only about three months, and there has been no inspection since his appointment.

8758. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—What is the value of the property belonging to this charity?—Some time ago the trustees took into consideration whether it would not be desirable to sell the property and fund the money. I know that it was offered to one gentleman at twenty-five years' purchase, and he refused to give so much. The trustees consider that unless they get a close twenty-five years' purchase they could not sell it.

8759. LORD JUSTICE FITZGERALD.—Do you give the preference as to admission to boys who belong to the parish of Clane, in consequence of any direction in the existing scheme?—Yes, I am bound to do so. The Clane boys could claim it as a right.

MR. THOMAS HANNA, EXAMINED.

MR. T. HANNA.

8760. CHAIRMAN.—You are a member of the firm of Leonard Dobbin, and Co. I.—I am.

8761. Your firm are agents to the Betsaghtown estate?—Yes, Mr. Dobbin was appointed agent by the late Lord Privy Seal in 1856, and he acted as such for many years. He is now a very old gentleman, and for the last year or more has given up business. Mr. Dobbin's son looked after this estate for a time, but he has died, and it is only recently that I have taken up the accounts, and received the rents.

8762. Have you any other duties in connexion with this property except receiving the rents?—Only to look over the estate, and receive the rents.

8763. Have you a half on the property?—No; there is a great difficulty about that, because the people are not on very good terms with each other.

It is rather a wild district, and I would be very cautious about the class of men whom I would appoint to act as bailiff. I have been very anxious to get a suitable person.

8764. Who sees that the cropping is suitable, and that the land is not exhausted?—There are leases on all the farms, with the exception of one, the tenant of which refused to have a lease.

8765. What is the Government valuation of the estate?—I could not say.

8766. What is the acreage?—321A. 2R. 24P., statute measure.

8767. It is returned in the report of the former Commission as 321A. 1R. 27P.—There is a quantity of bog. The quantity I have named does not include the bog.

Sept. 24, 1878.

c. 11

8736. What sort of land is comprised in the 323 acres?—There is some of it very poor, but on the average it is fair land.

8739. Is it principally pasture land?—Young cattle are reared on it; but the bog is about 51, and there is a great deal of wet lying on the bog, particularly this year, which has been unseasonably wet. I consulted with Colonel Galsford in reference to having a main drain made through the bog. We proposed to contract with one of the tenants to make this drain, and that each man should drain his own piece, thus making this the principal gully to drain the land. There is a portion of it very bad, indeed.

8760. What is the letting value of the land?—I should think it is let fully at its value. There was a valuation made by Bramington and Gals some years ago, and on that the lettings were based.

8761. There has been a considerable rise in the rental in the last twenty years. Was that owing to the falling out of a lease?—Some leases fall out of very small tenants, and it was arranged that there should be leases given to the tenants remaining on. The under tenants were quieted, and compensation was given to them. There was a re-adjustment made of the lands.

8762. What was the date of that re-adjustment?—I think about 1873 or 1874. It was based on the valuation I have mentioned.

8763. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—What leases have the tenants got?—All, with the exception of Mr. Henningway, have leases for 51 years. Mr. Henningway's is a building lease for 61 years.

8764. Is there a map upon each of the leases?—Yes.

8765. The amount of arrears now due is not large. Do the tenants pay the rent punctually?—They pay remarkably well, considering this year. The first tenant in the rental is McCracken, who pays £109 a year. He pays his rent at any time he is called on for it. Thomas Henningway, who pays £37 11s. a year, has paid his last May rent. Lawrence Flood and Patrick Brady are two tenants who have not paid for two years, and we have brought ejectments against them; but there is nothing on their farms.

8766. You do not appear to have any fixed time for furnishing your account?—The tenants for some years were very irregular in their payments, and Mr. Dobbin furnished the accounts when he got in the rents.

8767. The account furnished to November, 1876, states what arrears were due at the expiration of the account, but there is nothing to show what arrears were due at the commencement?—There were no arrears.

8769. What was the debt on the charity three years ago?—It never much exceeded £90. Mr. Cooke mentioned that our firm keeps the accounts. All we do is to receive the rents and pay the husbandry, which are very small. A number of accounts, which had been examined and signed by Mr. Cooke or Colonel Galsford, were formerly furnished to us quarterly by Mr. Bonynge, the then schoolmaster, and we paid them out of the rents without asking any further consideration of them.

8770. What is the present balance in favour of the charity?—There is a balance of about £170, but against that there is a claim of £165, which must be paid at once, so that the balance is really only about £55.

8771. How was that £170 accumulated?—A lease to a Mr. Wilson expired, and the rent was considerably increased.

8772. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—In the account ending November, 1876, there is a charge for two years' husbandry paid to Lord Triminstown, and in the next account there is a further payment of two years' rent to him, and of five years' rent to Mr. Cassidy. The two years paid to Lord Triminstown, and charged in the first of those accounts, was up to November, 1875, and the other payment was up to November, 1877. We did not know to whom to pay Mr. Cassidy's rent, until he came into our office one day, and told us he was the person entitled to it, but that he had not applied before the amount was so small. The items have been received.

8773. My objection is that these accounts do not enable the trustees of the charity to see how they stand from year to year?—If they are taken with the vouchers belonging to them, they will clearly show for what periods they are.

8774. Are the dividends, which are received by a number of your firm, collected under power of attorney?—Yes.

8775. The rentals show that there have been considerable deductions for income tax. Have you applied from time to time to have that money refunded?—Never. The income tax was allowed to the tenants, and I was not aware that we could get it returned.

8776. Have you any fixed times for visiting the property?—No; we go down whenever there is a complaint.

8777. Do you not go down to collect the rents?—The tenants come to town and pay them. Most of them are connected with the markets.

8778. How do you manage the bog, upon the property?—The tenants have always had the right of cutting turf. Each family has had a portion from time immemorial.

8779. Do you make any money of the rest of the bog?—Nothing, except the shooting.

8780. How is the property in Drumcra left?—The tenant holds under a fine-farm grant, at a rent of £31 4s. 1d. a year.

8781. How is the Cooke property let?—On lease for 999 years.

8782. When was that lease made?—It is dated April 28, 1786.

8783. What was the date of the Drumcra grant?—The grant, which was dated 19th July, 1875, was made in pursuance of a covenant in a lease of 1774.

8784. How was the letting of the land adjoining the school made?—We let it for the season at the highest rent we could get.

8785. What is it worth to an ordinary tenant?—I should say 30s. or 35s. an acre. It is very fit land.

8786. Lord R. CHURCHILL.—Does your firm also manage other estates?—We do not do much in that line, but we have got other agencies.

8787. Do you keep the accounts of the other estates in the same way as these accounts are kept?—Mr. Dobbin kept the accounts himself, until within the last few years, but I believe the rule has been to follow that form.

8788. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—The last account you have furnished was up to the 1st May, 1878. When will the next account be furnished?—We are preparing an account at present, and will furnish it as soon as we get in the rent from two of the tenants. Four tenants owe rent up to May last. Two of them are particularly good, and will be certain to pay between this and November; the other two are under agreement.

8789. Lord R. CHURCHILL.—Can you form any idea of what would be the gross value of this property if it were in the market?—I never contemplated that, but I should think this is a property that would sell very well, since it lets very well.

8790. Chairman.—How many years' purchase would it bring?—Land just at present is selling very low, but I should think that on the present rental it would sell for twenty or twenty-one years' purchase.

Rev. SAMUEL GEORGE CUTTAR, M.A., Chairman

April 24, 1878.

Benjamin G. Cuttar, M.A.

8791. CHAIRMAN.—You are the master of the parish of Cough, near Clane?—I am.

8792. You desire to give some evidence with reference to Beaghstown school?—I wish first to make a personal explanation, as the Rev. Mr. Cooke has mentioned me as the person who opposed the removal of that school. This I did twelve months, or a little earlier, the matter was brought to my notice by one of his parishioners, who objected to the removal. I at first thought that bringing it nearer to Mr. Cooke's residence would be an advantage, but I made inquiry of others, and they appeared to think it was a job, to locate the parish of Clane, at the expense of the charity. The benefit of the present school is not confined nearly to the parish of Clane, but boys are received from different parishes round. Several people in the locality agree in thinking that if the school is to be removed at all, the expense of building a house, which I hear would be £1,000, might be saved by moving to an empty Diocesan School-house in the town of Naas. That is a large building, where the movement of the Beaghstown school might be very usefully employed by having pupils on the foundation. A clever man would, I am sure, undertake such a school in Naas, who would not go as parochial schoolmaster to Clane.

8793. How far is Naas from the present site of the school?—About three and a half or four Irish miles.

8794. In fact Naas is about the same distance from Beaghstown as Clane?—The two parishes, Naas and Clane, abut; but Farnham, the site which I hear is proposed, is not more than two miles from Beaghstown.

8795. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—Am I to understand from you that the parishioners of Clane are opposed to the change?—I am by no means able to say that, but the matter was brought before me by two of the parishioners; I could not speak as to the rest. The Rev. Mr. Cooke asks for the names of the two parishioners, but the Commissioners will understand there are various reasons why I should not mention the names.

8796. Is your own parish one which has the right of sending children to this school?—I only learned to-day, for the first time, that notices had been sent round to the various parishes when vacancies occur. I have been, for fifteen years, incumbent of Cough, and I never got a notice of any vacancy in the Beaghstown school.

8797. Do you know of any child from your parish having been admitted to Beaghstown school?—No.

8798. How far is your parish from Beaghstown school?—The borders of my parish are about two miles from the school, and my own residence is five miles.

8799. What is the population of your parish?—Between 1700 and 1800, including persons of all denominations.

8800. Are there many poor and dissolute among them?—A good many.

8801. Are many of these of the Protestant religion?—No.

8802. Are there many in your parish who would be qualified to derive benefit from the charity?—Some, but not many.

8803. Have any of your parishioners complained as to the fact that no child from your parish has been admitted to Beaghstown school?—No. I should mention that I have had a boarding school myself, since 1845, and if there was a desirous case the probability is I would receive it myself.

8804. The actual moving from one site to another would not inflict any injury on your parish?—No.

8805. Are there any other parties the inhabitants of which have made complaints about the project of moving the school?—Yes, a parishioner of Kilmagee, a parish which adjoins mine, spoke of it as likely to injure the people in Kilmagee, to the benefit of Clane. There can be no possible doubt that it would be great inconvenience to the parish of Clane to have a good endowment, with the teacher of the endowed school as the parochial schoolmaster of Clane. I wish also to mention that a parishioner of Clane told me that within his own memory there were fifteen boys and fifteen girls boarded in the school at Beaghstown.

8806. LORD JUSTICE FRYDEMAN.—He must have been a very old man, for there were no girls in the school in, or since, 1836?—He may have made a mistake.

8807. In the report of the Commissioners of 1837, it is stated:—

"In justice to the present Lord Priests, it is to be observed that he was not aware of the duties of 1836, or of his being a trustee of the charity at all, until many years after that date had been pronounced, and that as soon as he became apprized of the facts he adopted immediate steps to establish the school pursuant to the scheme of the Court of Chancery. This object was effected in the year 1836, since which period the school has been in operation. It is also to be observed that although the founder directed that girls as well as boys should be admitted to the establishment, yet the devise does not confer any provision for the reception of girls; the solution was not contentious, for it seems that the above possibility of boys and girls was not favorable to morality."

It appears from that, that if they had girls there at any time, it was, at any rate, without the authority of the scheme?—So it appears. I do not find any direction in the will of the founder that the school should be solely a boarding school.

8808. The will contains the words "to maintain and clothe." Does not that seem to imply a boarding-school?—Perhaps so.

8809. MR. O'BRIEN.—Has your suggestion that Naas should be selected instead of Clane been discussed?—Yes, frequently.

8810. Has it not with general approval?—Every person I spoke to approved of it.

8811. This will does not confine the benefits of the school to the parishioners of Clane?—Certainly not.

8812. Under the existing scheme a preference, however, is given to the boys from the parish of Clane?—I did not know that until the Rev. Mr. Cooke mentioned it to-day. In 1874 a Science Masterman of Trinity College would have taken the Diocesan School at Naas on the chance of making it a good school, but the Diocesan schoolmaster, who was even then very infirm, would not consent to it.

8813. Does the parish of Naas border on the parish of Clane?—Yes.

8814. Therefore, the inhabitants of Naas might be considered if a vacancy did occur which was not wanted by a Clane boy?—Of course. I know that one or two boys from the town of Naas are at present pupils in Beaghstown school.

8815. Is there not a pretty large Protestant population in the town of Naas?—Yes, in and immediately adjoining Naas, there is a large Protestant population.

8816. Do you not think that the movement to Naas, if a day school were to be at all joined to the present institution, would bring a much larger class of Protestant boys, who would require a better style of education than the poor in Clane?—That is my decided view. A first-rate commercial and classical school could be opened in Naas if there could be a certain amount of money guaranteed from the endowment, for which the teacher might be obliged to have pupils on the foundation.

8817. Therefore, if the intention of the testator as to the locality of the school were to be departed from at all, you think Naas would carry out his intentions more fully than Clane?—Yes.

8818. LORD JUSTICE FRYDEMAN.—And there are, in Naas, the Diocesan school buildings which have been abandoned?—Certainly.

8819. MR. O'BRIEN.—Are you acquainted with the structure of the Diocesan School-house at Naas?—I am.

8820. Would it be possible to have boys and girls

Aug. 18, 1879.
Rev. Edward G.
Cotton, M.A.

safely under that roof together?—I think it would be quite possible to have the Diocesan School at Naas so divided as to have two separate schools.

8871 LORD JEREMY FITZGERALD.—The Diocesan School at Naas was referred in 1857 as having accommodation for fifty-two pupils, of whom sixteen might be boarders?—I should say there would be accommodation for fifty-two boarders.

8872 MR. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—Is there at present a good Protestant school in Naas?—Opinions differ upon that subject.

8873 Is there any Protestant school there?—Yes; but a very small number of pupils attend it, and some of the people consider the school so indifferent that they are sending their children—some to the Naas' school and some to the Christian Brothers'. I personally regret that very much.

8874 If the Belginstown funds and institution were transferred to Naas, do you consider that, with the aid of the fees paid by Protestant children in the district attending as day scholars, you could have a good Protestant school there?—Certainly; and not merely would Protestants send their children, but also a great many Roman Catholics. The Rev. De Lane, the present, or rather the late Diocesan schoolmaster, had Roman Catholic boys attending his school.

8875 LORD R. CRENSHAW.—Is it your opinion that the public feeling in the neighbourhood is against the proposed change?—I think that it is decidedly against the change. If the residents in the neighbourhood were polled, they would say, "Let the school be moved to Naas," but I may add that if the parishioners of Clane were polled the majority might say, "This will be a benefit to our parish, and we will vote for the proposed move."

Rev. Andrew
Cooke, M.A.

REV. ANDREW COOKE, M.A., recalled.

8876 CHAIRMAN.—You desire to make a statement in reply to Mr. Cotton's evidence?—Yes. First of all, Belginstown has been described as distant from Naas three and a half or four miles. If I were to hire a car from Belginstown to Naas I should pay for eight miles. Clane, which is three miles distant from Belginstown, lies between them. Another thing that has been insisted on by Mr. Cotton is that the removal of this school to Naas has been canvassed in that town, and the idea favourably accepted. In the first place, I know that the Archbishop of Dublin, who is one of the trustees, would not allow it to be moved to Naas; secondly (and this Mr. Cotton knows perfectly well), the Vicar of Naas would not allow it to be moved there. In the third place, I was appointed on a committee by the Select Vestry of Naas to inquire into the state of education in the town, and to recommend what was best to be done with the diocesan school, and at that committee, which consisted of the Dean of Kildare, Dr. Hayes, and I may say all the influential people of the neighbourhood, this proposal was considered, and I did not hear a single word of approval of it. Moreover, there is a Protestant school at Naas—or at least there was one up to within the last few weeks, when the school, which has about seventy children on its roll, was put under the National Board.

8877 LORD JEREMY FITZGERALD.—In reference to your statement that this matter was considered by a committee of whom you were one, why was it that the application to remove the Belginstown School was considered at all?—It was in reference to the Diocesan School-house at Naas which was then shut up.

8878 Why was the proposal to remove the Belginstown endowment to Naas instead of to Clane unfavourably received?—The matter was not really discussed at all, it was so unfavourably received by the Vicar and the whole assembly. They thought that the endowment was for the parish of Clane under the will.

8879 As a matter of fact, if the will is to be departed from at all, would not the diocesan building now lying idle at Naas be a better site for the school than one in Clane?—I do not think so. In the first instance you could not get it, as Mr. De Burgh, to whom it belongs, would not give it. In the next place I would object to those boys being in the town at all.

8880 One of your objections to the present site was that it is too far from a town?—Clane could hardly be called a town, it is a small village.

8881 Does it not come to this, that you want to bring the school nearer to the church?—That is a very important reason.

8882 Is it not the only one?—No; but in that way it will be under the inspection of the clergyman of the parish. I also consider that the uniting of the parochial school with Belginstown school would benefit the Belginstown boys.

[The Commissioners adjourned.]

Sept. 16, 1879.

TWENTY-THIRD DAY—FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 26, 1879, 11 O'CLOCK, A.M.

In the Town Hall, Belfast.

PRESENT:—THE EARL OF ROSSE, Chairman; RICHARD O'SHAUGHNESSY, Esq., M.P.; and ARTHUR HILL CURTIS, Esq., M.P.; with JAMES CREED MERRITT, Esq., M.P., Secretary.

Rev. RICHARD JOHN BAYNE, M.A., examined.

Rev. Richard
John Bayne,
M.A.

8883 CHAIRMAN.—You are principal of the Belfast Academy?—I am.

8884 How long have you held that position?—I was appointed in February, 1876.

8885 Had you any other office in the Academy before that?—I was the head of the Mathematical department in the Academy for two years prior to my appointment as principal.

8886 What are your duties as principal?—There is some peculiarity in the constitution of this institution. It comprises four schools which are quite distinct from one another, and each of which has its own head master. These masters receive all the fees accruing from their respective departments, and employ their respective assistants. The principal is charged with the general superintendence of the establishment, and is bound to see that all are attending to their duties. He has a veto on the appointment of the assistant masters, and also upon the books that they may choose to use. I am also ex officio a trustee of the Academy, and in that way I am connected with the management of the property. For some portion of the time that I have been principal of the Academy I was also the head master of the classical school, and taught in that department. That, however, is an office which in my opinion ought to be separated from the office of principal, and it is expected that in future the principal will not be in charge of any one department. It has been found that wherever the head of the institution has a particular department of his own he is under a strong temptation to favour that branch of education, and secondly it is considered desirable—and this is my suggestion—that the principal should touch something which will bring him into contact with all the pupils in the institution, in order that he may judge, not merely as to their actual knowledge, but also as to the general culture they receive, and that he may be able to form an opinion, without any special consultation, whether the masters who communicate the knowledge are communicating it in such a way as to train and develop the faculties of the children. The Academy was founded in the end of the year 1788, by subscription (the subscribers being called patrons), and it was opened for teaching only in 1786. The original subscription, £288 13s. 6d. (Irish), appears to have been transcribed for the purpose of purchasing the ground, and buildings intended for the use of the Academy, and adapting the latter to the purposes of teaching. Thus a sum of £700 (Irish), was borrowed from a fund which had been created for Presbyterian Church purposes, by the will of Mr. Arthur Maxwell, in 1790, but a great portion of which had been expended in litigation with his heirs. One of the objects of this fund was to assist in the education of young men for the Presbyterian ministry; and as the new seminary was intended to furnish not only a school education, but also classes equivalent to the undergraduate course of the Scotch Universities, to which Presbyterian students then resorted, it was thought that they, along with other professional and non-professional students, might thus obtain the requisite college training in their own country, and the Maxwell trustees thought this was the nearest approach they could make to fulfilling the testator's instructions. To secure this loan the premises were mortgaged, and there was an understanding that while the premises were used as a place of education, no interest should be charged, but the mortgage itself continue as covenant to that effect. No record of this transaction appears in the minutes of the institution, but the existence of the debt and mortgage is recognised in a minute, dated 13th May, 1793, the mortgage is dated 27th October, 1786, and no interest was ever paid on it. Subsequently two mortgages dated, respectively, 30th April, 1803, and 28th August, 1822, and amounting, together, to £700 (Irish), were granted to the Rev. Dr. Bruce, the then principal, for monies expended by him in improvements upon which mortgages, Dr. Bruce was to receive no interest while he held the office of principal, but it was agreed that after his resignation the money due to him should bear interest. He was succeeded in 1822 by Mr. Gray, who had to undertake to pay the interest upon these charges; and when I was appointed in 1830, I was in like manner obliged to pay the interest upon the mortgages to Dr. Bruce. The property was, at that time, held under a terminable lease, of which only thirty-nine years were unexpired, and I repeatedly urged the patrons to endeavour to raise funds to pay off the debt to Dr. Bruce, and to procure a renewal, in perpetuity, of the lease, but no such attempt was made; the trustees, however, themselves, advanced money in equal shares to take up Dr. Bruce's mortgages (£700 Irish); and one of them took out a renewal, in perpetuity, advancing the amount of the renewal fine, £700 (British). Thus the position of the Academy was improved, though its debt was increased. Continued appeals to the patrons to raise funds for paying off these debts and rebuilding the Academy, having proved unavailing, we, the principal and trustees, offered to undertake to raise the money, by affixing value to teaching to subscribers, on condition of our having a share in the patronage and management of the property secured to us. This offer was accepted, and the constitution of the Academy was accordingly modified in 1834. A new subscription was then opened, on the understanding that the proceeds thereof should be used in paying the debts (on clearing the title), and in erecting new buildings, and it was agreed that if the subscription did not prove sufficient for both purposes, the deficiency should be made up by borrowing, which it was thought could easily be done, on the title, when simplified by the clearing off of the mortgages. The subscription was opened, and when £1,200 had been collected, two of the trustees having died, their executors pressed for payment of the amounts due to them, and the remaining trustees then advanced the sum necessary to make up, with the £1,200 so collected, the entire amount due on the institution, and the whole debts were paid off, and the three mortgages were conveyed, leaving only outstanding the sum advanced by the surviving trustee, and the Maxwell £700, which we were at that time unable to liquidate, and was not a subsisting charge. Attempts were then made to borrow £1,500 upon the security of the property for the purpose of rebuilding, but lawyers, of the highest standing, who were then consulted, gave very various opinions as to whether the Maxwell mortgage was or was not a subsisting charge on the property, and they all advised an appeal to the Court of Chancery. From this the great majority of those interested mutually shrunk, till Sir Hugh Curzon, now Lord Chancellor of England, being one of the patrons, and an old pupil of the institution, overcame their objections. The Court of Chancery declared that the Maxwell mortgage had lapsed, but to dismiss a threatened opposition, on the part of the Commissioners of Charitable Bequests, it was arranged that two free scholarships, bearing Mr. Maxwell's name, should be instituted, on terms in accordance with Mr. Maxwell's will. About the year 1796, the Donegall-street frontage of some ground adjoining the Academy, and included in the lease thereof, had been sold to Dr. Bruce, under a lease which expired on the 1st May, 1805; and as several valuable houses had been built upon that ground, the value of the property was greatly increased. The whole property has, since that date, been let at a gross annual rental of £635, one of the tenants paying £1,500 on getting his lease, in consideration of getting it at a lower rent than was at first asked. Another, whose rent was fixed at £560 a year, agreed to fine down £460 of that within four years, by payments to be due on the 1st of November, 1878, 1879, 1880, and 1881; those four payments will produce for the institution a capital sum of £8,500. A fresh subscription was opened in 1855, which, with interest, amounted at 25th November, 1870, to £1,328 2s. 4d., which sum was invested in New Three per Cent. stock. The dividends thereon were annually reinvested till, in December, 1878, the entire stock was sold. A sum which had been declared charged on the property, under the decree in the Chancery proceedings of 1864, was paid, and the balance, which amounted to £1,129 7s. 9d., was lent, on good security, at call, at 5 per cent. The tenants are John McKenna, who paid the fine of £1,500, which I have mentioned, and whose rent is, in consequence, only £235 per annum; William McGrath, who pays £120 per annum; John Hogg, whose rent was fixed at £560 a year, to be reduced in the way that I have stated, by the payment of £8,500, to the sum of £180 a year; John Franklin, who pays £10 a year, and John Gordon, whose rent is £30 a year, making a total rental of £265 to be reduced by £460 per annum, on 1st November, 1881, from which date the rental will be only £805, subject to a head-rent payable to Lord Donegall, of £10 7s. 6d. The Peer Law valuation of McKenna's holding is £55, of McGrath's, £70, and of Hogg's, £189. The other two tenants have only portions of their respective holdings under the Academy. Their valuations are respectively £58 and £40, but what share of this falls on the portions they hold from us I cannot tell, nor what rent they pay to the landlords of the other portions.

8837. Have you selected a new site for the institution?—Yes, one has been taken near the Antrim-road, containing 2½ ac. 17½ p., at the annual rent of £143 10s., and new school buildings are being erected thereon. Deducting the rent of this ground from the gross profit rent arising from the old premises, there will remain a rental of £401 2s. 6d. as an endowment.

8838. Mr. O'SHEA'S QUESTION.—How did the apparent confusion arise, as to Franklin's and Gordon's holdings?—Franklin's holding comprises ground forming the site of other premises held by him, but not under the Academy, and Gordon has ground situated circumstantially. The confusion arose in this way—Dr. Bruce, who was tenant to the Academy, under the lease I have mentioned, sublet the ground, and one of his undertenants, who had taken, for a longer term, an adjoining piece of ground, which did not belong to the Academy, erected buildings, partly on the ground belonging to the Academy, and partly on his other holding: the consequence of this was, that, in 1865, when the old lease to Dr. Hume expired, the sub-tenants were in a very awkward position, and we, as trustees of the Academy, were obliged to deal with them in a way which may have seemed very hard. We called upon them to pay rent to us for the portion of ground which belonged to the Academy, and finally we made agreements with them, under which they pay us—one £10 a year, and the other £30.

8839. How much of the £8,000 have you already received from Mr. Hogg?—£3,500.

8840. How have you invested that money?—We have applied it in paying the instalments to the contractor for the new buildings, which are going on, on another site.

8841. CHAIRMAN.—Is the school closed at present?—It is not absolutely closed, but there are only a few boys remaining. Some persons were in favour of closing the school entirely while the new buildings were going on, but others thought that it would be better not to suspend the continuity of the school, and so a few boys are kept on at a little sacrifice of income. The new school-house will be ready in May, and just now we have, properly speaking, no school-rooms, but are carrying on our work in two rooms temporarily hired for the purpose.

8842. You are investing in the new buildings the first you receive on letting your old premises?—The first instalments payable to the contractor for the new buildings were met out of the funds that had been collected by the subscription I have already mentioned, but after we made the agreement with Mr. Hogg we let these funds remain at interest, at 5 per cent, and applied Mr. Hogg's instalments. Our agreement with him is that we will allow the money to remain in his hands, he giving us each instalment as we want it, and paying us interest for what balance he holds.

8843. Mr. O'SHEA.—What rate of interest does he pay?—5 per cent.

8844. How much have you already paid to your architect and builder?—£4,500.

8845. £2,500 of that came from Mr. Hogg?—Yes.

8846. Whence did the other £2,000 come?—It consisted of the £1,500 which McKenna paid as a fine, and subscriptions.

8847. Therefore only £500 has come from the subscriptions?—The first money that was paid was £500 from the subscriptions, on the 23rd August, 1873. We have £716 of our subscriptions remaining.

8848. Are not the subscriptions intended, under the scheme, to provide for the education of pupils?—Yes.

8849. And for the maintenance of the teaching staff, and so on?—No; not for the maintenance of the teaching staff. To provide suitable buildings was the primary purpose for which they were intended.

8850. Does that appear by the scheme?—I am not certain whether it appears from the scheme; but it appeared from the circular which we issued when we were asking for the subscriptions.

8851. The principle appears to have been that subscribers of certain sums of money were to have the power of nominating pupils at reduced fees?—Yes; in entirely free according to the amount of the subscription. The principle was this, that every man who gave £50 or upwards was to have tuition to the amount of 5 per cent, on his subscription; but this alternative was introduced—if a man gave 200 guineas he was entitled, if he so preferred, to have his name perpetuated by a scholarship, to be called after him and to be awarded by public competition. In framing the scheme it was thought more desirable to make use of the scholarships, as a stimulus to pupils of lower schools, and, therefore, that there should be open scholarships. When asking a man for 200 guineas you could not prescribe whether he would keep the scholarship in his own hand, or throw it open to competition. We gave him his choice.

8852. Then it was intended that some of the money of the subscribers, if they so desired, should be devoted to giving scholarships?—I should rather have said to giving free teaching. The teacher is paid for taking these free pupils, by having his school-rooms and some modest fees.

8853. Then all the subscriptions are in reality available for building purposes?—Yes.

8854. And you have hitherto spent only £500 out of the subscriptions on building purposes?—That is so. The rest is bearing interest, and will be the last thing we shall touch.

8855. CHAIRMAN.—How much shall you require to pay off the contractor?—The contract is for £9,100, and when that is all paid we shall have about £1,500 left out of Mr. Hogg's fine, and with that we shall probably build a master's house.

8856. Is Mr. Hogg's £8,000 secured to you?—Yes, it is arranged in the lease that he is bound to find down the rent.

8857. Mr. O'SHEA.—I suppose it is charged on the property, by way of mortgage?—Yes, virtually.

8858. CHAIRMAN.—How do you hold the site of the new buildings?—We held it under a lease for 999 years.

8859. What was the object of moving the school?—It will be in a better situation. The old building was entirely surrounded by places of business, having a crowded thoroughfare on each side, which was considered undesirable. The present building is on higher ground, and very beautifully situated.

8860. The result of all that has taken place, that when you are in possession of the new premises you will have something about £400 a year, as an endowment, after paying your rent?—Yes.

8861. Then, in fact, the institution is a good deal better off now than it was 20 years ago?—A good deal, indeed. I ought to add that there are a number of subscriptions unpaid. Some gentlemen paid part of the subscriptions they promised, in order to make them selves eligible as directors. One gentleman, who subscribed 250 guineas, said, "I have gone so deeply into my allowance for public matters this year as I can. I will give 100 guineas now, and pay the other 150 next year." That has not been asked for since.

8862. Mr. O'SHEA.—You consider that money is secure?—Yes. There are a number of subscriptions, to the amount of £200 or £300 outstanding, which we will call in now.

8863. CHAIRMAN.—How did you ascertain the value put on the lettings of the property?—By consulting people who were judges. The part Mr. Hogg took had been for a long time advertised to be let, either in one lot or in parcels. We were very glad to get an offer for it as a whole. Mr. Hogg got it cheap, but, as it was a wholesale transaction, we thought he was entitled to consideration. It is a great advantage to the Academy to have it all in one occupier's hands, and the rent well secured. Mr. Hogg has already created a store on it, which must have cost him £1,500, and he has paid us £3,500. So that our security is very safe.

8864. Who made the lettings?—They were made in accordance with the rules laid down in the scheme on the subject, and I think that the bargain made was as good as we could have expected.

8865. Mr. O'SHEA.—How many nominations for pupils, free or partially free, have been already secured to individuals, by reason of their subscriptions?—There are only three persons at present entitled to absolutely free nominations—two subscribers of £300 each, and another of £315, and then there are also the two Maxwell scholarships, which I have already mentioned. That will make five pupils absolutely free. Then there are a number of subscribers of £100, who will be entitled to nominate pupils at half fees, and the subscribers of £50 are entitled to nominate pupils at a reduction of one-fourth.

8866. You have no fear that the diminution of revenue, consequent on these reductions or remissions of fees, will prove hereafter a burden to the school, and all your classes with non-paying boys, to the detriment of the masters?—No; there will not be more than a dozen.

8867. Do you intend, after you have condensed the building, to continue the practice of condensing these free or partially free places, by receiving subscription?—That point has never been considered; but I wish very much that we had two or three more 100 guinea subscribers.

8868. You do not anticipate any exaggerated or dangerous number of free pupils?—No; I do not apprehend that at all. I think very few of the subscribers will avail themselves of their privilege, and I think the scholarships given by competition will be an advantage; because we shall advertise the competition for those scholarships, and thereby we shall get the ablest boys out of the class for whose benefit they are intended.

8869. CHAIRMAN.—In fact some of the scholarships will lapse, owing to the donors not claiming their right to nominate?—Not the scholarships, but the nominations to instruction at reduced rates.

8870. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—Is the right of nomination to descend from the subscriber to somebody else here?—Yes, we thought the best way of raising money was to give value for it.

8871. CHAIRMAN.—In the report of 1857 it is stated that the school, as it then existed, was seated in twenty boarders, has it seemed to be a boarding school now?—It has, in consequence of the boarding house having been let. There is just now no accommodation for either boarders or masters. I live in a house of my own, and derive no income as principal, which is a purely honorary office.

8872. Have there been boarders in the school within your recollection?—Yes; I had eighteen or twenty myself.

8873. When did they come?—The buildings were getting so dreadfully dilapidated that the boarders desisted during the last few years of my residence. In 1845 I withdrew from the classical school, left the school residence, and went to live elsewhere on my private means; but I still continued to superintend, and spent a good deal of my time in the Academy for a number of years. Latterly I have not been able to do so much; but I am still superintending it, and I undertake but winter to teach a class. However, I was obliged to give that up in consequence of a severe illness.

8874. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—Do you intend to make provision for boarders in your new building?—Yes.

8875. Dr. CURRIE.—Is it intended that the boarders are to reside in the head master's house?—That is not decided. My opinion is that there ought to be two boarding houses; that the head master should take boarders at a very high figure, and that another master should take boarders on more moderate terms.

8876. Should the houses for that purpose be part and parcel of the school?—I suppose they will be, but perhaps we may prefer to have a house, at a little distance from the school, for the head master, and to let the house, on the ground connected with the school, be used as the second boarding house; but there is nothing whatever settled.

8877. Is it contemplated that that shall be the only remuneration of the head master?—We contemplate guaranteeing a certain sum for three years to start the institution, and to secure suitable masters, there are at present no assistant masters; I am now myself the only master on the regular foundation of the institution.

8878. You can hardly expect always to get an efficient head master without a salary?—Not at first.

8879. CHAIRMAN.—What fees are the paying pupils charged?—Four guineas for classics; four guineas for mathematics, including arithmetic; I give the fees now as they were before I retired; and I do not think they will be lowered. Arithmetic, without classics, £2 2s.; geography, £2 2s.; writing, £2 2s.; English, £2 2s. There are all paid to the several masters.

8880. Then £16 16s. is the most any boy will be charged?—Yes.

8881. Is it the intention to give the masters fixed salaries out of the endowment, and also to let them have their fees as well?—No, we do not intend to give any fixed salary, but only to guarantee, for three years a minimum income—that is, if the fees do not amount to the stipulated sum, we shall make it up.

8882. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—Is there any provision made for instruction in the physical sciences?—My first care on becoming principal, in 1839, was to institute a leading library for the use of the pupils. There had been no provision made for the physical sciences, and my next step was to make arrangements for having Natural Philosophy taught. However, peculiar circumstances led us to begin with Natural History, instead of Natural Philosophy. The Academy had not an article of apparatus, not a single specimen in Natural History. In 1838, my brother and colleagues, the late Dr. James Blyde, introduced Geology as part of his course of Geography; and as the study of geology requires a knowledge first of mineralogy and then of Zoology and Botany, these sciences also were introduced, and to promote the study of these subjects he founded a museum, which on his removal to Glasgow, in 1844, had so increased as to contain a complete suite (for the purposes of instruction) of minerals and rocks, the latter comprising a very complete collection of specimens of all the important geological formations in the north-east of Ireland, but since 1844 it has been much neglected. Since the letting of the old premises the library has been stored in rooms kindly lent by Mr. Young, the relative in the chancery suit, till the new buildings be ready. The museum is lodged in the same place for the present. As natural history in its different departments—mineralogy, geology, zoology, and botany—formed part of the geographical course, and as geology is intimately connected with geography, my brother introduced it as part of that course. So, in like manner, Natural Philosophy being closely connected with mathematics, he made it part of the work of his mathematical classes, but he had to get apparatus at his own expense. When his pupils had gone through the first six books of Euclid, and a corresponding amount of algebra, he taught them first the elements of Natural Philosophy, and then of chemistry, on two days in the week, and pure mathematics on the other days. This plan, of having the natural sciences taught by one of the regular staff of masters, appears to me to be much better than that of employing a separate master for physical sciences, as is usually done. It will be my wish, if I can prevail upon the Council to carry it out, to make it a first object in appointing the new master of the mathematical school, to have one capable of carrying on that system. It is vastly more important that that should be taught by a man knowing the boys and constantly communicating with them, than that a hiring should be brought in for an hour or half an hour twice a week to teach it.

8883. Do you intend that the course of mathematical and physical science shall be included under the £4 4s. now payable for mathematics, or must there be an additional fee?—My desire is that there should be no additional fee; that was the way in which it was done before, and it answered so well that I would be very sorry if the Council will not revive it.

8884. CHAIRMAN.—Do you intend to make any provision for teaching modern languages?—Yes; we have had teachers of modern languages. There was a French master who was considered part of the staff; but, according to my view, he was not one of the foundation masters, but was merely an accessary; there has, however, always been a French master.

8885. Do you mean there has been a foreigner?—Yes.

8886. Do you consider a foreigner would be superior, as a teacher of modern languages, to an Irishman or an Englishman?—No; I think not. I think that, as a rule, no Frenchman can teach the elements of French properly, because he does not know the difficulties which the pronunciation presents to English organs. An English-speaking gentleman who has thoroughly mastered French pronunciation will be found, for beginners, better than a Frenchman. Certainly for the advanced pupils a native of each country would be preferable; but you cannot have a native of every foreign country amongst your masters. My opinion is that French and Latin ought to be taught together, and that as soon as a boy has a tolerable stock of Latin vocabularies he should be taught French, and be shown the laws of mutation, whereby the Latin has passed into the French. In that way you lay the foundation for a good knowledge of the higher studies of comparative philology. I am decidedly of opinion that no man should be taken for the classical mastership that is not able to teach French. There knows only one Frenchman who was able to teach French pronunciation well to beginners. French masters, as a rule, will pronounce a word for you, and if you can let it off, well and good, but if not, they let it alone in despair. That is the chief reason why so few people pronounce French well.

8897. Would it not be possible, in Belfast, to find a Frenchman, a German, and an Italian, who would be employed elsewhere in the neighbourhood, and to secure their attendance at the Academy, say three times a week?—I think that would be desirable after boys have, in the first place, learned the pronunciation as well as a person who is not a native can teach it, and in the next place after they have got a tolerable acquaintance with the derivation of French words from Latin roots, and the comparison of French constructions with Latin constructions. Latin ought to be made the foundation of instruction in all the Romance languages. In the same manner the teacher of English ought to compare the German with the English, which would make the learning of German vastly easier. I have myself drawn up a series of rules for the mutation of Latin words into French, Italian, and Spanish, and for the difference between the German and the English, and I shall probably publish it.

8898. Is the Academy a denominational institution?—It is not at all denominational. There is no restriction whatever on the religion of the pupils.

8899. It appears that certain bodies are entitled to send forward candidates for the Maxwell scholarships?—Yes. The history of that matter is—when we instituted the proceedings in Chancery to which I have already referred, the Master reported in our favour that the Maxwell charge had lapsed. The Commissioners of Charitable Bequests, one of whom is a Presbyterian minister, threatened to appeal against the Master's decision; and when the matter came before the Lord Chancellor, it was proposed, as a compromise, that we should allow free scholarships constituted in the spirit of Mr. Maxwell's will, and they would withdraw the threatened opposition. In that way the Maxwell scholarships were established, and they were limited to Presbyterians, because Mr. Maxwell's will was entirely for the benefit of Presbyterianism, and one part of it referred specially to the education of students for the Presbyterian ministry. Without contravening Mr. Maxwell's will, we could not have opened these scholarships. The several bodies of Presbyterians in Ireland, it was arranged, should select candidates, and send them forward to compete for the scholarships.

8900. Do Clerics—but in contemplation to establish any school exhibitions, assisting scholars from free scholarships?—I think it would be very desirable to do so.

8901. They have been established in other places?—Yes.

8902. And the general opinion is that they work very well?—Yes, I hope some of our old pupils who are wealthy will give exhibitions.

8903. You have an endowment fund of £400 a year?—If that be not required for other purposes, we may devote some of it to that object.

8904. CHAIRMAN.—With regard to the religious denominations of the pupils, I find that in 1857 there were 133 on the roll, of whom 25 belonged to the United Church, 1 was a Roman Catholic, 95 were Presbyterians, and 21 belonged to other denominations.

How any appreciable number of Roman Catholics taken advantage of the school within your recollection?—Yes, I have had under me, in the classical school, many Roman Catholics, two or three of whom are now eligibles in the Roman Catholic Church.

8895. Mr. O'SHEA.—Did that continue up to the time you left your old buildings?—I think when the opposition to mixed education arose Roman Catholics ceased to attend the Academy.

8896. What was the latest date at which you had Roman Catholic pupils?—We really never took cognizance of the religion of the pupils.

8897. Was any religious instruction given to leaders in the school?—Certainly.

8898. Were the boarders all Protestants?—I have had Roman Catholic boarders.

8899. Were they allowed to absent themselves from religious instruction?—In one instance the religion of the boy desired that he should not attend family worship, and, of course, he was excused.

8900. CHAIRMAN.—How does the Academy differ from the Academical Institution?—Simply in this—that the Academical Institution has no Principal, the masters are all on a par. In the Academy the masters are associated with the directors in the general management in the Academical Institution they are not. I am not aware of any other distinction.

8901. The educational course is very much the same?—Quite the same. The constitution of the Academy arose in this way—in Belfast, prior to its date I have given you as the foundation of the Academy, there were a number of different schools, conducted by independent masters, in different parts of the town, and boys went from one to the other, and when the Academy was founded these were combined. I believe that Dr. Croghan, the first principal, and a Scotchman, intended the Academy to be a college as well as a public school, and the plan was followed on for a little while, but the funds which they raised were not at all adequate for that, and the college department was dropped about the year 1796.

8902. Mr. O'SHEA.—When you speak of a college department, do you mean an institution for passing higher studies?—Yes. I mean a course equal to the undergraduate course of the Scotch universities. The idea was afterwards taken up by the founders of the Academical Institution, who carried it out vigorously and well. They had an undergraduate course on the model of the Scotch universities, which was what Dr. Croghan originally intended.

8903. CHAIRMAN.—Was it always the practice in the Academy, up to the time the school closed, that the pupils were, some of them in one school, and some in another?—Constantly, but the senior pupils generally attended all the four schools in our department or another. The Academy consists of four schools, as stated in the scheme. They are the Classical, the Mathematical, the Writing, and the English schools. The scheme gives the Principal a defined authority over the other masters, but they have a share in both the internal and external government of the institution. Their position is, therefore, very different from that of the "under-masters" in other public schools. They are also guarded against arbitrary dismissal, and are associated with the directors to form the council.

8904. Mr. O'SHEA.—I find in the report of the Commissioners of 1857, this sentence:—

"If the pupils are designed for mercantile pursuits, their attention is—should seek the wish of their parents—confined to the branches that bear upon commerce; and if intended for professions, they can follow the studies necessary for such pursuits."

Do the boys who choose to pursue a mercantile course omit classical?—They may do so, but a great many intended for business study classical.

8905. What does the mercantile course consist of?—English, Geography, Writing, Arithmetic, and Book-keeping. Of course geography involves the study of natural history; and a great many Belfast merchants have studied natural history in the Academy.

8906. Does the commercial course, as a rule, re-value the study of mathematics?—No; not necessarily.

8907. Does it involve the study of the other physical sciences beyond natural history?—It does not involve anything beyond what the parents choose.

8908. As a matter of practice, if you wanted to train out commercial gentlemen, what branches would they be taught?—If they take mathematics, that entitles them to instruction in natural philosophy and chemistry; but if they do not take mathematics they would not receive instruction in those branches.

8909. Has any considerable number pursued this so-called commercial course?—Yes, a great many.

8910. Is it quite possible to turn men out with well-cultivated minds without a knowledge of the classics?—Yes, but not so highly cultivated.

8911. They are capable of appreciating what is good in culture afterwards?—Yes; a number of them study French; a few German; and a few Spanish.

8912. Is it contemplated, in the future of the Academy, to give facilities for that exclusive commercial education?—Yes. The decision as to such boy is, of course, left entirely to his parents; we give them all the good advice we can, but they do not always follow it. I do not remember that I ever knew a pupil whose father entirely submitted to the direction of the Academy, except one, and that was in the case of the present Lord Chancellor of England; his father did exactly whatever we wished.

8913. CHAIRMAN.—Was he educated in the Academy?—Yes.

8914. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—Do you expect that in future a reasonably large number will pursue the commercial course?—I do.

8915. CHAIRMAN.—We hope that under the new regime you will continue to send out, not only distinguished men, but also good average men?—That is what I most desire; I have always said, "I am willing to count distinguished pupils with any man, but I would rather count dozens." The true test to apply to a school is not the sending out of the greatest number of distinguished men, but the smallest number of dozens.

Mr. ROBERT YOUNG, examined.

Mr. R. Young

8916. CHAIRMAN.—You produce the plans showing the ground on which you are erecting the new buildings for the Belfast Academy?—Yes; and these other plans will show the general arrangement of the building.

what less than two statute acres; there is also to be a covered playground, in the basement of the building.

8918. Is it to be entirely a boys' school?—Entirely.

8919. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—The plans show that there will be room for twenty-four borders?—Yes; and without incurring any extra expense.

Mr. CHARLES HENRY BRIDE, examined.

Mr. Charles H. Bride

8920. CHAIRMAN.—You have been solicitor for the Belfast Academy?—I have.

8921. Is the property of the institution entirely composed of house property?—It is.

8922. How is it held?—It is held in the names of William Erwin, M.P., Thomas Sinclair, and Rev. Dr. Bryon, as trustees. The site for the new buildings is also held in the names of the same trustees.

Mr. WILLIAM JOHN CAMPBELL AILEY, examined.

Mr. Wm. J. C. Ailey

8923. CHAIRMAN.—What position do you hold in connection with the Belfast Academical Institution?—I am now one of the Vice-presidents. I was for 35 years Secretary to the Institution, and was so at the time of the report of the last Endowed Schools Commission.

8924. For what period do you hold the office of Vice-president?—The Vice-presidents are appointed for a period of four years, and we retire by rotation.

8925. Is the retiring Vice-president eligible for re-election?—No. According to the constitution of the Institution, no man can be re-appointed to the same office he has previously held, but he may be appointed to some other office. In that way they are generally retained, unless for some good reason. Sometimes deaths, resignations, or gentlemen leaving the country necessitate the appointment of new men, and we find some difficulty in that, as the number of persons qualified to act, and who are resident in the town, is very small.

8926. Of what does the present endowment of the Institution consist?—We have very little to add in that way to what was stated in the paper which I had the honour to submit to the Endowed Schools Commissioners in 1883, and which is contained in the first volume of the evidence given at that Commission, pp. 343-345.

8927. In the schedule to the report of that Commission I find this statement as to the foundation of the institution:—

"Subscriptions expended in building, £16,979; Lord Dorset, grant of land, comprising nearly part of £22 12s. 10d., 1669; John Park, M.P., 12th November, 1615, devise of house property; Professor Sullivan, donation, £100; Dr. Drummond's bequest, £117 1s. 8d.; Mr. Tennant's donation, £46 2s. 1d."

Have you still those various sums?—They all remain; but the sum expended in building has been largely increased since that return was made. Within the last year we spent about £1,000 in additional buildings. At the date of the former Royal Commission there was a debt of something about £1,500 due by the Institution, and we have since entirely cleared that off, and raised several thousand pounds in addition, which we have spent partly in building, and partly in maintaining the premises. So that the amount expended on the buildings has been increased to close on £30,000, which was all raised by voluntary contributions.

8928. Where is the building situated?—It is on the western side of Belfast.

8929. Is it the same building which existed 20 years ago?—Precisely.

8930. Have you any endowment except what is invested in the buildings?—Nothing. We are entirely dependent upon voluntary contributions. We have, however, recently had two or three bequests and donations for the founding of scholarships in the Institution. For instance, the late Mr. John Porter of this town, by his will, ordered that a sum of money should be paid by his executors, sufficient to pay two annual premiums of £25 each to scholars in the Institution. That sum is now invested in three per cent. Consols.

8931. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—In whose name does it stand?—In the Corporate name. The Institution is, by Act of Parliament, a Corporation. A Miss Clouston also gave 5,000 dollars, Equitable Trust bonds of New York, for the creation of certain premiums. She made it almost a surplus was that we should retain the money in that form, at least so long as these bonds continue in force.

Sept 16, 1879
Mr. William
I. C. Allen.

8932 Have you done so?—We have done so, of course.

8933 CHAIRMAN.—What income is derived from that fund?—It has varied a good deal. One year it did not exceed £20, and another year it reached £30.

8934 Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—Have you any person to inquire of from time to time as to the suitability of that investment?—Certainly.

8935 Are you satisfied that it is a sound investment?—It is. I believe the bonds have now matured, and will be paid off at par.

8936 CHAIRMAN.—Is there any other endowment?—I am not aware of anything that we can call, properly speaking, an endowment, except these two sums. A subscription of 20 guineas constitutes the subscriber, under the Act of Parliament, a proprietor. The word, "proprietor," however, is a very improper one; because they have no property whatever in the Institution, and derive no profit from it. It is a mere franchise.

8937 Have the proprietors a right to nominate pupils?—The subscribers of 100 guineas alone have a right to nominate pupils to be educated free on the foundation. When once that right has been exercised by an individual it is entirely extinguished.

8938 Are there any more enduring rights, for life or for ever?—None.

8939 What do your subscriptions generally amount to now, taking one year with another?—It varies very much. Some years we do not get a guinea, but in other years, when exertion is made, we get something substantial, for instance, while the debt was hanging over the institution some of us made rather extra exertions to get it cleared off; and we got in the course of two or three years £4,000; and we got for the purpose of extending our buildings £2,000 within the last four or five years.

8940 You had at one time a Government grant?—We had £1,500 a year.

8941 That was discontinued on the foundation of the Queen's College?—Yes; and the withdrawal of that grant placed us in a very awkward position; for although Parliament appropriated about £1,350 of the grant to particular gentlemen, professors in the institution, to whom we were obliged to pay the money, it still left us a margin of £150 a year, which we could apply to the maintenance of the buildings and library, and to awarding exhibitions or prizes as we chose for the purpose of promoting education.

8942 How is the site of the school held?—Under a fee-farm grant from the Donegal family.

8943 What rent is it subject to?—£22 14s. 1d. In speaking of the property belonging to the Institution, I should have mentioned that we own the site of the old barracks in this town. At one time, before the foundation of the Queen's College, we had a medical school attached to the Institution, and as we required premises for the purpose of that school we purchased from the Government, or rather the Government partly made us a grant of, and we partly purchased, the site of the old barracks. We have that property still.

8944 For what purpose is it now used?—We have set the greater portion of it to the Poor Law Board, for the purpose of a dispensary, and we get £50 a year from them for it.

8945 You mentioned that £30,000 was spent on the buildings?—The £30,000 includes some money spent in paying salaries to the professors. We were obliged to live from hand to mouth, and make use of our money as it came in for the current expenses of the place.

8946 It appears that portion of the main building of the Institution is used as the Government School of Art?—Yes; instead of maintaining a drawing school in the Institution, we thought it was as well to give facilities for the Government School of Art.

8947 Do any of your pupils attend that school?—Any of them who desire to be taught drawing or design attend there.

8948 Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—Do you give facilities for students, male and female, not belonging to the institution, to attend that school of art?—Certainly, it is connected with South Kensington. For the classes not connected with the Institution there is a separate entrance to the school.

8949 CHAIRMAN.—Have your pupils any privileges, owing to your having let the ground to the Department, or have they to pay the same fees as others?—Precisely the same fees.

8950 What rent do you get from the Government for the school of art?—£20 a year.

8951 Are the old barracks subject to any rent?—Yes, we pay £12 2s. 6d. for them, and they bring in a profit rent of £43 17s. 6d.

8952 It was stated that the Institution is absolutely non-sectarian—is any religious instruction given?—None whatever is given in the school.

8953 Is it a boarding school?—The head master of the Chemical school, and the head master of the English school have boarders. They both reside in the Institution.

8954 Is that a private speculation of their own?—Entirely. The only control the Management exercise over it is to take care that the charges are not extravagant.

8955 Is there any record kept of the religion of the pupils in the day schools?—There is not, and no inquiry whatever is made on the subject.

8956 What is the total number of pupils attending the Institution now?—About 573. Five years ago it was upwards of 350.

8957 Do you think that the depression of trade has influenced the falling off?—I attribute it, very largely, to that source.

8958 Are the boarding-houses you have mentioned exclusively occupied by members of one religious denomination?—I do not know how the fact is now, but when I was a pupil there myself there were all denominations among the boarders.

8959 Of what religious persuasions are the masters?—We do not officially know even that; but I believe that at present they are all Protestants, of one denomination or another, the question of religion never enters into consideration when election of a master. We look entirely to the qualifications of the candidates. Almost since I remember the Institution, and up to a very recent period, at least one of the masters has been a Roman Catholic.

8961 Have you ever considered the question whether a foreigner or a native of Ireland is the best teacher of Modern Languages?—I should say that an Englishman who is a competent scholar in a foreign language, is a better teacher for English pupils than a foreigner; and my principal reason for that opinion is, that he knows the difficulties which he has been obliged to overcome himself, in order to learn the foreign language. We have had foreigners as teachers in the Institution, and, without speaking disrespectfully of any gentleman who has occupied the position, I would say that our present teacher of Modern Languages, who is not a foreigner, is a great success, as compared with two or three foreigners we have had. Mr. Dodd was for five years a teacher of English at Leipzig.

8962 Are all the masters expected to devote their whole time to the school?—They are; and they have also competent assistants to assist them.

8963 Have you any system of inspection or examination connected with the Institution?—No, there was nothing of that kind until the Intermediate Education Act, when a number of our pupils went up to be examined.

8964 You have had no means, in past years, of dis-measuring the relative proficiency of scholars from this Institution, and from the Academy, except by the places they took in college, or at other such examinations?—None other.

8865 Do the Managers inspect the Institution personally?—It is the duty of the Visitors to do so, and I believe some of them do occasionally look in, to see that matters are going on satisfactorily.

8866 Mr. O'BRIEN.—What are the fees payable by day scholars in the Institution?—The fee for Latin, Greek, Ancient History, and Ancient Geography is one guinea; Mathematics, including Arithmetic and Natural Philosophy, are also a guinea a quarter; Amateurs alone for one hour in the day is 15s., for two hours, 17s. 6d. In the junior classes in English the fee is, for one hour a day, 15s., and for two hours, 17s. 6d. In the senior classes they are 17s. 6d., and a guinea respectively. For French or German, or both, we charge a guinea a quarter; for Writing, Book-keeping, or Shorthand, 10s., and for Writing and Book-keeping, or Writing and Shorthand, 13s. a quarter.

8867 Do many pupils learn Shorthand?—From 10 to 15 per cent.

8868 Are these boys intended generally for commercial pursuits?—They are generally boys who intend to enter the Queen's College, and desire to acquire facility in taking notes.

8869 Do you encourage Shorthand?—Yes, I think it is now regarded as part of the best system of education.

8870 Is Finsen's system the one that is taught?—Yes.

8871 Have you compiled the list of the fees charged?—Chemistry, Zoology, or both, are charged one guinea per quarter for the senior class, and 7s. 6d. for the junior; Practical Chemistry, one guinea; Zoology, one guinea; Botany, 10s.; Vocal Music, which is not taught, however, at present, is entered on the list of fees at 2s. per quarter. In the preparatory school for children under ten years of age the fees are £1 a quarter.

8872 Is the sum realised by fees adequate to maintain the teaching staff of the Institution?—I would be very glad if we were able to give the masters something more permanent than the mere results of their teaching, or if they could be relieved, either wholly or to a large extent, of the cost of employing their assistants.

8873 Have they to employ their own assistants?—Yes, they must, at their own cost, keep up a sufficient staff of assistants.

8874 What do you do with the income arising from the various sources you have mentioned?—The portion which is not devoted to prizes is required for the purpose of keeping the place in repair, and for current expenses, such as stationery, and so forth.

8875 Are the tuition fees paid direct to the masters, or to the secretary of the Institution?—I believe the masters have arranged that the secretary of the Board of Masters should collect the fees for them all, and distribute them according to the number of pupils in the school.

8876 Then the only sum which the governing body manages is the income arising from the endowments you have mentioned, and amounting to about £176 a year?—Yes.

8877 You keep books showing the mode in which that money is disbursed?—Certainly.

8878 Who acts as treasurer?—The treasurer is a member of the Board.

8879 How often does the Board meet?—Once a month, and occasionally at other times, when any business arises.

8880 Is it from amongst the members of this Board that the Visitors are chosen?—No; there are two Boards—a Board of Management, and a Board of Visitors for general purposes. They have their distinct duties laid down by the Act of Parliament, but they meet as a joint Board once a month to manage the general affairs of the Institution.

8881 Have the Visitors any fixed time for visiting?—No. Sept. 22, 1876.

8882 How many persons constitute the Board of Visitors?—Eight. Mr. William J. C. Allen

8883 Would it not be desirable to have some regular system?—That is a matter for arrangement amongst themselves. There is nothing of that kind laid down. When I was a member of the Board of Visitors I found it was best always to go in without notice.

8884 You mentioned that you had recently raised an additional sum of £5,000 for the institution. On what have you expended that amount?—£2,000 of it has been expended this year in erecting additional buildings.

8885 What was the object of those buildings?—We required additional classrooms for the mathematical school, and the school of natural science.

8886 On what was the remaining £3,000 spent?—That was spread over several years; £1,000 was employed in paying off a mortgage which existed on the premises, and the remainder was spent on what might be called the current expenses of the institution.

8887 Was the remainder spent on ordinary expenses, which should have come out of the revenue of the establishment?—I would say from memory that it was on items which, if we had the funds, ought to have been charged to revenue.

8888 Have you, then, any hope of a continued flow of subscriptions at the same rate?—We do not know; we got a windfall—a legacy of £300—this very last year. Some of the old pupils have a great respect for the place.

8889 Do you expect that the revenue from subscriptions will continue so large as heretofore?—I should hope so; but it is rather a precarious foundation to rely upon. There are very often years in which we do not get a penny of subscriptions, and in other years they flow in pretty freely.

8890 Were any of these subscriptions given on condition that they should be regarded as capital?—No; it was always understood that they could be applied according to the discretion of the Board.

8891 I presume the Commissioners may assume that the object of the Governors will be, whenever possible, to treat the subscriptions as capital?—I can only answer for myself, and I certainly should advocate such a course, but it has been impossible up to the present time. Our Assistant Secretary has given me a note of the subscriptions, from which I find that I was in error when I mentioned £5,000 as the amount of the subscriptions received since 1857—I should have said £4,027 1s.

8892 Do you think, from your experience of the last few years, that the tendency to give subscriptions is likely to be continuous?—They have been a little more liberal recently; but I do not know how long that may continue.

8893 You mentioned that, until recently, you generally had a Roman Catholic as one of your masters?—We very often had. It was not made a sine qua non, but it just so happened that there was a Roman Catholic amongst them.

8894 Did the Roman Catholic happen to be a professor in any one particular branch?—No; sometimes a Roman Catholic was master of one school, and sometimes of another.

8895 I feared it might be that you had a Frenchman?—Not at all; indeed the Frenchman who was master when I was a pupil there was a Protestant.

8896 You have got premises in Burnside-street, let at a profit-rent of £48 a year—when was the letting made, under which that profit-rent arises?—It must have been thirty years ago.

8897 Will the tenant's interest in those premises terminate soon?—I think the lease he got was for sixty-one years.

Sept. 25, 1878.

Mr. William
J. C. Allen.

5999. Although there is no actual record kept of the religion of the young men attending the Institution, can you say whether there have been any Roman Catholics of late years?—I could not say, but when I was there myself there was a considerable number of Roman Catholics. The present Mr. Justice O'Brien was a pupil in the Institution, in my young days.

6000. How are the accounts of the Institution audited?—They are audited by three members nominated annually by the general meeting of the proprietors.

6001. Are these auditors members of the Board?—No, but they are subscribers, and members of the proprietary body.

6002. CHAIRMAN.—It appears from the returns furnished to us that each master does not get the entire of his fees, but is charged a certain sum for taxes on the buildings?—Each master pays the taxes on his rooms, and a small sum to the Corporation, in the nature of rent, those sums form portions of our ordinary income, and are devoted to the repairs, &c.

6003. Is there any interference by the Managers with the salaries paid by the members to their sons?—The only control the Managers exercise is, that the names of the proposed assistants, and a statement of their qualifications, must be submitted to them, so that they may see they are proper persons.

6004. In fact, they reserve the power of vetoing the appointments?—They do.

6005. Your son has recently obtained very distinguished honors at Cambridge?—Yes, he was Senior Wrangler last January.

6006. Was he educated in the Academical Institution?—Yes; and he was only one of several who have recently gone to Cambridge from it, and all have gained places in the Wrangler class.

MR. WILLIAM NICHOLS, M.A., continued.

Mr. William
Nichols, &c.

6007. CHAIRMAN.—You are one of the Professors of the Queen's College, Belfast?—I am.

6008. What position do you hold in connection with the Academical Institution?—I am one of the Visitors.

6009. Can you add anything to the information we obtained from Mr. Allen?—Two or three points occurred to me on hearing the evidence here. The first matter that I should wish to bring under your notice is the question of endowment. My experience, as a Visitor of the Institution for a long time, is that the absence of any fixed endowment is very crippling to the Institution.

6010. We gather that the present endowment is £170 a year, and the rents that the masters pay?—I should wish to distinguish between the sums that are fixed and those that are provisional. In that way alone you can see what the real resources of the Institution are. In the first place, the rent of £80 a year, which is our mainstay at present, is received from the Science and Art Department, and it is precarious. The Department holds under a short lease—for, I think, seven years, of which one has already expired—and it may stop them at any time to seek other premises, and, if they did so, we should be just placed in the position in which we were before the South Kensington authorities established a branch of the Science and Art Department here. Then, not merely have the masters no salary, and not usually are they obliged entirely to pay their own assistants, but from sheer necessity, most reluctantly we have to turn them to profit, and charge them a rent. That is to say, we are obliged to tax them for the purpose of obtaining a small fund for general purposes. The truth is, the only endowment upon which we can calculate, or regard as, in a certain sense, permanent, is that from Park's Trust, which is about £10 a year, and the profit-rent from the old barracks, which is about £48, making a total of £58 a year for general purposes, from which I, of course, exclude exhibitions. Thus we find to be utterly inadequate. I never knew a Board more anxious to extend the benefits of an Institution than that which I have the honor to represent before this Commission, but we have been obliged to forego the most pressing requirements for want of funds; for instance, our gymnasium was absolutely suspended for some years, but we have now, through a vigorous effort, obtained funds enough to put it in a very efficient state. I passed the point so strongly, and the Board took it up so kindly, that the want will be remedied, and in a very satisfactory way. I only give this as an instance of the many wants that press upon us, and to show the Commission the extreme importance of having some fixed endowment for general purposes in connection with this subject, I should wish to bring under the notice of the Commission the fact, that, when the Institution was absorbed in the Queen's College, not merely did it lose the salary of its professors, but it also lost the sum that was applicable for the payment of the assistant secretary, and those general purposes of which I speak. Now, if we had a small sum for those purposes, such as we used to get, it would be extremely important. I do not think that any expenditure you could recommend would be productive of more benefit than this.

6011. Mr. O'BRIEN.—I do not think you need be very nervous about the Science and Art Department removing that school from you, because there is about to be a rather powerfully organized branch of that department established in Dublin, and it will be much more easy for Irish towns like Belfast to make their wants felt there, than by applying to South Kensington?—I have no fear that Belfast will lose its Art school, but it is possible that the Department might find more suitable premises.

6012. You consider that you ought to have a fixed income of say £250 a year, which would require in addition of about £100 a year to your present income. If the subscriptions continue coming in as they have done in recent years, do not you think it would be possible to find a sum which would reduce £100 a year?—I do not think so. The subscriptions enable us to go on, but we have never, with our present resources, been able to find any sum whatever.

6013. You have provided for the gymnasium and bath rooms, and the other desirable improvements?—Yes; they are completed, and is an admirable way, but the maintenance of these involves a very considerable charge.

6014. Now that the structures are completed, would it not be possible in the future, if large subscriptions came in, to turn them into principal, and to appropriate the interest to the maintenance of all things necessary for the Institution?—If you could ensure to us a constant stream of subscriptions, of course it would.

6015. What arrangement have you made with you masters as to the results term under the Intermediate Act—are you, the Governors, to get them, or are the masters to get them?—We have made no arrangement whatever, but I know that the feeling of the Board is that we should be only too glad to supplement the very inadequate emoluments of the masters by the small sum to be received from that source.

6016. Do you suggest that the Academical Institution should be assisted by the State?—I do not know what powers of recommendation your Commission has, but I presume that from the endowments with which you will have to deal there will be a considerable sum to be disposed of, and I think regard should be paid to the claims of this Institution.

6017. We have no power to make recommendations, but, of course, it would be our duty, when a gentleman in your position makes any suggestion, to lay it before the Lord Education?—I presume there will be some redistribution of existing endowments,

Sept. 18, 1878.
Mr. William
Smith, M.A.

and I do not think that any allocation of money, for educational purposes, would be more productive of public good than that which I suggest.

9018 Can you say generally whether the pupils who attend the Institution are Belfast and Antigua pupils, or do they come from different parts of Ulster?—They come from various places; in some instances even from Dublin.

9019 You are aware that in Ulster there are Royal schools which enjoy considerable revenues?—Yes. I wanted to say a word with regard to these Royal schools, and their scholarships. I think I ought to mention that two very distinguished masters of Endowed Schools have spoken to me of the desirability of allowing pupils from their schools to choose their own place of Collegiate Education. They pointed out to me that a number of these pupils would, perhaps, wish to receive that education near their own homes. A number of them are going into the Presbyterian Church, and these naturally look to the Belfast College as their place of education, on account of its vicinity to, and its practical connexion with, their theological college. And it does appear hard that those boys should not be able to hold the Royal school scholarships in the State College instituted for their special benefit.

9020 Do you endorse the suggestions of those gentlemen?—I do.

9021 You would wish to see the exhibitions awarded to pupils from the Royal schools, and now tenable in Trinity College only, allowed to be held by young men going to the Queen's College?—I do not say to the Queen's College alone, but to any colleges which can give University teaching.

9022 Do you, as a gentleman of authority on the subject, think that the purpose of education in Ulster would be served by the appropriation of some of the surplus funds of the Royal schools in Ulster to the assistance of the local institutions, such as the Belfast Academical Institution, which is doing active service for the maintenance of Ulster?—I do not wish to touch on the funds of the Royal schools. I have the highest opinion of their efficiency, and I should not wish to diminish it in any way. I do not think that any one of them is too snugly endowed, and the effect of my proposal, if adopted, would be to place them in a more favourable position. These scholarships, I need not say, do not increase the emoluments of the master, except indirectly, by attracting pupils to his school, and if you allow the pupils to hold their exhibitions in colleges of their own choosing, instead of diminishing the revenues of the master, you would increase them; because at present those masters are obliged to turn their whole attention to one college, and consequently to discourage the coming of pupils who mean to go to other colleges for their education.

9023 Dr. CURRIE.—I presume your remarks apply equally well to the Erasmus Smith's Schools, such as at Galway, Drogheda, Kinn, and Tipperary?—Certainly, and also to Foyle College. In fact, Dr. Haug actually came to Belfast to consult with me, and try to make some arrangement by which those scholarships might be made tenable in other institutions, both in his own interest and in that of the boys. There is another matter, that is, the teaching of the schools, in which I take a great interest, and in reference to which I think I should bring before you a suggestion from the masters. Several masters of schools have brought before me the extreme difficulty in which they are placed by the variety of the extraneous courses in different colleges in Ireland, representing it as a serious hindrance to the efficiency of their teaching. In fact, since the Intermediate Education Act, a crisis has set in. One of the masters came to see the other day, expressing me to do something for him, and I perceived, as far as an individual with very limited power could act in the matter, that I should do so.

9024 I think something has been done in that direction?—Not to my knowledge.

9025 There was a committee appointed, and I can speak for the Galway college, where they have instituted the entrance course to that reported in the Dublin University?—I was not aware of that. There is no reason why you should teach Latin from one book rather than another. A uniform course will give quite as complete a course of instruction as a varied one. At present, a master is obliged to fritter away his time and attention upon several classes, whose one would suffice. I spoke to Professor Tyndall about the matter when in Dublin, and tried to bring about some concert as regards scholarship courses, but I did not get much encouragement. The only suggestion made was, that we should assimilate our courses to those of Trinity College, and to this I have no objection; but there is a difficulty in the way, as our scholarship courses are announced a year in advance, while those for the Royal scholarships vary, I understand, from year to year. I should, however, like to see the matter taken up by all the institutions in Ireland which hold entrance examinations. A sensible arrangement, based on a common understanding, would, I believe, greatly increase the efficiency of Irish schools. There is another matter to which I wish to refer, namely to prevent misapprehension as to the evidence that has been given to you upon one or two points of interest, with regard to the conduct of our own Institution. It has been stated to you that, as there are a number of head masters, pupils might attend any schools they please. That is only true within certain limits. Every pupil at our Institution, unless hindered by delicate health, is obliged to attend for the entire five hours during which the school is open. He may, it is true, pass all his time in one school—be say, for instance, spend the five hours at mathematics, which is very unlikely, but no boy can be a full pupil of the Institution, or get a prize, or enjoy any of the external advantages over and above the teaching, unless he attends three schools at least. So that, although we have a number of head masters, we have a certain co-ordination, and all the teaching of the different schools is strictly relative—arranged so that there shall be no clashing of hours. This is really a distinctive feature of the Institution. We do not wish the boys to be taking a portion of their education in one of our schools, and going to some other school for another portion. The Managers, therefore, determined that no person shall be a regular pupil of the Institution, who does not attend, at least, three schools.

9026 Does that occupy the entire five hours?—Not necessarily; but, as I have said, five hours' daily attendance is ordinarily required. I also wish to say a word as to the falling off in the attendance. The only explanation of that which has been mentioned, is the expansion of the times. But there is another cause, which has largely contributed to it, and that is the institution of new schools. Thus there is an important school—a Church of Ireland school—which has been recently established in Belfast, and in which, I understand, there are now some seventy pupils.

9027 CHAIRMAN.—That is an undenied school?—Yes.

9028 When was that established?—I think three or four years ago, but it has naturally prospered, for the leading members of the Church of Ireland are members of its committee, and any school so supported must prosper. Thus the Methodist College, at which the attendance is between 200 and 300, has also sprung into existence. Besides the Academical Institution draws its pupils from all the neighbouring towns, Lisburn, Lurgan, and so forth. Now an important endowed school has been recently established in Lurgan and similar schools are everywhere springing up, under the operation of the Intermediate Education Act; so that, considering all matters, the wonder is that we have suffered so little.

9029 May not the closing of the Belfast Academy have had a counteracting effect?—The attendance at the Academy has for many years been very limited.

Sept. 26, 1875.

Rev. J. A.
Chancellor.

Rev. J. A. CHANCELLOR, examined.

9030. Dr. CURRIE.—You are the secretary to the Belfast Academy?—I am.

9031. The number of pupils on the roll of the Belfast Academy at the time of the last Commission, was 133. What is it now?—There are eighteen or nineteen boys attending the school now. But the school is held just now, under very disadvantageous circumstances, we are not bringing it before the public at all.

9032. What has been the average attendance for the last year?—There have been about twenty pupils on an average.

Mr. W. Stans.

Mr. WILLIAM STANS, examined.

9034. CHAIRMAN.—You are the assistant secretary to the Belfast Academical Institution?—Yes.

9035. How long have you held that position?—Over twenty years. The first minutes in my writing are dated 1857.

9036. Can you give us the particulars of the accounts?—Yes, I have kept the account books since the time I was appointed.

9037. Is there a printed report, like the one which has been handed to us, issued every year?—Not every year. I was not called upon for it. The one produced gives only an abstract under proper headings, but it does not give all the details.

9038. Mr. O'BRAUGHEN.—Do you reside on the premises?—No.

9039. Beyond keeping the accounts you do not know much about the management of the place?—I do not.

9040. Nor the state of the buildings or furniture?—No.

9041. CHAIRMAN.—There appears to be no item of £114 10s charged as for "the hall-key." What does that mean?—The hall-key was quite unnecessary, and that money was spent on repainting it.

9042. Mr. O'BRAUGHEN.—What is your salary from the institution?—£20 a year.

9043. I presume you have not to devote a great part of your time to the keeping of those accounts?—It takes a good deal of time, but, when I was appointed, the funds of the institution being very low, they could not afford to give a higher salary.

Mr. J. Currie.

Mr. JOHN CURRIE, examined.

9047. Mr. O'BRAUGHEN.—What position do you hold in the Belfast Academical Institution?—I am the head master of the English department, and I act as secretary to my colleagues, the Board of Masters.

9048. Have you anything to say to the Governing Body?—Nothing whatever.

9049. CHAIRMAN.—Are you the occupier of one of the boarding-houses?—I am.

9050. That house belongs to the Corporation of the Institution?—It does.

9051. Do you pay rent for it?—I do.

9052. What number of boarders have you in it?—At present I have seven.

9053. You are limited as to your charges by the Corporation?—Yes, my whole charge is £80 a year, for tuition, boarding, and washing; no extras. The fee was not so high when I was first appointed, but general expenses were much lower then.

9054. Dr. CURRIE.—How many boarders could you accommodate?—The dormitories and other rooms would accommodate from forty to forty-five.

9055. CHAIRMAN.—Do you take in all that come?—Generally.

9056. You do not think you could make a profit by charging less than your present fees?—I could not. I devote my entire time, morning and evening, to the superintendence of my boarders, and I do not think I am at all adequately paid.

9057. There is another boarding-house belonging to 9058. That is a very considerable falling off from what the number was in 1837?—Yes. When the principal masters were changed, we allowed the secondary masters to take their places, so as to avoid expending money until we got the new buildings completed. We are simply teaching the boys that wish to attend the Academy, without seeking to get new boys. For a certain number of years, the buildings were so bad that we found we could not carry on the school properly, and we allowed the attendance gradually to fall away. We expect the new Academy to be opened in the summer of 1880.

9044. CHAIRMAN.—In the bank book of the institution I find an entry of a cheque for £1,600. What was that for?—Mr. BEAN made a present of £1,600 for the new building; but he gave it with the proviso that it should constitute a number of propositions, appropriating various sums from twenty to fifty guineas to each, instead of placing it all in his own name. Connell, however, was consulted, and was of opinion that the condition could not be fulfilled, because when Mr. BEAN paid the money the other people could not be regarded as proprietors, and he recommended that the money should be returned to Mr. BEAN. It actually came back again; as the individuals all got it, and paid it themselves. The late Mr. John Martin gave 100 guineas to be appropriated in a similar manner, and the money was returned to him also, but he died soon after, and his executors could not refund the money.

9045. The bank book produced is marked account No. 2. What does that mean?—It is for the new buildings. There were some subscriptions which were put into the building account at once, and others were transferred afterwards from our ordinary accounts.

9046. Mr. O'BRAUGHEN.—Is there any sum to the credit of the institution which you would regard as capital, either invested or uninvested?—There is no balance of the subscriptions, but there was a legacy of £500, left lately.

the institution?—Yes; it is kept by my colleague Dr. Stans, the Chemical master.

9068. What number of boarders has he?—In the last return presented to the Managers it appeared that he had fifteen.

9059. Dr. CURRIE.—What accommodation is there in his establishment?—Much the same as in mine.

9060. CHAIRMAN.—Are his terms the same as yours?—I think so, but he makes a nominal difference, inasmuch as he charges forty guineas for board and twenty for washing, tuition &c., &c.

9061. Are the houses kept in repair for you by the Institution, or have you to spend money yourselves on repairs?—I have spent £200 in eighteen years, but that represents the rent which the Governors give me back, and I spend it upon the place. When I was appointed they allowed me three years' rent to put the place in order. It was then in a very bad state of repair, and before I ever received Le Tréport 1856, so that the Governors very considerably did not ask me to pay the rent to which I was liable for twelve years.

9062. Were the repairs done by yourself?—They were done under my superintendence. I made the agreement with the contractors, and submitted the accounts to the Managers, to show how I had spent the money.

9063. Is that the way also with the Chemical master?—The Chemical master was appointed at a time when the Governors did not charge a rent to any master. He was appointed in February, 1854, and is expected to keep his own premises in repair at his own expense. I was not appointed till the 1st August, 1851.

9064. How are the repairs to the general school buildings carried out?—When any repairs are required I submit the matter to the Managers at their monthly meetings, and they instruct me to get estimates for the necessary work, and when they pass them I am instructed to see them carried out, and submit the accounts for payment when the work is done.

9065. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—Have you pupils of all religious denominations?—I have not the slightest idea of the religious denominations of the pupils generally.

9066. Even of your boarders?—I know the religion of my own boarders, because the parents tell me what churches they are to attend. But with regard to the day scholars, I have not the slightest idea, except I happen to meet the parents in the place of worship to which they belong.

9067. Do you know whether there are any Roman Catholics amongst the pupils at present?—I cannot say. I know that two were ordered, by their clergy, to leave in some time ago.

9068. CHATELAIN.—I suppose that none but Presbyterians or Church of Ireland people ever apply to become boarders?—Since I became master I have had Episcopals, Presbyterians, Unitarians, and Roman Catholics living in my house. They all attended their own Sabbath schools and places of worship, and I never interfered with their religion in any way.

9069. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—It appears that there was a new ball-alley erected in August, 1878?—It was rather re-covered and repaired. Mr. Donville built it several years ago at a cost of 260 guineas, but about five years ago a great storm blew off the roof, which was of felt. To let light into the building, part of the side walls had been left open, but now the building is entirely closed in.

9070. Was it used for any length of time after the accident?—Yes, on fine days the boys played in it, but they were not able to do so in wet weather.

9071. The repairs to the ball-alley cost £110?—Yes.

9072. The accounts show a payment to W. H. Lynn of £19 10s. for plans for additional buildings in 1873-4. Have those works been carried out?—Mr. Lynn's plans were not adopted, and the matter was dropped at that time.

9073. The accounts also show payments for a hospital, medicine-stand, and other articles of furniture in the board-room, amounting to £17 13s. 6d. Was there a hospital and medicine-stand in the board-room before these new ones were got?—No, there was not. The board-room has been entirely fitted up within the last two years. I used it as a class-room in many years, to the great inconvenience of the Board of Managers.

9074. There is another sum of £58 4s 10d for a new table, carpet, and other furniture for the board-room. Was that on the same occasion?—It was.

9075. Was that an absolutely necessary expenditure?—It was, indeed. The Board of Managers and Visitors had no suitable place to meet in.

9076. There is a payment entered thus—John O'Shaughnessy, balance of account due for swimming bath, £18? How did that money come to be payable to you?—The Board of Managers constructed a large swimming bath, and made great efforts to obtain subscriptions for the purpose, but did not succeed in raising the entire amount which was necessary. I advanced the deficiency out of my own pocket, and, after some time, when the income of the Corporation increased, I asked the Board to refund me that sum.

9077. What was the entire cost of the swimming bath?—It was a little short of £1,000.

9078. Was the £48, so repaid to you, the only portion of the expense of the construction of that bath that came out of the general funds of the Corporation?—That was all they subscribed directly.

9079. In the account for 1878 there is an item of £30 for premiums?—That is the only sum given annually by the Board for the purpose.

9080. Is that sum given out at their ordinary income?—It is.

9081. Is that money expended in books or models?—It is expended on books, which are beautifully bound and stamped with the Royal Arms. The binding costs about 6s. a volume.

9082. You do not think that it would be possible to save anything of that?—The Managers allow us to give only one prize to every twenty pupils in a department. Formerly the Masters gave one to every five pupils.

9083. It appears that in September, 1876, a large number of subscriptions of twenty, thirty, and fifty guineas each were received. Were these subscriptions towards the swimming-bath?—Not one of them; those were for the new buildings to which Mr. Allen has referred.

9085. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—Have the general subscriptions dropped off during the last three or four years?—We have not received any lately, and, indeed, I may say we have seldom got subscriptions without earnest solicitation. I think if some member of the Board did not go to ask for them not a single subscription would be received. These subscriptions, expended on the new buildings, were collected within a very short period. Mr. Allen gave subscriptions of twenty and fifty guineas on former occasions, and his third subscription was 260 guineas.

9086. We may take it that subscriptions are not a permanent source of income?—They are not. I have been myself the means of raising between £3,000 and £5,000 among my friends.

9087. CHATELAIN.—Is there an abstract of accounts printed every year?—There is.

9088. Are the ball-alley and swimming bath used by the day scholars?—They are common to all the pupils.

9089. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—Do you think the expenditure on the removal of the ball alley was a wise one?—Indeed it was unavoidable, for we had no place for the boys to play under cover in wet weather.

9090. Have you any suggestion to make as to any mode by which this valuable institution could be saved from any danger of getting into debt?—I do not see any way, except that proposed by Mr. Nesbitt; because I cannot expect that the Belfast people will do all that is necessary to support a non-sectarian institution, such as ours is.

9091. Do you think that the fact of its being a non-sectarian institution is a difficulty in the way of obtaining support from the Belfast people?—I should say so, because many are going in for schools connected with their own denominations—there are Methodist schools as well as Presbyterian schools, and Church of Ireland schools; and we stand aloof from all considerations of sectarian.

9092. Are those sectarian schools well supported?—Very well, I believe.

9093. Do you think the Institution is likely to be restored to its old number?—It may increase. It has increased a little during the present quarter.

9094. Do you attribute the falling off in the last few years to the depression of trade?—Yes; I am able to trace it to that clearly, because I keep a record of what becomes of the boys when they leave us.

9095. Do they go to schools of a cheaper class?—Yes, to the model school where the fee for English is £1 per annum, which with us is £3.

9096. Is the Methodist school endowed?—It is not, except by the funds of its own denomination.

9097. Have the Church of Ireland people a sectarian school in Belfast?—I suppose it must be considered as by sectarian.

Sept 28 1878.
Mr. J. Carlin

Sept 26, 1895.
 Wm. J. Corliss

9098. When was that school established?—About three years ago.

9099. Has that a large and increasing number of pupils?—It has increased very considerably. I understand it has now about eighty.

9100. Have the Presbyterians established a sectarian school?—Not to my knowledge.

9101. Are the majority of the pupils in the Academical Institution, Presbyterians?—I should suppose so, from my knowledge of the places where their parents worship.

9102. Do you think that your establishment is tending practically to become less sectarian than it was, and to become more Presbyterian?—It was always sectarian. The attendance is not so mixed as it was twelve or fifteen years ago.

9103. Is not the number of Church of Ireland children less in proportion to the general number than it was a few years ago?—It is.

9104. In that way the Academical Institution is becoming more Presbyterian than it was?—It is.

9105. The Roman Catholics have also established a large school in Belfast?—Yes, they have always had a academy here.

9106. Is that becoming more a place of resort for lay instruction than it was?—I cannot say.

9107. Your evidence amounts to this—that the general tendency in Belfast is in favour of sectarian education?—From the opening of those schools, I infer that such is the case.

9108. CHAIRMAN.—How is the model school supported?—It keeps up its numbers very well, but I think the religious proportion is not what it was fifteen years ago.

9109. There are fewer Roman Catholics?—I should think so.

9110. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—Is it not a fact that some few years ago an attempt was made to raise the fees payable by pupils of the middle-class going to that model school?—Yes.

9111. Did not the attendance drop off immediately?—I think there was dissatisfaction expressed, and the officers very wisely did not press the matter.

9112. Then that model school, supported by state funds, is now educating a very large number of the children, who, if there were no model school, would be able to pay ordinary fees in a day school?—Some of them could not do so. They are chiefly the sons of skilled artisans.

9113. Apart from those sons of skilled artisans, are there not at present, enjoying the extremely cheap state education of the model school, a considerable number of children whose parents could fairly afford to pay for their education?—I can only answer that by saying that a few occasionally come from the model school to us and pay our fees.

9114. You do not know the proportion of middle class children who attend the model school?—I do not.

9115. Dr. CURRIE.—Amongst the books which you have produced there is one in which Lord O'Hagan's name appears—was he educated at this institution?—He was, chiefly; and there were at one time out of the twelve judges on the Irish Bench three who had been educated in the institution—namely, Judge O'Brien, Judge Hayes, and Judge O'Hagan.

9116. We heard of a sum of £500 dollars or £1,200. What is that applied to?—The interest forms a fund to educate four boys selected from the model school. It amounts to a little over the sum required for their education, and so long as there is a balance of that fund the Governors give an extra prize of £20 in Miss Charter's name.

9117. Is there any expenditure in contemplation which will invade the £500 now standing to the credit of the institution?—We have just undertaken to fit up a new gymnasium at an expense not to exceed £100.

9118. When that work is done, do you anticipate there will be any other capital expenditure?—Many friends think that a common hall is greatly required. Every room has been renovated and done up within the last few years, and with a new school furniture provided.

9119. About how many new pupils enter the institution annually?—About 180, and of these an average of thirty enter college.

9120. Do those who intend to enter college pursue the classical studies?—They do.

9121. Do the remainder pursue a more purely commercial course of study?—They do; they have of late largely entered the French and German classes.

9122. Do you find that a separate department in commercial education, including modern languages, is much sought after by the commercial classes in Belfast?—It is.

9123. Is it considered of utility and so tending to success in commercial life?—It is.

9124. Are those who desire to pursue this commercial course generally persons going to be merchants, or are they those beginning as merchants' clerks?—A great many are merchants' sons preparing for business.

9125. With good prospects of a respectable business before them?—Yes, a large proportion.

9126. And you find it quite possible to give them not merely such knowledge as is necessary for the actual wants of commercial life, but also a good natural English education?—Yes.

9127. And they leave the institution with natural talents, and a capacity for enjoying the English writer, and knowing modern languages?—That is the result of training we aim at.

9128. By that means you include a good deal of literary education as distinguished from commercial book-keeping?—A great deal. I wish, however, to add, for fear of misconception, that the greater number even of our pupils intended for commercial life learn civics. Out of 340 pupils, whom we have at present, 140 learn civics.

9129. CHAIRMAN.—Then your course is a higher one than that of the model school?—Very much larger.

9130. In arithmetic and book-keeping do you go farther than the model school?—Only for those pupils going into colleges, or trying for exhibitions. The only advantage that our pupils have over those in the model school is that they remain longer with us. Boys attending the model school leave it at fifteen years of age, whilst those who come to us generally remain till sixteen or seventeen.

Miss Mary B. White.

Miss MARY B. WHITE, examined.

9131. CHAIRMAN.—You are the mistress of the Belfast Free-school-union National school?—Yes.

9132. How long have you occupied that position?—For twenty-two years—since February, 1857.

9133. By whom is the school managed?—Mrs. Johnston is the corresponding with the National Board, and the school is managed by a Ladies' Committee. Mr. Taylor is secretary to the trustees.

9134. What is your salary as mistress?—I receive £200 a year from the Committee, in addition to my salary from the National Board.

9135. Have you any assistants in the school?—Yes; three. They get £5 a year each, besides their salaries from the National Board.

9136. What number of pupils are there in the school at present?—The average daily attendance is about 148.

9137. It is entirely a girls' school?—Not entirely. There are between forty and fifty boys.

9138. Are they all young boys?—Yes.

9139. I suppose it is an infants' school?—It is next to an infants' school; but there are a great many infants attending it, perhaps more than half.

9140. The returns furnished to us show that it is a mixed school, having on its roll 101 Episcopians, 77 Presbyterians, 24 Roman Catholics, and 6 of other religious denominations. Are the children who attend a poor?—They are very poor.

9141. Do they pay any fees?—It was originally a girls' school, and all were admitted free; but somebody persuaded the Committee to admit a few little boys, and since then pay a penny a week each, so that now a few boys pay a penny a week; but the girls do not pay anything.

9142. Do all the 40 or 50 boys pay a penny a week each?—Nearly all.

9143. What is done with that money?—It goes into the hands of the committee.

9144. What is the average age of the pupils attending the school?—The average age is seven years.

9145. Do the children get anything beyond a good education?—Yes, they are given articles of clothing. They are selected from the very poorest, without regard to religious denomination.

9146. What is the cost of supporting the school?—About £500 a year.

9147. Where does that £500 a year come from?—It is derived from subscriptions. The Ladies' Committee divide the town into districts, and collect the money every year.

9148. Some of the children are not awarded clothes by the committee?—No. The children attending another National school, which is held in the same building, receive neither food nor clothing; they come at ten o'clock, and leave at three. The Industrial School children, however, come at eight in the morning, and leave at half-past five in the evening.

9149. Is it only to the girls that clothes are given?—To both boys and girls.

9150. Are the children apprenticed when leaving the school?—No, but we get them places when they remain long enough, which, however, they seldom do.

9151. What is the class of education given in the school?—It is the same as in the ordinary National schools.

9152. Up to what age do the children continue in the school?—Very few at these seasons until they reach twelve.

9153. I suppose the girls are taught sewing?—Yes, and industrial work. They are taught to cook, to wash the stains and floors, to clean graves, and to do such things as would fit them for being servants.

9154. Do the children dine on the premises?—Yes, they both breakfast and dine; there are four selected every week to assist in the kitchen.

9155. Who actually does the cooking?—There is a cook.

9156. Is there anything in the way of a laundry-kept?—Yes, the children are taught to wash, and have to wash their own clothes.

9157. Do they bring their own clothes and wash them on the premises?—No; but when they come in at eight o'clock in the morning they put on the clothes provided for them in the institution, and they have to take those clothes off before they go in the evening.

9158. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—Do they change all their clothes?—Not all their clothes. They get some underclothing, which they are allowed to keep, and they change their frocks and petticoats.

9159. CHAIRMAN.—Do they make their own clothes?—They do.

9160. Is there any sewing taken in for the public?—Sometimes. I make the best sewers work at fine white work, and sell it. It is an encouragement to the children to work neatly.

9161. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—You have got a certain number of Roman Catholics among the children?—Yes.

9162. I suppose the rules of the National Board are strictly complied with, with regard to religious instruction?—They are.

9163. There is no interference with the religion of the children?—None whatever.

9164. Do you find that these children turn out well as servants afterwards?—Generally speaking, they do.

9165. You have not had many complaints?—Not many; but the parents constantly send the children to the mills, instead of sending them to service, which is a great pity.

MR. JAMES H. RAINEY, examined.

Mr. James H. Rainey.

9166. CHAIRMAN.—You are the head master of the Ranger Endowed School?—I am.

9167. How long have you held that position?—I was appointed in January last.

9168. Have you any assistants under you?—I have two at present, but one of them has been only recently appointed.

9169. Is there any land belonging to the school, except the site on which it stands?—There is sufficient for a play ground attached to the house, and one field, which is let.

9170. How long has the school-house been built?—Since 1859.

9171. Is it a leasehold, or is it a grant in perpetuity?—I think it was granted in perpetuity.

9172. Whose property was the land?—It is on Lord Ranger's estate, but the endowment consists of a charge on the estates of Lord Ranger and Mr. Ward.

9173. Is the charge a general one, over the two estates?—Yes.

9174. It appears, from the Report of the former Royal Commission, that the endowment consists of the interest on £3,246 in the Government Stocks?—I know nothing of that.

9175. It is stated in the same report that there is also an annuity of £18 8s. 3d. Do you know anything of that?—I do not.

9176. What salary do you receive?—I receive from the endowment alone £60 a year, and the use of the house.

9177. Do you also receive the fees from the pupils?—I do.

9178. What subjects do you teach?—I teach

Classics, and English, including arithmetic and elementary mathematics.

9179. Who teaches French?—An Austrian, Stein Berger, who comes out from Berlin two days in each week.

9180. Do the pupils come chiefly from the neighbourhood?—So far as the inhabitants of Ranger proper are concerned, the school is of very little service to them. The attendance is made up of the children of Belfast families, residing in the neighbourhood of Ranger.

9181. Your returns show that you have sixteen scholars, made up of five Church of Ireland boys, ten Presbyterians, and one Roman Catholic?—The number has increased to thirty since I furnished that report.

9182. When you were first appointed were there any pupils attending the school?—There were only three.

9183. There are free scholarships attached to the school?—I do not know that they were originally attached to it; but we thought it well, in the interests of the town, to establish a system of scholarships, which we did, and the first examination for one will take place in October next.

9184. The endowment appears to amount altogether to about £80 per annum. Can you give any particulars as to the expenditure of the surplus after payment of your salary?—I think that the balance must be spent upon keeping the house in repair.

9185. Are there any subscriptions?—There are none, except a subscription of £10 for scholarships given jointly by Lord Ranger and Mr. Ward.

9186. Have you any of the deeds connected with the endowment?—No, they are in the possession of Captain the Hon. Somerset Ward.

Sept. 28, 1879.

Mr. James H. Essey.

9187. Is there any provision for boarders?—Yes; I have two boarders at present.

9188. What number of boarders can you accommodate?—I could easily accommodate twelve.

9189. And what number of day boys?—I could accommodate sixty.

9190. What fees do you charge for boarders?—

Under thirteen years of age £25, and over thirteen £45 a year.

9191. I suppose your pupils are principally the sons of shopkeepers?—They are principally the sons of Belfast merchants.

9192. Do the day scholars come from Belfast?—Yes, they live in the neighbourhood, and are the sons of the landed gentry, and the business men.

Mr. Charles H. Brett.

Mr. CHARLES HENRY BENTY, recalled.

9193. CHAIRMAN.—You can give us some information as to the Frederick-street industrial school?—The only trust deed in existence is a lease for 99 years, of a piece of ground in Frederick-street, from the Marquis of Downall to Thomas McCabe.

“Is trust for the exclusive purpose of building thereon a public Sunday or charity school or house for the use and benefit of the scholars, teachers, and scholars themselves and thereof, and for no other use, trust, or purpose, whatever.” That lease will expire in 1908, and there is a small head rent of £12 Irish payable under it.

9194. It is stated in the report of the Commissioners of 1867 that there was also a bequest, left by the will of Mr. John Puke in 1816, of a share in house property, part of which had been sold for £255?—Yes. That is now represented by a property in Anne-street, the rents of which are received by Mr. William Burns, and divided, in accordance with the provision in Mr. Puke's will, among three institutions, of which the Frederick-street school is one.

9195. Is there any other property belonging to this school?—There are accumulations of income, which now amount to £660, and are now invested in Belfast Harbour Bonds, producing four per cent. interest. The sums, as they accumulate from time to time in the treasurer's hands, are placed in the Belfast Savings Bank till they reach about £100, and then they are invested in the purchase of some security, such as harbour bonds.

9196. Is that capital belonging to the school increasing?—It has always been slowly increasing. The expenditure from the endowment is almost exclusively confined to the repairs of the buildings and the payment of the head-tenant.

9197. Mr. O'SHEAHERNESS.—Have you anything to say to the management of the institution?—I am one of the trustees. We meet once a year to audit the accounts, and see that the expenditure is not in excess of the income.

9198. Do you think the institution is a useful one?—It is very useful.

9199. Who makes the selection of the destitute children?—The Ladies' Committee manage that. We, the trustees, have nothing to do except to manage the structure and the income.

9200. Dr. CURTIS.—Is the rent of £12 Irish still paid?—Yes. The trustees are trying to arrange with Lord Downall's agent to get a renewal of the lease, but I do not know whether we may succeed or not.

9201. CHAIRMAN.—Is the house in good repair?—It is an old building, but it is kept in good order.

9202. Have you added to the school recently?—Yes. [The Commissioners adjourned to next day at 11 A.M.]

Sept. 27, 1879.

TWENTY-FOURTH DAY—SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 27, 1879; 11 O'CLOCK, A.M.

In the Town Hall, Belfast.

Present.—The EARL OF ROSSE, CHAIRMAN; RICHARD O'SHEAHERNESS, Esq., M.P.; and ARTHUR HILL CURTIS, Esq., LL.D.; with JAMES CROED MINNENTON, Esq., LL.D., Secretary.

Mr. William J. C. Allen.

Mr. WILLIAM JOHN CAMPBELL ALLEN, recalled.

9203. CHAIRMAN.—You wish to ask an explanation?—Yes; I was reminded yesterday as to a matter upon which I was not then prepared, and speaking from vague recollection, I said in one part of my evidence that the amount of contributions that had been received for the Belfast Academical Institution, since 1854, was about £5,000. I have since looked into the matter and I find that I overstated the amount by about £1,000. It did not come quite up to £4,160, and the payment of the debt to which the Institution was liable, and the reaction of the new buildings which the Commissioners visited this morning exhausted £3,300 of the sum, so that, in a period of twenty-four years, we have only to account for an expenditure of £160, which is very little, considering that we have only about £176 a year, as a permanent income, out of which the assistant secretary's salary, the porter's wages, and the cost of the ground upon which the Institution stands, swallow up about £130, leaving but little over £50 a year for prizes, repairs, and all other incidental expenses.

Mr. William Nesbitt, M.A.

Mr. WILLIAM NESBITT, M.A., recalled.

9204. CHAIRMAN.—You desire to make a statement, in addition to the evidence you gave yesterday, with reference to the Belfast Academical Institution?—Yes, as a Professor of the Queen's College, and an examiner at the industrial school examinations for many years, I have had naturally very large opportunities of estimating the efficiency of the Academical Institution, and I wish to state that I have from this experience formed a most favourable opinion of it. I am quite sure that Dr. Curtis, one of the Commissioners, will endorse this opinion, as many of the students of the Institution go to Queen's College, Galway. As the results of the Intermediate Education examinations have just been announced, I may be permitted to place them before the Commissioners as the most recent test of the efficiency of this school. Those results have been very brilliant. The school sent in sixty-three candidates, of whom fifty-two have been successful. Twelve of those have obtained exhibitions and eight others have been included in the prize list. The number of exhibitions exceeds that obtained by any other school in Ireland. I may add, both from my personal knowledge of the school, and from what the masters have told me, that a considerable number of the best boys were prevented from going into those examinations by their preparation for the Queen's College, which they propose to enter. These would have very considerably increased the list of exhibitors and prize men. This circumstance, I think, affords a good illustration of the importance of a matter which I ventured to bring before the Commissioners yesterday—that is, the desirability of some concert in the arrangement of the various courses in which boys entering colleges are instructed. The boys to whom I have referred, and the course for the Intermediate division examinations have been identical for as far as went with the scholarship course of the Queen's College, would have been enabled to compete; but the variety of courses prevented them from doing so. I wish to bring this matter specially before you on two grounds—first, to show that the successes actually obtained do not represent the strength of the school; and secondly, to prove that a variety of course for testing school teaching is productive of very grave inconvenience. There is another point to which I wish to refer—there have been two exhibitions founded in the Academic Institution, by the gift of Miss Claxton, a lady of this town, two boys from the model school, by means of which two boys at the month of competitive examinations, get free education at the institution for two years. These small exhibitions have been productive of most valuable results. The best boys of the model school have been enabled by means of them to obtain classical and mathematical training which fits them to enter college, and to pursue their studies for the University; and the pupils who have been selected have in many cases achieved the highest distinctions. The last two holders of these exhibitions for boys from the model school that entered the Queen's College took double scholarships—that is, both in the library and the science side—which is a very unusual distinction.

9503 Dr. CURRIE.—Were they first in each?—No. As public education has of late been so much directed to devising some means by which primary may be connected with intermediate and higher education, I think it right that the reasons of this experiment should be widely known.

MR. JAMES NICHOLSON RICHARDSON, examined

Mr. James M.
Hubbard.

5894. CUNNINGHAM—You are treasurer of the Brookland Agricultural School?—I am.

8537 How long have you occupied that position?—
About twenty-five years.

1906. How is the school managed?—By a Committee, most of the members of which are resident in Utah. The school is entirely under the management of the Society of Friends, and the Provincials of Lancaster and Marston appoint a few of the members of the Committee. The school is intended for the whole of India, and was commenced in 1839, in a very small way. There were two small farms of land purchased, which have been increased from time to time. At first there were only about ten pupils in the institution, but the numbers increased largely, and we have had more than seventy; the buildings also have been very largely increased. The original purchase money was something about £200, but now the amount charged to capital account under that head is $6,377 1/2 1/2, and the Superintendent tells me that sum will be needed this year.

12293. What has been done with the legacies left to the trustees from time to time?—Some were applied to the purchase of land, and erection of buildings. We have £3,000 invested in a mortgage on land, in the Province of Leicester, and there is also, bearing interest, £1,035 2s. 8d.

Q110. Have you got the bank account book here?
—We have no bank account. The Institution keeps an account with a firm in Belfast.

1911. There appears to be some North Eastern Railway Stock mentioned in your report. What is that?—That was a bequest, left for special purposes, and it is held in the names of trustees.

Q213 For what purposes was that left?—It is not left in any way for the maintenance of the school, but for the promotion of the education of the pupil teachers, and in fact for anything that cannot come within the bounds of the regular expenditure. The Friend who left it was interested in the children, and wished that the pupil teachers should have a benefit, beyond what the usual expenditure of the Institution would afford. Here is an extract from the deed of settlement, dated in 1838, by the trustees of the charity:—

"They (the Trustees) shall from time to time pay the usual produce of the said tract premises, and when the same shall be due, unto the treasurer or cashier for the time being of the school, now carried on at Brookfield, near Kana, in the county of Astoria, in Indiana, under the control of a Committee, hereinafter referred to as the 'Committee of Management' appointed by a Quarterly Meeting of the Society of Friends, commonly called Quakers, in the Province of Ohio, Indiana or otherwise, parents, such trustee or cashier, for the time being, to receive the same, to be applied by him in such sums to the keeping up of a Library, for the use of the children of the said school, and in the purchase of Maps, Globes, Tools, scientific, philosophical, or astronomical apparatus, and any other articles of a like nature, and in making arrangements, from time to time, for the giving to the children of the said school, or the expenditure by them of Lectures on Subjects connected with Art, Science, Natural History, History, or general Literature, or in any way or ways of the said objects, as the said Committee of Management shall, for the time being, think the most likely to promote the general improvement of the children of the said school, and to make the said Committee of Management shall, for the time being, be of the judgment that so further expenditure is, for the time being, desirable in or about the aforesaid objects, or any of them, it shall be lawful for such Committee to apply the annual produce of the said trust monies, for the time being lawfully applied, in such manner for the general benefit of the children of the said school, or any portion of them, or for the encouragement of the apprentices, for the time being, of the said school, or any of them, as the said Committee of Management shall, for the time being, think most advantageous and desirable: and it is hereby declared that the receipts of the treasurer or cashier, for the time being, of the said school, for any money payable or receivable by him, under or by virtue of the trusts hereby created, shall not thereby discharge the trustees and treasurer, for the time being, of their respective and several fiduciary responsibility in respect of the management of the said endowment, and such being in any wise bound to see that the application of the money, in such receipts respectively acknowledged to be received."

9813. I suppose the capital is invested and that you only spend the interest!—The money is in railway stock, and we get the dividends. The expenditure for this year appears to me but repeat, this — making a total including £10 T₂ balance from the previous year's account of £62 15s 1d, which was £91 13s 10d more than the dividends we received during the year.

* Travelling expenses at vacation and quarterly meeting, £3 15s 9d; premiums to children, £3 10s 10d; assistance to pupil teachers in passing their studies and for obtaining re-examinations during their vacation, £10 12s 3d; books, maps, and periodicals, £14 6s 1d; tools, chemicals, and apparatus, £3 1s 3d; expenses connected with the printing office, £1 15s 6d; playgrounds, shrubs, lawns, &c., £2 6s 10d."

Q214. How much land is attached to the school?—Between eighty-three and eighty-four statute acres, but the original take was only forty-eight acres. We have a lease for 999 years of ten acres round the buildings; the lease of the rest has expired, and we now hold at will.

9315. Do the children work on the farm?—Yes, they do, for twenty hours per week.

9216. Are they all expected to do so?—The boys do. There are about thirty girls who are engaged at industrial work in the houses. They make almost all their own clothes.

—Yes; they do, and in the house work.

9218. What is the income of the school?--The income last year consisted of subscriptions amounting

vol. 27, 1878.
J. James N.
Chairman.

to £488 15s. 4d.; interest on legacies invested £46 3s. 1d.; and on £2,000 lent on mortgage, £100; we charged to the fund £75 as the interest on the money expended on the farm. We also received from the children's relatives for tuition £180 13s. 4d.; and from William Green's bequest £204 12s. 9d.; and from the farm account, for the boys' labour £53 17s. 6d., for superintendence £40, and for the profit on the farm £14 6s. 4d.; making a total of £1,200 7s. 1d.

9219. What was Green's bequest?—A sum of £3,000 was left by a Friend named Green, to establish another school for the children of Grange and Richhill, and we went before the Court of Chancery, and got leave, instead of expending the money in the building of another school, to have it applied in this school, specially for the benefit of the children of the district which the testator intended to benefit.

9220. Mr. O'SHEAUGHNESSY.—Was that application made long after Green's death?—I am informed by one of the trustees of the will, who is present, that we only received the legacy after the death of Mr. Green's widow, who was entitled to the income during her life. She died about 1841, having survived her husband for about thirty years. We made our application about two years after we became entitled to the money, because we had sufficient buildings and we thought it quite unlikely that we should have been able to support two such schools in the province. We got permission to spend £1,500 of the legacy, but we never availed ourselves of it, and invested it all. The income I have mentioned is derived from the fund as it now stands, having been increased by £500.

9221. CHAIRMAN.—There is a sum of £75 included in your receipts as interest on money expended on the farm. Is that accrued by the Ulster tenant right custom?—Yes; we consider we are better off now without a lease. We would be allowed by our present landlord, Sir Richard Wallace, to sell the land for whatever it was worth.

9222. You also include in your receipts a sum of £53 17s. 6d. for boys' labour on the farm?—Yes; we have charged for each boy's work 4d. a day, or 1d. on four.

9223. Do the boys get any portion of that money?—No.

9224. Your accounts for last year show that the expenditure of the school exceeded the income by £173 3s. 11d. Was that an unusual occurrence?—It was the largest deficiency we have had for many years. We have frequently had the balance on the other side of the account. The chief reason of the deficiency last year was that the profit on the farm was so very small.

9225. The children are all boarded and clothed?—Boarded, clothed, and educated.

9226. What fees do they pay?—The fees they pay vary from £1 to £5, according to the circumstances of the relatives by whom the money is paid. An occasional one might pay £10.

9227. What is the course of instruction given in the school?—A good English education.

9228. What staff of masters are there in the school?—There are three apprentices who each receive a certain sum increasing annually. They are bound for five or six years, and get provisions of 2s. 6s. each, when leaving the school, if they have conducted themselves properly.

9229. You have a visiting tutor to teach Latin and French?—Yes. He is paid out of the fund for the improvement of the teachers.

9230. Where does he come from?—From Lisburn.

9231. Is the school near Lisburn?—Between five and six miles of Lisburn.

9232. Have the Society of Friends other schools in Ulster, and other parts of Ireland?—There is one in Ulster. There is also a school in Leitrim, and another in Munster.

9233. Mr. O'SHEAUGHNESSY.—Where is the school in Munster?—In Waterford.

9234. Is that an Agricultural school?—No. There is no Agricultural school except this one.

9235. CHAIRMAN.—Where is the Leitrim school?—At Moormullick.

9236. Is the Brookfield school exclusively for the education of children of members of the Society of Friends?—The children there are contained to be connected with the Society of Friends, although not in actual membership. The school was established for the children of Friends who had married persons who were not members, and who, not having joined any other religious community, almost considered themselves as not belonging to any profession.

9237. Of what class are the pupils attending the school?—They are chiefly the children of farmers. A great number of them are in poor circumstances, not able to pay more than £1 or £2 a year.

9238. What callings do they generally follow after leaving the school?—They generally become apprentices in shops, or to handicraft trades, &c.

9239. Do you apprentice them in Belfast and other places?—Yes, all over Ireland. It is our custom to get them into a situation before they leave school.

9240. How is the expenditure of the school managed?—such as purchase of meat and other provisions—managed?—That is done by the Superintendent, and all the accounts are passed by the Committee monthly, and they then order a certain sum to be paid by us to the Superintendent to enable him to discharge the monthly accounts.

9241. Who keeps the farm accounts?—The Superintendent keeps all the accounts.

9242. Is the farm entirely under tillage, or is there stock kept on it?—There is a quantity of stock kept, and a considerable dairy, producing milk for the use of the children. A portion of the land is also employed in growing wheat, oats, turnips, and potatoes, for the use of the school.

9243. Do you kill some of your own meat?—We very frequently kill pork, and occasionally beef. The entire value of provisions of all kinds supplied by the farm to the house last year was £332 14s. 2d.

9244. What is the use of the farms in the neighbourhood of the school?—They vary from thirty to sixty acres. In latter years the farmers have all sought to increase them, as it is difficult to make a livelihood from small holdings.

9245. This is about an average sized farm?—I think it is.

9246. Do you consider that it is useful to give instruction in farming at school?—I should say that I do not think this school could have been established since 1836 without giving a great deal of instruction and information, not only to the pupils, but to the whole of the neighbourhood.

9247. Mr. O'SHEAUGHNESSY.—You find that the farming is conducted at a fair profit?—It has been so in years past, but during the last three years everyone knows there has been depression in prices, and bad crops.

9248. Do you compel all the boys, even those intended for commercial pursuits, to take part in the agricultural work?—Yes; all must take their part, but, of course, the little boys are put to less laborious work than the others.

9249. Has any objection been made by the parents on the ground that that work interferes with the literary work of the institution?—I think not. The children come in upon the terms, which are well known, that every boy will have to work four hours a day on the farm.

9250. Do any considerable per centage of your pupils afterwards become farmers?—We have not found any large proportion. Some, however, go home to their parents, many of whom are farmers.

9251. Are they remarkable for their success as farmers?—I do not think we could say so; we have watched those who have been educated in the institution, and in other pursuits their success in life has been very much blessed.

9252. To what do you attribute their want of success as farmers?—The children are only three years with us, from eleven to fourteen, and you cannot come to a conclusion as to what a boy of fourteen will be.

9255. Do you think, then, that a school where agriculture is taught to older boys, would be more likely to be productive of success in after life?—I think boys would more probably attend such a school, with a desire of learning farming.

Mr. WILLIAM W. DAVISON, examined.

Sept 27, 1878.
Mr. JAMES H. Richardson.

9256. CHAIRMAN.—What position do you hold in the Brookfield school?—I am the Superintendent.

9257. Is that the same office as head master?—It includes the duties of head master, as I have the oversight of the whole working of the institution.

9258. Do you also teach in the school?—I do.

9259. Do you give any special instruction in agriculture, from books, during school hours?—Yes; we have a class, in connexion with the Science and Art Department, in which the principles of agriculture are taught, as well as practical agriculture on the farm.

9260. Are there yearly examinations held by the Science and Art Department in the usual way?—There are.

9261. Do the Committee of Management of the School act as a Committee for the Science and Art Department?—Some of them do.

9262. Is the school inspected by the Department?—It is. We have several other classes, in connexion with the Science and Art Department, as well as agriculture; for instance, Magnetism, Electricity, Inorganic Chemistry, and Physiology.

9263. What number attend these special classes?—Twenty-five children attended last year; there will be about thirty this year.

9264. Do they attend all the classes?—No; moreover, no child is permitted to attend any Science instruction, in connexion with the Science and Art Department, until he is fairly up in what would be considered the fifth class under the National Board—able to work properties and practice, and parse sentences.

9265. In fact a child must have a general English education before going into these special departments?—Yes.

9266. Who superintends the work on the farm?—I do so, by giving directions to a trusty, practical farmer, and he has charge of the children, at various kinds of work. During the working hours I go over the farm; but I have also to look after other things within the house, and I have occasionally to go to market, so that it is necessary for me to have a person whom I can trust to take charge of the children who work on the farm.

9267. Is the practical farmer you speak of one of the staff?—Yes; but he is not included in the list of officers I returned to your Commission, inasmuch as he has nothing to do with the teaching staff.

9268. How is he paid?—As a farm labourer, he has 15s. a week.

9269. Does he devote his whole time to the superintending of the farm?—Yes. He labours on the farm.

9270. Who manages the cropping of the farm, and buys and sells the cattle?—I do that.

9271. How did you acquire your knowledge of farming?—Previous to my appointment as superintendent, I was more than eleven years in the institution being the work done; during that time I was nearly head master, attending only to the educational department, but after that I took charge of the other department besides.

9272. Have you any difficulty in getting the boys to work industriously on the farm?—None.

9273. Is there any special reward offered, to induce them to labour on the farm?—None.

9274. It is simply that the discipline of the establishment requires them to work?—Yes; and I 9254. CHAIRMAN.—How do you get the stock on the farm valued each year?—Two or three farmers, members of the Committee, who understand stock, are appointed to value it.

9255. Is the school visited regularly by the members of the Society of Friends?—Very frequently.

may add that they like to work; and in harvest time they take it as a pleasure to be allowed an extra hour upon the farm, taken from their school hours.

9275. What are the usual hours for the children to work on the farm?—During the winter they work on it from ten to twelve, and again, from half-past one to half-past three, but in the summer, the hours are from eight to ten, and from four to six. Our object is, to have them on the farm in the mornings and evenings, when it is cool, in the summer; and in the middle of the day, when it is temperate, in the winter.

9276. The pupils are required to pay £1 a year each?—Yes, that is the minimum. The object of requiring them to pay is, that they may appreciate the education more than if it was given for nothing; to many of those who have to pay it, £1 would be as much as £10 to a well-to-do farmer.

9277. The children are all of a very poor class?—Generally; but there is one child paying £16 10s. this year; or rather, it is being paid for her.

9278. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—We heard from Mr. Richardson that many of the pupils are the children of mixed marriages—that is, of persons of different religions?—I have the reason for the founding of the Institution before me—

"In the year 1848, some friends in Ireland, and a few from England, then on a religious visit to this country, were introduced into much feeling for the suffering and neglected condition of a large number of children, mostly residing in the province of Ulster, who were either the immediate or remote descendants of those who, at various periods, had forfeited their membership with the Society of Friends, chiefly by engaging in marriage. . . . Possibilities have been stated, no number of which could read, and many children were almost destitute of the very rudiments of learning. In some of these cases, notwithstanding that the claim to membership with Friends had long been forfeited, the parents still appeared desirous to be called by that name, and desirous to unite with other professions. . . .

The object of this institution is to educate, in a manner consistent with the doctrinal principles of the Society of Friends, a number commensurate with its means, of children of persons in low circumstances, who may be descended from Friends, though not in membership, and who are not brought up in connexion with any other religious society, the boys to be instructed in handicraft or other husbandry employment, and the girls in domestic labour suitable to their sex, in addition to such literary instruction as may contribute to their advantage in usefulness after life. It is intended to be supported by donations, and several subscriptions, and by any sum of money paid for the education of the children, together with the profits arising from the farm, and from the labour of the children."

9279. The children are all brought up as Friends?—Yes. While in the institution they attend the ordinary worship of Friends.

9280. CHAIRMAN.—What is the proportion of boys and girls?—The accommodation is for fifty boys and forty girls. The number at present in the institution is twenty-five girls, and thirty-one boys.

9281. Are they in separate wings of the building?—They are.

9282. Have you found any difficulty, owing to its being a mixed school, in keeping up discipline?—There is no difficulty in keeping up the discipline. Occasionally, in past years, we have had some difficulty arising from that.

9283. Do the girls work at all on the farm, in harvest time?—They do not.

9284. What men do you employ on the farm?—We have always three men—the one already referred to, a ploughman, and an ordinary farm labourer.

Sept. 27, 1879.
 Mr. Elias H. Bell.

MR. ELIAS HUGHES BELL, continued.

9285. CHAIRMAN.—What position do you hold in connection with the Licham Endowed School?—I am the Treasurer, and Clerk of the Committee of Management.

9286. Of what does the endowment consist?—Of lands, some rent-charges, money invested in mortgages and on deposit.

9287. The school was founded by John Hancock, who left £1,000, Irish currency?—That was the original endowment.

9288. Is that money invested?—Yes. It is invested partly in lands, and partly in the purchase of the Licham property, on which the school is situated.

9289. It appears from the report of the Royal Commission of 1857, that J. Richardson and Thomas Haughton each left the institution £500, Irish; is that money invested?—That is bearing interest on deposit.

9290. The same report shows that in 1857 the institution had £5,379 13s. 2d., including those legacies already mentioned, invested in Government stock and other securities. Have you any money invested in Government stock at present?—No. The property now belonging to the school consists of ground-tenants in Licham, valued at £200; the Prospect Hill premises, valued at £2,336 4s.; and our new school buildings, valued at £4,837 15s.; they have just been completed, and are very large, fine valuable buildings. Then we have the Munster fund, £1,300; the Leicester fund, £2,337 8s. 7d.; and the Ulster fund, £711 10s. 4d.; which were raised by donations, from members of our Society in these Provinces, for the support of the school. Legacies and money at interest amount to £2,786 2s. 6d. We have also the lands of Brough, which we value at £1,000. There is also a charge on the Belfast Meeting House for money advanced, £436 2s. The furniture of the house, value of stock, cash balances, and moneys to the credit of our building fund, &c., assessed at the close of last year to £248 4s. 2d.

9291. How are the lands of Brough held?—They are held on lease from Francis O'Neil, and are liable to a head-rent of £3 13s. 10d. per annum.

9292. The property belonging to the school amounts altogether to £17,397 6s. 6d.?—There is a sum of £1,736 4s. 4d. and £16 11s. for interest thereon, due to the Female Bazaar Fund, which appears at the other side of our capital account, and which leaves the balance in favour of the institution at the end of 1873, as £15,456 11s. 6d.

9293. What is the Female Bazaar Fund?—It is a fund belonging to the Society of Friends, which the school has borrowed, and on which we pay interest.

9294. What was the money borrowed for?—To enable us to complete the new buildings. We have spent on them over £5,000, a large portion of which was contributed from the members of the Society, and as we had not quite sufficient to complete them we borrowed this fund.

9295. What led you to borrow rather than sell out some of your stock on deposit?—A good many of the legacies we have no power to sell out, and so the Committee, in whom the principal management really rests, decided that it would be better in the interests of the institution to borrow the money than to use our own funds.

9296. How are the Committee appointed?—By a meeting of the Society of Friends, composed of representatives from all the different meetings in Ulster.

9297. For what period are they appointed?—For three years. The rule with regard to the Committee of Management is—

“This institution was established for the purpose of affording a sound English education to the children of Friends of the province of Ulster, to be conducted with a strict regard to the moral and religious training of the pupils, in accordance with the principles of the Society. This institution shall be under the control of a Committee of eighteen men and twelve women to be appointed by the quarterly meeting.”

9298. How often does the Committee meet?—They meet once a month.

9299. What is the usual attendance?—Generally from six to eight.

9300. Are there any representatives from the other provinces on the Committee?—The members of the Committee all belong to Ulster.

9301. Do the pupils come from other parts of Ireland?—Leinster and Munster have the right to send a few, if the school is not filled by those belonging to Ulster.

9302. How are the pupils selected?—There is really no selection. Any member of the Society of Friends that applies can get in, if there is a vacancy.

9303. Is the school full at present?—No. In our new buildings we could accommodate nearly 100 pupils.

9304. Your returns show that you have at present twenty-eight boys, and seventeen girls; and as day scholars eight boys, and one girl; making a total of fifty-four. I suppose the old buildings were pretty full?—Yes. The old buildings scarcely accommodated the fifty-four.

9305. In the table of fees charged in the school, I find the charge for day scholars is £4 10s. and for non-boarders 24s. What is the difference between the day boys and the non-boarders?—Some have their dinners and pay a little more.

9306. The charges for boarders appear to vary from £7 10s. to £20?—The lowest scale of charge now is £12, but some of the poorest pupils were in the school before that regulation was made, and the Committee decided not to advance the charges to those who were in the house at the time of the change.

9307. I suppose the pupils generally come from the middle and upper classes?—Yes, but more generally from the middle classes.

9308. Are the boys and girls kept in different wings of the building?—They are.

9309. Your returns show that your principal assistant resident master has a salary of £100 a year?—Since that return was furnished the master who was receiving £100 a year has been dispersed with, and we have now got another, a junior teacher.

9310. Is the education given a good commercial education?—Yes, that is what we chiefly aim at, but the pupils are also taught in some higher branches.

9311. Is it not a school frequented by the children of large merchants belonging to the Society of Friends?—There have been some of their children there, but the institution is designed for the middle classes, or rather for the lower classes; for, though our maximum charge is £12, the actual cost of each child in the institution is £26 10s.

9312. Dr. Currier.—Do any of the boys understand modern languages arranged for?—There is a visiting French teacher who comes to the school from Licham. He is a native of France. We charge £1 a year extra for French.

Mr. JOSEPH RALEY, examined.

Sept. 25, 1878.

Mr. Joseph
Raley.

9314. CHAIRMAN.—You are the Superintendent of the Licham school?—I am.

9315. What walk in life have your pupils generally followed, after leaving school?—They are principally turned to commercial pursuits. I may mention that a number of the leading merchants of Belfast, Friends and not Friends, were educated at Licham school.

9316. The school is not exclusively confined to children of members of the Society of Friends?—It is almost exclusively, but some who are now in leading positions in Belfast are people who have been Friends, but have left the Society.

9317. There is no other religious denomination recognised in the school?—No. If we have pupils who are not members of the Society they conform in every way. We have never had any request that any of the pupils should be allowed to be absent from religious instruction, and they all attend our meetings for worship.

9318. Do you ever send any pupils to the Queen's College?—No, not at present. I may mention that a few years ago I endeavoured to interest the President of the Queen's College in the question of examining schools in the country, and at our request the first thing of the kind took place directly from the authorities of the College, and we were sent by Dr. Henry, the President of the College, the request made to him by the Examiners, Mr. S. J. McMillan, M.A. (Wide Awake No. 15). The school has been examined in the same way three times. My design as a schoolmaster was to interest those educated in the school, and rather to point the way to the university by keeping it in view through having a university examination coming to us, in the same way that the examinations by the Syndicate of Cambridge are carried on in England. I believe ours is the only one of the kind adopted by the Queen's College at present. In preparing our boys for commercial occupations, we also direct their education with a view to their being employed largely as managers and so on, in manufacturing works, and for that purpose we have a laboratory, and instruct the boys in inorganic chemistry. We have also one or two classes in connection with the Science and Art Department. So that our boys to the number of about twenty, and girls to the number of about twelve, constitute science classes under the direct superintendence of the Science and Art Department. We had the same thing in regard to art—the second grade. Some of the boys on leaving us go to higher schools, and a few get into professions; but as a rule commercial education is the main thing the Society of Friends in this province require.

9319. Did you send up any of your pupils to the Intermediate Examinations?—We allowed fourteen boys and one girl to go up for those examinations, and have not yet received the final awards, but three of our boys passed in the division of merit. The programme for that examination came out rather late last year, and we had then entered into three courses in the Science and Art Department, and we thought it wiser to keep on with these. That was the reason we had not a larger number of pupils in for the Intermediate Examinations. We obtained fifty-six certificates in the Science alone alone, and several in the advanced or teachers' grade.

9320. Are modern languages taught in the school?—The average time of the boys in the school is only three years, and it would be impossible to do more than teach the rudiments of a language in that time. They are taught more as a means to etymological studies. About 30 study French, and some German.

9321. Why do the boys leave school in that short time?—Because they are wanted to go into business. The theory is that a boy makes a better man of business if he goes to it before fifteen, than if he begins afterwards. We therefore never have a chance of bringing boys on to a very far advanced education. There is hardly one professional man in the Society of Friends in Ulster. They are almost entirely successful peasant-business men, and the tendency of our education is to make business men.

9322. Have you found any difficulty from having a mixed boarding school for boys and girls?—No. I have lived in a number of boarding schools in England, where boys and girls have been educated together, and in several of these very rapid discipline was observed in order to keep the children as much as possible from each other. When I went to the Licham school, there was a high wall between the playgrounds, and I was enabled to remove it. The boys and girls now play in the same playground, they take their meals in the same room, and many of the girls have been taught together with the boys in the same classes. My experience of our school where this is allowed has been strikingly different from what I have seen where the opposite is insisted on—they now mix without any degree of familiarity, or inconvenience; and it has been, in fact, an evident advantage to both sides of the school, of course it requires constant supervision, and the continual mixing of the teachers with the children.

9323. Dr. CURRIE.—Do you teach physical science at all?—Yes. At present we are having a course of lectures on physics. Last year in addition to inorganic chemistry we had magnetism, electricity, and physiography. This year I am dropping these two, and we are to have lectures on anatomy and astronomy.

9324. Do you illustrate your lectures on physics by apparatus?—We have not any apparatus. In many of the other branches we have sufficient apparatus.

9325. How do you lecture on magnetism?—We have sufficient apparatus for that. We are restricted in the means of getting apparatus, because none of our funds are specially devoted to that purpose. The funds are for the education, and to some extent for the clothing as well as boarding of the children, and the committee feel restrained from spending that money on such things as apparatus. In some of our schools there are funds available for that purpose; but we have none, and it is one of the things for which we have to exercise patience.

9326. You do not lecture on the subject of heat?—Yes, occasionally we do.

9327. CHAIRMAN.—Do the girls learn Latin?—Two of the girls are reading Cæsar with me. Several are writing Latin exercises. There is also some instruction given in Greek. Some of them are at Xenophon's Anabasis. A few are learning German; but as a rule they do not stay long enough to do so. The educational position of the school has considerably improved of late years. Provision was made a few years since for enabling some of the children, who are likely to take to teaching, or who are promising in other respects, to be drafted off from the school at Brookfield to this school; but we have no kind of scholarship, or anything of that kind, to act as a step up higher when they leave us.

Mr. JOHN FAN, examined.

Mr. John Fan.

9328. CHAIRMAN.—Can you give us any further information as to the Licham school?—The school was established for children, if I may so express it, not in different circumstances. A few years ago, when unfortunately the state of education was not such as was satisfactory, and the number of scholars was reduced to a very low ebb, and the amounts they paid were so small, it was seen that the school might have to be closed, but a very vigorous effort was made by engaging the present superior head master, and in various other ways, to try and improve the education; and to carry out this plan we were obliged to raise the terms. Formerly we had a minimum, which commenced at £3; then it was raised to £5; then to £7 10s., and now it is £12. If, however, a parent was not able to give the amount himself, contributions were collected from the members of the Society to make up the required sum, and in that way some parents got their children educated there for nothing.

9329. As day scholars?—No, as boarders; and that was such a strain on the institution that it was impossible to carry it out.

9330. I find in one of your circulars, a statement that the present charges are for members out of Ulster, twenty-six guineas, and for all non-members, thirty guineas. Is that a new arrangement?—Yes. We have had a good deal of difficulty in arranging that, as some of our members objected to the advance, but the Committee in charge of the school found that, unless the charges were raised, the school would have to be closed from want of funds to carry it on, although that course would involve the loss of much of the endowment; while the school is not quite full, we allow parents of any religious denomination to send their children there, provided they pay the full sum. We thought that by so doing, we could get larger receipts, and educate the children in a better style than hitherto; and we have succeeded.

9331. The parents are comfortably off as a rule?—Some are wealthy, and others quite in the humble classes. Of course no one in the Society of Friends is allowed to be in absolute poverty. The object is to give the children, even of the poorest members, such an education as will enable them to earn their living honestly and fairly in life. A number of the humble classes are in membership with the Society of Friends throughout Ulster.

9332. The Society, I believe, always endeavours to assist any member who is in struggling circumstances?—We do, by trying to make them assist themselves, but some of us felt that, unfortunately, this school had a pauperising tendency, as it reduced some parents who could afford to pay for their children's education to object to do so, as they thought they could by means of this foundation have their children educated for nothing, especially when only a small number of pupils were in the establishment permitted a large sum, often £20 per head, being available for each child which request this assistance.

Rev. James
O'Lanterny, F.R.

REV. JAMES O'LANERNY, F.R., examined.

9333. Mr. O'BRIEN.—You are the parish priest of Holywood, county Down?—I am.

9334. I believe there are some endowed schools in your parish?—Yes; one was endowed by means of a donation given by Dr. Sullivan, in his lifetime, and another by means of a bequest left in his will.

9335. Have you any suggestions to make, as to an inquiry with regard to the first of these schools?—I think not; because, before the Primary Education Commission, all that was necessary with regard to that school was brought out.

9336. With reference to the second school, what have you to suggest?—I understand that the late Dr. Sullivan, by his will, left to his trustees the residue of his estate for the purpose of benefiting National education in Holywood.

9337. CHAIRMAN.—What was the date of that?—He died about 1865.

9338. Mr. O'BRIEN.—What has been done by the trustees?—They have obtained a large sum, approximately to £7,050 or £8,000, diverted it from what I consider to have been the intention of the testator, and erected therewith a school which they have built on the same grounds as the school erected during Dr. Sullivan's lifetime. They did not place that school under the National Board, and what management it has I know not, but, as the parish priest, I feel aggrieved that I know nothing about it. I myself was excluded from the Committee of Management of the ordinary National school, though one of the rules, made by the trustees, provided that every clergyman of the district should be upon that committee. My predecessor, the late Dr. Kilkeny, was also excluded from the committee, under pretence that he did not live in Holywood.

9339. You are now speaking of the ordinary National schools?—Yes, Dr. Kilkeny's curate was excluded because, being a curate, he was not permanent, and I was excluded, I believe, because I had written something about National education in the newspaper.

9340. Your suggestion then is, that as to the school endowed under Dr. Sullivan's will inquiry should be made as to the real intentions of the testator, not evaded by the expressions used in his will, and as to the extent to which these intentions have been carried out?—Exactly; as to his intentions, formed long previous to the making of his will. He wrote this letter to

Mr. Greg, of Holywood, in reference to the school founded in his lifetime—

"Education Office, Dublin,

"24th September, 1866.

"Dear Mr. Greg, . . . The school to be called the Holywood National School. It is, when completed, to be put under the Board of National Education, in order that it may have the benefit of the inspection of their officers, grants in aid of the salaries of the teachers, and books and school supplies for the pupils at reduced rates. And should the National system of education be broken up or discontinued—which, for the sake of Ireland, I hope may never be the case—the principles of that system are, nevertheless, to be always acted upon in this school."

Now, what I complain of is, that while Dr. Sullivan acted distinctly that in the event of the National system being broken up, his trustees were empowered to erect a school; yet without the National system having been broken up, the trustees have erected a school, and expended enormous sums of money on a school, running parallel with the system of National education, but doing without that system while that system is still in existence. I complain still more that as he left the money for National education in Holywood, and as there are three sets of National schools in Holywood—one under the Episcopalian minister, another under Mr. McAllister, commonly called "Sullivan's School," and another under my management, each of these is entitled to share in the benefit intended for the use of National education in Holywood.

9341. CHAIRMAN.—Who are the managers of the new school?—I really do not know, I am perfectly at sea with regard to it.

9342. As far as you know, is it a mixed school or a Presbyterian school?—What is meant by a mixed school in Holywood is this, that if Catholics go they will be received.

9343. Mr. O'BRIEN.—We will endeavour to have the witnesses who can give information about this school, and Dr. Sullivan's will here on Tuesday next at ten o'clock?—Thank you.

9344. CHAIRMAN.—There is one endowed school at Holywood mentioned in the report of the Commissioners of 1867, as having a small endowment of £6 10s. a year, arising from trust funds, besides the value of the site £2 14s.—which school is that?—That is probably the school at present under the management of the Episcopalian minister.

Mr. JOHN HASTOCK, J.P., examined.

Sept. 25, 1893.

Mr. John
Hastock, J.P.

9245. CHAIRMAN—Can you give us an account of the endowment of Watts' School, Lurgan?—Yes. I am the senior trustee of that school. The other trustees are, Mr. James Anderson, and Mr. John W. Greer, J.P. Mr. Samuel Watts was born in 1787, and died in 1850. Here is an extract from his will dated 3rd August, 1847, viz. :—

"I hereby declare my Will to be, that my said Trustees and the successors and survivors of them, his heirs, executors, and administrators, shall (subject to the directions herein contained) have the direction and control of the instruction to be given in the said School, and of the general management thereof, and shall have full power to determine how many of the scholars taught in the said school shall be boarded and reside therein, or whether any of the said scholars shall so reside therein. And the said school, being intended for giving instruction in English, Science, and English, and in agriculture, I hereby declare my Will to be, that no person being in Holy Orders, or a minister of any religious denomination, shall at any time interfere in the management of the said School, or ever be appointed or act as a master, officer, or servant of the said School, and that as exercises of religion and religious creed be taught, no persons of any religious sect or denomination, in the said School, during School hours, provided that the scholars may be instructed in their different religious opinions by their parents and their respective clergymen at home, or at any reasonable time not set apart for the business of the said School."

9246. Of what does the endowment consist?—Of about £3,000, lent out on mortgage, on good security.

9247. How is the building, in which the school is situated, held?—The building is held by lease for 1,000 years, under Lord Lurgan.

9248. Was the building erected before the trustees took the premises?—No. The house was built by the trustees on two and a half acres, which they took upon the promise of a lease which has since been executed.

9249. Where did the funds, for the erection of the building, come from?—Out of the accumulation of interest on the capital.

9250. I find that in addition to the two and a half acres which are held for 1,000 years, there are also seven acres held on a terminable lease. What are those seven acres used for?—For agricultural purposes, under the will of Mr. Watts.

9251. Is the school carried on in accordance with the principles of the National Board?—It is. And Mr. Watts wished that it should be so.

9252. Are the wishes of the testator, as regards agriculture, carried out?—The wish as to agriculture is extensively complied with, as it was found not successful.

9253. Then how are the seven acres used?—They are occupied by the master as part of his residence.

9254. Are the trustees the sole managers of the school?—They are. We are getting to appoint two new trustees to assist us.

9255. Do the trustees appoint the masters?—They do.

9256. How many masters are there?—Three.

9257. How many pupils are there at present?—There are fifty-six, of whom twenty-four are boarders.

9258. What fees are charged to the pupils?—The boarders pay fifty guineas a year, and the day boys from six to twelve guineas. The day school is perfectly non-sectarian, but the private school, or boarding establishment, is sectarian.

9259. The testator does not appear to have contemplated a boarding school at all?—Not at all.

9260. Does the boarding department pay for itself?—It is paid for by the persons who send their children.

9261. What is the religion of the master of the boarding house?—He is a Presbyterian, and I take it that the whole of the boarders are Presbyterians. I may mention that the trustees are all members of the Irish Church, and in the selection of the master we acted on what we believed to be the best for the interests of the public.

9262. Do any of the day pupils pay more than £12 12s 6d?—No.

9263. Have any, at any time, paid more?—Not that I am aware of.

9264. It has been suggested to us that some have been charged as high as £20 a year?—I have not based any such complaint. We have the utmost confidence in our master, who is a very respectable man and does his work well. If any such complaint as you indicate, be furnished to us, we will be glad to look into the matter, and, if there is ground for it, see how far it can be rectified; but I do not believe the complaint is well founded.

9265. Mr. O'BRIEN—Was this school intended, by the will of the testator, to be for the benefit of the middle and lower classes in Lurgan, rather than for the benefit of the spiculate classes?—Certainly that was the feeling of the testator, when I knew personally. He sprang from an humble origin; and, having made his own money, he was anxious, so far as he could, to apply it so as to benefit the humbler classes.

9266. Do you think that intention has been carried out, having regard to the scale of fees charged under the present management of the school?—As far as we could we endeavored to do so. One of the trustees, Mr. Anderson, is a nephew of the testator; and Mr. Greer and myself were his intimate personal friends, so that we all are particularly anxious to carry out his wishes.

9267. What are, as a rule, the occupations in life of the parents of the children attending the school?—Some of them are of the better class of life, and some of the humbler class. I myself give a prize in the school, and that prize was won the other day by a shoemaker's son.

9268. Are the majority of the pupils the children of parents of that class?—The majority of the day pupils are of the humbler class; but the majority of the boarders are of the better class, and chiefly Presbyterians.

9269. What is the salary of the head master?—We pay him £100 a year out of our funds.

9270. What calling in life do the humbler day boys generally follow, after they leave the school?—We want some to be an intermediate school—that is, that boys should come from the Model school up to our school. I think the boys that attend our school are of the better class than the ordinary labourers of the country.

9271. Do the majority of the boys in the school learn Greek and Latin?—I do not think they do.

9272. The charge for the ordinary English course appears to be, a guinea and a half, a quarter?—Something like that.

9273. Assuming French, and German, to form part of the ordinary education, to which the humbler classes might aspire, the terms would come to £2 2s, a quarter?—Yes.

9274. Do you think that that sum can be paid by what are called the humbler classes there?—They pay it.

9275. Are many boys, sons of artisans, paying £8 8s. a year?—I should say not.

9276. Is there any difference of opinion between you and your two co-trustees, as to the management of the funds, or of the school?—None whatever. We have never had any such difference, and are perfectly harmonious.

9277. CHAIRMAN—What other schools are there in Lurgan?—There are several National schools.

9278. Is there a Model National school at Lurgan?—There is.

9279. Is that successful?—Perfectly.

9280. Do you know whether that is a mixed school?—It is mixed in every way. We all give prizes. Lord Lurgan and the manufacturers give £10 a year in prizes to the school. It is very successful. Nothing could be better.

9281. Is there any Roman Catholic school in the town?—The Roman Catholics object altogether to the Model school, and will not have anything to say to it. They, however, have their own schools. I was myself

Sept. 27, 1879.
Mr. John -
Belfast, S. F.

one of the persons, who started the Model school; and I got the Priest, the Presbyter, the Clergyman, and the Rector to join me in doing so; but the moment the Synod of Thurles promulgated its decree, the Priest refused to have anything more to do with the Model school, and, from that day to this, the Catholics will have nothing to say to it.

Mr. George Hampden.

Mr. GEORGE HAMPTON, examined.

1982. CHAIRMAN.—You are the Solicitor to the trustees of Mr. Watts' will?—I am.

1983. What is the exact state of the funds of the endowment, at present?—The estate of the late Mr. Watts, after payment of debts and testamentary expenses, realized £2,307 11s. 8d. Of that £5,666 13s. 4d. was invested, on the 27th November, 1851, on mortgage on property in Belfast, and the rest of the trust fund amounting to £1,440 18s. 4d. with £359 1s. 8d. accumulations, which made the amount to £1,800, was also lent on mortgage, on the 28th October, 1853. These two sums—£1,800, the principal sum of £2,307 11s. 8d. and accumulations amounting to £359 1s. 8d. still remain out on mortgage. Under the terms of the will, the school was not to be erected until the accumulations reached £4,000; but the deceased's widow, who was entitled to a large portion of the revenue during her life, lived to a very advanced age. In 1875 the trustees, finding that the accumulations then in their hands, amounted to £2,826 1s. 5d. and that they had also the £359 1s. 8d. that formed part of the £1,800, secured by the second mortgage, I have mentioned, took counsel's opinion, and he advised them that they might go on with the building of the school, without waiting till the accumulations reached the sum of £4,000, and accordingly, in September, 1875, the trustees entered into a contract, and had the school built.

1984. What was the expenditure on the school?—The contract was paid £2,871 6s. 10d. and then there were extras and incidental expenses, architect's fees and so on, making the total only £3,362 18s. 8d. but the original endowment has not been infringed upon. The accounts of the trustees were audited last June, and there then appeared a balance due to Mr. Hancock of £850, for money advanced by him. He did not wish to disturb either of the investments and so he advanced whatever money was required. There still remains a sum of £351 19s. 1d. due to him.

1985. Is the school, as it is now managed, paying off that debt?—It is.

1986. Was the agricultural department of the school ever worked at all?—There was never sufficient money to carry out that idea. I understood from the wording of the will, that it was not the intention of the testator, that the school should be for the humblest classes. When we have authority to give a classical and agricultural education it gives the idea of something higher. In fact I believe Mr. Watts had been travelling through Scotland, and had there seen some of the better class of agricultural schools.

1987. Where has the school been erected?—Within half a mile of the town of Lurgan, according to the terms of the will.

1988. There has been no land purchased as provided by the will?—A lease has been procured of two and a half acres at £8 an acre, for a term of 1,000 years, and an agricultural lease for thirty-one years of about seven acres at £3 an acre.

1989. Is there any religious instruction given in the school?—To the boarders there is, but not to the day boys.

1990. The clergy do not attend to give religious instruction at the school?—I think not.

1991. Has the school proved successful at the Intermediate Education Examinations?—Very successful. The master sent up eleven boys for examination, and of those seven passed in the worst list, and two got exhibitions. One of the exhibitions was a boy who had come from the Model school, and was educated five at our school. There are always two or three educated free.

[The Commissioners adjourned to Monday, 29th Inst., at 11 o'clock.]

Sept. 29, 1879.

TWENTY-FIFTH DAY—MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 29, 1879, 11 O'CLOCK, A.M.

In the Tower Hall, Belfast.

PRESENT:—THE EARL OF ROSS, CHAIRMAN; RICHARD O'SHAUGHNESSY, Esq., M.P.; and ARTHUR HILL CURTIS, Esq., LL.D.; with JAMES CRISP MERRITT, Esq., LL.D., Secretary.

Mr. JOHN FOSTER, examined.

Mr. John
Foster.

1992. CHAIRMAN.—You were a member in the Belfast Academy for some years?—I was appointed in 1846, and as I never resigned, I am still one of the foundation members.

1993. You desire to make a statement to the Commissioners?—Yes; Dr. Boyce in his evidence made several misstatements. He said that I was not a foundation master, and he spoke of the large number of pupils attending the academy. Now, the mistake of the Belfast Academy was, that it was filled up with Dr. Boyce's brother, his sister, his brother-in-law and their children. As to my position, Dr. Boyce said that in the Belfast Academy there were four schools, quite distinct. Now, from the very foundation there have been five schools, quite distinct, as proved by the following extracts from local newspapers and notices of the Academy:—

"The first institution given to the public of the contemplated Academy is recorded in the New York of the 13th December, 1838, in an advertisement requesting—'Such gentlemen as wish to subscribe to this laudable institution to signify their intention to Dr. Hahley, Dr. Connelley, &c.' The next public document turning up is the original prospectus of the Academy, dated January, 1840, appointing the four of the several schools before they actually were opened, and the French school is recorded in the chart. In order to prepare the youth for the academical classes, schools will be opened to suit throughout the year in which the following branches will be taught:—

| | Per Quarter |
|---|-------------|
| English, | 8 s. 2 d. |
| Latin and Greek, | 0 11 4 |
| French and Italian, | 0 16 3 |
| Writing, Arithmetic, | 1 2 0 |
| Geographical course for six months, | 0 15 5 |
| | 3 2 5 1/2 |

1994. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—I think I recognize in your opening words language identical with a statement which you have handed in to us?—Yes; I have confined it altogether to the two points.

1995. We have read over your statement very carefully, and it appears to us prima facie that the decision of the Court of Chancery, and the adoption of a certain scheme is, so far as we are concerned, final. Be kind enough to direct your evidence, or suggestion, to show that the scheme of the Court of Chancery is not final, and what it is that those gentlemen have done outside the decree, and against the scheme, of the Court of Chancery!—I will shortly apply myself to that matter!—

By advertisement of the 20th January, 1786, the subscribers to the Belfast Academy were requested to meet at the Green Tavern, on Wednesday next, the 25th inst., Dr. Haldry in the chair, it was resolved: "That Dr. Haldry, Messrs Maxwell, Esq., Dr. Macneil, and Dr. Combe be appointed a committee to prepare rules for the internal regulation of the Academy, the same to be laid before the next general meeting of the subscribers, for their approbation." By advertisement of the 7th April, 1786, the subscribers were requested, by order of the last general meeting, a full attendance of the subscribers to the Academy, on Wednesday, the 10th inst., precisely at the hour of twelve, for the purpose of establishing rules and regulations, and appointing additional masters, and electing a president."

Let me now show how the mistake took place in Chancery. By the rules of the Academy adopted on the 19th April, 1786, five masterships were founded. In 1834 the property was given to the masters in trust for the town of Belfast, and M. Lo Pan, the then French master, was excluded as one of the masters of the foundation. Then rules were written by Dr. Bryne, I think in his own handwriting, stating that there were only four schools instead of five, but that there might be classes for French, and so on, and he presented to the court those rules, instead of the rules of the original founders, and thus the Lord Chancellor was misled; because he took for granted that the rules before him were the rules from the foundation, whereas they were only the rules of 1834 or 1835, written by Dr. Bryne. My letter of appointment is as follows:—

"Belfast Academy, 26th Sept., 1846.

"DEAR SIR,—Your excellent testimonials, and the favourable notice given of you from personal knowledge by Mr. Brown, my brother-in-law, have decided me to appoint you to the office of French master to the Secretary, and from all I hear of you I rely on finding in you a colleague able and willing to co-operate effectually in carrying out the approved principles of instruction and discipline which I have been long labouring to establish.

"You are aware that the endowments depend entirely on the fees of pupils.

"The hours of attendance are from eight till nine in the morning, and from one till two in the afternoon, every day, with a third hour, probably from three till four in the afternoon, when required.

"The interests of the Academy, and, still more importantly, your own interests, require that you should be here at the earliest possible moment. A small class has been kept up for you, and the sooner you enter upon the management of it the better. You are not likely to have many pupils till the 1st of November, but it is highly desirable that you should be in town, and actively engaged in teaching, several weeks before that time, as I have no doubt that the talents and skill in teaching, of which your testimonials speak so highly, will produce a favourable impression on the public mind, and increase your business when the quarter day arrives.

"I am, very truly yours,

"R. J. BARNES.

"I have omitted to mention, that the afternoon classes do not meet on Saturday.

"A note informing me when I may expect you will oblige me much."

The last document I have to bring before you is also one from Dr. Bryne himself, and it proves, conclusively that the schools were five in number, and not four, as he stated to you, and swore to in the Court of Chancery:—

Extract from Belfast News-Letter, 26th July, 1848.

"Belfast Academy, founded in 1783.

"Rev. R. J. Barnes, M.A., Principal.

"The experience of more than sixty years has proved the expediency of the Constitution of this Society and the wisdom of its founders. In a school conducted by a single head master and his assistants, one or two branches of education are often conducted with great vigour and efficiency. In a Seminary consisting of distinct schools, with Masters or Tutors assigned, a very extensive course may be undertaken. The Belfast Academy combines the advantages of both. It is an assemblage of schools, each conducted by a head master and his assistants, but all are under a Principal, whose duty it is to maintain discipline, and keep up a uniformity of system, and vigour of operation, in all departments.

"Justice to the masters requires this explanation of their position and standing, as it has of late become usual for the head master of any respectable school to assume the title of PRINCIPAL, and call his others Masters.

"The Heads of the several schools are as follows:—

|-------------------------|----------------|
| Classical, | The Principal. |
| Mathematical, | Mr. McClellan. |
| Writing, | Mr. Armstrong. |
| English, | Mr. Barr. |
| French, | Mr. Fyvie. |
| Drawing, | Mr. Molloy. |

(Signed)

"R. J. BARNES, M.A., Principal."

3386 Mr. Molloy, the drawing master appears to have been included in that list!—You, but merely to swell the number; he was not a foundation master.

3387 That does not profess to be a catalogue exclusively of the alleged foundation masters!—No; it does not. I wish to add that Mr. Burt, who is present, and who is Dr. Bryne's solicitor, distinctly recognised me as one of the masters of the Academy. I have always been master of a school since I was appointed in the Belfast Academy, in 1846.

MR. CHARLES HENRY BURT, recalled.

MR. CHARLES H. BURT.

3388 Mr. O'SHEAGHNESSY.—I have some questions to put to you, but you say, if you so desire, in the first instance, make a statement as to any of the matters to which M. Fyvie has referred!—I think perhaps I could assist you by making a short statement. The proceedings in the Court of Chancery were instituted by information at the suit of the Attorney-General in 1861. The respondents named were representatives of the former subscribers, and the masters who were believed to be upon the foundation. The proceedings were very slow, and before the year 1864, when Master Fyvie made his report, advertisements had been published in the Belfast papers, calling, in the usual manner, on all persons who had shares, or were interested, to appear. So far as I know M. Fyvie made no objection to any of the proceedings.

3389 Was there any appearance entered by him?—None on that occasion, but there was on a subsequent occasion. The information sets out fully the history of the Academy, even before the foundation that M. Fyvie has mentioned, and goes back as far as 1790. It states the will of Arthur Maxwell, mentioned by Dr. Bryne in his evidence, and the deed of 1834, which created the trust under which, as I apprehend, M. Fyvie was appointed a master.

3400 That deed appears to have altered, to some extent, the constitution of the original foundation!—I think it probably did.

3401 It gave the property to the masters!—It gave the property to trustees. This is an extract from the deed:—

"By the word 'masters' in these rules it is intended to designate those teachers who are parties to the proposal considered, which the patrons at the first meeting, held on the 17th Dec., 1833, ordered to be printed, namely, Dr. Bryne as Master of the School of Classical School; Mr. James Bryne, jun., Master for the School of Mathematical and Physical Sciences; Mr. Thomas Armstrong, Master of the Writing School; also Mr. William Hamilton, Master of the School for English Language and Literature, should be decide on becoming a party to the present agreement before the perfecting of the first deed, also the future masters of the schools; and also all other teachers who may be hereafter appointed on the same footing—namely, receiving the fees of their own pupils, and holding their situations while their conduct is satisfactory to the Principal or whatever other person or persons may hereafter be vested with the power of dismissal? But can a teacher be engaged for a special term, without having a claim, to be regarded as master within the meaning of these rules? Should any doubt arise as to whether a particular teacher is entitled to be considered a master? In the same above explained, the decision of the question shall rest with the Principal and master."

9402. That did not include the French master?—Certainly not.

9403. M. Feste wants to know why M. Le Fan was excluded from that?—I cannot answer that, as I was not born at the time. Subsequently, in 1866, a scheme was settled by Master Brooke, and in 1876 it was considered advisable to apply for an amendment of that scheme. An application was made by counsel, under the leave reserved in the decree of the Lord Chancellor to all persons interested to apply at any time.

9404. Was there any application on behalf of the French master, when the original scheme came before the Lord Chancellor?—No.

9405. What was done in 1876?—Upon the motion of counsel on behalf of the petitioner or relation, his lordship made an order amending the scheme. M. Feste appeared by counsel on that occasion, and the Lord Chancellor heard him, but said he did not see in any way that he could interfere with the arrangements that had taken place on a previous occasion.

9406. Do you wish to make any personal explanation with reference to the adoption of M. Feste, that you recognised him as one of the masters of the Academy?—That statement of his was untrue. I entirely deny it. M. Feste has been carrying on a system of villification, about this subject, for a number of years, and I have published a statement in answer to anything that was personal in the matter.

Rev. Edwin J.
Byes, M.A.

Rev. HERBERT JONES BRUCE, LL.D., recalled.

9407. CHAIRMAN.—Have you any further statement to make as to the Belfast Academy?—I desire to point out that in the constitution of 1834, there is a circumstance which has been overlooked—that is to say, that the constitution of the Academy was changed about the time of Dr. Bruce's appointment in 1799, as is shown by the minutes. At that time the power of appointing masters and dismissing them was vested entirely in the Principal, so that he became absolute master of the Academy. It was in order to change that, and to restore it to something of the form of a constitutional limited monarchy, that the change of the constitution in 1834 was directed. My opinion from the beginning was—and my experience has confirmed me in it—that it was not right, that a master should be reduced to a position of absolute dependence upon the head of the school, and I thought it was not likely that gentlemen of sufficient standing could be got to accept masterships on those terms. From the time I became Principal, I always treated the masters as if the constitution which I considered most desirable had been actually in operation, and considered them in everything up to 1834, when the constitution, mainly devised and drafted by myself, was adopted. We had masters of very high literary reputation in the Academy, and my view was that the Academy should not depend for its masters upon the taste and judgment of the Principal, and so I got the constitution of 1834 adopted, and by that constitution we must be guided. I have to add that the constitution has been represented by M. Feste as if it had been hisse. It was drafted by me, but was most carefully considered by the scholars under the direction of counsel, so that every security should be given that it was legally done. Not only that, but there were meetings called, as the minute book shows, by circulation to the parents, and by public advertisement, and every precaution was taken to give full legal force to that constitution. Both in the constitution of 1834, and in the recent scheme which was framed upon it, the definition of "masters" was given:—"The masters of the four schools of which the Academy at present consists." In the Register of 1834, or 1835, it was stated that the Academy then consisted of four schools, and as I did not become Principal until 1839, I am not responsible for that. With regard to M. Feste's claim to be one of the masters of the foundation, if my letter or advertisement is to be taken as any authority, according to M. Feste's principle there ought to be six masters, not five. But in my view the number is four. In the constitution of 1834, and the scheme of 1864, it is distinctly stated that extra masters might be engaged for a specified time. M. Feste was engaged for a specified time—that is to say, a certain number of hours per day.

9408. As I understand the French master was in a different position, as far as his duties were concerned, from the other masters, as his time was not necessarily devoted entirely to the Academy, whereas the others were supposed to be the servants of the Academy, and bound to devote their whole time to it. Was that the case?—That was the case.

9409. Dr. CURRIE.—Did M. Feste teach elsewhere while he was a master in the Academy?—I believe he did.

9410. Was there any restriction to prevent him from doing so?—No restriction whatever.

9411. Was there such restriction upon the other masters?—They had no time to give, but there was no exact rule on the subject; it was understood.

Rev. Samuel
M. Dill.

Rev. SAMUEL MARCUS DILL, examined.

9412. CHAIRMAN.—What position do you hold in reference to Guy's school, Ballymena?—I have been one of the trustees since I came to reside in Ballymena, in the year 1874. I hold the position of trustee, as Minister of the First Presbyterian Church in Ballymena.

9413. Who are the other trustees?—Lord Waverley, Messrs. William Gehan, William R. Wilson, and John Bewick.

9414. What does the endowment consist of?—The endowment consists of houses in Ballymena, left by a man named Guy in the year 1813. One portion is situated in Church-street, and the other in Wellington-street and High-street.

9415. How is the property held?—By lease in perpetuity. The houses were built on ground leased by Lord Waverley's predecessors, the Adams, to the trustees, for the support of the school, and for giving money to Mercantile widows.

9416. Mr. O'BRIEN.—Do you hold the six of the school-house free of rent?—We pay a landlord of 6s. a year, to Lord Waverley, for the part of the property in Wellington-street and High-street, and on that the school-house is built, as well as residences for the teachers and other houses which are not.

9417. How is the property in Church-street held?—We have a lease in perpetuity of that, and we pay a head-rent of between 25 and 210 a year for it.

9418. How is that property used?—There are houses upon it, and we derive a certain income from it.

9430. In the lease, under which Mr. Atkin holds, an old lease?—It is for 91 years, from 1834.

9431. What other property is there belonging to the schools?—The property in Church-street is leased to William B. Wilson, McInley & Co., William Young, and Alexander Young. The net rent, after the usual deductions for poor-rate, &c., paid by McInley & Co., is £26 13s. 6d.; by William B. Wilson, £38 6s. 9d.; by William Young, £1 9s.; and by Alexander Young, £3 16s. 4d. In connection with that property we have what is called a town park, or field, on the outskirts of the town, used for grazing purposes, the rent of which is £2 10s. a year.

9432. Are all these various holdings on lease?—William B. Wilson has a lease for thirty-one years, from 1875. McInley has one lease for thirty-one years, from 1875, and another for thirty-four years, from 1868. William Young, and Alexander Young, who have only small holdings, have got them in perpetuity, and the town park is let from year to year.

9433. Is that the entire of the school property?—There was £200 left by a Mrs. Oshan eight or nine years ago, the interest of which was to be expended on the school. We had that money invested in United States Bonds, which are to be paid off this year. We received £12 last year as the interest on that investment.

9434. What is the total income of the schools?—£133 14s. 6d. per annum is the entire income of the endowment, but only a part of it belongs to the schools.

9435. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—That amount includes the interest on the £200?—It does.

9436. CHAIRMAN.—Is there any other property connected with the endowment?—No.

9437. Do you receive subscriptions for the support of the schools?—The schools are under the National Board, but Lord Waverley gives £15 to supplement the salary of the mistress in the female school, which, however, is paid direct to her, and not to the trustees.

9438. Are there two schools?—There are three schools—a boys' school, a girls' school, and an infants' school.

9439. How many pupils are there in the boys' school?—The present number is 200, made up of 150 Presbyterians, 34 Episcopals, 4 Roman Catholics, and 12 others.

9440. You have a teacher who teaches French and drawing?—Yes; he is a trained teacher of the second class from the institution in Dublin, and professes to be able to teach those extra subjects, as the trustees allow him, if he can get up a class, to give instruction to the advanced boys.

9441. How is the endowment expended?—Our expenditure last year was—John Alexander, the teacher of the boys' school, £35 10s.; William McGee, his assistant, £8; James Taylor, second assistant, £5. Jane Boyd, the assistant teacher in the girls' school, £6 6s. 6d.; Mrs. Buchanan, the principal teacher in the infants' school, £9; and Sarah Harvey, first assistant, £4 10s.

9442. Those payments exhaust about half the endowment. What do you do with the remainder?—According to the will of Gray we have to pay a certain sum for the support of the widows in connection with the Missionary settlement at Ballymena. The sum we paid last year for that purpose was £34 14s. 16d.

9443. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—On what principle was that preparation struck?—That is the proposition that it has been calculated the widows are entitled to, under the will of the founder. I should explain that I have been speaking from what I find in the books, as our treasurer and the oldest of the trustees, Mr. John Patrick, who managed all the money matters, died a few months ago, and the books have come into new hands.

9444. CHAIRMAN.—What other items of expenditure are there?—We paid in taxes last year £4 15s. 3d., for a lease for the children £2 19s. 10d., and for coal for the school £5 11s.; for premiums, £3 8s. 9d.; and for a houseman for the infants' school, £3 15s. 3d.

9445. You mentioned taxes. Do you pay income tax?—We do.

9446. Have you applied to have the income tax refunded?—Not heretofore. I will call attention to the matter.

9447. What other expenditure have you incurred?—We propose to make some additions and improvements to a house for the male teacher. We had to employ an architect, and his account was £1 10s., and we spent on repairs, painting and cleaning, and some carpentry work £18 16s., and there is a small sum for insurance every year. I produce the account book, showing exactly how we stand.

9448. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—How does the account now stand?—There was a balance on hand, on the 25th May, 1879, of £37 11s. 5d.

9449. CHAIRMAN.—What class of children attend your schools?—The poorer children.

9450. Is there any school in Ballymena of a higher class?—There is a school, which formerly was a Diocesan school, but has now come into the hands of a committee. It is called the Intermediate School of Ballymena, and the Rev. Mr. King is the rector of it.

9451. Has that school any endowment beyond the house?—I think there is an endowment connected with it under the old diocesan scheme. The present Principal has a certain income during his life, so long as the school is kept open. The school, however, is in the hands of a committee of gentlemen, who have guaranteed a certain sum to put the school on a new foundation.

9452. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—Are you on that committee?—Yes.

9453. Do you pay any rent for the school premises?—No, we have got the use of the Diocesan school.

9454. From whom did you get the use of them?—From Mr. King, who was the diocesan schoolmaster. Lord Waverley claims that when Mr. King dies the property in the school premises will revert to him; but I believe that that is disputed.

9455. You appear to have, since 1857, added an infants' school to the schools then existing upon Gray's foundation?—Yes, I think the infants' school has been added since that date.

9456. What assistance do you get from the National Board for your teachers?—Last year the salary received by Mr. Alexander from the National Board was £44; William Magee, first assistant, was paid £32; James Traynor, second assistant, £25; William Templeton, first class monitor, £17; Alexander McIlroy, second class monitor, £8. William McIlroy, second class monitor, £8. And in addition, John Alexander received in remuneration, £28 14s. 10d.; William Magee, £15 3s. 4d.; and James Traynor, £15 4s. 10d.; and Mr. Alexander also received £9 18s. good service money; so that his income from all sources last year was £117 14s. 10d.

9457. Does the National Board pay those teachers the same salaries as they would pay, in another school, to unendowed masters?—Yes.

9458. So far as the instruction in religious matters is concerned these schools appear to be unendowmental?—Yes.

9459. Are they attended by children of all denominations?—Yes; but principally by Presbyterians.

9460. The majority of the population are Presbyterians?—They are.

9461. You have some Episcopalian children?—Yes.

9462. And some Roman Catholics?—A few.

9463. Have you any Roman Catholics in the infants' school?—Yes. There are furnished to me, on Saturday, shows that there were on the roll, in the infants' school, 165 Presbyterians, 28 Episcopals, 9 Roman Catholics, and 4 of other denominations.

9464. The rules of the school provide that part of the religious instruction shall be the reading of the Scriptures by all who are able to read?—Yes; the Scriptures are read every morning, but the rules of the National Board are observed, and during the hours appointed for secular instruction the Scriptures are not read.

9456. When the Scriptures are read, do the Roman Catholic children attend the reading of them?—Not that I am aware.

9457. Who audits the accounts?—The trustees. —9458. Is the inspection of the schools conducted in the usual manner by the officer of the National Board?—Yes, the National Board Inspector inspects the three schools regularly.

9459. Do the masters show proficiency at winning large reading fees?—Yes; I was speaking lately to the Inspector, and he considers our male school a very good school. The girls' school, he says, is a fair school, and the infants' school is also very good.

9460. In the girls' school you have an advantage from this endowment, beyond that available in ordinary National schools?—Yes.

9461. Do you avail yourself of that to teach there anything in the way of cooking or domestic duty?—No, but they are taught to sew.

9462. What advantages do the children attending the girls' school derive from the endowment, beyond the ordinary National course of education?—We are able to get, perhaps, better teachers than we could under other circumstances.

9463. CHAIRMAN.—Do you give higher salaries than the average in the district?—Yes, and we keep the school-house in good order, and comfortable, neat, and clean.

9464. Mr. O'SHEEN.—SHE the girls' school is not spoken as favourably of as the boys' school?—I do not think it is. The girls are all young. There are very few, for example, in the sixth class.

9465. Are they taken away too early?—They are put into the mill.

9466. Have you ever attempted to provide education for the factory girls by forming evening classes?—Not for the girls, but we have done so for the boys. —9467. Why not for the girls?—I do not know. A year or two ago there was a night school, kept by some ladies, not in connexion with Gray's school, to teach the mill girls, and I believe one will soon be opened again.

9468. How often do the trustees of Gray's school meet to consider the state of the schools?—We have not stated meetings; but I, as secretary, summon a meeting whenever any matter of importance arises.

9469. What fees are charged in the schools?—The school fees received in the boys' school in 1878 was £15 14s., and in the girls' school £8 18s.

9470. What is the proportion between the number of boys and girls?—The average on the roll in 1878, in the boys' school, was 211·6, present, 154·5; while the average on the roll in the girls' school was 148·5, present, 159·2.

9471. Then the girls, even making allowance for their smaller numbers, do not pay in the same proportion as the boys?—No; they do not pay in proportion, but they are younger, and possibly the boys' school is in a greater state of efficiency.

9472. Mr. CHAIRMAN.—Did any of the boys or girls from Gray's schools go up to the Intermediate Education examinations?—No, the course is too elementary.

9473. Are the accounts balanced at fixed periods?—They do not seem to have been so kept hitherto.

9474. CHAIRMAN.—Is there any National school in Ballymore under the management of the Catholic priest?—Yes, there are two National schools in connexion with the Roman Catholic Church.

9475. Do all the Roman Catholic children, with the exception of the four you have mentioned, go to these schools?—That I cannot say.

Mr. John B.
McConnell.

Mr. JOHN ROBERTSON McCORMACK, examined.

9476. CHAIRMAN.—What position do you hold with reference to the Downpatrick school?—I am the steward of the charity. The trustees are Lord Dufferin, Colonel Forde, and Rev. G. T. Payne. The late Dean Woodward was the fourth trustee; but no successor to him has yet been appointed.

9477. What are your duties?—My duties are to pay all charges against the charity, to keep a general superintendence over the establishment, to see that the buildings are in fair order, and to communicate with the trustees.

9478. You do not take any part in the teaching?—No.

9479. Is there one school for the boys, and another for the girls?—Yes. I should perhaps explain that this charity consists of almshouses, and the Binn schools, and the funds devoted to the whole are administered under one account. The amounts appropriated from the funds of the charity to the schools are— to the male school £75 Irish, and to the female school £70 Irish. In addition to which each school should of course be charged with a proportion of the rent of the whole premises—that is, of the almshouses and the schools, and also with a proportion of my salary as steward, and of that of the apothecary, as well as with a proportion of the cost of the repairs of the premises.

9480. What is the gross value of the endowment?—£237 Irish, that is about £218 14s. British.

9481. How is that secured?—It is a mortgage upon two townlands.

9482. What was the date of the endowment?—It was established as a school under a codicil to the will of the Right Honorable Edmund Southwell, dated in 1750; but the actual date of the building appears in figures upon the stonework to have been 1735.

9483. How is the proportion of the £237 apportioned for the almshouses?—There is £90 Irish paid by the will for the old people, who are in the almshouses.

9484. Is the remaining £147 a year Irish, applicable to the schools?—No. The schools are entitled to £118 a year Irish. The remainder is applicable to the rent and repairs of the premises, the apothecary's salary, and the steward's salary.

9485. Has there been any fresh endowment in the last twenty years?—There has not, but the present proprietor of the estate, Mr. John Mulholland, following in the footsteps of the previous proprietor, Mr. D. S. Ker, expended considerably more money upon the establishment than is fixed by the foundation of the charity.

9486. What are the expenses connected with the schools?—The salary of the schoolmaster according to the foundation was £15 Irish, but that is quite insufficient to pay a master at the present day, and accordingly the master is paid £60 a year British, covering board, lodging, his house and garden. The next item fixed is £40 Irish, to pay for food for the boys. That amount is allotted to; but instead of being expended in food for the boys, it is handed to them in cash every quarter. The next fixed item is £15 Irish, for the clothing of ten boys, which is quite inadequate, and, as the boys are dressed in tweed, the cost varies a little. In the year 1875, it was £22 1s. 10d.; in 1877, it was £35 2s.; in 1878, £37 7s. 10d.; and in the year ending 30th April, 1879, £36 14s. 3d.

9487. In the case of the schoolmaster, is the whole amount paid out of the funds of the charity, or by subscription?—It is entirely paid out of the private resources of Mr. Mulholland. His Irish notions to me, to keep up the establishment respectably and comfortably, and I do so to the best of my ability. He furnishes all the necessary funds.

9488. You mentioned that the money which was directed to be expended in food is given in cash to the scholar—has the school come to be a boarding school?—Yes; if it ever was one, of which I am not aware. In addition to the sums I have mentioned, there is, according to the foundation, a sum of £20 Irish, paid for apprentice fees for the boys, and there is a sum of £3 Irish, fixed for the firing or warming of the school, and £1 Irish, for books. These are the sums for the male school. As regards the female school, the mistress's salary, according to the foundation, was £12 Irish, which, of course is quite inadequate, and Mr. Mulholland makes that £30 Irish currency in addition to a house and garden. The children were allowed according to the foundation £90 Irish, for food. That sum, as in the case of the boys, is handed to them in cash every quarter. A sum of £15 Irish was fixed by the charity for the clothing of the girls, and that not being sufficient they are clothed properly at the expense of Mr. Mulholland. The expenditure for clothing varies the same as in the case of the boys, the average being about £26 or £28 per annum. There are also fixed by the foundation apprentice fees, £9 Irish, and also £2 for firing for the school, and £2 for spinning wheels and books, but we do not use any wheels now. Thus the expenditure on both of the schools according to the foundation should be something like £131 18s. 7d. Irish, and if you take into account a proportion of the house rent, the steward's salary, and the repairs, it would be about £147. Whereas the actual amounts expended directly for the schools, and proportion of the other sums I have referred to, would come on the average to £215 a year, for the schools alone.

1488. Mr. O'SHEEN.—The balance is made up entirely by Mr. Mulholland?—Yes.

1489. CHAIRMAN.—Are the children clothed in any distinct uniform?—They are. The boys have blue cotton coats with brass buttons, blue breeches, and waistcoats and shoes.

1490. Do they wear this uniform at home?—Yes. The children on first going into the school get two sets of clothes—one the regulation blue, and another a dark coloured suit for the purpose of serving the lace. The girls still wear dresses of the same distinguishing colour as have been worn probably since the school was established.

1491. Are the schools denominational?—The children attending them are all Protestant Episcopalian.

1492. Do they all come from Mr. Mulholland's estate or the vicinity?—The school is confined to what is called the manor of Down, which is principally on Mr. Mulholland's estate, but a good portion of it is in the hands of gentlemen who pay very small head rents to Mr. Mulholland. The children must have been either born there, or their parents must have resided there for twenty years.

1493. Mr. O'SHEEN.—Who appoints the masters and mistresses?—The trustees.

1494. Do they appoint teachers that have had experience in other places?—It has so happened that they have always done so. Applicants come forward when vacancies occur.—Mr. Mulholland recommends, and the trustees appoint.

1495. You were not connected with the establishment in 1857?—I was not.

1496. In the report of the Commission of 1857, complaint was made of the inefficiency of the school teachers. It seems that under the present careful patronage of Mr. Mulholland, that cause of complaint has ceased?—Yes. Mr. Ker had new teachers appointed, after that report was published.

1497. Are the schools at present regularly inspected by anyone?—They are. Being Protestant schools, by the foundation, the Rev. Tawney Blackwood Piles exercises an active supervision over them. He visits, examines, and superintends the schools generally, and also the course of instruction pursued in them. In fact, he is there continually examining the pupils in the ordinary classes, and there has been a regular inspection besides.

1498. By whom?—The last inspection was by Dr. Muir, the principal of the High school in Downpatrick.

1499. Did he report favourably?—He did on both the schools. Then there are occasionally diocesan examinations in religious subjects, in which the children, from these schools go forward in competition with children from other schools, and the results are very satisfactory indeed.

1500. The education given is entirely primary?—It is.

1501. Do the trustees keep accurate account books?—I do so for them; I keep an accurate account of every penny expended, in connection both with the Alma House and schools.

1502. CHAIRMAN.—As a matter of fact the pupils are all Episcopalian at present?—They are.

1503. I find in the report of the last Royal Commission that the course of instruction at that time included "scripture and church catechism to Bismarck scholars and church children." That would seem to imply that the school was at that time to a certain extent a mixed school?—At that time the management of the school was somewhat different from what it is now; because the master had a right, or at least was allowed to have other pupils besides the children of the Bismarck schools; and probably the question which you have read, is with reference to those other children. But, at the present time, the master's salary, being £40 a year and a house, enables us to keep a fairly efficient man, and accordingly he teaches only the children of the Bismarck schools, and ten other free scholars. The same observation applies as regards the mistress.

1504. Are the Bismarck scholars quite free?—Quite free; and they moreover share thirty pounds in cash amongst them, and are clothed.

1506. How are the children selected by the Trustees?—The children for the Bismarck schools are selected and recommended by Mr. Mulholland, and appointed by the Trustees, but the selection rests, virtually, with the clergymen of the parish, and Mr. Mulholland. Of course I need hardly say, Mr. Mulholland himself takes no part in it.

1507. Are there many Presbyterians in the neighbourhood?—There are.

1508. Are there any National schools at Downpatrick?—There are four National schools.

1509. Is there one under the management of the Roman Catholic priest?—Yes, and one under the management of the Sisters of Mercy. There is also a Presbyterian National school, and another, which is not directly under any of the religious denominations. A Church school also is about to be put under the National Board.

1510. Is there any Dissident school there?—There was a Dissident school, but it ceased as such in 1870 or 1871, and the house leased to Mr. Mulholland, who has given it to a committee, and an Intermediate school, for boys and girls, has been established there, and is actively working.

1511. Has that school any endowment?—None, except the house. The teachers were appointed at salaries, guaranteed by several gentlemen residing in the neighbourhood, who have put down their names for various years, to make up the salaries, in case the fees should prove deficient.

1512. Mr. O'SHEEN.—Was the Dissident school-house held under a lease from Mr. Mulholland?—It was from the Downpatrick estate, and having ceased to be a Dissident school, according to the terms of the lease, it then reverted to the county, and the county authorities were bound to hand it over to the owner of the estate, who happened to be Mr. Mulholland.

1513. You spoke of the house as an endowment to the present school. How is it now held?—Mr. Mulholland has given the old Dissident buildings, free of rent, to the committee of the Intermediate school, and he has within the last three or four years, at a cost of nearly £300, built an additional school-room, because the old buildings were not sufficiently large. That is also in the possession of the Intermediate school committee, and probably some rent may be charged for it.

Rev. John
Kingdon.

Rev. JOHN KINGDON, examined.

9514. CHAIRMAN.—You are principal of the Ulster Deaf and Dumb Institution?—I am.

9517. How long have you held that post?—Since May, 1863.

9518. What does the endowment at present consist of?—£5,000 is invested on mortgages of landed property in the province, and a 1850 over £6,000 is invested in United States Bonds and a first mortgage on some United States railways.

9519. The Royal Commission of 1857 reported that £11,000 had been expended on buildings. Are those the same buildings the institution occupies at present?—There was a new school-room built since then, which cost £1,400 or £1,500.

9520. What is the tenure by which the site is held?—The same as at the date of the former Commission—always for lives renewable for ever.

9521. It has not been converted into a fee-farm grant?—I think not.

9522. Have any additional endowments been given to the Institution within the last twenty years?—There have been some legacies, which have been invested, and form part of the amount I have referred to. There has been an increase in the accumulated property of the institution since that date to the extent of about £6,000. I do not think, however, that the amount invested will exactly correspond with the amount derived from legacies, because it was sometimes found necessary, when funds were low, to apply some legacies, which had been left unconditionally, to meet the annual expenses of the Institution.

9523. At present the finances of the Institution are in a more flourishing state?—Yes, they are in a very favourable condition.

9524. You have not had to expend any of your capital recently?—Not for some years.

9525. What is the average income of the Institution?—About £3,000 a year. The accounts for last year contain these items:—contributions remitted by subscribers, £1,840 8s. 2d.; annual subscriptions, £280 4s. 6d.; receipts for pupils, £789 0s. 5d.; interest on bequests and investments, £581 13s. 5d.; interest from Northern Banking Company, £13 13s. 1d.; rents and letting soil, £6 14s.; bequests, £501 7s. 10d.; printing, £24 13s. 10d.*

9526. Is the item of £13 13s. 1d. interest from the Northern Bank for interest on the current balances lying in bank?—Yes.

9527. Does not the Institution receive some small bequests almost every year?—We have to acknowledge some almost every year—sometimes more and sometimes less.

9528. How is the Institution governed?—By a committee.

9529. How are they appointed?—By the annual meeting of the subscribers to the Institution, which is usually held in December.

9530. Who are the trustees of the funded property?—Mr. Charles Wolfe Shaw, Sir Thomas McIlwaine, Mr. H. H. McNeill, and Mr. J. B. Houston.

9531. Do they form part of the committee?—They do.

9532. Do they attend the meetings of the committee?—They all attend occasionally.

9533. How often do the committee meet?—Usually once a month.

9534. Is there usually a large meeting, whenever there is anything important to consider?—There is.

9535. Is there a better attendance at the annual meeting?—There is not much difference.

9514. CHAIRMAN.—Is the apprenticeship carried out in the Blue School?—Yes, that is carried out regularly. 9515. The sum mentioned by you, as paid under the foundation, was nine pounds Irish for each school. Is that sum devoted to the purpose?—Yes, as nearly as possible.

9536. What is the average attendance at the meetings of the committee?—Sometimes seven or eight, and sometimes not so many.

9537. What is the lowest number that can transact business?—Five is the usual quorum.

9538. Who signs the cheques for the expenditure?—The chairman of the meeting, and one of the honorary secretaries.

9539. Has there been always a quorum for the transaction of business?—Sometimes when nothing but formal business is done there may not be a quorum, but the business is confirmed afterwards at the next meeting.

9540. Must there always be a quorum present when ever cheques are drawn?—There may not be.

9541. Are the minutes of each meeting of the committee always read at the following meeting, and confirmed by the chairman?—They are.

9542. Have you had any scheme drawn up, and submitted to the Court of Chancery, for the management of the Institution?—No, not that I am aware of.

9543. What number of pupils are there in the establishment?—It varies. Our vacation has just terminated. The pupils who have completed their term go away at the commencement of the winter. At present we have only 101 on the list, but we have a number of new pupils, I could not exactly say how many,—coming forward.

9544. How are the new pupils admitted?—By the committee.

9545. Are there more applications than there are vacancies for?—We take in all that apply if they are eligible.

9546. Some of the pupils are free, and others pay. How is that regulated?—It is decided chiefly by the circumstances of the parents. The committee make inquiries in each case, and get as much as they can from the parents, but a considerable number pay nothing.

9547. Are they all on an equality in the institution?—No, some of it.

9548. Clothes and diet are supplied to all?—There may be an exceptional case where the parent prefers to supply the clothing himself.

9549. Then the pupils are not obliged to wear the clothing of the institution?—Not exactly.

9550. There are some blind pupils in the Institution?—There are.

9551. Is the admission of the blind a new thing?—No, they have been connected with the Institution since 1835.

9552. Are they in the same or in separate buildings?—In the same building; they are separated in the school room, but there only.

9553. At what age are they admitted?—From eight to thirteen are supposed to be the eligible age, but the committee have power to make exceptions in special cases.

9554. Is there any limit of age?—We have no rule on that subject.

9555. Is the Institution in any way a blind asylum for growing-up pupils, or is it merely an educational institution?—It is merely an educational establishment, but there are workshops in Belfast for the adult blind. Our object is not so much to give an industrial training as a literary and religious training, and to aid the pupils as much as possible after they leave the institution, by getting them apprenticed to suitable trades. We have a printing press in the institution, at which some of the deaf and dumb boys are employed comsionally, in giving assistance out of school hours, and we have no department in which the blind work; but it is more desirable that they should be apprenticed to suitable masters when they leave the Institution.

9564. In the case of the blind, and deaf and dumb, a special training could be more easily given in such an Institution than outside?—There is hardly time to teach them a trade during their training in the Institution, and besides the health of many of them is not sufficiently strong. We tried it for a number of years and were obliged to give it up, as the pupils gained very little by it. The arrangements of trades societies prevented their going into a workshop, unless they commenced their apprenticeship over again. It was therefore thought better to add the parents in giving them trade by means of small apprenticeships, after leaving the Institution, than by teaching them a trade while in it.

9565. Do you find that deaf and dumb children are not so strong as other children of the same age?—There is a great deal of weakness among them.

9566. CHAIRMAN.—Is the school regularly inspected by anyone qualified to judge of a deaf and dumb school?—There is nothing of that kind in any of the schools in the three kingdoms. There is only the inspection of the committee.

9567. Have you had any consultation with the managers of similar schools in England, with a view to improve the special training?—There has been a conference occasionally among the teachers, but it is a very rare thing. The last was held about two years ago.

9568. Dr. CURRIE.—Is there any limit as to the locality from which pupils may be received?—We receive them from any part of the province of Ulster.

9569. CHAIRMAN.—I suppose the subscriptions come chiefly from the province of Ulster?—Yes.

9570. What are the religious denominations of the pupils?—They belong to the various Protestant denominations.

9571. Is there any similar institution, for Roman Catholics, in this part of Ireland?—No; the Roman Catholics deaf and dumb go from Belfast to Calcutta, and the blind to a school in the neighbourhood of Dublin.

9572. Mr. O'SHEA-DUNNE.—How do you get the supplies of groceries, meat, &c.?—By contract.

9573. Do you advertise for tenders?—We do, once a year.

9574. That rule is not departed from?—No.

9575. The children are supposed to enter the Institution at from 8 to 13. Up to what age do they remain?—That depends on circumstances. Some of them do not remain long enough, as their parents think that when they have been learning for a year or two they are sufficiently educated. We try to keep them there six years if we can. In the American schools they try to keep them ten years, and those they are supported by the Government. I find, from correspondence, that the experience in other institutions is very much the same as our own, as to the necessity of a longer period of training.

9576. You do not receive any support from the Imperial Government?—None, except you consider payments from Poor Law Boards such.

9577. What amount of assistance do you get from the Poor Law Boards?—Some will not grant anything, no matter what the circumstances of the child or parents may be, while others give £15, and some £15 per annum, in the case of children who are completely idiotic.

9578. CHAIRMAN.—Do you not insist upon payment in such cases from the Guardians?—No, the wording of the Act is "The Guardians may."

9579. Mr. O'SHEA-DUNNE.—Does the Belfast Union contribute?—It does, in every available case, not only to our Institution but also to the Calcutta Institution.

9580. Would you suggest that such contributions should be made compulsory on Boards of Guardians?—I certainly would.

9581. You find a difficulty in obtaining payments from rural Unions?—We do.

9582. Is this Institution intended for the benefit of the Protestants of all Ulster?—Yes.

9583. Do you think that it exhausts all the cases of deaf and dumb in Ulster, of all Protestant denominations?—I cannot exactly say that. I believe we would have room for all, and we make every effort we can to bring the Institution under the notice of all. Every year we issue, through the province, about 4,000 or 5,000 circulars, in connection with our auxiliary meetings, to which we send the pupils round on a deputation, and, in those circulars, we state that we are ready to receive applications from candidates.

9584. You are willing, if suitable pupils come forward, to take charge as to getting voluntary contributions?—We are.

9585. It would aid you very much in getting all the deaf and dumb of your creed, if the Local Authorities like the Boards of Guardians, were compelled to send them in?—Certainly; after the last census we got, from the Census Commissioners, a list of the localities in which the returns showed there were deaf and dumb people, and we communicated with dignitaries in those districts, but we did not get many pupils by that means.

9586. Did it appear to you that you had virtually got in all the children?—There were numbers we could not find at all.

9587. Do you think there are many cases in Ulster of deaf and dumb children, who are not in any such Institution as yours?—Taking the Government census as being correct, there are a good many; for instance, a case came before the committee lately, where there were three in a family, in the county of Antrim, and some of whom had grown up to be fifteen years of age, and yet there was no clergyman who seemed to be aware of the fact.

9588. When they grow up without instruction they are ignorant of the fundamental truths of religion?—They are.

9589. What does the support and training of a deaf and dumb child of average age cost, including establishment charges and everything else?—Something over £20 a year.

9590. Have you had more than your present number of pupils—101?—We have had as many as 149 on our list; but there have not been so many lately, as many children of the class who were formerly sent to us now go to the Calcutta Institution.

9591. Do you think that the introduction of compulsory payments by Boards of Guardians would diminish the number of your voluntary contributions?—I do not know. It might do so; but how far, of course, I could not say.

9592. Can deaf and dumb children, after the scanty education which the brevity of their stay with you compels you to give them, learn trades as well from an ordinary teacher as they would from a skilled teacher in your school?—As a rule they learn their trades with remarkable facility. Though there is a prejudice among tradesmen against them at first, thinking they would have difficulty in teaching them—yet their testimony afterwards is that they have less trouble than with other boys, their imitative powers are so sharp that they become perfectly skilled tradesmen.

9593. It appears that cheques have been drawn by meetings of the Committee which did not consist of a proper quorum. Can you say whether, on the occasion of the next meeting, when the minutes were being confirmed, the attention of the properly constituted meeting was drawn to the fact of so important a thing as a cheque having been drawn at the former meeting?—I cannot answer.

9594. The accounts show that cheques were drawn in your favour on more than one occasion for £105 5s. What were those for?—Partly for salary and partly for board allowances.

9595. What is your salary?—£250, and an allowance for board.

9596. I suppose your time is altogether devoted to the Institution?—Yes.

Sept. 25, 1892.

Rev. John Hughes.

April 29, 1878.
 Rev. John
 Vaughan.

9589. Are the pupils of the two sexes kept quite separate?—Out of school they are, but we educate them together.

9590. Do you find any difficulty in providing due separation between them?—No.

9591. Have any unpleasant consequences arisen from having boys and girls in the same Institution?—Not in my experience, which extends over thirty-four years altogether.

9592. Dr. CURRIE.—Have you had grown-up boys in the Institution?—Very few.

9593. Are they free pupils?—In many cases they are.

9594. CHAIRMAN.—What annual charges do you make to Boards of Guardians for destitute children?—Whatever we can get from them. We cannot fix the amount.

9595. What is your maximum charge?—£15 a year. Some Boards pay only £13, and others not even so much. We just work with them as they work with us.

9596. Are all the pupils boarders?—We have three or four day scholars, the children of parents who reside in town.

9597. Dr. CURRIE.—What religious services do the pupils attend?—The children who belong to the late Established Church go to the Rev. Mr. Hartnoll's Church, and the Presbyterian children are sent to a Presbyterian Church.

9598. Can they follow the services?—They cannot follow it exactly, but the teacher is with them and explains it to them, and sometimes gives them a text of Scripture to learn. The deaf and dumb take the blind there, and they can hear the service.

9599. There is no conducting the service by signs?—We have service in the school-rooms, which suits the deaf and dumb better.

9600. They read a portion of the Scriptures and are examined in it?—Yes.

9601. CHAIRMAN.—Have you visited institutions of a similar character in England?—Frequently.

9602. Have you informed yourself of the best way of carrying on such institutions?—Yes.

9603. Dr. CURRIE.—We have heard of some instances in which the deaf and dumb were taught to speak?—We have not tried that here, except in cases where the child did not lose its hearing until it was four or five years of age.

9604. You do not think this system desirable?—On the whole, I think not. There are cases however where I think it is. For many years it has been followed in the London school, with little success. The matter had dropped very much in other schools in England and Scotland, but there is an effort being made to revive it again, and I see that there is a German system introduced into a number of schools with the object of teaching the deaf and dumb to speak.

9605. The question was asked in Dublin, and the feeling of the Clermont authorities was that it was not desirable to pursue this system?—I know the Clermont Institution has not practised it, and I think the Cavers Institution has not either. I do not know what they are doing now; when I was there some years ago they had not followed it there.

9606. CHAIRMAN.—The Institution is, as to religion, essentially a mixed one, as there are forty-seven Episcopalian, fifty-seven Presbyterian, and a couple of Methodists. Is there any distinction made between the religious teaching imparted? For instance is the Catechism taught?—The Episcopalian children who are so far advanced as to be capable of understanding the Catechism are taught it.

9607. What is done with the Presbyterians?—They are not taught the Presbyterian Catechism, for, as a rule, we think it rather too difficult. We teach Scripture in the simpler form. Some of the blind have learned the Presbyterian Catechism.

9608. In the case of the deaf and dumb, the distinction is the omission of the Catechism, as regards the Presbyterians?—Yes.

9609. It appears from the minutes of the monthly meetings held on the 29th May, 1878, that Mr. Shaw reported certain United States bonds had been drawn by payment and were to be paid off, and it was then resolved "That the Bank be requested to sell same, and that £7,000 be invested in New York Central, Baltimore and Ohio, or Pennsylvania Railroad, all first mortgages." And in the minutes of June 19, this appears—"Secretary reported sale of United States bonds ordered at last meeting, and purchase of £1,000 Pennsylvania General, and 2nd New York Central." That does not seem to be in accordance with the resolution adopted at the former meeting?—Mr. William Shaw, who is the honorary secretary, informs us that the bonds were bought in accordance with the resolution, and at all events the resolution as passed was headed by Messrs. William A. Robinson and Nowell, and they sold the one set of bonds and bought the other. What appears as "2nd" in reference to the New York Central is really 2nd—meaning £2,000—and not 2nd Bonds, as appears from the broker's docket which I can produce.

9610. What per centage do these bonds yield?—They are seven per cent bonds, but they cost £125 per cent.

9611. Do you consider them a good investment?—They are considered so in Belfast. The quotations show that they are considered safe.

9612. What is the allowance which you receive for board and washing, in addition to your salary of £250?—There is £125 a year allowed to me.

9613. Is that the total of your emolument?—I have also a house on the premises.

9614. Do you get any allowance for fuel?—I do.

9615. What is that?—The fuel is not kept separate.

9616. How are the various expenses of the establishment controlled—who orders the supplies?—The Committee contract for them. The matron is the person who orders in the provisions, &c., as they are wanted. The committee contract for coal, and we get in a supply, once a year.

9617. Trunks are advertised for, and they are sent in to the committee?—Yes.

9618. How is the clothing supplied?—We get traders for clothing, and we have a contract with a tailor for making the clothes.

9619. Is there any clothing made in the establishment?—The girls' dressings, but the boys' is not.

9620. Dr. CURRIE.—Is the washing done by the girls?—It is done by a handmaid, but the girls assist.

9621. CHAIRMAN.—In your accounts for last year I find a charge of £207 2s. 1d. for advertising, postage, carriage of parcels, and incidental expenses, school-books and requisites, paper for printing Annual Report, circulars, notices, &c. That appears to be a large amount?—We have about 150 circulars through the year, and they are asked to circulate the Report.

9622. How many copies are printed?—About 3,500, annually.

9623. There is also a charge for expenses of deputations visiting auxiliaries?—Yes, about 150 sometimes must be visited every year, and to these we send thousands of circulars in arranging for our annual meetings. We send a eleganza (a teacher) and two pupils round the province of Ulster, the tour occupying about a quarter of the year every summer.

9624. The expenses of collection of your income seem very high. Last year there were dispositive expenses, £131 18s. 1d., advertising, postage and so on, £207 2s. 1d., making together about 10 per cent of your income?—We cannot judge very accurately from those items, because some charges of a different nature are mixed up with them, for instance the carriage of parcels which ought to be under a separate head, and besides we do printing for the public, and the cost of the materials used, for that purpose, is included in the items you have quoted.

9625. Dr. CURRIE.—The object of these deputations is to keep up an interest in the Institution?—Yes, and to distribute cards among the collectors in the province.

April 19, 1889

Rev. John
Kingsland.

When there are young people at a meeting, and you distribute cards among them they take an interest in the work. Of course when we pay travelling and hotel expenses, and everything else, the expenditure amounts to a considerable sum; but I believe, on the whole, the collections made at the public meetings would more than cover the expenditure upon them; and we would not get that money if we did not hold the meetings.

9437. I think that the Governors of the Claremont Institution do not act in that way. They hold deputations, but not so frequently as once a year. They have a person travelling I think occasionally; but they have no authorities than we have, and probably they cannot visit them all so regularly. I do not know their rule.

9438. CHAIRMAN.—Is the printer employed with the view of training the boys to become printers?—Quite so.

9439. Dr. CURTIS.—Do you print any of your own notices?—We print them all ourselves, and do a good deal for the public besides.

9440. CHAIRMAN.—What does the printer receive?—15s. a week.

9441. The accounts include an item for the gardener's wages. Does he attend to the cultivation of the fire acres?—Yes, to the garden.

9442. Deputy of the pupils assist him?—Occasionally.

9443. Vegetables are grown for the use of the Institution?—Yes.

9444. Dr. CURTIS.—Do you keep any account of the outgoings and incomings of the ground, in order to judge whether it pays or not?—I think not.

9445. CHAIRMAN.—What wages does the man-maker get?—15s. a week.

9446. Do the pupils work under him?—They do.

Rev. Canon MacInnes, D.D., examined.

Rev. Canon
MacInnes,
D.D.

9437. CHAIRMAN.—I believe you wish to make a statement?—I do; and, if the Commissioners will not think me taking too great a liberty, when I have made the statement, I desire to offer a suggestion. I have been, I may say, interested, from my youth, in the class of persons, especially the deaf and dumb, that are the objects of the charity, in reference to which you are now inquiring. The Institution was founded I should say over thirty years ago; and I may state, as an apology for appearing here to-day, that I am one of the original contributors to the building, and also one of the original founders under the trust deed, in conjunction with the late Dr. Horgan, Dr. Rigby, and, I believe, the then Vicar of Belfast. I continued to act on the committee for a good many years. At the time of the appointment of the present principal, I retired from the Institution. I did so then in consequence of what I now then believed to be very good reasons. I do not wish to enter into details, but I will merely say this, that I brought these reasons forward at the time, that there was an investigation, that at a public meeting I was rudely overborne by a paid multitude, that the late Lord Downshire, who presided, obtained us a hearing, and I made statements on the occasion which were debated, and afterwards, in the space of a year or two, every one of them was proved to be a fact. I do not know whether the former principal is living or not, but my charges against him were of a most serious kind, and were proved to my satisfaction, and to the satisfaction, too, of a good many others. I was at that time obliged to retire from the Committee. I am entirely dissociated with the present working of the Institution. I shall only mention two or three particulars. In the first place, there was a trust deed drawn up in stringent, plain terms. The Institution was then a denominational one—that is to say, it was religious in a doctrinal aspect. There were but two religious bodies recognised—the Presbyterian body, and the then Established Church. I wish to know whether the articles of that trust deed are observed, as I have reason to believe they are not.

9438. Dr. CURTIS.—The report of the last Royal Commission states that the Institution was founded in 1831, that is 48 years ago?—I was one of the original founders of it; but the correct date is later.

9439. Did you not say 50 years ago?—I said over 50; I believe it is about 40.

9440. CHAIRMAN.—State shortly in what particulars you think the Institution is improperly managed?—The first point is, that I want to know on the terms of the trust deed observed with regard to the religious instruction of those in the Institution, who belong to the Church of Ireland. It was distinctly provided that there should be a chaplain, and a regular course of instruction. I wish to know if that carried out.

9441. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—The religious education was to be in accordance with the doctrinal standards of the Churches of England and Scotland, that is to say, I presume, Presbyterian teaching for Presbyterians, and Episcopalian teaching for Episcopals?—Yes.

9442. CHAIRMAN.—What is your next objection?—Two-thirds, or perhaps three-fourths of the original subscribers to the building belonged to the Church of England and Ireland. I am one of them, and my strong suspicion is that one element has been excluded from the management, and that the Institution has gone altogether under the control of one party.

9443. Is that the Presbyterian?—Yes, you have heard how the Committee is arranged. I will not say anything about that; but whether it consists of a committee of twenty or thirty, or only of four or five individuals, I would like to ascertain if that party is dominant, and if it is virtually a Presbyterian establishment. I think you will find from the Committee books that the Institution is managed entirely by—I do not like to use the word—a clique.

9444. You mean by gentlemen of one particular persuasion?—Yes; and in fact, in my opinion, the whole control of the Institution is virtually in the hands of the Rev. Mr. Kingsland himself. I have just one observation to make with regard to the education given in the establishment, which I believe is technically wrong.

9445. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—Do you mean that the children are not taught trades there?—No, I refer to the education proper to the deaf and dumb. When I was intimate with the concern, I was entirely dissatisfied with the persons who taught, and with the way in which the children were taught.

9446. In what respect do you consider that the education is technically wrong?—I believe those public examinations are worth nothing. The pupils are taught to answer in theology as to justification by faith, sanctification and so on, the papers say, but as to the common facts of Scripture and everyday life, the children are ignorant.

9447. You think that the religious education is defective?—I do, I believe it is wholly defective, and that their other education is wholly defective too.

9448. With regard to the reading and writing, for instance, have you any evidence that they are deficient?—I have, my opinion is this—I was very well acquainted with the manual alphabet. I formerly visited the children regularly, and conversed with them, and they attended my Church, but they were removed from it, and they now attend different places of worship, where they are I understand in a back-gallery. I have seen some of their writing, which is fair, but, I believe, the education is radically wrong. If I asked the children what the table was made of, they could not tell, although they could enter into questions of astronomy, hydrometry, and so on. I have evidence that they were not properly taught at the time I left the Committee.

9449. Have you been in the Institution for the last few years?—Never.

Sept. 29, 1874.
Rev. Canon
Macfarlane,
&c.

9650. Or have you come across instances of ignorance of common objects?—Not personally; but from very credible witnesses, and the public papers.

9651. How often have you been present at examinations of the children?—Never since I left the Committee.

9652. Have you come across any former pupils of the school serving their apprenticeships?—I have, many.

9653. Have you come across many failures?—A good many.

9654. To what do you attribute their failures?—I do not know. Some are Scripture readers; others are fiddlers going about the country, and many of them are not at all creditable.

9655. Surely the wandering musicians must be a small percentage?—I hope so.

9656. Have you come across any who were working as shoemakers and carpenters, and at other useful trades?—None.

9657. Do you wish to make any further observation?—I have had statements made to me, again and again, of the dietary being deficient, and as to the treatment of officials in the house.

9658. CHAIRMAN.—There are two chaplains—Rev. E. J. Hartwick, member of an Episcopalian Church, and Rev. H. M. Williamson, minister of one of the Presbyterian churches, and one would think that each would look after those of his own religion in the Institution. The Committee too seem to be pretty well divided?—What I suggest is that the attendance of the Committee should be looked into.

Rev. John
Kingsham.

Rev. JOHN KINGSHAM, recalled.

9659. Mr. O'SHAGHERY.—Who is the Episcopal chaplain to the Institution?—Rev. Mr. Hartwick.

9660. How often does he attend?—I take no note of his coming; but he attends fully three times as often as the Presbyterian chaplain does.

9661. Does he attend once or twice a week?—He does not come at any fixed times; but, when a confirmation is about to be held, he attends and prepares the candidates, and the pupils attend his ministry on the Lord's day.

9662. Can the deaf and dumb follow what is said in church?—Not unless interpreted by a teacher.

9663. Does Mr. Hartwick attend and catechise the pupils systematically?—He could not, and no ordinary minister could do so, but, with the assistance of myself or one of the assistants, he examines them, and prepares them for confirmation; but as to their ordinary religious instruction we are responsible for that.

9664. CHAIRMAN.—By whom are the chaplains appointed?—By the committee.

9665. What are their qualifications—are they expected to be able to converse in the sign language?—They can do so very slightly, but not efficiently. They must do it through the aid of an assistant teacher.

9666. Mr. O'SHAGHERY.—Might not the chaplain attend, and with the aid of an assistant teacher, no matter what his religious denomination might be, give religious instruction?—That is a matter for the chaplain himself.

9667. Are the chaplains paid?—No.

9668. Do similar questions exist as to the religious instruction imparted to the Presbyterian children?—Mr. Hartwick comes occasionally, but the Presbyterian chaplain does not.

9669. Are the great body of the subscribers Presbyterians or Episcopians?—I could not say. They are scattered over the entire province of Ulster.

9670. I asked the question to ascertain whether there was, as I am sure there is, a guarantee for a fair mode of election of the committee?—Certainly. At the public meeting names are read out, and are proposed and carried.

9671. Can the subscribers vote by proxy?—No, I do not think they can. The committee is appointed 9672. The attendance on September 2nd appears from the minutes to have been?—Rev. Mr. Williamson, Rev. Dr. Johnston, D. J. Killen, Mr. Thomas McClure, and William Shaw?—They are all very respectable gentlemen, some of them friends of my own, but all belong to one religious denomination.

9673. At another meeting there were present, Mr. Killen, Mr. Shaw, Mr. Connor, and Mr. Williamson?—They are all of the same denomination.

9674. At another Mr. McNighton, Mr. Shaw, Mr. Killen, and Mr. Williamson?—All of the same denomination.

9675. The only distinction in instruction has been stated to us to be that the Episcopians receive instruction in the Church catechism; but that the Presbyterians, with the exception of some of the blind, receive no such special instruction. If that evidence is not controverted are not the Episcopians better looked after than the Presbyterians?—I venture to doubt that; as to the management I have been told, not merely on rumor, but on the most reliable authority, that there are—shall I say—abuses.

9676. Mr. O'SHAGHERY.—Does that coincide your statement?—My humble suggestion and request would be, that an investigation as to compliance with the trust deed, and the general management of the Institution should be held by a competent authority and on oath; because the Institution is too valuable to me, and of too much public utility to be stepped by me, and I am afraid by many others.

in the same way that all committees are usually appointed in Belfast.

9677. A suggested list is prepared?—Exactly.

9678. It is given to propose an amendment?—Yes.

9679. CHAIRMAN.—What constitutes a person a life member?—A donation of £10 or upwards.

9680. What rights have they?—They have a right to vote at the annual meeting for the election of the committee. At one time subscribers had a right to vote for the admission of children, and got a vote for every £10 subscribed, but now the committee are able to receive all applicants, and there is no voting for the admission of pupils.

9681. Have the other subscribers any voice in the election of the Committee?—The subscribers of £1 annually have also a right to vote.

9682. Mr. O'SHAGHERY.—Who prepares the list to be submitted to the annual meeting as the Committee?—As a general rule, except in the case of deaths or removals, the old Committee are usually re-appointed.

9683. When a selection has to be made, in consequence of a death or removal, is that done by the Committee?—It is usually, but the name must be proposed and accepted by the annual meeting of members.

9684. If a member has not attended for a number of years, is too infirm, or too neglectful to attend, is that fact brought under the notice of the members at the election?—Not usually. If he asks to be removed his name is struck off, but not otherwise. Occasionally however the Committee have removed the name of a member who has not attended.

9685. Is it the practice to keep up the proportionate representation of the two Protestant denominations which have been mentioned?—Certainly.

9686. Have many of those who were educated in the Institution become poets and fiddlers?—No, there may have been one or two, but I cannot recollect it. I knew one boy was taught to play the harp.

9687. Those vagrants might have been those who failed in their apprenticeship. Do many of the apprentices turn out failures, and lose their trades?—No. As a rule they succeed remarkably well, at intervals, on two occasions, inquiries were made from the employers of apprentices, and from clergymen in their neighbourhoods, and the followers were found to be remarkably few.

9688. Were they 10 per cent.—I do not think they were anything like that.

9689. You keep up a constant system of looking after the welfare of the pupils until they are well launched in life?—We have on two occasions at least sent out a list of queries regarding all our former pupils, and have published reports of clergymen, and masters with whom they were employed; but we have not done so for some years past.

9690. You have a regular medical attendant?—We have.

9691. Is he a paid officer?—He is.

9692. Has he to see that the dietary is adequate?—He looks at the food if he happens to be in the house at meal times, and he is consulted as to the dietary of the children.

9693. Does he approve of it?—He does. He has never expressed any disapprobation of it.

9694. Is it not requisite that it should be rather a generous dietary, as for children of a scrupulous tendency?—It is fairly so.

9695. CHAIRMAN.—Is the annual meeting a large one?—It is usually so. The Maine Hall of Victoria is pretty well filled.

9696. Are there generally 100 people at it?—There are more than that.

9697. Are there 300?—There were not 300 at our last meeting, as the day was a severe one.

9698. Are the Committee balloted for, or elected in globe?—A resolution for the election of the Committee a proposal and seconded, the Chairman puts it to the meeting, and, if there be no objection, he declares it carried.

9699. Would you not secure a better Committee if there were a ballot for them?—There would be a difficulty in finding out who were subscribers, and who were not, in a mixed assembly.

9700. How is the annual meeting called together?

—We publish in the newspapers, usually for a fortnight before the date, the intention to hold the meeting, and we send a notice of it to all clergymen, within seven or eight miles of Belfast, and ask them to announce it to their congregations, and we also have a number of placards distributed through the streets, and 5,000 handbills are placed in the pews in the various churches. I should like to state in reference to what Dr MacLisnac has said, that his charges were made in 1848, and refused in 1849, before an independent committee of enquiry, and that since I became principal in 1853, he has never been across the threshold of the Institution, and never attended any of the examinations either public or otherwise.

9701. What similar institutions did you yourself go to?—Brighton, London, Birmingham, Manchester, Doncaster, Edinburgh, Glasgow, and Cairn, and Clarendon, Dublin.

9702. Did you study the mode of instruction in all those places?—In some of them.

9703. Were the masters under you trained by your self?—Some of them have been trained in our own Institution and others in other institutions.

9704. Dr. MacLisnac desires to ask, whether you were at the institutions you have mentioned, as a visitor, or as a student?—Only as a visitor.

9705. Were you in any institution, for a time, with a view to acquainting yourself with the mode of instruction?—No, except at our own Institution. I was under two principal masters before I myself became principal in the Institution, in 1853. One of them was trained in the London Institution. I joined our own Institution, as an assistant teacher, in 1848.

MR. WILLIAM SHAW, examined.

MR. W. SHAW.

9706. CHAIRMAN.—You are a regular attendant at the meetings of the committee of the Ulster Deaf and Dumb Institution, Belfast?—Yes, I am one of the honorary secretaries.

9707. You desire to make a statement?—I merely wish to say, in explanation of some of the remarks made by Dr. MacLisnac as to the examinations, that an annual examination of all the pupils (deaf and dumb, and blind) is held in the month of June, every year in the Institution, and the public are invited to attend and one of the first things done there, is to request that any person present will put questions to the pupils, in order to show that it is not the desire of the master or the committee to examine the pupils merely themselves, but to have them examined by independent persons, coming there as visitors. We also send a deputation to the 140 auxiliaries in the province, accompanied by a clergyman, two of our pupils and one of our masters, and at the meetings in the provincial towns it is requested that the people present should put the questions to the pupils and not let the deputation put them. I think the general evidence you would receive from the public at large, would be an expression of astonishment at the proficiency of the pupils, and the ability with which they answer questions on geography, history, and other subjects.

9708. MR. O'SEATHURST.—As a member of the committee, you will bear in mind the propriety of cheques being signed at a properly constituted meeting?—I will. Almost all the cheques that were drawn at the small meetings were in payment of previously made contracts.

REV. HENRY HENRY, examined.

REV. H. HENRY.

9709. CHAIRMAN.—You are the President of Saint Melachy's Roman Catholic College, Belfast?—Yes.

9710. How long have you filled that office?—I was appointed in May, 1876.

9711. When was the institution established?—In 1833.

9712. How did the endowment arise?—The buildings were erected by subscription.

9713. Where is it situated?—On the Antrim road.

9714. What is the extent of the site?—About one and a half acres, Irish plantation measure.

9715. The object of the foundation is stated, in the report of 1857, to have been?—

"The maintaining a Diocesan School for candidates for the Roman Catholic priesthood in the diocese of Down and Connor, and in education generally, under regulations to be framed." It is now exclusively an institution for the training of candidates for the priesthood?—Not at all. It is for education generally.

9716. Do you send students on to Maynooth from your Institution?—We do.

9717. Is it a preparatory school?—It is an intermediate school.

9718. It is exclusively a Catholic institution?—Yes, but it is not more denominational than other schools in Belfast. There have been gentlemen of different denominations educated there. One of the professors in the Queen's College at present, a non-Catholic, got his intermediate education in our college.

9719. How much does the present endowment amount to?—We have only the buildings and the land. The land comprises three holdings.—The first consists of nine acres held from the Marquess of Downgall, under a lease with a covenant for renewal, at a yearly rent of £20, the second is held in perpetuity from Mr. Kinnear, at a rent of £60, and the third in Clifton Avenue is held from Mr. Dixon, at a rent of £20. These rents together come to £100 a year. The establishment is also held to two other sums of £20 a year each, left as a mark on the place by a gentleman who made a bequest at the building of the Institution, in 1833.

9720. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—The foundation is stated in the report of 1857 as "Assignment of renewable lease, subject to £11 head rent, reserving £70 a year to Roman Catholic Bishop." Is there any such payment to the Bishop now?—I am not aware.

9721. CHAIRMAN.—Has the Institution any sum of money invested in securities of any kind?—Nothing that I am aware of.

9722. Would the endowment invested in building?—In the buildings and land.

9723. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—I understood that there was some small annual sum which the Bishop divided?—Certain sums were bequeathed to the Bishop of the choice for the education of candidates for the priesthood; but I believe it is within his right to give the benefit of that money to students studying elsewhere than in Saint Malachy's.

9724. CHAIRMAN.—What are the numbers attending your school?—Last year we had between 140 and 170.

9725. What proportion were intended for the priesthood?—Of these, last year, about thirty were actually going to the Church.

9726. Is there a special course for them, in addition to the Latin and Greek, and ordinary English course?—No.

9727. Do they then receive their theological instruction after they leave your college?—They do.

9728. At what age are the pupils admitted to your school?—From twelve upwards; but as a rule they do not enter till sixteen or seventeen.

9729. To what age do they remain in the institution?—That depends on the age at which they enter.

9730. Are they all boarders?—From fifty-six to fifty-eight are boarders. The remainder are day boys.

9731. Could the buildings accommodate more than that number of boarders?—They would accommodate seventy boarders.

9732. Could you accommodate more than the present number of day boys in the school-rooms?—I do not think we could. In fact, the accommodation at present is not up to the mark. We would require additional class-rooms, and also dormitories, bath room accommodation, and recreation rooms, and also professors' rooms.

9733. I suppose an ordinary English education forms a part of the school course?—Elementary English is taught in the commercial English class; the pupils are also taught classics, mathematics, and Natural Science.

9734. Who teaches Natural Science?—I teach a class myself, and so do two other gentlemen.

9735. Are you a member of any religious order?—No, I belong to the secular clergy.

9736. How many teachers are there in the institution?—Five clergymen, and five paid lay teachers.

9737. What fees do you charge?—The fees for mathematics and English are 10s, 15s, 21s, 21s 6s, and 21s 10s a quarter, according to the class in which the boys are; French, 7s. 6s a quarter, classics, 21s a quarter, and drawing, 3s. 6s. a quarter. Natural Science is included in the charge for mathematics and English. There is a reduction made in the case of three brothers.

9738. I suppose a great number of your pupils are trained for commercial pursuits?—Most of them are.

9739. Are there any free pupils?—As a rule all pay the fees; but, at present, owing to peculiar circumstances, there are three free pupils.

9740. Are the fees graduated according to the class the boys are in, or according to the income of the parents?—According to the classes the boys are in. We pay a high pension to the kind teachers.

9741. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—Is there any rule against the admission of Protestants to your school?—None. I do not think there would be any objection to their attending.

9742. Would there be any suggestion that they should take part in religious instruction?—Not at all, they would not be asked to do so.

9743. When you speak of there being three free pupils at present, do you mean entirely free?—Yes.

9744. Have you often a larger number of free pupils than that?—I should say we have rarely seven or eight on an average, but not altogether free. Sometimes parents who are in good positions get into reduced circumstances, and we think it a pity to let their children go elsewhere.

9745. How many Catholics are there in Belfast?—70,000.

9746. Are there a large number of Catholics in Belfast requiring an education beyond primary education?—Of course there are a very large number.

9747. What earnings in life do the young men who require the higher education usually follow?—They go to the Law, Medicine, the Church, the Civil Service, office work, and various commercial pursuits.

9748. Is the class that will be likely to seek, and to require, a higher education, amongst the Catholics of Belfast, increasing?—It is. They are rising in the social scale in Belfast and the neighbouring towns.

9749. Your school provides the intermediate education for the Catholics, not merely of Belfast, but of the Diocese of Down and Connor?—It does.

9750. Do you consider that the demand for such education is likely to increase?—I do. It is increasing every year.

9751. There are also a very large number of Catholics who require an intermediate commercial education?—There are.

9752. I suppose you are alive to the desirability of giving all those who enter the church or high an intermediate classical and scientific education as can be given?—Certainly. They ought to get a higher education than is given to the commercial or even to the other professional students.

9753. Do you endeavour to separate the commercial and classical intermediate course in your school?—We do.

9754. What steps do you take for that purpose?—We have separate special teachers and hours for the commercial and the classical subjects.

9755. Do you find that arrangement suits?—It suits the wants of the pupils.

9756. Do you give boys the opportunity of diverging from one or the other course at a certain time, as their circumstances require?—We do.

9757. There has been a good deal of evidence given on the subject of the payment of masters with regard to certain other sects in the country. Although your payment is not derived from endowment perhaps you would have no objection that I should in order to catch a proper comparison ask you a question as to it. Are not the five priests who teach in your school paid altogether out of the pensions paid by the boys in the school?—Altogether. There is no endowment to pay them.

9758. What is your own salary?—It is as an average £50 a year, with board, lodging, and attendance.

9759. Is yours the highest?—Yes; I have the highest salary.

9760. What does the next in order receive?—He has board, and attendance in the house, but gets no salary, as he is paid by a chaplaincy.

9761. How much do the other three receive?—About £60 a year each.

9762. What do the teachers who are employed from the town receive?—We pay the senior master £120 a year, the next £100; the next £70, the next £50, and the next, who is the drawing master and who comes only at certain hours, £20. The fees of the pupils for English scarcely cover the expenses of the masters.

9763. It appears that your total payments to masters, for which you have no endowment, amount to £845 a year. You have fifty-six boarders. What pension do you charge them?—£33 a year.

9764. Does that cover everything?—Everything except instrumental music, and the German language.

9765. We may take it that the maximum payment from day pupils would be £5 or £9 a year?—About £5, but it would not average that, because there is a large number of junior boys, to whom we charge only 18s. or 15s. a quarter.

9766. You stated that your school was not more denominational than others in Belfast. What did you mean by that?—I mean to say that all the other schools are generally known to be sectarian. The Presbyterians have their college or school. The Methodists have theirs. The other denominations too have their own schools. They would not exclude Catholics from these institutions. Neither would we exclude Protestants from ours.

9767. Does the training of the young men preparing to be lay preachers, and of those intending to go to Maynooth—on the chemical side of the school—run in the same groove?—It does.

9768. Were any candidates sent forward for the Intermediate examinations from your school?—We sent in thirty-nine, of whom thirty-two passed, and of these, two got exhibitions, and eight passed with merit.

9769. We heard a suggestion that the Belfast Academical Institution should, from some source or other, get some assistance, which it appears to need, have you any suggestion to make on that subject?—If it is right that the Academical Institution should get a public grant, I think that other institutions should also get such grants.

9770. Can you make a suggestion as to any source for providing educational endowments?—I suppose from the Royal Schools Endowment.

9771. Why do you point to them?—Because the Royal Schools are, in the eye of the law, said to be for all denominations. In the report of the Endowed Schools Commissioners of 1857, it was stated that those schools were essentially non-exclusive, whereas they are virtually exclusive, for their government, their staff, and their system is Protestant Episcopalian, and very few but Protestant Episcopals derive much benefit from them. Therefore, I say, they are substantially Episcopalian Denominational Schools. The Catholics of Ulster are entitled to a share of the property, and the income of those schools, upon the principle of equality, and because they are, in the eye of the law, intended for all denominations. If the Catholics of Ulster do not get the exclusive control of any of those schools, or a fair proportion, they have a right to demand that those schools should cease to exist as denominational schools; and that the income or revenue should be utilized in some scheme, such as the Intermediate Education scheme, under which all could gain an advantage, and I think that, as the property of those schools is situated in Ulster, Ulster alone should have the advantage of it.

REV. JOHN CORWAY, examined.

9772. CHAIRMAN.—What position do you hold in Saint Malachy's College, Belfast?—I am Dean and Rector of the College, and have charge of all the monies.

9773. Can you give any explanation about the £70 a year mentioned in the report of 1857 as payable to the Bishop?—Yes; when the lands, which now belong to the College, were purchased in 1853, a sum of money, which had been left in trust for charitable purposes in the hands of the parish priest of Loughlin, and of the Roman Catholic Bishop of the diocese, was employed to make up the purchase money, and the interest on that sum has to be paid to the Catholic Bishop, and goes through his hands to the parish priest of Loughlin. The interest at first amounted to £70 a year, but a portion of the £70 was otherwise provided for, by the late Dr. Devlin, and the payment was in that way reduced from £70 to £30 a year.

9774. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—Was that by paying off the principal?—Dr. Devlin invested money, left in 9772. That would be rather hard on the people of the south of Ireland?—The Ulster Catholics above all should have the advantage of them.

9773. Do you mean as distinguished from the other Catholics of Ireland?—Yes; we, Ulster Catholics, feel more acutely aggrieved than others with regard to education and other difficulties—the effect of the penal laws.

9774. You do not make any such suggestion as to endowments of private origin?—Certainly not; I refer only to state endowments.

9775. Dr. CURRIE.—What particular branches of the physical sciences do you teach?—We teach the entire course—Pneumatics, Hydrostatics, Electricity and Chemistry.

9776. Do you teach Heat?—Yes.

9777. Have you apparatus for the purpose?—Yes; we have the laboratory that belonged to Dr. Devlin.

9778. Do any of your pupils present themselves for the Science and Art examinations?—No.

9779. CHAIRMAN.—The retainer sent in to us from your school state the fees of boarders to be from £53 to £57 per annum—£53 is the ordinary fee; but some wish extra fees, such, for example, as an egg at breakfast, and that is supplied for an additional £1 a term.

9780. Do you ever send forward students to the Queen's College?—We do not allow them to go to the Queen's College; we do not encourage them; but we give them every facility to pass successfully at the College of Surgeons, Dublin, and a number of our boys have obtained high places there.

9781. You do not arrange the course so as to facilitate their entrance to the Queen's College?—We do not.

9782. As a matter of fact, do any of them go to the Queen's College?—There are Roman Catholics in the Queen's College, Belfast?—None go from our school.

9783. Do you object to their going there?—We do.

9784. You spoke of the report of the former Commission. Are you aware that that was the report only of the majority of the Commissioners, and that Dr. Stephens, a sound lawyer, differed from his fellow Commissioners, and was of opinion that the Royal Schools were Church schools. His opinions on the subject appeared in a separate parliamentary paper?—I have not seen that.

9785. You are aware that in past years some Roman Catholics attended the Royal Schools?—They were very few, compared with the population.

9786. There was one whom I knew myself. The late Judge Monahan was educated at a Royal School; but I believe the attendance of Roman Catholics at those schools has, as a rule, been given up lately?—It has been given up. "One swallow does not make a summer."

9787. CHAIRMAN.—What position do you hold in Saint Malachy's College, Belfast?—I am Dean and Rector of the College, and have charge of all the monies.

9788. Can you give any explanation about the £70 a year mentioned in the report of 1857 as payable to the Bishop?—Yes; when the lands, which now belong to the College, were purchased in 1853, a sum of money, which had been left in trust for charitable purposes in the hands of the parish priest of Loughlin, and of the Roman Catholic Bishop of the diocese, was employed to make up the purchase money, and the interest on that sum has to be paid to the Catholic Bishop, and goes through his hands to the parish priest of Loughlin. The interest at first amounted to £70 a year, but a portion of the £70 was otherwise provided for, by the late Dr. Devlin, and the payment was in that way reduced from £70 to £30 a year.

9790. CHAIRMAN.—What is that land used for?—Part of it is used as building ground. It was simply taken as a speculation, and has not been built upon yet.

9791. The Rev. Mr. Henry stated that some of money had been bequeathed to the Catholic Bishop for the education of ecclesiastical students—does not that money constitute an endowment?—No. The Bishop has received a large number of bequests; but he is not bound by the terms of the wills to spend the money on the education of students in Belfast. That money might be spent in the education of ecclesiastical students either in the Irish College, Paris, or in Maynooth, or in Rome, as well as in Belfast. He has invested between £3,000 and £5,000 of that money in building houses; but the interest, which is for the education of ecclesiastical students, is not an endowment of any Institution.

9792. In fact, it is an endowment limited to ecclesiastical students, but not restricted to a particular Institution?—That is so; but at present the Bishop gives the greater portion to the students in Belfast. Last year seventeen ecclesiastical students received aid and assistance.

9793. We must consider that an endowment; for it is really for educational purposes?—It is completely in the hands of the Bishop who is a trustee. It does not either reduce any rent or go to pay salaries.

9794. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—The Bishop does not hand Father Henry a certain sum of money, and require him to take a certain number of boys at reduced fees?—No. He gives the money to the students, to be applied in part payment of their education, but only to ecclesiastical students.

9795. CHAIRMAN.—In the nature of exhibitions?—Yes. Last year eight received exhibitions of about £18; six of £10 each, and the rest of £5 5s each.

9796. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—The Bishop might employ the money elsewhere?—He might employ it in reduction of the expenses of the students in Maynooth, and at present he is paying for fifteen students there from the same fund. Since the disavowment of Maynooth the number of free places has been decreased. Properly speaking that money does not constitute a local endowment affixed to our institution.

9797. CHAIRMAN.—Do you ever send forward students to Trinity College, Dublin?—No, we send forward students to the medical profession. According to the regulation of the Catholic Bishop, Catholic young men are prevented from going to the Queen's College. So the only course open to them is to pursue their studies in the Medical School of the Catholic University, or the other Medical Schools of Dublin.

9798. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—There is no prohibition against their going to Trinity College, so far as you know?—No; there is no prohibition against it.

9799. It does not stand on the same footing as the Queen's College?—It does not.

9800. CHAIRMAN.—There is a prohibition as to the Queen's College?—We are strictly prohibited from encouraging our pupils to go there.

9801. Do you ever shape your educational course with a view to any other institution except Maynooth?—Yes; we have special classes for those going to the College of St. Ignace, and as attorneys' apprentices.

9802. Do you send pupils to Stomachbury?—No, we have no place to send them to, to obtain degrees, except the University of London.

9803. I suppose you intend, if things look fair, to prepare for the new University?—It is to be hoped we will get a University College.

9804. Do you ever send students to any institution in France, or elsewhere abroad?—No; except to the Ecclesiastical Colleges in Rome, Paris, and Louvain.

Very Rev.
George Bell,
B.D.

Very Rev. GEORGE BELL, D.D., examined

9805. CHAIRMAN.—Are you rector of Carrickfergus, and Dean of Clogher?—I am.

9806. How long have you been rector of Carrickfergus?—Twenty-four years.

9807. As such you have the management of the parochial schools?—I have.

9808. Is there anyone associated with you in the management of them?—My curate.

9809. Have the churchwardens any voice in the management?—No.

9810. What does the endowment consist of?—A rentcharge of forty guineas a year, under the will of the late Mr. R. D. Wilson, and charged on his estate.

9811. The Ecclesiastical Board appear to have given a building grant of £300?—I never heard of that; but I suppose it is so. We do not pay any rent for the school-house, and a most excellent house it is.

9812. Do you receive any subscriptions or other endowments?—The schoolhouse is kept in repair by the churchwardens, who receive £8 annually from the Church Education Society. This sum goes towards repairs, coal, candles, and other expenses.

9813. Is it exclusively a church school?—No child is excluded on account of his religion. Children of all denominations have been in attendance, including Roman Catholics. There are attending, at present, about thirty children belonging to the Church of Ireland, and about twenty Presbyterians.

9814. Is there any distinction made between them?—None.

9815. Are they all taught the Scriptures and Catechism?—Yes; they are also taught reading, mathematics, music, singing, history, and drawing. I should say they receive a thoroughly sound English education. There is a most attentive master, who has been there now for some fifteen years.

9816. What is the master's salary?—£40 a year, and the children's fees, which amount to about £6, making £46.

9817. Is it only a boys' school?—No, over the boys' schoolroom there is a very good girls' school, and there is opposite an infant school. The house is a good one, and accommodates seventy children. It is well attended to and looked after. The wall provided originally for forty boys and twenty girls, and the schools as worked are not strictly according to the will, but I believe it would be a bad thing to alter the present system, because I do not think the boys and girls would be as well attended to.

9818. Does not the girls' school receive any share of the endowment?—No; the endowment is applied exclusively for the boys' school.

9819. Are the girls' school and the infant school under the National Board?—Yes; and really good schools they are, with very good teachers—there could not be better.

9820. You stated that the endowment was forty guineas, and that the master gets £40?—The difference, namely, 50s., is expended in payment of income tax and some other small expenses. The agent of the estate on which the annuity is charged is Mr. C. W. Stewart, and he pays it to me half-yearly, on the 1st May and 1st November, according to the clauses in the will, but I pay the master once a month £3 6s. 8d.

9821. The repairs to the schoolhouse are met out of the expense of the Select Vestry?—Exactly so. I have a sermon once a year for the schools, of which we generally collect about £5. I subscribe to the Christian Knowledge Society, and if I send in £5 they give me books and paintings, and things of that sort, to the value of £10. The children always select their own prices and their paintings, which are neatly mounted on millboard, so that they can put them up in their houses, thus inducing them to keep their houses clean and neat.

9822. Does the number of pupils remain pretty stationary?—Two or three years after the present master was appointed the number reached 60. It varies from various circumstances. There are 46 on the roll just now, but next week there may be 50, the number has never been higher than 60.

9823. Is the school inspected by anyone?—Yes, by the Diocesan Inspector, Rev. Mr. Darkey, and also by the Inspector of the Church Education Society, Rev. E. P. Roe.

9824. How often do they inspect the school?—Once a year. The master gets the result first, generally about £2, and the children who pass creditably receive prizes in books.

Rev. ROBINSON SCOTT, D.D., examined.

Sept. 25, 1879.

Rev. Robinson Scott, D.D.

1825. CHAIRMAN—You are the Principal of the Methodist College, Belfast?—I am.

1826. The foundation stone was, I believe, laid in 1845?—Yes; and the College was opened in 1858.

1827. How many acres are there in the plot on which the College stands?—Fifteen acres.

1828. How is that ground held?—In perpetuity, at the rent of £311 a year.

1829. A portion of it has been let off as building ground?—Yes; and on another portion we have ourselves built a terrace of six houses, which are now all let, and form part of our endowment.

1830. Did your endowment arise from subscriptions?—Entirely.

1831. What amount of money was subscribed?—In round numbers we have now about £20,000.

1832. Was that all expended in building the College?—The building and outfit of the College cost about £38,000, altogether apart from the £20,000 of endowment, which we regard as invested capital.

1833. Is the interest on the endowment applied towards the payment of the current expenses of the College?—Yes.

1834. How is that money invested?—First we built six houses, of which we receive the rents. We also receive ground rents to the amount of £190 a year, and we have £4,000 invested on mortgage of landed property, and there are also some American Securities which, in round numbers, produce about £1,900 a year.

1835. Mr. O'SHEAHERIDY.—Then you have altogether received a sum of nearly £20,000?—Yes, a sum of £27,000 had been expended on the building when we published our report, we have expended considerably more since then; and we say that we cannot complete the whole thing under, in round numbers, £49,000.

1836. You still contemplate adding to the building?—We contemplate various improvements connected with them.

1837. CHAIRMAN.—What is the present number of pupils?—We have a collegiate department, and a school department. In the College we have only a comparatively small number at present—twenty or the like of students. The majority of those are intended for the Wesleyan ministry; some of them pass through the Queen's College course, and some do not. There are also young medical men, who have been educated in our school, and have entered the Queen's College, but remain with us, and get assistance from our teachers, while they are passing through their collegiate course.

1838. What is your total number of pupils?—The total number in all departments for the last four years, has been 275, including those in both the school and College departments.

1839. Of those how many are boarders?—The lowest average per year has been fifty, we have had higher numbers, but latterly the depression of the trade has had an effect on the number of the boarders.

1840. What staff of teachers have you?—We have seven teachers, besides the drawing-master; to that teacher I do not include either myself or Dr. Parker, who is the head master. Several of our teachers are university men. Our course runs at paragon for the university, as well as for the professions and commercial life; in fact we desire to make ours as high a first-class school as we can.

1841. What salaries do the masters receive?—The head master has a salary of £350 a year, with a furnished house. My own, I may say, is somewhat meagre—I have, nominally, £100 a year and a furnished house, but we ministers always have prospective advantages that laymen have not, and, therefore, we regard the laymen as entitled to something more. The mathematics master has £200; the classical master, £150; the French master, £160; the commercial master, £150; the elocution master, £120; the head English resident master, £130. We have five resident masters.

1842. Do they get their board?—Yes. We have a resident master, who has a good deal of the responsibility of the discipline of the boarders, and he has private rooms, all the others have a single room each.

1843. There is also a girls' department connected with the school?—I include the girls in the 275; we have generally about eighty of them.

1844. Who are the instructors in the girls' department?—The masters and professors in the other departments take that up in turn, but we have also ladies, including one who attends chiefly to the department of the young ladies.

1845. Is there any special mistress, actually to give instruction?—We have, in what we call our junior department, two mistresses—a perpetual and an assistant—for the very young people, boys as well as girls.

1846. At what ages do you take the girls?—From seven years of age for the junior department.

1847. The same ages nearly as the boys?—We do not, as a rule, take boarders under ten.

1848. Were any pupils from your school sent up for the Intermediate examinations?—Yes, we got four exhibitions, eleven passed with honours, and there were twenty-one other passes, in all thirty-six.

1849. Mr. O'SHEAHERIDY.—Do you provide for a commercial education?—Yes.

1850. Have you a separate curriculum for that?—Yes, we have, in the English department, a gentleman who attends to book-keeping. A very considerable number of our boys are designed for commercial life.

1851. Do you take care to give them not merely a knowledge of book-keeping, but a higher education, to suit commercial gentlemen?—We always are of that, and the majority learn both French and German.

1852. And I suppose Experimental Physics?—Yes.

1853. CHAIRMAN.—The endowment is invested, of course, in trustees?—Yes, in the trustees of the College.

1854. Who are they?—They are scattered over the country, and are about thirty in number. I am myself the treasurer, and everything has passed through my hands from the beginning.

1855. Are the trustees appointed by the Methodist body?—Yes; they were originally appointed by the Methodist body. Any appointment to a vacancy must be sanctioned by the Conference.

1856. The school is not confined entirely to Methodists?—No; we have members of other denominations, both as boarders and day pupils.

1857. In fact, to a certain extent, it is a mixed college?—The pupils are at present all of Protestant denominations. We had one Roman Catholic, but he has finished his education and left the College. We have, of course, religious instruction, which, however, we did not require him to attend. We have persons coming to attend certain classes only.

1858. I presume that those who do not enter the collegiate department are not required to attend any religious instruction?—The Theological department is purely denominational, but the school is not. When I say purely denominational, I do not mean that none but Methodists would be admitted. Presbyterian students, not theological, have attended, and even very lately, a gentleman going forward for the Congregational ministry resided here, and he attended our theological lectures the same as the others.

1859. Have you any special endowments in your college department?—There are some small endowments connected with it, for instance, the Fowler endowment, £1,000 given to establish a scholarship for young men training for the ministry; £400 to endow the Mercer Scholarship, to aid in paying the fees of such as study for University degrees; and £200 by a lady to provide scholarships for two ministers' daughters. There is another aspect of it, one of the original designs was to provide a thorough education for the sons of our ministers, and apart from the endowment I have mentioned, and in connection with

Sept. 28, 1875.

Rev. Edmund
Scott, D.D.

the enterprise by which we raised the college, there was £9,000 set apart to aid in the education of the sons of our ministers; but the proceeds of that are available not only for our College in Belfast, but for the one in Dublin. So, no matter where the minister may select to send his son, the money goes with him either to the Dublin school or the one in Belfast. Then all the young men sent to us by the Conference, to be trained for the ministry, are trained free, and they each receive £12 a year to cover incidental expenses.

1860. Mr. O'BRAHENSEN.—Are there any students in the College not intended for the ministry?—Yes; we have some for medicine, and some for law.

1861. Is not you get the same education for your students very much better and cheaper by sending them to the Queen's College, than you could if you had to import it in your own buildings?—Our position is, that what is already provided by the State we will avail ourselves of, and what is not provided by the State we will provide for ourselves. We have in all those matters more faith in ourselves than in the State.

1862. De CURTIS.—You make one supposition for other?—Yes; we must recognize denominationalism as a fact in the country, and we must recognize endowment on equal grounds, on a common platform. We wish to do that and give every man perfect liberty to have his own denominational teaching, as he pleases.

1863. CHAIRMAN.—Do you restrict your lay teachers, as to the denomination to which they belong?—No; some belong to the Church of England and others are Presbyterians. Our head mathematical teacher is a Presbyterian. We select the best men we can get, none of high position, who are also capable of raising the boys to the same position.

Mr. Henry R.
Parker, LL.D.

Mr. HENRY RICHARD PARKER, LL.D., CHAIRMAN.

1864. CHAIRMAN.—You are the head master of the Methodist College, Belfast?—I am.

1865. You are yourself a graduate of Trinity College, Dublin?—Yes.

1866. How long have you been head master?—Since 1871, nearly eight and a half years. I was head master of the Wesleyan School in Stephen's-green, Dublin, before coming here. I was there, I may say from the time I took my degree. In fact I hardly ever left that school from the time I went there as a boy till I left it as head master.

1867. What is your special department?—My work is general superintendence of all except the Theological department, and I take up the head classes in classics and English literature. I also teach the Hebrew of the theological students.

1868. In fact you exercise a general supervision, and also teach in the departments which you specially studied in college?—Just so.

1869. Is the school inspected in any way?—No; except by visitors appointed by the Conference of the Wesleyan body; but we have a committee of management and also trustees. The committee of management meet once a month, and the trustees once a year.

The officials must present an annual report to the Conference through the committee.

1870. I suppose the committee of management confine themselves principally to the discipline and financial affairs of the College?—Just so. We have, however, had strangers to examine, Professor Nisbet, Professor Purser, and others. We have not had them uniformly; but it was a pleasant thing to get them in to examine the boys.

1871. Is there any stated examination?—Yes; there is a half-yearly examination.

1872. Who examines on those occasions?—Generally ourselves. We award exhibitions, so far as we are able to give them, on the total answering. Is not ours a large public school, nominally a Methodist College, but its advantages are open to all, of any denomination, that choose to avail themselves of them. The sons of clergymen of all denominations are admitted at half price.

1873. Mr. O'BRAHENSEN.—Is there supervision exercised over the boys during play hours?—Yes, there is always a master present.

[The Commission adjourned to next day at eleven o'clock.]

Rev. Charles J.
McAlister

Rev. CHARLES JAMES McALISTER, CHAIRMAN.

1874. CHAIRMAN.—You are one of the trustees of the Holywood school?—I am a trustee of Sullivan's Schools, Holywood.

1875. Can you give the history of the endowment?—There are two schools coming under the name of Sullivan's. One is a National school, the buildings of which were erected by a grant from the late Dr. Sullivan, and at his death that school was largely endowed. There was also a rectory property, which became available for educational purposes under his will, and with that the trustees erected what we call the Upper School as distinguished from the other, but it is not in any way connected with the National Board. This Upper School, is somewhat in the nature of an intermediate school. The National school is supported by the endowment which Dr. Sullivan bequeathed by his will, and the Upper School was created by the rectory estate.

1876. Were both schools mentioned in the will?—The Upper School could not have been mentioned, as it did not then exist. The rectory property was left to the trustees to expend as they thought best for the promotion of unsectarian education in Holywood.

1877. When did Dr. Sullivan die?—He died on July 11, 1848. The Sullivan National school had been opened on April 28, 1863, more than six years before his death.

1878. Did he leave the National school any endowment by his will, or had he endowed it in his lifetime?—He built the schools in his lifetime, or rather gave the money for the building and endowment to Mr. Greg, who was then resident in the parish of Holywood.

1879. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—In Dr. Sullivan's will I find this passage:—

"To the trustees and executors of this my will, I have four thousand pounds (£4,000) in trust for the benefit of the schools which I have established in Holywood, in addition to the £2,000 which I have already given, and it is my wish, that at least £2,000 of the aforesaid £4,000 should be invested as soon as practicable in a perpetual endowment in aid of the salaries of teachers of the aforesaid schools, the payment of the rent, and repairs of the houses. The remainder may be applied to the building of additional schools, or apartments, according to the judgment of the executors."

Does that refer to the school which he had created during his life?—It does.

1880. CHAIRMAN.—Has any addition been made to the National school?—There were four additional buildings erected, necessary for the accommodation of the school, which is a very large one. I think it right to explain the arrangements as to the committee. The whole money was originally conveyed to Mr. Greg to expend as he thought right for the purpose; and Mr. Greg and several others agreed to have a committee consisting of each of the ministers of religion in the parish, and a layman representing each of the congregations.

1881. Mr. O'BRIENHURRY.—In Dr. Sullivan's will was further passage occurs:—

"The residue of my property is to go to the trustees by procuring in their judgment National or non-sectarian education in Holywood. My views on the subject of National or non-sectarian education are given in the letter which I addressed to Thomas Greg, Esq., J.P., Ballymoreack, dated 24th September, 1859."

Was the letter referred to, written on the occasion of the building of the National schools?—No, it was written on the occasion of the gift for the purpose of meeting the school. It is as follows:—

"Education Office, Dublin,
24th September, 1859."

"Dear Mr. Greg,—I had intended, as you are aware, to bequeath the sum of £2,000 for the purpose of building and endowing a National school in Holywood, my native place, but as I heard from you recently, that there exists at present a great necessity for a good school-house there, and as I feel that I can, without much inconvenience, spare the money, I have made up my mind to give you now, provided that you will kindly undertake to carry out my intentions in this respect. This request I make with the less reluctance, because I know that both you and Mrs. Greg take great interest in popular education, and that you have done much to promote it in the town and neighbourhood. Should you, therefore, kindly undertake the task which I venture to impose upon you, I will, upon hearing from you, lodge in the Bank of Ireland, to your credit, the sum of £1,000, which you will oblige me by expending upon the school buildings in strict accordance with your own judgment and taste; and at three months from this date, I will lodge in the same bank to your credit, a similar sum, which is to be applied for the benefit of the school in any way which you may consider the most desirable. The only wishes or suggestions which I have to make on the subject are:—

"1. The School is to be called the Holywood National School.

"2. It is, when completed, to be put under the Board of National Education, in order that it may have the benefit of the inspection of their officers, granted in aid of the salaries of the teachers, and books and school requisites for the pupils at reduced rates.

"3. And should the National System of Education be taken up or discontinued—which for the sake of Ireland I hope may never be the case—the principles of that system are, nevertheless, to be always acted upon in this school. These principles are easily understood. In fact, they were explained in two words by the Archbishop of Dublin, in his speech on the subject in the House of Lords, in early in the year 1853, namely, that the foundation of the National System of Education in Ireland is this:—'that, with regard to religious instruction, there is to be no restriction, no compulsion.'

"4. That system of education founded upon such a principle as this, should have met with much more opposition has always been to me a matter of wonder and regret, particularly as I knew, by the experience of every day for the last eighty and twenty years, that it was producing the most beneficial and the most important results in every part of Ireland. In fact I am firmly convinced that the general and gratifying improvement which has taken place in the country of two years or so, is in no small measure, due to the operation and effect of the National System of Education; and should the British House of Commons ever permit it to be broken up, and a separate and sectarian system of education to be substituted in its stead, I venture to predict that the country to which this country would be most disastrous. In fact, to do as 'would be,' in the words of an eminent poet, 'so deadly Ireland into two hostile camps, with clerical satellites piling up and down to persecute the people from holding any timely conscience.'"

"I have to add that it was my wish (as a mark of respect to your excellent father, to whom I was under great obligations in early life), that the school-house should be built on the Ballymoreack estate; but as no part of it has unfortunately now Holywood, I leave the selection of the site, as well as all other matters connected with the intended school, to your kind management.

"I have also to add, that the building is to contain comfortable and commodious apartments for the teachers, which, in my opinion, should form a necessary part of every school-house.

"I am, dear Mr. Greg,

"Yours faithfully,

"ROBERT SULLIVAN.

"P.S.—You will be sorry to hear that no improvement has taken place in my health since I saw you in Harrogate. In fact, it is so completely broken up, that I have made up my mind to resign my office under the Board, in a few months at furthest.

"R. S.

"Thomas Greg, Esq., J.P., Ballymoreack, Holywood."

1882. CHAIRMAN.—Beyond the endowment of the building has there been anything done for the National school since Dr. Sullivan's death?—No, but we are enjoying the annual interest of £2,000, which is expended partly to increase the salaries of the teachers, and partly to meet other expenses connected with the building, and to keep it in order. I have all the accounts of that school from the beginning.

1883. Mr. O'BRIENHURRY.—Dr. Sullivan gave for the National school £2,000 altogether, £2,000 originally, and £4,000 by his will?—Yes.

1884. CHAIRMAN.—What did the trustee, which came into the hands of the trustees under the will, amount to?—The account, which was furnished by the solicitors, shows that there was £8,501 7s 7d, New Three per Cent. Stock, and £482 10s 3d, cash.

1885. Mr. O'BRIENHURRY.—That account is dated November 25th, 1874?—I should think, from looking at the date, that a portion of that sum consisted of dividends.

1886. Who are the present trustees?—Mr. James Gibson, Q.C., Mr. John Russell, of Marlborough-street, tanning school; and myself.

1887. Is the intermediate school a mixed school?—It is, if by a mixed school you mean one attended by children of different religions.

1888. It is conducted on the National Board principle?—It is conducted strictly on non-sectarian principles.

1889. Is there a conscience clause observed?—There is better than a conscience clause—there is no religious instruction whatever given in the building. Of course the different children have religious instruction conveyed to them by their parents and others; but in the school there is no religious instruction whatever. It is different in that respect from the adjoining National schools.

1890. Are the trustees the managers?—To a large extent they are. The scheme provides:

"That the superintendence of the internal management of the said upper school and local government thereof (save as in this scheme otherwise provided) shall belong to a committee. The committee of the said upper school shall, in the first instance, consist of the trustees of the testator's will, and of the persons who at the date of this scheme, the committee of the trustees of the testator's will shall always be ex-officio members of the committee of the upper school. In case any member of the committee hereby constituted, or hereafter to be appointed (either than the said trustees of testator's will for the time being), shall die, or resign, or refuse or decline, or become incapable to act, or cease to reside in the parish of Holywood, the trustees of the testator's will for the time being, shall appoint such person in his stead and stead, being resident in the parish of Holywood, as they or the majority of them shall think fit to be a member of the committee of the said upper school. The committee of the upper school shall not, at any time, exceed in number, exclusively of the trustees of the testator's will for the time being, the number of the persons who, at the date of this scheme, constitute the committee of the Sullivan schools; and no person, appointed as aforesaid, shall be entitled to act as a member of the committee, until he shall signify in writing, addressed to the trustees of the testator's will for the time being, his approval of non-sectarian education, as intended by the testator."

1891. What was the cause of the proceedings in the Court of Chancery?—The proceedings before the Master of the Rolls, originated with the trustees.

Appt. 25, 1898.
Rev. Charles
W. Alden.

There was considerable opposition in Holywood, on the part of, I should say, the leading members of different denominations, who thought that the scheme which we were adopting was not a judicious one. The trustees kept distinctly before their mind what probably would have been Dr. Sullivan's wish. They all knew him intimately, and they felt that Dr. Sullivan's desire mostly would be—and I state this from conversations I had with him from time to time—to promote the higher education of the humbler classes, who would otherwise have difficulty in obtaining a better education, and therefore our scheme afforded great facilities to pupils in the National schools. The arrangement was, that while children not connected with the National school, and in a certain position in society, should be admitted at a certain rate, children from any National school in the parish of Holywood, should be admitted at one-third of that rate. There are two gentlemen now present who were the leaders of the opposition. They thought that the voluntary property might be very wisely expended in creating a kind of high school, in which the children of the wealthy classes might go. I do not, however, remember that Mr. O'Lavery raised any opposition at that time.

9892 Was Dr. Sullivan's letter to Mr. Greg submitted to the Master of the Rolls?—The letter as a matter of course must have been submitted in connection with the will, because it is necessary to explain its terms.

9893 What was the objection to the scheme founded on?—It was proposed that the school should be in juxtaposition to the National school. It has not been built on the same ground, but the roads are in contact, so that a stranger might suppose it was all one school; and the opponents to the scheme seemed to think that the building being thus connected with the National school, there would be a prejudice against sending the children of the higher classes to the school. That was the main, but perhaps not the only, ground of objection.

9894 Dr. Sullivan, in his letter to Mr. Greg, speaks in one place of the education he wished to secure as "popular education"—I think he means education for the people.

9895 So far the erection of a higher school with complete facilities for the people comes out in its intentions?—I think so.

9896 What fees are charged to the richer class who attend that school?—They are, per annum, Latin, 10s. 6d.; Greek, 10s. 6d.; Latin and Greek, 15s.; English literature and composition, 10s. 6d.; mathematics, 10s. 6d.; French, 10s. 6d.; German, 10s. 6d.; French and German, 15s.; and to those who have been pupils at any National school in the parish of Holywood one-third of those fees. The scheme provides:—

"Provided also that every pupil of such National school, previous to his or her application for admission into said upper school, shall be required to produce a certificate of having passed the examination in the subjects in the time being prescribed by the Commissioners of National Education in Ireland, for the fourth or any higher classes of National school pupils, as prescribed at the date of this scheme, or in the case of change of such examination on the subjects thereof, such other examination as, in the judgment of the trustees for the time being of the testator's will, shall be considered equivalent to the present examination."

9897 It would appear that the fee chargeable to a boy of the better class entering all the branches, would be £10 4s. per annum?—Yes.

9898 Then the fees for the children from the National schools, would amount to £3 8s. per annum. Do you find that the classes of the people who were intended to be benefited are well able to pay so much?—No; the school has not been long in operation, and up to the present we have been disappointed, but I am so satisfied of the reasonableness of the scheme, that I hope it will, in the end, answer all our expectations. With regard to National school pupils severely more than two or three come. The reason of that, it is not my place to conjecture; and even of the better classes very few have come.

9899 Are there any children of an humble class attending the Upper School, who did not attend the National Schools?—I do not think there are.

9900 Did the gentlemen you spoke of, as having taken part in the opposition to the scheme before the Master of the Rolls, belong to various Protestant denominations?—They were gentlemen of two denominations.

9901 What denominations (d) they belong to?—The Protestant Episcopalians, and Calvinistic Presbyterians, or perhaps I should say simply Presbyterians, I call Calvinistic, because I thought it was confined to them, but on reflection I remember that some of the Presbyterians, of the body to which I myself belong, were opposed to it, too.

9902 Were they heard before the Master of the Rolls?—They were.

9903 Was there any opposition to the scheme by Father O'Lavery, or by any of the Roman Catholics?—I am not aware that at that time he offered any opposition. I speak only from my recollection, but I do not think he felt the objection the others did. His opposition is from another point of view entirely.

9904 Was it well known in the neighbourhood that this scheme was being discussed before the Master of the Rolls?—Very well known.

9905 The opposition of the Presbyterians and Roman Catholic gentlemen united, as I understand, on the ground that they wished this to be an intermediate school, more exclusively for the middle and upper classes?—Perhaps I should be wrong in saying "exclusively," but they thought we should chiefly contemplate their advantage.

9906 Have you had vacancies among the trustees since the building, and foundation of the school?—Yes, I am happy to say we have not.

9907 Who appointed the members of the Committee of the National School?—They were appointed in the first instance by Mr. Greg, at the time the school was opened; and when vacancies arose, from time to time, the Committee themselves exercised the power of re-appointment, but there was no provision in that. The arrangement was so loose we had no rule to guide us, but acting on the principle Mr. Greg adopted at first, when the Rev. Mr. Deane, who was a Presbyterian minister, died, we elected his successor, the Rev. Henry Osborne in his place.

9908 In the sixth clause of the scheme the following provision occurs:—

"No person appointed as aforesaid, shall be entitled to act as a member of the Committee, until he shall signify in writing, addressed to the trustees of the testator's will (at the time being, his approval of non-sectarian education, as intended by the testator."

That, I presume, was inserted to insure the testator's wishes being properly carried out?—Exactly; but we have never yet had occasion to set on that clause, as there has been no vacancy since the scheme was settled.

9909 At whose suggestion were those words drawn?—At the suggestion of the trustees; I was one of those who inserted the clause.

9910 Was there any opposition to the insertion of that provision?—None whatever. I could not conceive any opposition.

9911 CHAIRMAN.—The scheme contains this clause:—

"That the rates of tuition in the said several branches respectively, or in any two or more of them conjointly, shall, from time to time, be fixed by the trustees for the time being of the testator's will, and all pupils of any National School in the parish of Holywood who shall have been such for the continuous period of one year previously to their entrance into the said Upper School, shall be admitted into the said Upper School and be entitled to receive instruction in all or any of the branches taught therein, at the payment of such rate or rates of tuition as shall then be fixed."

That is, shall pay smaller rates. Is your scale of fees fixed in accordance with that provision?—Yes; but I do not think we have a single pupil from any other than the Sullivan National School. The privilege however is given to the pupils of all National Schools in the parish.

9912. The scheme does not exclude religious instruction altogether; it provides — —That no child or pupil attending the said Upper School shall be required to attend any religious instruction to be given in the said Upper School, unless his or her parent or guardian shall specially direct, it being a fundamental principle of the trust that the said Upper School shall be open to the children of all religious denominations, without any interference whatever with the particular creed of any?"

—I speak of the school as it is actually carried on at present; but at some future time religious instruction may be given in it. In the National School there is an arrangement by which the clergy of the different denominations attend one day in each week, Thursday there has room for each, in which they give instruction to their pupils.

9913. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—Do you not think that the absence of facility for giving religious instruction is to some extent a departure from the National system?—No.

9914. Surely if it is provided in the National Schools, and not provided in the Upper School, that is precisely a departure?—I think there are some National Schools in which religious instruction is not given. Many of the best advocates of the National system think that religious instruction is more properly given in other places than the school.

9915. Are there any National Schools in which, with the full knowledge of the Board, religious instruction is not provided?—I think there are.

9916. Are you quite sure of that?—I think so. There is an arrangement, I know, in most schools for the reading of the Scriptures at a certain time, but I think there are National Schools in which there is no religious instruction given. Perhaps however I am incorrect in that statement.

9917. Was any objection made to the scheme for the Upper School, upon the ground that it was proposed to give education of an intermediate instead of a primary character?—I think that in conversation one of my neighbours made that objection; but I do not recollect any objection of that kind coming before the Com. It may be that there was some such, but certainly the great objection was what I have mentioned.

9918. CHAIRMAN.—You admit that, from some cause or other, the school has not been hitherto a success?—It has not. So far it has been a disappointment.

9919. Have you any suggestion to offer as to what change would be desirable, in order to make the Upper School a greater success?—No, I have not. I simply entertain the hope that it will still succeed.

9920. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—Have you any latitude under the scheme for altering it slightly with reference to its present condition?—I think not, we should go before the Master of the Rolls again.

9921. Was it originally proposed to make the parish priest of the place a member of the Committee of the National School?—There was, in one sense, no parish priest at that time in the parish. Mr. Killeen, of Ballymacroot officiated in Holywood, and my own desire was that he should be on the committee, but it was objected that he was not a resident in the parish.

9922. Then he was left out on the ground of being non-resident?—He was left out, ostensibly on that ground.

9923. When you say "ostensibly," what do you mean to convey?—I think there was a further objection, on the part of some, to his being on the committee.

9924. What was the nature of that further objection?—At that time some of the Roman Catholic clergy, and those who were the leaders of the clergy, were less hearty supporters of the National Board than they had been at one time; and, I think, perhaps, that some were quite willing that there should be no priest on the committee, having an apprehension that, if there were, matters would not work smoothly. I myself had no apprehensions whatever of the kind.

9925. When did Father Killeen cease to be administrator?—I cannot recollect.

9926. Who succeeded him?—I do not know. I think he had a curate in Holywood at a later period—but not when the committee was first arranged—the Rev. P. McAlister.

9927. Was there, at that time, any Catholic clergyman resident in Holywood?—I think not.

9928. When vacancies occurred, after there was a resident Roman Catholic curate, or a resident Roman Catholic parish priest in Holywood, was any attempt made to put a Roman Catholic clergyman on the committee?—There would have been no necessity to wait for a vacancy to arise, because the number of the committee was not restricted; but I find in the minutes of the committee, in the year 1867, this entry:—

"In reference to the representation of the several denominations on the committee, the following resolution was adopted:—That it seems to this committee to be for the interests of the Sullivan School, and in accordance with the principles on which it is founded, that the members of the religious denominations in the parish should be represented on the committee of management, and we, therefore, agree to request Mr. Greg to appoint representatives of the Roman Catholic and Methodist Churches, viz. the resident Methodist minister and a lay member of his church, and, in the present Roman Catholic clergyman is avowedly opposed to secular education, two lay members of the Roman Catholic Church."

9929. Who was the parish priest referred to in that minute?—I think it was Mr. O'Lavery.

9930. Is not Father O'Lavery the manager or patron of National Schools?—I do not think he had a school at that time. My reason is, that at one time, and it must have been subsequently to 1867, a large number of Roman Catholic children were withdrawn from the Sullivan School, and transferred to a new school opened under Mr. O'Lavery's management.

9931. Can you state the grounds on which it was then alleged that Father O'Lavery was opposed to the National system?—I cannot do so from memory, but I think the files of the newspapers of that day would supply them. At that time the arrangements of the School Committee was in the hands of Mr. Greg, and I think I am not violating any confidence in saying that, when I communicated this resolution of the committee to him, I received the following reply:—

"As it seems to be the opinion of the Committee, that members of the different religious denominations in the parish should be represented on the Committee of management of the Sullivan School, I have no hesitation in complying with the request of the Committee, provided that Dr. Sullivan having been consulted (as he ought to be), his opinion is found to be in accordance with that of the present Committee. With this reservation, therefore, I have much pleasure in consenting to the adoption of any measure which may most conduce to the greater efficiency of the schools, reserving to myself the power, in case the admission of so many different denominations into the Committee should prove harmful (which I trust sincerely may not be the case) prejudicial to the interests of the school, of withdrawing my sanction from it, but I wish to repeat again, first, first and above all things, Dr. Sullivan should be consulted and his wishes, whatever they may be, complied with."

I have a letter from Dr. Sullivan, in which he entirely coincides with the views here put forward.

9932. Did you appoint the Roman Catholic hymnist?—We did; but they would not act. I have their letters declining to do so.

9933. Has there been any appointment since the Rev. Mr. O'Lavery became manager of the National school in the district?—I am sure there has been. Sometimes a gentleman has removed from the neighbourhood, and his place has been taken by another person belonging to the same church. The principle on which we proceeded was to take the principal churches, and select the minister and a layman from each.

9934. But you did not add the Rev. Mr. O'Lavery, or any other Catholic priest?—We never thought of him, but I should say, speaking for myself as one of the trustees, and as a member of the Committee, that I would be delighted to see Mr. O'Lavery on the Committee. I do not think there is a single member of the Committee who has not a great deal of respect for him, but their opinion is, that he is opposed to the principle of education on which these schools are based.

Rev. Charles J. McAlister.

Sept. 30, 1875.
Rev. Charles J.
McAlister.

9935 But he is manager of a National school?—National schools are not all National. However, I need not enter into the question.

9936 That is very fair. You may do so?—When the National system was first established it was easy to understand what was meant by a National school; but gradually a large majority of those schools have become essentially denominational. And I can understand Mr. O'Leary being manager of a National school, though not in the sense in which Dr. Sullivan understood the term.

9937 Do you think that the state of things has practically arisen, which is referred to by Dr. Sullivan in his letter where he says—

"And should the British House of Commons ever permit it to be broken up, and a separate and sectarian system of education to be substituted in its stead?"

—No; but I think it is tending that way, though it has not yet practically come about.

9938 Then although Mr. O'Leary is at present the manager of a National school, and, selfish, as he must, the rules at present in force under the National Board, you do not think he is exactly, though saying nothing against him personally, a suitable person to be on the Committee?—I think the condition introduced into the scheme is a wise one, that any person appointed should certify in writing his approval of the non-sectarian principle of education.

9939 Perhaps you think Mr. O'Leary would not accept the position under those terms?—If he would, I am sure I speak the feelings of all the Committee when I say that we would gladly have him as a co-worker. I do not think he would accept the office, if he did not conscientiously adopt the principle.

9940 CHAIRMAN.—What number of masters are there in the Upper School?—Only two. One, the principal, takes the classical, mathematical, and English departments, and the other takes the French and German.

9941 Is he a native, or a foreigner?—He is a native, but lived in Belgium for a long time.

9942 Is physical science taught in the school?—We have, at considerable expense, had a laboratory fitted up; and I must confess my statement, as to the number of masters, by adding that Mr. Spence, the principal of the male department of the National School, teaches the physical sciences in the Upper School. He formerly taught those branches, under the Science and Art Department, in the National School building; but the Upper School building being better adapted for the purpose, he conducts these classes there now.

9943 Dr. CURRIE.—Have the boys of this school competed in the Science and Art examinations?—They have, and with wonderful success. There have been most gratifying results.

9944 Did any go in for the Intermediate Education examinations?—Several went forward, and one of them obtained an exhibition, on very distinguished answering. He had been educated by Mr. Spence until a year or two ago when he came to the Upper School, and from that time his education has been conducted there.

9945 How many candidates went up for the Intermediate examination from the Upper School?—None.

9946 How many passed?—Five.

9947 CHAIRMAN.—You keep the accounts of the schools?—I do.

9948 In fact you act as Treasurer?—I am to a certain extent Treasurer, and I also act as Secretary of the Committee.

9949 The stipend paid to the contractor for the building of the Upper School passed through your hands?—They did. The other trustees live in Dublin, and all moneys that are paid come through my hands.

9950 Do you sign the cheques?—I do. The money is lodged to my credit in the Ulster Bank, where I keep a separate account of money belonging to this trust.

9951 Are you authorised to sign cheques, or have you to bring them before the Committee?—I have not to bring anything before the Committee. If I were making any unusual payment I might think it right to consult the Committee, but this point has never arisen.

9952 How often do the Committee meet?—There is a recent arrangement by which the Committee shall meet once a quarter—on the first Monday after the quarter days of the National Schools.

9953 What is the quorum?—Three. At the last meeting only two members attended, so that no business was transacted.

9954 You do not transact business without a quorum?—Never, we cannot do so.

9955 Where do the Committee meet?—They used to meet in one of the school-rooms of the National School building; but there is a small room in the new building, which we consider as our Committee-room, and we now meet there.

9956 Mr. O'BRIEN.—Have the members who reside in Dublin to come to Belfast for the meetings?—The trustees have never been at our Committee meetings, although as a matter of course they are members of the Committee.

Mr. John
Anderson.

Mr. JOHN ANDERSON, examined.

9957 CHAIRMAN.—How are you connected with the management of the Sullivan Schools?—I am a member of the Committee. I have been Chairman of the Town Commissioners for twelve years, and am a county magistrate.

9958 Are you one of those who are not altogether satisfied with the scheme that has been adopted?—I am.

9959 Did you take any steps to offer opposition to the scheme when it was brought before the Mayor of the Bells?—At the time that it became known that this roadway fund was applicable to Holywood for intermediate education, it was also known that the testator had already given a large sum towards the building and endowment of the Sullivan National School, and the whole of the furnishings—I may say I do not know any objection unless those opposed to the system—considered that this roadway money should be applied to the building and endowment of an Intermediate School, between the National School and the Queen's College. There was a clause in the will which gave the trustees full power, as they thought, to erect such an Intermediate School, on the same basis as the institution in which Dr. Sullivan himself received his education, namely, the Belfast Academical Institution, which he referred to as being, he considered, the first National School in Ireland. When it became known that the trustees intended simply to enlarge the National school house, and make that an upper school, there was a spirit of indignation roused, meetings were held, and resolutions passed, and a memorial to the trustees was got up, which was signed by the Lord Bishop of the diocese, and by all the clergymen and Town Commissioners who were in favour of such education, also by all the magistrates, and by 250 or 300 of the members of the respectable classes in Holywood, asking them, instead of enlarging the existing school, to have a separate building erected, and to have it endowed, so that the middle and better classes could send their children to it, and thus supply a great want felt in the district, as they considered that the system of the lower class were already completely supplied. The memorialists did not see the necessity of going before the Mayor of Bells at all, and thought it would be only wasting the funds, as in their opinion the trustees had scope sufficient to enable them to build and endow a school such as I have mentioned. Despite this memorial, those gentlemen went before the Mayor of the Bells, and we—the people of the town and neighbourhood—considered it our duty to pursue in opposing the scheme. However, the Master of the Ball was of opinion that any scheme within the scope of the will, proposed by the trustees, ought to be sanctioned, and their scheme was sanctioned accordingly. What we complain of is, that the school does not supply the existing want, and our suggestion is, that the trustees should have the scheme altered. If they do not do that, it is probable the want will be supplied in some other way. We say now that the funds, which were left by Dr Sullivan for the purpose of benefiting children of the inhabitants of Holywood, are being applied against the wishes of the inhabitants, by the trustees, two of whom reside in Dublin, and that, notwithstanding a resolution which was passed at a public meeting and forwarded to them, as follows:—

“Moved by Mr. PATRICKS seconded by Mr. ASKEW and carried unanimously.—That this meeting recognises the excellent address and improvements to the Sullivan school made by the trustees under Dr. Sullivan's will (that is, the address to the lower school); but they strongly deprecate the application of the trustees' fund to any of the expenditure of the existing Sullivan's school and they believe the trustees' benevolent intentions will only be carried out by creating as soon as practicable a separate intermediate school on the non-sectarian principle of the National Board for the education of the people of Holywood.”

An alteration that we suggest is—That the trustees should, even now, take a school-room or a house elsewhere, or erect a new building in some other locality; because the children of the better classes seem to object to a school that is considered to be a National school.

2940. Is not the Upper School quite a separate institution from the National school?—There is a separate foot, but it is in the same block of building.

2941. Do you then object to the site?—Certainly. The people afraid to will not send their children there.

2942. Do you also object to the provision for charging reduced fees to children from the National schools?—We do not object to that. We also think that the scheme should be altered in some respects, so as to provide a larger number of teachers. I have no doubt but there would be a larger attendance if the children had a different place to go to.

2943. You think that if the school was removed to another site there would be a large addition to the endowment in the shape of fees from the middle classes in Holywood?—Certainly there would; the scheme being also altered to what we want. In the meantime a separate house might be taken, by way of trial, to supply the want which decidedly exists.

2944. Is the school-house in a very poor part of the town?—It is just in the centre of the town.

2945. Would the middle classes prefer that it should be outside the town?—Yes, and the trustees could have had a free site for the building if they had decided upon having a separate school, and I am certain contributions would have been forthcoming if needed.

2946. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—Are the premises in which these intermediate studies are carried on neat and properly kept?—Yes, I think so.

2947. And properly furnished?—Yes.

2948. These has never been any charge of neglect, or anything of the kind?—Never that I have heard.

2949. Is your objection altogether to the site, or would you object to an intermediate school into which poor children were allowed at reduced fees?—We contemplated certain marks in the National school, and wished a higher class of education, should be admitted at a lower scale of fees, or that some other advantages should be given to them.

2950. Then the sole objection is on account of the site?—That is the great objection, but not the only one. We think the trustees have hampered themselves with a scheme which they would have been better without, and that they should have left things more in the hands of the Committee, which has now no power, comparatively speaking.

2951. You also complain that there is not sufficient number of teachers in the Upper School?—Looking at the work proposed to be done, I think two teachers are not sufficient.

2952. They have only got a small number of scholars?—That is so, and for the reasons which I have given.

2953. If the middle classes sent their children, the receipts from fees would be higher and there could be more teachers appointed?—Yes. There was formerly a large private school in the neighbourhood, containing about sixty children of the middle classes, which has been shut up since this school was opened.

2954. Do you think that the taking of a separate building, and the teaching in it of the same classes, consisting of a mixture of National school boys, would satisfy the wishes and feelings of the middle classes of Holywood?—I do think that, in a great measure, it would.

2955. Is the school in a good part of the town?—Very good, but the people to whom I allude do not like the idea of sending their children to a National school, supported, in part, by Poor Rates. The school in question is, from its proximity, very much stamped with that character, although it is called the Upper School.

2956. Wherever it is put, it must, according to Dr. Sullivan's will, be an Upper National school—according to the National system—non-sectarian?—We do not object to an association school. I think it is only the scheme which calls it an Upper National school.

MR. WILLIAM J. ANDERSON, EXAMINED.

Mr. William J. Anderson.

2957. CHAIRMAN.—You are the head master of the Upper School at Holywood?—I am the principal of the Upper School.

2958. How long have you held that position?—Since the opening of the school, in October, 1877.

2959. What number of scholars attend that school?—I have twenty-seven on the roll at present.

2960. What is the usual attendance?—About twenty-four or twenty-five every other day, and a much smaller number on the remaining days of the week.

2961. What proportion of your pupils come from the National School adjoining?—We have had as nearly as possible one-half, presenting a certificate of a year's attendance.

2962. Had you any pupils from the other National Schools—Father O'Leary's School, or the parochial National School?—No; but there is one from a National school outside the parish.

2963. Where had your other pupils received their education before they came to you?—I think one or two had been attending the Methodist College, Belfast, one had been attending Bangor Endowed School; and several others had been, and some are still, attending a private school in Holywood.

2964. Do you think that you would have an increased number of pupils if the school was not in such close proximity to the lower school?—I think so.

2965. Have you ever heard objections made by parents as to the site of the school?—Not of late; but at the time I went there first, I heard very strong objections on the part of several.

2966. Were there any objections, except on the ground of the two schools being so near together?—There was a serious objection to the limitation of the English course of instruction, but the grounds of that objection are now removed. I remember particularly another objection to any association or bringing of pupils in the playground.

2967. Have not they distinct playgrounds?—At that time, I think, they had not; but very shortly afterwards there was a railing erected between the two playgrounds. Conversation, however, can still be carried on. Where there is any association between the pupils of the two schools—and from the contiguity of the buildings and playgrounds there will be association—the higher classes will refrain from sending their children. I do believe, with a separate building, the school would be better supported by the higher classes.

9938. Do you think if there were a wall erected that they could not climb over that would make any difference?—I scarcely think so. Whether there were a wall or only railings, people would think there was some unpleasant association with persons of the lower classes, and they will continue to think so as long as the two buildings are connected.

9939. Dr. CURRIE.—Could not these two schools be kept as distinct from one another, as two neighbours' houses can?—They are kept so at present; but there is an unfortunate prejudice among people. We may deprecate it; but it still exists.

9940. Where is the real objection to the buildings being next one another?—I have recognized the prejudice as worthy of consideration, for this reason, that a proper number of teachers cannot be obtained for the money in the hands of the trustees, unless there be a considerable amount received from fees. Prejudiced persons will not send their children at the higher rates of fees, and so proper teachers cannot be provided; and therefore the persons who come at the small rates do not receive as good an education as under other circumstances they might.

9941. The masters of the two schools are quite distinct?—Quite distinct.

Mr. Adam
Spence, B.Sc.

Mr. ADAM SPENCE, B.Sc., examined.

9942. CHAIRMAN.—You are the head master of the Sullivan National School, Holywood?—I am.

9943. So far as you know is there any communication between the pupils of the two schools during play hours?—No, and for the simple reason that the pupils of the two schools have their recreation at different times. I have not observed any communication at playtime between the pupils of Mr. Anderson's School, and the pupils of mine.

9944. At what hours do the two schools break up?—My school breaks up at 3 o'clock, and Mr. Anderson's at about a quarter to 3 o'clock.

9945. At what time do the pupils assemble in the morning?—Mr. Anderson's pupils begin to assemble at 9 o'clock for modern languages, and mine come at 10 o'clock. A considerable number of pupils from my school are also pupils of Mr. Anderson's School, that is to say, pupils from my school and also from the female National School, go to the Upper School to learn modern languages, and return to us at 10 o'clock.

9946. Do you desire to make any observations?—I should like to correct a wrong impression, which may have been made upon your minds, with reference to the class of pupils that attend the Sullivan National School. I have been fifteen years head master of the male department of that school, and during that period an increasing number of the children of the respectable classes of Holywood and the neighbourhood have been attending that school, even some Belfast people send their children down by rail, and not only so, but children have been sent from a distance, and £40 a year paid for their board, their education being paid for in addition, in order that they might have the advantage of the education given at my school.

9947. Did they board in Holywood?—Yes, mostly at my house. I wish to state that, so far as I am aware, there is no prejudice among the respectable inhabitants of Holywood against sending their children to the National School. I have at my school the children of some of the most respectable families in Holywood, and it is altogether a mistake, in my opinion, to imagine that the respectable people of Holywood, as a body, have any objection to sending their children either to my school, or to Mr. Anderson's.

9948. Mr. O'BRIEN.—How do you account for the comparative ill-success of the intermediate school?—I account for it in this way, that the Protestant school-going boys of Holywood, with the exception of a small number that attend a class conducted by the Rev. Mr. McAister, are really in attendance at the Sullivan Schools at the present moment. We have 160 boys on the roll of the Sullivan National School. The Rev. Mr. O'Lavery has a National School, at which a large number attend—in fact all the boys of his communion, with the exception of one who attends my school, and the Rev. Mr. Wynne the clergyman of the Episcopal Church has also a National School very largely attended. In the Sullivan National Schools the total number on the rolls at present is upwards of 600 pupils, including those in the infant, female and male departments, in addition to those attending the Upper School, and I do not see where there is much to attend and fill up any school that might be established in Holywood as an independent institution.

9949. Do you think all the middle class children in Holywood first education in Holywood as pupils?—I do. The children of the best families in Holywood attend, in addition to the Sullivan National School, the select classes which are conducted in the Sullivan Upper School, where there is a laboratory as good as a college laboratory.

10000. Are the children who attend those classes included in the twenty-seven whom we understood to be on the roll?—No. There were seventy-seven students last winter attending my science classes in the Sullivan Upper School. Of these, forty students passed, in one or more subjects, under the Department of Science and Art, and my results fees—which are a very fair measure of the amount of success that a teacher has in teaching such subjects—came to £213.

10001. CHAIRMAN.—Are those classes taught after the regular school hours?—They are.

10002. Mr. O'BRIEN.—As you know Holywood and its educational requirements, suppose Sullivan's Upper School were transferred to other suitable premises, what do you think would be the effect?—An utter failure.

10003. CHAIRMAN.—Is there any private school in Holywood to which the merchants' sons go?—There was a private school at one time in Holywood which was very largely attended, but it went gradually down. The Sullivan School was the chief cause of its extinction, as the class of pupils going to it began to come to the Sullivan School.

10004. Dr. CURRIE.—Then you do not consider the Upper School a failure?—I do not think the Sullivan Upper School could have succeeded much better than it has done, except at the expense of the Sullivan National School. When the Sullivan Upper School was opened I gave up teaching Latin, Greek, and French, and that school got all my classical pupils, which lowered my income by about £40 the first year.

10005. CHAIRMAN.—Are there, owing to the facilities afforded by the railway, a great many boys sent into Belfast to the Academic Institution?—I am not aware of any boys going at present, except two or three.

The Right Rev. ROBERT KNOX, B.D., Lord Bishop of Down, Connor, and Dromore, examined.

10006. CHAIRMAN.—Can you give us any information in reference to the Holywood schools, in addition to what we have heard?—I cannot give much information; but I desire to explain why I signed the memorial alluded to by one of the witnesses. I signed it as a memorial for a separate intermediate school, under an impression, which still exists in my mind, that by keeping up a separate intermediate school we would have a higher class of pupils. To all intents and purposes the primary school, and the Sullivan Upper School are so intermingled that they hardly form two separate institutions. Some of the boys in Mr. Spens' very excellent school occasionally go and receive instruction in the Upper School. It has been already stated to you that there was formerly in Holywood a very prosperous private school for the better classes, and I thought if we had the Sullivan foundation entirely removed from the primary school, we would probably succeed in getting that class again. But perhaps it is more of a sentimental grievance at present than anything else. I should not wish that any school should be established with Dr. Sullivan's money, which would deprive the poor of any portion of the endowment which he evidently intended should be given to the school, which in the first instance, he intended for the poorer classes, but I am convinced that, if funds were sufficient, Dr. Sullivan would, if alive, wish to have a higher class of intermediate school established on a totally distinct basis, with a separate building, and in a separate locality. I think if we had a large building for the higher class intermediate education, the effect would be that we would attract a good many to receive their education in Holywood, and probably some would even come down from Belfast. I do not desire to press the matter very strongly, but only to give my reason for signing the memorial.

REV. JAMES O'LAURENCE, P.P., recalled.

10007 CHAIRMAN.—You are the parish priest of Holywood?—I am.

10008 What are the grounds of your dissatisfaction as to the way in which the trustees manage the Sullivan legacy?—In the first place, it appears that this legacy was to have been managed by a Committee composed of the old Committee of Holywood School. It consequently became absolutely necessary to enter into the history of that Committee, which is rather a curious one. They agreed to appoint the clergyman, and two members of each congregation to form that Committee.

10009 Who made that agreement?—I believe Mr. Grogan made the arrangement, and probably Dr. Sullivan, but I am not quite certain. Suffice it to say, that was the understood arrangement, and it was also arranged that the clergyman must reside in the town. They knew well that the then parish priest resided outside the town, though he was in it every Sunday, and several times each week. The principal objection I have to make in the matter is, with regard to Mr. McAlister's statement that there was no Catholic clergyman residing in the town at Holywood at the time. Now, Mr. Richmond, the Assistant Commissioner of the Royal Commission on primary education, on the 2nd December, 1848, wrote to the Rev. Mr. McAlister, the present parish priest of Ballycotton, and asked him the question. Here is his reply:—

"Referring to your letter of 2nd instant, regarding Holywood National Schools &c., I went to reside in Holywood in the month of January 1852, but I had been previously well acquainted with the locality, having charge of the district from 1838 to 1850 inclusive."

As the Holywood National Schools were publicly opened for the reception of pupils on the 28th of April, 1852, it follows that the Rev. Mr. McAlister had been residing in the town for the previous three months, yet he was not put on the Committee. There were plenty of Catholics in the town, most respectable men, some of them magistrates, and yet none of them were put on, and it was only when I drew public attention to the matter, that then explanation was asked, and some reason was put up for excluding me.

10010 It has been stated, that two Roman Catholic laymen were appointed, but declined to serve!—Observe the date of their appointment. They were not appointed until I made a great deal of noise about the matter, long after the creation of the schools, and then it was only as insult to them to exclude their parish priest and appoint them, as if they were Protestants, as if in fact the laity could rule the Church. It was the general principle in its worst development, as far as the Catholic Church is concerned. I wish to draw your attention to the very curious working by which only those on the old Committee could be on the new, I being already excluded.

10011 Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—Do you mean under the scheme?—I do.

10012 Do you object to the Upper School, upon the ground that it is locally attached to the lower school?—I by no means object to the position of the school. I think that on the whole it is a very strange thing that the people who object to the presence of the children of the poor at Sullivan's lower school, as being in proximity with the Upper School, are not unwilling to take the benefit of the money that was intended for the education of the poor. I also heard it stated here, that the whole of the people, and all the Clergy, wished and recommended to have the school located at another place. The whole of the people, without the Catholics, is a very curious thing; and the whole of the Clergy, without the Parish Priest, is another very curious thing.

10013 Then as far as you know the great body of the Catholic middle classes in Holywood do not object on the ground of locality?—No, they do not object to that at all.

10014 Do you object to the institution being intermediate in the Upper School?—Precisely.

10015 You saw that the scheme involved an intermediate education—did you make any objection to it?—I did, but not before the Court, because I understood if I did that I must be at personal expense. In fact I was informed so, by a member of the Bar whom I consulted.

10016 Was objection made by any person, so far as you are aware, on the ground of the intermediate character of the education?—I believe not; but now I object to it for this obvious reason, that it is a robbery of the poor, and doing no good.

10017 Then, according to your view, it was intended that this education should be National, both as to the principle on which it was conducted, and also as to the quality of the education—namely primary?—Yes.

10018 The construction of Dr. Sullivan's will has been pronounced upon by the Court of Chancery, and a scheme has been prepared, which we cannot now go behind, but, whenever the scheme comes to be reviewed, it will then be possible to anyone, who may object to the present form of the scheme, to come forward to the Court and state his reasons.—It is my duty to show the injustice of the scheme, and that a new scheme is required. In order to show the utter futility of the scheme, it appears that there are only twenty-seven pupils on the roll, and I believe that a large number of these twenty-seven attend only for an hour in the day; that they are in fact at other schools; and merely go to the Upper School for special instruction. It further appears that nine candidates presented themselves at the Intermediate Education examination from that school, and four of those were rejected. It appears in addition that one of those who did pass was well known in the town as being clever. I had heard the teachers at Sullivan's school talking long before about his extreme cleverness, and his having got high distinctions and premiums in some of the examinations held by the Science and Art Department, so that in fact the credit of that boy is surely not to be given to the Sullivan higher school, but to the common school.

10019 You heard the master of the Sullivan National school say that he has virtually the great body of the middle class children in Holywood—of course he means of his own school—attending his school?—He has by far the most respectable Protestant and Presbyterian boys in the town.

O'Laurence,

 &c.

10030. Do you attribute the failure of the Upper School to the fact that the great body of the children of the middle class go to the primary school?—I believe they go to the primary. I know nothing about the secret working of the Upper School.

10031. But, as a matter of fact, you know the great body of the upper classes do go to the primary school?—I have seen them there.

10032. What is your objection to the Committee?—The filling of places on the Committee is left in the hands of those who have it to themselves, and, considering that Protestantism means the absence of Catholicity, those would be only myself and two others as against 30, even suppose that I were on that Committee.

10033. Surely the Committee does not now consist of 30 members?—There are 8 or 9 different forms of religion in Holywood, and as there are 3 representatives of each that must be about the number. Consequently, the Catholics would be about 3 to 27, and, therefore, it would be perfect nonsense to suppose there would be equality there.

10035. When did you become the manager of a National school?—In the year 1899.

10036. Have you continued so since?—Yes, and I have faithfully carried out the rules.

10037. Would you be prepared to sign such a declaration as is contemplated by the scheme?—I would be prepared to sign it under the present arrangement of National schools through the country, but not for a position in which the Catholics would be only 3 to 27. I do not consider that is National Education at all.

10038. CHAIRMAN.—As I gather you object to forming part of a school body where all the various denominations are equally represented?—I do. It is not part of the National school system at all that the school should be managed by a Committee.

10039. Mr. O'SHEA.—But surely it was the intention of the founder that the school should be managed by a Committee of some kind?—Yes, but in his will he mentions two distinct things. In the first place he gives to the Sullivan's school such and such things, and in another part he says, "I leave . . . for promoting National or unsectarian education in Holywood."

10040. Yes, but having regard to his letter to Mr. Grogan, and to the fact that Dr. Sullivan himself adopted, even with regard to the National school, the machinery of a Committee, we must take it that he intended that a Committee should be part of the system?—It is obvious that the late Dr. Sullivan wished to have the people of Holywood educated, and yet there are in the town of Holywood, perhaps more than in any other town in the North of Ireland, a number of children roaming about who do not go to any National school, or only seldom go to any school. I wish that Mr. Speers, who is thoroughly conversant with the working of his own school, were asked whether that school is sufficiently supplied with funds. I hold that education would be very much benefited had the money left by Dr. Sullivan been handed over to the National schools of Holywood, or some scheme adopted by which every child at any National school in Holywood would have derived some advantage from it.

10041. CHAIRMAN.—You object to the scheme which has been settled, and you would prefer that the fund should be divided among the various denominations. Is not your school exclusively Roman Catholic?—No, I have had Protestants at it.

10042. I suppose very few?—Very few. But I may also state that Sullivan's school is purely sectarian, and when I use the word "sectarian" I mean "Protestant or Presbyterian." There is no Catholic at it except one, and he is the child of a parent over whom I can exercise no control.

10043. Dr. CURRAN.—And if you could exercise control you would have him removed?—I certainly would, because the parents are taught that the Church disapproves of a school in which their priest has no participation whatsoever in the management, or any right to interfere.

10044. CHAIRMAN.—But you refuse to take any part in the management, unless you have the sole control?—I did not say that. I never was asked to take part on the Committee.

10045. Mr. O'SHEA.—You do not want to insist on anything like sole control?—Certainly not.

Mr. William
 J. Anderson.

Mr. William J. ANDERSON, recalled.

10046. Mr. O'SHEA.—You have 27 pupils on the roll of your school?—Yes.

10047. Do the majority of those 27 attend for the great part of the day, or are there any of them in the position spoken of by Father O'Leary—only attending for a short time?—Father O'Leary is quite correct. I said that on an average 24 or 25 attended every alternate day in the week, and that on the other days the attendance was much smaller. Some of the boys, who come in the mornings for French and German, are attending Mr. McAlister's private school, and others are attending Mr. Speers' National school during the day.

10048. Nine boys went in for the Intermediate examination from your school, and five of them passed?—Yes, and, of the five, three of them passed in three subjects.

10049. Were the four who did not pass, boys that attended regularly during the entire day or only casually?—One of those who failed attended the French class in the morning, and the Latin class in the middle of the day, and for the rest of the time he attended Mr. Speers' school. Another attended the whole day; but he is only a young boy, and failed to attend for the examination one afternoon. He might have passed otherwise. The two others were attending me all the time and failed through want of merit.

Mr. Adam
 Speers, &c.

Mr. ADAM SPEERS, R.Sc., recalled.

10050. Mr. O'SHEA.—What is your salary?—My salary comes from various sources. As a teacher in connection with the National Board, I have the highest position—first of first—and good service salary, so that I get, as salary, from the Board £71 a year. I get £30 a year endowment from the Sullivan trustees, about £100 a year as school fees from my pupils, and besides I have results fees which vary in amount. When I taught classical and French my results fees amounted to nearly £70 a year; now they are from £40 to £50. Altogether, from the National school, my income is about £230 a year. And from my connection with the Department of Science and Art for the last 14 years my average income may have been £90 a year. This year, my results show alone from the Department amount, as I have mentioned, to £131.

10041. Are your servants paid out of the endowment?—I have two servants who get £8 a year each from the endowment; the principal of the infant school, and the principal of the female school, also receive each an endowment from the Sullivan fund, but the assistants in the infant school, and the assistant in the female school, get no endowment.

10042. Father O'Lavery alleges that there are a number of children either going to no school or attending school very irregularly about Holywood—is that so?—Well, I think that is not peculiar to Holywood.

10043. Is it so in Holywood?—It is so. There are a number of children going about in Holywood, as in every other town, that cannot be got to attend school.

10044. Do you think that could be remedied by the appropriation of additional funds out of the Sullivan bequest?—I do not think that would entirely remedy it. My opinion is that Holywood is a town better attended to, in the matter of education, than any other town of the same population in Ireland, and I think that the clergy of Holywood are exceedingly active in endeavouring to get the children of the poor educated. It is, perhaps, to that mainly that the happy state of matters which exists, is due.

Sept. 26, 1855.
Mr. Adam
Spence, s. 103.

Mr. WILLIAM J. ANDERSON, recalled.

Mr. William
J. Anderson.

10045. CHAIRMAN.—You wish to make a further statement?—Yes. Father O'Lavery stated that the credit of the successful pupils of the Upper School as the Intermediate examination did not belong to the Upper School, but belonged to the Lower school; and that he had heard long ago of the ability of the most successful pupil who was sent up at that examination. That pupil became a free pupil at the opening of the Upper School, and he attended it for six hours a day until a few weeks ago, and all his education has been received there except such as he has obtained in Mr. Spence's Science and Art classes. Of the other eight sent in, only one had any connection with the Lower School. There is also another statement that I have to make that I did not put clearly before you—another reason why the success of the Upper School has not been good. The evidence of the previous witness led me to dwell chiefly on that unfortunate prejudice existing among the higher classes, but in addition I wish to express my belief that the number of teachers is not sufficient to conduct all the classes, which are necessary for Intermediate Examinations, in the six different subjects proposed to be taught, no matter how few the pupils are. I have always amongst my pupils representatives of the various grades; and, since I teach single-handed four different subjects to the different grades in those subjects, I think I am justified in expressing my belief that we are short of hands in the school, and require more money. I suggested that more money could be obtained by directing our arrangements to attract the higher classes who could pay higher fees. Then a number of teachers could be had sufficient to teach all the grades in all the subjects, and thus not only the higher but the lower classes of the community would have a better opportunity of education than at present.

Rev. CHARLES JAMES McALESTER, recalled.

Rev. Charles J.
McAlester.

10046. CHAIRMAN.—Do you wish to make a further statement?—Yes; I desire to say that there was no opposition ever offered to our scheme, so far as I know by the Roman Catholics. I also wish to point out that the play grounds of the Upper and National schools are quite distinct. If it were necessary to erect a wall between them, we should do so at once. At present we have only two teachers; but we are quite ready to employ more, and, if the school had been larger, we would have had additional teachers as now; we have the means, and are willing to use them. When I said that the properties of the National School pupils was unusually small, I had not present to my mind the number that were in for French in the morning; I spoke only of the pupils that attend regularly during the day. I also wish to correct Mr. O'Lavery about the Committee. The arrangement was not one clergyman, and two laymen, but the minister of religion and one layman from each congregation; the number of the Committee is ten.

10047. Of what denominations are they?—Protestant Episcopalians; Presbyterians of the General Assembly, doubly represented for their two churches; and the Methodists; and I myself belong to the Non-subscribing Presbyterians. The laymen represent six Churches.

10048. Do you yourself keep a private school?—I do.

10049. Is that for the sons of the gentry?—Yes, of merchants and others.

10050. Mr. O'SHEAGHNESS.—Is that largely attended?—I wish to limit the number to twelve, but I have at present sixteen.

10051. What are your school hours?—Only from 10 to 1 o'clock, three hours in the day.

10052. What fees do you charge?—Two guineas per quarter.

10053. Do a good many of the children of the shopkeepers and middle classes go to the Sullivan primary school?—A good many. There are children of all classes there. The children of the labouring class pay one penny a week; others pay 2s. 6d., and others 5s. a quarter.

10054. Is there a pretty large number of children in the National School paying 5s. a quarter?—Yes.

Mr. JOHN ANDERSON, recalled.

Mr. John
Anderson.

10055. CHAIRMAN.—Do you wish to add anything further?—I wish to say that the memorial I have mentioned was signed by all the magistrates in the neighbourhood with one exception; by the Bishop, and all the clergy in the parish of all denominations with one exception, by all the Town Commissioners except two; and by 250 residents of the more educated classes; and I would call attention to this passage in it:—

"That it appears to memorialists upon a perusal of the petition's wish, and the documents directed to be read thereon, and from the fact that in his lifetime he founded institutions in connexion with the Royal Academic Institution of Belfast, which he commanded as bishopric-scholar as also from his letter to James Gibson Esq., &c. dated the 29th December 1835, in which he says that he regarded that Institution as having been the first great "National School" established in Ireland, that memorialists plain and obvious meaning could only be by his voluntary bequest to provide a higher education, like that given in the Institution, in a separate building, for people who had been first trained in elementary schools."

That your memorialists are of opinion that vested in the trustees are with the most absolute discretion, they will best shew the responsibility of administering the fund by applying the whole of the secondary money in conformity with the foregoing expressed wish of the residents who have testified their deep interest by attending their sittings. That a despatch representing the foregoing views will, at any time arranged, visit upon the trustees to confer with them in regard to the propositions contained in this memorial.

 Mr John

In addition to the matter of the site, I wish to make this objection to the scheme. The course consists of the ancient classics, comprising Greek and Latin; of modern languages, comprising French and German; and also of English Composition, Mathematics, and Science as taught by the Sciences and Art Department. As I understand it, "English Composition" keeps the teachers as they can only teach "Composition," and "Mathematics and Science" taught as natural also injure the school.

Rev. Richard
 R. Coote, A.B.

REV. RICHARD HENRY COOTE, A.B., examined.

10066. CHAIRMAN.—You are the Rector of Donaghadee?—I am.

10067. How long have you held that position?—About two years.

10068. Are you acquainted with the circumstances of the endowment of Donaghadee school?—To a certain extent I am.

10069. Of what does the endowment consist?—It consists of an annuity of £18 3s 4d left by the late Countess of Mount-Alexander for the payment of a master, also of a sum of £27 13s 10d a year, left for the clothing of 30 free boys who are in the school; and of a further sum of £9 4s 8d a year which was left for the purpose of apprenticing some of the boys to Protestant tradesmen.

10070. It is exclusively a Church school?—There is no restriction to any other denomination, but practically it is a Church school, and such was, I believe, the design of the founder.

10071. Are all the pupils obliged to learn the Church Catechism?—If anyone objects it is not compulsory. There are some Methodists in the school, and also some Presbyterians. I would admit a child of any denomination.

10072. Who are the trustees of the school?—The Lord Bishop of Down, and the Vice-General of the diocese, for the time being.

10073. Are there any subscriptions received in aid of the endowment?—The patron, Mr. D. Delacherois, of Donaghadee, gives half the requisites for the school. There is also a sum of £2 a year which I should have mentioned before. It was left, by the late Mr. Daniel Delacherois, towards the repairs of the school, and whatever is required in the way of repairs, after that money is spent, the present Mr. Delacherois pays for; and he also supplies fuel for the school.

10074. Who appoints the master?—The master is appointed by the patron and the clergyman of the parish, subject of course to the approval of the Erasmus Smith's Board, which we have lately joined.

10075. Does the school receive a grant from the Erasmus Smith's Board?—Yes, £28 6s 8d a year.

10076. What free pupils are there?—We must have 30 boys free, according to Lady Mount-Alexander's will.

10077. Is the school entirely a day school?—Yes.

10078. The master's salary is £20 Irish?—He gets that from the endowment, and he also receives the £28 6s 8d granted by the Erasmus Smith's Board.

10079. What other outgoings are there?—£27 13s 10d is expended upon the clothing of the free boys, who each gets a suit of clothes every year.

10080. How many of them are there?—30 is the full number.

10081. Is there any other sum spent on their clothing?—No.

10082. It is a primary school?—Yes.

10083. Then it has, as an Erasmus Smith's school, some privileges connected with the Blue Coat School in Dublin?—The pupils can compete for the exhibitions in the Blue Coat Hospital, Dublin, and also for the Henderson free scholarships in Dundalk.

10084. Do many go up to compete?—We have not as yet had any, under the present arrangement. The school is availed of by the very poorest people in the town, and their children are not able to remain long enough at school, because their parents want them to go to work for themselves.

10085. Is the £9 4s 8d a year expended in appearance fees?—Yes, every year.

10086. Where are the children apprenticed?—To small tradesmen in Donaghadee. In fact the endowment is rather too small for the purpose.

10087. Is it ever supplemented by people in the neighbourhood?—That has not been done in my time.

10088. Do you keep the accounts of the institution?—No.

10089. Who keeps the accounts?—The master keeps the accounts which are very simple. Mr. Delacherois always pays the money upon my signature.

10090. Although the Bishop of Down is nominally a trustee of the school I believe he has never acted in that capacity?—So I understand.

10091. Is the supply of books in the school adequate?—Yes.

10092. Is the school regularly inspected?—Yes; by Mr. Bailein, the Inspector of the Erasmus Smith's Board.

10093. Has he reported favourably of it?—Yes.

10094. The report made as to the school by the Assistant Commissioner in 1855 was?—

"The spelling books in this school are in a lamentably worn state, some not fit for use. As there were no boys attending, I could see none of the books, but from the account given by the master, I should think the supply was deficient. The master has no roll, and with his usual he could hardly be expected to supply one himself."

Does that description still apply?—Not at all. All that had been remedied long since.

10095. At that time there was no grant received from the Erasmus Smith's Board?—No; and the master was not of a very high order.

10096. How many boys are there in the school at present?—There are forty-seven.

10097. Are there any girls?—There are two at present.

10098. Are there any other primary schools in the town?—Yes, there are three National schools.

10099. Under whose management are they?—Two are under Presbyterian, and one under Methodist management.

10100. Is there not another under Roman Catholic management?—No; and it seems hardly necessary there are so very few Roman Catholics in Donaghadee. There is no resident Roman Catholic clergyman in the town.

MR. JAMES CHARLES, examined.

Mr. James
 Charles.

10101. CHAIRMAN.—You are master of the Donaghadee Endowed School?—Yes.

10102. How long have you been the master there?—Three years.

10103. You keep the accounts of the school?—Yes; the money is paid by Mr. Delacherois, the accounts being signed by the recter.

10104. Is the school of all under the control of the vestry, or of the parish authorities?—It is not. Any one who wishes to do so can visit the school.

10105. Is the school progressing?—It is rising very much. The average daily attendance was only twenty-two when I was appointed, and I have now between forty and fifty pupils. I may mention that there was no master of the school in connexion with the Erasmus Smith's Board before me.

REV. THOMAS JORDAN, B.D., examined.

Sept. 26, 1878.

Rev. Thomas
Jordan, B.D.

10096. CHAIRMAN.—You are the Rector of Magherafelt?—Yes; I became rector of Magherafelt towards the end of last year.

10097. What is your connection with Balmory's School?—I am a co-ventor of that school, with the agent of the Westlight Salters' Company. It is at present an intermediate school, and was founded by Hugh Balmory, esq., who by his will bequeathed certain property to it in the year 1707. The intention of the testator was that it should be a small boarding school—

“For educating, clothing, boarding, apprenticing, and instructing in prayer and Scripture, children of parents of good report, reduced to poverty. Two old and good men are appointed over the boys as instructors. And if such old men be found defective, or unable to perform such duties he shall be ceased, and another written for to the Presbytery or Synod of Ulster.”

An Act of Parliament was passed about 1711, and the endowment was fixed as a rentcharge of £175 Irish, charged on the Balmory estate, and to be paid to His Grace Hugh Bonville the then Primate of all Ireland, and his successors for ever, for the purposes of—

“Supporting, maintaining, educating, and placing out to trade, twenty-four boys under the trusts, and subject to the sanction as to by testator's will devised.”

10098. Are the pupils all boarders?—No. The school has been changed by various processes. It was carried on for a number of years, in the form in which it was started, under the supervision of Dr. Barnard, Rector of Magherafelt, in the time of Primate Robinson. The amount bequeathed by the testator being supplemented by the profits of a small farm of about ten acres that was procured at a rent. In 1849, the boys in the school were from five to ten in number.

10099. What extra endowment arose from the farm that was taken?—I could not exactly answer what the net income of the farm was. It was worked by the boys to aid in their maintenance.

10100. What rent was paid for it?—In the year 1855, the rent was £16 15s.

10101. Does the school still hold the farm?—No. At that time there was a small rent paid for the charity school-house. The number of boys became less, and there was less interest shown on the part of parents to put their children into this small boarding school. About the year 1855, in the then state of things, the charity would not maintain more than about six boys; and, in consequence, there was very anxious consideration, between the Primate and the Rector of the parish, as to the best course to adopt with regard to it. It would appear, as far as I can make out, that a petition was presented to the Lord Chancellor, about the year 1863, with a view to adapt the testator's wishes more to the then state of things. The school is situated on the estate of the Salters' Company, and in 1864 they built a tasteful, suitable, and good school-house. They also made a certain grant to the school, and it was arranged that the boys were to be accommodated partly by the Primate, and partly by the Salters' Company—in other words, by the Rector of the parish acting for the Primate, and by the agent of the Salters' Company acting for them.

10102. Are they the owners of the property round the school?—They are.

10103. Is the school built on their property?—It is.

10104. Is it on the same site that the old school-house formerly occupied?—Very nearly.

10105. Is the site held by lease to the trustees of the charity?—I could not say.

10107. Are there now any boarders?—The boarding school has been entirely abolished. When the farm was given up it was thought that to give a good day school education to thirty foundation boys was more in accordance with the wishes of the testator, and was also doing more general good than maintaining the same. The present principal of the school is Mr. Kincaid, an M.A. of Cambridge. He was appointed in 1863, and under his stewardship several boys of a higher class have been attending at the school, and on going forth have made good way in life. One has gone to Woolwich, and another to Rugby. Some are medical men, some are clergymen, and others are solicitors, two of the boys at present in the school are preparing for Trinity College. We sent up five candidates to the Intermediate Education Examination, of whom two passed—one in the middle and one in the junior grade.

10108. What are the religious denominations of the pupils?—At present there are on the foundation eleven Presbyterians, two Roman Catholics, and seven Church of Ireland boys. There are also at present about twelve non-foundation boys, who are of various denominations.

10109. What fees are charged to the non-foundation boys?—They pay 10s a quarter. Those who have made their way as doctors, clergymen, solicitors, and at other professions, have all boys whose education was paid for by their relations.

10110. Are there any pay boarders at present?—No, the principal of the school formerly had boarders, whom he brought with him, when he came from London.

10111. The provision in the testator's will that—would seem to imply that this was intended to be a Presbyterian school; under the Act of Parliament however—to which you have referred, the Archbishop of Armagh was made, as it were, the paymaster of the school, so that I infer the school was then altered to a Church school, and now it is practically a mixed school?—Yes, it is entirely unsectarian in its present constitution, and as to its being superintended by the Archbishop, there does not seem, so far as I can make out from the parochial records, to have been any change in the constitution. The history of the school does not appear in the parochial books until after the Act of Parliament, which seems to have been what really gave potency to the testator's wishes, and in that Act the clause with regard to the manager and conductor of the school being the Primate of Armagh, is very plain. The only change which appears to have taken place, was effected by an order from the Court of Chancery, on a petition forwarded with the approval, or at the instance, of the then Primate and the Salters' Company, about 1863, and then the arrangement was that half the foundation boys should be accommodated by the Primate and the other half by the Salters' Company. There is abundant evidence to show that the school as then constituted was not suited to the times and circumstances of the place; and the object of the amendment was to give effect to the testator's wishes and to make the school of more advantage to the people of Magherafelt.

10112. What proceedings were taken with the view of obtaining the sanction of the Court of Chancery to the scheme for the management of the school?—I could not find out exactly from the parochial records; but, immediately after that, a new school house, and a commodious dwelling house were built by the Salters' Company—very tasteful, nice and suitable houses—and shortly after, in 1865, the present principal of the school, a graduate from the University of Cambridge, was appointed.

10113. Have you any other facts to bring before us?—One of the arrangements of the school is that I as the clergyman of the parish should visit the school one day in the week for the religious instruction of the Church children, which is conducted in a separate room; and if the minister of the Presbyterian body or the Roman Catholic priest would apply each could have the same amount of time in the same room on his own day for the instruction of the members of his own denomination. A short time since the school was visited by the members of the Salters' Company who made a careful investigation as to its progress. As I mentioned already they assist us very largely, and they take a very lively interest in the welfare of the school.

10114. What amount did they spend on the new school-house?—About £800; and then the entire working expenditure of the school which is from £300 to £400 a year is also paid by them with the exception of the old endowment namely, the £175 Irish which I presume is paid to the Salters' Company as they pay all the school expenses.

Mr Henry
Kimble, &c.

Mr. HENRY KIMBLE, M.A., Cantab., examined.

10117. Chairman.—You are the master of Balmes's school, Magherafelt?—Yes.

10118. How long have you been so?—For nearly fifteen years—since 1845.

10119. Do the accounts of the school pass through your hands?—Formerly the school fees were paid into the Salters' Company's office, and were handed over to me by their clerk; but under a recent arrangement I am to receive all the fees myself. Of course the salary is paid to me from the office.

10120. What salary do you get?—£150 a year, a house, and some other advantages.

10121. An allowance I suppose for fuel and things of that sort?—Yes, amounting to about £30 a year.

10122. What do the school fees amount to?—They will be about £35 a year, or rather more.

10123. You brought some boarders with you from London?—Yes, but when they left, there were none of the same class to replace them. I would not take any other than the class I was accustomed to receive before.

10124. Did they pay £50 a year each?—Their bills were more frequently £80 a year than £50.

10125. Are you anxious to receive boarders?—I have always been so; but I find it very difficult, for several reasons, to get them. Amongst, a first class school, is in the neighbourhood; and Mr. Perds, the master of a neighbouring parish, takes private pupils.

10126. Where were you educated yourself?—At Shrewsbury and Cambridge.

10127. You took your degree?—Yes, M.A.

10128. Is Balmes's a classical school?—Yes.

10129. Have you sent any pupils up to Trinity College, Dublin?—A cousin in Belfast, who was formerly with me, passed through Trinity College. Two of my pupils, who are scholars, and many other boys, whom I have lost sight of, have done well in the world as professional men.

10130. Have you sent any pupils to the Queen's College?—No; we have no connection with the Queen's College.

10131. Did you send up any candidates to the Intermediate Education Examination?—Yes two, two of whom were successful, one in the middle grade and one in the junior. We might have had more, but candidates unfortunately broke out in my house and we had to close the school for nearly two months. That interfered considerably with the working of the school.

10132. Is the school inspected at regular intervals?—An examiner is appointed each year by the Salters' Company, and he gets £3 3s for the examination.

10133. Who is so appointed?—The best qualified graduate in the neighbourhood, whose services can be procured by the visitors.

10134. You have no means of contrasting the capabilities of your pupils with those of the pupils of 10135. Do you keep the accounts of the school as do the Salters' Company keep them?—The accounts are kept at the Salters' Company's office in Hagley-street.

10142. Do you wish to make any further statement?—I merely desire to add, in reference to the petition to the Lord Chancellor, that it was forwarded at the instance of the Primate and the Salters' Company, and it appears to have been justified by the report of the former Endowed Schools Commission, which said:—

"The school having been founded 186 years ago, and under limitations extremely precise and particular, it is scarcely so to be wondered at, that the change of time, manners and prices, has rendered the original scheme in a great extent obsolete, and given rise to many anomalies."

These words appear to me to imply the matter very accurately, and that report preceded the petition by, I think, about three years.

other schools, except by their success at the Intermediate examinations?—None.

10136. Can you give us the particulars of the stipendium upon the school, in addition to your own salary and allowance?—There is an assistant master who is paid £50 a year, and a monitor £6, the press costs to £10 annually; the examiner is paid £3 3s, books and stationery cost about £20 a year, and clothes £50.

10137. That is the clothing for the foundation boys?—Yes.

10138. Is that sufficient to clothe them?—That is for clothes alone. Their boots cost about £3 10s and caps about £2 10s.

10139. It appears that the original endowment which was only £160 is very largely supplemented by the Salters' Company?—Yes. And I may also mention that, during the last visit of the deputation of the Company, we applied for an inspection of the school, in the hope that it would raise the standard of the Institution. The Company have at present under consideration the idea of sending a boy to Trinity or some other of the Colleges, and also of building an extra school-room. We find it rather noisy sometimes for three masters to be working in one room.

10140. Is the assistant master a college man?—No.

10141. As long as you have been connected with the school it has been a mixed school?—Yes.

10142. There are some Roman Catholics in it at present?—Yes, there are two on the foundation.

10143. Is there any conscience clause?—Yes, that contained in the Intermediate Education Act.

10144. You have separate hours for religious instruction?—Quite so. Mr. Jordan comes on Tuesday morning, and I gave notice to the clergy of the other denominations that they would hold their classes at hours to be arranged mutually between themselves and me.

10145. Did they come?—No, none but Mr. Jordan.

10146. There are Presbyterians of course in the parish?—Yes. The Presbyterians are very much opposed to the school; I do not know why.

10147. How are the non-foundation pupils divided, as regards religion?—The non-foundation are principally Presbyterians or Churchmen, but we have one Roman Catholic amongst them just now.

10148. The School was open to Roman Catholics and gave to all without distinction the benefits of education?—Just so. We have been teaching Classics, Mathematics, French and German, and even Spanish, for the last ten years. I teach Spanish, and I speak French and German, myself.

REV. HENRY DUNCO, A.B., examined.

Sep. 28, 1878.

Rev. Henry
Dunco, A.B.

10145. CHAIRMAN.—What is your connection with the Belfast Trinity Church infant school?—I am the manager.

10146. What endowment has it?—None that I know of.

10147. Where is the school held?—In a room beside the church.

10148. Is the school-house held on lease, or is it freehold?—The church and two school houses were erected by a Mr. Wilson, on a piece of ground taken by him for the purpose.

10149. In where are they now vested?—In the name Mr. Wilson, who is still living, and is upwards of ninety years of age. Three of his sons, and the Rev. Dr. McDermott, his son-in-law, are co-trustees with him, so that there are five trustees.

10150. The school-house having been granted for educational purposes constitutes an endowment. Is there any other?—Not that I ever heard of. Miss Wilson, a sister of the gentleman who built the school, took a very great interest in everything connected with the church and the schools. During her life she paid a sum of £30 a year towards the salary of the schoolmistress of the infant school, and that amount continued to be paid by her brother for a good many years after she died, and I was told, I cannot say by whom, that the money was paid under Miss Wilson's will, but that a discretionary power was vested in her brother as to whether he should continue to pay it or not. I think I heard that from Mr. Wilson himself. The money, however, has not been paid for about ten years.

10151. Have you examined Miss Wilson's will to see what its exact provisions are?—I never have done so, because I had every confidence in the trustees, who are honestable, sprightly men.

10152. Mr. CHAIRMAN.—Was the £30 a year paid in your time?—Yes.

10153. When the payments ceased did you make any inquiry about it?—Up to the time I was appointed to the parish the schools were under the Church Education Society, they were then placed under the National Board. My predecessors were obliged to look for subscriptions in all directions to maintain the schools, and they always applied for and got this money. The gentleman who represented the trustees was the eldest son of Mr. Wilson, and, without saying anything very distinctly, he conveyed to me that this support would not be required for the schools when they were placed under the National Board. So I never thought of asking or looking for it.

10154. Do you receive from Mr. Wilson yearly, or at intervals, any sum for the benefit of the surrounding poor?—No.

10155. Since the cessation of this payment for the teacher has there been any sum at all expended by him in reference to the school—the maintenance or rebuilding?—We were enlarging one of the schools about two or three years ago, and the old gentleman voluntarily sent us a subscription of £50.

10156. You mean the brother of Miss Wilson?—Yes.

10157. When you use the word "voluntarily," do you mean that in sending it he stated he sent it as a voluntary contribution; or, that he sent it unasked?—We had a conversation with his eldest son, Mr. Robert M. Wilson, as representing the trustees. I told him we were enlarging the schools, and what the cost of the work would be. He said that his father wished to give a subscription of £20 towards it. We had not to ask him for money—he offered it.

10158. Who are the trustees?—William Wilson; Robert Mackay Wilson, (his eldest son); John Wilson; another son whose christian name I do not know, and Dr. Macflewman.

10159. Do you know under what instrument they were made trustees?—The church was built by old Mr. Wilson himself, and he had the deed drawn up appointing the trustees, and for some of these then appointed some of the present ones have been substituted.

10160. In the report of the last committee, this school is referred to in the following terms:—

"Belfast Trinity Church Infant School. Foundation.—Samuel Wilson, will proved, 13th October, 1866, £2,000. Not several moneys from trust funds, £78. Object, for finishing infant school-house, and assisting in various connected with it, as testatrix's brother may consider likely to benefit surrounding poor, paying part of teacher's salary, if so (her brother) approved."

—That is the discretionary power I speak of. [The Committee are adjourned.]

TWENTY-SEVENTH DAY—TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 30, 1878.—11 o'CLOCK, A.M.

Sep. 29, 1878.

In the Town Hall, Limerick.

Present:—LORD JUSTICE FITZGERBON; LORD RANDOLPH CHURCHILL, M.P.; and ANDREW SEARLE HART, Esq., M.D.; with G. W. BRADSHAW, Esq., Assistant Secretary.

Very Rev. THOMAS BUSBURY, M.A., Dean of Limerick, examined.

Very Rev.
Thomas
Busbury, M.A.

10161. LORD JUSTICE FITZGERBON.—I believe you are ex officio a trustee of the Bewellane charity, Blue School, Limerick?—I am.

10162. How long have you been connected with it?—Since October, 1873.

10163. What is the amount of the endowment?—It amounts, at present, to £42 8s. 6d. per annum.

10164. Do you take any part in the management of the institution?—Of the teaching, yes.

10165. Describe what the institution is?—We call it the "Cathedral Grammar School"—it is conducted on the principles of an ordinary Grammar school—it gives a classical and scientific education.

10166. Where is the school situated?—In a building adjoining the Cathedral, formerly called the Blue School.

10167. Does it occupy the entire of that building?—No; there is a school-room and a house attached to it, called the Master's house, but the Master has not resided there as it is situated in a disagreeable part of the town, and the house has been let to the Dean and Chapter of the Cathedral by the agent of the charity.

10168. Is it let at a rent?—Yes, at £5 a year.

10169. How is it used by the Dean and Chapter?—The vulgar inhabit it.

10170. What is the letting value of the house, supposing it were let in the ordinary way?—We pay £5 a year for it, which we consider a high rent, as we got it in a bad state of repair.

10171. Is it kept in repair by anyone?—Well, it ought to be kept in repair by the agent of the Convent Charity.

10172. Out of what fund?—Out of the funds of the school, I presume.

10173. That is, out of the £42 8s. a year?—Yes.

10174. Has any expenditure been made upon it of late years for the purpose of repair?—Yes; from time to time, but it requires more.

10175. Would the expenditure necessary for the purpose of keeping it in repair exhaust the £5 a year rent?—Decidedly it would, and at the present moment there are I think, two years' rent unpaid by the Dean and Chapter of the Cathedral, and what we propose is that the arrears due by us should be expended on the repair of the house, because it is of very little value to us until some repairs are executed.

Sept. 26, 1875.

Very Res.
Thomas
Dunbury, Esq.

10179. Is that way, would not the charity instead of gaining a profit from the house be rather at a loss by it?—Well, the house is in such a bad state of repair that in my opinion it ought to be taken down altogether.

10180. Do you know how this site is held?—I imagine it is Cathedral ground given to the charity many years ago.

10181. I understand you to say that only one room is used for the school?—Only one.

10182. Is that room in the same house in which the Verger lives?—It is, but it is not connected with the Verger's apartments by any passage. There are a stairs and passage independent of the Verger's house going to it.

10183. Is the room suited for the purpose of a school?—It is a fine room, but the situation is considered bad.

10184. What is the Crown charity?—It is a charity one of the objects of which is to provide for widows—there are a number of widows receiving £8 a year each from it.

10185. Who are the trustees of the Crown Charity?—The Bishop of Limerick, myself as Dean of Limerick, and the Rev. Mr. Hamilton the Rector of St. John's parish.

10186. Are there only three trustees?—I think not more.

10187. How are they appointed?—They are ex-officio trustees.

10188. Have the trustees any fixed time for meeting?—No.

10189. Do they meet at all?—Very seldom indeed.

10190. How is the money, out of which the charity is supported, obtained?—Out of house property. Mr. George Dartnell is the agent and collects the rents.

10191. After the money has been collected how is it distributed?—Mr. Dartnell pays the annuities to the widows.

10192. The annuities are not paid through the trustees?—No.

10193. Does Mr. Dartnell also pay the contribution to the Blue School?—Yes.

10194. Does he pay a fixed proportion of the entire income of the charity, or a fixed sum of money to the school?—A fixed sum of money. The school is a distinct branch of the charity. There was a certain property allocated under the will of Mrs. Crown, the founder of the charity, for the purpose of the school, and it at present produces £48 8s. per annum.

10195. How are the boys admitted to the school?—Generally by application to me.

10196. Are any qualifications necessary?—None whatever.

10197. Do they pay anything, or is it a free school?—There are some free pupils, but the majority pay school fees. When I came to Limerick, as Dean, in 1872, I found there was no school at all, and the funds were in a very bad state indeed. The property had been very much mismanaged, and there was no money to pay the schoolmaster. I engaged a master, and I myself guaranteed to him £100 a year, he to get as many paying pupils as he could. This was I think in the beginning of 1873. I engaged Mr. Hamilton, and he for a time conducted the school at the Blue School room. But some of the parents of the children objected to the position of the school, it being in the old part of the city; he therefore moved to Thomas-street and took a house. On his removal there he obtained a considerable increase to the number of pupils, I think when he left it he had thirty-five boys, but on consideration, I thought it was a step that should not have been taken, to move the school from its original position, and I determined that it should be conducted in the Blue School room again, and Mr. Switzer was appointed the master. He is a very fully qualified man, an M.A. of Trinity College, Dublin.

10198. When was the school re-established at the Blue School?—In August, 1873.

10199. How long had it ceased to exist as a school before 1873, when you came to Limerick?—I cannot tell how long.

10200. You are aware, I presume, that the original trusts of the charity are, to educate, clothe and feed to twelve twenty poor Protestant children, to be nominated by the grantor's relations in the manner specified by her will?—I was not aware of that.

10201. Is there any interference now, or any superintention, on the part of the family of Mrs. Crown as to the affairs of the charity?—None whatever—there is no interference whatever by anyone in the management of the school. It is left entirely in my hands.

10202. Has it any connexion now with the Cathedral?—Our choir boys are taught there free.

10203. How many boys altogether are taught in the school?—Sixteen.

10204. Of those sixteen boys, how many belong to the choir?—I do not know. I should explain that I have been absent from Limerick since May 1878, and the management and superintendence of the school have devolved on the curate of the parish, the Rev. Mr. Goode. Before I went away we had eight choir boys free pupils.

10205. How are the free pupils admitted?—On my nomination.

10206. Is there any limit to the number you have power to nominate?—I do not think there is.

10207. Right is the number of free boys you actually appoint?—Right is the number we provide free education for. I may mention that the Dean and Chapter pay the schoolmaster £4 a year for each free boy, but the boys do not pay.

10208. Out of what fund is the £4 a year paid by the Dean and Chapter?—Out of the Dean and Chapter fund.

10209. Then out of the sixteen boys in the school eight are free and eight are paying pupils?—What I have mentioned was under the old regime before I left Limerick. I know there are sixteen boys now, but I do not know how many of them are free, and how many paying. I have heard that some of the choir boys have left the school, not liking the position of it.

10210. Is there any fixed rate of payment for paying pupils?—When Mr. Hamilton was master the scale was from 2s. to £8 a year.

10211. You mentioned that you guaranteed the master £100 a year?—Yes, but that is at an end. When Mr. Hamilton came, I guaranteed him £100 a year, allowing him to get as many paying pupils as he could. I found he was so successful, and obtained such a number of pupils, that I told him the school should be self-supporting—he receiving £35 a year from the charity and £33 from the Dean and Chapter—and I withdrew my guarantee.

10212. Then the master now gets whatever fees he receives from the pupils, £33 from the Dean and Chapter, and £35 from the charity?—Mr. Switzer does not get so much now, as so many boys do not attend.

10213. Among the property stated in 1877 as belonging to the charity, I find £111 ls. 6d. per annum, interest on £290 lent by the trustees to the Dean and Chapter—do you know whether that money has been repaid?—I think that was paid by the Church Temporalities Commissioners to the Commissioners of Charitable Bequests, on behalf of the Dean and Chapter, when they abandoned the church property.

10214. Originally the Mayor, and the Recorder of Limerick were trustees ex-officio, along with the Bishop and Dean, I believe there is now no Recorder of Limerick?—No.

10215. Does the Mayor take any part in the management of the charity?—I think not. He does not interfere with the school, I know.

10216. What is the class of education given in the school?—The ordinary grammar-school education—classics, mathematics, and English.

10217. To what class is life do the boys belong?—A good class in life—professional men's sons.

10218. They are not destitute boys!—Certainly not. We have no destitute boys there at all.

10219. Do any of these come under the description of poor children?—No.

10220. What class are the choir boys taken from? They are taken from a good class too. We have had some professional men's sons among the choir boys.

10221. Lord R. CHURCHILL.—They are educated too?—Yes. The Dean and Chapter pay £4 a year for each of them, but the boys pay nothing.

10222. The children I presume are all Protestants?—No.

10223. To what denominations do they belong?—There are two Roman Catholics at present in the school—I wanted to qualify fit to obtain prizes under the Intermediate Education Act.

10224. The school is entirely a day-school?—Entirely a day school.

10225. Who controls the master and superintends the school?—I do when at home, and my estate when I am absent.

10226. Lord Justice FINCHAM.—During the time you were at home, had you any fixed time for attending?—I had. There were fixed days for scriptural instruction—I think Friday was the day on which I used to attend myself; but I believe that Mr. Garde attends on Thursdays.

10227. Is the school inspected at any fixed period by any one?—It is never inspected.

10228. Do you keep any minutes or accounts?—We keep a Roll-book. I produce it.

10229. This book is, I presume, kept by the master?—Yes.

10230. The accounts of receipts and expenditure I suppose are kept by Mr. Dartnall, the agent?—Yes.

10231. Have you any system of audit?—I think Mr. Dartnall calls the trustees together, sometimes, for the purpose of auditing the accounts, but I do not think he has any fixed time for doing so. I very frequently see the accounts—he shows them to me.

10232. I see the Roll-book begins in August, 1873, in which month there seems to have been nine boys in attendance. It being August I presume there was a thin attendance?—Yes.

10233. In January, 1874, the numbers were—first class, 3 boys, second class, 13, third class, 11, fourth class, 1, was that during the time the school was in Thomas street?—Yes.

10234. In January, 1875, the numbers were—first class, 4, second class 9, third class, 7, fourth class, 5?—Yes.

10235. In January, 1876, there were—first class, 6; second class, 8, third class, 11, fourth class, 12; so that the number was increasing?—Yes.

10237. According to the present management of the school, in what way is it a charitable institution?—I do not exactly know how to answer that question. The fact of the matter is that I found there was nobody to manage the school at all, and I took upon myself to try and get it up. I asked no questions about it. I had there was about £35 a year available for the Master, so we controlled me, and I was not prevented doing what I thought right in the matter.

10238. Lord R. CHURCHILL.—In 1873, when you came to Limerick, you said the property was badly managed—who did you find managing it?—The gentleman who was then agent is dead. I should mention that the Widows' branch of the charity was well managed—at least they were always paid.

10239. The Widows' branch of the charity appears to have been alive—they were getting their annuities, but when you came to Limerick in 1873, you found the school abandoned. By what process did you get into possession?—I did not take any steps until I found there was no school. I then asked Mr. Dartnall, who had been appointed agent, I think about the time I came, whether there was any fund for the purpose of the school, he found that there was this fund, and I said "give me what help you can and we will try and get up a school." Then I guaranteed £100 a year to the Master and I got from Mr. Dartnall £30 a year in instalments—£10, £25, and £15—according as he had it, to help me to make up the £100. After Mr. Dartnall looked up the property it yielded more, and he found he was able to make up £42 a year towards the school. Then it was brought into some shape, and since then he has been able to pay £25, or £30, towards the schoolmaster's salary, and £4 a year to the caretaker to wash, clean, and brush up the school-room.

10240. You became Dean in 1873?—Yes.

10241. Who was your predecessor?—Dr. Day, now the Bishop of Caid.

10242. How long had he been Dean?—Two years I think.

10243. He was an ex-officio trustee?—Yes.

10244. The Bishop was also a trustee?—Yes.

10245. How long has the present Bishop held his office?—Since 1846. I should mention that when I became Dean in 1873, and for some time previous there was no money whatever applicable to the purpose of the school.

10246. Surely the house must have been there?—Yes, but there was no rent paid.

10247. What was being done by the trustees during that time previous to your appointment?—I cannot give you any information. I asked no questions on the subject.

10248. You found no school in operation?—None—it had ceased.

10249. You say no rent was paid for some time previous—did you make any inquiry who had received the profits of the houses?—I really cannot give any accurate information on the subject.

10250. You are a trustee of the whole Crovan fund?—I am.

10251. Do you ever investigate the accounts of that fund?—I do occasionally.

10252. Did you ever investigate the state of the accounts for back?—No, only from my own time.

10253. From 1873?—Yes. I found then what money there was, applicable to the school.

10254. When you came in 1873, was the whole charity swallowed up in paying the widows?—I do not know.

10255. Do you think there was a surplus?—Yes—there was a surplus as well as I remember, because a good deal of money was laid out on the school. The first thing we had to do was to lay out a considerable sum on it, as it was in a serious state of dilapidation.

10256. Did it occur to you to enquire whether there were any accumulations to the credit of the school?—I presume the surplus I found was from accumulations.

10257. Were those accumulations expended on the school?—Yes, in repairs of the building.

10258. Lord Justice FINCHAM.—Can you tell for how many years the school had been discontinued before 1872?—We knew that in 1857, it was in operation—I know it was kept up for seven years by Rev. Dr. Maugan, one of the Vicars Choral—he, very much to his credit, day after day attended the School, and taught the boys without one penny remuneration.

10259. That was between 1857 and 1872?—Yes.

10260. You found the school had wholly ceased to exist when you came in 1873?—Yes, in consequence I believe, of want of funds. That was my idea.

10261. You found there was some property belonging to it, and certain accumulations which you expended on the building and you then established it on its present basis?—Yes.

10262. At present it is, in fact, a paying school, assisted by the endowment?—Yes.

Age 30 years.

Voy Rev,
Dennis
Barbery, Esq.

10263. The boys can scarcely be called "poor Protestant children" ?—They are not.

10264. LEON B. CORMACK.—Is the school under your sole management?—No one interferes with me at all in the management, but the bishop takes an interest in it.

10265. What do you mean by taking an interest in it?—He asks about it and hears from me how it gets on.

10266. Does he attend the meetings?—He attends the meetings of the trustees of the charity.

10267. Do they ask about the school?—When we meet they ask me about it. They have confidence in my management.

10268. Do you present a report to them?—None.

10269. Are the accounts submitted to them?—Yes, Mr. Darrell hands in the accounts.

10270. Then to all intents and purposes the school is under your sole management and control?—There is no meeting of the Board for the purpose of inquiring into it.—The trustees meet occasionally, and inquire about it.

10271. The trustees meet in reference to the whole charity, not particularly as to the school?—Not particularly as to the school, but the school is spoken about when we meet. They place such confidence in me that I have had the sole management.

10272. Is it known as the Blue School, or as the Cathedral Grammar School?—I call it the Cathedral Grammar School.

10273. When you came to Limerick was it known as such?—No, it was known as the Blue School. I believe the scholars used to wear a blue dress in former times.

10274. In common talk in the town is it now known as the Cathedral Grammar School?—Yes.

10275. Is it exclusively a Church of Ireland school?—Not at all, we do not exclude any boys.

10276. LEON JENNIE FINEGRASS.—You take any boy who comes to the school, no matter of what religion?—Yes. If a boy applies to be admitted I do not ask what religion he belongs to.

10277. LEON B. CORMACK.—Was that always the rule?—No. In Mr. Hamilton's time it was an exclusively Church of Ireland school—that is to say, we admitted no boys but those who would submit to be instructed in the fundamentals of the Church of Ireland. We had no Dissenters even at that time. All the boys were instructed in the doctrines of the Church; but as soon as the Intermediate Education Act was passed, we were desirous of availing ourselves of its advantages, and we now admit all boys who come to us irrespective of religion.

10278. At present I understand you have two Roman Catholic boys in the school?—Yes.

10279. Of course they leave during the time of religious instruction?—I do not know whether they actually leave the school—they can do so, if they like; but it is a large room and they may go to one end of it, instead of leaving the room altogether. The boys who are being instructed in the fundamentals of the Church will perhaps go to a corner. As I said before, I have been absent from Limerick, and I do not know how matters have been managed lately.

10280. I wanted to know whether you, as sole manager, had drawn up any regulations for religious instruction, where the pupils are of mixed religions?—The mixture has only occurred since the date I tell you. I only came back to Limerick yesterday to take up my duties again.

10281. I did not quite gather from the answer you gave to the Lord Justice whether any pupils are being educated in the school free of cost?—The choir boys are educated free of cost to themselves.

10282. They are paid for by the Dean and Chapter?—Yes.

10283. Are there any boys in the school absolutely free?—No.

10284. You have no funds for clothing and apprenticing the pupils?—No.

10285. Do you collect subscriptions towards the support of the school from anyone in the town?—Not a penny.

10286. Do you ever make an appeal for it in a charity sermon?—Never.

10287. Have the funds been sufficient to carry it on?—Yes. I should state that when I graduated the £150 a year to the master, I got some subscriptions. The bishop subscribed, and one or two other gentlemen also promised, but when the school became self-supporting I discontinued taking subscriptions.

10288. Did you ever hear of, or are there in the possession of the trustees, any deeds relating to the school, or any copy of the will of Mrs. Crovet?—Mr. Darrell has all the papers. I have read the will, but I forget all about it.

10289. When you took the management of the school was there any scheme drawn out on paper for its regulation?—Yes, I drew up a form, with the assistance of Mr. Hamilton, the master.

10290. Was that scheme submitted to the trustees of the charity?—No.

10291. Did they ever give their formal consent to the management of the school in this manner?—I do not think they ever did.

10292. Was it ever brought formally before them?—Never, but they knew all about it. They trusted me entirely, and did not interfere with my management. The bishop from time to time gave pecuniary aid, and money for books, at the yearly examinations.

10293. You stated that there were three trustees—the Bishop, the Dean, and the Vicar of St. John's—do you know the origin of the Vicar's being a trustee?—I do not.

10294. Or how long he has been such?—I cannot tell you that.

10295. He does not appear to be mentioned in the will—does he take any part in the management?—Not of the school. He sits in the appointment of widows.

10296. Then, in fact, you are the only acting trustee of the school, and the bishop takes an interest in it?—Yes. He does not often come to visit the school, but he has sometimes done so, he, however, hears constantly from me about the school, and asks me questions, and has always taken a great interest in it.

10297. LEON JENNIE FINEGRASS.—What means of obtaining a grammar school education are there in Limerick?—I do not believe there is another purely classical school in Limerick. I mean a Protestant school. I do not know with regard to Roman Catholic schools.

10298. Then this school now supplies a want not met by any other institution?—Most decidedly. Since Mr. Webb, who had a school here, left, I do not think there has been any Protestant classical school.

10299. What schools are there in Limerick for a middle class commercial education short of classical?—There are Leamy's school, and the Model school.

10300. Both open to Protestants?—Yes.

10301. What means of primary education are there in Limerick?—I can only speak of schools for Protestants. There is a very efficient Protestant school in St. Michael's parish established by Mr. Jacob.

10302. Is that under the National Board?—No, it is exclusively conducted by Mr. Jacob, and managed entirely by him. It has no endowment. There is a school attached to St. John's parish, managed by Mr. Hamilton. I think it has some small endowment. Indeed, I know it has, because Mr. Hamilton proposed an amalgamation of endowments at one time, which we were not able to carry out; he proposed that we should put all together, and have one good control school.

10303. May we take it, that there are, open to poor Protestant children in Limerick, who need primary education, sufficient opportunities for obtaining it?—Certainly. There is an excellent National school quite close to the Blue school. We do not require a primary school at all—we have plenty of them. I have a suggestion to make with regard to the Blue school, and in connection with Dr. Hall's schools also I would suggest that the money available for Hall's schools might be joined with the money available for the support of the Crown school, and by putting the two together we would have a fair nucleus of endowment—say £50 or £90 per annum—and the Bine school might be carried on as a classical school.

10304. Is there a want in Limerick of the means of obtaining a classical education for poor boys of ability?—Yes, I think there is a very great want amongst Protestants. Parents complain that they have to send their sons away in order to obtain education. I do not know any other city of the size of Limerick which is without a Protestant classical school. It is a very great want in Limerick, and I have always considered it so.

10305. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—If it is such a very great want, how is it that the Catholic Grammar School, which supplies such an education, is not more universally attended to?—I think its situation is against it, and for that reason I had in view removing it to another part of the city. I know the position is very much against it, and I am aware as a fact that when the school was brought down there again, and removed from Thomas street several of the people left, not because we had not an efficient master, for I think he is even a more efficient master than the other—but solely on account of the locality. Mr. Switzer is a very highly qualified man—in fact I think his qualifications are unusually high for the school—he is an alumnus of Trinity College, Dublin, a good classical scholar, and a most efficient master in every way. If we could move the school to a good part of the city I am sure we would have a considerable increase in the number of scholars.

10306. Do you know many parents in Limerick who send their sons away in order to obtain a classical education?—I know several who do.

10307. LORD JUSTICE FITZGERALD.—Is there any good boarding school in or near Limerick for Protestants?—Newport school is the nearest.

10308. How far is that from Limerick?—Nine miles.

10309. Then there is Ennis school, I suppose that is the nearest after Newport?—Yes, and there is a school at Tipperary.

10310. Tipperary is still further removed?—It is.

10311. Do you know whether there are any Limerick boys educated in those schools?—Yes, there are Limerick boys at Tipperary school, and I know several who used to go to Newport school.

Sept 26, 1878.
Very Rev.
Thomas
Dunbar, M.A.

Mr. GEORGE A. DARTMOUTH, J.P., examined.

His Grace &
Dartmouth, J.P.

10312. LORD JUSTICE FITZGERALD.—You are the agent of the Crown Charity Bine School and Widows' Fund?—I am.

10313. What books do you keep?—I keep an account of the moneys received, and of how they are disbursed.

10314. Can you let us see the accounts?—Certainly. I produce the Bine School Accounts, which is balanced to September, 1878.

10315. Do you keep separate accounts for the Widows' Charity, and the Bine School?—Certainly, they are quite distinct.

10316. Does the will direct them to be kept distinct?—Yes, under Mrs. Curran's will there are distinct funds apportioned—one for the widows, and the other for the Bine School.

10317. How is it apportioned?—Is a certain property given to make good of the charity, or a certain amount of money?—A certain property is allocated to each.

10318. What does the school property consist of?—A house in Mary street, which is let for £10 a year, and the interest on money invested, which is received through the Commissioners of Charitable Donations and Bequests—£27 8s. 2d. a year—made up of two sums—£21 9s. and £5 12s. 2d. The £5 12s. 2d. is the interest on a sum of £200, which had been lent to the Dean and Chapter, and having been paid off on the passing of the Church Act, was invested in the Three Per Cents. There is also the rent received for the schoolmaster's house, £5 a year.

10319. That makes altogether £42 8s. 2d. a year, which you receive on account of the school property?—Yes.

10320. How long have you been agent for the charity?—About six years.

10321. Can you explain how the rental has fallen off since 1857?—Before I undertook the agency there was another house belonging to the school—and it was perhaps not thoroughly looked after, the rent was allowed to run into arrears for a number of years, and the house at length got into the hands of other people, and was lost to the charity.

10322. Owing to non-collection of the rent, the title was lost by the statute of limitations?—Quite so. I found that it had passed from one person to another, that some of them had laid out money upon it, and that it would cost more to redeem it than it was worth. I considered, and the trustees concurred with me, that it was not worth throwing money away looking for it.

10323. Where is the house?—It is in the bad part of the city—in the Irish town.

10324. How is it occupied?—I think it is occupied by roomkeepers.

10325. What is its worth?—About £10 a year is its letting value.

10326. Did you endeavour to ascertain whether it had been so long occupied, without any rent being paid, that you could not recover it?—I did. It had passed into the hands of so many persons, and the title was in such a complicated state, that I was advised not to take any steps about it, especially as it is a wretched old place—a tumble-down concern altogether.

10327. Is it in a part of the town where there is no prospect of the value improving?—Yes; it is in a lane behind Barrington's Hospital.

10328. Do you know what rent used to be received out of that house?—£10 a year, as well as I remember.

10329. How was the rest of the £27, that they used to get out of house property, made up?—I do not know. I just took it up as I got it—that house was the only thing I missed. I looked often that, but I could not make anything of it.

10330. I perceive that the tenant of the house in Mary street is a Mr. Hustin?—Yes.

10331. How is that house used?—He has a lease of it for sixty years I think. It is a wretched old house, but fortunately he is a handy man—a plumber and slater—and he repairs it and keeps it together. I think at present there is no fear of our losing our interest in it.

10332. What is your opinion, as to the letting value of that house?—£10 a year. The tenant pays the full value for it.

10333. He has a sixty years' lease?—Yes, dated about ten years ago.

10334. From whom was the lease taken?—From the trustees.

10335. Have you a copy of the lease?—I have.

10336. Is there a clause binding the tenant to repair?—There is.

10337. The £5 12s. 2d., which you receive from the Board of Charitable Donations and Bequests, is interest on money which was originally lent by the trustees of the Charity to the Dean and Chapter of Limerick Cathedral?—Yes.

10338. The last item of your annual receipts is £5, the rent of the Schoolmaster's house?—Yes.

10339. Do you know the house?—I do.

Sept. 26, 1875.
Mr George A.
Dartnall, Esq.

10340. Had you anything to do with the letting of it?—I had.

10341. It was let by the trustees to the Dean and Chapter at £5 a year?—The vicarage of the Cathedral lives on it.

10342. Is the house let under a written agreement?—No—under a verbal agreement with the Dean.

10343. You have no documentary evidence of your title?—No. I know the history of the house, but we have no documentary evidence of it.

10344. Is £5 a year the value of it?—I think it is enough for it. It is a sort of place no one would live in, unless some one belonging to the Cathedral. It was formerly the schoolmaster's house.

10345. The first account I find in the book you have headed in, commences on 29th September, 1872?—Yes—that was the time I became agent.

10346. Who had the agency before you?—Mr. Arnold Graves for a few months, and prior to him Mr. John Mahony.

10347. The account begins "Commissioners of Charitable Donations and Bequests, interest, £21 9s." then there is an item of £143 8s. 10d. put down as arrears, what was that?—It came to me from the Commissioners. I fancy it was clearing up the arrears after the Church Act.

10348. It represented arrears of interest on the debt which the Dean and Chapter owed to the Charity?—Yes, I do not know for what period antecedent.

10349. We can easily calculate the period, it would represent about seven years arrears?—About that, I fancy.

10350. Do you know whether, during that time, the Charity had been in existence?—No—I knew nothing of the Charity until I took up the agency.

10351. In the same account there is an item returned as rent and arrears due by the representatives of Bursard, amounting to £161 16s. 3½d. but in your next account that does not appear, did you write it off as unrecoverable?—Yes. I abandoned it altogether. It was the rent of the house I have mentioned and was utterly lost I considered.

10352. On the other side of the account I see your expenditure during the first year was £36 9s. The first item is for quit rent?—Yes, the house in Mary-street is subject to £1 13s. a year.

10353. Payable out of the £104—Yes.

10354. Then there are sundry expenses—a new grate for the school-room £1 10s.; and turf £2 1s. 2d., caretaker £1 18s. 6d. Who was the caretaker?—He was a man named Davis, the vergor.

10355. He was at that time caretaker of the house which he now occupies as tenant?—Yes, he is living in it now.

10356. Then there are poor rates £1 10s.; agents' fees on £36 9s., £1 16s. 6d.—You charge five per cent. agency fees?—Yes.

10357. I find an entry in your first account "cheque to the Dean—£15 14s. 6d."—was that for the purposes of the school?—Yes.

10358. That was all the school got in the year ending 29th September 1873?—Yes.

10359. I see in the next year's account you carry forward a balance of £36 9s. 6d. from the preceding account, which was reduced by £20 8s. 3d. for sundry repairs, and by £5 profitably to W. Brookes—who was he?—That was a man of the name of Brookes who was in occupation of the school-house prior to Davis. He got the £5 as compensation for going out quietly. The charge for repairs was for money expended on that house.

10360. I see that in the same year you paid Mr. Hamilton, who was then the schoolmaster £32 15s. which reduced the balance in hands to £12 14s. 3d.?—Yes.

10361. In the next year you paid him a sum of £35, and your balance stood at £10 1s. 8d.?—Yes.

10362. And Mr. Hamilton after that left, had Mr. Switzer come?—Yes.

10363. Do you take any part in the management of the money which the master receives from pupils?—No.

10364. How do you fix the sum which you pay him?—The Dean and trustees fix the amount. I pay as I am desired.

10365. You pay £35 a year?—Yes.

10366. And you retain the balance to defray quit rent, repairs, agency fees, and other expenses?—Yes. The school fund is about self-supporting now, I should say, and no more.

10367. It enables you to pay a sum of £35 a year to the master?—Yes.

10368. What condition of repair is the school-house in at present?—The house is in tolerably good repair, but I was informed yesterday that the portion of the roof next the Cathedral was looking after—the gutter, or some part of the roof, is leaking.

10369. The house is actually contiguous to the Cathedral?—Yes it is built up against it.

10370. You have no funds to maintain it in repair?—Well, there is a small balance now in hand, and probably that will be absorbed in repairs—I should say it is an even balance now between income and expenditure.

10371. You spend nothing on the building beyond temporary repairs?—That is all.

10372. I observe there is £7 10s. due for arrears of rent by the Dean and Chapter?—Yes, and another year's rent is now due.

10373. Why have you allowed that rent to run into arrears?—I asked the Dean for it, and he told me he would apply to the select vestry—I asked him about it again last night, and he told me he would speak to the proper person, who should pay me, and have it discharged.

10374. Are there funds to pay you?—I cannot tell I do not know anything about their funds.

10375. They are now over two years in arrears?—I know, but of course I don't want to pay as much as the Dean and Chapter; I expect to get the money from them by a little pressure.

10376. You know nothing of the history of the charity during the period between 1857 and 1873?—Nothing.

10377. Except that during that time the statute ran against you with regard to the title to Bursard's house?—Yes.

10378. Did you bring that matter formally before the trustees for their consideration?—I did.

10379. Did they make up their minds, that to take any proceeding would be only throwing good money after bad?—Yes.

10380. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—Do the Dean and Chapter lay claim to the school-house as their own property?—No, it belongs to the Blue Coat Charity and was built with the money of the Charity; but it adjoins the Cathedral.

10381. Is there any doubt about the title to it?—None. It was built near the end of the last century by a Mr. Hoare who had charge of a fund, which he accumulated while the school was in obscurity, and he applied a portion of the fund to the building of the school-house.

10382. Have you got a grant of the site from the Dean and Chapter?—I have not, but I know something about it in the report of the former inquiry.

10383. LORD JAMES FLEMING.—I may tell you that the title appears from the report of the former Commission to be now quite safe; the deed, by which the Dean and Chapter in 1773, granted the site in trust for the Crown Charity Blue School, is registered. Long subsequently to the date of the grant in 1773, the Cathedral authorities wanted to throw down the building as an encroachment on the Cathedral, and on that occasion the title was investigated.

10384. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—What is the amount of the whole Crown endowment?—For the widows' branch there is an annual rental of £200 1s. 3d. from houses and lands, and the Blue School endowment is £48 8s. 2d.

10385. How many widows receive benefit from the charity?—There are at present, I think, twenty-five.

10386. LORD JUSTICE FRYER.—Have you ever endeavored to find out what became of the other houses mentioned in the grant of Mrs. Craven—the granted five houses in trust for the school?—They were lost to the charity during the last century.

10387. Did you ever try to identify the house property, which you are now applying to the purposes of the Widows' Fund, in order to see whether, in point of fact, any of it belongs to the school branch of the charity?—I do not think it does. The houses, of which the rents are applied for the widows, being to the Widows' Fund. I am quite certain they have not got mixed.

10388. Then within your memory there were only two houses remaining of the original trust property to the school?—That is all.

VON CHARLES HARR, M.A., Archdeacon of Limerick, examined.

10389. LORD JUSTICE FRYER.—Do you know anything of the present state of the Craven Charity Blue School?—No. The school has always been considered as the parochial school of St. Mary's, and was under the management of the Dean, or the Rector of that parish. There is no parochial school, strictly speaking, for St. Mary's, but this has always been treated as the parochial school, and the Dean, as Rector, has always had complete the entire management of it.

10390. I observe that there were, in 1857, nine boys taught in the school, all free?—Yes. At that time the management of the institution appears to have been most unsatisfactory, as you will see by Dean Kirwan's evidence. It was then strictly a poor school, and the education given was very primary indeed. A primary school for boys is not wanted in that neighbourhood, because there are several good primary schools in the place. There is Dr. Hall's school, in the main street, and the Villiers' schools in St. Martin's parish—a male and female school, both sanctioned under the National Board and situated quite close to the Bow Lane school, so that there is no want of schools for primary education in the district.

10391. Do you know how the Bow Lane School fell into disrepute, after 1857?—I think it fell into disrepute in consequence of non-attendance of the pupils, there being better schools in the neighbourhood.

10392. In consequence of that there was, in fact, no school there for some time?—Yes; until the present Dean took it up. I do not know why the late Dean did not do so.

10393. You refer to the present Bishop of Cashel?—Yes.

10394. He may not have known anything about it?—Oh, yes—I think it could hardly have escaped his notice, but I know that before he became Dean of Limerick it was in disrepute. For some time there was a very good school carried on by the Rev. Dr. Mangin, one of the vicars-choral. He gave the boys a classical education—teaching them himself, assisted by Canon Meredith. At that time the school was held in a room within the Cathedral itself. He kept it up for some years, attending to it gratuitously, in order to get a better description of boys into the choir, by giving them a free classical education.

10395. Can you tell how far that succeeded?—Very well, he had eight or ten boys constantly there. He did not wish for more than the Cathedral boys.

10396. He gave the education himself gratuitously?—He did, and would not accept of any remuneration from the Dean and Chapter, when they offered it to him.

10397. LORD E. CHURCHILL.—That appears to have been quite independent of the Blue School?—Quite independent—only it was close to the premises.

10398. At what date did that school commence, and when did it cease?—I could not tell you exactly, but I think it was carried on for four or five years

10389. The original gift consisted of five houses—granted in trust for the purpose of educating and binding to trades twenty poor Protestant boys—of those houses only one is now in possession of the charity?—That is all.

10390. LORD E. CHURCHILL.—How many houses had the widows' endowment?—Two houses—one was originally the almshouse for the widows, the other the house Mrs. Craven lived in herself long ago.

10391. The remainder of the endowment arises from an interest in land?—Yes; £136 16s. 6d. arising from land, subject to a small head rent, and Sir Richard Beale pays £37 18s. 9d., a rent from which there is no deduction.

—probably from 1865 to 1870. I should mention it was never kept in the Blue School room—it was in a room within the Cathedral.

10402. At that time do you recollect whether the Blue School was going on?—I do not believe that it was. It was a poor school in 1857, and until it was reconstituted, as a better description of school, and a better class of education given in it, it lay in abeyance, because there were better schools close to it.

10404. I observe in the Report of the Commission of 1857 it is stated, that for some time previously the School had been used for the benefit of the boys in the Cathedral choir, the majority of whom were natives of England?—Yes, I remember Dean Kirwan used to bring over boys with good voices from England—he frequently went over in order to get boys from England. They got education in the School, and gratification from the choir fund.

10405. Were those poor boys?—They were not.

10406. That system ended with Dean Kirwan?—

Yes.

10407. Is he dead?—Yes—he died I think in 1863, or 1868.

10408. Did he carry on the School until he died?—I do not think so. I think the School came to an end before his death, and that the Rev. Dr. Mangin was carrying on his School at the time Dean Kirwan died, and for two or three years before.

10409. Can you tell why Dr. Mangin kept up the School gratuitously, and made no use of the Blue School?—Well, Dr. Mangin's was a voluntary School—he desired to have a better class of boys. He wanted to raise the class of choir boys. It was found very expensive bringing over boys from England, and the Cathedral funds were going down every year.

10410. I suppose you may take it as a fact, that at the time the Rev. Dr. Mangin's School was going on, from 1855 to 1870, the Blue School was not in question?—I do not think it was.

10411. You cannot give us any reason why Rev. Dr. Mangin did not make use of the Blue School in the same way that the present Dean has done?—One reason was he did not want to be Master of the Blue School—it would have been ignis oleum. He did not mind being called Master of the Cathedral School, but I do not think he would have liked to be styled the Master of the Charity Blue School.

School appears to have been altogether a voluntary matter—Entirely voluntary. I remember his coming to me one evening, consulting me about it, and putting the proposal before me for my opinion. "Well, Manning," said I "I am always against a person taking up a thing and letting it go down afterwards—are you quite prepared to go on with it, if you once start it, because it won't look well, if you commence it and then give it up?" I recollect his discussing the whole affair with me on that occasion, and the result was that he determined to start the School; and he kept it up for some years, with the assistance of Canon Meredyth.

10413. As soon as Dr. Manning left, the School was given up?—Yes.

Mr. JOHN FREDERICK SWITZER, LL.B., examined.

10418. LORD JUSTICE FITZGIBBON.—You have been the master of the Limerick Catholic Grammar school since 1878?—Yes, since August 1878.

10419. During that period how many boys, on an average, have attended the school?—During the past year the average was twenty-one, from the 1st of August to the end of June.

10420. July was your vacation time?—Yes.

10421. What class of boys attend the school?—A very good class, some of them quite independent.

10422. What kind of education do you give them?—The moral education to fit them for entering the universities.

10423. Do they all intend to enter the universities?—I will just give you an idea of what was done during the past year—One boy entered the Queen's University, one the College of Burgundy, one the Apothecaries' Hall, one got an exhibition under the Intermediate Education Act, and another passed the examination.

10424. How many boys did you send up?—Four.

10425. Had all four boys been with you from the commencement?—No, one of them had been with me only eight months.

10426. Was that one of those who passed?—Yes. The other was with me in the Villiers' school, where I had been before I came to the Cathedral Grammar school.

10427. Are any of the boys who attend the school free, or do they all pay?—I am paid for all of them.

10428. What is the arrangement as to that?—The choir boys do not pay themselves, but I am paid for them out of the cathedral fund. There are supposed to be eight choir boys, and I am paid £4 a year for each.

10429. Are the places of those eight choir boys filled at present?—No, there are only two at present.

10430. You are able to have eight boys sent to your school at £4 a year for each, but at present there are only two?—Yes.

10431. Your entire number of pupils is, at present, twenty-one?—Yes, but for some time there were twenty-five.

10432. Do all the scholars, with the exception of the choir boys, pay for their education?—Yes.

10433. Are the fees the same for all of them?—They are.

10434. What are the charges?—A guinea and a half each, per quarter.

10435. Do you teach Greek and Latin?—Yes.

10436. What mathematics do you teach?—The course for the universities, and for the other examinations I have mentioned.

10437. Do you give the boys any education in natural science?—No.

10438. It is strictly a grammar school?—Yes.

10439. Do you expect to prepare a larger number for the intermediate examinations next year?—I do, but the programme was not very late this year.

10440. Up to what age have you boys in your school?—I think there are some up to eighteen.

10441. What is the age of the youngest?—I should say thirteen.

10442. And the Cathedral Grammar School is now in the place?—Yes.

10443. How long have you been residing in Limerick?—Over twenty-five years.

10444. Can you tell me whether there are adequate means for boys to acquire a grammar school education in any other School in Limerick?—There is a Grammar School under my own superintendence—one of the Villiers' Schools, but there are a very small number of boys attending it at present.

10445. There seems to be a good class of school for imparting primary education?—There are very efficient schools—there are the Leamy's schools, and the National schools, both of which give a good primary education. There is no want in that respect.

10446. Then they are well grown boys?—They are. 10447. You receive £35 a year from Mr. Durnell from the charity fund?—Yes.

10448. What is your agreement with the trustees?—In point of fact I receive £35 a year—£30 from Mr. Durnell, and £50 from the Cathedral authorities.

10449. Over and above what is paid by the boys?—Yes, I have the fees of course.

10450. Is that under an agreement with the Dean?—Yes.

10451. The £50 is paid out of whatever funds they have for the Cathedral?—Yes.

10452. Are you engaged annually, or what is your tenure of the mastership?—There was no arrangement as to that when I took the place.

10453. If the £35 which you receive from the charity were withdrawn would it be necessary to increase the pupils' fees?—I think it would be very necessary even as it is.

10454. Were the fees fixed by yourself or by the trustees?—They were fixed by myself. They were the fees which were paid to me in my previous school in Henry-street; all my boys accompanied me when I took the grammar school, and I did not think it advisable to change the fees.

10455. Do you hold yourself at liberty to raise any of your own motion?—I do not know as to that.

10456. I want to know what security there is that the charges are fixed—Are you so far independent of control that you can put any fee you like on the pupils, or are you subject to the control of the trustees in the matter?—I cannot say. When I had the school in Henry-street I got £1 a month from one pupil, but then there was a special reason for it.

10457. You gave that pupil special attention?—Yes.

10458. Are the boys in your school divided into classes?—Yes there are two classes at present.

10459. Do you teach them both yourself?—I had an assistant last year, but not at present, as the number is small.

10460. How do you manage to teach the two divisions?—One of them works at mathematics, while the other is being instructed in Latin and Greek.

10461. What are the school-hours?—From ten o'clock until halfpast two. There is no play-ground attached to the school.

10462. Have the pupils any means of recreation?—None, except in strolling to the school and returning from it.

10463. That is, in the street?—Yes.

10464. Is the school in a suitable locality?—No, a more suitable one could not be found. The surroundings are very bad. Some of the boys have to come from the new part, and some from the other end of the city.

10465. Are your pupils all resident in Limerick, or the neighbourhood?—Yes.

10466. Are any of them living near the school?—I think not.

10467. LORD R. CREWELL.—Do you teach any modern languages?—No.

Very Rev. THOMAS BURNETT, M.A., Dean of Limerick, recalled.

Sept. 25, 1919.

10464. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—I do not quite understand about the £30 a year, the most of the school receives from the Cathedral—was it a permanent donation from the Cathedral fund?—It is not to be looked upon as a permanent donation. If we had the full number of choir boys we would pay the master £38 a year. We have not the full number, in consequence of the locality of the school—the boys object to it. We therefore thought it well to give Mr. Switzer £20, because he has only two boys. If we merely gave him the £4 a year for each, it would be only £8 a year.

10465. Then the £30 includes the £8 a year for the two choir boys?—Yes.

Mr. JOHN FREDERICK SWITZER, M.A., recalled.

Mr. John F. Switzer, M.A.

10466. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—You do not get the £30 from the Cathedral fund, in addition to £8 for the two choir boys who are at present at the school?—The arrangement made, when I took the school, was that I was to get £35 a year from the Crown fund, which I do, and I was also to get £38 a year for the education of eight choir boys, but I was to allow £12 a year, to be deducted from that, for their musical education, so that the £39 is just the £31, minus the £12.

10467. That is to say, the Cathedral fund was to pay £4 a year each for eight choir boys, £12 of which is given for music, and you get the balance, £30 a year, although you have only two choir boys at present in the school?—Yes.

Very Rev. THOMAS BURNETT, M.A., Dean of Limerick, recalled.

Very Rev. Thomas Burnett, M.A.

10468. LORD JUSTICE FERGUSON.—Have you any further observation to make on the subject of the school?—I wanted to impress upon you that the locality of the school is extremely unsuitable and bad. I do not know whether we are obliged to have the school there in order to preserve the endowment.

10469. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—Has it ever struck you, that, if the school were carried out according to the original design of the founder, the locality would not be so unsuitable, as the building is in a poor part of the town, and the design was to give primary education to twenty poor Protestant children?—There are not twenty poor Protestant children in the parish, and there are excellent Protestant schools to which such children can go for education.

10470. If the education given in the Blue School were entirely free—a purely charitable institution—do you believe it would not be possible to find twenty poor Protestant boys to attend it?—Not in the parish. It would be quite impossible, so far as I can see, to carry on the school in accordance with the intention of its founder. We have only £35 a year, which would be insufficient to pay the master. What I desire very much is that we should be allowed to move it to another part of the city. If we could do that, I think it would be quite possible to work up the school, and make it a very efficient institution indeed.

10471. LORD JUSTICE FERGUSON.—Are there any cases in Limerick of children of parents of limited or reduced circumstances who would benefit by a gratuitous or assisted grammar school education?—Decidedly.

10472. Is there any other institution that would give them that at present?—No. I think the fact that when the school was in Thomavestreet we had from thirty-five to forty boys attending it, shows that there is a want of such a school in Limerick.

10473. Would you not have more pupils if this were entirely a free school?—Well, I do not think that parents, who require an entirely free education for their children, look for a classical education.

10474. And there are institutions in Limerick for imparting a good primary education?—Abundance.

10475. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—If the school were established simply for primary instruction, would not the endowment be sufficient?—I think not. I do not think you would get an efficient master for £35 a year. I think it would be hopeless to attempt to get the school back to its original state, whereas, I think, if we could get permission to change the locality, even working it as it is, we can make it a very efficient school.

10476. If the school were moved, would the Dean and Chapter purchase the house?—I think they would be very glad to do so.

10477. LORD JUSTICE FERGUSON.—For the purpose of taking it down?—I could not say what our purpose might be, we would not leave it as it is, at all events.

Rev. CHRISTOPHER L. GARRE, A.B., examined.

Rev. C. L. Garre, A.B.

10478. LORD JUSTICE FERGUSON.—Can you give any further information as to the Cathedral Grammar School?—I wish to make an explanation with regard to the religious instruction given in the school, as I think it did not seem quite clear how it is arranged. On one day in each week—Friday at present—the Dean or myself attends, for the purpose of giving religious instruction, and during the time we are so engaged the boys who are not Church boys leave the school completely, those who remain are afforded religious instruction in the Church themselves.

10479. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—There are two Roman Catholics in the school?—Yes.

10480. Are there any Presbyterians, or other Dissenters?—I think so—they are at liberty to leave when religious instruction is going on.

10481. How many boys leave the school during the hours of religious instruction?—The two Roman Catholics leave. There are also one or two boys who are being prepared for college—they are very grown boys —in fact young men; and one or two Dissenters—these also leave. I have a limited class, ranging from eight to fifteen, according to the attendance.

10482. In your experience of the school, have you ever known any Dissenters or Roman Catholics to remain while religious instruction was going on?—Well, while we were a little unsettled, there was a kind of arrangement by which the master, Mr. Switzer, occupied the attention of the Roman Catholics and others while religious instruction was going on in another part of the room. That was before I appreciated the difficulty of the Intermediate Education Act. I then thought it would be better to make another arrangement.

10483. I understand you now insist on their leaving?—They always do leave the room.

10484. Would you allow a boy, who was not a member of the Church of Ireland, to remain during the hour for religious instruction?—I would not have anything to say to that at all. I would like it for granted, if a boy remained that he was a Church boy.

Apr. 26, 1874.

Rev. C. L.

10488 Lord Justice FRYER—I do not exactly understand what change you thought it necessary to make, in consequence of the Intermediate Education Act—I conceived that the common clause in that Act seemed to mean that if a boy were to lose anything in the school in consequence of his religion, we would be infringing the Act, and if in consequence of religious instruction, one boy was occupied with secular work, while another was receiving religious instruction, I was not sure but that that might be infringing the Act.

10486 As I read the Act, it seems to be one of the most liberal conscience clauses that could possibly be framed—it is merely this—you must enable any boy who presents himself as a pupil to secular subjects to get the full advantages of the school in all such subjects, although he may object to receive religious instruction. I understood you thought that because the master was giving secular instruction to certain boys while you were giving religious instruction to those who were members of the Church, it might be held they were excluded from advantages on account of their religion, which is not very logical, for it strikes me that the Catholics and Presbyterians were receiving the advantage of additional secular instruction which was not given to the Church boys.—Well, that was the view I took of it. The interests of the Protestants had to be considered. I concur with the Dean and Mr. Swither in believing that it would be a great advantage to remove the school to another locality.

Mr. William
Lysaght, &c.

Mr. William Lysaght, &c., examined.

10487 Lord Justice FRYER—How long have you been connected with Leamy's Schools?—Since October, 1874.

10488 Since the adoption of the scheme under which they are now worked?—Yes.

10489 Do you know what condition the schools had been in before that time?—I can only state it from hearsay—I believe they had been closed for some time.

10490 Can you say for how long?—I cannot.

10491 Have you a minute book?—Yes, I produce it. This book commences with a copy of the will of William Leamy, the Chancellor's Order of 1842, and the order of 1874. You will see a minute of my appointment at the first meeting of the Governors in October 1874.

10492 The property of the schools is devised under the residuary clause in the will of William Leamy—who gave the residue of his estate to his executors:—

“To be by them appropriated to the education of the children of the poor in Ireland, principally those in and about Limerick city, or so they, my executors, in their better judgment shall deem most, to give this bequest the most efficacious efficacy.”

—Yes, that was the will.

10493 There was then an order in 1842?—Yes, the Chancellor's order.

10494 That order directed that premises capable of being converted into a school should be purchased or taken to rent for a long lease, and that in the said school the English language, reading, writing and arithmetic should be taught; and that the funds of the said charity were sufficient, the Governors should have power from time to time to make such provision and arrangement for a further and more extensive system of education as might appear to them expedient and practicable, subject to the approval of the Court of Chancery, that part of the daily instruction should consist in reading the Holy Scriptures without note or comment, and that for that purpose the scholars should during an hour each day be placed in two separate rooms, the Protestants in one room and the Roman Catholics in another, and that while there the Protestants should read the Holy Scriptures without any restriction, and the Roman Catholics should read such portions of the Holy Scriptures as were contained in four small volumes supplied by authority under the title of Scripture Lessons and read in the National schools.—That has been since changed.

10495 The original scheme directed that the number of Governors should be eleven, and that the majority should elect a treasurer, subject to the approval of the Court, and that the qualification of Governors should be residence or property either in the city of Limerick or within twenty miles thereof—you say that was changed and a new scheme was adopted in 1874?—Yes.

10496 The scheme of July 1874, directs that a master be appointed by the governors to conduct the school at a salary of £100 a year, with a capitation fee not exceeding twenty shillings a year for each male paying pupil above the number of twenty, who shall have been attending the school for six months, and the governors may if they think necessary appoint an assistant master at a salary of £40 a year, with a capitation fee not exceeding five shillings for each male paying pupil above the number of twenty, that in addition to the subjects of instruction mentioned in the decree of 19th November 1842, instruction shall be given in the following subjects—elementary drawing, the elements of chemistry, the elements of medicine, the elements of natural science as applied to the arts, the French language, and such other special instruction as the governors shall from time to time direct, so that the same shall be such as is requisite to fit boys for employment in trading, mercantile, and manufacturing pursuits—that a mistress shall be appointed by the Governors to undertake the management of the female school, at a salary of £50 a year, with a capitation fee not exceeding ten shillings a year for each female paying pupil above the number of twenty who shall have been attending the school for six months—that pupils paying £4 a year shall be admitted into the male and female schools respectively, and shall receive the ordinary instruction given in those schools respectively—that the pupils in the female school shall be at liberty to attend the classes in drawing, chemistry, medicine, the natural sciences, and French, subject to such regulations as to the time and manner of such attendance as the governors may make—that the free or foundation places shall be limited to twenty male pupils and twenty female pupils; and that the duty has scholars shall be nominated by the governors who shall in selecting them have regard to the poverty and good character of the parents of the candidates.—Yes, that is the order of the 4th July 1874.

10497 I see that on the 4th July 1874, the Court ordered that the Right Reverend George Butler, Roman Catholic Bishop of Limerick, Thomas Knox, Esq., M.P., Robert Hunt, Esq., the Venérable Charles Hare, the Reverend Benjamin Jacob, and Colonel Robert Mansell, be appointed governors—who are the present governors?—The present governors are those named by that order, in addition to those who were governors at the time.

10498 Are they all alive?—No, two have died—Mr. Franklin and Mr. Henry Mansell—and in their place Mr. George Druce and Lord Clonville have been appointed. There is another vacancy caused by the death of Dean Keating—and the governors have recommended the appointment of the present Dean of Limerick, but that awaits the necessary application to the Court of Chancery for approval, which involves an expense of £25.

10499 Am I to understand you to say that each application for the approval of the Lord Chancellor costs £25?—Yes, that is what our solicitor, Mr. Beauchamp informs us, and his costs for the previous applications have been paid.

10500 Does a newly appointed governor set before receiving the sanction of the Court?—He does not.

10501 Have the Board of Governors any final times for meeting?—Yes; they meet upon the first Wednesday in every month.

10502. I see from the Minute Book that the meetings and attendance of the Governors, in 1877, were: 3rd January, Rev. Benjamin Jacob, and Lieut.-Col. Mansell; 7th February, the Archbishop of Limerick, Rev. Benjamin Jacob, Dr. Kane, and Lieut.-Col. Mansell; 7th March, Rev. Benjamin Jacob, Lieut.-Col. Mansell, Dr. Kane, and the Archbishop of Limerick; 4th April, the Archbishop of Limerick, Lieut.-Col. Mansell, and Dr. Kane; 2nd May, the Archbishop of Limerick, Rev. Benjamin Jacob, and Lieut.-Col. Mansell; 4th June, the Archbishop of Limerick, Rev. Benjamin Jacob, and Lieut.-Col. Mansell; 10th August no meeting, and on the 5th September only Rev. Benjamin Jacob attended; 3rd October, the Archbishop of Limerick, Dr. Kane, and Lieut.-Col. Mansell; 7th November, the Archbishop of Limerick, Rev. Benjamin Jacob, Dr. Kane, and Lieut.-Col. Mansell, and, at the last meeting in 1877, on the 5th December, there were present—the Archbishop of Limerick, Rev. Benjamin Jacob, Lieut.-Col. Mansell and Mr. Dartnall. I see the attendance seldom exceeds four?—Literally it has not—in the first year it did.

10503. "New Income" I suppose?—Well, yes.

10504. Have you any fixed income?—No.

10505. Practically, how many of the Governors manage the charity?—I should say the Archbishop, the Rev. Benjamin Jacob, Colonel Mansell, Mr. Dartnall (since he was appointed), Dr. Kane, and Mr. Robert Hunt. Those are I think the principal attendants.

10506. I observe among the Governors who were appointed the name of the Roman Catholic Bishop of the diocese?—Yes; he attended once since I was appointed.

10507. Lord Ebury is also a Governor?—Yes; he attended on two occasions.

10508. The Dean of Kilfenora was also a Governor?—Yes, but he is dead.

10509. In his lifetime did he attend?—Not in my time, because he was bedridden, but he took a warm interest in the schools.

10510. Does Lord Clonville attend?—He has never attended.

10511. Do you ever convene special meetings?—Yes, when necessary.

10512. What authority have you for calling a special meeting?—If I am directed by the Governors I summon it.

10513. When there is any special business to be attended to?—Yes.

10514. I see by the minutes of the 21st October, 1875, that it was resolved that the money in the bank should be kept on deposit receipt, and that advertisements for a schoolmaster and mistress be put in the papers at once; that Mr. William Lynght be appointed Secretary at a salary of £30 a year, and that it be the duty of the secretary to keep an account of the several transactions of the Governors, to summon meetings, and to act for the Governors in such way as they shall direct for the benefit of the charity. It was under that resolution that you were appointed?—Yes.

10515. Have you any duties in respect to the school itself?—None except to keep the minutes and accounts.

10516. And attend the meetings?—Yes.

10517. Who makes the payments?—The Governors do that by cheque. You will see it mentioned in the minutes. The funds stand in the names of two trustees, the Bishop of Limerick and Lieutenant-Colonel Mansell, and they by power of attorney have appointed Mr. Fitchell, the Manager of the Provincial Bank in Dublin, to draw the dividends, and when drawn the amount is transmitted to the Bank here to the credit of the Governors.

10518. I see that in November, 1874, after advertising for a master and mistress, you advertised for tenders for repairs of the school-rooms?—Yes, by direction of the Governors.

10519. On the 19th November, 1874, the Governors resolved a tender from Mr. McCarthy for the execution of the repairs at a sum of £142, which being deemed excessive it was rejected, and Mr. Fegarty's tender of £42 6s was accepted—were those repairs carried out?—They were. The account, which I produce, will show you the expenditure up to August last.

10520. I see that on 11th December, 1874, Mr. Handemon was appointed Master of the boys' school, and Miss Wear was appointed Mistress of the female school?—Yes.

10521. Are those two teachers still with you?—Yes.

10522. The schools were opened in January, 1875?—Yes.

10523. The master and mistress, besides their salaries and expenses for gas, gas, coal, and apartments?—Yes; furnished apartments.

10524. I see by the minutes of 8th January, 1875, that it was resolved that pupils be admitted to the school on payment of fees—boys at 10s per quarter to the master, and girls at 10s. to the mistress, by whom receipts were to be given; that the limits of age were to be from eight to sixteen, that the school hours should be from 10 to 5 with an interval of half an hour, except on Saturdays when the school is to close at one o'clock; that the school-books of the National Board of Education be adopted, and that the master and mistress be each paid £1 per quarter for having the school-rooms, passages, board-room, and the houses generally kept clean and in proper order?—Yes.

10525. I find there were then a number of applications from pupils for admission on the foundation?—Yes; the Governors have frequently put advertisements in the local papers, that they are ready to receive applications for admission on the foundation.

10526. How the free foundation for twenty boys and twenty girls been filled?—Never; although the Governors have made every exertion to get applications.

10527. What qualifications are required for admission on the foundation?—None, except good character.

10528. I presume poverty will be taken into account?—Certainly. I may mention there was one boy on the free foundation—named McEgry—who afterwards passed an examination for the Civil Service, and has got a clerkship.

10529. I find on 30th January, 1875, the master's report was read, stating that there were fifteen boys in the school—thirteen paying and two free boys?—Yes, the school had only just commenced then.

10530. On 26th February, 1875, I see a cheque was drawn in favor of Mr. James Nash for £26, being a half year's rent due 26th March, 1875—what premises do you hold that are liable to rent?—The ground on which the school-house is built—it was taken from a Mr. Quinlan.

10531. Have you a perpetuity lease?—I think so.

10532. What rent is it subject to?—£40 a year ground-rent.

10533. I find that on the 19th March, 1875, the master reported that there were twenty-six pupils on the roll, of whom twenty-one were paying and five free, and the mistress reported that there were seventeen girls on the roll, of whom fifteen were paying and two free?—Yes.

10534. On the 7th May, 1875, the master reported that there were forty pupils on the roll, but that three of the paying pupils had left the school since the commencement of the quarter, leaving thirty-two paying pupils and five free—total thirty-seven, and the mistress reported that there were twenty-seven paying and two free pupils on the girls' roll—total twenty-nine?—Yes.

10535. I understand the house—including apartments for the master and mistress—was furnished at the expense of the charity?—Yes, by the Governors.

10536. I see that on 4th June 1875, Miss Wear's application for an assistant mistress was read and ordered to be taken into consideration at the next meeting, and on 2nd July, the Secretary was directed to call a special meeting for Tuesday, 30th July, to appoint an assistant master, and to consider Miss Weir's application for an assistant mistress—has the assistant master been appointed?—Yes.

10537. And an assistant mistress?—Yes.

10538. How many teachers are there altogether?—Three in the male and two in the female school.

10539. What is the third teacher in the male school?—He is called a monitor, and is paid £30 a year.

10540. Is he a pupil teacher?—Yes, that is what he is called.

10541. You have no third teacher in the girls' school?—No. I should mention that at the time the second assistant master was appointed the number of scholars in the boys' school was nearly eighty.

10542. I find a Miss Harold was appointed assistant schoolmistress?—Yes.

10543. At the meeting in September, 1875, the report of the monthly attendance was read showing—in the male school, paying pupils, 44; free, 8, total 50; and in the female school, paying pupils, 42; free, 3; total 45, making a total for both schools of 95.—When the pupil teacher was appointed there were up to 80 boys attending the school.

10544. In November, 1875, the minutes state that Miss Weir reported that the parents of some of the girls were desirous of having them taught music, and that the Board saw no objection to its being allowed—that that going on now?—Not in the school.

10545. Was it discontinued?—No. Miss Weir is allowed to teach music, but it is in her own apartments.

10546. Music was no part of the original education of the girls?—It is not in the curriculum, as laid down by the Lord Chancellor.

10547. In December, 1875 I find the Governors resolved that it was desirable to have a public examination of the pupils, by a special examiner, to be held at the end of the quarter preceding the summer holidays?—Yes, that has been done every year since.

10548. How is the examiner selected?—The examiner is Mr. Weir, the examiner of the National schools.

10549. Have you his reports?—Yes; I have all his reports, and will produce them to-morrow.

10550. I find that in January, 1876, Mr. Henderson was allowed to retain the services of Mr. Ryan for teaching French two days in each week to those pupils whose parents were willing to pay for a quarter for each pupil?—Yes; that went on for some time, but he has not attended lately—I do not know why.

10551. I see that at a meeting in June, 1876, where only one Governor attended, the monthly cheque was drawn—how have you managed about cheques where there was not a sufficient attendance?—The rule is that three Governors must sign, and when they do not attend I have to go to their residences, and get them to sign.

10552. How that often happened?—Now and then. In summer the Governors are generally away at the seaside, and there is a difficulty in getting them together.

10553. Where is the second type?—In the Provincial Bank.

10554. LORD E. CHURCHILL.—Can any three of the Governors sign the cheques?—Yes.

10555. LORD JUSTICE FRYGROVE.—I find on the 4th October, 1876, a letter from Miss Weir was read with reference to the report of Mr. Weir the examiner at the late examination, and which complains of the want of system, and proper classification in the female school—was any step taken on that?—Miss Weir's attention was called to it, and she stated reasons why it was not in her power to classify the pupils, but since then she has classified them to the satisfaction of the examiner.

10556. I find on some day a letter from Mr. Henderson was read, stating that in consequence of the increased numbers in the boys' school, there being seventy-two on the roll, a third teacher was necessary, either classical or English, but he considered that the latter would be preferable?—Yes. Classics are not taught.

10557. In consequence of that letter you say a monitor or pupil-teacher was appointed?—Yes.

10558. I see several minutes before December, 1876 as to the cost incurred in procuring the new scheme from the Court of Chancery and finally, in December, 1876, Mr. Ogilvie's bill of costs was laid before the Board, and it was resolved that Mr. Ogilvie be requested to lay them taxed, and Mr. Beauchamp was appointed local solicitor?—Yes, you will find further on that Mr. Ogilvie's costs were taxed and paid.

10559. They amounted to £207 6s. 5d., but that included the costs of obtaining the new scheme?—Yes.

10560. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—Who is Mr. Ogilvie?—He was a solicitor in Dublin—he is dead.

10561. LORD JUSTICE FRYGROVE.—What are the funds you have on deposit receipt?—There was a sum of money received by the Governors to meet the costs, and it was placed in bank on deposit receipt—£400 I think—you will see it in the account which lies before you.

10562. Have you any money on deposit receipt now?—Yes. The costs did not amount to the full sum, and the balance still remains on deposit receipt, but it will be required I think for the repairs of the school—the Governors are putting in metal sashes and painting the outside of the building.

10563. In May 1876, I find an application from Miss Weir for an assistant mistress was refused—has she only one assistant?—Only one. I wrote to make inquiry from Mr. Weir, the examiner—who is an Inspector of Schools under the National Board—and he stated that a third mistress was only appointed where there was an average of eighty-six pupils, and at that time the average in Miss Weir's school was, I think, only forty.

10564. Was it on account of the insufficient number of scholars that the application was refused?—Yes, the governors thought that where the number was only between thirty and forty, two teachers were simply sufficient, especially as Mr. Weir reported that eighty-six was the lowest number in a National school to which a third teacher would be appointed.

10565. I find in October 1877, a letter from Miss Weir was read, stating there were several motions to be brought under your notice. She requested to say that she felt so overworked as to be utterly unable to attend in person, she complained that she had more to do than any man in the profession, and that she was incessantly worried about things that were not her business at all—What does that refer to?—I think if you go on you will see a series of complaints which she made afterwards, and which were dealt with by the governors.

10566. I see the Board reply to her application for a second assistant teacher:

"The Board cannot entertain Miss Weir's application for a second assistant for the girls' school. When a second assistant was granted for the boys' school the number on the roll was seventy-two, and the average attendance sixty-two, while the number on the roll of the girls' school at present is forty-seven, and the average attendance only thirty-nine, and they therefore see no necessity for an additional teacher."

—Yes. The Board declined to entertain the application.

10567. Has Miss Weir any duties to perform except the teaching?—None.

10568. Has Mr. Henderson?—None.

10569. Are the application fees paid out of the general account?—They are.

10570. How are the pupils' fees paid?—The pupils' fees are paid to the master and mistress, who pay them to me every three months, and I lodge them in bank to the credit of the governors.

10571. How do you watch the accounts of the pupils' fees?—They are received by the master and

Sept 20, 1878.
Mr. William
Lynght, &c.

mistress from the pupils, and I attend at the school on the last day of every quarter and go through the books, see the books of the receipts, and check them.

10672. The master and mistress have to give printed receipts for the fees?—Yes; receipts upon a printed form.

10673. They have no interest in the fees, except the stipend?—None.

10674. The boys pay £2 a year, of which £1 goes to the master, Mr. Henderson, and 5s. to the assistant master, and in the girls' school, 10s. goes to the mistress, and 5s. to the assistant, the balance of the fee going to the school?—Yes. The stipend goes to the master and mistress are reckoned on the number of paying pupils above twenty.

10675. I find that in July 1878, a letter was read from Mr. Marton, the agent of the Alliance Insurance Company stating that the Company objected to the risk consequent upon theatrical performances in the school. What does that refer to?—During the Christmas holidays of 1877 some of the elder boys expressed a wish to be allowed to have some private theatricals under the supervision of the master. The governors granted permission, and the performances took place, and I believe were very interesting, but the agent of the Insurance Company objected as he thought there was some risk of fire, and the theatricals have been discontinued since. There was in point of fact not the smallest danger, but as the agent objected, the governors at once decreed that the theatricals should be discontinued.

10676. What is the insurance?—The building cost £3,340 and it is insured to that amount. The furniture is not insured.

10677. I find that in June, 1868, this letter was read.

"Miss Weir begs to inform Mr. Lynght in order that the notice may be brought under the notice of the Governors, that her house has been broken into at least six times during the month of May. On the first two occasions articles were only misplaced on the third night a dog was put in, having the place in such a state that a boy had to be got to do it before a woman could walk in. After this, acting on Mr. Lynght's advice, the head-constable was brought to examine the place and give his opinion very decidedly. He drew out of the matter positively however, and said it was a case for the Governors of the school?"

—Yes, the schoolmistress made these complaints, and there were meetings of the Board on the subject. She had a Club's lock placed on the door, and still she said the door was opened. The Governors and every one were fully satisfied that it was impossible to open the door, and that the door was not opened.

10678. How are the apartments of the mistress situated with regard to the rest of the building?—There is a common stair to the two school-rooms and to the apartments of the master and mistress, with doors at the head of the stair to each, and the door leading to the female apartments has a Club's lock on it.

10679. Has the mistress control of that lock herself?—The sole control, I do not think a key could get in there, against her consent.

10680. She complains of noise and disturbance in the house—who are the residents in the house?—The master and his assistant, and Miss Weir, and I believe one or two servants.

10681. She complains of the gas being turned off at different times, and she thinks some of the boys have done it—see there any boys there at night?—None.

10682. The school closes at 3 o'clock?—Yes, but of course the master has liberty to take pupils after school-hours.

10683. Has he boys attending him in the evening?—I believe he has, but not up to a late hour—in fact the orders are that the house must be closed, and the outside gate locked at half past ten.

10684. I find the Board on one occasion complained thus—

"Having appointed Miss Weir as a resident mistress it was quite irregular and improper for her to have left the house without their permission nor are they satisfied that the key of the school-room should have been intrusted to an irresponsible person outside."

What does that refer to?—She left the house, and went to live at Castlestead, without the Governors knowing anything about it.

10685. Was that during the summer?—Yes, she remained away for some months, and gave the key of the school-room to some boy to keep.

10686. How that matter been set right?—Yes; the moment it came to the Governors' knowledge they directed that it should stop.

10687. I find that Miss Weir gave this explanation of the matter:

"On the night of the 24th May when all the windows were closed, her house was opened by turning the key in the Club's lock. The Board will see that it is deeply responsible for her to stay in the house until arrangements are made by which she can sleep in it with safety in future."

And on the 27th June, 1878, the Board came to the following resolution:

"That Miss Weir having made charges which she has not substantiated, and now refuses to prove, the Governors cannot possibly entertain them further, and finally determine that as Miss Weir's return after vacation she must reside in the house provided for the female teacher, and have her mother, or some other person approved by the Board, to live with her. If Miss Weir shall fail to carry out this resolution the Board will be under the painful necessity of disposing with her services."

That resolution was adopted by the Board?—Yes.

10688. What has been done as to that?—Miss Weir returned to the house; but although the Governors repeatedly pressed her to carry out their requirement, and have her mother or some body friend to live with her, it is I believe only within the last month that she has done so.

10689. Has she some one with her now?—I believe so, but I am not sure.

10690. I observe she made a proposal to have some of her pupils residing with her, but the Governors refused?—Yes, the Board did not consider it desirable to have pupils mixed up with a thing of that kind.

10691. I find Miss Weir addressed the Governors again on 13th November, 1878:

"Miss Weir would bring under Mr. Lynght's notice the fact that the letter written to the Governors with regard to people coming into her house has produced its natural result, and that it has occurred three times since Mr. Lynght will be good enough to let the Governors know this."

Upon which the resolution of the Governors was as follows:—

"That . . . with reference to her statement as to persons coming into her house, the Board, in the absence of any evidence in support of that statement, declare to consider the matter farther."

Miss Weir had stated it, was any step taken to ascertain whether her statement was correct?—Yes, the Governors asked Miss Weir to give them evidence, but she was unable to give them any evidence whatever. They examined the master and assistant master, who stated that, as far as they knew, nothing of the sort could have occurred, and from the evidence before them the Board could only arrive at one conclusion, that there was no such thing. I think the Bishop was in the chair on the occasion.

10692. On the 4th December, 1878, a letter was read from Miss Weir, complaining that persons came nightly into the yard, and that they had been in the school-rooms, and the Board ordered that a padlock with a chain be provided for the front gate and that keys be given to Mr. Henderson, Mr. O'Brien, and Miss Weir, and Mr. Henderson was directed to see that the gates were locked at 10 o'clock every night from September to March, and at 11 every night from March till September?—Yes.

10693. In January, 1879, a letter was received from Mr. Beauchamp asking for £340 5s. 8d., the amount of his taxed costs, including £267 for 5d., Mr. Ogilby's costs for procuring the new scheme, £26 7s. 10d., the costs in reference to appointments of Governors, and miscellaneous costs £3 11s. 5d.—what were the miscellaneous costs?—I could not tell you. I would have to refer to the bill to ascertain that. I think they must have been for attending to see Mr. Ogle's costs taxed.

10594. I find a letter was read from Miss Weir applying for fire-iron, and also to have the school-room and stairs washed, and it was ordered that the fire-iron be provided; but that, as Miss Weir got an allowance for a servant, the Board refused the other part of her application. What is the arrangement as to the servant?—Miss Weir receives £4 a year, and Mr. Henderson a similar sum, for having the school-rooms, passages, board-rooms, and the house generally kept clean and in proper order.

10595. On the 5th February, 1879, Mr. Henderson applied for leave to change some of the books used in the school for those named in the official programme of the Intermediate Education Commissioners, and the application was granted?—Yes.

10596. Were any of the boys sent up to those examinations?—I believe so.

10597. Were any of the girls sent up?—I do not think any of the girls were sent.

10598. The minutes show that, on the same day, a letter was read from Miss Weir, stating that she had succeeded in getting a friend, from the North of Ireland, to live with her, while the present state of matters lasted. Does that refer to her belief in the annuance?—I believe so.

10599. She writes as follows:—

"Having quite assimilated the terms on which I was appointed Matron of the Leamy's Girls' school, I have much pleasure in saying that for the future I intend carrying out what was the understanding of the Board, namely, that I should have some peace to reside in the house with me."

—Yes; previous to that time she had supposed that there was any such understanding.

10600. That only appeared as a matter of understanding in the Board's Minute Book?—Yes; in the first minute which mentions her appointment.

10601. I find in the minutes of 5th March, 1879, Mr. McEvoy tendered his resignation as pupil teacher, and in a letter to Mr. Henderson he says:—

"Permit me to take this opportunity of returning you my most sincere thanks for the attention to my instruction which you displayed, and to which I mainly attribute my success in passing my examination for the Civil Service clerkship."

—Yes. He was a free pupil at our school.

10602. The Governors appointed a new pupil teacher in his stead at £30 a year?—Yes.

10603. I believe the Intermediate examinations in Limerick were partly held in the Leamy's school-rooms?—Yes; the Governors allowed them to hold it there; they advanced the school vacation a week to allow them to hold it.

10604. Have you any income from the charity except the salary which you are paid by the Board?—Not a farthing.

10605. In the Report of 1857, it is stated that a sum of over £3,500 belonging to the charity was returned in the English Court of Chancery, to meet monies due and costs—has anything been recovered from that?—I know nothing about it—this is the first time I ever heard anything of it.

10606. The charges on it were stated to be likely to nearly exhaust it?—I know nothing of it.

10607. There has been no increase in the property of the charity, during the time of your connection with it, except from the accumulations while it was idle?—None. I think the fund is just as it was left by the bequest. The bequest amounted to £13,385, and there was £3,740 laid out on the building, which with £10,000, the amount in Government stock, makes up about the sum that was bequeathed.

10608. The account which you have produced, extends the transactions of the Charity from October, 1874, to August, 1879?—Yes.

10609. In December, 1874, I find £460 was taken from the current account, and placed on deposit receipt in the Bank, in February 1875, a further sum of £300 was similarly dealt with, and in February, 1876, £300—making £1,460 placed on deposit receipt. On the other side of the account I find various sums withdrawn from the deposit account and placed to the credit of the current account—how much have you now upon deposit receipt or has all been withdrawn?—I think we have £100.

10610. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—Can you explain why, on the 14th January, 1878, you received two years' dividends together, amounting to £206 18s. 16d. instead of their being drawn half-yearly in the usual manner?—That was because Mr. Henry Mansell, the co-trustee with the Bishop, died and consequently Mr. Pritchard could not receive the dividends until a new trustee was appointed. Mr. Mansell's son, Colonel Mansell, was appointed trustee, and the moment he was appointed he and the Bishop signed the power of attorney, authorizing Mr. Pritchard to receive the dividends.

10611. The dividends appear to have remained unpaid from January, 1876, to January, 1878,—how did you carry on the school in the interval?—The money on deposit receipt was drawn out from time to time.

10612. How did it happen that it took two years to get the new trustee appointed, during which time the money was lying idle—on the 31st January, 1876, you received £151 18s. 4d., which was the dividend due October, 1875, and then you got no more until 19th January, 1878, when you receive £206 18s. 16d., two years' dividends—why was that?—The fact was that Mr. Beauchamp had to make an application to the Court of Chancery.

10613. LORD JUSTICE FITZGERALD.—Surely it did not take two years to get the Court of Chancery to sanction the appointment of a new trustee?—Well, as a matter of fact he got instructions at once, and it took that time before the matter was completed.

10614. It is on the Court of Chancery you lay the blame?—Yes, certainly.

10615. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—I see your receipts from school fees have fallen off?—They have.

10616. In 1877 you received £147 4s. 4d., from fees in the male school, and £51 17s. 6d., in the female—as the first half of the present year you received only £53 in the male, and £24 in the female school—can you explain that?—Schools are always very variable—you will often see a school go up in numbers one year, and go down another year—I cannot tell why.

10617. How does it happen Mr. Henderson, who gave copious fees, received in 1877, £161?—That was the highest year.

10618. In 1878 I find he received £51, and in 1879 he received only £31 10s. for six months?—It may possibly be more at the close of the year. The payment he got this year was only for six months, to 31st July.

10619. LORD JUSTICE FITZGERALD.—I find the way the amounts of school-fee in the boys' school stood in this: in 1875 it was £23 18s.; 1876, £118 14s. 1d.; 1877, £147 4s. 4d.; 1878, £116; 1879, assuming the second half-year to be equal to the first half, £110. For the girls school the figures are 1875, £67 37s. 3d.; 1876, £50 1s. 8d.; 1877, £51 17s. 6d.; 1878, £43 3s. 5d.; and 1879 (doubling the first half-year's fees as before) £49 13s. 4d. The girls' school appears to have steadily increased from 1875 down to 1878, and to have fallen off very little in 1879?—Yes.

10620. To what do you attribute the large falling off in the boys' school?—I really cannot tell. The master may be able to explain it better than I can. You can never calculate in a place like this upon a steady average attendance—you may have it high for a year or two, and then it will fall off in the next year—and you cannot tell the reason. I have no doubt in the world it will increase again.

10621. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—I see you expended about £200 in repairs of the building within four years?—Yes.

10622. Do you estimate £50 a year, or about what it costs to keep the building in repair?—Well, it ought not to cost so much. When we commenced in 1874 the outlay was considerable, and we will have some outlay now in consequence of the Board resolving to put in metal sashes through the entire building. The windows have diamond panes, and they were originally made with lead, but they have become decayed, and the governors have ordered them to be replaced by metal sashes. I think, taking one year with another, from £20 to £25 ought to keep the building in repair. There is very little margin for it, as you will see by the statement of accounts.

10635. You had to lay out £24 in three years upon furniture?—Yes, furniture for the apartments of the master and mistress.

10636. Have you now got all the furniture you are likely to require?—I hope so.

10637. I see you pay Mr. Weir for inspecting the schools?—Yes, he inspects the schools and examines the children every year, at Christmas, and we pay him 25 for doing so.

10638. I observe you expended 25 on advertisements in 1875?—Yes, we advertised for a master and mistress, in all the Dublin papers, and in the Gazette, as well as in the local papers. There was a large number of applicants for the situations.

10639. You have handed us an estimate of receipts and expenditure?—Yes, it was drawn out by me for the information of the governors.

10640. It is not an actual balance sheet?—No—it is merely an estimate of the annual receipts and expenditure.

10641. The estimated balance to credit at the end is £28—is that what it actually is?—No—it is a great deal more.

10642. Your actual balance is £180?—Yes—this was merely an estimate.

10643. What was the amount of the balance to credit in 1875, when you were appointed?—It was £479 10s. 4d.

10644. You have now got a balance of £180 to credit?—Yes.

10645. Then your balance to credit has decreased £299 during the five years since you were appointed?—Yes, we had to pay a considerable sum for low mra.

10646. Putting low expenses aside, could you tell us, from the accounts, what is the average annual cost of keeping up the institution, and the excess of income over expenditure?—I think, taking one year with another, there would be a surplus of about £20.

10647. LEAD JUSTICE FRIDGEMAN.—Let me ask you five questions about the account which you have handed in—its purports to be a complete debit and credit account from October 1874, until August 1879?—Yes.

10648. From what source is it taken?—From the books.

10637. Do you keep a regular set of books?—Yes.

10638. Do you balance them regularly?—Yes, at the end of December in each year.

10639. The way it stands, then, is this: you began in October, 1874, with a credit balance of £479 10s. 4d.?

—Yes.

10640. And you end in August, 1879, with a balance of £180 8s. 3½d.?—Yes.

10641. That would show a deficiency of £299 2s. 0½d.;

—the funds appear to have decreased by that sum during the five years?—Yes.

10642. You have put into this account, on one side of it, £1,100 as having been placed on deposit receipt?—Yes; placed on deposit receipt at different times, and drawn out at different times.

10643. Yes, but while one side of the account shows that you lodged £1,100 in several sums on deposit receipt, I only see £900 on the opposite side put down as having been withdrawn from the deposit account?—Yes.

10644. Then, if that be so, you should have still £200 on deposit receipt in the bank—have you any entry or memorandum to show how much you have at present on deposit receipt?—I think I have. The account of course should show it.

10645. It does not, but you ought to have in bank £900 on deposit?—Yes, and so we have, I am sure.

10646. Have you deposit receipts for £900?—We must have them.

10647. Then from the way this account is drawn up, it would appear that you are £200 worse off than you really are, for on one side you have debited yourself with £1,100 lodged in bank on deposit receipt, and on the other side you have credited yourself with £900 only drawn out again?—Yes.

10648. Should you not also give yourself credit for £900?—I think not. I will mention as a matter of fact at the bank before it closes to-day what sum there is in bank now to our credit on deposit receipt—but I am sure it is £200.

10649. If so you have a sum of £200 in bank which does not appear in the account?—Yes.

10650. And to make the account just to yourself, that item of £200 ought to appear in it. At the end of your account, before you struck your balance, you ought to have put in—“By amount on deposit receipt £200,” and that would increase your balance to credit to £380 8s. 3½d., instead of £180 8s. 3½d., so that in point of fact you have only diminished your balance by about £29 during the five years, while you have paid a bill of costs amounting to over £200 for the school?—Yes.

10651. Allowing for that expenditure, taking one year with another, you have paid your way?—Yes.

10652. LEAD B. CHURCHMAN.—You stated a little while ago that about £20 a year was the excess of income over expenditure?—Yes, taking the average expenditure and the receipts, I am quite certain £20 will be the outside of the credit balance.

Ven. CHARLES HARRIS, A., Archdeacon of Limerick, recalled.

10653. LEAD JUSTICE FRIDGEMAN.—Did you know anything of Leamy's Institution, prior to the new scheme of 1874?—No; I had nothing to do with it previous to that.

10654. You were one of the governors then appointed?—Yes.

10655. It was formerly altogether a free school?—I believe so. It was intended, under the founder's will, to be a free school.

10656. It is now, to all intents and purposes, an ordinary school, where the majority of the scholars pay fees, and a small number are educated free?—Yes. I may mention that we have repeatedly inserted advertisements in the newspapers, calling for applications for free scholars, and we have from time to time admitted them, but we have never had applicants to fill up the number of twenty.

10657. What qualifications do you require for free scholarship?—We have not stated any qualification in the advertisements.

10658. You have mentioned no qualification at all?—None; but in selecting them, we are guided by the terms of the will.

10659. Is residence a matter taken into account?—Certainly, also the poverty, and the good character, and respectability of the parents.

10661. That is, the religious instruction of the children of his own denomination?—Yes; those who are members of the Church of Ireland.

Sept. 29, 1879.
Mr. William
Lynch, J.P.

Ven. Charles
Harris, A.

Sept. 29, 1879.
 Ven. Charles
 Haug, M.A.

10462. Are all the children members of the Church of Ireland?—I do not know.

10463. Do any of the Roman Catholic governors attend?—Yes. Dr. Kane is very regular in attendance, he is one of our most constant, and useful, members.

10464. How does the education given in Leamy's schools differ from that given in the Model Schools under the National Board?—I do not think there is much difference. The education in both is very much the same.

10465. Do the governors inspect and examine the schools?—I have never done so.

10466. You are one of the most regular attendants at the meetings—is your attendance confined to the board, and routine business?—Yes. A statement of the number of pupils in the schools is laid before us, at each meeting.

10467. With the exception of the annual examination, and inspection, by Mr. Watt, do the governors take any steps to ascertain the progress of the children in education?—No.

10468. Who inspects the building to see that it is kept in a state of proper cleanliness and repair?—We see it ourselves when we go there.

10469. Have you any committee for the purpose of visiting the schools or inspecting the building?—No.

10470. There is the management practically left in the hands of the Master and Mistress?—Yes, we leave it as much as possible in their hands.

10471. They do not seem to get on very well together?—No; I do not think they ever did get on well together. They ought to be quite separate—they ought not to come in contact at all. I know of no reason why there should be any disagreements.

10472. You do not yourself examine as to the proficiency of the children?—No.

10473. Do any of the governors do so?—I do not know whether Mr. Jacob does so, or not.

10474. Do you consider the school working well under the new scheme?—Certainly. It is considered a very efficient school, and I know it has effected my own school—the Villiers'—very much.

10475. Have you taken any steps to find out the cause of the falling-off in the number of pupils in the boys' school?—I asked Mr. Henderson about it, and he thinks that one reason is the vacation that comes in the summer quarter—the boys pay in advance, and when there is a month or six weeks taken out of the quarter the parents are reluctant to pay for it. I think the next quarter—which begins to-morrow—will mark a considerable increase in the number attending the school. Another reason is that in the summer the bigger boys leave the school, and that always makes a change in the numbers.

10476. Dr. HART.—Is there generally a difference in the numbers in the two half years?—I think so. Another reason is that the past winter has been a very severe one.

10477. As a general rule is the spring and summer half-year as well attended as the other?—I think the spring quarter is.

10478. Do you think the spring the best?—I do.

10479. LORD JAMES PROBYN.—In the return furnished to me I find the pupils are thus classified—48 Church of Ireland, 10 Presbyterians, 6 Protestant Dissenters, 7 Roman Catholics. You are aware the scheme is non-denominational; where do the Roman Catholics of the class-year scholars belong to get their education?—At the Model schools.

10480. I thought the Model schools were, as a rule not attended by Roman Catholics?—Some Roman Catholics go to them, but there are also a great many other schools to which Roman Catholics go—especially the Christian Brothers' schools, and there is a large school in the Crescent, but that is not a Christian Brothers' school—there are Christian Brothers' schools near the Cadogan Road.

10481. Have you ever had anything occurring at your Board which would account for such a small attendance of Roman Catholic children at the school?—No.

10482. Is the school-master a Protestant?—Yes, but the assistant master is a Roman Catholic, and Mr. McEvoy the former pupil-teacher was a Roman Catholic too.

10483. The school is managed, I believe, without any interference with the judgment of the boys?—Certainly without any interference at all.

10484. Dr. HART.—Is there a large number of Roman Catholic schools in Leamrick?—Yes, a very large number.

10485. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—I observe that the Board has expended a considerable sum on repairs—can you tell me whether they were estimated for?—Two estimates were sent in, and we accepted Mr. Fogarty's, which was much the lowest.

10486. Were the repairs inspected by any professional man, after being completed, before they were paid for?—No, not by any architect. I should mention that Mr. Fogarty is himself an architect as well as a builder.

10487. LORD JAMES PROBYN.—Did he make any report on the state of the buildings?—He did, at that time.

10488. Is the building an old one?—It is not an old building, it was built I think in 1843.

Rev. Benjamin
 Jacob, M.A.

REV. BENJAMIN JACOB, M.A., examined.

10489. LORD JAMES PROBYN.—You are the Rector of St. Michael's parish, and attend to the religious instruction of the Protestant children at Leamy's schools?—I attend to it mainly through the Rev. Mr. Giffith, who has been my curate for the last couple of years or more, and who systematically attends twice a week—sometimes more frequently—and gives diligent attention to the religious instruction of the Church members.

10490. Do you yourself, as a Governor, examine into the condition of the school from time to time?—From time to time I go into it, and inquire into matters both from the master and mistress; but I may say that there is such confidence felt in the qualifications of the master and mistress that, perhaps, we do not like to interfere personally, when we see no occasion to do so.

10491. Can you explain to me how it is that the Protestant children are so very much in excess of the Roman Catholics in the schools?—The reason is, that there is a strong prejudice on the part of the Roman Catholic clergy against persons attending any schools that are not of an exclusive character.

10492. They have a preference for denominational schools?—Yes.

10493. Do you know the Model schools?—I do very well—I attend there very often.

10494. Do Roman Catholic children attend the Model schools?—Not at all in the same numbers that they did in former times, but I think more Roman Catholics in proportion attend the Model schools than Leamy's, because many come from a distance, where they are not subject to the same local influence as those resident in the city.

10495. Does any Roman Catholic clergyman attend at Leamy's schools?—No.

10496. In the original scheme, provision was made that Roman Catholic clergymen should attend, and give instruction to the children in the doctrines of their religion?—Yes.

10497. Was that provision ever availed of?—I think not.

10498. At all events it is not availed of now?—It is not.

10499. Any religious instruction which the Roman Catholic children receive they must receive at home?—

Yes.

10700. Do you consider the teaching in the schools satisfactory?—Well, the ground on which I base my opinion is Mr. Weir's report—he goes very closely and carefully into the matter. I have attended, from time to time, while his examinations were going on, and I should say, judging by other schools, that the progress made is very satisfactory.

10701. What encouragement do you give in the way of prizes?—The Bishop subscribed money for prizes—a few pounds—I do not remember how much, and I have my own pocket has suffered somewhat, for the same object.

10702. The prizes are not given out of the charity fund?—If I mistake not, there is a sum of £5 appropriated from the fund for prizes for each school.

10703. I see from the accounts that £4 is allocated for the boys' school, and £3 for the girls'—except that, nothing is given from the fund for prizes?—No.

10704. Is there any other point to which you think it desirable to call our attention?—I think not, except that if we could have unity and concord it would be very desirable.

10705. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—Do you mean to say they do not exist in the school at present?—Well, you have heard letters read that show it.

10706. You have only five fine boys in the school, and two girls?—That is all. Every effort has been made to obtain applicants, but somehow they do not respond.

10707. Have the governors endeavored to fill up the vacant places by electing pupils from amongst the Roman Catholic population?—Well, the advertisement has been put in the papers, and the vacancies are open to all without distinction of religion—no question is our school of any candidate as to his religion. The idea of giving a preference to one more than another has never occurred to our minds. We are most anxious to have the numbers filled.

10708. I suppose at the present moment the scholars of the Roman Catholic children is monopolized by the Christian Brothers?—I would say nine-tenths of the Roman Catholic boys go to the Christian Brothers' schools.

10709. Do not they give quite as high an education in the Lesney's schools?—Some of them I am sure do—fully as high, but I cannot speak as to them all. I have some of the schools do, certainly.

10710. Lesney's is only an elementary school?—Certainly, it is not a classical school.

10711. Do you teach any modern languages in Lesney's schools?—No. There was a provision made for teaching French, and it was taught for some time, but, for some reason or other, the person who was engaged to teach it has discontinued doing so.

10712. Dr. HUNT.—There is no classical education in the school, I suppose?—No. One of the reasons assigned by the master to some of the governors for the number of boys in the school having in some measure decreased is, that there is a great desire on the part of parents that their children should receive a classical education, and therefore when our boys have advanced to a certain point, the parents often remove them to other schools, in order that they may have an opportunity of receiving such an education.

10713. There is no provision for imparting a classical education in Lesney's school?—No.

10714. LORD JUSTICE FRIDGEMAN.—It is what is called a middle class school, for commercial education entirely?—Yes, that is the one great object of it.

10715. I believe the principal matter discussed at the time of the adoption of the present scheme was whether it was to be a middle class school or not?—I know the Bishop took a very warm interest in it, and in the arrangement of the scheme, and his great desire was that the school should be mostly one for commercial education.

10716. Do any of the persons who were members of the Board before the adoption of the scheme, continue still to take an interest in it?—I think there are only two or three remaining. Lord Ebury was one.

10717. And the Roman Catholic Bishop?—The late bishop, Dr. Ryan, was one. Dr. Butler was appointed under the new scheme.

10718. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—The people of Limerick are not represented on the Board of Governors?—The majority of the governors are resident in Limerick.

10719. But the class of persons whose children go to the school are not represented on the Board?—No.

10720. Do you think you would have a more active management of the Board, if you had a little of that element in its composition?—I do not think so.

10721. At present the average attendance at the meetings is only three or four?—Well, generally speaking, the business goes through in routine.

10722. Some of the governors never attend?—That is so, but they always receive notice of every meeting.

10723. You have school accommodation for 500 boys?—Yes.

10724. We went over the building this morning—the accommodation is most extensive?—Yes, there are four large rooms.

10725. And they are comparatively empty?—Yes.

10726. I wish to know, looking at the condition of these buildings, and their capacity, and the number of children now being educated in them, whether the governors think that an entirely satisfactory condition of things?—I question whether the funds of the school would extend to any much greater number than the present.

10727. You are limited by the scheme to pay only four teachers?—That is all.

10728. Do you think the management of the schools is satisfactory to the inhabitants of Limerick?—I should say so. I never heard anything to the contrary. I think, considering the population of Limerick, and the persons who send their children to the school, it is a very fair representation.

10729. What are the fees at the Model school?—I think about the same as at Lesney's.

10730. Therefore it cannot be any difference in the fees that attracts the children to the Model school?—No.

10731. Can you give us any reason why the vacancies on the foundation are not filled up?—Well, that has always been a matter that perplexed us very much; we are most anxious, considering the original object of the institution, that it should be avoided.

10732. Do you think the attendance at the school is likely to increase, as the school is better known, or is the new Intermediate Education Act likely to stimulate it?—Yes; I think it likely that may stimulate it.

Dr. THOMAS KANE, J.P., examined.

10733. LORD JUSTICE FRIDGEMAN.—You seem to be one of the most active and regular attendants amongst the Governors of Lesney's schools?—I attend very regularly.

10734. Do you look after the school itself, beyond attending the meetings?—No.

10735. There is one matter on which we would be glad to get some information from you. How do you account for there being so few applicants to get on the foundation?—I cannot explain it. We have done all we could, but there are very few applicants.

10736. And none from Roman Catholics?—None.

10737. All the children on the foundation at present are Protestants?—Yes.

10738. Can you tell us where the Roman Catholic children of Limerick, of the class that go to Lesney's schools, get their education?—I fancy it must be at home. Some go to the Christian Brothers' schools. There is also a Roman Catholic Diocesan school, and the Jesuits have a school that a great many go to.

10732. Do they give a higher education?—They do.

10740. Then there is no want of places for Roman Catholics to obtain education?—Not the slightest.

10741. Does the progress of Lonsay's schools appear to you to require any change?—I think it is conducted exceedingly well, but I think it would be better attended if classes were taught there.

10742. LOUIS B. CHURCHILL.—Are you prohibited under the scheme from teaching classes?—Yes.

10743. Have you ever discussed, at the Board, the desirability of altering the scheme and introducing classes?—Yes, an application was made, some time since by the master, for leave to introduce classes as one of the subjects of education, but it was refused by the Governors. Classes could not be taught, being precluded by the scheme.

10744. I suppose the Court of Chancery could change the scheme and introduce classes as one of the subjects, if the Governors made application?—I don't say it could.

10745. But the Governors never made such an application?—No.

10746. Do you find that there is a want of means for acquiring a classical education in Limerick?—I do not think there is.

10747. Do you think the management of Lonsay's schools is thoroughly satisfactory to the inhabitants of Limerick?—I cannot say that.

10748. Have you ever heard of any complaint?—I have not.

10749. They have not made any complaint that the endowment is not used by the class when the testator intended to benefit?—No. I know the school is carried on to the satisfaction of the trustees and Governors.

Miss Ellen
Webb

MISS ELLA WEBB, examined.

10750. LOUIS JUSTIN FORTINER.—You have been the principal teacher in Lonsay's girls' school since it was opened under the new scheme?—Yes.

10751. I believe you were previously assistant teacher at the Model school?—I was.

10752. I understood you were strongly recommended for your present position by the District and Head Inspectors of the National Board?—Yes.

10753. How many years experience in teaching had you, before you accepted the post of mistress of Lonsay's school?—Ten years.

10754. Were you all that time teaching in the Model school?—Not in Limerick. I was for a short time teacher in the Newtownstown Model school.

10755. Where were you yourself educated?—At Coleraine Model school.

10756. You have one assistant in the teaching of the girls at Lonsay's school?—I have.

10757. You have had her since 1875?—Yes.

10758. How do you and she divide the work between you?—We divide it between us as best we can—we have no regular division at all—we cannot, on account of the young children.

10759. How are the children classified in the school?—The children are classified, as far as it is possible to do so. But it is not possible to classify them all—some of them are learning the alphabet, some are in words of two letters, some are learning to read—and then we begin the regular classes.

10760. Have you children in the school so young as to be learning their letters?—Yes; children not knowing the alphabet. That was what caused the necessity for a mistress. On that account, and no other, I applied for the appointment of a mistress—not on the ground of the number of girls in the school, but on the ground of the inequality in the ages of the pupils.

10761. What education do you give to the highest class of scholars?—I teach the highest class, as a rule, myself.

10762. Tell us what you teach them?—It would be all but impossible to do so. They are studying the regular routine course which is taught in the Model schools.

10763. Do you pursue the same course of instruction?—The same.

10764. Do you use the National School books?—Yes; with the addition of English History.

10765. To what class in life do the children that attend the school belong?—The respectable middle class.

10766. Are their parents shopkeepers?—They are all, with one or two exceptions, in business.

10767. We saw the schools this morning, and judging from the girls' appearance, their parents belong to different classes of society—some looked much better clad than others?—I have two girls who are free pupils—I do not know whether you noticed them, or not. As a rule the children are all respectable.

10768. In the management of the school, are you subject to any periodical inspection?—No; except the annual examination.

10769. There is no quarterly, or occasional, inspection by any one?—No.

10770. Do the Governors visit the school during teaching hours at all?—Never.

10771. Do any of them ever visit the school, to see how things are going on?—None, except the Rev. Mr. Jacob.

10772. He attends for the purpose of religious instruction?—No. Mr. Jacob does not give religious instruction, but he has called occasionally to inquire how we are getting on.

10773. Is he the clergyman of the parish?—No.

10774. Is the school visited by any of the Governors, except Mr. Jacob?—No—they never come.

10775. Do you find the management of the school satisfactory?—Yes, with the help I have, if I had additional help I could do much more.

10776. The additional help which you applied for, was for assistance in teaching the younger children?—Yes. I asked for a mistress to teach the children the alphabet and easy spelling.

10777. The building seems to be deficient in place for recreation for the children—there is only a small playground?—Yes; it is insufficient.

10778. How do the children spend their recreation time?—They play in the room under the mistle room.

10779. I suppose in fine weather they can go into the yard?—Yes, but it is very dirty, and it is not much used on that account.

10780. Did you send any of the girls to the Intermediate Examinations?—No; I was at home myself, in consequence of severe family trouble, at the time, and I did not hear anything about the Intermediate Examinations until it was too late. At any rate, my pupils were under the age. I had only one girl in the school who was sixteen years of age.

10781. There is no minimum limit of age?—I did not know that. I thought they should be sixteen years of age. However I knew nothing about the matter until it was too late for this year's examinations.

10782. Do you propose to send any girls up next year, and thus get an opportunity of increasing your funds?—Yes, if I get the necessary help in teaching the school.

10783. Did you ever try the experiment of giving one of the elder girls to teach the alphabet to the younger ones?—Yes, but they have an objection to doing it. As a rule, they come to the school in order to get a thorough English education, and they require their whole time for their own work.

10784. The girls will not act as teachers gratuitously?—No, not willingly, and I do not like to press them. I do not feel that I am warranted in doing so.

10785. What is the largest number of free pupils you have ever had?—I have had seven, but that was only for a short time.

10786. Why did they cease attending?—One was removed in consequence of her parents leaving the city, and the others went to business.

10787. What do your pupils generally go to, when they leave the school—how are they employed?—The free pupils are bound apprentices to dressmakers, or something of that kind, the others go home, I think, as a rule.

10788. Have you been long enough yet in charge of the school to know how the children have got on in the world?—Well, those that were educated by me have got home, as a rule.

10789. The number at present attending your school is put down as thirty-seven?—Yes. There are some applications for admission.

10790. Are those applications for free places?—No—for admission as paying pupils.

10791. You have had at some periods as many as fifty in the school?—Yes, again and again, but the school always dwindles down again, for want of help. When I get the numbers up to fifty, it dwindles down again from that cause. I cannot work miracles.

10792. You cannot work the school when there are fifty scholars?—I cannot, owing to the young children. If my pupils all began with the "Fourth Book," as they do in the boys' school, I could easily manage with one assistant.

10793. LOUIS R. CHURCHILL.—You think the numbers have fallen off because when you had a larger number you were unable to educate them satisfactorily, owing to the presence in the school of very young children?—Yes. I found I could not do it, although I worked ten hours a day.

10794. The school has fallen off, because the governors declined to accede to your demand for an additional teacher?—Yes, solely on that account.

10795. How many do you think you would be able to get the school up to, if you had an additional teacher?—If I had got the help, when I first looked for it, I have no doubt I could have worked up the number to eighty, but no higher—there are too many other schools in the city.

10796. Do you think you will get more pupils as the year goes on?—I do. I will get two to-morrow.

10797. Is there any difference made in the teaching, or do you find any difference made by the children amongst themselves, between those who are free pupils and the others?—No.

10798. There was at one time an arrangement about teaching music?—There was.

10799. Does that arrangement continue?—Well, I have only one music pupil at present, but anyone that wishes can be taught.

10800. Are you qualified yourself to teach it, or is there a separate teacher for music?—A teacher attends at the school for the purpose. It is entirely a matter of convenience for the parents of the children.

10801. She is paid separately?—Yes, the children pay her.

10802. What is the largest number you have had learning music?—Fourteen.

10803. Was it vocal music?—No—instrumental music—the piano.

10804. How do you account for the falling off in the number?—I cannot account for it, they withdrew while I was at home this year, in consequence of the death of a near relative.

10805. How many pupils had you at any time learning French?—Ten, I think was the highest.

tion. When the school was opened, I was told by the governors to say that ten a quarter would include instruction in French, and for a time it did. The master appointed was to be responsible for that, he was to teach the boys and girls together. After a time there was a change made, I did not know anything about it, but there was no provision for the girls being taught French. I then had to get out of that difficulty with the parents as best I could, and ask them to pay extra for French. At present I have ten pupils paying for extra to a teacher, to come twice a week.

10807. The class is separate for the girls?—Yes. It is only an experiment of my own. I mentioned to the governors that I wanted provision made for it, as I said I had told the parents that French would be included in the 10s. fee, but the governors refused to do it.

10808. I understand you have a competitive examination among your scholars, at which you give prizes, every Christmas—and the prizes sufficient to induce the children to do their best?—I think not. I think we should have more money for prizes. I found it very difficult to manage last year—the answering was so equal throughout the school—there was scarcely more than a mark, or a mark and a half, difference, when the results were tested up, between some of the girls, and the amount I had for the purpose was so small that I was unable to give prizes that were worthy of the pupils.

10809. In your return to this Commission, you mention that a classroom is needed, to be fitted with a gallery, and furnished with charts and pictures suitable for the instruction of infant pupils?—Yes, I consider it important that the infants should have a gallery, the same as any other school where infants are taught.

10810. Are the infants at present taught in the same room with the other children?—Yes, in the same room, and frequently they have to be left to themselves, even with the best management, while I and the assistant are engaged in teaching the other children.

10811. Is not there a large room down stairs?—Yes, it is used as a play-room. It is not suitable for a class-room. Besides, if the infants were put there, they would be entirely removed from under my own supervision.

10812. Have you all the appliances you want for instructing the children?—No—I have nothing suitable for the little children. They have to be instructed one or two at a time—hence the difficulty.

10813. What are the ages of your pupils?—The youngest is between three and four, and they range from that up to sixteen.

10814. How many are there between the ages of three and six?—About half a dozen—there are altogether fifteen little things, and these have to be left to themselves frequently.

10815. In addition to your salary and fees, you have coal, gas, and apartments?—Yes.

10816. When you made your application for the pupil teacher, did the Governors come to the school and inspect it, in order to see for themselves whether the application was one that ought to be granted?—They did not.

10817. Then they were not in a position to judge?—Well, I wrote fully to them and explained the necessity of it—I told them it was not at all on the ground of the number, but on the ground of the difference in the attainments of the pupils—that it was impossible for me to do justice to all while those little children were in the school, without a special person to look after them. I wish to call attention to a matter that was referred to, during Mr. Lyaught's examination, in reference to the inspector's report on the girls' school, when he stated there was a want of classification. I think Mr. Lyaught ought to furnish you with my reply to that.

10818. That report had reference to the year 1875?—Yes.

Age 25, 1879.

Miss Ellen
Wick.

10819. It seems to have been set right after wards?

—Yes.

10820. LORD JUSTICE FITZGERALD.—You are quite right—I did notice an entry, in the Minute Book, in which it was stated that the inspector had called attention to the want of classification in the girls' school in 1876, but that Mr. Lyneight explained that Miss Weir had not set it all right, and the inspector, in a subsequent year, reported that the girls were classified to the satisfaction of the chairman.—The reports of Mr. Weir upon the teaching in the school have been very satisfactory—they could not have been more so.

10821. Is he in any way a connexion of yours?—No.

Mr. William
Lyneight, JP.

Mr. WILLIAM LESAUTE, J.P., recalled.

10822. LORD JUSTICE FITZGERALD.—I understood there is a rule of the board in existence, that children under six years of age should not be admitted to the Lenny schools?—Yes.

10823. When was that rule made?—I think it was made some years ago, when the governors were arranging about the limits of age for admission into the school.

10824. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—Then that would be in 1875?—Yes.

10825. Why is not that rule carried out?—I thought it was carried out.

10826. You were not aware that there was children under that age in the school?—I was not aware that there were such young children in the school, as Miss Weir has stated.

Miss Ellen
Wick.

Miss ELLEN WEIR, recalled.

10827. LORD JUSTICE FITZGERALD.—Age is sometimes a fallacious test of proficiency, how many children are there in your school, who have not advanced beyond words of four letters?—Six or seven.

10828. Six or seven of the children are learning the alphabet, or just beginning to read?—Yes.

10829. Are those children below six years of age?—Two of them are.

10830. I suppose it is not so much the teaching of these young children, as the necessity of constantly looking after them, that creates the difficulty?—Yes.

10831. Were you aware of the rule made by the governors, that no children should be admitted under six?—That rule was made on my application for the monitorship. It was to prevent the appointment of a monitor, that rule was made. That was the answer I got—that I was not to admit such children at all—and that rule is very much against the success of the school.

10832. In point of fact, you have only two children who are under that age?—That is all.

10833. Then if those children were excluded, it would only reduce your number by two?—Yes.

10834. Why do you say it would be very much against the success of the school if that rule were carried out?—Because the parents wish the little ones to be with their elder sisters.

10835. How is it, that although the Governors have made the rule, those young children are still admitted?—Because I cannot refuse them—when parents have grown children, they wish the little ones to be with them in the school.

10836. Did you inform the Governors that you were unable to act according to their rule?—No; I do not think so. That all happened upon my application for a monitorship, and I do not think there has been any reference to it since, that I am aware of, except that a few months after the rule was made a new register was ordered by the Governors, and that does not contain any column for age at all.

10837. In the Model schools, are the monitorship pupil teachers?—No. They are a different rank altogether. A pupil teacher is paid £26 a year.

10838. The pupil teacher is above the monitorship?—Yes.

10839. Are the monitorships themselves attending the school for the purpose of being taught?—Yes.

10840. They are both pupils and teachers?—Yes.

10841. Of what ages generally are the monitorships?

in National schools?—They can be appointed when over twelve years of age.

10842. If appointed at that age, what remuneration do they get?—When I was in the Model school we began by getting 30s. at the end of the year, but monitorships now get a great deal more.

10843. I suppose that to point what you want would involve an expense of from £5 to £10 a year?—Yes.

10844. And with that assistance you would be able to admit the very young children, and at the same time give your own attention, and that of the assistant teacher more efficiently to the other children?—Yes.

10845. With regard to the domestic questions to which you have called our attention in writing, we have no power to deal with them, and cannot interfere with them at this Commission?—There is one point I wished to mention; I would not like to be asked again to resign. I want to know can the Governors require me to resign?

10846. LORD JUSTICE FITZGERALD.—That depends entirely on the nature of your agreement with the Governors—we have no power to deal with that.

10847. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—It does not come within the scope of our inquiry at all.

10848. LORD JUSTICE FITZGERALD.—We have had a very good account of your qualifications as a teacher, and we hope the other question will not arise. Do you wish to add anything further?—There is another point I wished to mention. It is as to the character of the free pupils—in one case, it has been decidedly against my school. One of the pupils in the school gave on great dissatisfaction by her conduct, and she gave the school a name which it has not got over, even yet.

10849. Was that girl removed from the school?—Yes, I got her removed from the school afterwards, but I was obliged to keep her until the mischief was done. It is only to prevent its occurring in future that I mention the matter; she was certainly a wicked child, and a thief into the bargain. Things were rising for a length of time before I discovered who was to blame.

10850. I am quite sure you must be aware that it is impossible, in all cases, to judge of the character of children beforehand, any more than of grown-up people, and, even with the greatest care and discrimination, cases do occur occasionally of unworthy objects being admitted?—Of course, I understand that.

Mr. JOHN HENDERSON, examined.

Sep 18, 1878.

Mr. John Henderson.

10851. LORD JUSTICE FRANKLIN.—You have been master of the Leamy's male school since its opening under the new scheme?—Yes, since 1873.

10852. What was your experience in teaching previous to your appointment?—I began as pupil teacher in 1864, and have been teaching ever since.

10853. Under the National Board?—Yes.

10854. You have been also, I think, at Monaghan school with Mr. Hume?—Yes, for nine months.

10855. What position did you hold with him?—English and mathematical assistant.

10856. You teach the Leamy's male school yourself, with the help of your assistant?—Yes.

10857. You have also got a monitor or pupil teacher?—Yes.

10858. How do you divide the teaching work between you?—The boys are divided into four classes, and one class are at their desks, at work which we give them to do, and which only requires us to see that they are really attending to their business, while we are engaged in the instruction of the other classes.

10859. What class does the assistant teach?—The junior class only.

10860. In what branches does he instruct them?—Reading, arithmetic, writing, and geography.

10861. What age are your youngest pupils?—Have you any that are only commencing?—No, there is a rule that no boy shall be admitted under ten years of age. They are able to read the "Second Book" of the National School series before they come.

10862. You have no boys at rudimentary work, and no boys under ten?—No.

10863. Do they commence arithmetic with you?—They perhaps know addition, or something like that. They always know something of arithmetic before they are admitted. They generally commence arithmetical when they learn to read.

10864. What does the first assistant teach?—He has charge of the middle division of the school, almost entirely.

10865. What are they taught?—An English education generally.

10866. Are they taught any sciences?—They are generally taught one book of Euclid, and physical science of a simple nature.

10867. How is it taught?—By home tasks and lessons at school.

10868. From books altogether?—Yes.

10869. What science is the head class instructed in?—In "Gosse's Physics." They read it at home, and it is explained at school; also algebra, trigonometry, and trigonometry, when we have a boy fit to go into it.

10870. What history course have you?—They only learn English history, the highest class read Hume's history, and the other classes Collier's.

10871. How many boys did you send up for the Intermediate examinations?—None.

10872. What were the results?—Two of them came out on the prime list, and one other "passed".

10873. Dr. Hume?—Six did not pass?—Six did not pass.

10874. LORD JUSTICE FRANKLIN.—Do you think you will be able to send up a large number of boys next year?—I am afraid not, unless we get donations into the school. That is one of the reasons why our numbers have fallen off. When the scheme for the Intermediate examinations came out a number of our boys left, and went to schools where they could learn classics, in order that they might add classics to the English and sciences they had learned with us, and some of these boys were successful at the examinations.

10875. What branches of examination did your pupils go up for?—English, natural science, and mathematics, and one took French.

10876. Where did he learn the French?—With us, and at home besides.

10877. How is French taught in the school?—We have not had any French taught for the last three months, on account of not having a teacher.

10878. You do not teach French yourself, nor does your assistant?—I used to teach it, but I do not pretend to pronounce it properly. It was, in fact, only half teaching, and it was better to get a master that could pronounce it.

10879. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—You teach natural sciences?—Yes.

10880. LORD JUSTICE FRANKLIN.—In what respect, as your opinion, might the building be improved?—It is deficient in not having a room where a class could be kept separate.

10881. So as to make a better division of the children?—Yes.

10882. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—The room might be divided—it is so large that a portion might be taken off?—Yes, by a partition. That is done to a certain extent.

10883. Do you make any use of the lower room?—Yes, when the Rev. Mr. Griffith stands for religious instruction, the boys that do not belong to his class are brought there.

10884. You have stated, in your returns to this Commission, that you want a smaller room, with galleries—would that be for the young boys, or for the older ones?—For both—there are some subjects that can be taught better in such a room.

10885. How much was your remuneration altogether last year?—As far as Leamy's school is concerned, I got in 1878, £51 for capitation fees, and £100 salary.

10886. You say—"as far as Leamy's school is concerned"—have you other sources of remuneration?—Yes I have private tuition in the morning and evening.

10887. Have you classes that come to your room in the evening?—I never had a class—young men come to me for tuition—only one at a time.

10888. You give these instruction wholly independent of the school?—Yes.

10889. The assistant master has a salary of £40 a year?—Yes.

10890. And five shillings capitation fees?—Yes.

10891. You have rooms in the building?—I have.

10892. Is there any religious instruction given to the Roman Catholic boys in the school?—When we had a larger number Mr. O'Regan took them as a class, and gave them religious instruction, but now we have only a few in the school.

10893. The returns furnished to us state the numbers to be—Irish Church, 43, Presbyterians, 10; Roman Catholics, 7, Protestant Dissenters, 61—Yes I believe that is right.

10894. You have seven free scholars?—We have nine now. There were two added since the report was furnished to you Commission.

10895. Of what class is left are their parents?—One is an ex-constable of police—he has two sons free. There is also a widow's son—I do not know what class the parents of the others belong to.

10896. You have charge of the gates, and you are also responsible, with the mistress, for having the building kept clean and in proper order—is there any fixed time for getting it cleaned and washed?—It is generally washed twice a year. I believe one year it was only washed once. £4 a year does not pay a servant to do it properly.

10897. Do you mean that £4 is not sufficient for washing the place twice a year?—No, but to keep it constantly clean, swept, and dusted every morning.

10898. I understand the allowance of £4 a year is given to you for a servant, and that part of the servant's business is to keep the building clean?—Yes.

10899. Do you think the number in the school would be increased if you were able to give the boys a classical education?—I think so. I am not sure whether it would be unmet, but we would certainly be able to retain the teacher we have.

10900. Have you had a classical education yourself?—Yes, but I never have professed to teach classics.

10901. Then if classics were taught in the school, the Governors would have to employ an additional teacher?—Yes.

10902. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—Do the boys use the playground?—They do, but during recreation time a good many of them go home for their lunch.

10903. They live sufficiently near the school to do that?—Yes.

10904. As a rule, do the boys reside in the neighbourhood of the school?—They come to us from all parts of the city, and some of the boys come every morning by train from the country.

10905. From places in the neighbourhood?—Yes; from Stranabridge, Bally, and Patrick's well.

10906. Lord R. CHURCHILL.—Is there a periodical examination of the school?—Yes; once a year it is examined by Mr. Webb.

10907. There is no other examination?—No other.

10908. Dr. HART.—What prizes are given?—Books, to the value of £4, chosen by me.

10909. Lord R. CHURCHILL.—Do the Governors ever come and look in at the school, during the hours of study?—Now and again they do, but very seldom.

10910. Do you attend the meetings of the Governors?—Whenever I have any special matter to bring before them, I do.

10911. I suppose you generally communicate with them through the Secretary?—Yes.

Yes, Charles
 Hart, Esq.

VIC. CHARLES HART, Esq., Archbishop of Lincolne, resident.

10912. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—You spoke of the Villiers' schools as being under your own management—when did your connection with them commence?—In July 1854.

10913. They were founded under the will of Mrs. Hannah Villiers?—Yes, her will was made in 1819. The schools were built in 1824.

10914. How are the different branches of the institution divided?—The centre of the building is Henry's school in the Orphanage—the male school is at the right hand side, and the female at the left.

10915. The whole institution is one building?—It is one building, crossed out of the funds of the charity.

10916. How are the funds which maintain the institution derived?—From money in Government Stock, and from rent. I have nothing to do with the investment of the fund. We receive through the Court of Chancery a certain sum for the support of the charity every year, and we have to pass an account with the Accountant-General.

10917. Do you know how much money there is now in Government Stock, for the use of the charity?—I could not tell you. We have nothing to do with it—we merely get £600 every year from the Accountant-General of the Court of Chancery, and we receive a reimbursement of £134 12s. 4d., each half-year from Mr. Monie—striking out of hands in the county Clare.

10918. How are the dividends upon the money in Chancery paid to you?—When we pass our account we receive the money. We are allowed to keep in hand a sum equivalent to about two quarters' expenses—and we send up an account with the vouchers, the Accountant-General, on its being passed, gives us an order for £600.

10919. To what credit is that money transferred?—To the credit of the charity, in the Provincial Bank.

10920. How are the rents—which you say are £154 12s. 4d. half-yearly—paid?—They are paid to us by Mr. Frank Morris, the agent over the estates.

10921. Lord R. CHURCHILL.—Out of the Villiers' Fund you maintain these schools and orphanage, and also another charity?—Yes—the widows' almshouse.

10922. How many widows does that support?—Twelve widows. They get £24, Irish, a year each, and they have also their residence, which is kept in repair and furnished. We have a schedule of payments sent to us from the Court of Chancery, and we have to pass our accounts according to that list.

10923. With the exception of the widows, are there any objects to which the funds of the charity are applied, except the schools?—There is the orphanage.

10924. That is part of the schools?—Yes.

10925. Then substantially the funds of the charity are divided between the widows and the schools?—Substantially; but there is something given, under the will, to the Presbyterian congregation.

10926. What sum of money is actually spent on the schools?—The amount actually expended last year on the whole charity was £905 12s. 9d.

10927. Was that your whole income?—No—our income was more than that. We do not expect our entire income, and consequently there have been accretions. We are going to memorial the Lord Chancellor to allow us to increase some of the disbursements.

10928. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—Do you keep any regular books?—No, we keep no other books than those I have shown you.

10929. Is not this book which you have produced only a Memorandum Book? It has a copy of the account on one side, and a copy of the rules on the other?—That is so.

10930. I see a considerable amount deducted from the payments made to you for income tax?—Yes, we get it returned afterwards.

10931. How much do the trustees receive?—£23 17s.—that is £20 Irish to each, under the Will.

10932. Where do the trustees live?—Do Wilkeson's well.

10933. You get £36 18s. 6d. each?—Yes, £40 Irish.

10934. Lord R. CHURCHILL.—The charity is entitled to three rent-charges?—Yes, there are three tenements, one in the county Tipperary, and two in Clare.

10935. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—For the maintenance of the orphanage, I find charged—about £50 12s., next £45 1s. 8d., and a number of smaller sums?—Yes; £160 a year is allowed for its maintenance by the Court of Chancery.

10936. There are a number of items which would come under the head of repairs, painting, &c., are there for the almshouses, or for the schools, at both?—Both, the almshouses are painted and settled once a year, and the schools another.

10937. Then the account is mixed?—Yes. We do not keep separate accounts for the schools. We keep one account for the whole charity.

10938. The total expenditure for the year was £905, leaving a balance in the hands of the trustees, in full of this account, of £408 10s. 5d. I see the year begins with a balance in hands of £408 10s. 5d.—Yes.

10939. Where is the balance kept?—In the Provincial Bank.

10940. Is it on current account?—No, on deposit receipts. We convert it to current account, according as we require it. Our expenditure is about £200 a quarter, and we are always allowed to have about two quarters' expenditure in hands at the beginning of the year, to enable us to carry on the institution, and we receive the £600 from the Accountant-General. I wish to mention that there is an accumulation of monies of the fund of the charity, now yielding £80 a year, and we are about memorialising the Chancellor to sanction the expenditure of the greater part of that £80 a year for the purposes of the charity. The memorial would have been sent in before the version, only that Mr. Wilson, our counsel in Dublin, was ill; but we expect to have it brought before the Chancellor next term.

10941. What does the £90 a year arise from?—Accumulation of surpluses.

10942. Where are they?—In the funds. The Accountant-General could tell you more about the matter than I can.

10943. The only sum received from Chancery is the £200 a year?—Yes, and they have a good deal more than that, if they would give it to us.

10944. Then the surpluses you have spoken of are surpluses in the Court of Chancery?—Yes.

10945. Have you ever got a copy of the Accountant-General's account, in order to know exactly how matters stand?—Never.

10946. Are you aware that, as trustees, you are entitled to get a copy of the account?—I am not.

10947. You have not seen it?—No. I never saw it.

10948. There are but two trustees?—That is all.

10949. Are they ex-officio?—Yes; they are the Rector of St. Munin's and the Presbyterian Minister.

10950. Have you any fixed time to meet?—No; we have no fixed time, but we meet two or three times a week.

10951. About the business of the charity?—Yes.

10952. Do you know how the sum of £200 a year was paid, as the sum you were to receive from Chancery, for I find that, in 1857, the charity was getting, or entitled to get, £246 4s. 4d.—I cannot tell you.

10953. Perhaps the accumulations you mention are accounted for by that?—Probably they are. At all events they only give us £200 a year.

10954. The account book you have produced to us is only a memorandum book?—It is a copy of what we send up to Dublin when passing our account.

10955. LORD B. CHURCHILL.—Are we to understand that your account goes up to the Court of Chancery in that form—the items for widows and for schools mixed, as here?—Yes. That account is according to the schedule laid down for us. We have to send up a return for every item of the expenditure.

10956. When you say you send up the account and vouchers, do you know who they are sent to, and how are they vouched?—by what officer?—It used to be in the Master's office.

10957. You have not got the actual document which you sent to the Court of Chancery?—No. We send up the vouchers to our solicitor, Mr. Barrington, and he draws up the account.

10958. You send up the vouchers?—Yes, and a copy of this account which I have produced. This is virtually the same as what we sent to Mr. Barrington.

10959. LORD JUSTICE FRYDEMAN.—Then the account passed is this: you send up a copy of this, which I may call a rough or draft account, with the vouchers, to your solicitor, Mr. Barrington, and from those materials he draws up a formal account, which you do not see, and which is furnished to the Court, and passed?—Yes.

10960. How are the costs of preparing and passing the account paid?—Out of the funds in hand.

10961. Are they paid by you?—Yes, and passed in the account.

10962. Who keeps your books?—Mr. Barrington has our legal papers.

10963. Who has the vouched accounts, which are passed by the officer?—Mr. Barrington, I suppose.

10964. Is he a solicitor in Dublin?—Mr. Barrington lives here, but he has a correspondent in Dublin. His father was previously our solicitor, and before him we had Mr. Gibson, who afterwards became Master Gibson. Our solicitor, previous to Mr. Gibson, was Mr. Barrowes, who was for many years connected with the charity.

10965. LORD B. CHURCHILL.—In what year did you begin to act as trustee of the charity?—In 1854.

10966. Do you recollect the inquiry in 1857?—I do; I was asked no questions at that inquiry, because we had to pass our account in Chancery.

10967. What is the actual endowment belonging to the schools?—I am unable to find it from that book. I could not tell you, because we have never separated it. The first time I acted for the charity was in November, 1854, and the accounts from that time to the present are before you.

10968. LORD JUSTICE FRYDEMAN.—The way the matter appears to stand is this: there is a sum in Chancery, the amount of which you do not know, but out of which you annually receive a sum of £200, besides which you are paid rentcharges amounting to £308 12s. 2d every year, making £508 12s. 2d.—Yes.

10969. Out of the £508 12s. 2d, you make certain payments for the widows, the amounts of which you say are fixed by the scheme?—Yes.

10970. The balance goes in repairing the almshouse, the orphanage, and supporting the schools?—Yes.

10971. And there is no separate account for the schools?—No.

10972. LORD B. CHURCHILL.—Have you no idea what sum is spent on the schools every year?—I could tell you the expenditure.

10973. Can you tell me how much you expend on the maintenance of the orphanage?—I think you said £100 a year was allowed by the court?—Yes, for food, and then clothing costs £65; and besides that there are apprentice fees. There is £10 given with each orphan on leaving the school.

10974. What does that item come to?—£30 a year—we are not allowed to expend more than £30 a year. Then the apprentices got £3 a year for three years for clothing. We send out on an average 10 or 12 a year, and they each get the £3 for three years, so that is £18 a year.

10975. Is there any other expenditure for the orphanage?—Yes, for coals, the matron's salary; and servant's wages. The matron gets £30 a year, the servant £5, and there is the cost of coal and incidental expenses, about £50.

10976. Besides the orphanage, you have two schools?—Yes.

10977. What are they?—A male and female school.

10978. What salaries do you pay?—£120 for the salaries of the teachers in two schools.

10979. LORD JUSTICE FRYDEMAN.—You were connected with the institution in 1857, and no single figure of what was then reported agrees with what we have before us now. Did you give any separate account of these institutions at that time?—We were never asked a question. Dr. Wilson, who was the senior trustee, informed the Commissioners that we passed our accounts every year to the Court of Chancery, and the Commissioners never asked us any questions; they went and visited the schools, and gave us some advice about the children.

10980. LORD B. CHURCHILL.—You have two male and two female schools, have you not?—No, we had the St. Munin's schools under the National Board, and the attendance fell off so much that the Board forced us to amalgamate the male and female schools, so as to make but one school of them.

10981. So that you now have a male school and a female school with the orphanage in Henry-street, and a male and female school in St. Munin's?—Yes.

10982. Then could you, by to-morrow morning, give the Commissioners, on paper, the amount expended—first, on the orphanage; secondly, on the male school, thirdly, on the female school, and fourthly, on the mixed school?—Yes.

10983. We have had a good many confused accounts before us, since we commenced our inquiries, but this is the most difficult one we have had yet?—Well, we pay our accounts quarterly, according to the directions of the will, on 1st February, May, August, and November.

Sept. 24, 1878.

Ven. Charles Hall, &c.

April 28, 1878.

Van, Charles
Hart, &c.

10984. In these accounts I see several entries—"expended at almshouse, £29 11s. 5d." and again, "expended at almshouse, 287 12s. 9½d."—Yes, those were bills connected with the almshouse. On the first day of the quarter we go down, at eleven o'clock, and pay the widows, and any expenses that have been incurred during the quarter, then we go up to Henry-street and pay there, in like manner, all the bills belonging to it. You will see at the left hand of the book what we draw from the bank each time for so much paid to the mistress for the quarter, and you will see the amount of the balance left in bank.

10985. Dr. HART—You have no separate account of how the money is expended?—Yes, there is a book kept at the almshouse.

10986. Do you every year give the particulars of what is in that book to Mr. Harrington?—Yes, we have a form, which I am bringing to to-morrow, according to which we pass our accounts. We have to follow it exactly.

10987. LORD B. CHURCHILL—How many girls does the orphanage contain?—It was originally intended to contain twenty, but there are only fourteen in it at present.

10988. How are they recruited?—By the trustees.

10989. How do you select them—are you confined to orphans belonging to Limerick?—No, Miss Villiers wished them to be selected from the Counties of Limerick, Clare, and Tipperary, where she had her estates.

10990. When a vacancy occurs, do you advertise?—No.

10991. How do you look for the orphans?—We do not look for them. They apply to us.

10992. Do they apply to you from all parts of Ireland?—No, but from the neighbourhood. They have not applied so frequently of late as they used to do.

10993. Why is that?—One reason is this—£10, in 1829, would apprentice a girl as a ribbon apprentice, but it is not sufficient now, and we are not allowed to give more.

10994. You have only fourteen orphans?—Yes, we cannot afford to support more than fourteen, the cost of maintenance is so great.

10995. When was the order in Chancery regarding the charity drawn up?—I think in 1836.

10996. You never applied to the Court to vary it?—We did. We got an increase, but not sufficient to maintain twenty orphans.

10997. From what class of life are the orphans taken?—They are always respectable. We have had daughters of professional men and other gentlemen.

10998. Then the orphans belong rather to the upper classes of society?—Sometimes to the upper classes, and sometimes to the middle classes.

10999. Was that the intention of the will?—The will directed they should be Protestant orphans. I do not remember that it specified any particular class.

11000. Do you confine yourself to the upper class, in selecting orphans?—No; I should say, they are not exactly the upper class—I would rather say the upper middle class.

11001. How long do the orphans generally remain in the Institution?—They enter at seven, and remain until sixteen years of age.

11002. Do you then apprentice them?—Yes, but sometimes they go out as teachers. When they have an aptitude for teaching, we send them to the training school in Marlborough-street, and some of them have done exceedingly well.

11003. Is the education given, of a high class character?—Like that in the Model Schools.

11004. Do they learn music?—They learn music, but it is not in the programme, it is an extra.

11005. Of course, the orphans have no means of paying for that?—They have not.

11006. They pay nothing?—Nothing. We clothe, feed, and apprentice them.

11007. LORD JERVIS FitzGibbon—Are they entirely orphans, or is only their father dead?—Some are entirely orphans, some are children whose fathers only are dead.

11008. LORD B. CHURCHILL—There is a boys' school attached to the building?—Yes.

11009. How many was that school intended to accommodate?—I think forty would fill the room, but we have had more than forty in the former master's time. Mr. Switzer, father of the Mr. Switzer who was a witness here to-day, was the master for a great many years. He was a most successful teacher. Leamy's school was not then working, and it was also before the Model schools came into operation, and at one time he had over fifty boys. We used to communicate with him on account of the number.

11010. At the present moment, you have only fourteen, so that on account of the competition?—Yes, and also because the present master is not long in the school.

11011. Are the boys, sons of tradesmen?—Not all, some of them are gentlemen's, and some professional men's sons.

11012. Has the master any assistant under him?—No.

11013. Do the boys receive a free education?—No, they all pay. Three of them pay £4 10s. a year, eight pay £4, and three, £3 a year, each.

11014. Are we to understand, that when a boy applies to be taught in the school, the trustees settle what he shall pay?—When we appointed the master, we told him that it was advisable he should charge such and such fees, according to what the boys were learning in the school—so much, if they were only learning English, a higher fee if learning Latin, higher still if learning Greek and Latin.

11015. What salary do you give the master?—£22 a year, and a house.

11016. What is the position worth altogether?—Last year he estimated his fees at £46 a year.

11017. And the house, I suppose, is worth £80 a year?—Well, you may say so, as it is kept in repair.

11018. Then he gets about £126 a year?—Yes.

11019. Does he get fuel?—He does.

11020. How long is it since he was appointed?—Last June.

11021. Was he a Scholar of Trinity College?—No, he is going through college.

11022. Where did he come from?—From the County Meath.

11023. Had you many applications for the place?—A great number.

11024. How many pupils have you in the female school?—Forty-nine altogether, including the orphans—thirty-five if you exclude them.

11025. Is it an elementary and higher school?—The same as the Model School.

11026. Are the day pupils of the same class as life as the boys?—They are.

11027. What fees do they pay?—Very small fees—some 2s. 6d. a quarter, some 3s.

11028. There are forty-nine pupils altogether in the school?—Yes, but the average attendance is only from thirty-seven to forty.

11029. There is only one schoolmistress?—Yes, but she has a pupil teacher to assist her to teach the junior class.

11030. Is it an entirely Protestant school?—Yes. There are Presbyterians and Methodists among them—of the forty-nine, twenty-one are Episcopians, eight Presbyterians, and fifteen Methodists.

11031. About the boys' school, how are they divided, as to religious denominations?—There are twelve Church boys, and two Methodists.

11032. What are the religious denominations of the orphans?—Eight belong to the Church, and six are Presbyterians.

11033. Now as to the St. Mary's schools, are they National schools now?—Yes, and they are now amalgamated into one school.

11034. What control have the trustees over it?—The senior trustee, Dr. Wilson, is the patron.
11035. He is a Presbyterian?—Yes, a Presbyterian minister.

11036. Were these schools built with the money of the charity?—Yes, and they are attached to the churches. The girls' schools are in the middle, and one of the schools at each side.

11037. What number have you attending those schools?—There are forty-eight on the roll—thirty-one boys and seventeen girls.

11038. How are they divided as to religion?—Of the thirty-one boys, twenty-two belong to the Irish Church, and nine are Presbyterians. Of the seventeen girls, seven are of the Church, and six Presbyterians.

11039. Are the buildings large?—No, they are not.

11040. Would they accommodate a larger number than are attending now?—Well, the children are now all in one room. We have a second room, and the girls go into it to learn sewing and knitting, but when the boys and girls are all taught in one room, I think it is as full as it need be.

11041. Of course you receive a grant from the National Board?—We do.

11042. What was the amount of the grant last year?—About £56, I think.

11043. Dr. HART—Are classes taught in the boys' school in Henry-street, at present?—Yes.

11044. How long has that been the case?—They were part of the school education before I became a trustee. The late Mr. Switzer taught classes.

11045. No classes appear to have been taught in 1856, and the Chancery scheme provides only for an English education?—That is not quite correct; for classes were taught, and the master used to prepare boys for the Apothecaries' Hall, but it was not supposed to be a classical school. When the elder Mr. Switzer died, his successor made it a more classical school than it had been before.

11046. Then classes were taught in 1856?—Yes. Latin was taught sufficiently to enable boys to be sent to the Apothecaries' Hall.

[The Commissioners adjourned until the following morning.]

HARRIS & A.

TWENTY-EIGHTH DAY—WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 1, 1879.—10 o'CLOCK, A.M.

Oct 1, 1879.

In the Town Hall, Limerick.

Present.—LORD JUSTICE FITZGERALD; LORD RALPH CHURCHILL, M.P.; and ANDREW SEARLE HART, Esq., LL.D.; with G. W. BRADSHAW, Esq., Assistant Secretary.

MR. WILLIAM LEIGHT, & P., called.

Mr. William
Leight, &c.

11047. LORD JUSTICE FITZGERALD.—Can you now state the amount of money belonging to Leacy's schools which is at present lodged on deposit in bank?—Yes, I produce a deposit receipt of the National Bank for £260, which, with a correct cash balance, on 29th September, 1879, amounting to £245 7s, made the entire amount then in bank, to the credit of the schools, £505 7s. I wish to make an observation with regard to some questions put to me yesterday, in reference to the account which I lodged in. The Lord Justice thought that account erroneous, as it omitted to take credit for the £260 on deposit receipt. I wish to explain that the account is not a deposit account, but a cash account; a statement of the correct cash transactions as between us and the bank, and the sums on deposit account I treat, not as cash, but as capital. The sums on deposit receipt only appear in that account when they are transferred to or from the deposit account to the current cash account. The account shows that we have £100 on deposit receipt, as anyone conversant with bank accounts will see, for the figures are £1,100 so we see, and £200 on the other. I treated the whole thing as a cash transaction.

11048. I understand, of course, that this is only a cash account, and all I stated yesterday was (and I think you will see that it is so) that if (as you did yesterday) you deduct the balance £180 8s 3½d, which appears in hand at the end of that account, from the balance £479 10s 4½d in hand at the beginning, and treat the difference as showing your expenditure during the five years, you wrong yourself to the extent of £200, because that £200 has not been expended, but is in bank to the credit of the charity. The account is quite right as a cash account, but to render it a complete statement of your financial position should you not supplement it by a deposit account, showing that you have £260 to credit on deposit receipt?—It is really taken credit for in the account, and, in fact, it would not balance if what you lordship suggests was done.

11049. The only matter of substance is that this, which, as you say, is only a cash account, is only a partial statement of your financial position, for in addition to this cash account you have another account with the bank—an account of moneys on deposit receipt, and if those moneys be included in estimating your quinquennial expenditure you have not reduced your capital from £479 10s 4½d to £180 8s 3½d at all. You have only reduced it from £479 10s 4½d to £280 8s 3½d!—That is so.

11050. DR. HART.—In fact you have two balances in the bank—one of £260, and the other £180 8s 3½d, and the cash account shows the latter only?—Certainly.

LORD R. CHURCHILL.—Any body conversant with accounts, on looking over that statement, would detect it.

11051. LORD JUSTICE FITZGERALD.—In fact, without being very conversant with accounts, we detected it. At all events, it is gratifying to find that you have not, during the five years, expended over and above your revenues, as much money as has been laid out in the costs of the scheme. Do you wish to add anything further?—I produce the reports of the Inspectors (Mr. Webb) as to the Leacy schools, dated respectively 25th July, 1876, 23rd August, 1877, and 17th January, 1879.

MR. WILLIAM M. BRADSHAW, examined.

Mr. Wm. M.
Bradshaw.

11052. LORD JUSTICE FITZGERALD.—You are the Clerk of the Crown for the county of Limerick, and auditor to the trustees of Leacy's schools?—I am. I produce the Accountant-General's certificate, showing that there is £10,246 11s 6d, consols, and £155 4s 3½d, cash, to credit of the charity, in the books of the Bank of Ireland.

11053. I wanted to get some information with reference to an item of £240 8s 8d, for costs?—Yes, I received a cheque for £240 8s 8d, for costs. Of that sum, £207 4s 6d, were the taxed costs of Mr. Ogilby, and a Mr. Ashmore, under several orders of the Court of Chancery, extending over several years.

11054. It represented the costs of the Governors, from February, 1857, till July, 1877, and included all the expense of the litigation, with reference to the new scheme?—Yes.

11055. Was the application for the new scheme

Oct. 1. 1879
 Mr. Wm. M.
 Bunsbury.

opposed in Chancery by any party?—Oh, yes; parties appeared by counsel on both sides. One of the Governors, a Dr. Geary, who disapproved of the proposed scheme, got permission to appear by counsel against it. His solicitor was Mr. Joseph Murphy, and his costs have not yet been taxed or paid.

11056. What was the object of that opposition?—Well, I only can speak there as lawyer, as it was before I became solicitor for the charity, he wanted to change the scheme as proposed by the Governors.

11057. Dr. HART.—Are those costs, which you say have not yet been paid, likely to be large?—About £80, I believe.

11058. Lord Justice FRYGUSON.—What business was included in the item of £80 to 10d?—That represents the costs of the appointment of new trustees, taxed and paid under certificate, and the costs of getting an order to have the dividends paid to the Lord Bishop of Lincoln, and Colonel Mansell, it includes the Attorney-General's costs also.

11059. What is the average expense of an application to the Court of Chancery to appoint a new Governor?—Well, this £16 7s 10d was, previous to the passing of the Judicature Act, when it was necessary to proceed by petition—the affidavits were a little long in consequence of our requiring to get an additional order, to have the dividends paid to two of the trustees.

11060. What do you apprehend will be the expense in future attendant upon a new appointment?—About £16.

11061. Of course, the expense is the same of appointing two Governors, or one?—Just the same—half a dozen would be the same as one.

11062. What is the expense of an application to the Court of Chancery, for the purpose of making an alteration in the scheme?—Well, the cost of the former alteration in the scheme was about £370.

11063. Lord R. CHURCHILL.—I suppose the amount of the expense depends very much on whether it is opposed or not?—It does.

11064. Lord Justice FRYGUSON.—If the Governors were unanimous in desiring to have some alteration in the present scheme—for example by taking during classes as one of the branches of instruction, and suppose that the application was unopposed, what, in your opinion, would it cost to get the scheme made?—Well, you could not well call it an unopposed application, because the Attorney-General should be brought into it.

11065. Of course, but he would be merely a formal appearance. I am assuming that there was no contentious litigation, but that it was brought through the Court of Chancery in the ordinary way, the Attorney-General being obliged, of course, to be consulted, and being represented in the usual way by counsel—what would be the expense?—It could not be done under £60.

11066. There is also a small sum put down in this account for miscellaneous costs, £16 11s. 6d.—Yes, the first item in it, was entering a rule to change the solicitor, from Mr. Ogle to myself, then there was the cost of a power of attorney to draw dividends, and some proceedings in connection with a man named McCarthy, who built a wall across a lane, at the use of our premises.

11067. Did you succeed in that proceeding?—We knocked down the wall.

11068. Are there any other costs due by the institution?—None; except the costs of Mr. Joseph Murphy, which I have already mentioned.

11069. Have you any fixed time for furnishing your costs?—No. I furnish my costs in the ordinary way, when the business is done. Nothing has been done since the proceeding against McCarthy.

11070. There is no such practice now, as appears to have prevailed formerly, of costs being allowed to accumulate for eight years?—No; there is nothing now due to me.

Yrs. Charles
 Barry, M.A.

Ven. CHARLES HART, M.A., Archbishop of Lincoln, recalled.

11071. Lord R. CHURCHILL.—What amount of money is annually expended on the Wilkes' schools, out of the funds of the charity?—£394 13s. 6d.

11072. How is that sum of £394 13s. 6d. distributed among the different institutions?—£381 14s. 6d. on the orphanage; £13 3s. 6d. on the male school; £40 5s. 6d. on the female school; and £79 13s. 10d. on the mixed male and female school in Nicholas-street, I produce accounts showing the details of those sums.

11073. Lord Justice FRYGUSON.—Since we adjourned yesterday, I have read Mr. Wilkes' will, and I find the matter stands thus: your "first account" represents an annuity of £136 1s. Irish, divided as follows: £80 to the trustees, £11 1s. to the Presbyterian congregation, £3 3s. 3d. to the Brompton Hospital, £2 6s. 6d. to the Dispensary, £2 6s. 6d. to the Mendicity, these sums, amounting in all to £10, for the clerk, sexton, and poor Presbyterians; and £2 0s. 3d. in other charities—total, £118 1s. and the remaining £20 is for the Female Orphan Society. Now that £20 is the only part we have anything to say to, how is that paid?—That is not paid now, the Orphan Society is now merged in the Orphanage, and it is not paid now, nor are the items for the Mendicity and Dispensary, and those items go into the accretions, and into the general fund.

11074. Does it go to the Orphanage?—It goes into the general fund.

11075. The Presbyterian charities, I suppose, are paid?—They are.

11076. That includes Account No. 1, "Account No. 2" is £100, Irish, of which the interest was applicable for relief of poor debtors, and I see that a considerable number of debitors were brought out from time to time; I presume that has now ceased?—Yes, and the interest has accumulated now to nearly £50. The £100, Irish, produces £2 odd—nearly £5 a year—which is applicable to that purpose, and has accumulated by accretion.

11077. Now, we come to "Account No. 3," and the first item of income in the schedule of £340 Irish, or £313 16s. 11d., pecuniary currency, and then there is the interest on the vestimentary money. Now, out of that, you have first to pay £285 a year to twelve widows at £24 each?—Yes, £288, Irish.

11078. The next payments, directed by the will, are £20 for the schoolmaster, and £80 for the schoolmistress. What do you pay them now?—We pay £20 to the master, and £25 to the mistress of the St. Munchin's schools.

11079. The next item is £60, being for clothing for forty children at 3s. each—was you still limited to that amount for the clothing?—It has been increased to £85.

11080. Is that the entire sum you are allowed, under the existing scheme, for clothing the children?—There is also £3 a year for clothing each apprentice for three years.

11081. Dr. HART.—The amount charged in the last account for the schoolmaster is £30, not £20?—I can explain that. Our quarters, according to the will, begin February, May, August, and November, so that in the ordinary course a quarter's salary would fall due in February; but Mr. MHE, an schoolmaster, left a month sooner, so that we had to pay him up to the end of the year, that makes the difference.

11082. There was £29 3s. 6d. paid to the mistress?—Yes; the same thing occurred with the mistress.

11083. Lord Justice FRYGUSON.—I said the total sum directed £10 to be spent annually in books for the children?—Yes.

11084. What expenditure is made upon that total now?—We have an item for stationery and books, amounting to £7 14s. 1d.

11083. You have entered some payments in your memorandum-book to "librarians"?—Yes, the two male teachers get £3 a year, and the two female teachers £2 a year, each, as librarians.

11084. That makes £10?—Yes.

11085. Then, in fact, you make a payment to them under the head of Librarians, in addition to their salaries?—Yes.

11086. What duties have they to perform for that?—No special duties.

11087. In point of fact, is it only a form of paying their salary?—Yes. I should mention that there is a library in each school, but it is not much used.

11088. Is it part of their duty to look after those libraries?—It is.

11089. The next item under the will was £14 per annum for fourteen items of cost?—Yes, but we expend a good deal more than that; we expend £31 a year.

11090. Lastly, the trustees left £10 a year for repairs?—We expend more. There have been three alterations since the original scheme.

11091. What is the amount invested to the credit of the charity?—It was £20,823 in the year 1875. The annual interest was £685, of which we draw £508, and the £177 is reinvested.

11092. The Court of Chancery allows you £600 a year, and you have also reimbursements amounting to £512, making £1,112, to meet the expenses of the school, the widows, and the almshouses, and the other uses of expenditure?—Yes.

11093. Dr. HARR.—The expenses of the school are about £335, which deducted from the £600 you get from the Court of Chancery leaves £265?—The will does not allocate any special sum for the schools, as distinguished from other branches of the charity, the whole charity is treated together.

11094. Have you a balance of £65 out of the £600 to credit of the schools, or is it spent in some other way?—It all goes into one account.

11095. It goes to the almshouses?—It goes to the almshouses and other branches of the charity.

11096. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—The order of the Court of Chancery directs that the accounts shall be paid once a year, on notice to the Commissioners of Charitable Bequests—do they attend the rendering of the accounts?—They do.

11097. I see by the book that the minutes were regularly kept by the trustees down to 1839—do you keep any regular minute book now?—No; but whenever we have any transaction, like an appointment of widows or orphans, or anything like that, we keep a minute of it.

11098. I observe that the trustees formerly advertised for candidates for the almshouses, and also in some instances for orphans—how are the orphans now done?—When we get applications we select from them.

11099. You do not now publish any notice of the vacancies?—Now we do not, because we have fourteen orphans at present, and we cannot afford to admit more on account of the increase of late years, in the expense of supporting them.

11100. What is the general number of applications when there is a vacancy?—We have generally applicants waiting to be admitted, before vacancies occur.

11101. The will directs a periodical inspection by the trustees of the schools, to see that the children have made progress—do you hold periodical inspections of the schools?—No, we do not hold regular periodical inspections.

11102. The provision in the will is precise on that point?—Although we do not hold regular periodical inspections, we are constantly in and out.

11103. Let me read you this passage from the will:

"As I have chosen clergyman for my trustees it is expected that they will be attentive in examining the boys and girls at least once a month, to know what progress they have made in literature, and especially in the knowledge of the Christian religion . . . if any boys or girls show a vicious temperament they shall be expelled."

Do you in point of fact examine the scholars at any time?—We have examined them.

11104. But you have no regular periods of examination?—No, no regular periods.

11105. There is another provision in the will, that the girls are to be admitted at the age of eight years, and that when they leave the school they shall, if deserving of it, and if they have been more than four years in it, receive certificates of character?—That has never been done in my time.

11106. At what age do you admit children?—The orphans are admitted from the age of seven upwards, and they remain until sixteen.

11107. They must leave at sixteen?—Yes, that is the age at which they are supposed to leave, but they do not always leave at sixteen, because we may not have an opportunity of appointing them. Another reason is this: there may be three or four girls arriving at the age of sixteen together, and we may not be able to give apprenticeships to each of them, because we are only allowed £30 a year for fees, so that we often have to retain a girl till the following year, for that reason.

11108. Dr. HARR.—They remain more than four years?—Yes, that provision in the will referred to the St. Mary's, and outside schools, not to the orphanage.

11109. I observe that there are two wills in the book which you have headed so—there is an old will of 1792, followed by one of 1819—what is the reason of both wills being copied into the book?—I believe it was because there were some expressions in the first will that were supposed to regulate the other.

11110. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—In fact that the first will was not revoked by the last, so that the two documents together constituted the will?—Yes. She made two wills, one in 1792, and the other in 1819, but it is under the will of 1819 we are chiefly acting.

11111. There are several provisions in the first will as to the amounts of money to be paid?—Yes—the scheme is, in fact, based upon the two wills.

11112. I want to call your attention to your bank book. I see the account for 1878 shows first a lodgment of £154 1s. 4d., which I presume is some payment on account of the reimbursements?—Yes.

11113. Then there is a lodgment of £400—that, I suppose is from the Accountant-General?—Yes.

11114. Lord R. CHURCHILL.—Does the Accountant-General pay you in one sum—once a year?—Yes.

11115. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—I presume, as soon as you have passed your annual account?—Yes.

11116. I find, you drew out the £600 all at once?—Yes, that was in order to put it on deposit receipts. As soon as the money is transferred to us by the Accountant-General we draw it out, and lodge it on deposit receipts of £50 each.

11117. You do that in order to get the interest?—Yes.

11118. Lord R. CHURCHILL.—Can you tell me how much money you have got on deposit receipts at the present moment—does this book show it?—No, it does not.

11119. Have you any book that shows it?—We have the deposit receipts themselves.

11120. Could you, from your own knowledge, say what amount you have on deposit receipts now?—We have over £400.

11121. That is to carry you through the year?—That, with the half-yearly reimbursements, will carry us on until next July, when we will receive the £500 from the Accountant-General.

11122. The £400 you have on deposit receipts, with the reimbursements that will come in in the meantime, is

Oct 2, 1876.
 Yes Charles
 How, &c.

substance, represents what is to carry you on for the six months from January till July.—Yes.

11135. What do you suppose is your ordinary balance of income over expenditure—at the end of the year, do you find you have spent all you have received, or have you any surplus?—Well, £400 is about the balance remaining in bank at the end of every year, and then we have to carry on two quarters out of that, and the expense of each quarter generally amounts from £180 to £200—never £200.

11136. Then is the money you receive only just sufficient for your requirements, or have you any balance remaining over at the end of the year, and if so what is that balance?—The income is more than the expenditure.

11137. To what extent?—Very little more.

11138. As a matter of fact, is what you receive about sufficient to enable you to meet what you have to pay?—Just sufficient.

11139. At the same time, there is an accumulation of £20 a year going on in the Court of Chancery?—There is.

11140. Dr. HART.—Is your account for 1876 a fair average of the expenditure every year?—It is. I do not think there was anything at all special last year.

11141. LOAN R. CHURCHMAN.—In the report of the Assistant Commissioner, who examined this school in 1856, I find this passage:—

“Considering the youth of the pupils, I had no reason to be dissatisfied with the arranging; the bed does it changed only once a month which seems to me to be not frequent enough. Each bed which is one of three feet six inches, accommodates two, and there does not seem to be room for a greater number of beds in the dormitories, which are very small. There is a room appropriated to the purpose of a lavatory, containing a bath, and supplied with water from a pipe, there is also a stove, intended to hold six basins, but not furnished with any, and the children wash in the common bath, they have not separate towels, unless in case of an infectious disease, when the pupil affected has a separate towel or roller.”

—Has your attention been drawn to that report?—That has been altered.

11142. We went over the Institution this morning, and I ascertained that although the house is made for six basins, there were only three in it. You say the matters mentioned in that report have been attended to?—They have.

11143. Do you make periodical inspections of the building and its arrangements, and see that the institution is carried on satisfactorily, and in a proper and cleanly manner?—Well, I have been frequently through the house—I cannot say that I inspect it periodically.

11144. Do you consider it a part of your duty to look after such matters?—Yes, and the master calls our attention to anything that he thinks is required.

11145. LOAN JUSTICE FINEGEMAN.—You have the selection of the master yourself?—We have; all the appointments are in our hands.

Mr. Benjamin
 Barrington.

Mr. BENJAMIN BARRINGTON, examined.

11146. LORD R. CHURCHMAN.—You are a solicitor, residing in Lincoln's Inn?—I am.

11147. What are your duties in connection with the Wilkes' charity?—To pass the accounts every year to the trustees.

11148. Do you audit those accounts?—They are audited by the Court of Chancery.

11149. What do you mean by “passing the accounts”?—I prepare the account in the first place, lodge it in the Court of Chancery, get it passed by the Chief Clerk, and obtain an order for the £200 for the trustees.

11150. Do you prepare the accounts, from the book that the Archbishop has furnished us with?—The trustees furnish me with the rough draft of the account, and the vouchers—I draw it up in the form the Court of Chancery requires, and pass it with the vouchers.

11151. Do you keep a book in which you retain copies of the accounts from year to year?—No, I keep the rough drafts from which I prepare the accounts.

11152. You do not enter them in any ledger?—No.

11153. You send a copy to the Court of Chancery, and keep the original drafts yourself?—I send the verified account of the trustees to the Court, and when passed I obtain a certified copy from the Chief Clerk, which is at present in Dublin.

11154. LOAN JUSTICE FINEGEMAN.—About what is the annual expense of the preparation, lodgment, and passing the accounts, including the costs of the Commissioners of Charitable Bequests?—About £30.

11155. Are those costs paid annually?—Yes.

11156. Is there any arrear of costs now due by the Institution?—There is not.

11157. How much of the £30 represents the costs of the Commissioners of Charitable Bequests?—They amount to about 25 every year.

11158. Do the Commissioners attend, on the passing of the account?—They do.

11159. Do they take part in the vouching?—They attend the vouching.

11160. The rest of the cost of preparing and passing the account are about £25 a year?—About that.

11161. How are your costs paid?—They are taxed in the Court of Chancery, and the amount paid by the trustees.

11162. Are they included in the annual account?—Yes. They are at the end of the account.

11163. Is any postage deducted from the rest charge, or is it paid in full?—It is paid in full. Income tax is deducted in the first instance, but the trustees get it back every year, and it is included in the account.

11164. How is the cash balance at the foot of each account treated?—The cash balance at the foot of the first account is brought over and included in the balance on the third account, and the whole balance is brought forward to the account next year, and that balance keeps the trustees going for the six months until they get the £400 in July.

11165. For how many years have you prepared the accounts?—Six years.

11166. Has there been, during that time, any transfer of the cash balance to capital?—There has not.

11167. Have the trustees been able, during the six years, to invest any portion of the cash balance in lands at the end of the year?—No.

11168. About how much was that cash balance at the beginning of the six years, when you first commenced the preparation of the accounts?—Was it large or smaller than now?—Is or about the same.

11169. Then substantially the institution has paid its way during the six years, and no more?—Yes.

11170. Do you know the balance of which the rest charge, £315 per annum, are paid?—Nothing, except the names of them.

11171. Are they full security?—They are ample security, I believe; but I could not say what is the value of them.

11172. Who is the tenant paid by?—It is paid by the agent over the lands, Mr. Frederick Morris. I wish to mention that there is at present a scheme before the Chancellor for utilizing the balance of the interest produced by the invested capital, over and above the £200 annually paid to the institution, the surplus is about £20 a year, and there is at the moment a scheme for the application of that £20 a year before the Chancellor for his consideration.

11173. In what way does the scheme propose to apply it?—It is proposed that a portion of it should be given to the widows, and the remainder to the orphans, because the trustees at present are not able to support as many as the scheme originally designed, in consequence of the increased price of everything.

11144. Has that scheme been approved of?—Not yet; it is only a draft scheme—it has not been finally confirmed.

11145. I wish to call your attention to the fact that under the will the provision for the widows was fixed at £238 per annum, and a sum of a certain size to be allotted to each, with one ton of coal, and that the orphans appear to have been the object of the testator's bounty for any number there might be of the income of the charity?—Well, the trustees are preparing a counter scheme, by which they are proposing to have the surplus applied altogether for the orphans, except saving the £24 for the widows, to prevent any redundancy instead of Irish currency.

11146. I believe the Comptroller of Bequests were the proposer of the first scheme?—Yes. The counter scheme, now before the Lord Chancellor, has been proposed by the trustees.

Oct 1. 1875.
Mr. Sturgis
Barrington.

MISS MARY STEWART, examined,

Miss Mary Stewart.

11147. LORD JUSTICE FRYER.—You are the mother of the Williams' Orphanage. How long have you held that position?—Since May, 1863.

11148. There are at present fourteen girls in the orphanage?—Yes.

11149. What assistance have you in managing the house?—Only one servant.

11150. What help do the children themselves give?—They do all the housework upstairs. In fact, they do all the housework, with the exception of that in the kitchen; the servant assists in steering.

11151. Do the children keep the house and passages clean?—Yes, they do all the sweeping upstairs, with a little assistance from the servant.

11152. Is all the laundry work done in the institution?—Yes; two girls wash in the laundry with the servant.

11153. How many of the girls are old enough to wash?—All, without exception, do something. Or come the work the younger ones can do a very trifling.

11154. Do you give them instruction in housework?—Certainly; they are taught to do it properly, so as to make them useful.

11155. What are the hours for going to school?—From ten o'clock till three.

11156. The school is separated from the orphanage, but under the same roof?—Yes.

11157. During the school-hours are they under your charge?—No.

11158. Have you anything to do with the teaching?—Nothing.

11159. What meals do the children get?—Three meals a day, and the younger children, and any that are delicate, get lunch in addition.

11160. What food do they get?—Bread and milk for breakfast, with the exception of Sunday, when they get tea.

11161. What is the dinner hour?—A quarter past three—immediately after school.

11162. Do they get nothing between tea and three?—Some of them do—the girls that I think require it get lunch; in fact they all get a little bread.

11163. Do they come from school for it?—No, they take it with them.

11164. What do they get for dinner?—They get soup twice a week. Soup two or three days—in fact, whatever I can afford to give them.

11165. What do they get in the evening?—When they have milk for dinner, I give them coffee and bread in the evening.

11166. Do they get butter?—Not always. I sometimes give them bread and butter for dinner with tea or coffee.

11167. How are the house bills paid?—I keep an account, and give it to the trustees quarterly.

11168. Do you get the meat by contract or by retail?—I buy it as I want it. I can usually say we have a certain price. There is a contract for the milk.

11169. Are you put in funds at the beginning of the quarter, or do you advance the money?—I am put in funds. I run bills for bread and milk.

11170. Are there any accounts allowed to run on longer than three months?—No.

11171. What has been the general health of the children, during the time you have been matron?—

For some time a few of them were delicate. At present they are all healthy. There have been only two deaths during the sixteen years I have been matron.

11172. What were those deaths from?—Consumption.

11173. Have you ever had any outbreak of contagious disease?—We have had scarlet fever once or twice, but it did not spread.

11174. Was there any outbreak of small-pox?—No, we never had a case of it; and there was only one case of measles during the sixteen years.

11175. Do you know what becomes of the children after they have left you?—Some of them are bound to trades, others go as governesses, some as servants—according to their ability, and according to their friends' can help them.

11176. Have you opportunities of knowing how they get on?—Yes, most of them correspond with me up to the present.

11177. How have they succeeded in the world?—As a rule, well.

11178. Have you had any cases in which you were obliged to discontinue children from the school?—Only one; more than five years ago.

11179. Are you responsible for the cleanliness of the establishment?—Yes; entirely responsible.

11180. Is the institution subject to any inspection, periodical or otherwise?—Not, except when the trustees come, which is very frequently, and occasionally we have visitors.

11181. Do any ladies take an interest in the place?—No.

11182. You have nothing in the nature of a ladies' committee?—No.

11183. Or friends coming to see how things are going on?—No.

11184. LORD B. CHURCHILL.—Do any of the relatives of the orphans visit you?—Yes, the relatives visit there occasionally.

11185. LORD JUSTICE FRYER.—Are all the children from the neighbourhood of Elmrick?—No; some are from a distance. I have one child at present from Elmrick, but her mother is in a situation in the county.

11186. LORD B. CHURCHILL.—I suppose the children are all Irish?—Yes.

11187. LORD JUSTICE FRYER.—Do the children study in the evening?—They prepare their lessons for next day.

11188. Have they any fixed hours for that?—Yes, from a quarter to six until seven in the evening.

11189. Is there sufficient accommodation for the fourteen children?—Yes.

11190. Have all the children separate beds?—Not all.

11191. How many beds are there?—If the full number of children were in the orphanage, they should all sleep two together; but, with the present reduced number, some of them have separate beds.

11192. Twenty is the full number of children, and there are ten beds?—Yes.

11193. There is a playground at the back of the house?—Yes.

11194. Do the children walk out at all?—Yes; when the weather is fine.

Oct 2, 1875.
Mrs Mary Stewart.

11215. Are they also allowed recreation in the playground?—Certainly, every day after dinner they get time for play.

11216. Do they take any longer excursions?—I take them out to walk once a week, sometimes oftener.

11217. Who superintends the clothing of the children?—I do.

11218. Who makes it?—I do—at least I cut it out, and the girls help me with the sewing.

11219. It is directed, in the will of the founder, that they are to be taught knitting and sewing—what needlework are they taught?—They learn to do their own sewing, and they learn simple fancy work; they also do their own knitting.

11220. Is that made part of their duty?—It is.

11221. Is it taught in the house, or in the school?—Both in the house and in the school.

11222. Dr. HARRIS.—Some of the girls go out as servants, and the others as governesses?—Some go to military and dressmaking, and a good many as teachers—they are trained to become teachers, under the National Board. We send to the Model school any that the schoolmistress thinks fit to be made teachers of—and some of them have got on very well indeed.

11223. What proportion go as servants?—Very few, they do not like it. When they do go as servants, they go as children's maids or nursery governesses, or something like that. I wish to mention, as one of the Commissioners has called attention to the fact that when they visited the place this morning there was a deficient supply of beams in the lavatory, that the cause was, that the rooms had not been done up. We have no deficient supply.

11224. LOAN JUSTICE FERGUSON.—Do you take care that the children, before going to school in the morning, are properly dressed and clean?—Yes.

11225. Do you superintend their dressing, and see that they are clean and neat?—I do not do it myself, but I see it done.

11226. Are any of the children put in authority over the others?—Yes. Every month one of the older girls is put in charge of the little ones, and she combs, washes, and dresses them. The older girls take the duty in turn every month.

Mrs Eleanor Hewson.

Mrs. ELEANOR HEWSON, continued.

11227. LOAN JUSTICE FERGUSON.—How long have you been at the head of the 'Villiers' girls' school?—Since January, 1853.

11228. Has the number of pupils been very much the same during that period?—I think so—I do not think they have either increased or fallen off much.

11229. It appears that there are fifty day scholars attending the school?—Yes.

11230. Does that include the fourteen orphans?—It does.

11231. Then you have thirty-six day scholars in addition to the fourteen orphans?—Yes.

11232. Is any difference made in the teaching between the two classes?—No difference whatever.

11233. Do you find any difference in their proficiency—do the orphans get on better or worse than the day scholars?—I think if anything the orphans get on better, because, as a rule, they learn their lessons more regularly.

11234. Are they taught in the same classes as the day scholars?—All are taught in the same classes—no difference is made.

11235. I believe they are all Protestants?—Yes. I have only had four Roman Catholic pupils, during any connection with the school.

11236. Into how many classes are the girls divided?—Into four classes.

11237. What do you teach the upper class?—The usual subjects of an English education; English grammar, geography, arithmetic, and history.

11238. Are French or needle taught?—Yes, but not as part of the ordinary school subjects. I teach some of the girls music, but not during school-hours.

11239. Is any arrangement made for teaching French?—Yes, the children can be taught French, on paying terms for it.

11240. Do any of the orphans get an opportunity of joining the French class?—Two of them have lately done so, for good conduct.

11241. Are they taught without payment?—No, their friends pay.

11242. What are the ages of the children in your lowest class?—About three and a half years of age, or less.

11243. How many have you in that class?—Eighteen in the first or lowest class, thirteen in the second, ten in the third, and eight in the fourth.

11244. The fourth is the highest class?—Yes.

11245. Do the children, as a rule, remain sufficiently long to be advanced into the highest class?—They do, always.

11246. What assistance have you in teaching the children?—I have an assistant who attends from eleven till two every day.

11247. Are there only two teachers?—That is all—myself and the assistant.

11248. Have you any paid teachers or ministrants?—Some of the older girls assist in teaching the little ones.

11249. Have you any paid ministrants?—No.

11250. Do you find yourself and your assistant able to manage fifty scholars?—There are never the full number of fifty present—generally about thirty seven to forty.

11251. There seems to be some difference of opinion as to whether a ministrant is necessary to teach the little ones—how do you manage in that respect?—I always teach the first, or youngest, class myself, with the assistance of one of the older girls. The assistant mistress has almost the entire charge of the second. I take the third and fourth classes myself, with the assistant—I take the arithmetic and rote lessons, and we interchange the grammar, geography, and writing, and take them alternately.

11252. Are any fees charged to the children?—Yes, they all pay, except the orphans and a few of the little ones, whom I don't charge for coming with their elder sisters.

11253. What are the fees?—Twelve are charged five shillings a quarter; twelve two and six pence, two are charged three shillings, and one four shillings. I might have got more, but under the printed rules the highest fee was to be five shillings a quarter.

11254. Do the fees go to yourself?—Yes, altogether.

11255. Is there any inspection of the school, or any annual examination?—There is no annual examination. It was only instituted once—I think that was in 1857.

11256. You have no periodical school examinations at which prizes are awarded?—There are no prizes, except what I give myself.

11257. You do give prizes yourself?—Yes; I generally give thirty shillings at Christmas. The marks for the year are counted up and prizes awarded accordingly.

11258. Is the general conduct of the children good?—It is.

11259. Do you think it would be an advantage to the school to have a periodical examination?—Yes, I would like it. I think it would be a benefit.

Mr. WILLIAM MATTHEWS, T.C.D., examined.

OF 1. 1878.

Mr. WILLIAM
MATTHEWS,
T.C.D.

11260. LORD JUSTICE FRANKLIN.—You are the master of the Vithers' school?—Yes; of the boys' school in Henriestown.

11261. How long have you been master?—Since September, 1875.

11262. What are your emoluments?—I receive a salary of £30 a year, with £5 a year as librarian, and school fees.

11263. Have you an assistant?—No.

11264. What are the fees charged?—30s. a quarter for those who are learning English, mathematics, and classics; £1 per quarter for those who learn English and mathematics; and 10s. per quarter for those who are learning English only.

11265. How many of your pupils are paying 80s. per quarter?—Three.

11266. How many are learning mathematics and not classics?—Three are learning mathematics and elementary classics, and I charge only £1. I do not charge the full fee of 30s., unless a boy is somewhat advanced in classics.

11267. Dr. HART.—Did you send up any boys to the Intermediate examinations?—I did, one.

11268. Did he pass?—No. I had only been teaching him for three months. His father did not wish him to go in, but I thought it better to let him go, and take his chance.

11269. Do you expect to send any boys in next year?—I do, but they are very young.

11270. LORD JUSTICE FRANKLIN.—What experience have you had in teaching?—I was teaching for some years in English schools, under Edmund Smith's Board.

11271. What do you do for the boys, in the way of commercial education? Do you teach them book-keeping?—I have not taught it yet, but I can do so.

11272. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—What are the most advanced classes you teach?—At present I have two boys learning English, one Latin, and one is commencing Greek.

11273. What rank of life are the boys in?—Gentlemen's children.

11274. All of them?—All of them—gentlemen and merchants.

11275. Has the number of your scholars increased since you began?—Yes; for about a month after I commenced I had only one boy, but the number gradually increased, and now I have fourteen.

11276. Your school is in a better situation than Mr. Switzer's?—Oh, yes, the school is in a much better part of the city.

11277. Your school buildings are very suitable?—They are.

11278. Have you apartments in the school?—Yes.

11279. You live in the corresponding wing of the house to that occupied by the schoolmistress?—Yes. I have a suite of apartments corresponding to those of the schoolmistress. There are no apartments over the schoolroom.

11280. Has there been any inspection of the school since your appointment?—No regular inspection, but the trustees visit it occasionally.

11281. There has been no examination of the children?—No, but the trustees come in occasionally, and listen to the teaching, and ask questions, if they think it necessary.

Very Rev. THOMAS BERRY, M.A., Dean of Limerick, recalled.

Very Rev.
Thomas
Berry, M.A.

11282. LORD JUSTICE FRANKLIN.—You are one of the trustees of Dr. Hall's charity?—I am.

11283. Are you ex-officio a trustee, as Dean of Limerick?—Yes.

11284. What is the number of the trustees?—I had better state to you that there is at present a petition before the Vice-Chancellor for a revision of the scheme under which the schools have been managed up to this time. I believe that the Vice-Chancellor has almost decided what shall be done with regard to it.

11285. The petition to the Vice-Chancellor is a proceeding taken by the Commissioners of Charitable Bequests?—Yes.

11287. They propose that the funds, which have been hitherto devoted to the school, shall be allocated to strengthen and improve the almshouse branch of the charity—it is a proposal to put an end to the school altogether?—Quite so. I should mention that when I came to have the management of the school—for virtually I have been manager of it—I found it quite impossible to carry out the scheme of 1871, and if we carried it out we should have got into debt very considerably.

11288. It was proposed by the scheme of 1871 that the schoolmaster should receive £50 a year?—Yes; and we had no funds to pay him. When I succeeded to the management, I found the schoolmaster was receiving £50 a year, and that the charity was getting into debt at the rate of about £40 a year. I considered how to go on in that way, with a debt increasing from year to year, would be simply ruinous. I therefore got rid of the schoolmaster, and I got a mistress appointed at a smaller salary. Since then the property has been increased, and we are now in a pretty fair state. At the same time it is considered by the trustees that the school is quite unnecessary, and that, as the almshouse branch of the charity is very weak, it would be desirable that the sum hitherto appropriated to the school should be allocated to increase the stipends payable to the widows.

11289. The property is stated to consist of an inclosed house, which, in 1857, was worth £390 a year. There was at that time an agent who was paid £50 a year, and a half of who received £10. Do you know who collects the rents now?—An agent under the Board of Charitable Donations and Bequests.

11290. What is the present income?—About £365 a year.

11291. Then the property has deteriorated in value since 1857?—Very much. The property has been very badly managed; up to 1870 it was wretchedly managed.

11292. In whose hands was it?—The person who managed it is dead—I do not like to mention his name.

11293. Who were his superiors—were they the Commissioners?—Yes, but he never passed accounts—he was managing the property for seven years, without being called on by the Commissioners to pass his accounts.

11294. Was that after 1834, when the Commissioners of Charitable Donations and Bequests obtained a decree placing the property of the charity substantially under their control?—It was subsequent to that, and prior to 1870.

11295. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—Who was the agent?—He was Mr. McMahon. He had a great deal to do, and was not able to attend to the property, and, in fact, it was not looked after. The houses were allowed to go to ruin, for want of ordinary repair.

11296. LORD JUSTICE FRANKLIN.—Where is the property situated?—It is in the old part of the city—old house property.

11297. Dr. HART.—The rental, in 1857, was £308 1s., out of which the agent received £50 and the half £10—which left £248 net?—I cannot tell you anything about the property prior to the time I became one of the trustees.

Oct 5, 1878.

Twy Dr.
Thomas
Barthol, Esq.

11398. It was less than that when you became acquainted with it—I think it was only £165.

11399. LEON JEREMY FRIZGIBSON.—Mr. M'Mahon, when you have referred to, was the agent under the Board of Charitable Donations and Bequests?—Yes.

11400. In the Report of 1857, I find it stated:—

"Mr. M'Mahon, who is the agent of the Board, is not aware that there were any funds in the hands of the Commissioners at present. . . . Mr. M'Mahon furnishes an account of the income and expenditure . . . to the Commissioners every two or three years; and appears to be generally in advance. . . . With the consent of the Commissioners, from time to time re-biddings have been made at reduced rates, and the present rental is £200 a year; but there is an arrear of old lettings of nearly £100, which, I believe, is nearly irrecoverable. . . . Mr. M'Mahon, as agent of the property and manager of the establishment, receives a salary of £50 a year, and a half fees £10 a year."

That was the state of affairs in 1857; I understood you to say that for seven years, before 1870, there was no account rendered at all?—So I understand.

11401. Since that time what has been the system?—Since that time accounts are regularly passed by the agent, and the Commissioners have looked closely after the accounts of the charity, but I certainly have no complaint of the tardy way in which the whole thing is managed by the office in Kildare-place. I have been endeavouring, ever since I came to Limerick, to get the buildings looked after and repaired. Over and over again suggestions have been made by the overmen to the Commissioners, but in no case have our recommendations been acceded to; they send them back to us, in every case, to reconsider. We have been considering and considering. Our minute book will show what we have endeavoured to do, and what the Commissioners have not done. The consequence is that the property is deteriorating for want of repair; but we are perfectly helpless in the matter.

11402. Who are the trustees of the charity?—The trustees, or "overmen," are, the Bishop of Limerick, ex-officio, the Mayor, ex-officio, the High Sheriff of the city, ex-officio, Mr. Robert Hunt, and Mr. Vero O'Brien. Mr. Hunt and Mr. O'Brien were nominated under the new scheme in the room, I think, of the Recorder and of some other official who had been trustees formerly, but whose offices had ceased to exist.

11403. I see that the Mayor attended the meeting of the overmen in 1875. Has he attended any meetings since?—Yes.

11404. He takes an interest in the Institution?—Yes, the Mayors all do.

11405. The High Sheriff attended in 1876?—Yes.

11406. In 1857, Mr. Hunt and Mr. O'Brien attended?—Yes.

11407. The overmen appear to hold one meeting in the year?—That depends on what we have to do. There is no fixed time of meeting.

11408. Is the school in operation at present?—Yes, but it is merely an infants' school.

11409. In 1857, there were on an average 51 attending the boys' school—45 being on the roll—and the buildings were stated to be suitable for 60 children; in the girls' school there were 23 attending, and they had accommodation for 105. Can you tell us what is the reason for the schools falling off?—I do not know. The schools had fallen off very much before I came to Limerick, which was not till 1872.

11410. Since 1872, what steps have been taken to keep up the school?—The first step we took was to get rid of the schoolmaster. When I came, I found a schoolmaster was receiving £50 a year, and a schoolmistress £30, and, as I told before, if we continued that state of things we would have incurred a debt of £40 a year, and consequently the overmen thought it absolutely necessary to reduce the staff of teachers, so we appointed a new mistress at £20 a year and the schoolmaster was discharged.

11411. The schools are in Nicholas-street?—Yes.

11412. They are close to the Cathedral school, and also to the Villiers' school?—Quite close.

11413. In 1857, there were thirty-three day scholars attending Nicholas-street boys' school—is it a primary school?—It is a more infant school at present—the children are very young, and are taught merely the rudiments of reading, writing, and arithmetic.

11414. Is it still a boys' school?—It is now a mixed school.

11415. Dr. HARR.—In 1857, the education given was rather above the average—it appears to have been a good school—there were a most efficient master and mistress—one paid £20 a year, the other £30—all that is now changed?—The whole question the overmen had to consider was, should we go on running into debt at the rate of £40 a year—a course which was necessarily led to embarrasment—on which we were the property, and have it, as it is now, able to pay its way, and with some balance to our credit.

11416. LEON JEREMY FRIZGIBSON.—What is the state of the buildings?—They are in a wretched tumble-down condition—a disgrace to us.

11417. Have you no means of putting them in repair?—The Commissioners of Charitable Donations and Bequests have money on hand, and if you look at our minute book you will see correspondence with them from time to time, urging them, in the strongest manner, to repair the building.

11418. I find that, on the 20th February, 1875, it was unanimously resolved and agreed by the overmen:—
"That the offer of Mr. W. E. M. Carthy, of the firm of M'Carthy and Gould, builders, for the dilapidated houses at each side of the entrance to the almshouses be accepted, and that the agent be authorized to lay the matter before the Commissioners of Charitable Donations and Bequests for their sanction, and to inquire what terms of years the Commissioners could grant for a lease?"—

Yes; we thought that offer ought to be accepted.

11419. The next entry is 4th April, 1876:—

"Letter read from the Commissioners of Charitable Donations and Bequests, stating that the negotiation for a lease of the premises in Nicholas-street, to Mr. W. E. M'Carthy, would not be further proceeded with, and that the Board would be glad to consider any suggestion which may be made by the local overmen as to the best way of settling the portion of the property intended to have been occupied in the house to Mr. M'Carthy?"—

I may call your attention to that; you will see that our first suggestion was that Mr. M'Carthy's offer to take a lease of those houses, which in 1875 were in a state of dilapidation, should be accepted, the Commissioners refused to accede to that suggestion, and referred the matter back to us for consideration.

11420. Then, I find, it was resolved:—

"That in the opinion of the overmen it would be expedient to remove the dilapidated buildings intended to have been conveyed to Mr. M'Carthy, and that the Commissioners be requested to authorize an outlay for the repair of the almshouses generally?"—

Yes, that was another of our suggestions.

11421. The next minute is 19th July, 1876:—

"Resolved—That a recommendation be made to the proper authority that the mixed school, at present carried on at the almshouse, be charged to an infant school for children from three to ten years old. That the Secretary be directed, in pursuance of resolution of 24th April last, to advertise for and receive estimates as specifications, to be made by a competent person, for the thorough repair of the almshouse and schoolrooms in Nicholas-street, and to have pipes water laid on in some convenient part of the building, that all the fixtures may have some thereto. That the exact sum available for the Almshouses in Leon Ford be ascertained from the Commissioners in Dublin. That the Dubuich Trust Fund is not, nor can be, made practicable; and the trustees are of opinion that, with permission, the fund and accumulations thereof could be utilized in the manner in which Mr. Dawson, the High Sheriff of the city of Limerick, will explain personally to the Commissioners in Dublin, viz.—in building houses of one story high on the site of the dilapidated property belonging to the charity, and adjacent to the almshouses in Nicholas-street?"—

Yes, that was another suggestion we made.

11323. The next entry I find on the subject is dated 26th March, 1877.—

"The following resolution was passed unanimously.—That the Commissioners of Charitable Donations and Bequests for Ireland be requested to reply to the tender for repairs of the almshouses and schools, Nicholas-street, which was accepted by the overseers, and forwarded to the Secretary of the Commissioners, on the 26th day of October last, and the building is rapidly falling into decay, and that the Board be respectfully requested to take immediate action in the matter." It was resolved that the vacancies, of which there are two at present, for widows, or any further vacancies which may occur pending the proposed repairs of the almshouses, be not filled up until the repairs are executed, owing to the dilapidated state of the rooms. The overseers agreed not to record their inability to carry out the working and motions of the Poor Debtors and Apprentices Loan Funds, and would therefore again suggest that steps should be taken to effect the accomplishment of these funds for the improvement of the charity in the way of permanent repairs to the present property or rebuilding houses now in a state of ruin?—

Yes, at the suggestion of the Commissioners, we got estimates for the repairs, but, when the estimates were laid before them, they refused to allow us to have the work carried out.

11324. I find under date 30th April, 1878, this entry—

"The overseers desire to bring the following facts under the notice of the Commissioners of Charitable Donations and Bequests for Ireland, with respect to the present scheme, and with a view to its modification: We, the undersigned overseers of Dr. James Hall's charity, are of opinion, that the scheme of the Right Honorable the Master of the Rolls, for the management and administration of the trusts under Dr. James Hall's will, cannot be advantageously worked out. (1) As regards that portion of the scheme (clause 4) which relates to the Loan Fund, we are of opinion that it cannot be worked, because there are actually in Limerick no applicants of a class to whom we should be disposed to make loans, the practice of taking apprentices having been nearly, if not entirely, given up; (2) but if there were at any time apprentices coming up in Limerick or elsewhere, we have good reasons for believing that they would not accept of loans, if obliged to give such security as we should most certainly insist upon. (3) The usefulness of this branch of the charity is demonstrated by the fact that when the Bishop of Limerick asked the trustees of the Jubilee Loan Fund, some time ago, whether that institution could be made more useful if its capital were increased, so as to enable it to grant a greater number of loans to poor persons, he was answered that it had already the means to give as much accommodation in this way as was prudent and desirable. (4) The expense of a clerk and fees would severely swallow up the greater part, if not all the sum under the head. Loan funds are now so numerous that deserving young apprentices have no difficulty in obtaining loans at a very low rate of interest with reasonable security. Finally with regard to clause No. 5, which states that the Commissioners may allocate annually £10, Irish, to redeem poor debtors, it seems plain to us that the poor debtors' Act renders this provision unnecessary.—Such being our opinion, we suggest that the sums of money directed to these two branches of the charity should be set free and made available for rebuilding these houses in front of the almshouses, which are now ruinous and in want. We have reason to believe that a large return would result from this outlay—probably as much as eight or ten per cent. We further desire to mention that the almshouse is in pressing need of considerable repairs, and beg again to call the attention of the Commissioners to the specification for the work already furnished to them on the 23rd October, 1876, and to the tender of Mr. John O'Connell, which we consider should be accepted. On the completion of the almshouse, including the school-rooms and the teachers' apartments therein contained, we are of opinion that a suitable schoolmaster and mistress should be appointed, there being now, in consequence of the death of Mr. Russell, the former master, to whom a pension of £20 per annum had been paid, sufficient funds to obtain the services of each teacher as would render the schools efficient and attractive.—Dated at the Palace, Limerick, this 26th day of April, 1878."

This report is signed by the Bishop of Limerick, Mr. Robert Hunt, the Dean of Limerick, the High Sheriff, the Mayor, and Mr. Robert Voss O'Brien.—Yes; it was unanimously adopted by the overseers.

11324. The report is signed by gentlemen of different dispositions and ways of thinking?—Yes.

11325. It was forwarded to the Commissioners of Charitable Donations and Bequests, as their unanimous recommendation?—It was.

11326. Has anything been done about it?—Nothing whatever.

11327. What has become of the house?—Going farther into ruin—it is ruinous.

11328. Has anyone been sent or employed by the Commissioners to look at it?—The Secretary, Mr. Gerson, was in Limerick once, and went to look at it. I met him afterwards and had a conversation with him about it.

11329. Did he meet you at the buildings?—No; he came down to Limerick on other business, but he went to see the buildings, and he told me afterwards that he had seen them, and that they were in a wretched state.

11330. What explanation was given by the Commissioners for not attending to the matter?—In some cases, that they had not time; in others, that there ought to be some change, or something or other.

11331. I find from the minutes, that the further resolution was passed, in April, 1878.—

"Resolved, that the overseers approve of the appointment of Mrs. Buckley as the 3rd of widows, notwithstanding the Resolution of the 26th March, 1877, that vacancies were not to be filled up pending the repairs of the almshouses, which are protracted beyond the expectation of the overseers?—

—Yes; in consequence of the ruinous state of the almshouses, we had passed a resolution that no further appointments should be made on the widows' list, until the repairs were completed, but in consequence of the long delay, we thought it better not to defer the appointment of Mrs. Buckley.

11332. The minutes further show that, on the 7th December, 1878, a meeting of the overseers was specially summoned to consider the following communication addressed to the Dean from the Commissioners of Charitable Donations and Bequests; the letter is dated 26th November, 1878.—

"VERY REV. DEAR SIR,—From the pressing nature of the business of this office, and the number of cases to be brought under the attention of the Commissioners, I found it impossible to get this note forward in the ordinary course. I therefore requested the Board to sit, last Wednesday, the 3rd instant, for its special consideration. The Board on that day applied itself attentively to the four branches of the charity, as propounded in the scheme, formed by the Court of Chancery, and it gave the fullest consideration to the various suggestions and resolutions laid before it by the overseers, especially to their resolutions of April, 1878. I think you will more fully understand the entire case if you will allow me to deal with the four branches severally. First the Debtors' Branch; this branch may, for the present, be isolated from consideration, as the amount provided for carrying it out will either merge into the general income or will be dealt with by the Board for other purposes, the general subject of similar charities being now under their special consideration. Second, the Loan Fund Branch. It is evident that this branch of the scheme has not been put into operation, but it appears equally evident to the Board that so sufficiently serious efforts had ever been made by the overseers to give it effect. On the contrary, the Board was unable to dispense from itself, that from the very commencement these appeared to be a decided disinclination on the part of the overseers to work it, and it was of opinion that this, more than any inherent improbability in the thing itself, has caused this branch of the charity to fail. Had the overseers been in a position to report that they had made active exertions to carry out this portion of the scheme, and that they had been successful, in that case there would have been less satisfactory evidence of its improbability, but in the absence of this, the Board is unable to arrive at the conclusion that it has become impossible to work it. Thirdly, the School. The Board regards the present position of this branch of the charity as most unsatisfactory, and it is of opinion that, as at present administered, it is not within either the letter or the policy of the scheme. It is, in fact, little else than an infant school. I mentioned to the Board the desire which you verbally expressed to me of having the school as reconstructed as to qualify it to participate in the benefits of the Intermediate Education Act of last session, but while the Board is of opinion that it was not intended to be an infant school, so opinion was it intended to be anything but a school for primary education. The Board would wish to suggest, for the consideration of the overseers, whether the portion of the income set apart for a school might not with advantage be applied to the establishment of a good National school, and towards supplementing the salaries of the school teachers, and other like purposes. The Board, however, understands that the real difficulty in the way of maintaining this school is its close contiguity to other excellent schools, both for Protestants and Roman Catholics, and this difficulty may be attended with very considerable expense to the funds of the Board, and probably will be, if the overseers are not able to agree among themselves upon some recommendations which may be considered advisable and satisfactory by the Board, and by the Court. The Board is, therefore, of opinion that a special meeting of the overseers should be convened—any being taken that notice shall be given to each member—that the entire position of the charity should be carefully considered, and that the conclusions arrived at, which will be the more weighty if unanimous, should be forwarded for the consideration of the Commissioners.

Had there been with regard to the Loan Fund, branch of the charity any difference of opinion among the Commissioners?—Not the slightest; the overseers were unanimous as to the impossibility of carrying out that part of the scheme.

11333. Are any of the overseers connected with commercial pursuits?—Decidedly, the Mayor and the High Sheriff are really commercial gentlemen, quite familiar with mercantile affairs in Limerick, and the report of April 30th, 1878, and the resolutions and recommendations contained in it were signed by every one of us. We were unanimous on the subject.

11334. I do not see anything in the Commissioners' letter about the repairs of the houses?—No, not a word on the subject.

11335. I find that the overseers, having taken the letter into consideration, came to this resolution—

"That in reply to the foregoing communication, under the head of the Loan Fund branch of the charity, the overseers are of the same opinion as that expressed by them in their communication to the Commissioners of 30th April last; and in addition to the reasons for their opinion then given, may be added the fact that the Dublin Loan Fund in Limerick, has a considerable sum of money in hand, which they cannot lend out with advantage."

And further it was resolved—

"That the overseers unanimously approve of the proposal contained in the aforesaid communication, under the head of almshouse—namely, that the income intended for the school, be allocated to strengthen and improve the almshouse branch of the charity."

You also received two other widows, and recommended the proposal of Mr. Quinlan, for a house of his holding in Nicholas street?—Yes.

11336. At the next meeting on July 7th, 1879, this minute was made:—

"The draft of the affidavit to be made by the Deas, having been laid before the overseers, it was resolved, that the affidavit be approved of, as containing the unanimous opinion of the overseers."

Was that an affidavit in reference to the proposed new scheme?—Yes. They called upon me as manager of the school, to make an affidavit of some matters in connection with it.

11337. I find that, on the same occasion, it was resolved:—

"That the overseers are of opinion, that the efficiency of the charity may be best promoted, by devoting all its available funds to the maintenance and improvement of the almshouse, and with a view to the attainment of this object, they recommended that some of the funds of the charity should be applied, without further loss of time, to the re-building of the house in front of the almshouse, from the rents of which, a considerable augmentation to the funds of the charity would arise. Proposed by the Mayor, seconded by the Deas, and resolved, that it is absolutely necessary, that a portion of the funds of this charity, be expended on the repairs of the almshouse."

How long is it since anything was expended in repairs?—Well, from time to time, since small sums have been expended.

11338. By whom?—By the agents—upon such things as whitewashing, plastering, and glazing of windows. The houses referred to by us, as being in ruin, are in front of the almshouse.

11339. If those houses were put into repair, could they be let?—Very sandy; they would let for £10 or £12 a year each. They were let at that, when in repair.

11340. Dr. HART.—How long is it since the first application was made by the overseers to the Commissioners on the subject of the repairs?—I think it was in 1875. There have been repeated applications from time to time—a very urgent one in 1876.

11341. Was any architect or skilled person sent by the Commissioners to look at the premises?—No.

11342. LOAN R. COMMISSION.—Is the scheme which is now before the Vice-Chancellor, and which is substantially a scheme for the abolition of the school and a transference of the funds to the almshouse, supported by the Commissioners of Charitable Donations and Bequests?—Yes.

11343. Is it also in accordance with the views of the overseers?—It is.

11344. The object is to do away with the school altogether?—Yes; that is the recommendation, as we do not consider a school necessary there, inasmuch as there are very efficient schools, both Protestant and Roman Catholic, in the immediate neighbourhood.

11345. There are at present thirty children in the school?—Yes, but they are all infants.

11346. I heard you mentioned that, in your opinion, an excellent school could be made by amalgamating this with the Bow-harbour charity?—Yes, that is my opinion.

11347. Which do you think would be better for the town—that the scheme which is now before the Vice-Chancellor should be carried out, or that the two endowments should be amalgamated for the purpose of education?—I think there is a great want of a classical school for the Protestants of Limerick. I think the two should be amalgamated.

11348. LOAN JEREMY FRINGEMAN.—Are you not met at once by the difficulty that the Bow-harbour is not exclusively Protestant foundation, and that Hall's is not?—I do not know about that.

11349. You still think it would be a good plan to amalgamate them?—I do; and I am not sure that it is the case that Hall's was not a Protestant charity—for in the list of books mentioned in Dr. Hall's will there are works recommended which I do not think Roman Catholics would approve of.

11350. The testator directs that the pupils shall be furnished with the works of Thomas a Kempis?—Yes, and he mentions "The Bishop of Geneva's Introduction to a Holy Life."

11351. He also directs that each boy and girl leaving the institution shall be furnished with a copy of the "Whole Duty of Man," or some other devotional work?—Yes.

11352. Was it not considered in Chancery, when the scheme was under discussion, that his reason for recommending Thomas a Kempis was in order to avoid the risk of controversy in recommending other books?—I do not know. He directed the pupils to be furnished with the Bishop of Geneva's Commentary on the Holy Scriptures, and the Book of Common Prayer. I never thought the school was otherwise than exclusive. Of course if it is decided that it was not, there is an end of the amalgamation.

11353. LOAN R. COMMISSION.—How was it treated by the Court of Chancery in the Order—as exclusive, or non-exclusive?—I do not think the court decided that point, one way or the other.

11354. LOAN JEREMY FRINGEMAN.—At all events, at the present moment it is not a discretionary school?—Well, we have Roman Catholics in it, but they are infants.

11355. They are not taught "The Whole Duty of Man," the Common Prayer Book, and Thomas a Kempis?—No. I think those books would please them a little, inasmuch as they are only from three to ten years of age.

11356. Is not the result of your evidence, that it is certainly not now the class of school spoken of in the will?—Not at all.

11357. Either Dr. Hall was a gentleman of very positive moral views himself, or he thought that other people were, for he wanted the pupils to get a little of everything?—Well, "The Whole Duty of Man," I believe, he regarded as almost equal to the Bible, so he recommended that each child, on leaving, should get a copy of it.

11358. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—You stated just now that, in your opinion, there is a want of a classical school in Limerick?—I think there is a great want of such a school for Protestants; I do not know anything about the means of classical education available for Roman Catholics, but there is most decidedly, in my opinion, a want of a good classical school for the Protestant boys of the better class in Limerick.

Mr. JOHN WINTERS, examined.

11359. LORD JERVIS FERGUSON.—You are the agent of "Dr. Hall's Charity," under the Commissioners of Charitable Donations and Bequests. By whom were you appointed?—I was nominated by the governors, and recommended by them to the Board of Charitable Donations and Bequests, and that Board appointed me.

11360. How long have you been agent?—Since 1872.

11361. Can you tell us the present state of the property?—The condition of the buildings is pretty bad, except those that have fallen into ruin.

11362. What has been done to keep them up?—Small allowances have been made to the tenants for mending the roofs, and matters of that sort.

11363. Have any repairs been done except by the tenants?—No.

11364. To whom do you account for your receipts and disbursements?—To the Commissioners.

11365. To the Commissioners only?—Yes.

11366. Your accounts are regularly passed?—Yes.

11367. You have heard the minutes read here?—I have.

11368. Have you communicated to the Commission the state of the property?—Yes; particularly for almshouse, and the ruins in front of it we are anxious about; the houses that are in the occupation of tenants are pretty well seen after.

11369. By the tenants who live in them?—Yes.

11370. Have you any funds, or any means of doing such repairs as are not done by the tenants?—No; at the time the schoolmaster resigned for want of funds to pay him, the property was £30 in debt, and he had to wait a length of time before he could get his last quarter's salary; since then, through the death of a superannuated teacher, the funds have increased. I passed the last account with a sum of £80 in hands belonging to the charity, accruing from the rents.

11371. Has anything been done, through you or otherwise, for the repair of the buildings that are in the hands of the Commissioners—the almshouse and schoolroom?—Nothing; but some temporary repairs—putting on shingles and clearing gutters—save that, in November, 1875, the Commissioners sent me £14 for the purpose of putting in order one of the houses, out of which I had to eject the tenant for non-payment of rent and for abusing the property.

11372. How were the temporary repairs done?—I paid for them out of the cash in hands.

11373. Were you allowed credit for those payments in your accounts?—Yes.

11374. Did you notice that went when you first came to Limerick, or has it arisen since?—When I first came to Limerick, there was a very good classical school, kept by Mr. Wode, but he has left Limerick, and gone to Kilkenny, and there is no school to supply the place which he held.

11375. Under favourable circumstances, I presume the diocesan school would have supplied that want?—Quite so; if it was carried on as it ought to have been, it was a classical school.

11376. At present you pay but £50 a year to the teacher of Dr. Hall's school?—That is all; it is a mixed school for boys and girls, the mistress is present. I may mention that her appointment is only a temporary one, as you will see by the minutes; she was appointed for six months pending the rearrangement of the scheme, at first, the school building is in such a state of repairs that we can carry on nothing with any satisfaction.

11377. Then the actual salary of the almshouse and schoolroom is in want of ordinary repairs?—Yes, it is tanking down, and getting worse and worse every day.

11378. Have you ever asked the Commissioners for authority to execute repairs, to prevent the premises from falling into decay?—No, I did not ask the authority. What I considered absolutely necessary I got done.

11379. Did anyone come, from the Commissioners, to see the premises?—Well, Mr. Gorman, the Secretary, happened to be here on other business, and I showed him the principal part of the property in Nicholas-street, and the almshouse.

11380. Mr. Gorman is not a professional architect or builder?—He is not. He does not understand much about repairs, but he saw the state of the premises, and the condition the almshouse was in.

11381. When was Mr. Gorman here?—Three or four years ago.

11382. Was anything done in consequence of his visit?—Nothing.

11383. Can you tell us why nothing has been done to remedy this state of things?—Well, I cannot say. The overseers have urged the Commissioners several times, but still the thing is put back. They ordered the overseers to get an architect to prepare a specification for repairs. I got Mr. Smith, a professional man here, to prepare a specification, for which I paid him £5, and I sent it to the Commissioners for their approval, but they never took any step on it.

11384. Did he make an estimate of the cost of the repairs, or only a specification?—It was both.

11385. How much was the estimate?—Between £140 and £150 for the whole repairs of the almshouse, and putting up a new gate in front.

11386. Dr. Hall?—Was it proposed to put on a new roof?—No, there is no new roof required.

11387. The roof is good enough?—It is.

11388. LORD JERVIS FERGUSON.—Have you got your last account here?—Yes, I produce a copy of the last rental I passed.

11389. I saw your account is signed by one of the overseers?—Yes; they call a meeting to examine the accounts, and vouch them.

11390. I saw that the rental of the charity in 1877-8 was £145 18s. 2d. 1.—Yes, it is the same still; it used to be more, but in consequence of these houses falling into ruin the rents are no longer paid.

11391. Of how many houses?—Four.

11392. I see there was £10 arrears due at the beginning of this account, and £15 10s. at the end?—Yes.

11393. The first item in the account is that of the representatives of Clements, £5; is that due?—There is £8 still due by them, since I became agent they owe a half-year's rent; the half-year that was due at the time that account was passed has been paid since.

11394. I see James Lynch owed £6 10s. 1—Yes, there has been something paid out of that.

11395. There is a memorandum that he was under notice to quit—was it in consequence of the notice, that he paid it—Yes, in consequence of that notice he paid a year's rent.

11396. John Keogh is the next person in arrears?—He has cleared it off since.

11397. Are all the tenants complete?—Yes.
11398. There is no middleman's interest?—There is not.

11399. How do the tenants hold from the Commissioners?—As tenants from year to year, except one man, named Quinlivan, for whom I got a lease. There is one old lady who says she has a lease, but I never could find a trace of it.

11400. Are the houses let for the value?—I think they are fairly let.

11401. Are the tenants under any written contract to keep their houses in repair?—None whatever.

11402. You allow them for repairs, when paying their rents?—In some rare cases I do. When I see any repairs absolutely necessary, I allow the tenant what I think reasonable for doing them—but if not done to my satisfaction I do not allow anything.

11403. What remuneration do you get for your trouble?—Seven and a half per cent.

11404. That includes both collection and inspection?—Everything. The manager preceding the last agent had £30 a year—he formerly had £50, but it was reduced, by his own desire, to £20.

11405. You get the ordinary five per cent. and two and a half additional on account of the nature of the property?—Yes. I now produce short memoranda of the income and expenses.

11406. The rental is £165 18s. 2d. 1—Yes.

11407. And the expenditure £130 2s. 7d. 1—Yes.

11408. Your payments include £40 for eight widows, at £5 per annum each?—Yes.

11409. The schoolmaster receives £20?—Yes.

11410. Insurance, £1 5s. 1—Yes.

11411. I see you have to pay £15 2s. 7d. quitrent, —is that payable in respect of the house property?—It is.

11412. The Chaplain's salary is £10?—Yes, that is under the will.

11413. Who is the chaplain?—The Dean.

11414. Proportion of poor rate and borough rate, £241—Yes.

11415. Then the chimney-sweep costs you £1 18s. and 18s., incidental expenses £10, and the agent's fees £10—making in all £130 2s. 7d. 1—Yes. Out of the balance, coal is usually given in winter, to the inmates, and for the school.

Rev. Daniel
FitzGerald,
P.R.

Rev. DANIEL FITZGERALD, P.R., examined.

11416. LOUIS JEROME FITZGERALD.—You are the Parish Priest of St. Mary's, Limerick, and have been deputed by the ladies who manage the Mount St. Vincent's institution, to give us information with respect to it?—Yes, the bishop appointed me to give any information that might be required.

11417. What is the property of the Orphanage at present?—"Arthur's property," left by will, amount of income about £109 a year; Dr. Carroll's bequest, £509, which is invested, and produces £23 a year; Ahern's property, given by deed of trust to the bishop and others, brings in £55 a year; a donation of £1,000, given by Mrs. Hogan, which is invested, and yields £45 a year, and O'Gorman's property, also left in trust to the bishop and others, brings in £10 a year, there is also an annual collection made amongst the public at the time of the Summer Assize, which varies from £180 to £200, the annual amount received from relatives of orphans is about £100; and the annual amount arising from industrial work is about £50.

11418. What is the title to the land on which the buildings stand?—The Sisters of Mercy bought the ground on which the buildings stand for £1,500, I think, in the year 1832.

11419. Were the buildings erected at the expense of the community, or by subscription?—There were donations and also some bequests. I should tell you the original buildings had been erected previous to the inquiry of 1867; the present extended buildings were built in 1877, and cost £4,827 8s. 2d. Of that amount, about £1,000 was raised by a bazaar, which was held some years ago, and £3,371 19s. 2d. was raised by subscriptions, leaving a debt of £1,460 8s. 6d. still due.

11420. Under Mr. Arthur's will, the property he gave was subject to terminable annuities of £50 a year. Do you know whether these have fallen in, or what is the income now received from Mr. Arthur's bequest?—I have given you what the present income is.

11421. In 1867, it was returned as £140 a year, subject to £50; I presume it is subject to the same charges still?—Yes.

11422. The next is the bequest of Dr. Carroll—that remains as before—do you know in whose name the money is invested?—The bishop is, I think, the sole trustee.

11423. Do you know in what way it is invested?—I am not in a position to state that.

11424. Do you know what the Ahern and the O'Gorman properties consist of—houses or land?—The Ahern property is house property—the O'Gorman is land.

11425. Where is the Ahern property?—Up town & Wick's fields.

11426. How is it occupied?—Mainly by weekly and monthly tenants.

11427. That property was acquired by the Orphanage since the last inquiry, and the first payment appears to have been received from it in July, 1859?—Yes.

11428. Who manages the property for the school?—Mr. Nash collects the rents and sees to the repairs.

11429. Does he account with the Sisters, or with any trustee?—He accounts with them. The bishop visits his account regularly every year.

11430. The next item of income is the interest on Mrs. Hogan's donation of £1,000?—Yes; she gave that amount to be invested, and directed the interest to be laid out every year for the use of the Orphanage.

11431. How is the money invested?—I do not know, the bishop has it invested, and I think it produces four and a half per cent.

11432. The next is the O'Gorman property, which first came in 1871?—Yes; it was given by deed to the bishop and others in trust. The rent is collected by Mr. Kenny.

11433. How is it secured?—Tenants occupy the land, and pay rent.

11434. Do you know their tenure?—I do not.

11435. The other sources of income are all of a more fluctuating character—an annual collection, amount received from relatives of orphans, and amount received for industrial work?—Yes.

11436. The average number of pupils on the roll is stated to be 284, of whom 45 are day pupils, and 238 boarders—do you know what the qualification for admission is?—Residence only?—As a rule, yes. Sometimes both the parents are dead, and the children are left total orphans; but sometimes children are admitted if one of the parents be dead and the other not able to see to the care of them; and sometimes children are received when both the parents are alive, but sufficient so to their care.

11437. What is the course of instruction?—It is nearly on the same principle as an industrial school.

11438. The pupils are all Roman Catholics?—They are all Roman Catholics, but the school is open to others, if they enter in, because the school is under the Board of National Education, and inspected by the Inspector of the district.

11439. I see there are a number of maistresses paid by the National Board, one at £18 a year, three at £5 a year; and one, in the infant school, at £14 a year?—Yes.

11440. Besides these, there are, paid by the establishment, one teacher at £12 a year; one at £6; one dressmaker at £15; a laundress, £10; a dairy maid, £3; a household servant, £4—all of whom reside in the orphanage. Do the ladies of the community assist in the teaching?—Certainly.

11441. Those paid are, in fact, assistant teachers?—Yes, they teach the lower classes.

11442. The Sisters of Mercy give their own services gratuitously?—Yes.

11443. I see that the course of instruction, in the industrial department, comprises needle work, in its various branches, and household work, including baking, dairy, care of fowl, &c.?—Yes.

11444. The literary instruction is in accordance with the rules of the National Board of Education. The higher classes learn vocal and instrumental music, French, &c.?—Yes.

11445. The teaching is inspected by the National Board?—Yes, by the Inspector of the district.

11446. Do you know the buildings yourself?—I do, perfectly.

11447. Are they suitable for the number of inmates?—They are. I do not think there is anything in Ireland equal to them.

11448. We looked at the exterior of them—they seem to be fine buildings, judging from the outside?—Well, the accommodation inside is fully equal to the outside. Perhaps I would be using too strong language in saying they are unequalled in this country; but certainly, I will say, they are not surpassed.

11449. Have the children been healthy there?—Very healthy always.

11450. Do you know what their meals are?—They go to school about 9 o'clock, having had breakfast before that. At 3 o'clock school is over, and they get dinner soon after. They get supper at 7 or 8 o'clock.

11451. Is there a play ground?—Yes, a large play ground, and they occasionally also take walks outside.

11452. What have they for breakfast?—New milk and bread.

11453. Do you know what they get for dinner?—Must be two or three times a week, I think.

11454. Not every day?—No.

11455. What do they get for supper?—I think the supper is also milk and bread.

11456. I see that 130 of the children are committed to the institution under the Industrial Act?—Yes—they are certified for that number, and that number is always kept there.

11457. Do the children who are committed under the Act receive their education with the others?—Yes.

11458. They live in the same buildings, and are treated in the same way?—Yes, they are boarded in the same way as children are obliged to be boarded under the Industrial Schools Act.

11459. Are the children, who have been committed under the Industrial Schools Act, looked after by the Industrial School authorities?—Yes, the Inspector is in town at present, I think.

11460. The return which has been furnished to us states that—

"All the children receive the same opportunities of literary and industrial training, according to their respective ages and capacities, and special care is taken to fit them for that state in life for which they have most aptitude."

—Yes. I produce the fee farm grant of some of the trust property, dated 31st December, 1860, to the Right Rev. John Hyatt and others.

11461. Are any of the trustees named in the deed dead?—Several of them are dead—Rev. James Moore, Rev. James O'Brien, and Rev. Matthew O'Connor, are all dead.

11462. Then I may give you a piece of advice—before the number of trustees is reduced any further by death, it would be well to have an additional conveyance of the land to other trustees, or you may be put to very great inconvenience and expense—I believe the Bishop intends to get that done immediately.

11463. Are you the chaplain to the orphanage?—No, but the present bearer of the Sisters of Mercy is in my parish, and in that way I know their affairs.

11464. I find that on the fee farm grant the trust does not appear, the conveyance being to the trustees themselves. I have had occasion to mention, particularly in cases of Roman Catholic charities, where the conveyance is made in that way, that it is a matter of the greatest importance that the full number of trustees should be kept up so far as possible, for if the number of trustees should be reduced to one, and that the last trustee dies, the property goes to the heir at law or the personal representatives of the last surviving trustee, and in many cases it is very hard to find who that person is, and when found he may give trouble?—I think the Bishop would make his successor his trustee in all matters of that kind.

11465. But it is well to bear in mind that it is necessary to do that by will or deed?—I am very much obliged to you. Perhaps I may make one remark in reference to the Sisters of Mercy. The community paid out of their own funds £1,500 for the purchase of the ground, so that the income which they would receive from that sum is practically contributed by them towards the support of the institution.

11466. Do the sisters collect money, by an annual subscription?—Yes, but the entire income is barely sufficient to support the institution.

11467. The community, in fact, have themselves given to the institution the interest upon the money which they paid for the site?—Yes, besides their time and labour, which are given gratuitously.

11468. I understand you receive children under the Industrial Act from other districts than Limerick?—Yes, from wherever they are sent by the committing magistrates. The numbers are always full, unfortunately.

REV. JAMES FERGUSON GIBSON, M.A., examined.

Rev. James F. Gibson, M.A.

11469. LORD B. CHURCHILL.—Are you the proprietor of the school on the Roxborough-road?—I am.

11470. What is the nature of the school?—It is a female free school.

11471. At what period did you first become proprietor of that school?—On the 6th November, 1874.

11472. What do the buildings and premises consist of?—A residence for the mother, school-room, and dormitories.

11473. Are there any adjacent premises?—There is a lavatory outside, and a play-ground.

11474. Please state succinctly to the Commissioners by what process you were enabled to enter into possession of these premises?—They came into my possession quite unexpectedly. The late Diocesan schoolmaster, Dr. Hall, having compounded, was anxious to go away. Under the Church Establishment Act, there could be no further appointment to the school—in fact it ceased to be a Diocesan school. Dr. Hall looked about, to see what he could get for his interest. He applied to the Commissioners, but there was some difficulty there. He then offered the buildings to me, or Rector of the Parish, in which there is no other school house I wanted on Dr. Kyle, the Secretary to the Commissioners, on the 23d April, 1874, and afterwards sent him an application to become tenant, or to purchase the place. I got the answer from the Commissioners some six months afterwards.—

"8, Chancery-street, Dublin,
"13th October, 1874.

"DEAR SIR,—In reference to your letter upon the subject of the Limerick Diocesan School-house, and your proposal to become purchaser of it for scholastic purposes, it is desirable that you should put in writing a formal proposition, stating the amount of rent which you propose to pay for it, and the amount which you would be prepared to give in case of your becoming its purchaser. The Commissioners would then have a tangible proposition to deal with, and it would be most important that, if possible, you should get the Bishop of Limerick upon this subject, as the Lordship is perfectly cognizant of the entire of the Limerick Diocesan School case, and the difficulties connected with it. You are, I believe, aware that the Commissioners have under their control no funds whatsoever applicable to the Limerick Diocesan School case. The house was built with money procured from the City and County Limerick Grand Jury.

"I am, dear Sir, yours faithfully,

"W. CORRIE KELE, Secretary.

"The Rev. Jas. F. Gregg.

"P.S.—I had some conversation on this subject lately with the Rev. Mr. Hackett, who called upon me in reference to it."

11475. Who is Mr. Hackett?—He is a clergyman in Dublin, the Secretary of the Incorporated Society's Schools. I wrote to him, and asked him to see Dr. Kyle about this matter. In the meantime, Dr. Hall died, and, after his death, I heard that a great number of people were seeking to become possessors of the place—some offering money.

11476. Was it put up to auction?—No, but an auctioneer was employed by Mrs. Hall to sell the furniture and things in the school, and he said there were parties trying to get the key. There was a general impression that there was a want of title to the place.

11477. What was your answer to the letter of 13th October, 1874?—I cannot recollect the terms of it exactly, but I think I sent in an application to become tenant.

11478. You observe that they asked for a formal proposition, stating the amount of rent which you proposed to pay for it, and the amount which you would be prepared to give, in case of your becoming its purchaser—what was your reply to that?—I left that to them. I could not make them any formal proposition. The buildings were in a very dilapidated state, so that I could not name any amount. I wanted to let them name the rent, and leave me to accept it.

11479. Have you got a copy of your letter?—I have not.

11480. Did they name the rent?—They did not. Subsequent to that the matter came on, on the 11th of November.

11481. But I think you said you were in possession on the 6th November?—I was.

11482. What was the answer of the Commissioners, in reply to your letter?—I got no other communication from them at that time. Other parties were seeking to become tenants, and applying to Mrs. Hall to let them into possession. When I heard that, I wrote to Mr. Hackett again, asking him to call on Dr. Kyle, and find out what course I ought to take, as Mrs. Hall had asked me to give her some money, and said that she would give me possession, and let me deal with the Commissioners then. When Mrs. Hall proposed that to me, I wrote to Mr. Hackett, asking him to call on Dr. Kyle, and ascertain if that was the course I should take.

11483. Have you a copy of the letter you wrote to Mr. Hackett?—I have not, but Mr. Hackett called on Dr. Kyle on the 4th November, and though Dr.

Kyle did not wish to say anything decided, still the impression left was that my course was clear.

11484. How do you mean?—That when Mrs. Hall proposed to put me into possession, and let me deal with the Commissioners, I might give her the money.

11485. LORD JUSTICE FRYNGHAM.—That you would find it more easy to deal with the Commissioners, if you bought her off, and got up the possession?—Yes. I should mention that Dr. Hall had great difficulty when he succeeded to the school—he forced parties in possession after his predecessor, Mr. Hogg, left, who would not let him in without paying them money. He had to get his furniture in, by payment of money to the persons who were in the house.

11486. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—You heard from the Rev. Mr. Hackett, on the 4th November, 1874, that his impression was, that Dr. Kyle, the Secretary to the Commissioners, approved of the course you proposed to take?—Yes. I have his letter here, but it is a private letter.

11487. Are you prepared to put it in?—Yes. I wrote to Mr. Hackett, and he said he had no objection to my mentioning that he was in communication with Dr. Kyle.

11488. DR. HART.—Mr. Hackett was not officially concerned in the matter?—No.

11489. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—I shall read the portions of Mr. Hackett's letter that have reference to this matter.

"Dublin, 4th November, 1874.

"MR DEAR FRIEND,—From what I can ascertain from a reliable source, I think if you got into possession of the premises, giving Mrs. Hall something to satisfy her, so as to put you into possession, and that at that position you had to deal with the Commissioners, all would be right, and I fancy persons in question would not object or cause you too much trouble. Such is my suggestion, you will understand it as from myself, not for a moment assuming to agree with me, in giving this advice—ad! I write already.—Yours sincerely,—J. W. Hackett."

11490. You received that letter on 4th November, 1874?—I received it on the 5th, and as I knew the "reliable source" referred to was Dr. Kyle, I went to Mrs. Hall, and told her the answer I had got, and she gave me possession at once, on my paying her £20, and paying 27 lbs. poor rates due.

11491. LORD JUSTICE FRYNGHAM.—Had the sale not been paid?—No, not for a length of time.

11492. Then Mrs. Hall gave you possession?—Yes. She signed a document, which I produce, giving her interest entirely to me.

11493. This is a deed dated 5th November, 1874, from Mrs. Mary Anne Hall, the legal personal representative of the Rev. James John Hall, deceased, to the Rev. James Fryngham Gregg, witnessing—

"That, in consideration of £20, Mrs. Hall, as such representative, grants and conveys to Mr. Gregg, all that and those the messuage known as the Limerick Diocesan School, on the Roxborough-road, in as full and single a manner as same was then in her occupation, to hold unto the said James Fryngham Gregg, for all her estate and interest yet to come therein."

with a covenant for further assurance?—Having obtained that deed, I called on Dr. Kyle, on the 25th November.

11494. That was after the auction?—Yes.

11495. The auction was one of Dr. Hall's efforts?—That was all; but on the day of the auction, some one brought in £100 to give Mrs. Hall for the key, not knowing that I had got possession.

11496. It was not anyone from the Commissioners?—No, I could not find out who it was—it was a poor looking person. However, on the 25th November, I called on Dr. Kyle, and told him I was in possession. He said—"I know you are in possession—I don't want to hear anything about it." He then told me that the whole thing was in such a legal difficulty, that it was not possible to say who was the owner—that their solicitor was authorized to draw up a case for counsel, and the effect on my mind was that, in fact, he did not believe that they had any title to it. Subsequently to that the Board met, and they sent me this letter.

"B, Clarendon-street, Dublin.
1st February, 1875.

"DEAR SIR, The entire case of the Limerick Diocesan school, and your proposals in connection therewith, as well as the powers of the Commissioners, were fully taken into consideration by the Commissioners, the Bishop of Limerick being present; and I was directed to state to you that the Commissioners are willing to allow you to remain in possession of the school premises for two years, from March 25th, 1875, you giving a distinct undertaking that you will at any time during that period of two years, if called upon by the Board, give up possession to it. During and period as a charge will be made against you for occupation rent, on condition that you put the premises into a fair state of repair, and that you will act in the capacity of caretaker for the Commissioners. At the expiration of the aforesaid two years the school premises will be permitted to be held by you at a fair yearly rent payable to the Board. You will have the goodness to fully consider this letter, and let me have your final reply to this letter and its propositions. As the Bishop told me he would not be unwilling to talk to you on the subject, I think it would be advisable that you should see his lordship before writing to me.

"Yours truly,

"W. C. KYLE, Secretary.

"The Rev. James F. Gregg."

11497. What was your reply to that letter?—I wrote on the 8th of February, to say that I wished for further information, as the terms were so extraordinary—I was asked to put the place in repair, and to be only a caretaker at the same time. The house was in a state of thorough dilapidation.

11498. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—You were to occupy it for two years without any rent?—Yes, but I was to be merely a caretaker. I was expected to lay out money to put the place in repair, and I was to give up possession at any moment, if called upon.

11499. LORD JUSTICE FRYDEMAN.—If you had accepted the proposal contained in that letter, you might have put the place in repair, and, after you had done so, you would have been liable to be turned out, at any moment, as a caretaker?—Yes. I wrote to say that I considered it very extraordinary to ask me to accept such a proposition, that I would require some further explanation—and that I simply wished to be termed. I got no answer to that letter for the five years I am in the place, until last month, when I heard from Mr. Graves, the new secretary, whose letter I have here. I may mention that, during the five years I have been in occupation of the building, I have had out upwards of £400 in putting it into repair, and otherwise upon the premises.

11500. Were you made aware of the existence, on the books of the Commissioners in Clarendon-street, of any resolution declaring you tenant on the terms of Dr. Kyle's letter?—No, I never got any communication from them from that time until last month.

11501. Your answer to that letter was not an acceptance, and they never replied to, nor took any notice of it. Have you any copy of the letter you wrote to them?—No, I have not an exact copy. I possess the original draft, but I altered it somewhat when writing the letter. It is, however, substantially the same.

11502. You say in this draft letter:—

"Firstly.—I am asked to act simply as a caretaker, and to be ready at any time during two years from the 25th of next March to render up possession. Secondly.—Although only a caretaker, I am expected to lay out a sum of money to put the premises in repair. Thirdly.—No rent is fixed on, to be paid by me after the two years have expired. I think I may fairly say the terms proposed are very bad. I paid Mr. Hall £80, and got from him a legal assignment of the premises. I have paid the taxes due, and had not a considerable sum in clearing, witness-taking, and for the use of the caretaker since the beginning of November, besides other expenses. In addition to those expenses, amounting to near £75, I will have to lay out a considerable sum in repairs and alterations of every kind. If I am to remain two years without being reimbursed in respect, I cannot improve or work the place to advantage. I fully expected to have become at once a tenant under the Board, so that I could immediately go to work; but, as far as I understand the terms in your letter, I am to surrender everything, and am to be left in uncertainty for two years. I do not want to be in a position hostile to the Commissioners—I want simply to be tenant."

Did you get any reply to that letter?—No; I got no reply, and so I came to the conclusion that they had not got any title, and I went on and expended £400 on the premises. I have an account here of the money I had out.

11503. Then, up to the present, there has been no acceptance by you of their proposal, and no acknowledgment by you of their title?—No.

11504. Now read Mr. Graves's letter?—

"B, Clarendon-street, Dublin,

"28th August, 1875.

"DEAR SIR, You will remember that when, in the year 1875, you were put into possession as caretaker of the Limerick Diocesan schoolhouse, it was agreed that an acknowledgment was to be entered into, that you should give a distinct undertaking that you would at any time during the period of two years, if called upon by this Board, give up possession to it. That acknowledgment, if it was ever given, must have expired two years ago, and the Board now direct me to obtain from you a fresh acknowledgment of a similar character. The Commissioners would willingly accept you as their tenant, but they have been advised that they have no power to do so.

"Yours faithfully,

"ANDREW F. GRAVES, Secretary.

"Rev. J. F. Gregg."

11505. What reply did you give to that letter?—I did not reply till I got the following letter from Mr. Graves, dated 24th September, 1875:—

"DEAR SIR, I beg you will send a reply to mine of the 25th ultimo. The object of the Board in asking you to sign the acknowledgment referred to, is simply to preserve their title to the property; it is not their intention to displace your possession.

"Yours faithfully,

"ANDREW GRAVES, Secretary.

"Rev. J. F. Gregg."

11506. What reply did you make to that letter?—I did not keep a copy of my reply. I wrote in substance that I had been led to lay out so much money on the place, that I had found it in a state of great dilapidation, the roof ready to fall in, and the chimney coming down; that I had put the premises in repair, and that I had never been a caretaker, and had never made the agreement mentioned in his letter.

11507. On the contrary, you had refused the proposition?—Well, I had put it in the way of asking for more information; and I said I therefore could not comply with the demand contained in his letter.

11508. Did you dispute the title of the Board in your answer?—Never. I merely said I was no caretaker.

11509. You refused to give any acknowledgment, such as they asked?—Yes, I said I could not comply with the demand made.

11510. They omitted from their letter any reference to the undertaking they had given, to permit you, after the expiration of two years, to hold the premises as tenant at a fair rent?—Yes. They did not go into their original proposal to me.

11511. They asked you to acknowledge the half of their original offer, which was favourable to themselves, and omitted all reference to the other half, and you declined?—Yes.

11512. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—You will understand that I am not actuated by the least unfriendly feeling towards you, quite the contrary—we owe your participation this morning, and I thought it admirable, but, of course, it is our duty to ascertain the facts, and hence I am obliged to put certain questions. Did the inhabitants of Limerick, or any portion of them, concur in your occupation of the school, or was it in obedience to any each demand, on the part of the inhabitants of Limerick, that you took possession?—It was proposed to me by Dr. Hall, before I ever thought about it. He was the Diocesan schoolmaster, and the school-house being in my Parish, he thought it would be the best thing to hand it over to me.

11513 Did you consult with anyone in Limerick on that proposal?—No.

11514 Did you consult with the Bishop at that time?—No, not till after I got possession.

11515 Was it with the present Bishop of Limerick you consulted?—Yes.

11516 Was he consulted on your taking possession?—Yes. A few days after I got possession, I told the Bishop that I was in possession, and that I wished the case to come properly before the Board, and he attended at the Board, in consequence of my conversation.

11517 Can you tell whether the Bishop approved of the steps you took?—He did.

11518 Did any others of the inhabitants of Limerick approve of them?—I cannot say—I did not ask them.

11519 Did any of them disapprove?—Not to my knowledge.

11520 Have you any reason to believe that your occupation of the school, since 1874, has been, on the whole, such as to be satisfactory to the inhabitants of the town, for whom the school was originally founded?—I never heard a word from them, one way or the other.

11521 What was the state of the building when you first got it?—In a state of thorough disrepair. The slates were very bad, the roof out of repair, the gutters and chimneys were neglected, one of the chimneys was tottering, and, if it had fallen, it would have brought down the roof completely.

11522 Supposing you had not got possession and repaired the place, what condition, judging as well as you can, would the building have been in now?—It would have been utterly gone. Dr. Hall often asked the Commissioners for money to repair it, but they said they had no money. It was in a state of utter neglect—the grounds were neglected, and also the whole house.

11523 I suppose the man who offered £100 was prepared to lay out money on the building, if his offer had been accepted?—I do not know.

11524 How much money have you expended on the place?—£442 11s. 4d.

11525 May I ask you whether, during the time of your occupation, you took the advice of Counsel as to your rights?—No.

11526 Did you lay out the money, at your own risk, without any advice?—I did.

11527 Are you aware of the original objects for which the Diocesan schools were built?—Yes.

11528 Was it to give a classical education to the boys of the town?—No, it was for the dioceses of Limerick and Killaloe.

11529 To give a classical education to boys of these dioceses?—Yes.

11530 How many years have you been residing in Limerick?—Seventeen.

11531 Do you recollect the Diocesan school of Limerick, when it was attended by pupils receiving a classical education?—Yes, for a short time after Dr. Hall was appointed, there was a small school there, it then broke up, and remained for ten years without any school at all, before I got it.

11532 Then there was no school there from 1865?—There were no pupils, and no school.

11533 What is the character of your school now?—It is a free female school, for the children of poor people; we have 39 on the roll. There are 77 belonging to Limerick, and 32 from outside Limerick.

11534 Are they poor destitute children?—Yes.

11535 Are they all boarded in the house?—No, there are 64 boarded in the house.

11536 Of what religion are the children?—All Protestants. Of the 64 resident children, 48 have both parents Protestants, and 16 have one parent Protestant.

11537 And the other, Roman Catholic?—Yes, children of mixed marriages. Of the 39 children in the roll, 70 have both parents Protestants, and 29 have one parent Protestant.

11538 There are no children both of whose parents are, or were, Roman Catholics?—No.

11539 Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—It is not a school in which the children are of different denominations from both the parents?—No.

11540 Lord R. Chalmers.—You would not admit any child who was not a Protestant?—I receive no child in the parish who comes, and is destitute.

11541 Of course the resident children are instructed in the tenets of the Church of Ireland?—Yes.

11542 With respect to the children of mixed marriages—do you say you have 29 altogether?—Yes, 29 on the roll.

11543 Were the parents willing that they should go to the school?—Certainly; it is always the parent I take as my authority. No matter what the religion of the parents, as regards mixed marriages otherwise, I always take the fact of the parent giving me the child as my authority for receiving it.

11544 Have you any child in the school, without the authority of the surviving parent?—Not one.

11545 Are you aware that the original object of the Diocesan school was to give education to boys of all denominations—that it was non-exclusive?—No, I did not know the object at all—more than that there was no school there at all when I got possession of the building, nor for ten years previously.

11546 The Diocesan school was originally intended for the education of boys of all denominations?—Well, I have been informed that it was always a design of this diocese that had the school. It was originally in Thomas-street, and the house in Thomas-street was sold, and the school removed. Mr. Wallis was master first, then Mr. Hogg, and then Dr. Hall, but the master was always a clergyman of the diocese.

11547 Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—Through children of all denominations were admitted, the school was maintained by a tax upon the clergy, and the position of schoolmaster was generally given to a clergyman of the diocese?—Yes, we paid it out of our incomes, so much out of each benefice, and when the Church Act did away with that, the Diocesan schools ceased.

11548 Lord R. Chalmers.—According to your view of the state of things, you looked on the Diocesan school as an institution exclusively under the control of the Irish Church?—Yes.

11549 How long do the children generally remain in your school?—Till they get situations, or go out to be trained as teachers in the Kildare-place training college.

11550 At what age do they come to the school?—At all ages—from 8 to 16.

11551 You take them as early as 8?—Yes, not by choice, but supposing there are three or four in a family, and some of them young—we take in the younger on account of the elder.

11552 Have you any children in your school who had previously been attending Roman Catholic schools, or places of worship?—I suppose there are, but the parents having put them into my school is sufficient authority for me.

11553 Do you get a written consent from the parents?—Generally I do.

11554 You think it is probable that you have in your school some children who have attended Roman Catholic schools or places of worship, before going to your school?—Yes, because in cases of mixed marriages it is almost always so.

11555 What is the lowest age at which you take a boarder?—Three years, there are two or three cases of children of that age, but generally they are admitted at about seven years of age.

11556 And they remain until they are sixteen?—Yes.

11557 Where do they go when they leave you?—

will, some of them are teaching schools. There is one of our girls in Dublin, teaching a good school there, and receiving £40 a year.—There is another teaching in the Kildare-place training school. There are several others at this moment ready to go up to be trained. Others go out as servants; and others to teach.

11535. Do you receive payment for any of the pupils?—For a very few we receive a small sum; it does not cover the outlay at all.

11536. How many of your pupils are paying?—I do not think more than two.

11537. Then practically they are all free?—Yes.

11538. Do you clothe them?—Yes, we clothe, educate, and feed them.

11539. Do the parents enter into any agreement with you, on the admission of a child, as to allowing it to remain for any period of time under your care?—They do—I always stipulate that they are to be allowed to remain in the school until fit to leave.

11540. That is the agreement under which you take them?—Yes.

11541. The parents undertake to leave them exclusively under your charge?—Yes.

11542. They agree to leave them with you for about five years?—Yes, sometimes longer.

11543. Then, once a parent has placed a child in your school, he cannot remove it?—Well, I have never objected to their doing so.

11544. Have they, in point of fact, ever removed children from the school?—They have. I never make any obstacle.—Rather than have any trouble or difficulty with the parents, I have always let them take the children, if they desired to do so.

11545. What reasons do they give for withdrawing the children?—Different reasons—sometimes the parents were leaving town—sometimes they did not wish the children to be there—they give various reasons.

11546. Have you ever known a parent to remove his child on account of the religious instruction given in the school?—No, not that I am aware of.

11547. How are the funds supplied for the support of the institution?—I collect funds by writing, and we hold a bazaar.

11548. LOUIS JUVENAL FREEMAN.—Kindly give me the figures, as nearly as you can?—Well, the funds are mainly derived from subscriptions. We have no endowment at all.

11549. Can you tell us the total amount received?—About £700 a year.

11550. LOUIS H. CHURCHILL.—You have an endowment, in this respect, that you have the buildings rent free?—Yes, that is the only endowment, if it can be considered one.

11551. What is the annual value of the premises?—The value of the premises, if in good order, is one thing—their value when I got them is another.

11552. What was their value, as you got them?—I never went into an estimation as to that.

11553. Would £90 a year be more than they were worth?—It would, decidedly. They would be worth about £30 a year.

11554. Would they be worth £60 a year now?—I doubt they would, because my improvements have made them more valuable.

11555. Is the land of any use?—It is of no value. The lay is of no use.

11556. But for building purposes is it valuable?—There is no building in that direction.

11557. LOUIS JUVENAL FREEMAN.—I understand you to say that the cost of supporting the institution amounts to about £700 a year?—Yes.

11558. Is that all collected by voluntary subscriptions?—Altogether.

11559. Do you have no inherited property?—No.

11560. LOUIS H. CHURCHILL.—Are all your sub-scribers citizens of Limerick, or do you get money from all parts of the country?—From all parts of the country.

11561. How much do you receive from Limerick?—I could not tell you.

11562. Have you any subscribers of considerable amounts?—£10 is the highest.

11563. Have you got many subscribers in Limerick?—Not many, not more than half a dozen in Limerick city. I got a good many subscriptions from the county and neighbourhood.

11564. Can you make a guess how much of the £700 you receive from the county Limerick and neighbourhood?—I could not say—I have not an idea.

11565. Is it one half?—I do not think it is.

11566. Is it one third?—It is more than that.

11567. Then it must be £250?—I never went into the matter. I try and collect subscriptions whenever I can.

11568. Do you not keep accounts of the subscriptions?—Of course I do, but I never put them down in that way, by locality.

11569. Do you think you get £500 a-year from Limerick and the neighbourhood?—Not so much.

11570. Where do the other subscriptions come from?—Various places.

11571. From all parts of the country?—Yes. I get subscriptions even from London. There is a society in London—I forget the name of it—which gives £5 a year.

11572. Have you any form of appeal?—No; I find they are no use.

11573. How do you obtain your subscriptions?—By personal letters—letters appealing to the character of the person I am writing to.

11574. I suppose a great many of the society subscribe—do you get much money from them?—I do not think I do.

11575. Are there any societies in Dublin which subscribe to your school?—The Irish Society, of which Mr. Handcock is the secretary, pays the schoolmaster's salary.

11576. That is a society for supplying Irish speaking teachers, is it not?—I believe so, but they pay the teacher's salary. They have both English and Irish schools.

11577. Does any other society contribute to your funds?—I sometimes get a subscription from the Reformatory and Refuge Union in London. There are several other societies that contribute.

11578. Tell me the names of some of the other societies that contribute?—Mrs. Inglis of Scotland greatly contributes something. She is secretary of a society, of which I do not recollect the exact name.

11579. If you only get £350 from Limerick and neighbourhood, you must get £450 from elsewhere—I want to know where it comes from?—I get money from Scotland, from all parts of Ireland, and from England, but I am solely responsible myself, whether I get the money or not.

11580. Have you any subscriptions from societies of an exclusively religious character?—Yes, from the Irish Society and Mrs. Inglis's Society.

11581. I suppose you get some assistance from the Church Education Society?—Yes, the Kildare-place Society gives me £10 a year.

11582. Have you any subscriptions from Roman Catholics?—I do not know—I think not.

11583. Do you ever apply to Roman Catholics for subscriptions?—No.

11584. You collect subscriptions from all parts of the country—and from England as well—do the children attending the school come from all parts of the country?—Well, there are twenty-two on the roll from outside Limerick. Some of them are from Cork.

11585. How many from Cork?—I could not tell you. I dare say we have about eight from Cork, some from Clare, some from Galway, some from Waterford, Tipperary, Kilkenny, Kildare, and one from Dublin.

11586. Is Dublin the farthest place from which you have received a child?—Yes.

11587. You have none from England?—No. Sometimes we receive children of soldiers, whose fathers are English or Scotch.

11588. What, in such cases, would be the domicile of the father?—They would have been quartered in the barracks here, and in that way the children come to us. I may mention that frequently parents make second marriages, and, in such cases, they are often very glad to get the children of the first marriage off their hands.

11612. What steps do you take to procure orphans, when you have a vacancy?—I am sorry to say I do not need to take any steps, for I have always more applicants than I can possibly receive.

11613. How many applications have you, generally on your hands?—Every day they are applying for admission—whole groups of applicants.

11614. Who are the applicants?—The parents of the children.

11615. Have you any applications from societies to take children?—No.

11616. I understand you take no child without the authority of the parent?—No.

11617. How many applicants have you had within the last fortnight?—Over twenty—some from Clara, some from Lincolne—urgent applications; but we have no room.

11618. Between so many applications how do you decide which is the most eligible?—I generally judge for myself, if the circumstances are such as to warrant my taking the child.

11619. What circumstances would you have regard to?—Poverty is one.

11620. Is that a circumstance in favour of a child's admission—extreme poverty?—Certainly; supposing there was a large family with small means, I might take a child or two out of that family.

11621. Do you prefer to take children both of whose parents are Protestants, or those who are children of mixed marriages?—Mixed, I think; for they are not looked after at home, generally speaking; however, the fact is that on our roll we have only twenty-nine children of mixed marriages, out of a total of ninety-nine.

11622. Between two cases, each equally recommending itself to you for admission, one the child of a mixed marriage, the other the child of Protestant parents on both sides, which would you prefer to admit?—Well, the matter has never come before me in that way.

11623. If such a case came before you, would you prefer to receive the child of the mixed marriage?—I really do not think that circumstance alone would make me decide in favour of the child.

11624. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—You said just now that other things being equal, you would prefer the child of a mixed marriage. I suppose because you think it less likely that such a child's religious education would be attended to at home?—Well, yes. I would certainly wish very much to bring that child under instruction in my school.

11625. Lord E. CHURCHILL.—In the case of children of mixed marriages who are admitted into your school, do you know whether the Roman Catholic parent is the father or the mother?—Sometimes one, and sometimes the other.

11626. Have you any means of knowledge?—Nothing more than the paper they sign.

11627. Do you know whether, in signing these papers, they have the consent of the Parish Priest?—No. I act quite independently. I do not enter into that question. I have nothing to do with anyone, but to carry on the school as best I can myself.

11628. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—You say the amount you receive is about £700 a year?—Yes.

11629. Have you been able to make both ends meet?—Always.

11630. You spend about £700 a year?—Yes, on that school.

11631. How long have you had sixty-four resident pupils?—For the last four years, I may say.

11632. Since the institution came into working order?—Yes.

11633. Then the house is fully completed?—Fully completed.

11634. You are able, it appears, to support, clothe, and educate a child for about £12 a year?—About £10 a year, because some of the day scholars get their meals, and some get clothing.

11635. What meals have the children?—I want to see what you can give them for the £10 a year?—We give them milk and coffee, and bread, for breakfast, the younger children get milk entirely, the older ones coffee and milk.

11636. What do they get for dinner?—That varies. Sometimes it is meat and rice, sometimes it is vegetable, sometimes it is meat.

11637. Have you any fixed days for these?—Yes, there are certain days in the week for each kind of dinner—only one day in the week for meat.

11638. They have a third meal?—Yes, they get bread and milk for supper. Our milk bill is over £11 per month.

11639. Are you able to get good milk in Lincolne?—Yes. The milk is only for breakfast and supper. The milk for dinner is bought in the market every day.

11640. Are the children healthy?—They are.

11641. You have had no epidemics amongst them?—None.

11642. What clothing do they get?—They get the best supply we can give them—two suits a year, one for summer and one for winter.

11643. Do they all wear shoes and stockings?—All, except some of the day pupils.

11644. You supply your boarding children with them?—Yes.

11645. How do you get the clothing—do you get it by contract?—We get it from different establishments, as we are best.

11646. Are you obliged to pay the full price?—No—we get a reduction through our Dorcas Society.

11647. I have asked you those questions, because your figures are lower than even the lowest we have had yet, as the average cost of supporting a child—it appears to be the most economical—and I may say for myself that, from an inspection of your school, I never saw a more healthy-looking set of children than they were!—Yes, they are very healthy, and every child leaving the Institution gets a full outfit—fitting her to go into a situation.

11648. Are all your pupils sent to situations?—No. Some are trained in the Kildare-place Training School or College.

11649. Do a large proportion of the children go back to their friends on leaving the school, or do they all go to situations?—No—we send them to situations as far as they are ready.

11650. In fact, you provide for them?—Yes.

11651. How have they got on in after life, as far as you know?—The great majority have turned out well.

11652. Have you had any cases of removal of children for misconduct?—No, not that I recollect.

11653. What is your teaching staff?—A school mistress. One of the girls, who has been brought up in the school, helps in the teaching; she is paid a small salary and lives in the Institution; and is partly assistant mistress, and partly assistant teacher.

11654. What do you give your school mistress?—£40 a year.

11655. And apartments?—No, she does not live there. There is a matron besides, who lives in the Institution.

11656. The mistress comes to the school every morning, and goes away in the afternoon?—Yes.

11657. What salary does the matron get?—£30 a year—she manages the house.

11658. Does she take part in the teaching?—No. She has a girl to help her.

11659. The matron and one assistant manage the house?—Yes.

11660. Is there any servant?—No—the senior girls learn to be servants by doing the work of the house—they take their turns in the kitchen, the laundry, and the doormans.

11661. I may observe that we ourselves saw that the house was remarkably clean—how is it kept so clean?—Entirely by the girls of the school, under the supervision of the mistress and assistant.

11662. What inspector have you?—The Diocesan Inspector visits the school periodically. This is his last report:—

“Report of Rev. J. Dowd, Diocesan Inspector for 1870. Trinity Diocesan School, Roscommon Female Free School. Of these children twenty-four formed a large infant class, and had learned quite as much as could be expected from them—nine read easy sentences correctly. The remaining classes, six in number, were exercised in reading, discussion, geography, English history, arithmetic, &c., and the answering was very satisfactory. The course in English history selected over the whole period. Arithmetic included simple and compound proportion, fractions, practice, and interest. The writing was neat and careful, excellent order was preserved. This very large school is in excellent working order, and all the children are making good progress.”

11663. You seem to be yourself the soul of this institution—have you any assistance in collecting money?—Collectors go about with cards in Limerick.

11664. Have you any committee?—No, except a ladies' committee.

11665. Have you any committee of gentlemen at all?—No—I do it all myself—there is a ladies' committee, who assist.

11666. Do you visit the school at fixed times?—Yes. I visit it three times, often four times, a week. I visit it constantly.

11667. Do you examine the children?—I do.

11668. You look after the teaching?—I do.

11669. Do you take any part in seeing how the house is managed?—I always go through the domestic duties, and see that everything is right. I have been without a nurse for some time, and have not been able to do as much in that way as I would like, but I always make it a point to go through the house and see the classes at work, and teach them when I can.

11670. Have you any special system of teaching, with regard to religious instruction?—Our school is under the Church Education Society.

11671. Do you attend to that yourself?—Yes. The pupils are divided into six classes, according to the scale of proficiency of the Church Education Society.

11672. LOUISA R. CHURCHILL.—Are there any of your day pupils who withdraw at the time of religious instruction?—No, because they are all supposed to be Protestants.

11673. Would you allow a child to withdraw?—Of course I would, but they have never done it.

11674. LOUISA JENNIE. PRESIDENT.—It is one of the rules of the schools that religious instruction shall be part of the general education in the school?—Yes.

11675. How do you manage your expenditure for clothing and food?—The clothing is managed by Miss Gogg, assisted by the mistress and the schoolmistress.

11676. How are the accounts paid?—They are generally paid monthly, but some, such as clothing bills, are not paid monthly. The food bills are paid monthly. The mistress every month brings me the accounts, and I go through it, and give her money to meet it.

11677. Do you print any annual report?—Not of that school by itself.

11678. I presume, as you collect the money yourself, you do not go to the expense of printing?—No.

11679. LOUISA R. CHURCHILL.—Do you ever send this large body of subscribers any account of what is done with their money?—Yes. The schools were originally two, both in the city. As soon as I went to the parish, I separated the female ragged school from the city school, and conducted it as a quite different school, but the accounts of the two are still mixed together.

11680. You have got another school in the city of Limerick?—Yes, I have the boys' school in the city. There were originally two ragged schools in Limerick, but, when I got this place, I removed the girls' school altogether to Roscommon-road, and made a new institution there.

11681. You removed the girls' school from the city to Roscommon-road?—Yes.

11682. What assistance do you receive from the ladies' committee?—Well, they are more a nominal than real help. A number of them come and teach there, and inspect, but as to anything in the way of management, they do not give any assistance. They go through the domestic duties, and they teach frequently.

11683. Do you find it an advantage to have the assistance of a ladies' committee, to look after matters of that kind?—Yes, but I find it very hard to get the committee to do it.

11684. In point of fact, the whole school is dependent upon your personal exertions, and those of your family?—Yes.

11685. As to this matter of the Diocesan school-house, your present institution is totally unconnected, in any way, with the old Diocesan school school?—Yes.

11686. And the title you have in one you might have acquired from any other institution, if an opportunity had offered, so far as any connection between the original purpose of the building and its present purpose is concerned?—Yes. The proposal originally came to me entirely from Dr. Hall. He wanted me to give him £250 for his interest. In consequence of that proposal I waited on Dr. Kyle, and the rest all followed from that.

11687. Assuming the Commissioners to have the power to sell the house, is it a place suitable for the institution you have in it now?—Yes.

11688. Did you ever, in your correspondence with the Commissioners, come to the question of purchasing it at all?—I asked Dr. Kyle, and he said they had no power to take a rent, or sell the place.

11689. Did they ever make any proposal to you, to enter into a negotiation to buy it?—Nothing beyond the letter that has been read.

11690. I do not gather from your evidence that you wished to dispute their title?—I do not want to dispute their title, if they accept me as tenant; but I denied that I was caretaker for anyone.

11691. What they asked you in their letter of 13th October, 1874, was, to put in writing a formal proposition, stating the amount of rent you proposed to pay, and the amount you would be prepared to give, in case of your becoming the purchaser?—Yes. When I saw Dr. Kyle, after that letter, he said they had no power to take rent or sell. There were two words to me in his office in Dublin. In the letter of 13th October, he asked me to name what I would be prepared to give, in the event of my becoming purchaser, but when I saw him afterwards he said he did not know what they could do with the rent if they got it.

11692. Did he, as the officer of the Board, inform you that they could neither let nor sell the premises?—He spoke to me, in his own office, the words that I have mentioned.

11693. I thought what he said was that he did not want to hear anything about it!—He said first, “I know you are in possession—I do not want to hear anything about it,” and he made the other remark afterwards.

11694. Do you, in admitting pupils to the school, give a preference to Limerick children?—Decidedly.

11695. Are there many destitute Protestant children in Limerick?—A great many, I am sorry to say.

11696. We heard a statement yesterday from the Dean of Limerick, that it would be difficult to find twenty poor Protestants in Limerick?—The Dean, I think, spoke only of his own parish. There are a great many poor Protestant children in Limerick, I repeat to say.

11697. Are there more than you can provide for?—A great deal more. I have, at the present moment, a number of applications from the city, that I cannot take in. You might have seen some of them coming in this morning, without shoes and stockings. They want to come in, because their families are large and their means small. I could not take them all in. Although I am pressed again and again to admit them, I cannot do it.

Rev. James F. Grogan, M.A.

Oct. 1, 1879.
Rev. James B.
Gregg, M.A.

11702. What was the constitution of the school, before you removed it to Roxborough-road—was it a ragged school?—Well, I never liked the name “Ragged school”; it was a free school for poor female destitute children.

11703. Was it endowed?—No; it had no endowment, it was supported by voluntary subscriptions and an annual bequest.

11704. Had they a building?—Yes. I own the building. It was where the boys’ school is, in Rocheston-street. The two schools were in the one institution.

Rev. Cornelius
Conway, M.A.

Rev. CORNELIUS CONWAY, M.A., examined.

11705. LORD B. CHURCHILL.—You are the parish priest of St. Michael’s, Limerick?—I am the administrator.

11706. You desire to make a statement?—I wish to make an observation, with reference to the evidence of the Rev. Mr. Gregg, in which he stated that there was no objection to Catholic children being removed from the Roxborough-road school, when the parents wished to do so.

11707. It appears they have not got any Catholic children in the Roxborough-road school, they have children of mixed marriages, but no Roman Catholic children?—Whatever happens the children may be of, I wish to state that Mr. Gregg’s evidence is not exactly correct, for I will mention a case that came under my own personal knowledge. A woman, who had two children at the Roxborough-road school, came down here some time ago from Dublin. The father of the children was dead, and the mother called at the school, and demanded the children, but they would not be given up. She came to me to see if I could do anything for her, to get the children.

11708. What step did you take?—I told her, “The better way for you to act is to wait until Sunday, when the children all go to church, and if you stay and wait in a hall-way, until the children pass, you can seize them—you are their natural guardian, and have a right to get them.”

11709. Did you go to the school?—I did not.

11710. Did the woman go?—She did, and asked to see the children; she told me she had great difficulty in getting leave to see them at all, that she could speak with them in a closed room, but that they would not be given up to her.

11711. You advised her to take possession of them by force?—I advised her to watch the children on Sunday, as they went to church, that the children 11701. How did you become proprietor of that?—By the lease being transferred from Mr. Jacob to me.

11702. Were you proprietor of those ragged schools, before you got the Driscoll school-house?—Yes.

11703. Is the Rocheston-street institution, from which you removed the girls’ school, filled now by the boys?—It is as full as it can hold.

11704. What are the numbers?—There are 25 boys resident. There are 50 on the school roll.

would naturally run to her, and she could take them then, and keep them.

11712. You never thought of applying personally to Mr. Gregg on the subject?—No.

11713. LORD JUSTICE FITZGERALD.—What was the end of it?—The end of it was that the children were not allowed to church at all that day. The following Sunday she went again, but the children were again kept away from church. I suppose the authorities of the school heard that the mother was in town, and apprehended some step of the kind. The upshot of it was that I had to employ an attorney. The attorney worked up the thing, and found out the grounds upon which Mr. Gregg detained the children, and, those grounds not being legal, Mr. Gregg was obliged to give them up.

11714. How long did it take you to restore the children to their mother?—It took me a considerable time—I do not exactly remember, but I think about a month. The mother finally got the children, inasmuch as there was no legal ground on which they could be detained, otherwise they would not have given them up, I am certain.

11715. Do you know the ages of the children?—I do not. The attorney whom I employed, Mr. Ellard, is in court, and so is Mr. Beauchamp, the attorney who was on the other side. The reason I mentioned the matter at all was, because I heard Mr. Gregg say there was no objection to Catholic parents taking away the children, whenever they wished for them.

11716. LORD B. CHURCHILL.—I asked Mr. Gregg whether he objected to children being removed from the school, he said that the parents entered into an agreement that they would not remove the children, but that, as a fact, he did not object to their being removed, if the parents wished it.

Rev. James B.
Gregg, M.A.

Rev. JAMES FITZGERALD, D.D., recalled.

11717. LORD JUSTICE FITZGERALD.—Do you remember the case Mr. Conway has referred to?—Perfectly. These children were sent to me from Quema-tara. Their father was a Protestant, and on their admission he signed a document, placing them under my care. The mother, who was a Roman Catholic, had access to see them during the lifetime of the father, but the father died, and the mother then made this claim to the children. I at this time was at Killybeg.

11718. What do you mean by “made this claim”?—She claimed that she had a right to get the children. I informed Mr. Ellard, who was the attorney who wrote to me, that as soon as I went back to Limerick I would let him see the document under which I had received the children. I afterwards gave that document to Mr. Beauchamp, and let him settle the matter with Mr. Ellard. The woman afterwards came to my study. I told her I was going to give her the children, and she went on her knees and put her arms up to praise and thank me, because I gave her no difficulty about it. I might have rested on the document I had, and I could have kept the children if I chose.

11719. That would depend on the age of the children—how old were they?—About ten. I had a legal document by which the children were committed to my care by their father, and as long as the father lived the mother never attempted to interfere. She saw them frequently, but never said a word as to their leaving the school, until their father was dead.

11720. At the time the Rev. Mr. Conway has spoken of, when the mother went to the school, and lay in wait for the children on Sunday, where were you?—I was at Killybeg.

11721. Had you any interview with the mother, until the time you told her that you were going to give her the children?—I do not recollect that I had. It was through Mr. Ellard’s writing me a letter that I first knew about it.

11722. You got Mr. Ellard in communication with your solicitor, Mr. Beauchamp?—Yes.

11723. And the children were given up to the mother?—Yes. The mother came to me, and I told her I would give her back the children, at the same time I read to her the document which their father had signed, placing the children in my care, and I told her I could help them on that document, but that I did not want to have any work about it, and that I would give her the children.

11724. Would you take a child into your school at the wish of a Protestant mother, if the father was a Catholic and objected?—No. I recognise the authority of the father.

11725. Would you do it in the reverse case—would you take a child on the authority of a Protestant father, where the Catholic mother objected?—I would take it on the father's authority, but, in the case referred to, the mother never made any objection until after the father was dead.

11726 LORD R. CHURCHILL.—You would take a girl into your school on the application of the father, although the Catholic mother objected?—I would, because the law recognizes the father's authority in such cases.

11727. Can you tell me why it was necessary to go all the way to Queenstown to look for a child?—are not there plenty of poor destitute children in Limerick, where you could look after?—This case occurred a good while ago, at a time we had more room than we have now. A letter came to me from some persons in Queenstown, asking me, as the mother was not capable of looking after the children, and the father was deceased, to take them into the school, and they engaged to raise some funds towards their support.

11728 I suppose, as a matter of fact, in most of those cases of mixed marriages, where you take the children into your school, the parents consider the advantages of the school so great that they do not raise any religious difficulty?—Well, I always regard the children who come to the school as Protestants; and in this case the father was a Protestant, and never anything else.

11729. But you stated just now that you had several children whose fathers were Catholics?—Yes. I have children whose fathers were Catholics, but the fathers are dead, and the mothers are Protestants, and, in that case, I recognize the right of the mother.

11730. LORD JUSTICE FRERES.—I suppose you mean that the law stands thus:—the father has the absolute right, as long as he lives, of controlling the person of his children, but when the father is dead, and has not legally appointed any guardian, or entrusted those religious, the mother is the guardian, and has the right?—Yes.

11731 LORD R. CHURCHILL.—Amongst the children now in your school, who are the offspring of mixed marriages, about how many have Protestant fathers and Catholic mothers, and how many have Catholic fathers and Protestant mothers?—I could not give an answer to that question.

11732 I understood from your evidence that they were pretty much divided?—There are twenty-five children on our roll, who are offspring of mixed marriages, and seventy whose parents were both Protestants.

11733 I understood you to say that, of those twenty-five, some had Catholic fathers and some Protestant fathers?—Yes, but the Catholic fathers are dead.

11734 Do you require that one of the parents shall be dead?—No—I take them in some cases when both the parents are alive, if the circumstances are such as to make the child a fit object of charity.

11735 I understand it makes no difference to you whether the father is a Catholic or a Protestant, as long as he consents that his child shall go into your school?—Yes—I take the child, if no objection is made by the parent.

11736. Then you have, at the present moment, children who have Catholic fathers living?—I dare say there may be some.

11737 Have you twenty-nine?—No. I have twenty-nine children of mixed marriages, but not all of those have Roman Catholic fathers. I cannot tell what number, if any, have Roman Catholic fathers living.

11738. Surely you do not admit these children into your school without inquiry—you must know the circumstances?—These are several children coming to the day school whose fathers are Roman Catholics, but whose mothers, being Protestants, have brought up the children as Protestants, with their father's consent.

11739. In such cases, you take the children on the application of the mother?—Yes, with the consent of the father—the father never having made any objection.

11740. Of course when you admit a child whose father and mother are both Protestants you have the consent of both?—Yes.

11741. But when the father is a Protestant and the mother a Roman Catholic, or the father a Roman Catholic and the mother a Protestant, you are satisfied with the consent of one parent?—Well, in cases have not arisen in that way.

11742 It has arisen exactly in that way in the Queenstown case, because you had the consent of the father, who was a Protestant, but not of the mother?—I took the children on the authority of the father, he being legally entitled to send them. The case stood on their own merits—in the case of these children their father was alive, he was their legal guardian, he signed a document entrusting the children to me, and the mother, I may add, raised no objection, but on the contrary she had access to the children in the school, and expressed herself satisfied in every way, and raised no objection as long as the father was alive.

11743. May I ask you, of the children educated at your school, who are the offspring of mixed marriages, have all been children whose parents have applied to you to admit them, or have they been sought out by yourself?—They come to me. I do not seek them out myself. Whenever a vacancy occurs, I have plenty of applications to fill it, some of which are almost always children of mixed marriages. They come to me in numbers.

11744. Can you tell what became of these Queenstown children, after they were taken away from your school?—I heard that they were actually on the streets in Queenstown. Mr. Kilroe, who was the Rev. Mr. Conway's solicitor, said that they were a credit to any institution as they left me.

11745. LORD JUSTICE FRERES.—What appears pretty clear in this, as I understand the case, the mother of these children demanded that they should be given up to her after their father's death. On the one hand, you had a document signed by the father, which may or may not have conferred on you a legal right to the custody of the children; on the other hand, the mother had the natural claim, with which everybody must sympathize, to the custody of her children after their father's death, and under those circumstances, you waived your right, if you had any, Mr. Kilroe, of course, contending that you had none, and the children were given to the mother?—Yes.

MR. JOHN ELLARD, EXAMINED.

Mr. John
Ellard.

11746. LORD JUSTICE FRERES.—You are the Town Clerk of Limerick, and were solicitor for the Rev. Mr. Conway in the transaction about the children he has mentioned?—Yes.

11747 Is there anything more in the case than has been already stated?—As I understood the case, those children came to the school from Queenstown, having been sent by some clergyman there, who alleged he had some document, or some power over them. I wrote to him some two or three letters, but I received no reply from him. The children were in Mr. Gregg's school, and Mr. Gregg was in Killybeg, but there was some other clergyman in Limerick who was acting for him, and I understood the mother applied to that gentleman several times for the children, but they were not given up to her.

11748. Was that during Mr. Gregg's absence?—Yes, during Mr. Gregg's absence in Killybeg, she applied several times. On some occasions, she told me, she was refused permission to see them, and on one or two occasions she was locked up in the kitchen, with the children, and kept locked up while with them, the school-mistress not wishing to allow her an opportunity of taking them away.

11749 I suppose the school-mistress, in Mr. Gregg's absence, relied on whatever claim he had?—I presume so.

11750 Did you communicate with Mr. Gregg?—I communicated with Mr. Beauchamp, Mr. Gregg's solicitor, and the matter was arranged with Mr. Beauchamp. At first they refused to give up the children, but, eventually, Mr. Beauchamp came and told me they would give them up. The allegation made by the woman to me was, that her husband was a Catholic, and had been in a hospital in Cork, that he had been attended by the Sisters of Mercy there, but that the family were in great distress, and that in that way they came into connection with a clergyman of Queenstown.

11751 Did she tell you that she had been in the habit of visiting the children at Mr. Gregg's school, during her husband's life-time, without objection?—I cannot charge my memory with that. I think she told me she did see them on one or two occasions.

11752 What was her husband?—He was a pilot in Queenstown.

11753 Had she any means herself, at the time she took the children from the Institution?—I believe not.

11754 Do you know what became of them?—I know they were sent to some institution in the Queen's County, and I think the mother was sent to a sister of hers in England.

11755 Was that the last you heard of them?—That was the last I heard. I think it right to state that, what Mr. Gregg has mentioned I said, as to the way the children were cared for, while in the school, is quite correct. They appeared to have been well cared for—clean and well clad, and I stated so at the time.

11756 Have you seen any of the other children in the school?—No. I have not been in that school, but I was in Mr. Gregg's other school, in Bodof-street, and the boys there appear to be very well taken care of, indeed.

Mr. Michael O'Gorman.

Mr. MICHAEL O'GORMAN, Mayor of Limerick, examined.

11757 LORD JUSTICE FITZGERALD.—You desire to make a statement?—Yes. I observe in this meeting's paper, that, in the course of the evidence given yesterday, it was stated that the Mayor of Limerick is an ex-officio trustee of the Catholic Grammar school.

I think it my duty to state that I have never got any intimation whatsoever, during my term of office, that I was a trustee, nor was I ever asked to attend any of the meetings. I would have attended, if I had been summoned.

Very Rev.
Thomas
Barbery, & A.

Very Rev. THOMAS BARBERY, M.A., Dean of Limerick, recalled.

11758 LORD JUSTICE FITZGERALD.—Do you wish to say anything further?—There has been no meeting of the trustees of the Catholic Grammar school, since the present Mayor was appointed. I am not sure that I am correct in stating that the mayor was a trustee.

11759 The charity, of which the Mayor and recorder were appointed trustees, has been departed from altogether?—I am not at all sure that the mayor is a trustee under the present scheme, but he was certainly a trustee under Mrs. Cavan's will.

11760 LORD R. CHURCHILL.—It was recommended by the former Commission that two inhabitants of Limerick should be appointed in place of the mayor and recorder?—I think that that has been done, and two trustees appointed.

Rev. Daniel
FitzGerald,
&c.

REV. DANIEL FITZGERALD, &c., recalled.

11761 LORD JUSTICE FITZGERALD.—You desire to add something to your evidence?—Yes, I have been informed, that it was stated yesterday, that the Roman Catholic Bishop of Limerick, although he has been for many years a governor of the Lowry free schools, only attended the meetings of the governors on one occasion. I wish to have an opportunity of explaining why it is that his lordship has absented himself from their meetings. I suppose it has already appeared in evidence that, for some time, the schools were shut up altogether. An application was made by Mr. Walsh, the head of the Christian Brothers' community in Limerick, to have the schools re-opened, and the original intention of the founder carried out, by making it a primary school for children.

11762 LORD R. CHURCHILL.—We were told yesterday, that when the scheme for the management of the school was before the Court of Chancery, there was a counter proposition put forward?—Yes, that was the proposition I refer to.

11763 Was that proposition, which was made on behalf of Mr. Walsh, the one which was put forward in Court in the name of Dr. Geary?—Yes, Dr. Geary was one of the supporters of Mr. Walsh's views, that proposition was rejected, and the counter proposal required the sanction of the Court. Now, of the eleven governors, there were but three Roman Catholics, of whom the Bishop was one. Notwithstanding the rejection of Mr. Walsh's proposition, the Bishop determined to give the scheme, which had been sanctioned, a fair opportunity of being worked, and he attended a meeting of the governors, in order to see whether he might be able to succeed in having one of the head teachers who were to be appointed, a Roman Catholic; and if either of them had been a Roman Catholic, that portion of the school to which the Roman Catholic teacher was appointed would have been taken up and supported by the Roman Catholic Bishop and clergy. In that, however, his lordship was disappointed. Protestant teachers were appointed to both the schools, and the Bishop has, consequently, not since attended at any of the meetings. I may add that he intended at the time resigning altogether, and he consulted some of the priests on that subject, and they said it was better for him to remain a trustee, in order that if at any time he might require to go to the school for any purpose, he might have the power of doing so. Under these circumstances the Bishop has allowed his name to remain on the list as a governor, but he has not acted, and, as at present advised, he does not intend to act, under the present scheme.

11764 He wished to have one of the teachers a Roman Catholic?—Yes, he thought that we ought to have at least one Catholic teacher.

11765 You are aware that the institution consists of both a boys' and girls' school?—Yes.

11766 Do I understand you to say that the Bishop's approval would only have been given to whichever branch of the school had a Roman Catholic teacher?—I think I may fairly state that that would have been the portion of the school to which his lordship would recommend Catholic parents to send their children, and not the other.

11767. Then, if either of the schools was under a Protestant teacher, that school would not have the Bishop's sanction—in that way—Yes.

11768. It appears that as a matter of fact one of the assistant teachers in the boys' school is a Roman Catholic, and that the former assistant—the young man who got the place in the Civil Service—was a Roman Catholic?—If I may offer an opinion, I think that when the governors found that the school was not succeeding in point of numbers, and that there was no confidence felt in it on the part of Roman Catholic parents in Limerick, on account of the teachers being of a different denomination—it was on that account they thought it advisable to have a Roman Catholic assistant teacher, though that did not come out in the discussion.

11769. Excuse me, but the dates seem to make that explanation impossible, for the boy, McEvoy, was in the school when it first opened?—The first appointment was only of two teachers.

11770. Yes, but the assistant teacher, McEvoy, was there from the time the school first opened?—Not as an assistant teacher. The assistant teacher was appointed as soon as the numbers increased.

11771. Can you tell me why the school, as it stands at present, is not attended by a larger proportion of Roman Catholic children?—Because we do not wish Roman Catholic children to receive instruction from Protestant teachers.

11772. At all?—At all.

11773. And neither of the head teachers is a Roman Catholic?—Neither.

11774. Then are we to understand that if one of the head teachers—suppose the teacher in the boys' school—was a Roman Catholic, the Roman Catholic Bishop and clergy would sanction Roman Catholic children going to that branch of the school, but they would not sanction their going to both the schools, unless both the teachers were Roman Catholics?—Yes.

11775. Does it strike you that the result would be, that, if the Protestants acted on the same principle, each half of the school would become denominational, or that, if they did not, their children must always learn under Roman Catholic teachers?—It is denominational now.

11776. It is not denominational in any sense of the rules making it so?—It is denominational in this sense, that there are no Roman Catholic children attending either of the schools, nor have there ever been, since it opened, more than three or four.

11777. That is to say, the Catholic clergy prefer that the children of their denomination should give up the benefits of the school, rather than that they should receive secular teaching from Protestants?—Yes.

11778. Is there a large number of Roman Catholic boys and girls, who would take advantage of the schools, if their clergy had sanctioned it?—Yes.

11779. Is the attendance of Roman Catholic children at the Model school sanctioned by the clergy?—No.

11780. Where do the Roman Catholic children of Limerick, of the class that would go to the Model schools, receive their education at present?—A great many go to the Diocesan College.

11781. There is such a college?—Yes.

11782. Where is it situated?—At the corner of the Crescent. There are only two houses between it and the Jesuits'.

11783. Is the Jesuits' school long established here?—It must be over twenty years,—longer than I have been here myself.

11784. How long has the Diocesan school been established?—I should think, perhaps, twenty-five years. When the Jesuits came here, they got the house from the Bishop, and they taught the school for some time; but, after some time, they found such a school did not suit them. They were asked to come for the purpose of establishing a Diocesan College.

11785. Dr. HARR—Do not a good many Roman Catholic children, of the class you are speaking of, go to the Christian Brothers' school?—Some of them do, and some go to the Jesuits' school.

11786. Do you wish to add any other remark?—No. I merely wished to explain why the Roman Catholic Bishop did not attend the meetings of the governors of Leamy's schools.

11787. LOUIS R. CUNNINGHAM—He does not attend, because no Catholic interests are at present involved?—Yes, neither of the head teachers being Catholics.

MR. JOHN KERRY, examined

11788. LOUIS JEROME FRECHOUX.—I believe you were the agricultural teacher of the Mangot Mead Farm?—I was, from the time it commenced, in 1854, until the 1st February, 1875.

11789. Was there any building on the land, when it was originally acquired?—There was an old farmhouse, some offices, and a few labourers' cottages—no public buildings.

11790. Were those buildings afterwards pulled down?—They were.

11791. Do you know what quantity of land was originally taken there?—11a. 3a. and some perches, statute measure.

11792. Do you know what the title to the place was, by whom it was bought, and to whom it was conveyed?—It was part of the Alton property. It was bought through the late Bishop Higgins, then Dean of Limerick, and the late Archbishop Keatinge. The Dean of Rillincora was at that time Archbishop. These persons were instrumental in getting the farm purchased.

11793. Was it bought by private subscription, or in what other way?—There was a resolution of the Reproductive Loan Fund, which was applied for. A meeting was held in Limerick, about the year 1852, and the gentlemen whom I have mentioned attended, and, I believe, the late Lord Montagu, and the late Sir Richard Donohoe, the latter, I think, was the Chairman. They came to the conclusion to purchase a piece of land near Limerick for an agricultural school, they got £4,000 from the Reproductive Loan Fund, out of which they applied £1,000 for the farm.

11794. Was it subject to any rent?—No rent.

11795. They got it rent free for £1,000?—Yes.

11796. What is the letting value of the land?—When I began operations, in 1854, it was worth about 33s. per Irish acre, but I improved it gradually. A few years ago it would have let at £5 per Irish acre.

11797. So that it was purchased considerably below the value?—It was. Dean Keatinge was the principal person concerned in the purchase, and I heard him say frequently, that on the day he purchased the farm he could have got £1,600 for his bargain.

11798. The buildings that were erected on the premises contained, I believe, of a house for the residence of the pupils, one for the teacher, school-rooms, and a very large farm steading?—Yes, everything upon a large scale.

11799. How much was expended on them?—The original sum was £7,500.

11800. The buildings are all substantial structures—according to the price of building at present, what would be the cost of erecting them now?—There were three tenders in 1854—one was for £15,000, another for £11,000, and Messrs. Ryan put in a tender for £7,500. The Messrs. Ryan calculated that they would be able to procure all the stone they required on the farm, while the other contractors thought they would have to bring it from Limerick. The Ryan got the contract, and succeeded in getting stone on the farm, they also procured workmen very cheap—labourers at 6s. to 8s. a week, and stonecutters at from 10s. to 15s. At that time it was outside of the Corporation.

11801. You mean that they were able to get men who did not belong to trade societies?—Yes. To erect the building at present prices would cost about £215,000.

11802. When was the Institution opened as a school?—In January, 1858.

11803. What class did the pupils belong to?—They were principally farmers' sons, at that time.

11804. What course of education did they go through?

—In the summer season, they rose at five, and at half-past five they went to feed the cattle. They went in to study at half-past six, and were engaged in literary and agricultural study from half-past six till nine. After breakfast, they worked on the farm from ten till two, and again after dinner, from three till six in the long days, and in the winter from three till dusk—so that they were six hours a day employed at outdoor work, and six at study. The indoor study and teaching principally consisted of literary studies, such as boys receive at an ordinary National school in the third and higher classes. They also received instruction in practical agriculture for an hour or so each day.

11805. At what age were pupils admitted?—About sixteen was the minimum.

11806. Then they did not come to be taught much before?—No.

11807. How long did that system go on?—It went on for nearly fourteen years, when changes were made, the effect of which was very much to destroy the practical and industrial objects of the Institution.

11808. What was the greatest number of pupils you had under that system?—The greatest number was twenty-two.

11809. Were those all resident in the building?—All.

11810. It was never full?—Never, it could have been filled in the beginning, but it never was.

11811. Was any change afterwards made in the management?—Yes, the fee was increased. It was only £8 a year, until April, 1875, when it was raised to £12. It was again raised, in 1875, to £24, and, in the year after, to £36, which had the effect of almost closing the Institution against the sons of small farmers, the very class for whom it was intended.

11812. What number of pupils were there in 1875?—I have not the books here—they are in Dublin. I think about twelve.

11813. The establishment is now closed?—Yes, quite closed.

11814. How did that come about?—Some misunderstanding arose, between the trustees and the Commissioners, about the right of admission of free pupils. I do not know anything about it, except what I heard.

11815. When was the school closed?—We had an action on the 15th September, 1878, when it was finally closed.

11816. What was sold off at the auction?—All the live stock and farm produce were sold.

11817. It ceased to be an agricultural school?—It did; and all the furniture that was not worth running to the Limerick Model school was sold—because the pupil teachers were removed to the Limerick Model school, and the good furniture was brought in from Mangrath.

11818. What number of pupils had you in the establishment the year before it was closed?—Eleven. At the time the order came directing us to take no more, we had eleven agricultural pupils, and thirteen pupil teachers.

11819. You never had more than twenty-three, and the number had fallen to eleven before the place was given up?—Well, it fluctuated of course. It sometimes fell down to three or four. Pupils used to be admitted by competition, and they should wait until the time of examination.

11820. What was the length of your course?—Twelve months was supposed to be the length, the pupils were admitted to our school originally six twelve months, and they then went to Glenerve. That was in 1858; but, in 1859 or 1860, the pupils were admitted to Glenerve by competition, so that some of them left us in six months. If a young man had only just entered with us, when the day of examination for Glenerve came, he had liberty to stand, and win his place if he could. That system broke up our school to a very great extent.

11821. They now receive at Glenerve the teaching which was originally given to them at Mangrath?—Yes, of course, and more.

11822. What has been done with the place since September, 1878?—I asked permission to stop there for a few months, until I could get settled with the Board of Education, as to whatever superannuation I might be entitled to, and then to go out to America or somewhere else. The trustees have refused me from that time to this or caretaker.

11823. How has the land been used?—It has been let by auction; Mr. Barry, the acting trustee, advertised the grass and tillage, and let it very largely to the surrounding farmers.

11824. It is not used for any purpose of education?—No.

11825. To what do you attribute the failure of a school?—There are a good many reasons for that—I do not know whether I could well enter into that at present.

11826. You were required to attend here to-day by the Commissioners?—Yes.

Rev. Patrick
A. Martin.

Rev. PATRICK ALPHONSUS MARTIN, CHURCHMAN.

11827. Lord Justice FRYGHERSON.—What school are you connected with?—I am the acting manager of the Roxborough Road Industrial School.

11828. How long has that school been in operation there?—Four years. There are five managers—The Most Rev. Dr. Butler, Catholic Bishop, Dr. O'Donnoghue, Lord Enly, Mr. Walsh, and myself.

11829. Who are the teachers in the school?—The Christian Brothers.

11830. You are a member of that community?—I am.

11831. How many of the brotherhood are engaged in it?—Five teaching, and two lay brothers.

11832. How many pupils have you?—Between the orphanage, the industrial school, and boys out of their time waiting for places, 128.

11833. All resident in the institution?—Yes.

11834. How many of the 128 have been committed under the Industrial Act and are paid for by Government?—102.

11835. You have twenty-eight others?—Yes.

11836. Then your school is entirely under the Industrial Act?—Not entirely. We have fifteen boys who were never under the Act.

11837. Are those fifteen included in the twenty-eight?—They are.

11838. Then that leaves only thirteen boys who are out of their time?—Exactly so.

11839. Are those who are not under the Act domestic?—Yes, domestic boys.

11840. How are they admitted?—By myself generally, when the cases are represented to me.

11841. Lord B. CROMWELL.—Have you any endowment?—We have no endowment.

11842. Lord Justice FRYGHERSON.—How do you hold the site?—The Bishop has the title conveyed to him and Mr. Walsh, I think. I am not in possession of the facts, but to the best of my opinion the trustees are the Bishop, Mr. Walsh, and our Superior-General, Mr. Hoare, who resides in Dublin.

11843. I understand the buildings were erected within the last five years?—They were commenced about seven years since.

11844. How were the funds for the building

11845 The Bishop has the documents. I was not aware of the nature of your examination, and I was out of town when I got the notice, but I am aware Dr O'Shaughnessy gave £1,000.

11846 How much did the building cost?—The shell cost £2,000, and was done by contract by Messrs Walker.

11847 Have you any invested property?—No.

11848 Your income is supplied by Government? Yes, and by voluntary contributions.

11849 How much does it cost to maintain the 128 scholars?—All the scholars are in the Government Hospital for 1877, which I produce.

11850 According to the statement you have handed in, the total receipts from the Government are

£1,305 for subscriptions and donations, £400 for payments from rates, £317 for 6d, and £283 for 2d payment for voluntary scholars, making a total of £2,005 10s 11d, 1—Yes.

11851 You pay your account with the Government Inspector, Mr. Lantagne?—Yes.

11852 And, except the property in the building, the school has no other endowment?—No—we are young yet.

11853 How is the school looked after, as regards education?—Mr. Lantagne is at liberty to inspect it, at any time he pleases.

11854 Is the school in connexion with the National Board?—No.

[The Commissioners adjourned.]

Rev. Patrick
McMurtre.

TWENTY-NINTH DAY—WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 1, 1879.—11 o'Clock, A.M.

In the Town Hall, Londonderry.

Present:—The EARL OF ROSS, Chairman, and RICHARD O'SHAUGHNESSY, Esq., M.P.; with JAMES CROFT MURPHY, Esq., LL.D., Secretary.

Professor JOHN ROBINSON LANSLOW, M.A., examined.

11855 CHAIRMAN.—You desire to give some evidence?—Yes, I volunteer evidence in regard to the Andersonian Institution, Londonderry, because I have been, until recently, connected with it since its foundation.

11856 Are you one of the Committee of the Andersonian Institution, Londonderry?—I am not now a member of the Committee, but I was until two or three months ago. I resigned on being appointed an examiner under the Intermediate Education Act. I thought I should not be on the Committee of any school, although my post, on the Committee, was an honorary one.

11857 The Institution does not appear in the report of the last Commission, published in 1858?—It does not, because the school is a new one, which was established in the beginning of the year 1858.

11859 What amount of contributions was obtained from the citizens of Derry?—In round numbers about £5,000.

11860 Was that expended in buildings?—In kind, and the purchase and laying out of the grounds.

11861 Where is the Institution situated?—At the north side of Derry, a little out of the town.

11862 How is the site held?—It is held on a lease in perpetuity. All the interest in the ground being purchased, there is only some small rent to be paid.

11863 What is the extent of the ground?—Some three or four statute acres.

11864 That ground was purchased with portion of the £5,000?—Yes. That sum was supplemented by various grants from the Irish Society towards the building, amounting to £1,000.

11865 That capital sum was granted to assist in the building?—To assist in the building, to clear off a debt upon it, and for the purpose of laying out the grounds, and so on.

11866 Is there any other endowment from the Irish Society besides that?—Since 1875, the Irish Society have given a grant of £210 a year, and, in 1876, they granted £100 a year for three years for the educational expenditure. That £210 is allocated, £50 to the head-master of the classical school, £50 to the head-master of the mathematical school, £50 to the school of modern languages; £10 to the preparatory school; and there are two exhibitions of £25 each conferred for by the pupils. I have now stated the endowment. The endowments of the masters are of course supplemented by the school fees of the pupils.

11867 I suppose the annual contributions of the Irish Society are given at their pleasure from year to year?—The grant of £210 is not one that requires to be applied for year by year to the Society. Of course, they may withdraw it at any time. They continue it during pleasure. They make a distinction in grants: some they give for a term of years; for instance the £100. When the three years, for which that sum was granted, expire a new application must be made.

11868 Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—Is there any understanding, so far as you know, that they will continue the £210 a year?—None.

11869 CHAIRMAN.—Were there any conditions imposed when they granted the £1,400 for building?—No, except of course, that it should be allocated to the building of this Institution.

11870 What is the object of the Institution?—To give a thorough classical, mathematical, and commercial education.

11871 What are the fees charged?—They vary; but on an average they come to from £8 to £10 a year for a boy.

11872 In the master allowed to fix the fees?—No. The Committee fix them. There is also a boarding school. One of the masters resides on the premises, and has a boarding school. The management of the school is vested in a board consisting of (1) Subscribers of £50 and upwards; (2) twenty-three elected Managers; and (3) fourteen ex-officio Managers, viz.—The Mayor of Derry; the President of Faculty, Magee College; the Governor, and the General Agent, of the Honorable the Irish Society; the Member of Parliament for the city; the Minister of the seven Presbyterian congregations in the district; and of the Independent and Wesleyan Clergymen. Any person who has subscribed £50 to the funds is during life a Manager, and has a right to have a boy educated for three years in classical and mathematics free of charge; and that of course reduces the amount of remuneration to the masters.

11873 A donor of £50 gets only one boy educated free?—Some of the citizens have contributed as much as £500 or £1,000, and for every £50 contributed, they have a right to get a boy educated for three years. The Irish Society, I should say, entitled their right to present boys. They would have a very large right from their contribution of £1,400.

11874 But, in practice, they do not present?—They do not.

11875 I suppose the £5,000 that was collected for building comprised some of those sums of £50?—It comprised them all. The school is non-sectarian in management, and in the composition of its Committee.

11876 There is, however, a religious test exacted from the masters?—There is a test for the Head Master, but not for the Assistant Masters; it is that each Head Master shall sign a declaration that he holds the principles contained in the outline of Christian truth adopted by the Evangelical Alliance. Practically, I may say, it would shut out Roman Catholics.

11874. It does not confine the selection to Presbyterians?—No, to Protestants of any denomination.

11877. Do members of the Irish Church, as well as Presbyterians, as a matter of fact sign it?—No such matter has as yet been elected; but several have been candidates, have been within a vote or two of being elected, and have professed their willingness to sign it.

11878. No objection has been made?—No objection has been made by any Protestant candidate. The last master of the classical school was not a Presbyterian; he was an English Dissenter, a Congregationalist.

11879. Is there short of being a non-sectarian school as far as this, that none of the masters can be Roman Catholics?—Yes.

11880. Are there any Roman Catholics in the school, as pupils?—I am not aware, I do not think it is likely.

11881. Is there any limitation?—None for scholars. There is no test whatever exacted from the scholars.

11882. Is there any religious instruction in the school?—The school opens each day with a short form of prayer by the master, after which the roll is called.

11883. So that other denominations come in after that and join school hours?—I understand so.

11884. What is the number of scholars attending the Institution?—About 100.

11885. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—In whom is the property of the school premises vested?—It is vested in five trustees, who are elected by the board to hold the property, and when one of them dies, another is put in his place.

11886. Are the fees payable directly to the masters?—They are.

11887. They do not pass through the hands of the Committee?—No.

11888. The masters, of course, are subject to the supervision of the Committee?—They are, and upon the property of the school their emoluments depend.

11889. Are the masters removable after appointment?—They are. Their engagement may be terminated by three months' notice on either side; and the great drawback the Committee have to contend with is that, when they get the school into working order, the masters obtain a better appointment elsewhere. We have had three different Head Masters in the Classical school, and three in the Mathematical.

11890. Is there a head-master, superior to the classical, mathematical, and other masters?—The Classical and Mathematical masters are independent of each other. Each is head of his own school.

11891. I suppose they arrange the hours, among themselves, in such a way that boys can avail themselves of all the courses?—That is taken care of.

11892. I suppose the Committee exercises its authority, or would do so if there were any security for it?—Yes.

11893. Classics, Mathematics, and Modern Languages are taught in the school?—Yes.

11894. Are the boys who wish for a commercial education—English and modern languages—given an opportunity of pursuing that, distinct from the classical course?—Yes. One reason why the school was established was to supply the want of a superior Classical and Commercial education to Derry. At the time it was established, Foyle College was not managed in the way it is now, and there was no good school for the commercial classes in Derry.

11895. Did you say classical school?—Classical and commercial.

11897. Do the class next to them, in point of means, send their sons in large numbers?—They do, 11898. They do not, of course, study classics?—They take up modern languages, and the English subjects.

11899. Who teaches the English subjects?—The English subjects are partly taught in the classical school, and partly in the mathematical, that is to say, English distinctively is taught in the classical school, and geography, arithmetic, and kindred subjects in the mathematical.

11900. Is it possible for a boy who does not wish to go in deeply for classics, to absent himself from the classes?—Yes.

11901. CHAIRMAN.—Is there a reduction of fees for that?—There is.

11902. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—Have many of the boys gone up for the Intermediate Education Examination?—Yes. This school has produced the highest number in all Ireland.

11903. Is what grade?—In the senior grade. The boy who was first in Greek in all Ireland, and the boy in the junior grade who was first in algebra, were also from this school.

11904. How is a vacancy on the Committee filled?—The permanent Committee occupy the elected members, as vacancies occur.

11905. There was a number of Presbyterians disengaged placed on the Board originally?—Not originally, but when the trust deed was drawn out, about three years ago. Of course everything was tentative until a few years ago, when the trust deed was drawn out.

11906. Those disengaged are the ministers of the various congregations in Derry?—They are.

11907. Will they be succeeded on the Board by their successors in the churches?—They will.

11908. Are there any Episcopalian on the Board?—There are no Episcopalian clergymen; but there are some Episcopalian laymen, who contributed £50, but their number is small. As a matter of fact, the vast contributions came from the Presbyterians. There are also some Episcopals elected. The honorary treasurer, for example, is an Episcopalian.

11909. The school is not denominational in the sense of excluding Episcopals?—No; but Episcopals, as a rule, go to Foyle College, which is also practically non-sectarian; and the Presbyterians go to the Academic Institution.

11910. The governing body of the Institution are substantially Presbyterian?—They are.

11911. Where do the middle class Catholics go?—They have a Christian Brothers' school.

11912. That gives only primary education?—There who want higher education go to Letterkenny, or elsewhere, but there is not a large Roman Catholic mass, sending forward their sons for intermediate education.

11913. CHAIRMAN.—I suppose they are more of the poorer class?—Yes. Practically they find they do not want the intermediate schools.

11914. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—Is there any religious test required from the masters in the Institution?—None, except what I mentioned, that, on entering office, the head masters must sign a declaration of religious belief, adopted by the Evangelical Alliance. It states a few of the fundamental principles of the Christian religion, but it is expressed in such a way that I fancy no Roman Catholic would sign it. [Vide Appendix No. 16.]

11915. A very large percentage of the entire population of the town is Roman Catholic?—Yes, a very large proportion.

11916. There are Roman Catholic shopkeepers in the town?—Yes, but not amongst the more wealthy. There are a few who do send their sons for higher education, but, as a rule, I think they send them to boarding schools. They have not hitherto felt the want of an intermediate school here to such an extent as to induce them to start one.

11917. I believe they are starting one now?—I believe so.

11918. The only evidence you give as to their not feeling the want, is that hitherto they have not started one?—Yes. I am quite certain that, with their usual and enterprises, if they felt the want they would soon have established one.

11912. Are there any Roman Catholic doctors in Derry?—There are. One of our most eminent doctors, Dr. White, a man known in the profession outside of Derry, is a Roman Catholic.

11913. And solicitors?—Yes.

11914. And, of course, as in other Catholic districts, a good many young Catholics become patients?—Yes, there are a number.

11915. You cannot say whether many of them enter religious orders—become Jesuits or Dominicans?—No, I cannot say.

11916. You are aware that it is desirable, for the sake of the whole community, that those who enter the Church, and have important duties, social as well as religious, to discharge, should receive a good intermediate education?—Certainly.

11917. CHAIRMAN.—I understood you to say that the Classical and Mathematical Masters were independent of each other—neither superior to the other in authority?—Our arrangement at present is modelled on the Academical Institution, Belfast. Their masters, I believe, elect each year a president from their Board, but the masters here have not done so—they do not find the necessity arising, I suppose.

11918. Is there a Model-school in the town?—There is.

11919. Are there any exhibitions attached to the Model school, for pupils going on to the Academical Institution?—None. There are three exhibitions in the Institution—two, founded by the Irish Society, of £25 each, and one founded by a private gentleman, Mr. Tilke of Derry, of £10 a year. There is also a canonical exhibition for five years founded by Mr. Hogg, and from time to time other prizes of £5 or £10 have been given, for two or three years, by other friends.

11920. There is no annual fund permanently devoted to exhibitions?—None, that can be called permanent, except the first three I have mentioned—the two of £25 each from the Irish Society, and the one of £10 from Mr. Tilke.

11921. I suppose the Institution may be looked upon as primarily a Presbyterian institution, as opposed to Foyle College?—The history of the origin of the Institution is this—Ten years ago it was felt that Foyle College was not suited to meet the wants of a common community. It was, in fact, usually a preparatory school for Trinity College, and the then master was not disposed to make it anything else. The Irish Society had already the control over it that they have now, and they could hardly interfere. This school was accordingly started to supply the want, and since then the Irish Society have entirely altered the constitution of Foyle College. In fact, they have made Foyle College what the people of Derry wanted them to make it. At present we have two schools conducted consistently with the wishes of the people of Derry. There is plenty of work for both, and both are in the highest state of efficiency.

11922. Is the scale of fees lower in the Academical Institution than in Foyle College?—It may be a very little.

11923. They are both, both boarding and day schools?—Yes; Foyle College being rather the larger boarding school at present, and the other the larger as regards day boys.

11924. Was there any objection for your leaving the Committee except being an examiner under the Intermediate Education Act?—None.

11925. You were quite satisfied with the management?—Yes, thoroughly satisfied. As a matter of fact, I think it very much better that examinations should not be on the Committee of Intermediate schools. As the position was a purely honorary one, the Commissioners, I believe, would have made no objection to my retaining a seat on the Committee, if I liked to do so.

11926. Are you connected with any other educational institution in Derry?—I am a professor in Magee College. I have been professor of mathematics and natural philosophy there since the college opened in 1865.

11927. Is that a school or a college?—The course is purely University. The college is mainly for young men intended for the Presbyterian ministry. It is a denominational college, though in the undergraduate course there is no religious test, and no interference with the religious belief of the students.

11928. There are no very young boys amongst the pupils there?—The average age at entrance would be seventeen or eighteen.

11929. What is the province of the Committee of the Academical Institution?—Pure.

11930. What is the average attendance at the Committee meetings?—The attendance varies according to the importance of the business—generally twelve to fifteen; sometimes thirty.

11931. There is no business transacted without a quorum?—None. There is a sub-committee of management, of from six to ten, and they arrange such little matters as paying accounts.

11932. Who signs the cheques?—The Secretary and Treasurer of the Board of Management. All accounts must be passed before the Board, and an order for their payment sanctioned by the meeting, and then the Secretary and Treasurer, who keep the bank account in their names, sign the cheques and pay them. Each year the accounts are audited, and the audited statement is put into the hands of the members of the Committee.

11933. What are the duties of the Committee, beyond keeping the building in repair and paying the accounts?—They elect the masters, and have a general supervision over the education given in the school. Most of them, having begun the school, are interested in seeing the work looked after. I have been during the last ten years constantly on deputations from different establishments to the Irish Society, and I have invariably found them exceedingly anxious to enter into all claims, exceedingly courteous to the deputation, and always generous. I have been with them in connexion with the School of Art, the Magee College, and the Academical Institution, and we have invariably found them very generous, and very prompt in rendering assistance to our schemes.

11934. How do they obtain their local knowledge? Do they send a deputation over every year?—Every year; and they have a permanent agent on the spot, who is familiar with the details of local institutions, and sees that they are thoroughly familiarised with them, too. From personal knowledge, I can say that, as regards any business I have been connected with, the agent has shown that he was thoroughly familiar with the details.

11935. The Society also send a deputation to look into affairs on the spot?—Yes; and that deputation bears a complaint or request from any body of men that came before them.

MR. JOHN YOUNG, B.A., examined.

11936. CHAIRMAN.—You are one of the head-masters of the Londonderry Academical Institution?—I am the headmaster in the Mathematical school.

11937. As I understand, the head-masters of the classical and mathematical schools, and all the others, are of equal authority?—The two head-masters are of equal authority. Each is responsible for the efficiency of his own department.

Mr John

11938. There is no appeal to settle any question, except to the Committee?—No appeal.

11939. You have your own separate class-rooms?—We have our own separate class-rooms, and separate work. Of course, we work in harmony, and constantly confer as to the prosperity of the Institution.

11940. Do you divide the scholars into divisions, so as to give them all an opportunity of attending each school?—We do. We are on the same model as now as possible—as the Belfast Academical Institution.

11948. What fees are charged to the pupils?—The fees vary according to the subjects taken up by the pupils—from £8, as the minimum, to £15 a year.

11949. Do they vary according to the subjects, and also according to the age?—The subjects vary according to the age, and the fees according to the subjects.

11950. If the parents are poor, is there any reduction made, or is the scale of fees fixed?—The scale of fees is fixed for all. We have free pupils who are nominated by donors of £50. Every donor of £50 has a right to nominate a free pupil for three years. The number of such pupils is, at present, ten.

11951. Are these free pupils, boarders or day boys?—Generally day boys, but they may be boarders.

11952. Then they have to pay for their board like any other pupils?—They have.

11953. The reduction only applies to the cost of tuition?—It applies to the fees in the Classical and English school, and in the Mathematical and Commercial, that is, in the two schools.

11954. What is the total number of pupils in the schools?—160.

11955. How many of these are boarders?—Thirteen are boarders.

11956. Is there accommodation for more than thirteen?—My colleague has charge of the boarding establishment, but I think the accommodation is limited to about twenty-five.

11957. Is the boarding establishment a private house?—It is part of the Institution building. I am also at liberty to keep boarders in my own private house, if I feel disposed to do so.

11958. There is no religious instruction, except at the commencement of school?—No, there is the reading of Scripture, and prayers, every morning.

11959. Is the education after that purely secular?—Partly secular.

11960. Are the pupils all Protestants?—They are all Protestants at present. We have only had two Roman Catholics since the school was founded.

11961. Did they come in after prayers?—Yes.

11962. How are the rent and taxes provided for?—The masters have to pay all the taxes on the school premises and also the rent. The resident master pays a rent.

11963. You receive certain fees from the pupils. Do you get a salary as well?—I get £20 a year of the sum given by the Belfast Society, that is, the only personal endowment.

11964. What do the taxes come to each year?—My share of the taxes last year amounted to £10 on the school buildings.

11965. How much was your rent?—The rent, I believe, is £42 a year, but that is paid by my colleague, the resident head master.

11966. Is it only your colleague, who has the boarding house, who pays rent?—He pays the rent.

11967. You do not pay any?—I do not.

11968. What do you consider your emolument approximately worth?—From £200 to £250 a year.

11969. What class of boys attend the school?—They are generally the sons of merchants.

11970. How many candidates did you read up for the Intermediate examination?—We sent in twenty-six candidates, of whom eighteen passed, three gaining exhibitions and six gaining prizes. One of our pupils is first in the highest grade in all Ireland.

11971. Mr. O'BRIEN RESIDENT.—Is it so one particular branch?—In the combined ranks, and he is also first in the combined ranks in Greek and Latin in all Ireland. In the junior grade, one of our pupils is first of all the candidates in mathematics, and two of our boys are respectively first and fourth in the junior grade in chemistry.

11972. CHAIRMAN.—There is a classical master, a mathematical master, and a teacher of modern languages. Is there any physical science master?—I teach physical science. There is a drawing master.

11973. Do you know what emolument he gets?—There is no emolument for the drawing master.

11974. Is there a music master?—No, but music is taught by one of the staff of teachers.

11975. Does the drawing master merely attend from the town to give lessons?—He is connected with the Government School of Art, and comes in to teach drawing at fixed times.

11976. There is no residence for any of the teachers except for the master who has the boarding house?—That is all.

11977. Have you any appliances for teaching physical science?—I have a stock of apparatus.

11978. What branches do you teach?—Chemistry, and experimental physics.

11979. Mr. O'BRIEN RESIDENT.—Where did you receive your own education?—At the Queen's College, Belfast.

Mr. John C.
Dick, &c.

Mr. JOHN C. DICK, M.A., examined.

11980. CHAIRMAN.—Are you also a graduate of the Queen's University?—Yes; I was educated at the Belfast College.

11981. What school do you provide over?—I was appointed last October to the headmastership of the Classical and English schools, in the Londonderry Academical Institution, and for these I am solely responsible.

11982. Are the Classical and English schools joined together under one management?—They are separate schools; I am responsible for both.

11983. You have thirteen boarders?—I have fourteen now.

11984. What fees are charged?—About £30, including extras. I was obliged, when appointed, to raise the fees, and notwithstanding that, the number has increased from four to fourteen.

11985. What were the fees before your time?—£12, I think.

11986. Is the charge for the boarders controlled in any way by the Committee?—Not at all.

11987. Are the boarders the sons of merchants in or near the town?—They are usually drawn from the four neighboring counties. I had one from Wicklow, who left lately.

11988. Are the boarders generally of the class of gentry, or of the commercial class?—They are sons of the gentry, and of the higher commercial classes.

11989. Do you pay £15 for taxes, the same as the other head masters?—I pay very much more, because I reside in the school.

11990. You pay on the house and the schoolroom as well?—Yes; I am resident in the school, and have sole charge of the boarding school. I pay a rent of £45, and the taxes for the last year amounted to £28 odd. I also pay my own resident assistant.

11991. Is there an assistant teacher in each school?—Yes.

11992. Have you also one in the English school?—One is partly English and partly classical. He divides his time.

11993. You and your assistant teach in the two schools, English and classical?—Yes.

11994. What would you say your emolument worth?—There is an emolument of £50; and the fees are about £100 a year.

11995. You have, in addition, a certain profit on the boarders?—I am not able to calculate that as yet, as I have not been a year in the school; but I do not think the profit will be at all considerable.

Rev. JAMES MAXWELL RODGERS, M.A., examined.

Oct. 1, 1877.

Rev. James M. Rodgers, M.A.

11996. CHAIRMAN.—With what institution are you connected?—I am connected with the Magee College, and with the Academical Institution.

11997. What position do you hold?—I am the Minister of one of those congregations whose ministers sit down on the Board of management of the Academical Institution, and I am one of the trustees of the Magee College, which I do not think comes within the scope of your inquiry, because it is not an intermediate school. It corresponds to the Queen's College, Belfast, and includes a theological department also, which is altogether for the purpose of training ministers.

11998. You can give us some information as to the views generally entertained by the Presbyterians in this part of the country, on the subject of education, and as to how far the existing institutions meet the requirements of the district?—I think the district is amply well supplied with educational facilities, and I think it would not be fair if I did not say that the Irish Society are very much to be thanked in that. Their contributions to educational purposes are very good, and very many, and we always meet with very pleasant treatment, when we come either before that local agent or the deposition. But I think I am bound to say that a very great number of the Presbyterians consistently, whose opinions I can express with great confidence, think that the proportion of the grants is not very satisfactory, at least, not very satisfactory to us. For example, the Academical Institution was established simply because the common people of the town could not get at home an education for their children, and we think that we are put upon rather scanty allowance, seeing that our endowments from the Irish Society are so small, as compared with those to Foyle College. I think the Irish Society are not under obligations, by their charter, or by anything else, to let their own good will, and therefore they do remarkably well, considering that it is a matter of generosity; and they always appear here before us as Episcopals. But we are wounded, inasmuch as they acknowledge themselves as trustees, and we get a limited sum for education as compared with what a grant to the rival establishment. However, I have nothing to say except to express our appreciation of what we get, and to add that we do not get all the money that we want.

11999. How far do you think the distribution might be enriched? Do you think the primary schools do not get their fair share?—I can scarcely speak for the primary schools. A very large number have small endowments, such as £10 or £20 a year, from the Irish Society. I am speaking chiefly in reference to the intermediate school in Derry, because there is one in Coleraine which receives kind treatment, and is very worthy of it.

12000. Mr. O'SHEA.—Is that a Presbyterian school?—No, non-sectarian.

12001. Is it under Presbyterian or Episcopalian management?—Mr. Phelan tells me that the governing body is mixed. The present teacher is not a Presbyterian connected with our Church.

12002. CHAIRMAN.—I suppose you have not made any appeal to the powers of the Irish Society?—I think the Irish Society are not bound by their charter, as to the distribution of their funds among Protestants. They distribute according to their own good will. But acknowledging themselves to be trustees, and a very large proportion of their treasury being Non-episcopalian, we the Presbyterians think that we do not get a fair share in the distribution of their generosity, if it is generosity.

12003. Of course, any suggestions that come from the local people would be important, so that the Irish Society might take them into consideration in future?—I do not make this suggestion either in an offensive tone or offensive spirit, but the community think are not Episcopals receive a very moderate share of the educational endowments which the Irish Society distribute. I speak of the distribution to the intermediate schools of Derry.

12004. Do you consider Foyle College primarily an Episcopalian institution?—We do. The Bishop has personally the appointment of the teachers, who is always an Episcopalian, and until the other day he must have been a clergyman of the Episcopal Church, and the reason why the Academical Institution was established was, that facilities were not given, and would not be afforded in Foyle College, say twelve or thirteen years ago, for giving such a commercial education to young people as their parents thought necessary. The people of Londonderry were then obliged to give money for establishing a school to supply an education such as they wanted, for fitting their boys to enter the office. I heard a gentleman say to-day that local parties gave £100 or £200, I know one who gave £300 for the building of the Institution.

12005. I suppose if the course in Foyle College, that now exists, had been in existence some years ago, the Academical Institution would not have been established?—Probably not.

12006. Do you think that two such schools are above the requirements of the district?—I do not. I think the district is very well supplied, seeing there are two, because the competition is very valuable. Very much more attention is paid in each place, I am quite sure, to the teaching, and the wishes of the community, than would be if there were only one; and, inasmuch as both schools have a considerable number of pupils, probably above 100 each, it seems to me that the neighbourhood is not over-schooled yet. For example, when the Academical Institution got into the hands of a gentleman connected here to-day, the boarders had fallen as low as two or three, and in much less than a year they have got up to fourteen or fifteen, and the number is still increasing. The Academical Institution is provided with scholars from the three or four counties round about, and a very large number of people engaged in agriculture send their boys in by train in the morning; so that it does a good deal of work for local parties.

12007. What distance do they come in, to attend school?—One, who has got an exhibition, comes in twelve miles or more, by rail, every morning. One is still attending the Institution, who comes in probably twenty miles.

12008. Foyle College is the only other boarding school in Londonderry?—There is a school in town, established as a private speculation, the master of which has twenty or thirty boys, and, being attended with a moderate income, he manages to get along. But no Board looks after it, and there is no superintendence.

12009. That school has no endowment?—No. There have been in Derry from time to time private speculations of the same kind.

12010. Mr. O'SHEA.—Have you ever seen a copy of the charter of the Irish Society?—I never have.

12011. Are you aware that the Commissioners in 1854 reported upon its history and constitution?—I am.

12012. Are you aware that the Society was by these Commissioners declared to be trustees, for the purposes specified in the charter?—I knew they were declared to be trustees in a lawsuit in connection with the Shipman's Company.

12013. What is your number in the Presbyterian population of Derry?—About half of all the Protestants in Derry.

12014. One-half of the middle class of the Protestant population is Presbyterian?—I should think even considerably more, outside the town.

12015. The day boys who attend the Academical Institution are mainly, as I understand, Presbyterians?—Mainly; but we have also Congregationalists, and Covenanters, and Methodists, and Episcopals.

12016. The boys that attend Foyle College are mainly, I presume, Episcopals?—I should think so.

12017. What is the amount of the annual donation, at present, from the Irish Society to the Academical

Oct 1, 1879
Rev. James M.
Holmes, M.A.

Institution?—It amounts altogether to £210 a year permanently, subject to their good will, and £100 extra, for a period of three years, for incidental expenses.

12018. I hold in my hand a general statement of the receipts and expenditure of the Irish Society for 1878, and I find there that their contributions to Boyle College for that year amounted to £9881—I should think so.

12019. I suppose you are aware that the Irish Society also contributed to various denominational Episcopalian and Presbyterian primary schools in the town, and in the neighbourhood?—Yes.

12020. In the course of Mr. Howe's evidence before this Commission, in reply to a question as to the amount of his salary, he said:—

"The salary was £200 a year, but on my appointment I declined to accept that sum, and petitioned the Irish Society to give me an increase. As the school was not, at the time, in a particularly prosperous condition, I asked them for eight years to give me an increase of salary, as I thought by that time the school would be on a satisfactory basis. The Society agreed to give me £350 per annum additional for the first two years, and then to reduce that increase by £50 each year, until the salary comes down to the £200 a year. They also pay the taxes for me, which come to about £30 a year, and which my predecessor had to pay himself."

You have told us the feeling as to the inequality of the grant for incidental purposes. Do you mean to apply to the grants made by the Society for denominational primary Presbyterian schools?—No, I should say not.

12021. Have you made yourself conversant with that subject?—Not very intimately so, but any Presbyterian who establishes a respectable school in the neighbourhood gets a grant from the Irish Society, if he asks for it—that is, if the Irish Society is in funds—and he gets it with a good grace, too. So that I do not think we have reason to complain in that respect. I can speak for no one, however, but myself, inasmuch as I have not made myself intimately acquainted with the primary school aspect of the subject. I have a very lively recollection of having got a school established in a poor neighborhood, and I asked for a grant. They said, with every consideration, that all the money was spent for the year. They did not say, "Come back next year," but the tone and manner indicated it, and I came and got my grant. Afterwards I got another school built, and on the very first session on which I opened, I got a grant.

12022. CHAIRMAN.—In the report of the Royal Commission of 1857, it is stated that Lord Chancellor Cottonham, in giving judgment in a case which involved a question as to the duties of the Irish Society, said:—

"What was the object of this plantation, and the object of the grant? It was a great public object. It was for the purpose of providing for the settlement of this district, which had been laid waste by the rebellion. It was to introduce civilization and order into that district; to provide for the establishment there and the maintenance of the Protestant religion. These trusts are continuing. They have all to be provided for the Protestant religion, the Protestant establishment of that district, they have also to superintend and take care of that which is closely and intimately connected with religion, and is a part of it—the education of the inhabitants of the district."

That would lead one to infer that the idea of those who founded this endowment was to provide for Protestant education. So far as you know, does that institution still continue, or do the inhabitants of the district generally, including Roman Catholics, receive any assistance?—I really cannot speak for the Roman Catholics at all. But I should say that we, the Presbyterians, claim to be quite as good Protestants as any others in the country; and if we speak of the Episcopalians, we speak of them as Protestant Episcopalians, as distinguishing them from Catholic Episcopalians.

12023. Mr. O'Hanlon.—You claim, as I understand, to be as much within the scope of the expression "Protestant," as the Protestant Episcopalians are?—That was my idea.

12024. When Lord Chancellor Cottonham used the words which Lord Brough has read to you, the Protestant establishment existed?—Yes.

12025. The establishment having ceased to exist, I presume that all Protestants regard themselves as equal?—Pretty much. I presume that we all think ourselves a little higher than our neighbours.

12026. But, even before the disestablishment, Presbyterians obtained a share of the endowment?—Yes, I am not quite sure whether the grant was given to the Academic Institution before the disestablishment.

12027. But before the disestablishment of Presbyterian primary schools got grants?—They have been getting money for years. Long before the disestablishment.

12028. Although they were, of course, outside the Protestant establishment in the district?—Yes.

12029. CHAIRMAN.—Upon the introduction made in 1857 by the Irish Society, I find the first Presbyterian National school. Is that a primary school?—Yes.

12030. Does that still get a grant?—I should think so, I am almost sure it does.

12031. There also appear upon the list of 1857, amongst others, the Londonderry first Presbyterian National school for girls, the first Presbyterian Sunday school, and the Fountain-street Industrial Ragged school. Is that a poor school still?—Probably that was a school belonging to a minister who had a church in Fountain-street, and if so it has been transferred to a new building.

SIR EDWARD REID, J.P., examined.

Sir Edward Reid, J.P.

12032. CHAIRMAN.—You are connected with Gwyn's Charitable Institution, Londonderry?—Yes; I am the Secretary to the Body of Trustees.

12034. What is the number of the trustees?—The number is limited to twenty-one, including the ex-officio trustees.

12035. How often do the trustees meet?—They meet quarterly, or oftener, if necessary, and they appoint at each quarterly meeting, from among their own number, a Committee for the ensuing quarter, and that Committee meets every Tuesday.

12036. Of what does the endowment consist?—The treasurer is present, and is in a position to give you all information as regards the endowment, and the receipts and expenditure of the institution.

12037. It appears, by the report of the Commissioners of 1857, that Gwyn's Charitable Institution, Londonderry, was founded under the will of John Gwyn.

"For clothing, boarding, educating, and supporting children of poor persons who have resided for three or five years in the city or north-west liberties of Londonderry, the Derry side of the Foyle, or village of Mill, County of Down. To be taught English, and those of superior talents book-keeping and navigation; no distinction as to religious persuasion; Roman Catholics to be taught Roman Catholic doctrine if their parents desire, but the principles of sound Christian morality and the doctrine of salvation through Christ to be taught to all. Master and mistress to be Protestants or Protestant Dissenters."

Is there only the one school?—Only the one school, founded and endowed under the will of John Gwyn, and a special Act of Parliament.

12038. What number of pupils are there in the Institution?—At present there are fifty-three, but we have room for sixty. On Friday next, which will be our quarterly meeting, there will be four new appli-others to be considered. We keep up the number to only, if we have suitable applicants, and we have generally very near that number.

12039. Are there boys of all religious denominations in the school?—All religious denominations are represented, there are twenty-three Presbyterians, fifteen Episcopalians, and fifteen Roman Catholics, making the total number fifty-three.

12040. There are no day scholars?—No, under the will of the founder, the trustees are bound to clothe, educate, and feed the pupils. They could give additional education in the school, but they are not exactly certain whether the will gives them even that power. The means at their disposal would enable them to educate an extra number, but they could not also feed and clothe them, the funds of the Institution being sufficiently occupied at present.

12041. The pupils are free, clothed, and educated?—They are all free. There is no charge whatever. One of the qualifications, enabling applicants to get in, is that they must be the children of poor parents.

12042. Is the education given, a primary one?—It is a good English education. There is also a class in connection with the Science and Art Department, South Kensington, which has been very successful. We give about £3 a year to buy small prizes, as an encouragement, for those who deserve them.

12043. Is the managing Committee a mixed body?—The members of the city are the persons from whom the trustees are chosen, and from them the Committee are chosen every year, without any reference to religious qualifications. There are only Presbyterians and Church of Ireland members amongst the trustees. There are no Roman Catholic trustees.

12044. Mr. O'BRIEN.—The Act of Parliament provides that there shall be quarterly meetings of the trustees held—in January, April, July, and October. Are these meetings duly held?—Yes, I produce the quarterly minutes of the trustees, commencing with the 6th July, 1856, and extending down to the present time, all signed by the Chairman at every meeting.

12045. What is the quorum at those meetings?—There is no special quorum. The weekly Committee report to the quarterly meeting what goes on in the school during the interval, and that report is entered with the minutes of each quarterly meeting.

12046. There is a Committee of five persons appointed at each of those quarterly meetings, to manage the details of the school up to the next quarterly meeting?—Yes.

12047. Is there any quorum fixed for that Committee?—There is no fixed quorum, but there are generally two in attendance—sometimes three, and occasionally the entire five.

12048. Have the Committee the power of signing cheques?—The power to sign cheques is entirely vested in the Committee. The accounts are brought before the Committee once a month, when they sign the cheques.

12049. How many signatories must there be to the cheques?—Two. Two cheques are given to the treasurer for the month's disbursements, and he is then accountable for the discharge of the accounts.

12050. CHAIRMAN.—He keeps a sort of petty cash account?—The treasurer keeps all the accounts.

12051. Mr. O'BRIEN.—Are the cheques the treasurer gets, to meet the expenses he has incurred for the past month, or in anticipation?—Mainly for the past month. He produces the receipts at the next monthly meeting.

12052. How often do the Committee submit the details of the accounts to the trustees?—Once a year they furnish accounts to the trustees.

12053. This appears to be the rule as to the election of the Committee.—

"A Committee of five persons, of and from amongst the trustees, shall be chosen at each of the said quarterly meetings, who shall continue in office till the next annual meeting."

Do they go through the form of re-electing the five at each quarterly meeting?—At each quarterly meeting the Committee is re-elected. They may put on new members or re-elect the old ones, as they think right.

12054. How many Roman Catholic pupils are there in the Institution?—Fifteen.

12055. Is that the average number of Roman Catholics?—It has been the average number lately. Sometimes it has come up to eighteen. We have rejected none.

12056. Are the children, Roman Catholics and others, who are inmates, generally chosen from the town and neighbourhood?—There are several classes mentioned in the will of the founder, and those belonging to the city of Derry, whose parents are both dead, have a preference. Those of the city who have one parent dead have the next claim. There is a district called the Liberties, which comes in after that, and Mull, the taster's burgh, has a special privilege for the children from that village, and a mile around it.

12057. Are there more than two masters employed in the Institution?—There is what we call a monitor at present. He has been engaged for the last two years. At intervals there have been assistants appointed, but as a general rule they have not been deemed necessary.

12058. Is the monitor paid?—He gets £10 a year.

12059. And his board?—Yes; he is fed and clothed in the Institution.

12060. There is no restriction in the founder's will with regard to his religion?—The masters must be Protestants.

12061. Is the monitor reported as a master?—He is simply an officer appointed by the trustees, as they would appoint any other they thought requisite; but as he is engaged in the teaching, the trustees would construe it to be their duty to confine themselves to having Protestants.

12062. As a matter of fact, there has never been a Roman Catholic monitor?—Never that I know.

12063. How are the Roman Catholic boys instructed in religion?—They are allowed to go out, and the clergymen send a message, when they wish them to go for instruction. On Sundays, the senior Roman Catholic boy takes the rest to a place of worship, and is considered by the trustees to be responsible for their attending at that place of worship, and wherever we hear of any one of a boy absenting himself, he is punished for it.

12064. Are the regulations or suggestions by the Roman Catholic clergy, for facilities to enable the children to attend their religious duties, complied with?—They are always attended to.

12065. Are they frequently made?—I think they ask them to go out for particular services only once or twice a year. They are always allowed out for Sunday's services, and if these many other special services, when a requisition is made, it is attended to.

12066. Do the Roman Catholic clergymen attend on the premises?—No clergymen of any denomination ever conduct services. By the will of the founder, it is so ordered that services are not to be conducted by any clergymen in the school. That is done by the schoolmaster.

12067. I did not refer to conducting services, but to the giving of ordinary instruction, in their particular creed, to the pupils?—No clergymen go to the school to give instruction at all. The pupils go out for religious instruction to their respective churches.

12068. How often do the Catholic children go out for the purpose of religious instruction?—I really could not answer that question; but I know that every facility is given.

12069. Up to what age do the children remain in the Institution?—Generally till about sixteen years of age. For some trades, they are entered at an earlier period than others, and some trades require a longer servitude than others. Masters are arranged according to the masters are willing to take them.

12070. There appear to be, in your books, references to some isolated cases of boys absconding?—There are extremely few such cases, and, when they do abscond, somebody else is generally at the bottom of it, but they leave the country, and we hear nothing more about them. Two boys went to Dublin the other day, and I heard of them from the gentleman who has charge of the Home for Destitute Children. He applied to know whether their story was correct, and I wrote telling him that they had absconded. There was no known cause, they had been treated very well, the masters making no complaints, but we had no further control over them.

12071. With regard to those who go out as apprentices, is there any supervision kept over them?—Yes. I inquire myself how they are getting on, and if there is any case of bad conduct or anything of that kind, I report it to the trustees. As a general rule, the conduct of the apprentices has been very good.

12072. When a report of bad conduct is made to the trustees, what course do they take in reference to the ill-behaved apprentices?—It depends on circumstances. Very often it is beyond our control to take any course, because they abscond. After they leave the school, beyond a wish of our own to see how they are getting on, we do not consider we have any right to dictate to them. We can, however, punish them in one way. The boys apprenticed get a small sum of money, at the end of each year, on the certificate of the master that they had conducted themselves satisfactorily, and if they do not bring that certificate, they do not get the allowance.

12073. With regard to all cranks, do the trustees endeavour to induce the masters to see that their apprentices attend religious worship?—That is a matter we have left entirely to the masters and the parents. After people leave the Institution, the trustees do not consider they have any right to interfere with them further. Most of the boys have their mother alive, and she is supposed to look after them.

12074. I find this entry in the minute book, which you produced:—

"The Treasurer reported the death of two of his securities, and that he was prepared to give others instead of those two. It was agreed on the motion of Mr. McKinnon, and seconded by Mr. Black, that they were satisfied with the remaining two until further order was given."

Is the number of securities to be given by the treasurer fixed?—No. The trustees have full power—they may be satisfied with one. The Act says, the treasurer must give security to the satisfaction of the trustees.

12075. There is an entry on the 4th July, on the subject of a scheme for extending the benefits of this Institution to non-boarders?—That is what I referred to when I said that the trustees had some doubts as to whether they would be able to have day boys. At one time we thought if an Act of Parliament was passed to allow an institution such as ours to take day boys, and give them their education, it would be well, but there was a doubt about being able to do it in our case, the words of the will being, to "clothe, educate, and feed." The facilities for education are pretty good in Derry, and we would give free education in that way, if we saw our way to it. However, we consulted our solicitor on the subject, and he is of opinion that, in the words of the will, the pupils must be "clothed, educated, and fed;" so the idea is very likely to end in nothing, inasmuch as our funds will not enable us to support more than we are doing at present.

12076. It appears considerably in your reports, that candidates are rejected on the ground of unfitness?—The will specially orders that no boy who is at all unwholly shall be admitted into the Institution. Each applicant must be examined by a doctor, before he can be approved of by the trustees.

12077. Do many boys die in the Institution?—Scarcely any, but there are very often three or four in hospital.

12078. Is there provision made for sick boys in the present?—We have an apartment for that purpose.

12079. Is it sufficiently isolated?—Yes, it is at the very top of the house, widely apart from where the other boys sleep.

12080. In the case of small-pox or other infectious diseases, would you send the boys to another house?—Cases of that kind occur very seldom. I fear, if there were cases of small-pox, we would have to send them to the infirmary.

12081. On the general subject of help from the Irish Society, have you anything to say?—We have as yet, except what Mr. Gwyn has left.

12082. On the topics dealt on by Mr. Rodgers, in these articles you wish to give?—As far as the Irish Society are concerned, I believe they are very anxious to promote education in every possible way, and are always ready to give facilities, and money for the purpose. I never heard any other opinion expressed. Whenever controversy we may have on other subjects regarding their management, we do not differ upon this,—that they give fair play to our national institutions.

12083. Do you mean a rivalry between the Episcopalians and the Presbyterians?—There is some little difference in that respect. We sometimes think the others get too much.

12084. When you say, "the others," I presume you mean the Episcopalians?—Yes, but, I believe, the Irish Society contributes very fairly towards every application made to them. I do not think they treat applications in a sectarian point of view at all.

12085. Do you agree with the Rev. Mr. Rodgers in thinking that there is, among a certain number of Presbyterians, the idea that the share they get for educational purposes is relatively not as satisfactory as that given to the Episcopalians?—We have always been of opinion that we get too little.

12086. CHAIRMAN.—To what trades are the boys usually apprenticed?—Some become carpenters, and a large number become printers, because they have got a good education, some go to other trades. The boys get their own chance in looking out for a trade.

12087. Are any of them specially educated with a view to a sea-faring life, because I see navigation is one of the subjects taught?—Navigation is taught, but there are extremely few boys who go to sea. The great majority go to printing. In some few instances, they have gone into telegraph offices.

12088. The head master gets £180 a year. What does the assistant get?—£40 a year, and his board and lodging.

12089. There is a garden in the Institution—what are his duties?—His duties are to furnish vegetables for the Institution, and take care of the ground.

12090. Do the pupils work on the land?—They do, at such hours as do not interfere with their ordinary school work.

12091. They are expected to work on the land?—They are: because it is considered very good for them to have a little employment.

12092. If, in the will of the founder, these words:—

"The said testator doth also will and direct that in the nurture of children no distinction shall be made as to their religious persuasion, but that all classes shall be equally admitted, and all children of the Roman Catholic persuasion, who shall become trustees, shall be educated in the principles of their own church, and they be permitted to attend public worship at their own chapel in Derry, under the care of some proper person who shall pay strict attention to their conduct."

I do not find anything in reference to that subject in the rules. What course do the Committee give?—With regard to that, the practice has been always to makes the senior Deacons Colloir boy accountable for the others. The senior master is a Presbyterian, and he looks after the Presbyterian boys.

12083. Do you find you can trust the senior boy?—We have never had any complaints on that score. We always find we can trust him.

12084. Do the boys go to their respective places of worship every Sunday?—Every Sunday. The gentlemen who superintend schools in connexion with the different churches, if there was any non-attendance, would report it, and they have done so, and we have immediately inquired into it.

12085. There ought to be some rule on the subject?—The ninth clause provides that the master or his assistant shall attend the boys to their respective places of worship on Sundays, and it has always been acted on, but of course they cannot go to all the places.

The Minutes
H. C. 17.

Mr. PRINCELYN JONES, examined.

Mr. Puckell
Examiner.

12086. CHAIRMAN.—You are the treasurer and agent of Gwyn's Institution, Llandovery?—Yes.

12087. What does the endowment consist of?—Of £25,333 17s. 6d. lent on mortgage in two sums, £25,076 18s. 6d. to the Duke of Lismore, and £2,256 18s. 6d. to the late Sir James Street. The interest on those sums at 4½ per cent for the past year produced £1,889 7s. There are also two farms in the neighbourhood of Derry, and two or three houses, producing a rental of £73 15s. 9d., as the net amount last year. The total income, therefore, last year was £1,963 12s. 3d.

12088. In the second book which you produce, I find a capital item of £29 6s. 3d., which you have not accounted for?—That was £100 cash, which was lent by the late Mr. Gwyn to a family in the neighbourhood, called M. I. I. They, however, have always disputed the debt, and the principal or interest never was paid, during the thirty years I have been in office.

12089. Mr. O'SHEATH.—You take account of that as an asset?—It is kept on in the account, but it was a debt long before I became treasurer.

12100. I presume it is now barred by the Statute of Limitations?—I presume it will never be recovered. The late treasurer tried through the law agent of the trustees, but could not enforce payment of it. Indeed it might be struck out of the account, but I have no anxiety to do so.

12101. There is also an entry of a second sum of £2 12s. 3d.?—That is twenty years' interest on the sum before referred to, added from time to time, and that it was not carried on any further. However, as it is in the income and expenditure gone, it really makes no difference whatever.

12102. How is the expenditure on the institution managed?—The trustees give me £50 in hand to meet any advances I may require to make during the month. Mr. Shannon, the head master, has also £5 in hand to meet incidental expenses.

12103. In the list of property belonging to the institution, I find "Furniture held under the Society, £1,439 4s. 7d.; Farming implements, £17 10s. 4d.; Grand Canal shares, £999 10s. Have you a farm attached to the establishment?—We have a garden and some fields which we let, but no farm.

12104. What are those farming implements?—I suppose gardeners' tools. There are Grand Canal shares, valued at £999 10s., producing some £7 or £8 a year. That was an investment made, I think, by the late Mr. Gwyn himself. At one time it was valued at more, but was reduced afterwards. The dividend on the Canal shares was £7 12s. 7d. for the past year. The horse itself stands in the balance sheet at £2,599 12s. 6d.

12105. CHAIRMAN.—How is the house held?—It was held formerly under the See of Derry, and, since the Irish Church Act, under the Church Temporalities Commissioners.

12106. Is it rented in perpetuity?—We have purchased the property, paying for it in so many instalments. There are also some fields at Creggan, adjoining the institution, valued at £1,725 15s. 3d.

12087. Are those held in perpetuity?—Yes.

12108. Are those let to tenants?—They are let just for the year. I produce a statement of the expenditure and income of the institution for the past year.

12109. Mr. O'SHEATH.—There is a slight discrepancy between the returns before the last Commissioners, and your return, as to the money lent on mortgage—they returned a sum of £36,946 1—There was a sum of money lent to a gentleman named Harro, but it was paid off.

12110. What became of the principal paid off?—I believe it went to clear off a balance that was over-due in the bank.

12111. How did the debt to the bank arise?—Overdrawing for the disbursements of the time, or extra buildings—something of that sort. In 1863, which is the earliest date in the book I have with me, we owed the bank £264 13s. 10d., and the amount has fluctuated since then. We had in bank at the close of last year £321 2s. 6d.

12112. What we want to ascertain is, whether the £1,400 was expended for any purpose for which capital ought to be expended, or whether it was expended on the ordinary necessities or ordinary expenses of the place, which ought to have been met out of income?—Of course it was spent upon the institution, in the support of the boys.

12113. CHAIRMAN.—Is there any other source of income except those you have mentioned?—No.

12114. How are the lands let?—The trustees are restricted to giving leases for thirty years. The farms in the country are let upon lease, and also some of the houses.

12115. When were they last let?—There are several years of the leases unexpired. The town parks are let every year.

12116. Have any leases fallen in, since 1857?—Yes; there have been leases granted since then, Shannon's lease was granted since that date.

12117. How do you ascertain the value of the lands, when they fall out of lease—see they advertised in any way?—I do not recollect. They have not been renewed, but no doubt when they go out of lease now they will be renewed, before fresh leases are granted.

12118. You said they produce £73 12s. 3d. a year; in the return of the Royal Commission of 1857, it was stated that £88 odd a year was derived from land?—The lands may bring a larger price one season than another. A field may let for £10 this year, and perhaps next for not more than half that. If it were well manured ground it would let higher than if it required to be manured.

12119. The town parks are let by competition?—By competition annually.

12120. Do you know what the rate of interest on the sums paid off was—whether it was more than 4½ per cent?—I do not know what Mr. Harro paid, but his debt is a long time paid off. The Duke of Lismore paid us 5 per cent at one time, but he gave notice that he would pay off the loan, having had an offer of money at 4 per cent. We then divided the difference with him. It is a very old loan. Mr. Gwyn lent the money himself.

Oct. 1, 1878.

Mr. William J. Starchen.

Mr. WILLIAM JOHN STARCHEN, examined.

12121. CHAIRMAN.—You are the head-master of Gwyn's Institution, Lonsdownery?—Yes.

12122. You have an assistant-master and a monitor under you?—Yes.

12123. You superintend the education of the pupils?—Yes.

12124. I see by the printed rules that there is a matron. I suppose she superintends the domestic discipline?—She superintends the female servants, and attends to the food; she also looks after the cleanliness of the premises, and the keeping of the rooms in order.

12125. Do you give any instruction beyond literary instruction—is there any industrial training?—Not at present. At one time the boys were taught to make clothes and shoes, but that has been given up for some years.

12126. Are the boys taught how to crop a garden?—They assist to keep the grounds in order, and put in a crop.

12127. Have you any paid labourer, except the gardener?—One, and an apprentice.

12128. How much land is there in the garden?—The garden itself contains about one acre, but there are about eight acres within the walls, laid out in plantation.

12129. Do you give religious instruction?—Yes, we have prayers morning and evening, and the Scriptures are read every day.

12130. I suppose the Roman Catholics come in after prayers?—Yes, the Roman Catholics do not attend prayers.

12131. There is no religious instruction subsequent to the opening of the school?—None whatever.

12132. Except during religious instruction, the pupils are always together?—Always.

12133. They sleep in the same dormitories, and live together?—Yes. They dine together, and are together in the playground.

12134. The Roman Catholics are sent every Sunday to their own place of worship?—They are—in charge of one of the senior or oldest boys in the Institution.

12135. Do you find you can treat them under his charge?—As a rule, yes.

12136. Mr. O'SHEAQUEST.—Why was the tailoring and shoemaking given up?—I think it was found that the boys were so poorly strong enough to put the shoes properly together, and the materials were costing fully as much as the manufactured article would.

12137. Apart from religious services every Sunday, what arrangements are made for the religious instruction of the Roman Catholic children?—At one time the Roman Catholic boys attended at the chapel school every Saturday, and received religious instruction from a Roman Catholic teacher. When that teacher died, his successor did not care for taking the trouble, and, at present, they only receive instruction every Sunday morning, in some sort of Sunday school, in their own place of worship.

12138. But they do receive instruction?—They do. They attend every Sunday morning, before the time for mass.

12139. The Protestant children join in prayer in the Institution?—They do.

12140. Is there a regulation that the Catholic children shall also say their prayers?—The Catholic children also say their prayers. The oldest of the boys read prayers for them, in another apartment.

12141. With regard to the reading of the Scriptures, do the Catholic children take part in that?—All the children in the school take part in that.

12142. Is there any explanation of the Scriptures?—No. There is no explanation, but only the reading of them.

12143. Is that compulsory?—It is, under the will of the founder.

12144. The testator says, as part of his will, that all the children should be "frequently practised in reading the sublime, beautiful, and instructive passages of Scripture." Of course it is the Protestant version which is used?—That is the only version used in the Institution.

12145. The will proceeds:—"And such other books as may have a tendency to inform and improve the mind." Are there any other religious books used?—None, except the Catechisms of each denomination.

12146. Are the Catholic children taught the Catholic Catechism?—They are, under the able eyes of their own denomination.

12147. Have there been any complaints from the Catholic clergy, about the non-attendance of the boys, or about the neglect of the Catholic boys to bring the Catholic children to himself?—I have not received any complaints from the clergy. I have received complaints from some young men, who taught in the Sunday morning class, that some of the boys did not attend on some occasions, and they came and gave the boys' names, in order that the master might be brought before the trustees and rectified.

12148. And it was rectified?—It was.

Rev. Thomas Withers.

Rev. THOMAS WITHERS, examined.

12149. CHAIRMAN.—You are connected with the Magee College, Lonsdownery?—I am. I am Professor of Church History.

12150. We do not propose to hold any inquiry in reference to the Magee College, as it is outside the scope of our Commission. But if you have any statement to make on the general question of education, on behalf of the Presbyterian, or suggestions to offer as to the improvement of educational institutions, we will gladly hear you?—I wish to confirm the impression that Mr. Rodgers made, with regard to the disconnection of the funds of the Irish Society. Of course we have no right to complain, inasmuch as the Irish Society have a right to distribute their funds in any way they choose; but we feel that the interests of Presbyterians are not sufficiently consulted—at least I feel so. You will see, from the published accounts of the Irish Society, that £280 has been paid during the last year to Fyfe College, and that the Academical Institution, which represents the different other Protestant denominations of Derry, with the exception of Episcopalianism, receives only a very small amount, as compared with the large amount given to Fyfe College. The distinction made between the different denominations produces a bad impression on the community. Besides, Fyfe College is altogether an Episcopalian institution. They have lately appointed the Moderator of the General Assembly one of the governors, but as Moderator, so far, has ever attended. When I held that position, I was summoned to attend, but I refused to do so, because I regard the thing as an Episcopalian institution, from first to last. I shall state my reasons. With regard to the persons who were the governors, before the recent Act of Parliament regarding the trust, they were the leading Episcopalian dignitaries of the city and neighbourhood; but on Act last has passed lately appointing new governors, in which the Moderator of the General Assembly is named as one, but, as there are four other persons upon the Board, his voice would not go very far in opposition to the other four.

12151. Mr. O'SHEAQUEST.—Who are the other four?—One of them is the Bishop of Derry, another is the Mayor, for the time being, who is really an Episcopalian, but might be a Presbyterian, or a Roman Catholic; another, the Governor of the Irish Society, really an Episcopalian; and another, the Deputy Governor of the Irish Society, who might be any denomination, but is usually an Episcopalian. I should, however, mention that while the Moderator of the General Assembly has a seat on the Board of Governors, he has no right to take any part in the nomination of masters. That is voted altogether in the Bishop, and in the Governor of the Irish Society. This we look upon as showing that the Institution is an Episcopalian Institution.

12132. What then are the duties which the Board of Governors are left to perform?—That is what I do not know.

12133. Have they been pointed out?—I cannot say that, because I refused to attend, when I was Moderator of the General Assembly. I looked upon the whole thing as a sectarian institution, and I have here the prospectus of the College in the year 1878, which shows that the Institution is Episcopalian.

12134. I want first of all to dispose of the question of the governing body?—All I know with regard to it is, that while there is a governing body, that governing body, so far as such, has not the power of appointing the master.

12135. The tenth section of the Act of Parliament, which regulates this Institution, gives the power of nominating and appointing the head master to the Bishop and the Governor of the Irish Society. The eleventh section gives the power, to the same persons, of dismissing the head master, at their discretion. The governing body have the power of making rules, orders, regulations, and by laws for the regulating, governing, and managing of Foyle College, and also for the regulating the head master and other masters, and for the granting of salaries and allowances. There are provisions that the by-laws are to be approved of by the head master, and that the appointment or dismissal of the head master is also subject to the approval of the Lord Lieutenant. State your reasons for regarding Foyle College as an Episcopalian institution?—My first reason is that a number of the clergy of the diocese were governors of the college prior to the recent Act; that since the Act passed, the appointment of the master is vested in the Bishop of Derry and the Governor of the Irish Society, with regard to the remuneration of the institution, I read from a prospectus of the College published in 1878:—

"First, On a fortnight's notice on the Articles of Bala in the Chairman's Evidence is delivered in the school-room, to the boys by one or other of the parish clergymen."

"Secondly, The boys all join in the responses."

Of course I, as a Presbyterian, object to allow anyone ever when I have control to join in the responses connected with the worship of another denomination. In the same prospectus I find:—

"Thirdly, On Sunday mornings the boys attend Divine Service in the Cathedral, or sometimes in a neighbouring country Church."

I think these things prove that the Institution is Episcopalian. I have no objection to the institution as such; but I state it as my belief, that this institution is somewhat favoured by the Irish Society, simply because it is Episcopalian.

12136. Do you think that belief is common in Derry?—It is in my belief, and I have heard it expressed by others.

12137. CHAIRMAN.—Is attendance at divine worship in the Cathedral compulsory on all the pupils?—I do not know, beyond what I find in this prospectus, that on Sunday mornings the boys attend the Cathedral. With regard to the Academical Institution, while the majority of the governors and those in attendance are Presbyterians, yet it was got up by all the Protestant denominations in Derry, and it is not more Presbyterian in its constitution than it is Independent and Methodist. The majority of the subscribers were living in the town, and it was got up in consequence of us being that Foyle College was not adapted to give instruction on the subjects we wanted it given on, and if Foyle College could have been made available for all denominations, the Academical Institution would not have been got up. There was no reform in the management of Foyle College until the Academical Institution was built, and a large amount of money expended on it, and then there were some small reforms introduced, when too late to benefit us.

12138. The returns sent to us show that the actual numbers of the various denominations at Foyle College are:—Baptists—forty-one Church of Ireland, five Dissenters. Day boys—twenty-five Church of Ireland, sixteen Dissenters, and four Roman Catholics. Free boys—thirteen Church of Ireland, and one Dissenter. Do you see any objection to Presbyterians and Church of Ireland boys residing as boarders in one institution, provided they attend their respective places of worship, and are not required to study the catechism of another denomination?—Personally I would not have any objection to that, although it is a matter I have not given much consideration to, but of course I would prefer to have Presbyterians under Presbyterianism. I would not, however, entertain any very strong objection, if there was no interference with religious opinions or views.

12139. Your objection to Foyle College is that the Presbyterians have not sufficient voice in the management of the institution?—I think they have no voice worth naming. I should also mention that the Moderator, although nominally a member of the Board, is an officer who goes out of office at the end of a year, and consequently he would be resigning office before he could obtain any acquaintance with the working of the Institution. So really he has no voice at all, though nominally on the Board.

12140. Have you any suggestion to make in reference to the primary schools?—I have nothing whatever to say with regard to the primary schools.

12141. Mr. O'BRIEN.—Do you wish to add anything further?—Foyle College was not in very much favour with the Irish Society until lately, and they only gave it a small endowment. It was looked upon as being a Dissenter school. It was built principally by the contributions of the Bishop and the Episcopal clergy, and it is only of late years that it has been taken so completely into the hands of the Irish Society. First it was a private institution, built by a private member of the Irish Society in London. Then it was half started for 100 years, the Irish Society giving only a trifling endowment to it. Afterwards, when the Bishop and clergy of the diocese came forward and built a house, the Society contributed to it, but of late years they have increased the endowment very much. It seems to have risen much in favour with the Society, since the other denominations of Protestants have provided accommodation for themselves elsewhere, and partially left it to the Episcopians.

12142. CHAIRMAN.—The part of the endowment is received as a Dissenter school has been lost by the passing of the Church Act?—I suppose so.

12143. Mr. O'BRIEN.—I believe the Moderator of the General Assembly is not necessarily a resident in Londonderry?—He is very rarely so.

12144. Take, for instance, the Rev. Dr. Wilson, a fellow citizen of mine in Enniskill?—It would be very hard for him to come down and exercise much control in Foyle College?—There have been only three Moderators of the General Assembly resident in Derry, since the Assembly was constituted in 1840.

12145. That increases the inefficiency of the Moderator, as a member of the Board?—It does.

OF 1, 1878.

Rev. Thomas Withers.

body, of which I complain very much. Some time ago I wrote and published on this subject:—

"For a considerable period after the charity school was started, it seems to have been under the management of the relatives of the founder, but about the year 1738 a privilegium was passed by the Irish Parliament, to regulate the charity, entitled 11 George II, chap. ii, by which the same, heretofore to be devoted to the support of the charity, was made a fixed rent, on the lands of Desmoulins, of 1,773, Irish, per annum, and this was made payable for ever to the Archbishop of Armagh, for the support of the school. The result of this truly Irish legislation was two-fold:—1. The income of the charity instead of growing as it would have done, with the increased value of the estate, could neither be increased nor diminished; and consequently, from the decreasing value of money, and the increasing value of the necessities of life, a charity, which during the first fifty years of the trust, was able to clothe, board, educate, and apprentice twenty-four boys, was able, in 1812, to educate only nine boys, and in 1850 only ten."

"2. A complete change in the management resulted from the Act of Parliament. The original will expressly provided that, 'if any of the masters is found delinquent, he is to be ousted, and another written for to the Presbytery or Synod of Ulster.'"

Instead of that, the Act of Parliament vests the thing in the Archbishop of Armagh. Then the Salutis Company, in 1835, came in, and took the establishment into their hands.

12167. It did not thrive under the Archbishop of Armagh—Not at all. So far as I could see, the practice was, in 1835, for the teachers of the school to be appointed by the rectar of the parish, with the sanction of the Pinnate.

"In that year there were in the school two children, sons of whom were the children of Presbyterian parents, and all of whom were brought up as members of the established Church. . . . Since 1835 a very gratifying change has taken place. The Wanslipful Salutis of London, who are the owners of the town of Maghauish, have secured the charity house in an elegant and tasteful form, they have appointed a competent teacher, supplemented his salary, and are doing all we believe that can be done to make the school useful in the neighbourhood."

Since those words were written, ten or twelve years ago, I know nothing of its working. What I remember of it is that £3,000, left by a Presbyterian elder, in charge of a Presbyterian body, should have been handed over to the Archbishop of Armagh. Then was the point I wished to bring especially under your attention.

12168. That can only be remedied by an Act of Parliament?—It is important to have it brought under public notice.

Rev. Arthur G. C. Plunket.

Honorable ARTHUR G. C. PLUNKET, examined.

12169. CHAIRMAN.—You are the resident agent, in Londonderry, for the Irish Society?—I am.

12170. You desire to make a statement in reference to Mr. Withers's evidence?—As treasurer of Foyle College, I wish to state that the prospectus quoted from, by Professor Withers, was issued by the head master, without the sanction or authority of the governing body. The head master's attention was called to this, and he was directed by the Governing Body not to issue any more of the prospectuses, without an alteration. A fly leaf was then added, referring to the paragraph mentioned by Mr. Withers, and explaining, that, as far as the attendance at church or otherwise of the pupils of the school was concerned, the school was entirely unsectarian. All boys at the school are to go to what churches their parents please. The by-laws provide the religious instruction, but the passages in the prospectus were felt by the governing body to be open to misrepresentation. The by-laws provide for the totally unsectarian nature of the school, and I believe there are in it, at the present time, Presbyterians, Episcopalians, and Roman Catholics.

12171. Mr. O'SHEAHERIDY.—Is the present Governor of the Irish Society a member of the Church of England?—I really do not know. He and the bishop are practically the only two permanent members of the Board, for although the Governor of the Irish Society is subject to annual election by the Court of the Common Council, he is practically a member for life. The Deputy Governor holds office only for one year.

12172. Is he generally re-elected?—No. There are no members of the Society, except the Governor, on the Court for more than two years, and it is only in the second year of being on the Court a man can be elected Deputy-Governor.

12173. Does the Deputy Governor come here on the visitations?—Always.

12174. Where does he attend church service?—All the members of the Irish Society, at least during my time, attend the Cathedral.

12175. That shows they are Episcopalians?—I presume the majority of them would be, but to my own knowledge there have been a considerable number of those who are not Episcopalians on the Court and who. I imagine, however, that the majority are Episcopalians.

Rev. Andrew C. Murphy.

Rev. ANDREW CHARLES MURPHY, examined.

12176. CHAIRMAN.—You are the Minister of the first Presbyterian congregation in Derry?—I am.

12177. Can you give this Commission any information?—The question as to how far there may be religious restrictions to boys not belonging to the Episcopal Church attending Foyle College, is now rather a minor question; because, as Mr. Plunket says, the Governing body of the school have taken pains to enact certain rules and regulations that Mr. Withers has brought before your notice, and so far a protection is given to Presbyterians and others, that would not have existed had those regulations been allowed to stand. But, granting all that, it is undeniable that Foyle College is, in the main, an Episcopal institution, as Mr. Withers has pointed out. The appointment of the head master is vested in the Bishop of Derry and the Governor of the Irish Society, and the Bishop of Derry is the representative of the Episcopal Church here, and the Governor of the Irish Society is likely to be also a member of the Church of England. Therefore, Foyle College is practically an Episcopal school, and I am prepared to admit that, practically, the Academical Institution is a Presbyterian school, although I believe it can be sustained satisfactorily, that it is not so distinctly Presbyterian as Foyle College is distinctly Episcopalian. Now, what the Presbyterian people feel is this, that seeing that the Academical Institution was created at very considerable expense about ten years ago, after every effort to bring Foyle College into harmony with the requirements of this community had been made in vain, when the Academical Institution arose, and took a very important place in Derry, its masters have not been recognized in the same way as the head master of Foyle College, in reference to the endowments derived from the Irish Society. In all personal interviews we have had with the Irish Society, as represented by their deputation here, or with the agent of the Irish Society now present, we have been treated with uniform courtesy. Nevertheless, there is a general and widespread feeling among the Presbyterians, that the masters of the Academical Institution receive a very small recognition, in the shape of endowment, from the Society, in comparison with the very large recognition which has been accorded to the head master of Foyle College.

12178. As a matter of fact, the great majority of the boys at the Academical Institution are Presbyterians?—Yes.

12179. There were a good many more Presbyterians when the school was founded?—Yes, simply owing to the fact that there was no reason why the members of the Episcopal Church should take measures to have another school erected, because they had what they wanted in Foyle College. It must be admitted that Foyle College has been greatly changed in its constitution, with a view to meet the requirements in Derry, but the changes were not made until a school, meeting the requirements of the citizens of Derry, had been erected.

12180. Owing to recent changes, the objections are placed almost to the minimum?—Not quite to a minimum, because, even though you were to discount the consideration alluded to, as to the communication of religious instruction, it is still true that the Academical Institution is, on the whole, I believe, less sectarian than Foyle College, inasmuch as members of the Episcopal Church might be upon the Board. There is nothing to prevent members of the Episcopal Church, or any other Church in Ireland, being representatives on the Governing Board, and having a full voice in the election of the masters.

12181. It was formerly complained of that there was not more attention given in Foyle College to commercial education?—Yes. Apart from the religious instruction, the education in Foyle College was directed much more, as I understand, to preparing pupils for the University of Dublin, than for the various business occupations of Derry. That I have heard repeatedly, and I give it on the authority of what I have heard. I have been here myself only for ten years.

12182. The change as to commercial education benefits the Presbyterians as much as the Episcopalians?—Yes, I should say the students of Derry are unquestionably benefited by the change.

Rev. Andrew
C. Murphy.

Rev. JAMES MAXWELL RODGERS, M.A., recalled.

Rev. James M.
Rodgers, M.A.

12183. CHAIRMAN.—You wish to add something to your evidence?—There cannot be the least doubt that a very strong feeling of hostility prevailed, not in Derry only, but all over the country, with regard to the management of Foyle College, before the change you have heard of was made. An official in the rent office of one of the London companies was presented by his own company with the right of sending his child here as a boarder. He was a Presbyterian, and a member of my congregation, when I lived in the manse, and he wrote, saying he wished his son to attend the Presbyterian congregation here, of which I am the minister, but the teacher wrote to my wife, saying the boy was a boarder (he the teacher) was in the position of the boy's father, and that no boy in his school should be allowed to attend any religious service, except those in which he himself engaged. Day by day the friction was getting greater and greater, and the Presbyterians more in a very strong body, when the great crash at length came.

12184. That has been all mentioned?—Yes, but after the Presbyterians and others had gone to the expense of starting a new building, which cannot be disposed of, nor can their money be recovered to them. The teacher I allude to was not, of course, the present head master.

12185. Mr. O'SWALDOWNEY.—But the present gentleman appears to have thought that the old system still prevailed?—The spirit is very much the same.

12186. Dr. Hume appears, from the regulations he issued, to have thought that the old rule prevailed still, until he was made aware of the more liberal spirit actuating the regulations of the Board?—Yes, and I think that prospectus was read at a meeting of the visitors, when that spirit did exist.

Mr. MAURICE CHARLES HUME, LL.D., recalled.

Mr. Maurice C.
Hume, LL.D.

12187. CHAIRMAN.—You wish to make a statement, in reference to the attendance of the Foyle College pupils at public worship?—Yes. I wish to say that I, as you, as bringing out my prospectus, by accident those slipped into it the statement that my boys attended "either the Catholic or a country church on Sundays." I meant my boarders. The day boys go where they like themselves. I stated that, being constrained to have it in my own prospectus of the old school in Monaghan. The moment my attention was drawn to it, I saw it was a mistake, and for the first and last time the Governing body expressed their disapprobation with me for having made the mistake, and said no more of the prospectus should be issued till it was corrected. I have a seat in the Presbyterian meeting-house, at the present moment, for some of my boarders, who are Presbyterians. I am happy to say the number of Presbyterians attending my school is largely increased, and I expect in a short time they will be fully as many as the others in Foyle College.

12188. Under whose charge do they go?—One of my masters, who is a German, I am not quite sure whether he is a Presbyterian or not. One of my other masters is rather inclined that way. There is always one willing to go.

12189. I find in your present regulations?—

"The boarders on Sundays to be permitted to attend such places of religious worship as their parents or guardians may so willing direct?"

—Yes, and so they do.

12190. The regulations also contain this passage?—

"The school to be opened by such form of prayer as may from time to time be approved by the governing body—parents and guardians shall have a right to notify in writing as to the attendance or other use of the boys."

You have some Roman Catholic boys—have you not?

—Yes, but only day boys. They come in after prayers. Our form of prayers was approved of, and I never got a letter in my life from any parent or guardian objecting to it. In fact the school is then chiefly non-sectarian.

Mr. EDWARD A. HAMILTON, examined.

Mr. Edward
A. Hamilton.

12191. CHAIRMAN.—What office do you hold in connection with the Robertson Endowment?—I was merely employed to prepare the accounts of Robertson's Endowment, at the end of last year.

12192. With what view were you appointed accountant?—When Dean Gwynne took over the management of the charity, he was not quite satisfied with the form in which the accounts had been prepared up to that time. He wished them stated in a different form, and asked me to go through them for some years back.

He gave me the heads of the information he desired the accounts should show, and asked me to prepare them in that form.

12193. You are accustomed to drawing up accounts?

—Yes, that is my business.

12194. Have you the accounts here?—Yes. I should mention that the accounts were formerly closed up to the first May and first November, and it was changed from those dates to the first February and first August. When I commenced the account, I made up one

Oct. 1, 1895.
Mr. Edmund
A. Biddison.

quarter, in order to bring it up to the date to which it had been changed; and the statement for last year, which I prepared, is in the new form. Dean Gwynn wished the statement should show, to the credit of each school, the full amount of the endowment for the year, the payments which were made against that, and the balance due to the school; and that there should also be a general account, showing on one side the entire income of the charity, and open the other the entire income to all the schools; and appended to that a balance sheet, showing the balance in bank and the amount due to or from the schools.

12185. You drew up the accounts in what you consider the most regular way?—Yes, as far as to exhibit the information Dean Gwynn desired, which had not been given up to that time. I presume the statement for last year complete (vide Appendix No. 17).

12186. Of what does the endowment now consist?—£14,584 12s., which is invested in now 5 per cents.

12187. What income does that produce?—The income last year from dividends was £437 9s. 7d., and from interest upon the bank account £127 7s. 3d., making the total revenue for the year £449 15s. 9d.

12188. How is the expenditure of that money arranged?—The expenditure is an endowment of £13 16s. 10½d. British, to each of thirty-one schools, amounting to £429 3s. 1½d. There are also charges for inspection, and expenses of the trustees, amounting to £13 12s. 9d., making the total outgoings £442 15s. 10½d.

12189. In point of fact, almost the entire of the fund is divided amongst these schools?—Yes.

12190. How is the money applied?—The money is applied in paying to the school-master of each school £11 s. 6d. per annum, and £2 15s. 6d. for books and requisites.

12191. Mr. O'SHEAUGHNESSY.—You have looked through the accounts, as kept by your predecessors?—Yes.

12192. Did they point to any funds of which you found it important to find the real application, or did you find any difference as to the application of the funds before your own time?—I did not look through the accounts of the charity, as regards its receipts and expenditure in past years. I looked through the accounts of each particular school, from the year 1839, in order to ascertain the balance due to or by the school, at the date that these accounts commence.

12193. Did it appear to you, in investigating the accounts since 1839, that any school had been wronged?—The object of my inquiry was to see that each school got credit for its £13 16s. 10½d. in each year, and to ascertain, as far as the books show, that the expenditure charged was for that particular school.

12194. Your investigation showed that the money had been properly applied?—It did.

12195. You then prepared a new system of accounts, under which they will be more clear and business-like in future?—Yes.

12196. You know nothing about the management of the schools?—Not much, except what I gathered in going through the accounts.

12197. Does the £13 7s. 3d. interest, which you mentioned, arise from any investment?—No. There is a balance in bank to the credit of the trustees, varying from £560 to £600, and the bank allows interest on that balance.

12198. Do you regard that balance as a permanent balance likely to increase, or are there occasional calls that would swing it?—Strictly speaking, of the balance of £560, which is at present to the credit of the trustees, only a sum of £395 is surplus revenue, and the remaining £165 is due to the schools.

12199. Do you think it would be right to invest the amount which represents surplus revenue?—The trustees, I suppose, would require a little margin.

12200. Is that sum of £390 likely to be reduced?—Yes, because there is a sum of £286 due to schools upon the endowment, which may be called for at any moment.

12201. How did these arrears arise?—By the schools being vacant.

12202. Surely the new schoolmasters will not have any claim to the back pay, for the period for which they did not serve?—Certainly not; but then the amount remains to the credit of the school, and may be applied to repairs and books.

12203. There is a separate amount for books?—Yes, but there is no balance remaining, unless the fund from vacancies, which may be applied for that purpose.

12204. Do you think that, pending its application for that purpose, it should be invested in the Government funds, where it would be always readily available, or is it as profitable to the institution as it is?—There would not be very much difference.

12205. The custom is, where money accumulates and forms new principal, not to invest it in bank?—We would not get much more than 3 per cent. by investing it in Government stock, and where you get £12 7s. 3d. for one year, on a running account with a credit balance of £420, there will not be much difference.

12206. CHAIRMAN.—The accounts of each school are kept separate?—Entirely separate, as personal accounts.

Rev. Richard
Biddison, &c.

Rev. RICHARD BARRINGTON, A.B., examined.

12207. CHAIRMAN.—What connection have you with the Protestant schools?—I am the diocesan secretary, and have been asked to attend here by Dean Gwynn, who was not able to be present himself today.

12208. Mr. O'SHEAUGHNESSY.—The testator contemplated that a certain sum should be applied annually to purchasing books, "as well of entertainment as of instruction," and that those in the parish, not of the established religion, were to share in the endowment. What is the class of schools in these parishes?—They are all of the lower class of schools, and are attended by all denominations. They are inspected every year by an inspector, appointed by the Board for that purpose.

12209. In cases where they have a Church of Ireland school, and a Roman Catholic school in the same parish, what is done?—Those grants were given at a time when they were not there, and they have not been changed or altered in any way.

12210. The grants are given to the Church schools?—They were originally given to them, and they have not been altered.

12211. Then, where there is a Roman Catholic school in a parish, the Church school of which takes under this endowment, the Roman Catholic school gets nothing?—No; the money was given to a school in each parish. There was no National Board at that time; the majority of the schools have now been put under the National Board, and the grant has continued attached to the same school ever since.

12212. It is provided by the will of the testator that—"Such as in said parishes may not be of the established religion are, notwithstanding, to share equally in the legacy."

Is that direction attended to?—If any school began now, the Committee would consider themselves bound to act upon that part of the will.

12213. But they do not consider that part of the will applies when a Catholic school is established, side by side with an Irish Church school?—The case has never arisen.

12214. Such cases have arisen; but the legacy is not applied at present to any such Roman Catholic school?—I do not know of any.

12215. Did you ever hear that the question had been raised by the managers of Roman Catholic schools?—Never. I know of no case in which an old school has been given up.

12225. CHAIRMAN.—The report of the Royal Commission of 1857 states the rules of the endowment to be:—“(b) of English children to be instructed in Church education, and in a course of religious instruction, children of other denominations not required to receive religious instruction.”

Is that rule still carried out?—It is.

12227. Have you many Roman Catholics attending those schools?—Some.

12228. Certain variations in the payments to schoolmasters appear by the accounts now produced—in one case only £9 11s. 6d., and in another £13 16s. 7d.—why was that?—I could not tell you the reason of that.

12229. Where we find no payment made, is it because there is a vacancy?—I think Immanuel school can have no payments made to it, until a debt due by it is liquidated.

12230. What debt?—£125 for costs for overhauling, which we had to pay.

12231. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—Have you consulted your solicitor as to whether it is right to stop the payment to the master, in order to meet those costs?—Counsel's opinion was taken on all that long ago.

12232. Did he approve of this course?—Yes.

12233. Your Board were involved in litigation about an overhauling schoolmaster?—Yes.

12234. Have you since made provision to make your schoolmasters sign an agreement?—They have all to sign an agreement, which was drawn up by counsel.

12235. CHAIRMAN.—Some of the Robertson schools are under the National Board. How are the others supported, or how do you test their efficiency?—All the Robertson schools, whether under the National Board or not, are supported, for the purposes of this trust, by a superintendent appointed specially by our own Board.

12236. Who is he?—Sometimes they appoint one person, and sometimes another. It altogether depends on circumstances.

12237. If any one of those schoolmasters is not an efficient man, is there any power to withhold his grant?—Yes. There was such a case the other day. The practice is, that if the clergyman of the parish, or superintendent of the school, makes a complaint against the schoolmaster, the Board consider that he is not deserving of the grant.

12238. I find in the report of the Commission of 1857 this passage:—

“Dr. Ferguson, our Assistant Commissioner, who inspected these schools, and has reported on their general management, observes that, ‘when the entire support of the master is thrown upon the endowment by the rector of the parish, the bishop of Colmar Robertson becomes an evil rather than a benefit, as, by superseding all other support, it introduces a starving, useless school.’”

And also this further passage:—

“Another source of the unsatisfactory condition of these schools is the inefficient system of inspection to which they are subject.”

Is the Inspector appointed by your Board a professional inspector under any Board of Education, or is he merely a clergyman belonging to some neighbouring parish?—That is a question I could not answer.

12239. The school-houses were pronounced, in 1857, to be in a bad state of repair—how are they kept up now?—They are looked after, from time to time, by the superintendents, and examined by the Committee, as to whether they are in good order. If National schools, they are always kept in very good order. I was through that part of the country a fortnight ago, and they were all in capital order.

12240. I suppose they receive some local aid from the owners of property, and that the fees of the children supplement the grants?—The fees from the children in all these schools are very small. We have to attract the children, instead of trying to make them pay.

12241. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—Are not the great majority of the Robertson schools now under the National Board?—I think they are.

Mr. FRANCIS O'SHEA, examined.

12242. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—You are a resident in Derry?—Yes; I have resided here for more than thirty-two years.

12243. You are a Roman Catholic?—Yes.

12244. Are you well acquainted with the wishes of your Catholic fellow-citizens, and of the Catholic clergy, as the subject of education?—I am very well acquainted with them.

12245. What is the population of Londonderry?—Somewhere about 30,000.

12246. What proportion of that number is Catholic?—I think fully half the population is Catholic.

12247. The great body of the Catholics are of the humble class?—Certainly.

12248. Are they gradually extending among the commercial and professional classes?—They are.

12249. Does a necessity exist, as far as they are concerned, for education above primary education?—Most decidedly, it is an absolute necessity now.

12250. It is increasing?—Certainly, and I may mention, in confirmation of my view, that Dr. Kelly, the Bishop of the diocese, purchased, three or four years ago, the Castro grounds for £2,000, and he has built there a College not yet opened, which will cost about £10,000 when finished.

12251. Is that to be for the benefit of all Catholics?—Yes.

12252. It is not a theological College?—A portion of it may be so, but it is not so exclusively; because those proceeding to the legal and the medical professions, and also the sons of merchants, can get a classical education there, if they require it.

12253. Will that College be a middle class College for Derry, and the surrounding country?—Certainly, that is the intention.

12254. Has that College any endowment, except the site and buildings?—No.

12255. Has there been any application made by that College to the Irish Society?—Not to my knowledge.

12256. What has been the practice of the Irish Society, with regard to the denominational Catholic schools that do exist?—I am not sharing to the National schools, but to the nunn's schools, and others like them?—I think the nunn's schools do not receive anything from the Irish Society, except the schools conducted by the Sisters of Mercy, and which are in connexion with the National Board, and to these the Irish Society contributes £10 annually. The number on the roll is 576, the average attendance being about 450. There are five or six of the Christian Brothers here, and they do not, to my knowledge, receive anything from the Irish Society. We have an annual collection for their support, and they are supported exclusively by our own collections.

12257. Is there any feeling, among Catholics, as to the exclusion of the Catholic schools from the beneficence of the Irish Society?—Most decidedly.

12258. Is there a wish that those schools should participate?—Most certainly, we think that is one of the greatest grievances we labour under. In adding to the Irish Society, I do not wish to speak affirmatively of the members, or its agent, but the conditions of their charter are, I believe, too stringent; because, as I understand, those conditions oblige them not to give anything towards Catholic purposes.

12259. Then you do not attribute any blame to them?—Not personally. I think they would be favourably disposed, if they had the power. I certainly have a high opinion of Mr. Pinchet, their representative here. This subject has been frequently spoken of by Catholics.

12260. Is the suggestion, that the charter of the Irish Society should be modified, so as to enlarge their power. Most decidedly. It would be not natural to do so. The times are changed, and the people change with them. What was considered necessary in 1690, when the charter was granted, ought not to apply or be necessary, I believe, in 1878.

12261. The Catholics of Londonderry feel it a grievance that there should exist a Society, administering Irish property, which is not permitted to aid their institutions in the same way as they and those of other denominations. That is very generally looked upon as a grievance.

12262. As to the college built by the bishop and others, I presume when that is opened it will be quite as free to Protestant young men as the Academical Institution. I should think so.

12263. You can say, on the part of your fellow Catholics, that there would be no objection to that course, the Catholic character of the College being of course preserved. Not the slightest. Others could go in, and receive the same education as the Catholics.

12264. Do you desire to say anything as to the distribution of educational endowments in the province?—The complaint is general, that the endowments given by the Irish Society are not in proportion to the Catholic population. I find that, in the year 1877, St. Columbkille's male and female National schools, which are substantially Catholic, got £20, whereas the Presbyterian First Congregation male school got £26, and the female school £20.

12265. Is that the principal primary Catholic school in Derry?—It is the only Catholic National school in Derry, to my knowledge.

12266. Can you say whether the number of Catholic children attending those poor schools is equal to or larger than the number of Protestant children attending poor schools in Derry?—I think the Catholics would be considerably in excess of the Protestants.

12267. Therefore they would be more in want of the endowment?—Yes.

12268. And while that school gets only £20, the Presbyterian male school gets £30, and the female school £20, and the dean and vicar's Sunday school, a denominational school, gets £16?—Yes.

12269. Is the Churchyard school a denominational school?—Yes.

12270. It is not denied that a number of Protestant schools get aid?—That is so.

12271. Is the £20 you have mentioned the only sum given to a Catholic school?—That is all, except the nuns' school, St. Eugene's.

12272. Then, as I understand, the only distinctly Catholic National schools—I mean National schools under Catholic management—that receive grants are St. Columbkille's, and St. Eugene's, the nuns' schools?—Yes.

12273. CHAIRMAN.—I am informed by the Hon. Mr. Plunket that the Waterside school, under Dr. Devlin, also gets aid from the Irish Society?—Yes; but that is in a different parish.

12274. Mr. O'REAGHASTY.—You have a number of young men preparing to become Catholic clergymen, from among the population of the diocese?—Certainly.

12275. And I believe you speak the feelings both of the laity and clergy, in pointing out their strong wish, that they should have abundant intermediate education?—Most decidedly.

12276. Do you find it very hard to give it to them under the present system?—Yes, for instance, the tax upon us for building the college involved an outlay of £10,000.

12277. Do you believe that it would contribute very much to the elevation and improvement of the tabernacles of Derry and the neighbourhood, that they should have a share in the advantages enjoyed by schools of other denominations?—Certainly.

12278. And that the absence of those advantages is a drawback and weight against them in the race?—Certainly.

12279. Do you wish to say anything of the feeling about the other endowments in this province of a denominational character?—In the North of Ireland there are several Royal Schools, about which the feeling is so strong that, generally speaking, the Catholics would not send their children to them. Catholics on sides, of course, that they labour under a grievance as the matter of education, from the want of endowments. For instance, the Christian Brothers are obliged to have an annual collection, which amounts to about £250 a year to support them, and that is a severe tax on us.

12280. The great body of the Catholics are not rich?—No. They are generally of the working classes.

12281. CHAIRMAN.—I find that the Irish Society give £50 for prizes to the Derry Model school?—As to that I am not a mixed school, being under central management?—It is open to all, but it is not availed of by the Catholics.

12282. I suppose it is largely availed of by the Episcopians and Presbyterians?—Nearly altogether.

12283. Is the new school, which you have mentioned, erected on a fireproof site?—Yes. I think I might mention that the principal money subscribed, both for the purchase of the ground, and the erection of the building, was given by the bishop and his clergy.

12284. Mr. O'SHANNON.—Is the building roofed in yet?—Yes, it is now ready for finishing, and will be opened either the end of this year, or the beginning of next.

12285. Is it intended for a boarding school, as well as a day school?—Yes.

12286. CHAIRMAN.—Who are to be the teachers?—There is one who was a professor in Maynooth, Dr. O'Brien.

12287. Mr. O'REAGHASTY.—He is a noble priest?—Yes, and there is another who was in Fern, or Roma.

12288. Is there any intermediate Catholic school in operation, in Derry, at present?—No.

12289. Where do the Derry Catholic young men, about to enter professions, or the higher branches of commerce, get their education?—I am glad you put that question. In place of remaining in Derry, they prefer have been obliged to send them to Cork, Annapolis, and other places.

12290. And this is, of course, a great source of expense?—Certainly, and they would not be sent to those places if this college were open.

12291. Do you think the parents in Derry would, as a rule, prefer the day school to the boarding school system?—I think so decidedly. There have been a few cases, but they are few indeed, of Catholics young men going to Royal College; and there were some, but I think, only one, going to the Academical Institution.

12292. We were told that the Catholics provided for themselves, by sending their children to boarding schools. Do they look upon the necessity of sending them to boarding schools as a hardship?—Certainly.

12293. CHAIRMAN.—What accommodation has been provided in the new college?—It is a very large establishment, suited for twenty or thirty hundred, or perhaps more.

12294. What number of day scholars will it be able to take in?—I could not say.

12295. Do you know how many masters or professors there will be?—The number of professors will depend on the number of pupils. I think they will commence with two, or perhaps three. Dr. O'Brien will be the President.

12296. It will be an intermediate school?—Yes. The pupils will receive a commercial and classical education, and those intended for the legal, medical, or clerical professions will, of course, study all the sciences. I think that the Irish Society should be a body more liberal, and have the conditions of their charter altered, so as to give them an opportunity of being put to it. There are some people in Derry who would take all themselves, and give nothing to others.

Mr. FRIDELL EVIDENCE, recalled.

Oct 2, 1879.

Mr. Peckell
EVIDENCE

12297. CHAIRMAN.—Can you now give an explanation as to the difference between the present capital of Guy's Institution, and the amount returned in 1877?—I think I can throw some light on it. I produce our old cash book, which shows that on the 3rd February, 1858, we were repaid £1,204 6s by the representatives of General Harle, being money that was lent on two promissory notes, passed by representatives of General Harle, to the late Mr. John Guy. There was also a payment for interest due, amounting to £45 4s 4d.

12298. What was done with that money?—It went towards paying off a sum of £1,421 1s, which was the balance owing to the bank on the 1st January, 1858.

12299. How did the balance stand on the 1st January, 1857?—The balance due to the bank at that date was £265 10s. 3d.

12300. How was the debt to the bank increased, in the year 1857, from £265 to £1,421?—On the 1st April in that year a sum of £500, which was due to Mr. Hay by the trustees, was repaid, and there were also during the year several sums expended upon improving the grounds, amounting to about £40.

12301. What was the balance due to the bank on the 1st January, 1856?—£1,108 17s. 1d., which was repaid on the 9th January by the borrowing £100 from Mrs. Hay, the repayment of which, in the following year, I have just mentioned. Our income, therefore, in 1856, fell short of our expenses by about £25.

12302. How do you account for that expenditure of a sum of money?—There were considerable sums expended during that year upon improvements of the grounds and gardens. Labour at that time was exceedingly high, and a great deal of it was required. Upwards of £100 was spent upon that item alone. There was also a sum of £24 expended on the sweepings, and £15 upon fuel, as well as £26 for the costs of new leases from the Irish Society, and our own account was paid a bill of costs of upwards of £20, which had been accruing for some time.

12303. What was the state of your account at the commencement of the year 1855?—On the 1st January, 1855, our debt to the bank was £1,038 8s 11d, and for some years prior to that our income had been insufficient to meet the heavy expenditure caused by the extra number of boys, which, in those days, was maintained in the Institution. The book that I have here does not go back further than the 31st March, 1849, on which date the balance we owed the bank was £467 11s. 4d.

12304. The statement to the Commission of 1857 was that the Institution derived a rent of £88 7s 4d, free landed property. How do you account for the present reduced amount, which you have stated?—One tenant, which was at that time let from year to year at £50, was shortly afterwards surrendered, and we found it was impossible to procure the same rent for it at which it had been formerly let. It was, a few years since, let on lease for thirty-one years at £40 a year, but the tenant is bound under covenant to keep the premises in proper repair, which had not been done in the time of the late occupier.

12305. How are the accounts audited?—They are audited at the close of each year by two trustees who are appointed at the general meeting. Our financial year was closed on the 31st March. The auditors last year were Mr. Robert Alexander, and Mr. William D. Porter, who signed this certificate:—

"We, the undersigned trustees, having examined the foregoing account for the year ending 31st March, 1879, by comparing the entries with the monthly Receipt and Expenditure Book, previously checked from time to time by the Committee, hereby certify the same to be correct."

12306. You do not employ any public accountant to audit your accounts?—No. The trustees, with whom that matter rests, have never adopted such a plan.

[The Commissioners adjourned.]

THIRTIETH DAY--WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 2, 1879--11 o'CLOCK, A.M.

Oct 2, 1879

In the Grand Jury Room, Chancery.

Present.—LORD JUSTICE FRYER, LORD RANDOLPH CHURCHILL, M.P.; and ANDREW SEARLE HART, Esq., M.D.; with G. W. BRADSHAW, Esq., Assistant Secretary.

Rev. ABRAHAM S. HUTCHINGS, M.A., examined.

Rev. Abraham
S. Hutchings
M.A.

12307. LORD JUSTICE FRYER.—I believe you are now the principal of the Chancery Endowed School?—Yes.

12308. Is that the name by which it is known?—Yes.

12309. How long have you held the appointment?—Since March, 1874.

12310. Who was your predecessor?—The Rev. Thomas Kettlewell.

12311. How long had he been head master of the school?—He was appointed, I think, in 1842.

12312. At the time you became the master of the school, were there any boarders?—No.

12313. Had there been any for some time previously?—No, not since 1847 or 1848.

12314. How many day boys did you find in the school, when you became master?—There had been none for a year previous to my appointment. The master had been for a long time incapacitated by illness, and unable to attend to the school, which had been closed for nearly a year.

12315. With how many boys did you begin?—I think three or four at first.

12316. How soon did your numbers come to be anything considerable?—In about nine months, I think, they gradually rose to something over thirty, and remained at that.

12317. I observe that, in the return which you sent to the Commission, you stated you had thirteen boarders and twenty day scholars—is that the number at present?—I have not quite so many boarders now. My present numbers are—nine boarders and twenty-five day scholars—thirty-four altogether.

12318. How the number been about the same for any length of time past?—It has been about that average for the last three or four years.

12319. Then, after the first year, when you number rose to somewhat over thirty, there has been no further increase?—No, not anything considerable. I think there was for a time a slight increase, but not very much.

12320. What number of resident trustees have you?—I have three resident trustees, besides myself, and two non-resident—a teacher of music, and a teacher of drawing.

12321. Are they gentlemen who also teach elsewhere in Chancery?—Yes. The professor of music is also organist of the Church; and the drawing master is a certificated master from South Kensington, who is attached to the School of Art in Chancery.

12322. What are the duties of your resident masters?—I have a chemical master, who is a B.Sc., First of the First Honours, and Professor of Trinity College, Mr. R. Waddy.

12323. Who is your second master?—The science master, Mr. Frederick G. McManis, who passed through the courses in connection with the South Kensington Science Department, and got very high certificates.

Oct. 9, 1876.
 Rev. Abraham
 S. Hathornes,
 &c. &c.

12334. Dr. HART.—He teaches physical science, I suppose?—Yes.

12335. Does he teach mathematics?—Yes.

12336. Lord Justice FitzGibbon.—Who is your third master?—Herr Fischer, a German, who has a certificate from the College of Preceptors in Hanover. He teaches French and German.

12337. What remuneration do you give to each of these masters?—The classical master has £20 a year, with board and lodging; the science master has £20, with board and lodging; Herr Fischer receives £40 a year, with board and lodging.

12338. How do you remunerate the drawing and music masters?—They are paid by the extra fees of the pupils. I have nothing to say to them, except that I am sometimes paymaster.

12339. You charge the extra fees to the parents, and hand them over to the masters?—Yes, that is, with regard to boarders. I do not do so with the day boys.

12340. Dr. HART.—What part do you yourself take in the teaching?—I may say I teach in all the branches, because I hear the repetitions, and take classes in different subjects.

12341. Lord Justice FitzGibbon.—You devote yourself to teaching—have you any other occupation?—I have Sunday duty as a clergyman—but to other week day duty.

12342. What is the class of education given in your school—are all the boys learning classics?—A good many of them. We have very few boys that seem to aim at a University course; still we teach a large proportion of them Latin; but not many, Greek. A good many learn French.

12343. Is there much German taught?—Not very much.

12344. You give, I suppose, a general English education?—Yes; we are prepared to teach them any branch—classics, science, or modern languages—as may be required.

12345. You say that few aim at the Universities:—as you give us approximately the proportion that go to Trinity College, or to the Queen's University?—I have been five years in the school, and I have during that time had only one boy who has entered Trinity College, that was in July last, and he had not received the culture of life education in my school. He merely came to prepare himself for the University—he was with me only a year. I have a pupil at present who I think will take a good position in Trinity College.

12346. Dr. HART.—Have any of your pupils gone to the Queen's University?—No. I have had some boys who entered the banks.

12347. Lord Justice FitzGibbon.—To what pursuits in life have your pupils generally gone?—Some have entered the Civil Service, some merely came to the school to get a general education, without any other object in view. I have had a few gentlemen's sons.

12348. Have you had many that went to a commercial life?—I have two or three, at present, who are preparing for commercial life.

12349. What commercial education do you give?—Book-keeping is taught in the school to such boys as desire it. I had a boy lately who went from my school to a mercantile house in Edinburgh or Glasgow, as a clerk.

12350. Do you teach physical or practical science?—Yes.

12351. From books?—Yes.

12352. Have you any means of experimental teaching?—No; not experimental instruction. We are taking steps to prepare some of our boys now for the course in the Intermediate Examination.

12353. Did you send any boys to the Intermediate Examination this year?—Yes; I sent up eight.

12354. How many passed?—Seven.

12355. Did any of them get into the prize list?—Four.

12356. Did any of them get exhibitions?—No.

12357. I presume the small number of boys who are learning classics is a circumstance against your school getting exhibitions?—Yes, and I do not know how it was, but the ranking in some of the courses seems to have been very extraordinary. One of the best boys I had in the school, who I know of my own knowledge ought to have scored 85 per cent in French, was marked 50. I fully calculated on having that boy as an exhibitor. I cannot understand it, of course if he turned his paper he might have got a low mark, but he got nothing at all.

12358. Dr. HART.—Possibly he omitted giving in his paper?—No; he is positive he gave it in, and the same boy, although he got a prize at South Kensington for drawing, merely got passing marks in drawing, and not one of the boys that passed in his grade got merit marks in drawing—not a single prize was given in the whole grade for drawing. It seems very bad on some of the young fellows who worked their best, and who had reason to expect better success.

12359. Did he pass in any of the divisions?—Yes, he got merit in five divisions, and passed in six, he got very high marks in some of the subjects.

12360. Is he in the prize list?—Yes, he is very near the top of the prize list; he missed the exhibition, I think, in consequence of making no marks in French. I cannot understand how he got nothing in that subject.

12361. I suppose you are aware that sometimes boys do not answer as well at examinations as they do at home?—Yes, of course, but he got no marks at all. Possibly a mistake may have been made. Yes, among such a large number, of course, that is quite possible. I possess a list of the boys who passed from my school.

12362. Lord Justice FitzGibbon.—That shows that one boy passed with merit in Greek, four with merit in Latin, one with merit in English, five with merit in arithmetic, four with merit in algebra, four with merit in Euclid, besides a number of passes without merit?—Yes.

12363. The proportion of your boys who passed with merit appears to have been very large in arithmetic, algebra, and Euclid. Do all your boys learn those subjects?—Very nearly. There are two or three who do not go in for algebra.

12364. At what age do boys usually come to your school?—About nine. I have had rather a junior class of boys, from nine to ten—it is only lately some of them have grown up.

12365. They have remained with you since you began?—Yes.

12366. Up to what age do they stay in the school?—I have two or three now that are sixteen or seventeen, who are remaining to finish their education. I may, perhaps, mention that about three years ago I had two very able boys at the school—they were in my head class. The father of one of them was anxious that he should go to Armagh to get a Royal scholarship, and he removed him for that purpose—he is about to enter Trinity College at the present examination, and I expect he will take everything he goes in for.

12367. Dr. HART.—How long is it since he left you?—Three years. He had to attend three years at Armagh to qualify for a Royal scholarship.

12368. Lord Justice FitzGibbon.—He would not be qualified for a Royal scholarship unless he were three years at one of the Royal schools?—That is so. With regard to the other boy, his father thought there was not enough competition here, and he sent him to a larger school, where there were a greater number of boys. He was there a year, but during about three months of that time he was unwell, so that he could not have had the advantage of that school for more than nine months—he entered Trinity College, took first place at the October entrance, got a junior exhibition, and has since taken honors. I think I may discern in one of my boys, for nearly all his previous education was received at my school.

12369. Those boys were withdrawn from your school in consequence of there not being any exhibitions attached to it?—Yes.

12361. Do you expect that, under the Intermediate Education Act, your boys will be able in future years to obtain prizes and exhibitions?—I think we are in a good position now as regards exhibitions.

12362. Therefore, that cause for withdrawing boys from your school will be diminished?—I hope so.

12363. The foundation of your school is, as you say, of course, aware, a private one, from Richard Moore, and Stephen Moore?—Yes, it was founded a long time ago—in 1685.

12364. The objects were to endow a free school for educating girls, the children of Protestant freemen of Clonmel. Do you know the present number of Protestant freemen of Clonmel?—No; I do not know exactly. Since I have been appointed master of the school, there have been some persons admitted freemen, and some who have applied for it have not succeeded in getting admission—there were some legal difficulties in the way. I do not think there are more than half a dozen Protestant freemen in the town.

12365. Do you know what class of person the Protestant freemen consist of, under the present law?—No. I believe some of the gentry are freemen. Captain Morton is a freeman, and the sub-sheriff, Mr. Fitzgerald, is another; his son was with me for a time, and he wished me to take payment for him, but I refused, as I said I felt bound not to take payment from a freeman. There are other Protestant freemen, who are merchants in Clonmel.

12366. I suppose the number is not large?—It is not large. The old families have died out, and they will not renew the freedom of the town.

12367. Since you became principal of the school, what applications have you had from sons of freemen to get upon the free foundation?—I have had, I think, three or four applications from persons not residing in the town at all—I think principally from clergymen, with reference to persons in their parishes, people that had not good means. I told them that there was no chance for the foundation for admission as boarders, but that if the friends of the boys undertook to provide board for them in Clonmel, I would educate them gratuitously in all the subjects taught in the school, and would even give them advantages, knowing they were deserving cases.

12368. Have you actually had in your school any boys who come by right, as sons of freemen?—Yes. I have at the present moment two; and I have had another—Mr. Fitzgerald's son. I have also another boy, who, though not a son, is a descendant of a freeman, and I regard him as a son of a freeman.

12369. That is four boys who are sons or descendants of freemen?—Yes.

12370. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—Since you became master, how many such applications have you had?—That is all.

12371. LORD JUSTICE FITZGERALD.—From the terms of the deed, the sons of freemen are entitled to education, not board—have you had other boys, not sons of freemen, educated gratuitously in the school as day boys?—Yes.

12372. How did they come to be admitted?—It came to my knowledge that their parents were not able to pay for them, and in one or two cases, I volunteered to take them.

12373. Have you ever had any free boarders?—I have at present a free boarder.

12374. How has he come into the school?—His parents were in poor circumstances, and I was asked to take him free. I have also the son of a clergyman, partly paid for by Stowe's charity.

12376. LORD JUSTICE FITZGERALD.—How much is paid for him by Stowe's charity?—£20 a year.

12377. With regard to the other boy you have mentioned, I understand the board and education he receives are a gratuity from yourself?—Yes.

12378. What means do you yourself derive from the school?—I get £300 a year from the Com-missioners.

12379. Is that a fixed salary?—Yes.

12380. Do you account for the fees you receive from the pupils?—No, I have that in addition.

12381. Are you under any regulations from the Commissioners as to fixing the amount of the fees you charge?—No, they send printed forms to me twice a year, which I am required to fill up and return.

12382. Did you ever receive any notice, or were any steps ever taken upon any of these returns?—Not to my knowledge, I never heard anything about these afterwards.

12383. You received blank forms by post, you filled them up, and returned them by post, and heard no more about them?—Quite so.

12384. Is that the inevitable course?—Yes.

12385. You derive £300 from the funds—do the Commissioners give you any assistance towards paying the assistant masters?—No.

12386. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—Was not the original salary of the classical master £200?—The master before me had £200—I cannot say what it originally was, but Dr. Bell, and Dr. Carey, the two preceding masters had the estate in their own management, so that whatever came from the estate they had. The Commissioners of Education then got into possession of the property, and they allowed only £200 a year, on the ground that they were paying off the instalments due on the building fund, but it was always understood that whatever came from the estate was to go for the benefit of the school. I called, not long ago, on some of the leading Commissioners in Dublin, representing that I was under great expense for assistant masters, and if there was anything to enable me to pay them, of course it would be an advantage to the school. Both the President and Mr. Jelliffe said, that they were quite of opinion that whatever came from the estate, after the necessary outgoings, should go for the benefit of the school.

12387. Have you heard no more on the subject?—I have heard no more, because the debt is not paid off yet.

12388. Do you know the amount of that debt?—£850 I think was the balance. A sum of £4,000 was originally advanced, which was to be paid off in sums of £200 a year; but, when the hard times came, the estate did not return the money, and I think the Commissioners asked the Government to let the thing lie over, and so for a good many years there was no payment made.

12389. What is the amount of the debt now?—I was looking into the Commissioners' account lately, and I found they had recently paid off £300 out of the £850, and I know they have a balance in hand—I think the arrangement, so far as I can judge, that was made with the Government, was about five years ago, just after my appointment. The Government came down on the Commissioners, and said, "you must pay up the balance." Dr. Kyle then told me they had £250 or £300 in the bank.

12390. LORD JUSTICE FITZGERALD.—Have you ever been furnished with, or seen, the accounts of the Clonmel school, in the books of the Education Commissioners?—I have.

12391. When?—In the office of your Commission, in the Four Courts, last spring; but never till then. Mr. Fleming very kindly let me look into the books, and I saw the balance that was in bank from time to time, and it exactly accorded with what Dr. Kyle had told me.

12392. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—Go on with what you were saying about that interview?—I was in the office, and Dr. Kyle wanted to show me that the Commissioners could not allow me more than £200 a year, because, although they had a balance of £200 or £300 in —Yes, I think they should keep that, in case Government should call on them for payment of the balance due.

12393. Dr. Abner S. Hutchinson, M.A. 12393. What was the balance due then?—£250 I believe.

12394. So that Dr. Kyle had sufficient to pay it off?—Yes.

12395. Lord Justice FRYGEMAN.—Was that balance lying idle in the bank, while the balance due to Government was subject to interest?—I believe so, but I did not take the interest into account—I thought that probably there was some understanding between the Commissioners and the Government that, as time went by, they would not be called upon for the instalments.

12396. Lord B. CHURCHILL.—That was five years ago?—Yes.

12397. The times were not bad then?—No, but it struck me that Dr. Kyle thought the Government would never apply for that money.

12398. In the meantime did the money remain idle in the bank?—Yes, because when we were going through the value of the estate, in going over the same I said "There is the interest on the money in bank," and he said "We could not take interest into consideration—it would confuse our accounts"—or something of that kind. I thought it a strange thing the money should be lying idle, but he said "We could not be bothered with the interest"—or something to that effect.

12399. I understood you saw the account in the office of the Commissioners, and, after our Commission was appointed, you saw the papers that were sent to us?—Yes, and as far as I can judge, the accounts were exactly as Dr. Kyle had represented them.

12400. What is the amount of the debt now?—I think about £500. They have paid off £300. Dr. Kyle paid off £100 the first year, and that year when the inquiry was going to come on they paid off £300 more, so that now there must be about £300 due.

12401. Dr. HART.—How long is it since the balance of £500 appeared to be in the bank?—About five years ago.

12402. There must have been accumulations since then?—Not if it were lying in bank without interest. I do not think there was any accumulation since then. I think the outgoings were equal to the rents, because now they pay £100 more to the master than before.

12403. Lord B. CHURCHILL.—Was the extra £100 a year intended as a contribution for the first classical master?—No, there was never any distinction made.

12404. Lord Justice FRYGEMAN.—In a return for which the Earl of Mount Chichester moved, in the House of Lords, in 1869, the statement is this—on the 1st May 1847 there was a debt of £347 18s. 6d., and on 1st May 1869 a credit of £253 1s. 8d.—is that a part of the balance which you say was afterwards increased?—I think it was increased to £800 or £900.

12405. This return makes no mention of any debt to the Government or any payment of instalments whatever?—Of course Mr. Fleming's call on could produce the books, but I think you will find that the balance in bank has gone on, but reduced by what they paid to the Government, and that they have at present about as much as would pay off the debt—I think there must be an arrangement to pay off, at the rate of £100 a year. Dr. Kyle seemed to like to have a sum always lying by—to have a balance in reserve, as it were. He seemed unwilling to part with the money—instead of paying it down, and getting rid of the thing, he liked to let it go on as long as possible, and keep a balance in bank.

12406. Is that £300 a year the only money payment you receive out of the endowment?—That is the only money payment. There are also the repairs to be paid for by the Commissioners.

12407. What property is held with the house?—There is the house, the out-office, and about an acre of ground.

12408. You yourself have a residence in the house?

—Yes, a comfortable residence, the house is kept in very good order.

12409. Do you pay anything either by way of rent or tax?—Nothing whatever.

12410. Are your master's residences provided for them, by you?—Yes.

12411. How are the premises kept in order?—When I make any return to the Commissioners, that repairs are required, they allow them to be made.

12412. Explain the course of dealing—supposing a want of repair to exist, how do I bring to the Commissioners' attention, how is the price fixed, and how paid for, and how worked?—If I know anything to be required, I get a tradesman to make an estimate of what the cost will be, and I send that up to the Secretary. The Secretary sends me down what he will bring it before the Commissioners. If it is anything very urgent, the roof or anything of that kind, he authorizes me to proceed with it at once. I then tell the tradesman to do the work, and when it is finished I send a statement to the Commissioners that the work has been done to my satisfaction, and they then send down the money to pay for it.

12413. Does any one from the Commissioners examine the building, either personally, or when estimates are sent?—No.

12414. Or check the payment in any way except by your certificate that you are satisfied, is that the only check?—Yes.

12415. Have you any professional assistance, such as an architect or an engineer?—No.

12416. In the building visited by the Commissioners, or by any person from them?—Not to my knowledge.

12417. What condition of repair was it in when you got it?—In good substantial repair as far as the fabric of the building went, but, on account of the house being disused for so many years, the rooms wanted papering, the place was very much out of repair in that way.

12418. How did it stand with regard to painting?—The painting was always done regularly.

12419. Has it been done by you regularly since you got it?—Yes.

12420. Is that done of your own motion, or do the Commissioners call upon you to get it done?—Of my own motion.

12421. Assuming that instead of keeping the place in repair you allowed it to get out of repair, is there any means by which the Commissioners would become aware of it?—None that I know of.

12422. Can you tell us how much it has cost to keep the place in repair—it seems to be in very good repair from what we saw of it?—The Commissioners bid out a good deal upon it the first year I came. I fancy that, on an average, £30 or £40 a year time, would be the cost of repairs. The Commissioners paper and paint, and do everything that is required to the fabric of the house.

12423. What did it cost the first year to bring it up to the state in which you wished to have it?—I fancy they laid out £70 or £80.

12424. Was that done under contract, or was it done in the same way as the rest?—In the same way—by estimate.

12425. Was it on an estimate obtained by you, and not by the Commissioners?—By me altogether. I should observe that there are tradesmen who have worked for many years in connexion with the house—very respectable men, of good character—and, I think, everything was done very well.

12426. Dr. HART.—The tradesmen were selected by you, not by the Commissioners?—Yes; but they had worked at the house for many years.

12427. Lord Justice FRYGEMAN.—The men were selected by you, and paid by you?—Yes; they were paid through me.

12428. Do you receive any assistance from the Commissioners, for furniture, books, and teaching appliances?—No. There were some fixtures connected with the house, that might be called furniture—for instance, a very large book-case in the library.

12428. Does that belong to the school?—Yes, it was put up by Dr. Bell, I think. It cost about £40. I suggested that it should be made school property. It was a thing that no master could remove, and it was better to purchase it from the representatives of the late master. Of course I was not at any expense for it, and it is now the property of the school.

12429. Suppose you left the school to-morrow, does all the furniture belong to you?—Yes, with the exception of those fixtures.

12430. The beds, bedsteads, desks in the school, maps, and everything of that sort, are your own?—Yes.

12431. Were you obliged to supply desks, forms, beds, tables, and all the necessaries for keeping a school, at your own expense?—Yes, at my own expense.

12432. Did you make any alterations in the building since you got it?—None, except putting up separate washrooms for the masters' rooms.

12433. Was that done at your own expense?—No. The Commissioners paid for it. I put up a green-house at my own expense.

12434. Is that a removable green-house?—I do not know. Part of it, I think, might be removed.

12435. You put it up for your own accommodation, as part of your residence?—Yes.

12436. Do the buildings require anything further, to make them suitable for the school?—We want several things—such as bathrooms. We have no bathrooms.

12437. The only washing appliances are basins and pails. We have the ordinary movable baths, but there is no bathroom. I obtained estimates for one, but it was very expensive, and Dr. Kyle said they could not get it until he had more funds on hand.

12438. Are the rooms in good order?—Very good order.

12439. Do the Commissioners receive any information as to the state of the education in the school, beyond the statements contained in the annual returns?—Not to my knowledge.

12440. During your time has there been any visitation or inspection?—No.

12441. Are you asked, in the returns you send up, to furnish any statement as to the education given in the school?—They ask what subjects are taught.

12442. The returns do not admit any statement as to the number of boys that are proficient, or the degree of proficiency?—No, nothing of that kind.

12443. With regard to the property from which the income of the school is derived, are you acquainted with it yourself?—No; I have never been on the land. I have nothing whatever of the management of it.

12444. Dr. HART—Is there a local agent?—Yes, Mr. Owen.

12445. Does he reside in the neighbourhood of the property?—He resides at Rathdowney, in the Queen's County.

12446. Where is the property situated?—Near Treprekmore, in the County Tipperary.

12447. Does the land agent ever visit the school premises?—No, not to my knowledge. His father, I think, came once, but not at my time.

12448. Since your time there has been no visitation?—No visitation of any kind, but the Commissioners appear to have got some information about the school, because in their report to the Lord Lieutenant, for the year before last, they speak favourably of the school, and of the way it had progressed.

12449. Lord R. CHICHESTER—What was not from any information you had given them?—No.

12450. I see the poor low valuation of the building at £40—what would you consider the real value?—Taking the house into consideration, I think it ought to be, at least, £20.

12451. It is valued, in the report of the Sanitary Commissioners, at £150 a year—would you say that was too high?—I would say that, to a person wanting it for a school, it would be worth about £100 a year.

12452. Lord JUSTICE FRANKLAND—Could you tell me approximately, what sum of money, paid to you, would enable you to keep a boarder, free of cost to yourself, among the other boys?—I should say, at the very lowest, paying for masters, £50 a year I calculate as the cost of a boarder.

12453. That would be the expense of giving board and education to an additional scholar?—Yes.

12454. What are your charges for pupils?—For boarders, £45 a year.

12455. Is that a uniform charge, irrespective of age?—No, that is for boys who are over eleven. Under eleven, I charge £40.

12456. What are your extra charges?—I charge extra for French and German, and for washing, of course.

12457. What do you charge for French and German?—Ten shillings a quarter.

12458. Instruction in those languages is given by a master who is resident in the house?—Yes.

12459. What is your charge for washing?—£2 a year.

12460. Therefore year full course, including modern languages, would be £40 a year for a boy over eleven years of age, and £44 for a boy under eleven?—Yes.

12461. Music and drawing are not included, as the fees for them do not pass through your hands?—No.

12462. If you were obliged to pay the value for the house, and to keep it in repair, and did not get the £300 a year—in other words if you had not the endowment—what amount would it be necessary to increase your fees by?—Well, of course, a good deal would depend on the number of boys; but, taking the school as it is, I should say the charge should be £55 a year.

12463. Therefore, you would have to increase your fees all round by about £10 per boy?—Yes.

12464. Supposing that was the condition of affairs, and that you were charging an average of £55 per boy, do you think many of the class of boys who come to your school would be prevented from coming by the increased charge?—I am certain they would. In fact, I do not think I would have any of them, because the great object of parents seems to be to try and get education on terms as low as possible.

12465. So that, to a substantial extent, the boys at the school are receiving benefit from the endowment?—Decidedly.

12466. Do you know Chancel well?—I do.

12467. Is there in Chancel any number of Protestant boys, sons of freemen, who require a grammar school education, or who would avail themselves of it, if they could get it free?—I do not think there are many. There are some families who have got on the list for the very purpose of taking advantage of the school, but their children are growing up, and I expect they will be going to business or professions soon. Of very young boys, I do not think there are many who would care to avail themselves of it. The Model school takes a good many of the class of boys that used formerly to go to the Grammar school.

12468. There is a Model school in Chancel, under the Board of National Education?—Yes, and the Incorporated Society's school takes a class of Protestant boys, some of whom are a little above the poor class.

12469. Would the Incorporated Society's school come below the Model school, in point of education, or above it?—Well, that depends a great deal upon the master. It had a very good master a short time ago—a superior man. I fancy the teaching there then was better than that at the Model school.

12470. I believe he was promoted?—Yes. He was promoted to the Harcourt-street school. He was here a couple of years, I think.

12471. Then you have in Chancel—Primary National schools, a Model school, the Incorporated Society's school, and the Endowed school—all available for Protestants, and two of these exclusive institutions?—Yes.

Oct. 5, 1871.
Rev. ALFRED
S. BISHOP,
M.A.

12473. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—I believe the Incorporated Society's school is exclusive!—It is not exclusive, but I believe the Roman Catholics do not avail of it. There is a rather superior class of Roman Catholic school in the town, called the St. Francis Academy, taught by a brotherhood, I think, called the Community of St. Francis.

12474. LORD JUSTICE FITZGERALD.—Is that a grammar school?—Yes, they teach classics.

12475. Do you know whether they sent up any boys to the Intermediate examinations?—They did.

12476. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—Is that a day school?—It is.

12477. LORD JUSTICE FITZGERALD.—Your pupils are not all Protestants?—No.

12478. How are they divided as regards religious denominations?—Most of them are Church boys.

12479. From your return to us, it appeared that all your boarders were Church of Ireland boys, and that of the day boys fifteen belonged to the Church of Ireland, two were Dissenters, and three Roman Catholics!—Yes, but I have only one Roman Catholic now. I am not sure whether the other two are coming back or not.

12480. What arrangement do you make with regard to those boys as to religious teaching?—We open school at a certain hour with prayer and Scriptural instruction. It is open to them to come or not at that hour, but as a rule those boys never come until the religious instruction is over. It is, in fact, a wonder the Roman Catholic boys come at all, one parent told me that, even so it is, every inducement was held out to him not to send his sons to my school.

12481. You give nothing but secular instruction, I presume, after the religious instruction is closed in the morning?—Nothing but secular instruction, except that if I thought there was any necessity to appeal to any moral duty I would of course consider myself bound to do so. We use class books—such as Smith's Histories, which deal with history from perhaps the Protestant point of view, but they never make any objection.

12482. It is free to the Roman Catholic boys to be present or not during morning prayer?—Yes.

12483. You have mentioned that the father of one of the Roman Catholic boys told you that a recusant had been held out to him to take his son away from your school, did he mention what the inducement was to send his boy to you?—It is considered that the boys get a better class of education.

12484. Are the Commissioners of Education the only persons who have any connexion with the school?—They are trustees of the property. The patrons of the school are the Earl of Mount Cashell, the Marquis of Ormonde, and (according to the original trust) the Mayor of Clonmel, for the time being.

12485. By whom were you appointed?—By the Earl of Mount Cashell and the Marquis of Ormonde. The Commissioners of Education do not claim any right to interfere in the appointment.

12486. How is your appointment made?—Was it written?—Yes; a written appointment.

12487. For what length of time?—There was no time mentioned; I was simply appointed head master of the school.

12488. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—Is your appointment held during the pleasure of the patrons?—It is held for life, I think, unless for cause shown.

12489. LORD JUSTICE FITZGERALD.—Is it an appointment during good behaviour?—There is nothing mentioned about it.

12490. Is there anything mentioned in it, as to removal?—I think not.

12491. Do the patrons take any active part in the inspection or management of the school?—Lord Mount Cashell has taken a very active interest in the school. He has been trying to promote the interests of the school as far as was in his power, by recommending it amongst his friends. He has also come occasionally to our examinations. Mr. Bagwell also takes an interest in it.

12492. Who is Mr. Bagwell?—He is one of the resident gentry of the locality, the eldest son of one of our leading families here. He visits the school.

12493. His only concern as a gentleman residing in the neighbourhood taking an interest in the school?—Yes.

12494. I believe Lord Mount Cashell resides at a considerable distance from you?—He does, indeed.

12495. Does the Marquis of Ormonde take any interest in the school?—Not much. He has a shooting lodge in the neighbourhood, and I called on him and asked him to visit the school, but he said he seldom went to Clonmel.

12496. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—Has he any property here?—He has. In fact the old seat of the Ormondes is in the valley of the Suir.

12497. Dr. HART.—You mention that Lord Mount Cashell attends the examinations of the boys of your school?—Yes, he has done so.

12498. Who conducts the examinations?—I generally get a Trinity College man to examine. I have not been able to secure the advantage of any of the Fellows to conduct the examinations. One family would not admit of that; but I have had some of the Scholars, and other gentlemen, friends of mine, have assisted. The Bishop of Clogher has also kindly come, upon my invitation. There always had Trinity College men to conduct the examinations. One of the curates of Clonmel, also, who was a Royal Scholar, used very kindly to assist me in the examination.

12499. LORD JUSTICE FITZGERALD.—You have, up to the present, been dependent on the assistance of friends in conducting your examinations, would you consider it an advantage if there were periodical examinations or visitations by the Commissioners, or by suitable persons by their orders?—I would.

12500. Would you have any objection to that being done?—Not the slightest. Quite the contrary.

12501. There has been no exercise by the Commissioners of the powers they possess of visitation and inspection?—No.

12502. Let me read you a passage from the Report of the former Commission:—

"At our public court we examined the master, and some of the principal inhabitants of Clonmel, we found a very strong feeling as to the want of a school fitted to provide the education which this school was intended to supply."

What other provision, if this school was not available, is there in Clonmel for the sons of gentry, and persons who want to give their sons a liberal education?—There is no other Protestant school.

12503. What is the nearest school?—Tipperary is the nearest—that is an Erasmus Smith's school.

12504. Tipperary at one side, and, I presume, Waterford would be the nearest school in the other direction?—Well, Waterford is not much of a school—it has not been very flourishing.

12505. Is there any other matter in connexion with your school that you would like to mention?—Perhaps I might mention, with regard to the expense of carrying on the establishment, that I have hitherto been working at a great disadvantage, because the school had for so long a time lost its name, and I have had very little chance of making a name for it, owing to the very few boys who are going in for College education. I have employed superior masters, at a very considerable expense, in the hope of inducing the public to patronise me more than perhaps they have done, and to show that I have really been endeavouring to do that, I may mention that I have calculated my expenses last year. I prepared a paper that I drew up for the information of the Education Commissioners, but finding that the state of their funds did not admit of their allowing anything additional for masters, I thought it would be useless to send it to them.

12506. Of the £300 a year which is paid to you by the Commissioners, you appear to have expended £207 for the purposes of the school?—Yes, £23 was my net profit for the year, that is what I calculate.

12507. That is you have £200 for yourself out of the £300?—Yes.

12508. If the £300 balance in bank were invested at interest they might afford you a larger sum?—Yes, [also hand in a statement headed "Some reasons which may account for the small number of boarders in Clonsilla school."] I showed that statement to the President of Trinity College and Mr. Jellett. (File Appendix No. 18.)

12509. LOUIS B. CHURCHMAN.—Were you master of my school before you were appointed to Clonsilla?—No; in my college days I took pupils, but I then went for a time entirely to the clerical branch of my profession.

12510. How did you come to apply for the appointment to Clonsilla school?—I did not apply for it, Lord Mount Cashell was kind enough to offer it to me.

12511. Had you a parish at that time?—I was master of Bagnalstown, in the County Carlow.

12512. Did you take private pupils there?—Not then. I did not take private pupils from the time I left Trinity College.

12513. When you came to Clonsilla you had no connection as master of a school at all—you had to start de novo?—Yes.

12514. Where do your boarders principally come from?—From various parts of the country, and some from neighboring counties. I have boys from the counties of Cork and Waterford.

12515. Are your boarders principally from the south of Ireland?—Yes.

12516. You have thirteen; what class of life are they?—Gentlemen's sons. I have never had any but sons of gentlemen except in two cases—I have a good many clergymen's sons.

12517. Sons of country gentlemen of small property?—Yes, and some of gentry; but I have had sons of gentlemen of good property.

12518. And good family?—Yes.

12519. Have you any boarders who are sons of shopkeepers or merchants?—No.

12520. Do you object to take them?—Well, I would rather not—I think it would injure the school.

12521. Do you think that if you took a comparatively lower class of boarders—say a middle class—your numbers would be larger?—I do not know. I do not think that class, as a rule, care very much for higher education—I think they only want to educate their children for business, and they are satisfied with what they get in the Model school.

12522. You like to keep your school as select as possible?—I like to have the boarders select certainly. They live with my own family.

12523. Your day boys, I suppose, are all sons of tradesmen?—No—some few of them are.

12524. What class are they as a rule?—Sons of bank managers, for instance, and gentry.

12525. Have you any day boys who are sons of Clonsilla shopkeepers?—One or two.

12526. Do you object to that?—No—not in the slightest.

12527. You do not think the admixture of middle class boys, in the day time, at all interferes with the success of the school?—I think not, as a general rule. I know at some large schools the boarders look upon themselves as a distinct class, and the day boys just come in and do not say very much to them.

12528. Is that the case in your school?—It is not. They mix freely with them. We have a size class of day boys. They are all very respectable, and I do not think there is any difficulty in that way.

12529. Do you think the class of boarders, you are now taking, is the class for whom the endowment was originally constituted?—I really do not know. I do not know what the intention was, as regards boarders. The intention was to establish a school for the benefit of sons of freemen residing in Clonsilla.

12530. Your boarders are deriving considerable benefit from the endowment?—Certainly, in the way that has been explained, I should say they do, as far as my experience of school-keeping goes. I do not see how it would be possible for anyone to keep a school on those terms without it.

The Right Hon. the EARL OF MOUNT CASHELL, CHAIRMAN.

12531. LOUIS JEROME FRUCHON.—Is it in right of your title that your lordship is one of the patrons of Clonsilla Endowed school?—Yes. The original patron was the Earls of Mount Cashell, the Marquises of Ormonde, and the Mayor of Clonsilla for the time being.

12532. How long have you been patron?—Since my father's death—27th October, 1825. I may say when I became patron I found the school under the direction of Colonel Bagenell—who came into possession of it through a mistake; I called upon him to give up his claim, and he surrendered it to me.

12533. Have you any duties, rights, or powers, with reference to the school, except that of appointing the master?—Yes, I take it that I am the representative of the original founders.

12534. The founders were ancestors of yours?—Yes, Stephen and Richard Moore were my ancestors, and directed that their representative should have the management.

12535. During the time that you have been patron of the school, has the Mayor of Clonsilla ever taken any part in the management?—Never; since the original deed was signed, no Mayor of Clonsilla has ever been mentioned. The fact is this: the Marquises of Ormonde and the Earls of Mount Cashell have always supported the masters themselves, without any consultation with the Mayor. At the period of the foundation my ancestors were the principal people in Clonsilla—they were at the head of the Corporation, and the whole borough was at their command, and they had the management of all property belonging to the Corporation. Everything belonging to the Corporation was under the control of my ancestors at that time. At that period, though they might have consulted with me, the Corporation were all Protestants, and the Mayor was a Protestant. Since then, by the change of the law, everything has been altered. Now the Mayor is generally a Roman Catholic, and very likely to continue so; and, although, as I have mentioned already, even while they were Protestants they were not consulted, I certainly do not see why, now that they are Roman Catholics, they should be consulted.

12536. There is no doubt that this was an exclusively Protestant foundation, and therefore the Mayors, if Roman Catholics, would probably not be interested in it now, but can you explain how it happened that the Mayors dropped out of the management of the school before the Emancipation Act?—It never was considered necessary to consult the Mayor. In the original deed it was provided that two out of the three trustees were to have power to act.

12537. And, therefore, I suppose, when the Earl and the Marquis acted together, the Mayor had no power?—Understoodly.

12538. You took part in the appointment of Mr. Hutchinson?—Yes. I appointed Mr. Hutchinson. I have not got the letter that I received from the Marquis of Ormonde, but I wrote, of course, to get his consent to Mr. Hutchinson's appointment, and the substance of his letter was, that knowing I was the representative of the original founders, he thought it his duty to leave the appointment to me, and accordingly I appointed Mr. Hutchinson.

12539. LOUIS B. CHURCHMAN.—Had you many applications for the post?—I had several—some of the applicants were very good men; but I appointed Mr. Hutchinson, having known him from his boyhood.

Oct. 5, 1875.

Rev. Abraham
S. Hutchinson,
M.A.

The Rt. Hon.
the Earl of
Mount Cashell

Oct. 3, 1859

The Rt. Hon.
the Earl of Mount Cashell.

12540. LORD JUSTICE FITZGERALD.—I believe, for a long time before Mr. Hutchinson's appointment, the state of affairs was very unsatisfactory.—Yes, the school was under Mr. Kettlewell.

12541. It was reported in 1837, that it would be better to dissolve the master at once, but, I believe, he remained there, notwithstanding, until 1873 or 1874.—Yes, he was a man of great ability, had passed examinations with great distinction, and was well qualified to conduct a school, but he was very poor, and owing to his not being supplied with funds by the Commissioners, he got into debt. I understand he was £400 in debt for repairs of the school, which, I believe, was never paid to him—in short he got into thorough distress, from being obliged to carry on the business of the school without funds, and being unable to meet the demands which were made upon him. To my own knowledge, he was on his keeping for a considerable time: wrote were in the hands of the sheriff against his body, and he had great difficulty to avoid being arrested.

12542. Of course, under those circumstances, the school could not flourish, but what was the cause of his being allowed to remain on as master of the school so many years?—Well, he hoped funds would be furnished from the Commissioners, and I was fully aware that the lands were greatly mortgaged, and did not perceive what they ought to have done, and was in hopes I should have succeeded in getting Dr. Kyle to raise the rents, and get them up to what was received in the year 1840, which was £300 a year. The lands were let for £300 in 1840, but they have gone on reducing instead of raising the rents, and the lands have brought a smaller and smaller sum annually. I took a great deal of trouble upon this very point, for I thought there was some most fraudulent work at the bottom of it. I cannot point to, and do not name, any individual, but there was fraud somewhere, and I was very anxious that Mr. Owen, the agent and receiver, should have been examined by the Commission that sat in 1837, but they did not examine him.

12543. We have had the advantage of his evidence at the present Commission.—That is the son of the man I refer to. The Mr. Owen, who had the management at that time, is dead.

12544. We hope to take steps to have an independent examination of the estate also, so that we may be able to set that matter right.—I hope so, pray recollect the extent of the lands, 370 acres, Irish plantation measure.

12545. LORD R. CRENSHAW.—Are you acquainted with the lands?—I have gone over them, but not very recently, I thought it my duty to visit them, and I did so.

12546. What did you consider the value?—A great deal of the land—I will not say all—appeared to be very good land. There is some bog attached to it certainly. There is one thing I have to complain of. I saw by the return which was laid before the House of Lords, on my own motion, that there was on one occasion £19 6s. 11½d. received for bog rent—that was put down in one year's return as paid, but it was not carried on, and afterwards we lost sight altogether of those bog rents, and I have not been able to discover them in the accounts. I do not know whether the bog was afterwards given gratis, or whether the rents were paid to the agent, and the agent omitted to give credit for them. I did what I could to obtain information from Dr. Kyle, but he firmly refused to give me the information I required—he would not allow me to look at the books. I asked permission to see the accounts—I thought as patron and trustee I was entitled to look at them—but Dr. Kyle refused to let me see them: and it was in consequence that I moved in the House of Lords for these returns.

12547. One of the items of information which the return to the House of Lords was to give, was the full amount of money to the credit of the endowment that remained in the hands of the Commissioners on the 1st May, 1847, and the amount of money in like manner held to the credit of the endowed school on the 1st May, 1859; the document before me states that on 1st May, 1847, there was no credit, but a debt of £367 18s. 6d., and that on 1st May, 1849, the full amount of money to credit was £335 1s. 5d. Were you aware that at that time there was a debt of over £900 due by the school?—No, it is not mentioned in the return.

12548. Can you tell me whether the debt on the school-house existed on 1st May, 1849?—I cannot say from memory, but I think it ought to have been cleared off, because the payment of £340 a year ought in the regular course to have discharged it.—I know the payment was not so far some time. The £4,000 expended on the school-house was to be liquidated by a payment of £340 a year.

12549. You know that debt was not paid off?—I did.

12550. Do you see that Dr. Kyle has not rectified it in the return?—I believe not. It is a very confused statement indeed. I could not understand it.

12551. LORD JUSTICE FITZGERALD.—I understand that the reason of the school being allowed to remain as it did from 1837 until 1874 was, that the patron did not demand the master, hoping that he might be able to relieve his position, by putting pressure on the Commissioners to advance the requisite funds, but that the Commissioners did not do so.—Yes, and they kept me in the dark. If I had known the facts I could have worked it, but I was kept in ignorance, and everything was so complicated and confused that I did not know what to do. The only information I was able to procure was by moving in the House of Lords for returns.

12552. You know Clement a very long time?—I do.

12553. Do you know what was the qualification of freedom in former times, and what was their number?—I could not tell you that.

12554. Do you remember this school at any time being a large school?—Yes, in the time of Dr. Carey it was a very prosperous and useful school. A great number of distinguished men received their education in the school at that time.

12555. What period do you speak of?—That was in the time of my grandfather—I dare say 100 years ago.

12556. Then you are speaking of the traditions of the school?—I am. Some of the judges and most distinguished men in the country were educated in it. Baron Parke, Mr. Justice Alderson, and I believe, John Fildes, Cresswell, were educated in this school.

12557. During your own recollection have there been any greater numbers attending it than are attending it now?—No.

12558. For a long time it was closed up, and had no pupils?—Yes, I believe in the time of Dr. Bell there were a good number of boys in it. It was getting in very well about 1821 or 1822.

12559. Have you often gone to the Commissioners of Education for information about the school?—I have often gone to Dr. Kyle.

12560. Did you ever examine the accounts?—I was not allowed. I asked to see them, and was told I would not be permitted. Dr. Kyle invariably gave me that answer. That was the reason I moved for the returns. If he had shown me the accounts it would not have been necessary.

12561. Is there any other information about the school you would wish to give us?—No. What I chiefly complained of was that the lands did not produce the amount they ought to have done, and the consequence has been a loss of thousands, which if it had been paid would have liquidated completely the demand, on foot of the £4,000, and have also furnished means to Mr. Kettlewell, and placed him in such a position that he could have made the school an admirable one, for he was a very clever and talented man.

12562. The origin of the debt due to Government was the £4,000 that was laid out on the building?—Yes.

12568. Do you know what the date of that was?—It was about 1830, but if the £340 a year had been paid regularly from that period, the debt would have been liquidated long ago, and yet it is unsettled to the present moment.

12569. A site was granted at £1 a year?—Yes; it was granted by Mr. John Bagwell. There had been an old school-house—I remember being in it when I was a young fellow—it was somewhere in the town, but that school-house, and the ground on which it stood have disappeared and no credit is given for it. The Rev. Mr. Hutchinson says that he believes the site of the old school-house was given to Mr. Bagwell in exchange for the present site, which was a more valuable piece of land.

THE RE. HON.
the Earl of
Mount-Cassell

Mr. JOHN THOMAS LUTHER, examined.

Mr. John T.
Luther.

12565. LORD JUSTICE FRYGROUSE.—You are the Town Clerk of Chancel?—I am.

12566. Can you tell us the qualification for admission as a freeman?—There are three classes of qualification, birth, servitude, and marriage, birth, by being the eldest son of a freeman, servitude, by having served your time to a freeman; marriage, by having married the daughter of a freeman.

12567. Is the son-in-law admissible if there be a son?—Certainly. The eldest son is admissible, and all the sons-in-law.

12568. Are all the sons admissible?—No, only the eldest.

12569. But all the sons-in-law are admissible?—Yes. I believe the franchise of freeman was intended to benefit the ladies. All the daughters of freemen could the right upon their husbands.

12570. As to servitude, are there any limitations, is it restricted to any particular trade or guild?—No. There were guilds here formerly, but they vanished long before my time.

12571. Do you admit freemen now by servitude?—Certainly.

12572. Is the admission by servitude confined to persons bound actually to a trade?—It must be an actual servitude. A point arose some time since whether it should be by indenture or not, but I came to the conclusion, in which I was supported by the opinion of Mr. John B. Murphy, &c., before whom I had a case, that servitude by indenture was not necessary. For instance, it was not usual for a father, in taking his son as apprentice, to require him to be bound by deed, but he performed servitude in the same manner as a stranger who was bound by deed would do. Accordingly, acting on Mr. Murphy's opinion, I advised the Mayor, who is the only party having authority to admit to the freedom of the borough, that an indenture is not necessary.

12573. What is the number at present on your roll of freemen?—It is very small—only twenty-three.

12574. Of those twenty-three how many are Protestants?—Of the entire number, only four are Roman Catholics, the remaining thirteen are either Protestants or Quakers.

12575. The last year have produced a lot of those on the Parliamentary roll of freemen?—Yes.

12576. Is not residence a necessary qualification to entitle a freeman to be on the Parliamentary roll?—Yes, residence within seven miles of the borough, but before I have produced includes all, whether resident or not. Those who do not reside within the required distance are marked.

12577. Then the list you have produced is the whole roll of freemen?—Yes, they are getting "small by degrees and beautifully less."

12578. LORD R. CROMWELL.—How long have you been Town Clerk?—A quarter of a century.

12579. When you first became Town Clerk, how many freemen were there?—I think the number, when I became Town Clerk, was between sixty and seventy.

12580. Dr. HART.—Of the twenty-three at present on the roll, how many are qualified by servitude?—Eight were admitted by birth, twelve by servitude, and three by marriage.

12581. LORD R. CROMWELL.—I presume you know none of the freemen?—I do, intimately.

12582. Are there any of those Protestant freemen who have sons to whom the education given in the Chancel school would be an advantage?—The last freeman admitted was Mr. William Sparrow. His sole object in claiming his freedom was that his children, now that there was a good master in the school, should have the advantages originally intended to be conferred upon them by the grant.

12583. How many of the Protestant freemen, now upon the roll, have sons who could derive benefit from the endowment?—Thirteen, including those whose sons, now grown up, might have had it.

12584. Twenty-five years ago, when you became Town Clerk, you say there were between sixty and seventy freemen?—On reflection I think there were not so many. There were between fifty and sixty.

12585. At the present moment there are only twenty-three, so that in a quarter of a century two-thirds of them have disappeared?—Yes.

12586. Is it your opinion that during the next quarter of a century the remaining third will disappear?—No. I think the number has now reached a transition period. I expect to have a considerable number of applications, now that there is an advantage in being a freeman. Now that there is a good school there will be applications the moment the sons of those who are entitled to the freedom arrive at the proper age for going to school.

12587. LORD JUSTICE FRYGROUSE.—Is there any large class of persons in Chancel qualified to become freemen, and who would be likely to take advantage of the school?—Unquestionably so.

12588. Could you tell us, in round numbers, supposing the advantages of the school to become known and appreciated, how many persons are qualified to avail themselves of it?—If it was an object for them to get the education for their sons?—I would prefer taking time to answer that question—I would wish to give it some consideration.

12589. Is there a numerous class of such persons?—Unquestionably; there has been hitherto a strong inclination to avail of the school. During Mr. Kettlewell's period—he was always immersed in debt and difficulty—the school was a failure.

12590. You do not think the numbers of the freemen will decrease?—No; on the contrary, I think they will go on increasing at the proper time.

12591. What is the cost of procuring admission on the roll?—I get one guinea.

12592. Then, for a fee of one guinea, a person who has the qualification can secure the right?—Yes, and provided he is a Protestant, he can educate all his children. Catholics are excluded—which I think rather hard on me, for I am a Catholic, though my name is Luther. I wish to say, as one who takes a strong interest in education, that there is no doubt in the world that the college, as now established, is a great boon to the inhabitants of Chancel—that is, to those who are capable of availing of it; and I am quite sure, from the manner in which it has been conducted, and from my knowledge of the Rev. Mr. Hutchinson, the head master, which relates back to a much earlier period than the time during which I have been Town Clerk—that the college is one that should be maintained, and I say this in the most respectful manner possible;

Oct. 5, 1879.
 Mr. John T.
 Lister.

because it is unquestionably giving good value, and it is carrying out, and likely still further to carry out, the intentions of the donors.

12593. As you have mentioned that you are yourself a Catholic, and that you think it hard that you are excluded from the benefits of the school, I wish to ask you, do you think it would be satisfactory to either Catholics or Protestants to have a boarding school in which the boys were of mixed denominations?—I do not care to enter into that question, for this reason—our hierarchy have a strong objection to mixed education, but it is really no question of bigotry at all. A gentleman of great influence in this country, who was very much respected—I shall not mention his name, but his son is present to-day—was under the impression that by what is called mixed education—combined secular with separate religious instruction—Protestants and Catholics by growing up together would forget their mutual hatreds. That plan has been tried and disapproved, for our clergy adhere the result to be that, while the Protestants would get nothing from us, we would lose a great deal. I think it right to mention that I can state, as a fact, that there are numbers of persons who have the right to the freedom of Clonmel, principally by birth, but who, having left the town, and residing in other parts of the county, are outside the Parliamentary limits, and, therefore, so far as voting for members of Parliament is concerned, have no inducement to apply to have their names admitted on the roll. There is, however, nothing to prevent those persons, if they have sons, availing themselves of the school, as residents in Clonmel is not necessary to confer the right of taking advantage of the education.

Mr. Richard
 Bagwell, J.P.

Mr. RICHARD BAGWELL, J.P., examined.

12594. LORD JUSTICE FITZGERSON.—You desire to make a statement?—Yes; as the present representative, after my father, of Colonel Bagwell, I beg to say that I do not know whether I or my father are entitled to be freemen of the borough of Clonmel. We are neither of us enrolled, but I am satisfied that there are many persons who are entitled to be freemen, and who have not yet taken steps to secure their admission on the roll.

12595. We have, of course, no power in that matter. The Mayor is the responsible authority to decide on applications for admission of freemen?—The Mayor can decide only on applications that come before him.

12596. Certainly. The law puts it upon every man to find out his rights, and to assert them. Do you wish to add anything further?—I wish to say that there are over 100 Protestants in Clonmel, of the very class for which this school was founded, although having no right to be enrolled as freemen, they are burgesses of Clonmel, and within the spirit of the intention of the founders of the school, though not qualified as freemen.

12597. Then if, in place of "freemen," the words "burgesses" were used, you think there would be fully 100 persons who would be qualified and entitled to avail of the school?—Yes, and it would be of the highest importance to make that change, if possible. [The Commissioners adjourned.]

Oct. 3, 1879.

THIRTY-FIRST DAY—FRIDAY, OCTOBER 3, 1879, 11 o'CLOCK, A.M.

In the Town Hall, Enniskillen.

Present:—The EARL of ROSSE, Chairman; and RICHARD O'SHAUGHNESSY, Esq., M.P.; with JAMES O'BRIEN MEENEATH, Esq., LL.D., Secretary.

Rev. James B.
 Ansell, A.B.

Rev. JAMES BLAIR ANSELL, A.B., examined.

12598 CHAIRMAN.—You are the chaplain of Vaughan's Charity School, Tulisid?—I am.

12599. How long have you held that position?—My appointment dates from 1st April, 1862.

12600. What are your duties as chaplain?—At present I have the general superintendence under the institution, and I attend specially to the religious instruction of the children.

12601. You have the supreme control over the affairs of the school—on foot, the entire staff are under your directions?—They are.

12602. You are, in fact, the principal, or general manager?—Yes, but I always act under the direction of the Governors and Board of Auditors.

12603. Who are the Governors?—The Lord Primate, the Earl of Enniskillen, the Earl of Belmont, Rev. T. R. Robinson, B.D., Rev. E. Scemple, the Dean of Clogher, the Bishop of Derry, Lord O'Neill, Rev. A. Williamson, the Lord Chancellor of Ireland, the Earl of Euse, the Dean of Armagh, and the Archbishop of Armagh—thirteen in all.

12604. How are the Governors elected?—When a vacancy occurs the Governors co-opt a new member. For that purpose the quorum required is seven, but for ordinary business it is only five.

12605. Are there no ex-officio Governors?—Yes; there are three—the Bishop of Clogher, who is the Lord Primate; the Bishop of Derry, and the Rector of Drumboon. Mr. Scemple is at present the rector of that parish.

12606. How often do the Governors meet?—The Board of Governors meet annually; on the last Tuesday in November. They are summoned by a notice in the Dublin Gazette.

12607. That meeting, I believe, is held in Dublin?—It may be held in Dublin or in Armagh. There is no place specified. The Primate, as President, directs where the meeting is to be held.

12608. Who are the Board of Auditors?—They are elected annually. They consist, at present, of the Rev. Mr. Scemple, Rev. Mr. Williamson, and the Dean of Clogher.

12609. Are they appointed by the Board of Governors?—Yes; they form a sort of executive committee, for the general management of the institution.

12610. What matters are submitted for the decision of the general Board?—Matters of expenditure.

12611. Of course the ordinary expenditures must pass through the hands of the Board of Auditors?—It does, but any extra expenditure would be left to the general Board. The appointments of the masters and servants are made by the Auditors, subject to confirmation by the general Board.

12612. How often do the Board of Auditors meet?—Once a quarter.

12613. Must the three be in attendance, or can two transact business?—We have had a Board with only one Auditor present; but there is generally an adjournment and two can meet. The three Auditors, however, usually attend.

12614. Has one Auditor any authority to sign cheques?—No. Two Auditors must sign the cheques.

If only one Auditor attends, the necessary business done is transacted, and the Board is then adjourned.

12615. Is a meeting then commenced for a subsequent day, without waiting for the next regular Board day?—Yes.

12616. You keep the accounts of the charity?—Yes, and I pay the accounts for the Board.

12617. As chaplain, you superintend the religious instruction of the pupils?—I do.

12618. Is the school exclusively a Church school?—It is.

12619. What number of pupils are there in it at present?—There are forty-eight boys and twenty-eight girls on the roll; but one is absent on leave.

12620. The number is less now than it was twenty years ago?—Yes; by a rule of the general Board there has lately been a reduction of ten.

12621. Who admit the pupils?—Each Governor has the appointment of three boys and two girls; all other vacancies are filled by the quarterly Board.

12622. What is the course of instruction given in the school?—A plain English education, such as is given in good National schools. We do not profess to give anything more than that.

12623. The course of instruction in 1857 was stated to comprise "Reading, writing, grammar, geography, arithmetic, geometry, algebra, mensuration, and book-keeping."—All these subjects are taught at present.

12624. Is there any instruction given in agriculture?—There is no specific teaching in it, except that the agricultural class-book of the National Board is used in the boys' school.

12625. Is there a farm attached to the Institution?—There is a large farm surrounding it.

12626. How is that farm managed?—It is worked by day labourers, under the direction of a steward.

12627. Is the steward one of the officers of the Institution?—Yes.

12628. Are the pupils obliged to assist in keeping the house in order?—Yes, they keep the house clean. There is no servant kept, except a cook.

12629. Is there a charter for the school?—There is.

12630. I find that, amongst the original objects of the Institution, the children were to be instructed in linen manufacture. Has that requirement been acted upon?—There were looms purchased for the institution, but about thirty years ago they had to be sold off, and the requirement is now obsolete.

12631. Do you hold any other appointment except the one connected with the Institution?—I was curate of the parish previous to the passing of the Church Act, but have been since relieved from duty by the rectar. I only hold the curacy to maintain my position and standing in the diocese.

12632. It did not occupy your time?—No.

12633. The master of Vaughan's school has a salary of £20 a year. I presume he is resident?—He is boarded and lodged in the Institution.

12634. There are, in the Institution, a mistress at £40 a year, and a matron at £20 a year?—Yes, the mistress superintends the boys' side of the establishment.

12635. There is also a dehydrated light?—Yes, and she also assists in the cooking at the girls' side of the house. The girls too work in the laundry, which she superintends.

12636. Are the boys and girls entirely separated?—Yes; they are at different sides of the building, the daughter's house lying between. The only instruction which they receive together is the religious instruction.

12637. Have they separate playgrounds?—They have.

12638. What are the qualifications for admission to the school?—In poverty only of them?—Not exactly; but those appointed are usually the children of parents in indigent circumstances: they must be between the ages of nine and twelve, free from any disease, either mental or bodily, and able to read intelligibly; and, further, they must be legitimate.

12639. Is there any examination held?—Yes. I examine the children myself quarterly, and the Inspector of the Kensington Smith's schools examines them annually. There is a very strict examination held by him.

12640. Is that an examination of all the pupils in the Institution?—Yes.

12641. Is there any examination for admission?—I myself examine the children for admission; and any not qualified in reading, or in whom the doctor finds any defect, are rejected.

12642. Are there usually more candidates than there are vacancies?—A great many more. At present there are thirty candidates for three vacancies.

12643. If the pupils do not profit by the education, to the extent they should, are they obliged to leave the school?—We have had scarcely an instance, in any time, of any child being sent away for deficiency of the kind. We have been obliged to remove some for bad conduct.

12644. Is there any grant to the school, from the Kensington Smith's Board?—No.

12645. Do you merely get Mr. Radcliff, when he comes round to examine the Kensington Smith's schools in the county, to examine your schools?—Yes; and, I believe, he examines various schools in the county in the same way.

12646. The requirements of the Institution are brought before each quarterly meeting, and you get permission to have them supplied?—Yes; everything is entered in our book of "wants."

12647. What is the rule as to the execution of repairs which are urgent: as, for example, if the rain were coming in through the roof?—I apply to the Resident Governor, the Rev. Edward Somers.

12648. There is an account kept with the bank?—Yes; the Auditors have an account.

12649. The children, of course, are clothed at the expense of the institution?—They are.

12650. Is there any clothing made in the establishment?—The girls make their own clothing, but we have to get the boys' clothing made outside.

12651. Is there any tailoring carried on in the Institution?—No.

12652. Or shoemaking?—No, both clothing and shoes are made by contract.

12653. Is there any fund for apprenticing the boys and girls out?—Yes, but they very seldom avail themselves of the apprentice fund now. A few years ago there were so few applications for apprenticeships that the Auditors, in addition, gave gratuities to boys going to service, shops, or offices.

12654. Do you keep a record as to what becomes of the pupils, after they leave the Institution?—I do. I have a book giving an account of all the boys and girls that have been in the institution from its foundation. It does not, however, specify exactly what became of them all, except they were apprenticed.

12655. As a rule, are the children healthy?—They are. We seldom have a case of sickness, and our doctor has very seldom to attend.

12656. Is the doctor paid by the society?—Yes.

12657. How do the Governors arrange as to their right of nomination of pupils?—Each Governor is entitled to nominate a certain number of boys and girls: when a vacancy arises, amongst those on the list of any particular Governor, he gets a notification and fills it up.

12658. Mr. O'Brianmacher.—Is there any attempt made to teach linen manufacture and handicraft, as the testator seems to have desired?—No; but the boys work in the garden.

12659. Do the boys, when they leave the school, generally go to trades?—Not so much now. Trades have been, as a rule, given up, and very few go to service. They generally go into offices and shops, and also into the police, the army, and the navy.

12660. We know that for going into shops, and taking clerkships, and positions of that kind, a very good primary education is necessary. Do you find that

Oct. 1, 1876.
Rev. James R.
Acheson, Esq.,

the pupils of the institution are successful in those walks of life—I thank they are.

12661. Is there any systematic mode of inquiry as to the career in life of former pupils of your schools?—There is no systematic mode of inquiry, but they generally write to me, or to the master.

12662. The testator made provision for giving pupils some little maintenance after they leave the school?—Yes, that is still kept up. The boys going to situations get £5 as a gratuity, where they do not get the benefit of an apprenticeship, £7 or £10.

12663. Is that money paid to them in one sum?—No, it is paid in instalments. At the end of the first year a boy gets £1 10s. If he continues to be of good character, and at the end of the second year the same, and so on. The entire sum is paid within five years.

12664. Do all the payments depend upon the good behaviour of the child?—They do.

12665. Therefore there ought to be a pretty well organized machinery for the supervision of those who have left the school?—We communicate with the clergyman of the parishes where they reside, and, in each case, we request certificates, signed both by the clergyman and the master.

12666. Do you personally look after that matter?—I have to do so.

12667. Although your title is that of chaplain you have other duties than those of chaplain to discharge?—Yes. When the Resident Governor became a very old man I was appointed, by a general Board, to take charge of the accounts of the institution.

12668. Is it also your duty to supervise the general discipline of the establishment?—Yes, but I think the chaplain always did that.

12669. Did the chaplain always reside in the institution?—He did.

12670. The testator provided that £50 a year should be paid to the chaplain. That was, I suppose, when he had only religious duties to discharge?—I cannot say. In my time, and also in that of my predecessor, the salary has been £100 a year.

12671. Do you find any difficulty in maintaining a proper separation between the boys and girls in the institution?—We had difficulty some years ago, but we are very fortunate in our master and mistress now. I have not heard of anything wrong, and I do not believe there is anything.

12672. If there were anything wrong, I presume it would come under your notice?—It would.

12673. Your account of expenditure contains an item of £24 14s 6d for cloth. What was that for?—That was cloth for jackets and trousers for the boys.

12674. Did you get that by tender?—No, we got it from the old-established house of Sykes's, in Dame-street, Dublin.

12675. Do you generally adopt the principle of purchasing by tender?—Not for such things as cloth. The making of clothes and boots is done by contract, and we have contracts for the supply of meat and bread.

12676. Are the public invited to send in tenders?—Yes.

12677. Do the girls make any of the boys' clothes?—Yes. They make the boys' shirts and sheets, and, in fact, anything they can.

12678. Up to what age do the girls remain in the institution?—The usual rule is that they should remain for five years after they enter; but, by permission of the Authorities, they may remain till they get situations. We do not take a girl out.

12679. Is there any distinctive training in house hold duties?—No. We have no facility in such training.

12680. What pursuits in life do the girls usually follow, after they leave the school?—Some become dressmakers; some go home to their friends; very few go to service. In fact, for service they would require a little roughing before they could take down to it.

12681. Is there any attempt made, in the institution, to turn the girls as dressmakers?—They make their own clothes, and knit their own stockings.

12682. Is the mistress skilled in those matters, and competent to teach them?—It is the schoolmistress who instructs in those things.

12683. Is she a certificated schoolmistress?—Yes, from Kildare-place. She was herself formerly a pupil in this institution.

12684. Your accounts contain this charge—"Labourers' Mills, 23s 14s."—What does that include?—The weekly tolls, sent up to me by the steward, for agricultural labour.

12685. Are the dairy premises large?—They are very comfortable and complete.

12686. Is the dairy used only for supplying the school, or do you sell any of the produce?—Our surplus butter is sold.

12687. Is there any considerable surplus?—Not very much. The chief use of the dairy is for the supplying of the school.

12688. A sum of £96 3s 4d. is charged for making the dairy. What is the meaning of that item?—The dairy was, unfortunately, burned down by an accidental fire, and that sum was expended on rebuilding it.

12689. Were the repairs done under contract?—Yes.

12690. The accounts for last year also contain this item—"Week done at Tubrid, general cleaning, £87 4s 8d."—Is that an ordinary item of expenditure?—Not at all. That was an extraordinary item, for putting the place into proper order—plumbing, and so on.

12691. What is the average yearly expenditure for that purpose?—Over £30.

12692. The accounts also contain this item under the head of "Outside bills"—"Tradesmen at Letter Kean, Letterkeon master; Letterkeon workmen, £43 7s."—Letterkeon is the estate school, built by the Government, and kept up by them under the National Board.

12693. That school was formerly a denominational school?—It was so until within the last few years.

12694. Are there any Roman Catholics attending it now?—I think there may be one or two on the roll, but, as a rule, they are not allowed by their own clergy to attend it. They have a school not very far from it.

12695. The testator thought he was providing a permanent endowment for 300 boys and 250 girls. It appears that he miscalculated what could be done with the money he left?—Altogether, so it turns out.

12696. Did the school and endowment, at any time, prove adequate for the numbers he miscalculated?—Never. When I came there were seventy boys, but the number had to be reduced twice afterwards. It was in 1838 that the girls' school was first put into order.

12697. ORANGLAND.—I believe the endowment, when it originally reached the hands of the trustees, was only about half the amount the testator expected it would be?—Yes, there was a great miscalculation on the part of the founder.

12698. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—What has been the expenditure on the institution for the last five years?

—The expenditure for the year ending November 1st, 1875, was £1,535 7s 9d. In that year we had the schoolrooms all put in order.

12699. What was the expenditure for the next year?—£1,435, which also includes a large item for carpentry and plumbing.

12700. Are such repairs done under the supervision of any architect or surveyor, or are they left to the contractors alone?—I think the Resident Governor took charge of those. He has had pretty good experience. Part of the house is very old, as it was built in 1783.

12701. In the year 1877 the expenditure is charged as £1,377?—Yes. The general run of the expenditure is between £1,300 and £1,600 a year.

12702. When did the reduction in the number of pupils take place?—The last reduction was in 1877.

12703. The balance at the end of any one year's account does not of course represent the savings of that year alone?—Not at all. It represents the accumulated savings of many years, and is required for the payments usually made in the following February.

12704. CHAIRMAN.—Who was your predecessor as chaplain?—The Rev. Garrett Nugent, who is now the Bishop of Meath's chaplain.

12705. Do you know why he resigned?—I am not competent, I think, to give the reasons of his resignation.

12706. You spoke of the school being inspected by Mr. Budkin. Is it inspected by him more than once a year?—Only once a year.

12707. You do not think it necessary that he should inspect it oftener?—No. I think it would be too severe on the teachers to have to make up for an inspection every half-year. They have a good deal to do, in looking after the establishment, as well as giving instruction.

12708. Does Mr. Budkin come at any stated time?—Yes, generally about the 20th June.

12709. Would it not be more satisfactory if he came at uncertain times, and examined the school as he found it?—We would be happy to see him if he did, he would find us always prepared.

12710. In the accounts there appears an item for girls' clothing. Is there any bought ready made?—No, not for the girls. That charge was mostly for materials, for which we deal almost entirely with Messrs. Forster and Pollock in Dublin.

12711. The estate school, which has been referred to, under the National Board?—It is.

12712. Is it a mixed school?—Yes, and it has both a master and a mistress.

12713. Are the pupils principally Protestants?—I say my duty are all Protestants now.

12714. Are there any Roman Catholics in the district?—Yes, there are; but they have a school themselves in the neighbourhood.

12715. I suppose you visit the estate school, to give religious instruction?—Yes. I am the manager of it.

12716. Is it near the institution?—Yes. It is about a mile from Tubrid, between Tubrid and Kesh.

12717. You spoke of a steward that superintends the farm?—How is he paid?—At present we have no steward. Our half-acre is in the capacity just now.

12718. Do the boys assist on the farm, to any great extent?—No; they had to be withdrawn from the farm, in the connection with the country people was found to have a very injurious effect on them.

12719. Then, in fact, the greater part of the labour on the farm is done by hired labourers?—Yes.

12720. As the boys worked without pay, probably they were not of much use on the farm?—Very little. I think their labour was valued at £10 a year.

12721. There were no rewards given to them for working on the farm?—The boys got no compensation; and now, except at harvest time when there is a pressure of work, they do not go to work on the farm at all. They then go under the superintendence of the master, as we wish to keep them solely under his.

12722. Mr. O'SHEA.—Do the girls take any part in the management of the dairy?—They do the milking, and all the washing.

12723. Do they make the butter?—No; the dairy-maid does that.

12724. CHAIRMAN.—Do the girls assist in the kitchen at all?—They do.

12725. It is part of their education, that they should try to pick up what they can of cooking?—Yes, and with that object, two go each week to assist in the kitchen in the chaplain's house, and four others are appointed to the kitchen in the Institution, but then duties in those situations are not allowed to interfere with their attendance in the school.

12726. Who superintends the girls in the laundry?—The cook and dairy-maid; she has the general superintendence of the girls out of school.

12727. What does the matron do?—The matron is in charge of the master, and she superintends the boys' side of the establishment, in case of illness, she looks after the sick children, and she has also charge of the clothing.

12728. Does she keep the stores of provisions, and so on?—No; they are all under my charge.

12729. How is the cleaning of the boys' side of the house done?—The boys do that themselves, and keep it very nicely. It is the duty of the matron to see that it is properly done.

12730. Mr. O'SHEA.—Who is the present medical attendant to the Institution?—Dr. Walsh, of Keshmiltown.

12731. How long has he held the office?—About five years.

12732. How is he paid?—He gets a salary of £30 a year, and an allowance of £5 a year for travelling expenses.

12733. How often does he visit the school?—Whenever he is called upon. We can have him present at any time in three hours.

12734. Does he look after the sanitary condition of the place?—He does.

12735. The former medical attendant at the Institution was Dr. Graham?—He was.

12736. At what rate was he paid?—At the same rate, except that he had no allowance for travelling expenses, as he lived within a mile of the school.

12737. Under what circumstances did he come to be the medical officer of the Institution?—He was, I understand, removed by order of the General Board.

12738. CHAIRMAN.—Does the present medical officer never visit the school, unless he is summoned?—He often attends the meetings of the Auditors' Board, which are held in the school.

12739. Mr. O'SHEA.—Do not you find it inconvenient to have the doctor residing so far away?—We have never found any inconvenience as yet.

12740. It appears from the minutes of your Board that Dr. Walsh was attending at the school in May, 1871, in conjunction with Dr. Graham. The entry is—

"The report of Dr. Walsh and Dr. Graham was read, and arrangements were directed to be made for carrying out the improvements suggested, which appear in the Report to be important."

—On that occasion Dr. Walsh was brought down to go over the Institution in conjunction with Dr. Graham, to inquire into the sanitary condition, and to make recommendations to improve it.

12741. Dr. Walsh having been called in from a distance on a special occasion, is it possible, a man of eminence?—I should think he is. He is one of the first doctors in Keshmiltown.

12742. I find this minute of a meeting held on the 9th February, 1873, at which Lord Keshmiltown, Mr. Williamson, and Mr. Scoble were present:—

"Inspected into the steward's farm accounts, which not being satisfactory, it is considered right to require the steward to be suspended for the present. The agent having directed the removal of Sandy Irwin and William Algie from the work, it is fully confirmed by the Board."

What was the nature of the complaint in reference to the steward and the farm account?—That does not occur within my department.

12743. CHAIRMAN.—Is there any doctor living near the school, who could be summoned in case of urgency?—There is a doctor at Enniscorthy and another at Portagee; but we would have our own doctor more quickly from Keshmiltown, summoning him by telegraph, there being a railway the whole way.

12744. This is hardly a school that could send forward candidates to the Intermediate examinations?—We have not sent forward any.

12745. I suppose the education given is hardly of a sufficiently high grade?—The school was in connection with the Science and Art Department, South Kensington, and several prizes were obtained, from that source, about five or six years ago.

12746. It is not now in connection with that Department?—Not at present, though the master would wish it to be. He could bring pupils forward for those examinations.

Oct. 3, 1876.

Mr. Mayne
C. Mansel, &c.

Mr. MATTHEW CROFT MAYNE, A.P., continued.

12747. CHAIRMAN.—You are the agent over the estates of Vaughan's Charity?—I am.

12748. How long have you been so?—I was appointed about the year 1845.

12749. In the report of the Royal Commission of 1857, we find the object of the endowment thus stated:—

"By the will of George Vaughan, esq., dated 22nd June, 1733, certain freehold and leasehold estates in the counties of Farnham and Dorset were devised to the then Prince of Ireland and other bishops, in trust, to purchase lands of inheritance, in free-parish, until the income of his estates so devised should amount to £5,000 a year; and that, when the said purchase should be complete, his trustees should appropriate a moiety thereof (£2,500 a year) to the erection and support of a schoolhouse and school, to contain 300 boys and 300 girls, to be maintained, educated, and instructed in the branches of the liberal manufactures, and in husbandry. The testator died in the year 1763, when his estates were found to produce only a yearly income of £1,994 10s. available for the purpose of his said will; whereupon an agreement was entered into between the trustees and the trustees of Mr. Vaughan, to divide the estates equally between them; and this agreement was confirmed by an Act of the Parliament of Ireland, passed in the year 1774 (13 and 14 Geo. III, chap. 38), and the Farnham and certain other persons were nominated trustees and governors, and constituted a Corporation, with power to supply vacancies, so that the number of governors might always be thirteen, and no more. The estate of this charity comprised 4,178 acres and 14 perches, in the parishes of Long, and county of Farnham, and produced at present a net annual income of £1,337 6s. 3d., in addition to the demesne lands attached to the house, which contain about 69 acres of arable land, 39 acres of meadow, and 20 acres of plantation. The governors also have a sum of £6,843 17s. 8d. of new three per cent. Government Stock, standing in their names."

What is the state of the property at present?—The entire property comprises 4,293 acres, according to a survey and valuation made in 1863; but of that 1,046 acres are set in perpetuity, and only produces £117 7s. 9d. a year. The lands set to tenants produce, as appears by the rental, £1,818 17s. 2d. a year, and there is an additional income of about £45 a year, derived from lands, the grazing of which is set from year to year.

12750. Does the £1,818 17s. 2d. include the £117 7s. 9d.?—Yes.

12751. The rental has increased considerably within the last twenty years?—Yes; it has been increased on the expiration of leases, and by the additional savings of valuations kept.

12752. Are you agent over any adjoining estates?—No, but I am agent for the Marquis of Ely, in the county, and I also hold some small estates, none of which, however, immediately adjoin Tulse.

12753. What is the Government valuation of the Tulse estate, excluding the portion set in perpetuity?—The estate, excluding that portion, was, according to the tenement valuation published in 1863, valued at £1,853, including the valuation of the farm itself, which was £125. So that the valuation of the lands let to tenants was £1,538.

12754. The rental appears to be a little above the Government valuation?—Nearly £100 a year.

12755. From your knowledge of the letting value of land in the district do you think that is a fair rental?—I think the lands are very fairly let.

12756. Are the accounts for the farm kept separately?—The steward usually keeps the farm accounts; but we have not had a regular steward for nearly two years past. A man is, however, acting temporarily, and he keeps the accounts.

12757. I find the minute of a meeting held on the 9th February, 1875:—

"Inquired into the steward's farm accounts, which not being satisfactory, it is considered right to require the steward to be suspended for the present. The agent having directed the removal of Sandy Irwin and William Algie from the work, it is fully confirmed by the Board."

Then there follows a direction that the possession of his house be gotten up from Sandy Irwin, and that William Algie be removed from the establishment at once. In what position were those two men?—Sandy Irwin was merely a labourer on the farm, William Algie, who was the son of the steward, was also a labourer.

12758. Had the steward a house on the farm?—The steward's house is in the yard, and within the walls of the institution.

12759. What circumstances led to the removal of the steward?—He was incapacitated. He had been a long time in the place, and his family did not get on well in the yard. His wife it was thought kept too much poultry, and it was imagined that the corn and other things went to the poultry. In fact there was a good many little things found lost, and the removal of the steward became necessary.

12760. Mr. O'Brian, was he dismissed on that occasion?—He was either discharged immediately afterwards, or he was allowed to resign.

12761. Has any steward been employed since?—We had one for about two years after that, but we found there was great difficulty in his being able to get on with the labourers. We thought he was not getting sufficient work done, and that he had not head to provide for the wants of the institution, as regards having the cows to calve at a particular time; so we removed him. From time to time I tried to get a steward, and while looking for one we were obliged to employ a temporary man, and this arrangement has worked so well that lately I have not been looking for one, but we intend to do so. We find it very difficult to get a proper person. In the first place, there has been an old-standing rule or kind of law, that the steward should not have a family, or if he had they should be very small children living on the premises. I found it very difficult to get a competent married man with a good character who had not a family. That is where the chief difficulty consists.

12762. What becomes of the produce of the farm?—A great deal of that goes to the school. We give credit to the farm for the quantity of potatoes and milk supplied to the school.

12763. After supplying the school out of the produce of the farm, what does the remainder of the produce realize?—There is very little sold.

12764. In addition to the income from leased property, there is also interest on money invested?—Yes. There is £1,191 1s. in Government stock at present, and that produces £35 14s. 8d. a year.

12765. The rental is, as you state, about £1,838 a year. How much of that is available for the purpose of the charity?—There are a number of incidental expenses each half-year, such as rates and taxes, &c. Last half-year I lodged in bank £279 13s. out of a total debt of £861. The difference I paid in out-door expenses, for which I have vouchers. In the previous half-year I lodged £722 12s. 3d. to the credit of the Governors, and I took credit for £173 6s. 3d. incidentals, making a total of £895 15s. 1d.

12766. Show the outgoings for which you set back credit?—For the half-year ending May, 1875:—Par rate, £2 16s. 4d.; county cess allowed tenants, £27 10s. 10d.; one year's quit rent, £20 15s. 8d.; two mowings, £8 7s. and 6s. 3d.; county cess, £12 15s. 9d.; cost of Crookwell Castle, £1 10s. This is an old rent, and we have always paid the tenant for taking care of it. Then there were other payments:—Thomas Ashman, half-year's salary, £10; William Gibson, bill of labour and expenses, £14 11s. 4d. These are estate expenses—salary to the bailiff, £12 10s.; agent's fees, £41, making with other small items, £173 6s. 3d. for the half-year. The expenditure was much heavier in the next half-year, when it amounted to £200.

12767. It appears then that the expenditure shows by the chairman's account, and the outgoings paid by you leave very little or no balance?—Very little.

12768. CHAIRMAN.—How did the security to

Thomas Achmen arise?—He was an old man who held a farm, and when he was in declining health, his son was falling off into ruin, and it would have become necessary to eject him; but as he was the representative of a very old family on the estate, the Governors thought it much better to give him an annuity and get up possession of his farm quietly.

12770. I suppose you get an increase of rent for his farm?—Yes; the rent in his time was £35 a year, and the present tenant pays £45, so that we get an increase of £10 a year, which will remain after the annuity comes.

12771. In the National School, which is on the estate, under your supervision?—No.

12772. Who is the manager of it?—The Rev. Mr. Anselmy.

12774. Do you think that the course of instruction might be modified, so as to train the young people as household servants?—I think there is a great want of provision for the girls after they leave the school, and I doubt whether they are not too well brought up for their position in life; I think the girls' department is not such a success as the boys', I have known some of the girls employed as domestic servants, and they did not do well, but that was not of late years.

12775. Mr. O'BRIEN:—There is also in Ireland a want of good managers of small houses. It appears these girls go out as dressmakers, and I think we may take it from your evidence, that their training is not such as to make them good housekeepers?—I always thought that the girls were not so much a success as the boys; I think they are treated too kindly.

12776. I suppose you are aware that in England and elsewhere, it is now found possible to teach all classes, including the very class to which the girls in the school belong, domestic duties and cooking?—Yes; it would be very useful if that were done in our school.

12777. The books of the Institution show, that, in 1851, there was an unusual outbreak of ringworm, scrofula, &c., and that you called in additional medical advice—was that in Dr. Graham's time?—It was; illness has frequently broken out after the holidays, and sometimes a newly admitted child brings it into the house.

12778. You do not attribute it to any sanitary defect?—Certainly not.

12779. CHAIRMAN.—Are the rents punctually paid?—There is hardly any arrears; it is only in the last half-year that there has been anything worth noticing.

12780. Mr. O'BRIEN:—How far from Kinnakill is the school?—About eleven and a half or twelve miles.

12781. Are many of the tenantry on the school property, and on the neighbouring properties, Roman Catholics?—They are chiefly Protestants, except on one townland, where they are chiefly Roman Catholics.

12782. Are the Roman Catholics that are there, small or large farmers?—They are just the same as the average in the district, holding farms worth from £8 to £12 a year; the land is very indifferent, but the people are very quiet and respectable.

12783. CHAIRMAN.—It appears that, in 1837, there was £6,065 invested in Government stock, and the amount at present in stock is, you state, only £1,191. How has it been diminished?—I have looked over the books, and I find that there were, from time to time, orders entered in the Governors' Minute Book, for the sale of Stock for particular purposes. I can get for you from Mr. La Touche of the Munster Bank (who was then Governor of La Touche's Bank) an exact return of the purchases and sales of Stock which took place from time to time, if you so desire; but, on calculating the various sums mentioned in the minute books, they come very nearly to the difference in the amount of the Stock now invested, and the amount then returned.

In the year 1848, it appears there was a sum of £7,563 9s. 11d. Stock, to the credit of the Governors. In November, 1851, there was an order made to sell Stock for building, not to exceed £1,500. In the year 1854, there was an order to sell Stock for building and repairs, a further sum of £1,500, but I do not think all these orders for sales were carried out in full, as our building did not come to quite so much as that. Then in 1856, there was a resolution passed to place at the disposal of the Lord Primate, for the enlargement of the parish church of Desmuckan, a sum not exceeding £500. In November, 1858, there was an order to sell Stock, to pay the balance on Tuhral works, £500, and in the same year to complete offices at Tuhral, £550; and to build a schoolhouse, £300. I think that was the lattermost National School. In the year 1859, there was a direction that a sum of £80 should be placed at the disposal of the trustees, for the completion of the office. In 1860, there was an order for the sale of Stock to produce £250, to replace money belonging to a building fund, which had been expended in support of the institution. In 1861, there was an order made to sell £350 stock to meet the balance of the year's expenses, and the sum voted for farm improvements on the property. In the same year, there was an order to sell Stock, to pay Mr. Porter, who had been the treasurer, and with whom there was a very long account, on foot of which the Governors thought the balance would be in favour of the Institution, but it turned out that he had overpaid his account by £210 18s. 5d., and it became necessary to sell out Stock to pay him that amount. In 1862, there was an order to sell out £600, to build a police barrack in Kesh.

12784. Was that barrack let to the Government, for the occupation of the police?—Yes.

12785. Mr. O'BRIEN:—How did you come to expend so much on the building of a police barrack?—A plan was proposed, which the Governors approved of, and they ordered stock to be sold out for the purpose of building the barrack.

12786. What rent do the Government pay for it?—£30 a year. It is the headquarters for the district.

12787. How was the site occupied before the barrack was built?—It was a waste plot in the town of Kesh.

12788. Do you regard that expenditure as a good investment?—Certainly.

12789. CHAIRMAN.—Do the Government keep the barrack in repair?—They keep the inside in repair, and we keep the outside.

12790. Were there any further sales of Stock?—There were two or three more orders to sell, but I do not think they were all acted on. They are "Ordered to sell, to meet deficiency of the year's expenditure, £160, and balance of expenditure on barrack, £40, making £200," and "Ordered to build a farm-house, £250." I cannot find, however, that that money was drawn.

12791. Mr. O'BRIEN:—Do you find any entry in the books about the farm-house?—There was only an entry that it was ordered, but we have built no farm-house, so I take it for granted that the money was not drawn out. The books also show an order to invest part of the price of timber. We cut down an old wood that was degenerating, and we realised about £200 out of it.

12792. CHAIRMAN.—Was there any other sale of stock?—Yes, "Ordered to sell for purchase of globe lands £1,061, and cost of traverse." Those were globe lands that lay in the centre of the property belonging to the Institution, and they were purchased from the Church Temporalities Commissioners.

12793. What additional rental do you get for that £1,061?—I think it produces £30 a year at present. It is a very bad order.

12794. It would appear that the Governors have been spending more than the annual income upon the Institution?—Yes, and some five years ago they were obliged temporarily to reduce the number of children.

12795. Mr. O'BRIEN:—They also appear to have, at one period, allowed the accounts of their treasurer to remain uninvestigated for some time.—That was a great many years ago. Mr. Porter was at the same time one of the Governors, as well as auditor and treasurer.

15798. Do you act as treasurer now?—No, the bank is the treasurer; but I act as secretary. Mr. Linton was for some time solicitor and secretary, and the meetings were generally held at his house in Dublin. After his death I was appointed secretary, and a gentleman residing in Kinsale has been appointed solicitor.

15799. CHAIRMAN.—Why was the sum of £500, which you have mentioned, given for the enlargement of the parish church?—The church is almost in the school-house yard; at least it adjoins it, and the children attend the church.

15797. Mr. O'BRIEN.—Have there been any defalcations on the part of persons entrusted with the money or goods of the institution?—Not that I know of. Mr. Porter, as treasurer, was at one time called upon to pay a balance of £200 or £70 which appeared, on looking over some accounts furnished by himself, to be due by him, and as there was some delay in the payment of the amount, the Governors ordered a public accountant to investigate the accounts, and he found there was a very large balance the other way.

15798. Has there been any instance of default on the part of any of the Governors?—Not that I know of.

15799. It is only right to say that these are questions suggested by a person in the neighbourhood. His letter, perhaps, refers to supposed default on the part of Mr. Porter?—I suppose so. Mr. Porter could not produce vouchers for certain payments, as he kept his accounts in a very bad way, mixed up with his own private accounts, and he was discharged with them, for which I am satisfied he ought to have got credit.

15800. Who audits the accounts now?—The three auditors do so, and some of the Governors in Dublin audit Mr. Annan's account.

15801. The agricultural training, intended to have been given in this school, seems to have completely died out—do you think agricultural schools are at all practicable?—I was opposed to taking the boys away from the farm, as I thought it was a very good thing for them, and that they gave good assistance on the farm; but the Governors thought that the boys got bad habits from being so much with the labourers, and indeed they did learn to smoke and acquire other bad habits.

The Rt. Hon.
the Earl of Barnard, &c.

The Right Hon. the EARL OF BARNARD, &c. &c., examined.

12803. CHAIRMAN.—You are one of the Governors of Vaughan's Charity?—I am; I was appointed in the year 1852, and my first attendance, so far as I remember, was at the next Board meeting in Dublin, in the year 1853. For nearly a year and a half I was one of the Board of auditors, or sub-committee, meeting at Tuohy's quarterly; but I resigned, finding that I could not very conveniently attend regularly, and also that the business done at the meetings of the auditors was really of a very petty character, such as installing accounts to be paid, driving chaises, and small matters of that kind; besides, the other matters that came before them were things that I was not very well conversant with, and therefore I suggested that one of the other Governors, the present Dean of Clagher, who had only been recently appointed a Governor, and who appeared to take a good deal of interest in the school, should be elected, if he would accept the office. The reason I had accepted the office at all, which I did very unwillingly, was this, that there was nobody else, according to the old rule, who could very well take it. The practice had been to have one lay and two clerical auditors, one of whom is the rector of Drumkoreen. For a long time Lord Kinsale was the lay auditor, but he was filled of late years, and he was unable to attend to business in the way he used to do formerly. Out of thirteen Governors then only remained three lay Governors, one of whom was the Lord Chancellor, and another Lord Erne, neither of whom could attend, and, therefore, I was pressed upon me by the Board that I should accept the office temporarily. I took it for one year, and I think I attended two out of the four meetings held. Then I was obliged to take it again for last year, but I found I could not attend the first meeting after my re-appointment, and when the time for the second meeting drew near, as I found I should not be likely to be able to attend that either, I requested the Lord Primate to reconsider the matter, and he called a meeting of the Board in Dublin, at which another Governor was appointed as auditor in my place. I am not very conversant with what takes place in the school itself, but I know generally what they do at the Board meetings in Dublin.

12803. How are the pupils appointed?—Each Governor has three boys and two girls upon his list. The running boys and girls are what they call on the Board's list—that is, the appointments to those places rest with the Board of Auditors. The practice is this: when one of the pupils upon my list, for instance, leaves the school the chaplain sends me a notice, and calls upon me to appoint another. If I do not appoint within three months the vacancy comes to the Board of Auditors. Very often I find that I have not got a candidate to appoint. I do not know what the experience of other Governors may be; but mine is, that the vacancies are not very much sought after. I have occasionally been asked to appoint a boy or girl, and I have also been asked to exchange vacancies with another Governor, but no regular candidates applying to me for vacancies I have not had a great many. I do not think the school is either very much known or very much sought after. On one occasion I remember sending a child of one of my own tenants; but his mother took him away shortly after his admission. I was absent from home, in America, between four and five years, during which time I gave my vacancies to the Board.

12804. How is the number of pupils in the institution regulated?—That is regulated by the amount of the money we have to spend; and when we have found that the income was not likely to meet the wants of the school, owing not to any decrease in the income, but to the increase in the prices of various things required in a large establishment, the Board passed a resolution requesting the Governors such to suspend appointing to one of his vacancies for a time. When there was a change of schoolmasters there was a permanent reduction; I think that took place two years ago. Mr. Leonard had been the schoolmaster for fifty years, and when he died we could not get another master at the same salary he had—namely, £50 a year. There was formerly an assistant master, but it was found that he did not get on very well, and it was considered advisable to endeavour to do with only one master, and, of course, one master could only attend to a limited number of boys.

12805. Mr. O'BRIEN.—Are I to understand that the funds would hardly support two masters?—I am not prepared to say that the funds would not support two masters, as far as the income goes; but it was found that the second master was not plying well with the other master.

12806. On the occasion of the mother taking away her child did she state what her reasons were?—No, not to me, she merely took the child away.

12807. CHAIRMAN.—The will of the founder provided that a preference should be given to the children of his own and his successors' tenants. Has there been such a preference given?—I do not remember having ever, either personally or as auditor, received an application to appoint the child of a tenant.

12808 Is the rest of the tenant's estate held by his successors or descendants?—I think Colonel Irvine holds half of it. He is the husband, I believe, of one of Mr. Vaughan's descendants.

12809 Mr. O'SHEEN.—Does your lordship approve of the view that the girls should be taught domestic duties more than they are?—The only thing that occurs to me, as to the way it would be advisable to teach them, is to go to further expense in the way of getting some competent person to teach cookery, and other domestic work. It does not appear, from what I know and have heard, that there is anybody at present in the school qualified to teach them those things. There is only one cook, who is merely a plain cook and dairymaid, but, remember, any further expenditure would necessitate a reduction in the number of pupils.

12810 CHAIRMAN.—Do the Governors obtain instructions from any of the landlords the distinct sense that the money is properly looked after?—I can hardly answer that question. The Governors, as a rule, do not attend at the school. I never was at the school before I was appointed a Governor; and I only attended there once afterwards until I became an auditor, when I only attended two meetings, and we certainly did not on those occasions seek any such assurance.

12811 Do the Governors often visit the institution?—No, excepting the Auditors. Many of the Governors are not connected with this part of the country at all; for instance, the Lord Chancellor, and Lord O'Neill; and in former times the Lord Chief Baron. Formerly five of the bishops were ex-officio Governors, but two of their bishoprics have been merged, and I believe, the vacancies so caused have been filled up by co-opted members. The Primate always takes the chair as Bishop of Clogher. The Vice-Chancellor for the year is nominated by the president, when he is present, which he usually is.

12812 Can you suggest any changes in the educational course, to meet the wants of the district?—I do not know that I can, for the class of boys attending the school; they are of that class that would now be just as well educated in a National school; the only difference is, that, in this Institution, the pupils are boarded and clothed, so that it is really a charity for relieving persons in reduced circumstances, by giving a good education to them, as boarders, without any charge.

12813 Do you think that the tenants on the estate know that they have the right to a preference, if they apply for it, of sending their children to the school?—I really do not know whether they do or not; the estate is a long way from where I live, and probably they might prefer to have their children at home; they get just as good an education in the National school belonging to the estate. I think many farmers who are at all comfortably off would think it beneath them to send their children to the Charter School.

Mr. THOMAS NASH, examined.

12814 CHAIRMAN.—You are the master of the school?—I am.

12815 Have you any masters or pupil teachers?—I have four or five monitors.

12816 Are they paid?—They get a gratuity of about 30s. a quarter divided among them, they are the senior pupils, and the boys of the best character, on whom we can depend.

12817 Do you find that, with their assistance, you are able to attend to all the scholars?—Yes.

12818 Is any addition to the staff desirable?—I am better satisfied that it should remain as it is, I have some boys that I can thoroughly depend upon, and the others get on very well under them.

12819 I suppose you exercise a general superintendence, under the chaplain?—Yes; I keep up the discipline of the school, and have complete control of the children in all matters of education. The chaplain acts as superintendent of the school.

12820 If at any time you do not happen to be present, has the senior boy any authority to keep order?—He keeps order and superintends the learning of the house at night.

12821 Do you assist the chaplain in giving religious instruction?—I give religious instruction for half an hour in the morning—from a quarter to eight to a quarter past eight—and the chaplain gives it at night. The chaplain also reads prayers morning and evening.

12822 Do you go to church, on Sundays, with the district?—Yes; we have one wing of the church, to which we have a private entrance from the yard attached to the school. The boys sit at one side is church, and the girls at the other.

12823 The school is inspected once a year by Mr. Dalton?—It is. His reports, which I have here, are most favourable.

12824 Are prizes given at these examinations to the best boys?—No, there are no rewards given.

12825 If there were rewards given, would it not be an advantage?—The chaplain gave them one year himself, and they were a great encouragement.

12826 Is there any trouble in getting the boys to keep the house clean?—No; there is no trouble in getting them to do anything. They do the industrial work quite willingly. They keep the lavatory in order, pump the water to the house, take in coal, and do all work of that kind.

12827 Beyond going out now and again in harvest time, there is no industrial training on the farm?—We have a little garden in which they work in the seasons, and in which they cultivate vegetables for the use of the house.

12828 Where do the pupils usually come from?—We have them from several counties—this county, the county Cavan, county Larkinn, a few from Derry, one from Down, some from Armagh, twelve or fourteen from Dublin, one or two from Wicklow, and one from Tipperary.

12829 Do you look after the boys, after they leave the school?—A gratuity is allowed to boys who are in employment, and they have to send in a certificate before getting the instalments of that gratuity. I have not had much experience myself, as I have been only two years in the school.

12830 Do you desire to add anything to the evidence which we have received about this school?—As to preparing the boys for the Science and Art examinations, their education is so very low, when they enter the school, that it would be a matter of great difficulty to do so. They can hardly read the second-class National school-book, and very often the reasons given for seeking their admission to our school is, that they were in a place where they could get no education. The Institution is only a primary school, and if you work the seniors up too high, you could not do justice to the others. There is a boy in the school, nine years old, who can barely read a little, and can do no arithmetic whatever. Even if we worked hard the result would not be worth the trouble.

Rev. Felix
Hackett, &c.

REV. FELIX HACKETT, &c., examined.

12831. CHAIRMAN.—You are one of the Roman Catholic clergymen in Enniskillen. On what point do you wish to give evidence?—I wish to give you some information on the state of Catholic education, primary and intermediate, and on the feelings of the Catholic community of Enniskillen on the subject. I am now in my fourth year in Enniskillen, and during that time I may say I have been the working manager of the National schools; the parish priest has nominally been the manager, but as he was unable to undertake the duties, I have acted in his place.

12832. The schools you refer to are primary ones?—Yes; but from my connection with them I came to know the state of education in the town, and the educational wants of the people.

12833. You are acquainted with the various primary schools in the town?—Yes; in addition to these two National schools, male and female, there is a Model school, a Convent school, a Christian Brothers' school, and also a National school under Protestant management.

12834. Is that Presbyterian?—I think it is Methodist.

12835. Is there not a school which was formerly called a Model school, and is now under Roman Catholic Board?—Yes, but it is not a National school, it was under the Church Education Board, and is commonly called the Church school.

12836. To which school do the Roman Catholics generally go?—I suppose for primary education to the National school?—Most of the girls go to the Convent school, and most of the boys to the Christian Brothers' school; the others attend the National schools, of which I act as manager.

12837. Do the girls who want higher education go to the Convent school?—Yes.

12838. And the boys to the Christian Brothers' school?—Yes, the Convent school is a primary school as well, the Christian Brothers' school is not under the National Board or in any way connected with it; but it is in the strict sense of the word a primary school.

12839. Have you any higher class school, for either boys or girls?—We have a higher school now the want of a school to which Catholics could send their children, was very much felt about Enniskillen, and the Bishop, in order to meet that want, got rooms prepared, as a school, in the Christian Brothers' premises, and appointed one of the priests to take the charge of it.

12840. Was that made a sort of high school in connection with the existing school there?—It is a high school in the strict sense of the word; Latin, Greek, Science, and English are taught.

12841. Do any of your flock go to the Model school?—None, but occasionally a few waifs and strays, and the children of mixed marriages or of soldiers; but none of the children of practical Catholics go there; and the parents are not influenced by their clergy in keeping them away. The Catholic community of Enniskillen are an intelligent people, and they are well able to estimate the dangers of the Model school system. I understand that it has been stated, before this Commission, in Dublin, that the Bishop was in favour of allowing children to avail themselves of the Model school; I suppose that statement was made because the Bishop never found it necessary to interfere in order to prevent the children from going, and that therefore the impression got abroad, that, because he was not interfering in any conspicuous way, he was in favour of the schools. It is, however, quite the contrary; he has opposed the Model schools from the beginning, and opposes them still.

12842. Do the people themselves prefer that their children should go to the Christian Brothers', or denominational, school rather than to the Model School?—Yes; they know the system quite well themselves, and they have the other schools, which they know to be as good 12843. Have you any objection to the course of education pursued under the National Board?—We have. As things stand at present in Enniskillen we are pretty well satisfied. The Convent school is a National school, and there is always a large class of children attending it, who are learning Irish and French, and all those extra subjects, for which the pupils pay a large sum each quarter.

12844. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—There are a large number of Roman Catholics in Enniskillen?—Yes, a good deal more than half the population.

12845. There are also a considerable number in the surrounding neighbourhood?—Yes.

12846. You know the county of Monaghan pretty well?—I do. I was two years in the Seminary, before I came to Enniskillen.

12847. Are there not, considering the size of Enniskillen, a large number of Catholic shopkeepers of respectability, who have accumulated wealth in business?—A fair half, I would say, of the shopkeepers in Enniskillen are Catholics.

12848. Does that answer apply both to the better class of shopkeepers, and to the smaller shopkeepers?—Yes.

12849. Are many of the Catholic young men from the farming classes, in the neighbourhood of Enniskillen, going into the priesthood?—Yes; Fermanagh has produced a great many priests.

12850. There are also Catholic young men, the sons of respectable shopkeepers in the town of Enniskillen, who desire to go to business, and commence—the Civil Service, and the learned professions?—Yes.

12851. And for all those it would be desirable to have some advantage in the shape of intermediate education?—Certainly.

12852. Until the present Bishop instituted the small beginning of an intermediate school, which you have mentioned, there was no such thing in the town?—Portora is here; but there is nothing for the Catholics.

12853. The Catholic population supply themselves at their own expense, as far as buildings and maintenance go, with abundance of primary education?—Yes; they are pretty well satisfied with the state of primary education.

12854. How was the Convent school in Enniskillen built?—It was built by subscription. The ground, on which it and the Christian Brothers' school stand, was purchased.

12855. What was the cost of the ground?—£1,150.

12856. What did it cost to build the Convent school?—Above £700.

12857. That money is to some extent devoted to education, and constitutes a sort of endowment. What did the building of the Christian Brothers' school cost?—I understand the Christian Brothers' school was originally built for stores. It was erected before the purchase of the ground.

12858. Is the ground liable to any rent?—No.

12859. I suppose it has only recently been possible, out of the voluntary funds of the Catholics, to make any provision for intermediate education?—Yes.

12860. The staff in the intermediate school consists at present of only one clergyman?—Yes.

12861. Do you consider that provision adequate to meet the wants of the Catholic people, as regards intermediate education?—Not at all, but we could not afford to do any better.

12862. What becomes of the intermediate education of the Catholics of the middle classes, in Enniskillen and the neighbourhood, who go to boarding schools or remain undeducated?—Howsoever they have had no place at all to go to. A few of them did occasionally go to Portora. I have reason to know that, for many years, the Catholic boys who went to Portora, went there to learn the rudiments of Latin and Greek, preparatory

Oct 2, 1876.
Rev. Felix
Becker, &c.

to entering the Seminary, which was then exclusively Catholic. The impression was that no boy was admitted except he was preparing for the church, and that no boy was admitted who was preparing for a professional or mercantile career.

12863 At present where do they go to?—We have now the school of our own, which I have mentioned.

12864 How many pupils are attending it?—Eleven. It has only been opened since April last. There are six youths belonging to Enniskillen in the Seminary at Monaghan, and there is one at Rockwell College, in the county of Tipperary.

12865 I suppose there are a number of Catholics in Enniskillen who would much prefer that their boys should obtain intermediate education at a well-organized school in the town?—Yes; and that was one of the reasons put forward as explaining why they sent their sons to Portlaoise day-schools, they said they led the children under their own supervision at home.

12866 There is a large Catholic population in the county of Monaghan?—Yes. It is much more Catholic than Fermanagh.

12867 There are a greater number of Catholics among farmers there?—Yes.

12868 And a considerable town population too?—The towns are pretty fair, too. Monaghan is a fair town.

12869 Is there a large class of Catholics, that ought to avail themselves of intermediate education, in Monaghan?—There must be.

12870 Are there many who enter the priesthood from that county?—There are. Monaghan supplies a great number of priests for the diocese.

12871 Would you say that the proportion of priests among those Monaghan was greater, in proportion to the population and the size of the portions of the diocese in the two counties, than the proportion of priests coming from Fermanagh?—I could scarcely answer that question. I know the population of Monaghan is much above that of Fermanagh.

12872 The Catholics in Monaghan have got a day-school or Seminary?—Yes.

12873 That has seemed to be a purely ecclesiastical training school, and now takes in boys intended for lay pursuits as well?—Yes.

12874 Has that institution any endowment?—None whatever. There is a house, and I believe they pay rent for the ground on which the Seminary is built.

12875 Do you know what is the amount of the rent?—I do not.

12876 Do you know whether they build the Seminary themselves?—They did.

12877 How many boys were there in that Institution now?—Between forty and fifty were there last year; I cannot tell the number this year.

12878 There is no distinction between the course of education of the boys that may or may not go to Maynooth?—They learn the same classical course, and also the same mathematical course.

12879 Did that Seminary send up any boys to the Intermediate examinations?—Yes, they sent in sixteen, all of whom passed. Five of them got exhibitions, and eleven were prize men.

12880 Do you wish to express any feeling, on the part of the Roman Catholics, about the educational endowments of the two counties—Fermanagh and Monaghan?—As far as I know the people are pretty well satisfied with the state of primary education. They object of course to the Model school, because they think it is scarcely fair that a school should be supported, at the very door of the Christian Brothers' school, out of the public purse.

12881 Was the statement of Mr. Beaton—that the Bishop did not object to the Model school—a mistake on his part?—Yes; the only way I could account for that statement is that the Bishop had never any reason to take care.

12882 State your own opinion of the feeling of the Catholics?—There is a strong feeling among the Catholics of Enniskillen with regard to intermediate education. They feel the want of it very much, and that no means have been afforded or facilities given them to obtain it. They will not avail themselves of Portlaoise; but if they had a school of their own, in Enniskillen, there would be a very large attendance. When the Government are disposed to supply a few prizes, they should give us something to catch our rivals in the race with those that are largely aided; or, if not, put all on an equal footing, and let the existing endowment go to the promotion of education under the Intermediate system. The Catholics feel very much that a school like Portlaoise should be supported from large endowments, and that they should have to pay for building their own school, and to pay their own masters.

12883 Is it likely that the respectable element amongst the Catholics here will increase?—If we had an intermediate school, or any facilities afforded for intermediate education, that section would certainly increase. It would increase the social status of the community.

12884 CHAIRMAN.—Who are the trustees of the Convent school?—I think the parish priest and the bishop.

12885 Have the Christian Brothers their property in their own hands?—No. It is in the hands of trustees—the bishop and the parish priest. The whole was bought in one plot. The Convent school were not built on the plot when it was bought. The house now occupied by the Christian Brothers' school had been a stone in the possession of Mr. Kerans, a large merchant here. It was first converted into a Convent, but the nuns left it after ten or eleven years. Then, when the Convent was built, the Christian Brothers came and took possession of the house and converted it into a school.

12886 They teach there, but the property does not belong to them?—It does not belong to them at all.

12887 Is your objection to the Model school that it is not a good school?—No, we do not say that it is not a good school, or that there is not a good staff of teachers. In fact, the principal teacher is a good practical Catholic; but, nevertheless, we do not acknowledge or recommend the school. We object to the system of the Model school, because it is a State institution; and because the education is taken out of the hands of the clergy.

12888 Mr. O'BRIEN.—You mean out of the supervision of the clergy?—I do.

12889 CHAIRMAN.—In fact, your position is—that you do not wish to have any mixed control over schools in which Catholics are taught, but that they should be under the supervision and direct control of your own clergy?—Yes.

12890 As regards the results of the Intermediate Education examinations, you are, of course, aware that all schools, except the National schools, may receive results fees, and obtain an endowment in that form?—Yes.

12891 You thought it hard on the Catholics that the Model school should be supported out of public funds as against the Christian Brothers' school, but that position is modified now by the fact that the other schools can get results which the Model school cannot?—The Christian Brothers' school does not get results fees.

12892 Mr. O'BRIEN.—The Christian Brothers' schools are merely primary schools?—Yes.

12893 And they confine themselves, as exclusively as they can, to primary education?—Certainly.

12894 That being so, they do not pretend to compete under the Intermediate system?—No.

12895 You are aware that the State primary schools, the National schools, which correspond educationally to the Christian Brothers' schools, are actually forbidden by the State to compete at the Intermediate examinations, for fear of spoiling their primary education?—Yes.

12896 The same reason applies to the Christian Brothers' schools?—The pupils in the Christian Brothers'

Rev. John

schools, or whether of fact, do not compete. The Intermediate school we have established is held in the same house as the Christian Brothers' school, but is quite distinct.

12937. Does your experience go sufficiently far back to compare how the Model school stood in former days, with its present position?—It always had the same position. It never was recognized as Intermediate by the Catholics. There is a Model school in Monaghan as well, and the same observation applies to it.

Rev. August
McKeown, &c.

Rev. EUGENE F. KESSA, &c., examined.

12938. CHAIRMAN.—You are the head master, or principal, of the Catholic Intermediate School in Enniskillen?—Yes.

12939. It is not in any way under the Christian Brothers?—It is quite distinct from the Christian Brothers' school, except that it is in the same building; but as a school, it is distinct.

12940. How is any endowment in the shape of money, spent on building or otherwise?—It has no endowment. It is part of the Christian Brothers' schoolhouse, from which some rooms have been cut off, in which classes are held.

12941. What number of teachers are there in the school?—I am the only one. I teach from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m.

12942. How many boys are attending that school?—Eleven at present.

12943. What are their ages?—With the exception of one, who is about sixteen, they vary from twelve to about fourteen or fifteen.

12944. What course of instruction do you give?—English and Science, Latin and Greek.

12945. Have you sent up any boys to the Intermediate Education examinations?—Not yet.

12946. The school has not been long enough in existence?—It has not.

12947. Are the boys attending it, the sons of shopkeepers in Enniskillen?—Yes; many of them are.

12948. Mr. O'SHEA.—What are the other boys that are not the sons of shopkeepers?—There are two boys who live in the neighbourhood, and who are the sons of farmers.

12949. In addition to being the only master of the school, you are also a curate of the parish?—I am, and I attend to parochial duties.

12950. If there were a properly organized school, and that it had fair time to come before the Catholic public of the place, would it have a much larger attendance?—I believe there is sufficient data from which to conclude reasonably that such a school would be a very large one, for there are at present thirteen boys belonging to the town and neighbourhood studying the first year's grade, eleven here and two elsewhere.

12951. You mean at Monaghan?—Yes. I believe that next year there will be a number equally large, and also in the following year, all forming three form classes. Indeed I consider it is only reasonable to conclude that—of these boys increased well, as I hope they will, for they manifest much talent—in place of the present number, eleven, there will be five or six times that number here after a short time.

12952. Are there small towns in the neighbourhood, which are connected with Enniskillen by railway?—Yes. Boys would come from the surrounding villages and districts to a higher school, if they had one which they would consider safe for them.

12953. I suppose it is utterly impossible, at present, to employ anything like a large staff of masters?—Of course it is, there is no endowment.

12954. What fees do you charge?—£4 a year.

12955. Is that the universal charge?—There is a newly charged elsewhere, but our people are as heavily burthened, in making provision for their educational and other requirements, that it would seem cruel to ask them to pay high fees. They support the Christian Brothers. Indeed they contribute largely in many ways.

12956. CHAIRMAN.—You expended a large sum within the last few years in erecting your church?—Yes; the Catholics of this town are contributing nearly £1,000 annually for the erection of their new church, and there are other charitable objects to which they contribute as well.

12957. Mr. O'SHEA.—That is all over now?—Oh, there is much to be done yet.

12958. Have you been long in this parish?—About eight months.

Mr. James
Kearney.

Mr. JAMES KEENE, examined.

12959. CHAIRMAN.—You live in Enniskillen?—Yes.

12960. Can you say what proportion of the shopkeepers, in the Midland, are Roman Catholics, as compared with the various denominations of Protestants?—I think a very fair proportion. I should say there would be very little difference between the Protestants and the Catholics, counting as Protestants, Methodists and Presbyterians and all denominations of Protestants.

12961. Do you desire to make any statement?—Yes. I was reading the evidence Dr. Steele gave in Dublin, as reported in the newspapers, and although I would not for one moment impute that Dr. Steele would say anything not true, I really did feel surprised at a statement, made by a gentleman of his position and character, on a subject of such importance, of which he evidently knew so very little.

12962. Mr. O'SHEA.—What evidence of his, do you refer to?—Is it—

—You said there were a few big shopkeepers, as distinguished from small shopkeepers, Roman Catholics?—Yes, a very few; I know of none except a butcher?—

I refer to that, and other passages to the same effect. The fact however is not so, for as a class, the Roman Catholic shopkeepers are as wealthy as the Protestants. I have been talking the matter over with Protestant shopkeepers in the town, and they believe that, comparatively speaking, the Roman Catholic shopkeepers are the best off.

12963. Although, perhaps, not numerically equal?—Not numerically equal.

12964. Do you think one-third of the shopkeepers are Roman Catholics?—Yes, I do. The inference to be drawn from the evidence I refer to, was that there would not be a sufficient number of Roman Catholics, of the class suited to take advantage of Intermediate education. I desire positively to contradict that.

12965. Is the want of higher education felt among the Roman Catholics here?—It is. I know the feelings of the people of Enniskillen, having been living here for twenty-two years, and those feelings are, that they are in the matter of intermediate or higher education heavily weighted—that there are no facilities at all afforded to them.

12966. Do the Protestant shopkeepers avail themselves, to a fair extent, of Public school?—I am not aware how that is, I do not know much about it.

12967. To what extent do Catholics go there?—Very few indeed do so.

12968. Can you say how many are at present there?—I should say there are not more than one or two.

12969. There are a number of Catholic young men going into the Church, from the country round?—Yes, a good many.

12930. Before they went to Maynooth, where were they generally taught?—Some of them went to the Seminary in Mounaghan, and I know some who went to Clonan to school. One peasant, a farmer, who lived within four miles of this town, had three boys there at one time, and he was so anxious to get them on, that had, on more than one occasion, to lend him money to pay the fees, till he could make it up afterwards.

12931. Do you think, if there were a good Catholic school here, it would be largely attended?—I am satisfied it would.

12932. Have you any suggestion to make on the subject?—I would seriously be an authority, but I feel the want of the school. I never felt it so much as I become a father.

12933. I suppose the people have their eyes on the intermediate system, and the stimulus that gives?—Certainly, a suitable intermediate school, where Catholic parents could with safety send their children, as, I think, very much needed, and the want of it is very much felt.

12934. We have heard of the disposition of the lady proprietress of the Model school. Do you think that the feeling of the Catholic lady is thoroughly in accord with the feeling of the Church authorities, on that subject?—Decidedly, they do not wish to send their children to it. That was my own feeling. I would not send my son to the Model school, nor would I send him to Portora. When I was a young boy I came a good deal into contact with parliament Porters, and the impression left on my mind was that it was not safe for a Catholic boy to be there.

12935. You do not impute that to any interference on the part of the masters?—Emphatically no; only to the boys.

12936. CHAIRMAN.—Portora school does not afford any great benefit to Protestants either, as a school for the commercial classes, for the great majority of the scholars there are the sons of persons in better circumstances, coming from a distance?—They are.

12937. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—Then you do not consider Portora school of any great advantage to the locality?—From my stand point it is not.

12938. The boarders pay sixty guineas a year. It is a high class school, more for the sons of gentry of large property, than for those seeking commercial education?—I was always under that impression about it.

Oct 2, 1878.
Mr. James
Keany

Rev. WILLIAM STEELE, M.A., readied.

Rev. William
Steele, D.D.

12939. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—How many of your boarders at Portora come from Keshikillen or the county of Fermanagh?—I never had, I think, more than six or seven from the immediate neighbourhood.

12940. How many day scholars have you?—Nearly fifty.

12941. How many of these are free?—I should think there are about sixteen free, my rate about five boys has always been this—I never had a limited number, I have always sent to any person who had a suitable and capable of receiving the education that we give at Portora, that if he were unable to pay for him, I would receive him free.

12942. Of what class is life are the free boys?—Some of them are from the most respectable classes; but their parents, although they hold very respectable positions, have very slender means.

12943. You have got about fourteen paying day boys?—About that number.

12944. Are they natives of Keshikillen?—Nearly all, at present.

12945. What class are they from?—They are chiefly children of shopkeepers, but some are the sons of doctors and bank managers.

12946. CHAIRMAN.—Do you desire to make any further statement?—When I stated, at my examination in Dublin, that I thought that but a small proportion of the large class of shopkeepers in Keshikillen were Roman Catholics, Mr. Keany knows perfectly well, as I am sure every one else here does, that I believed the fact to be so, and I had always thought that Mr. Keany himself was a Protestant. The fact is this, that in all my dealings in the town, whether educationally or commercially, I have never asked the question whether a man was a Protestant or a Roman Catholic.

12947. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—The majority of the boys at your school are gentlemen's sons, paying 60 guineas a year, and coming from a distance?—Certainly, I should like to add that although, as Mr. Harcourt stated, there is a feeling amongst the Roman Catholics against Portora, yet in no way, directly or indirectly, by asking them to conform to any kind of service whatever, or otherwise, have I interfered with their religion.

12948. A large proportion of the endowment you recommended for introducing the cost of education of people from a distance?—No doubt it is, but one thing should be always borne in mind, that I could not attempt to give anything like the education given to the day boys, on the terms paid by them, if it were not for the boarders.

Mr. MICHAEL DOBNEY, examined.

Mr. Michael
Dobney

12949. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—You desire to make statement?—Yes. Dr. Steele taught one of my boys, and I must say I never had the smallest fault to find with that gentleman, and very likely if there was another school available here my son would not have been sent to him.

12950. You mean a Catholic school?—I do.

12951. Are you a Roman Catholic?—Yes. I have three other sons, and if an intermediate school were here, suitable for my children, I would wish to send them to it.

12952. Are they at a boarding school?—They are at the Diocesan Seminary in Mounaghan.

12953. Then notwithstanding Dr. Steele's extreme impartiality you would prefer sending your children to a Catholic school?—Undoubtedly.

12954. CHAIRMAN.—Is your son, who was educated at Portora, still a Catholic?—He is a Catholic clergyman, a professor in the Diocesan Seminary.

12955. Then he has not shaken, as to his faith, by attending at Portora?—No. I think the doctor gave him a good blessing. I am forty years in Keshikillen, and I know it is very hard on the Roman Catholics to have to support all they must do here. There is a collection every year for the Christian Brothers, and that comes from the poor people, and amounts to from £90 to £120. The Convent schools are under the National Board. There is a great number of schools in the town; but, I think, with the exception of what the National Board gives, no Catholic school gets anything, as has a farthing of endowment. As regards Mr. Beaumont's statement, that Catholic children were attending the Model school, I know that was altogether a mistake, for they are not attending it. The Roman Catholics themselves have an objection to it, and their clergy have an objection to it too. The priests and the people always pull well together. In fact, if we were going to send our children to the Model school, and the priests told us not, we would not do it.

[The Commissioners adjourned.]

Oct 3, 1879.

THIRTY-SECOND DAY—FRIDAY, OCTOBER 3, 1879—11 O'CLOCK, A.M.

In the Town Hall, Waterford.

Present:—LORD JUSTICE FITZGERALD, LORD RANDOLPH CHURCHILL, M.P.; and ANDREW SEARLE HART, Esq., LL.B.; with G. W. BRADSHAW, Esq., Assistant Secretary.

Mr. ROBERT THOMAS CAREW, B.A., examined.

Mr. Robert T. Carew, A.L.

12956. LORD JUSTICE FITZGERALD.—You are one of the trustees of Mason's charity, Waterford?—I am an acting trustee.

12957. It was founded by some members of the Mason family?—It was founded by Miss Mary Mason, daughter of Sir John Mason, in 1740.

12958. What is the exact scope of the charity?—The building cost £750, and the whole expense of the school is now defrayed by an annuity of £80 Irish, equivalent to £55 1s. 8d. present currency, paid half-yearly by the Corporation of Waterford, on account of £500 which was given for the school in three sums of £300 each by Sir John Mason, Sarah Mason, and John Mason.

12959. There is in addition, I believe, a sum of money derived from a Mr. Alcock?—That is from a different source altogether and for another purpose. I am not the trustee of that fund.

12960. Under what instrument are you trustees of the other fund?—Under the will of Mrs. Mason, by which the two eldest representatives of the Mason family were appointed trustees of this fund of £40 Irish. It is as one of those that I am trustee.

12961. Is there a second trustee?—No second trustee has ever acted. The will mentions that the two eldest representatives of the Mason family residing in Waterford should be the trustees, and I do not know that there is any other representative of the family, now residing in Waterford, except myself. My mother was trustee before me—she died in 1837. Before that my grandmother, Lady Alcock, was trustee—she died in 1835. I am unaware that any parties took part in the management of the school except my mother and grandmother. Upon my mother's death in 1837 I took the management of it, I am the legal trustee. My wife looks after the management of the school now, for as it is a girls' school, it is more suitable that a lady should look after it, but I keep the accounts, and disburse the money. I produce the book of accounts.

12962. Do you balance your accounts at any particular times?—Yes, every half year, ending in March and September.

12963. Taking the account for the half-year ending 29th September, 1877, the expenditure was for boots £1 16s., Mrs. Amour, the schoolmistress two quarters' salary £8; premiums £1 14s. 3d.; cleaning 2s. 6d.; wages 1s. 6d.; coal £2 5s. 3d.; sundries 3s. 8d.; boots £1 11s. 9d.—total £15 16s. 11d.—Those are the disbursements.

12965. What is the sum of £1 4s. 8d. from the Waterford and Limerick Railway?—The school was intended originally for thirty girls, but the number fell to eleven or twelve at one time, and there was few or five years ago an surplus in my hands, with which I purchased two £50 shares in the Waterford and Limerick Railway. Some time after that the house wanted a new roof, and I had to lay out a good deal of money. In order to meet that expenditure I sold one of the shares.

12966. Were they preference shares?—Yes. The other day I found the fund accumulating again, and I bought two or four Per Cent Guaranteed Shares, in the same way.

12967. In the account for the half-year ending 29th March, 1878, the other items appear much the same as in the previous account, but you sold a share for £50, which gave you a balance in hands of £138 6s. 10d., what was the share sold for?—It was redeemed by the company at par, £50.

12968. During the next half-year there appears to have been no extra expenditure, and the money seems to have remained idle?—Yes, it remained idle for a time until I bought the other shares I have mentioned.

12969. In the half-year ending 29th September, 1878, I do not see any entry of the receipt of this Corporation money; did you receive it?—I received it, but perhaps it came too late to go into that half-year's account. You will find it in the next account.—October 29th, 1878.—Corporation money for the half-year ending September, 1878, less poor rate £32 6s. 9d.

12970. I see that on 18th September, 1879, you invested £56 4s. 9d. in the purchase of two sums of £50, consolidated preference stock, of the Waterford and Limerick Railway bearing interest at 4 per cent?—Yes.

12971. In what name did you buy the stock?—In my own name, but I made an agreement that it should be available for the charity, in case anything should happen to me.

12972. Who would be entitled to succeed you in the trust?—I suppose my eldest son.

12973. Is he of age?—Not yet, he is nearly of age.

12974. Are there other members of the Mason family—descendants of the original founder—still in Waterford?—I do not know of any.

12975. Do you know in whom the title to the house, occupied by the charity, is vested?—I have been a copy of Mary Mason's will, leaving the school-house in Lady Lane for the purpose of the charity. She purchased the ground and built the school-house, it is free of rent.

12976. From the Corporation payments income tax is deducted. Did you make application to get that returned?—Yes, I always got it back. You will find in the accounts credit is given for returned income tax.

12977. The next matter is the Alcock money, which is stated to produce £31 10s. annually?—The Bishop, Dean, and Chapter of Waterford are the trustees for that fund. £1,000 was given by Chancellor Alcock to provide apprentice fees, and marriage portions, for girls educated at the school, provided they married a Waterford man, and a Protestant.

12978. No part of that money goes to the school itself?—No.

12979. Have you anything to say to the selection of the girls who get the money?—My mother used formerly to give a recommendation to the Bishop, Dean, and Chapter, as to the girls who were most worthy to get the apprentice fees and portions, but the clergy disregarded her recommendations, and, after some time, she gave up doing so. There is an entry in the account book that as her recommendations had ceased to be taken into account, she ceased giving any further. I may mention that there was a large debt due to my mother by the school for a considerable time, but after her death, I thought there was no use in carrying that debt any further, and I scratched it across, and recorded the fact in the book at the time then:—

* Mrs. Carew died on 10th July, 1837, when I took the management of the Corporation fund for educating and clothing the poor girls, and struck off the balance of £50 4s. 11d. so long carried on against the School fund."

12960 How had this debt arisen?—I find this entry in my father's handwriting:—

"N.B.—In this year, 1845, there were £70, Irish currency, due to Mr. Glasville, Architect, for new roof, slating the school-house, &c., which account was given to the Bishop of Waterford, who promised to pay it out of the carriage post and apprentices fund bequeathed by Catherine Alcock, but there being no money on hand of that fund, payment was not made by the Bishop, and he said he did not think it right on consideration to pay it out of that fund. The papers and accounts of Mr. Glasville were given to the Bishop, but could not be got back from him, so he said he had retained them, and as Mr. Glasville passed for his money he was paid £42, leaving unpaid £28, which was promised to be paid the following year, and which is accordingly received."

That was the principal cause of the heavy debt, which I cleared out in 1857.

12961 How are the repairs of the building executed at present?—They are done, under my superintendence, out of the £500 Irish, a year.

12962 In what condition is the building at present?—Very good.

12963 What does the building consist of?—A school-house, with a considerable garden at the rear.

12964 How is the garden used?—I do not know whether the Missionaries make any use of it, except for the girls to play in.

12965 Is it available for the use of the school?—It is.

12966 I see an entry for lodging money in the accounts—what is it for?—The Mission of the Blue school has apartments on the ground floor, the same floor as the school-rooms; they consist of a sitting-room, a bedroom, and a large kitchen. In the upper part of the house the Mission family used long ago to live themselves. They are very good rooms. These apartments became vacant, and Mrs. Armour said she would be entitled to take the upper part of the house and pay for it. I thought we might as well let her have them, and accordingly she took the apartments and has been paying for them every half-year.

12967 What rent does she pay?—Eight shillings a month, as a monthly tenant.

12968 What is her salary?—£16 a year, the residence and three tons of coal. It used to be only two tons, but she gets three tons now. That is the only allowance she gets.

12969 What are the conditions of admission into the school?—The applicants must be children of Protestant parents, and resident in Waterford.

12970 They are all day pupils?—Yes.

12971 By whom are they admitted?—I admit them.

12972 Your approval is necessary?—Yes.

12973 There are, at present, sixteen girls on the roll?—That was the number; but the other day the mother of two of the girls objected to the school dress, and she said she would not send them any more. The girls wear a simple blue dress—it is a very good dress, but, as the mother of those two girls did not like it, they left the school. This occurred about a fortnight or three weeks ago, so that we have only fourteen girls in the school now.

12974 Do all the children wear the school dress?—Yes—all wear the same dress. It is supplied to them out of the £500 a year.

12975 Is the cost of those dresses entered in your accounts?—It is. I have vouchers for every item.

12976 Dr. HARRIS—in the report of the Commissioners of 1857, it is stated that the girls must be children and merely of residents, but of natives of Waterford?—They must be residents, but I do not think that they must be natives. Any Protestant that comes to live here on, I think, apply to send his child to the school, besides parents possibly resident in Waterford at the time.

12977 LION JOURNÉ FREDERICKS.—Do you visit the establishment at any regular times?—No. Mrs. Curran goes there very frequently, and the place is visited by the clergy. The Bishop's wife goes there occasionally.

12978 Is the school subject to any regular inspection?—No, there is no regular inspection.

12979 Are there any fees charged to the children?—None, they are educated free of charge.

12980 What is the reason that the number is not full—the roll contemplated thirty, there are only fourteen in the school at present, and you have a surplus of funds?—We have a large surplus, but the people of Waterford do not avail themselves of the school. I understand there is a falling off in the attendance at all the schools in Waterford—especially the Model school, and infant school—that not near so many attend there now, as were attending there some time ago.

12981 Have you a record of the number of children who attended this school in times gone by?—Yes. This book contains the numbers from the year 1825.

12982 In 1825 I find you had 6 monitors and 24 other children, making 30 altogether?—Yes, the number was complete then.

12983 In 1830 the number was 30, and continued so until 1833?—Yes.

12984 In 1834 it was 28; in 1835, 29; in 1843 it fell to 29, in 1845 there were 20; in 1853 they rose to 28; in 1856 there were 24; and in 1858, 24?—Yes.

12985 Do you visit the school to see how the girls are getting on?—Well, I do not go much in that way myself—I leave it to Mrs. Curran.

12987 Dr. HARRIS.—In the report of the former Commissioners, it is stated that the condition of the school was, at that time, very unsatisfactory, the funds being inadequate—the school room was reported to be in no manner condition, and ventilation not attended to as it ought to be—did you, when your funds increased, do anything to remove those defects?—I do not know anything about that. My mother had the management at that time, and so continued until 1857. I know nothing about it.

12988 The report I have referred to was published in 1857—I want to know have those defects been attended to?—Well, it was about that time the arrears began to fall off, and that ceased the accumulation.

12989 What I want to know is, whether the present condition of the school is better than it was in 1857?—Oh, it is, infinitely better, I think.

12990 Repairs have been executed since?—Yes; the house has been plastered outside with cement, and a new roof—an excellent roof—put on. It is in thorough repair now.

12991 As far as I understood the number of pupils has diminished gradually every year?—They have diminished, certainly.

12992 In the school-room kept in a clean condition now; the report of 1857 says that it was not clean, and that ventilation was not attended to?—Well, there have been two or three school-mistresses since then, I have no fault to find with the present mistress. I go there frequently, and I have never found any fault with the ventilation or the cleanliness of the school. I have always impressed on Mrs. Armour the importance of keeping the place clean and tidy, and taking care that the children come clean to school—with face and hands washed, and their boots polished.

12994 LION JOURNÉ FREDERICKS.—I find the following entries in the accounts for repairs done to the building since 1857, September 1859, painting and repairing, £14 8s., September 1860, repairs to house, £10 13s. 6d., October 1861, repairs to roof, 12s.; July 1864, some items for 60s., 6s., 24; October 1864

 Mr. Robert T.
 Cress, &c.

repairs of roof £3 10s. I see in that year you invested money in two 5 per cent. shares of the Waterford and Limerick Railway Company, at £45 each, one of which you afterwards sold at £501—Yes, one was sold at £20, and the other redeemed at £50.

13013. And now all you have are the two 4 per cent. preference shares?—Yes, those I purchased this year.

13016. I find that in 1865 you paid £3 3s. for repairs, on 2nd October, 1871, you paid Ryan and Son for new roof on school-house £180, on January 2nd, 1874, to Ryan and Son for new roof on rag building £43 11s. 10d.; and on 2nd September, 1874, you paid for plastering outside walls and roof of school-house with cement £20 1—Yes.

13017. That makes altogether £348 11s. 10d. expended on the building since 1871?—Yes, it is in very good repair now.

13018. Were those expenditures made upon tender and estimate?—By tender.

13019. I understand no one else takes any part in the management save yourself and Mrs. Cress?—No one else.

13020. By the terms of the Alcock bequest the trusts were to provide marriage portions for girls that have been educated in the Blue School, provided they marry Protestants and natives of Waterford, and have a certificate of good conduct from the mistress of the school?—Yes. It was in accordance with that, my mother gave certificates to some of the girls whom she considered to deserve it; but the Dean and Chapter paid no attention to the certificates, and gave the marriage portions to whom they liked.

13021. Without any certificate?—Without any certificate at all.

13022. Then there is no control on the part of those who manage the school over the selection of the girls who are to receive the marriage portions?—None.

13023. The will contains the following direction:—

"I also desire that my trustees do on every Easter Sunday of every year publish in the Waterford newspaper, if it continues to come, and if not, in some other newspaper, an account of their yearly proceedings, wherein the names of the several persons named, and to whom the marriage portions shall have been paid, shall be inserted."

Has that direction been complied with?—No, that is not done at all.

Mrs. Elizabeth
 Cress.

Mrs. HENRIETTA CANN, examined.

13024. LEAD JEWELL FERGUSON.—You are the wife of the last witness, and have taken an interest in the management of the Blue School, Waterford?—Yes, I have done so ever since I was married.

13025. Do you visit it regularly?—I do, on Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays, and hope to continue doing so as long as I am able.

13026. Have you, during your residence in Waterford, always done so?—Not always; I have not been strong enough, but I have always visited the school when I was able.

13027. Do you reside in the neighbourhood of the school?—About three miles distant from it.

13028. What is the course of teaching in the school?—Reading, writing, arithmetic, and needlework, and, I need scarcely say, Scripture. That I am very anxious, indeed, about.

13029. Is the religious teaching imparted at a fixed hour every day?—It is. The school always opens with prayer.

13030. What are the ages of the children?—From fifteen or sixteen, down to five years old.

13031. You have only one teacher?—Only one teacher.

13032. Does she teach all the children?—Yes; I took her on the recommendation of the then Bishop of Cashel, who was particularly anxious that I should do so. She has been with us a long time.

13033. The former Commissioners' Report gave a poor account of the condition of the school—how is it now?—I am perfectly satisfied with it. I do not wish the children to be taught anything beyond reading, writing, arithmetic, and sewing. I am anxious to train them to make their own clothes, and plain dress-making.

13034. Is the mistress qualified to do that?—Perfectly.

13035. Do the children remain until old enough to learn needlework?—They all learn some kind of needlework.

13036. Do you know anything about the distribution of the marriage portion fund—do you look after that?—I do; I do not think the clergy ever refused it when the girls were deserving; so far as I know, I believe that when the girl is deserving they give it.

13037. What supply of books have the children?—Only the common books.

13038. Have they to supply themselves with books?—No; we supply them.

13039. You are satisfied with the present condition of the institution?—Perfectly.

13040. Is it doing good work?—I hope it is. I am not at all desirous that it should give a high class education. If girls want high class education they can go to the other schools.

13041. Dr. HART.—You simply teach them reading, writing, and arithmetic?—Yes; they are very quick at those things.

13042. In the Report of the former Commission it is stated:—"Although grammar is professed to be taught, the girls are utterly ignorant of it."—I do not care about that.

13043. LEAD R. CHURCHILL.—You cannot teach English reading and writing without grammar, can you?—I do not care about grammar.

13044. You mean theoretical grammar?—Yes.

13045. Dr. HART.—It is also stated in the Report to which I have alluded:—"There was not a single arithmetical book in the school." You would not say that such would be a true description of present?—I think not.

13046. Do you know as a fact whether there are arithmetical books in the school?—I do not know whether they have arithmetical books, but what I take pains to see is that they shall read and write—I lent them read, they write from dictation, I look after their needlework, and their mental arithmetic surprises me.

13047. LEAD JEWELL FERGUSON.—Are they remarkably proficient at writing from dictation?—Very quick indeed about that.

13048. Are you able to say to what class in life they belong? Are they all poor?—Almost all. There are one or two that are not, but they are chiefly very poor.

13049. Do you inquire into the circumstances of the applicants, when they wish to be admitted to the school?—No—I am very glad to get the children.

13050. You would receive more if they applied?—I would receive them all.

13051. LEAD R. CHURCHILL.—Do you take Roman Catholics, if they choose to come?—We have children of mixed marriages. We would not refuse them, if they came.

13052. The children who attend the school are brought up in the principles of the Church of Ireland?—Yes.

13053. Have you had any children of mixed marriages?—We have some now.

13054. How many?—Two. The two who came in last were children of mixed marriages.

13055. Do you make any arrangements for securing the consent of the parents?—No.

13056. You do not trouble yourself about it?—No, the children come, and we receive them.

13057. You do not go and seek out the children yourselves?

13041—No. I have not been able to do so. If I am more constantly resident I will. I think Mrs. Armour goes and tries to get them. I have no doubt she does.

13042. Does she go seeking for children of mixed marriages?—I do not know that, exactly; but she tries to get as many children as she can to attend the school.

13043. Dr. HARR—You have not nearly the full number of girls in the school?—No; they could not be supported. I do not think the funds would admit of it.

13044. LORD JUSTICE FRANKLIN—As I understand it, the only difference it would make in the expenditure, would be the clothing for the children?—Well, that would make a considerable difference.

13045. LORD R. CHURCHILL—You take a great deal of interest in religious education?—Yes.

13046. Have you had children in the school who have been brought up in the tenets of the Roman Catholic Church?—I do not know about that. I teach them the Bible.

13047. Do you teach them the Church Catechism?—No, only the Bible.

13048. You do not know what religious teaching the children have received before they came to the school?—No. I do not trouble myself about it. Mrs. Armour takes them to Church, and brings them back. I am guided by the will of the founders, and by what it throws.

13049. Do the children all assemble on Sunday to go to Church?—Yes, the teacher goes with them. They attend catechism at the Cathedral on Fridays. I leave that to the clergy.

13050. May I ask what religion you are of, yourself?—I am myself a Dissenter. I wish to ask in it respect for the Deeds and Chapter to give those marriage portions without interference to me, or to Mrs. Armour, because the will says that a certificate of good conduct from the mistress of the school must be given in order to entitle a girl to receive the marriage portion.

13051. LORD JUSTICE FRANKLIN—Certainly, it would appear that it was intended there should be a certificate from the mistress. We will make inquiry about it.

Get 2. Lark.

Mrs. Henrietta Curry

Mrs. Jane Armour, examined.

Mrs. Jane Armour.

13052. LORD JUSTICE FRANKLIN—How long have you been mistress of the Lady Jane Hine School, Waterford?—Ten years.

13053. What experience of teaching had you before you were appointed to that school?—I have been engaged in teaching for the last thirty years.

13054. Had you been mistress of any school before this one?—Yes, of the Lady Jane Waterford Parochial school.

13055. Was that a Church Education school?—Yes.

13056. How are the children in the Bore school divided?—Into four divisions—third class, second division of third class, second class, and second division of second class.

13057. You have no children who are actually commencing to learn, and on the other hand you have some very far advanced?—I have some pretty high at present. I have the third class in composition rules, and setting out and finishing in needlework.

13058. How do you divide their time?—We have in hand for everything. Commencing at 10 in the morning we have a hymn, prayer, and religious instruction till 11.

13059. Do all the children attend that?—All; the older ones read a chapter, and the little ones I help in paper. On Friday they go to catechism in the Cathedral.

13060. Are the applications for admission made to you?—Principally to me.

13061. How do you find children for the school?—do you look for them or do they come to you?—They come to me. Of course the advantages of the school are sometimes represented to their parents, and when they know them they take advantage of it.

13062. About how many of the children are of mixed marriages?—I think only two at present. They come for work.

13063. Which is the father or mother a Protestant?—The mother. The father, who brought them to the school, is a Roman Catholic.

13064. How did they come to join the school?—Their parents were told, by the parents of other children in the school, how much their children were benefited.

13065. Can you explain why it is that the number of children attending the school is diminishing?—It has not diminished since I came. I think the reason that the number is not larger is on account of the other schools in the town.

13066. What other schools?—The girls' Parochial school, the Infant school, the Model school, and the Beggar school. There take some of the children that might otherwise come to my school.

13067. Do any of the clergy visit your school regularly?—Yes.

13068. Have they fixed times for visiting?—No; not fixed times.

13069. Do they inspect the school, and see how the teaching goes on?—Yes.

13070. Are those the parochial clergy?—Yes; they examine the girls and look at their sabbath books, and enter in the visitors' book their opinion.

13071. In the building, in your opinion, suitable for the purposes of a school?—Yes, I consider it very suitable.

13072. Have you had any illness among the children?—No.

13073. LORD R. CHURCHILL—What are the ages of the two children of a mixed marriage, of whom you spoke just now?—One is ten years of age; the other eight.

13074. Do you know whether those girls had been brought up as Protestants or Catholics before they came to your school?—They had not been brought up Roman Catholics. It was their father brought them to me.

13075. Dr. HARR—Their father being a Roman Catholic brought them to you himself?—Yes; he also told me that he has gone to Church himself.

13076. LORD R. CHURCHILL—Have you ever had in your school children who, up to the time of attending your school, had been brought up in the tenets of the Roman Catholic Church?—Never.

13077. LORD JUSTICE FRANKLIN—Can you give us any information as to what becomes of the children after they leave the school?—They are provided with situations—the greater part of them go as domestic servants.

13078. Do you know of many who have married, and got the marriage portions?—No girl out of this school got the marriage portion, during my time, though I know of two who applied for it.

13079. Have any got the apprenticeship?—I know of one or two out of my school who got them—that is all.

13080. As I understand your answer, no girl got the marriage portion, on leaving the school, in your time?—None.

13081. Did any girls who had left the school get it?—They did not apply to me for a certificate—therefore I do not know. Perhaps they went to the clergymen and got it without my knowledge.

13082. Is it well known among the parents of the girls that there is this fund to provide marriage portions for them?—Yes, some of them know of it, and when they know of it they send the children

Oct 7, 1896.

Mr. Robert V.
Carter, &c.

13099. LORD JUSTICE FRANKLIN.—You desire to add something?—Yes. I do not want it to go abroad that children of mixed marriages are admissible into the school. The mistress has made a mistake in saying that two children recently admitted were children of a mixed marriage. Both their parents were Protestants, but, after the death of their father, their mother married a Roman Catholic. This occurred before they came to reside in Waterford. Hence the mistake. I have asked the mistress whether, during her time, children of mixed marriages had ever been admitted, and she said not.

13100. Would you admit the children of a mixed marriage under any circumstances?—Well, I would make inquiry who they were, and all about them, but I do not think, strictly speaking, that they are admissible.

13101. I do not think the will says anything about the religion of the parents?—No, the will says "Protestant children."

The Rev. Mr.
Maurice F.
Day, &c.

The Right Rev. MAURICE F. DAY, D.D., Bishop of Cashel, examined.

13102. LORD JUSTICE FRANKLIN.—We are anxious to get information from your lordship with respect to the Lady-lane Female Bazaar School. It appears from the Report of the Commission which sat in 1867, that there is a fund under the will of Cornelius Alcock available for the children of the school, and Mr. Carter has called our attention to a clause in the will, directing that the Bishop, and the Dean and Chapter of Waterford, for the time being, should be the trustees, and that they should on every Easter Tuesday publish in some Waterford newspaper an account of their yearly proceedings, wherein the names of the several persons to whom marriage portions had been paid should be inserted. The provision at the beginning of the will was, that the trustees should revert the sum of £1,000 at interest, and pay the interest in marriage portions to such girls as had been educated in Lady-lane Bazaar School, the condition being that they should marry a citizen of Waterford, be of the Protestant religion, and have a certificate from the notice of their having behaved well during their residence at and school, those to be preferred who have most regularly attended divine service. The trustees of the school states that during her time no girl obtained a portion when leaving the school. We want to know, in the first place, whether the fund is in existence?—The fund is in existence, and is administered from time to time—I think about the time of year that has been mentioned—it is managed by the Rev. Dr. Gualtero, Vicar of Dunmore and Sub-Dean of the Cathedral.

13103. Is he a member of the Chapter?—He is a member of the Chapter. He brings the applications before the Bishop, and the Dean and Chapter, from time to time.

13104. Do you know how the fund is invested?—I do not know at all.

13105. But the fund was forthcoming in 1867, and is in existence still?—Certainly.

13106. Can you explain why the certificates directed in the will are not got from the schoolmaster?—I cannot say. Dr. Gualtero would be able to answer that question.

13107. Of course, in distributing the marriage portions, care is taken that they shall be given only to persons who are qualified?—Certainly. I should mention that the school has diminished very much in numbers—there is only a very small number attending at now.

13108. There are fourteen girls now?—Yes, this is another Protestant school in existence, which they prefer attending.

13109. Is the money given for marriage portions or for apprentice fees?—For both.

13110. Are the claims considered at a meeting of the Dean and Chapter?—Yes, they are considered at a meeting of the Dean and Chapter, with the Bishop.

13111. Are the names advertised?—No, I do not remember their ever being advertised. I was not sure it was required, I never heard of that clause in the will before.

Mr. Henry V.
Mackery.

Mr. HENRY V. MACKERY, examined.

13112. LORD JUSTICE FRANKLIN.—You are a solicitor, and the Agent and Treasurer to the trustees of Bishop Foy's charity?—I am.

13113. Is the property of the charity actually reserved by the trustees?—Yes, through me, as their Agent.

13114. How long have you been the Agent?—I was appointed, on the death of Mr. Roberts, in 1863. I received my appointment on 14th September, 1863, from the late Bishop of Cashel, Dr. Daly.

13115. Who are the trustees?—The Bishop of Cashel and the Dean of Waterford are the only two existing or acting trustees. I believe the Mayor of Waterford was appointed a trustee by the will, but he has ceased to act since the Municipal Reform Act,—at least during my time he has taken no part in the management.

13116. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—I suppose the Mayor of Waterford is generally a Roman Catholic?—Not always. The present Mayor is a Protestant.

13117. LORD JUSTICE FRANKLIN.—Are we to understand that the Mayor has never, since the Municipal Corporations Act, acted in the management of the charity?—Never, no matter what his denomination may have been, the Mayor has never since, to the best of my knowledge, interfered in the management of the Institution.

13118. Has it been entirely managed by the Bishop, and the Dean of Waterford?—Yes, but I should add that Mr. Charles S. Bolton has acted, for some years back, as a sort of assistant and adviser of the trustees. He has attended as a friend, at the wish of the Bishop, but that does not imply that he has managed the charity.

13119. These of the Aldermen, and the City Sheriffs, had originally a voice in the admission of pupils—do you know how the admissions are conducted now?—I prepare the list of candidates for admission, but the examinations on admission are conducted by the trustees, through the school-master. The results are recorded by me, and that is all I have to do with it.

13120. Is this book, which you have produced, the minute book of the meetings?—Yes, a simple record of the matters that came before the trustees.

13121. Of what nature is the property of the charity?—It consists of fee simple property in the county of Waterford, and some small possessions in the city. That was the original endowment.

13122. Taking the lands first, have you a rental of them?—I hope to have a rental, containing the poor law valuation and rent of each holding, ready in the course of the day. I have here the book of account, showing the annual income from the endowment of my administration to the present time. This book is divided into two parts, one part a rental, and the other part account.

13123. You opened this account when you became Agent?—Yes.

13124. Had your predecessor kept a similar account?—He kept a similar book.

13125. When you entered on the agency the half year's rental appears to have been £815 8s. 6d.?—Yes.

13126. And there had been earned forward £1,000 5s. 1d. of arrears due?—Yes.

13127. There were thirty-three tenants, at that time, on the estate—how did they hold it?—There were no leases in existence at that time, to the best of my knowledge; they had all expired some time before.

13128. Are there any tenants holding leases now?—There have been some granted during my time.

13129. When were they granted?—One of them within the last year or so, but, without having the lease before me, I cannot speak with the accuracy I would wish.

13130. What is your system of accounting?—At the first meeting of every February we pass the annual accounts. That has been done from the commencement, and the balances are certified at the end of the account.

13131. I find that, when you succeeded to the agency, there was a balance received from the representatives of the late agent of £1,825 10s. 1d.?—Yes, the Bishop, when appointing me, handed me a deposit receipt for £1,825 received from the representatives of my predecessor, and a cheque for £25 10s. 1d. towards current expenses.

13132. Are all payments made through your hands?—Yes, except that the master brings me an account of payments connected with the school, for diet and washing. I pay him, and he pays the bills, but centrally all payments are made through me.

13133. I see the payments are classified into apprentice fees, head and quit rents, salaries, diet, coals, doings, and incidental expenses?—We have varied the classification from time to time as we went on, thinking we might improve it. Sometimes the trustees suggested alterations, and we endeavored to carry them out, in order to improve as we went on.

13134. I will take the account for 1877—your previous year's account was certified on 7th February, 1877, showing a balance in your hands of £250 17s. 1d.—you then pay taxes and agent's fees, £156 6s. 10d.—what is your remuneration?—I receive five per cent. on the rents and receipts, and £50 a year salary as secretary. At the end of each account there is a summary showing the results in a short form.

13135. In your next item of charges in 1877 I find £169 13s. 3½d. for charges on the rents—what are those?—Quit rents and tithe rent charges. They are set forth in the account.

13136. There is also an insurance?—Yes, the school is insured for £3,000.

13137. I see that the next item is £131 10s. 2½d. for farming account?—Yes, that is for the school farms, which is managed by Mr. Smith, the master, under the sanction of the trustees; I make the payments to him.

13138. Dr. HARR.—The farming account began recently?—Yes.

13139. LOAN JOURNALS FIRSTGIVEN.—How do you see to that?—That is under the control of Mr. Smith. I have nothing to do with it, except to pay the money under the authority of the trustees.

13140. You do not keep any debit and credit account of the farm?—I have never actually kept the farming account. I account for the receipts and payments that pass through my hands, classifying the same in the best possible way.

13141. In your account for 1877 salaries and salaries amount to £305 14s. 9d.?—Yes.

13142. The salaries include £100 to the master, £50 to the warden, and £40 to the assistant master?—Yes.

13143. There is a retiring annuity given to the late master?—Yes; £50 a year, with something in lieu of bond.

13144. It appears that you keep a gardeners at £14s. a week, and his son at 6s., afterwards raised to 7s.; and these payments, with occasional labour bills, for hocking, clothing, &c., brings up the amount for wages to £65 6s. 6d. a year?—Yes; I should state that the garden has always been kept in a state of cultivation, that expenditure has been always going on.

13145. That expenditure of £68 4s. 6d., or thereabouts, for gardeners, would appear to be of longer date than the £131 10s. 2½d. for the farm?—Yes; from the commencement of my connexion with the school, and before it, there was always a garden kept up. I pay those items on the master's requisition, and under the sanction of the trustees.

13146. I find an entry for apprentice fees, £32 10s.—how are those paid?—When a boy is bound apprentice, the usual course is to pay his master £5, part of the fee. The entire fee is £8, and the rest is paid by instalments, on the application of the master.

13147. I find the expenditure for diet, &c., was £619 4s. 1d.—how are the diet accounts checked?—Every month Mrs. Smith produces her book, showing how much is to be paid under each head, the trustees examine it, and on finding it correct they authorize me to pay the money.

13148. Have you any contracts for the diet?—That is in the master's hands—I pay the money on the order of the trustees.

13149. The charge for coal was £34 0s. 11d. in the year?—Yes.

13150. Clothing amounts to £161 7s. 9d., comprising £49 for new boots and repairs, and £119 7s. 9d. for the clothing?—Yes.

13151. How is the clothing supplied?—By Messrs. Robertson and Ledlie. There is an agreement with them—they supply the clothing and furnish their bill to me, I submit it to the trustees, and on their sanctioning it I make the payment.

13152. Dr. HARR.—Is that amount for 1877, £161, about the average cost for clothing?—Yes, about that.

13153. LOAN JOURNALS FIRSTGIVEN.—Your accounts seem to be paid monthly?—Yes, there is a monthly meeting of the trustees, when every matter, requiring to be submitted to them, is laid before them, and I am directed what to do.

13154. Are any of the accounts allowed to run on longer than a month?—Well, it is desired that every account shall be settled monthly, but it sometimes happens that a bill is not furnished in time, and has to stand over until the next meeting. The system is to settle all accounts monthly.

13155. The charge for stationery is £15 3s. 1d.—Yes, that includes £1 1s. for advertisements, the remaining £14 2s. 1d. is for stationery for the school.

13156. I find in the account this entry—"Provincial Bank, interest on overdraft, £13 6s. 6d."—what was that for?—The bank advanced money to the trustees. In consequence of recent building expenses, they have been in excess of their income, and the result was I had to advance money to meet the accounts. The trustees instructed me to overdraft at the bank to whatever extent they overdraw on me. The Provincial Bank charged interest upon the overdraft, which interest I charged to the trustees.

13157. How long has that been going on?—I can produce the Provincial Bank book, which will show it.

13158. Among your incidental expenses, I observe £12 for a penny, £18 10s. for blinds, further interest on overdraft £13 15s. 5d., repairs £15 2s. 1d.—who checks the repairs?—Mr. McCalland, the builder, furnishes the account, which is submitted to the trustees, and when it has been sanctioned by them I pay it.

13159. I find an item for sundry works at Bollinskill church and school, £8 15s. 6d.—what was that?—Some alterations—I do not know much about it, except that I paid the money—were considered necessary in the church, for the accommodation of the school.

13160. Are the school children accommodated in the church?—Yes; the parish church is close to the school.

13161. The total expenditure for the year ending 3 K.

Oct. 5, 1878.
Mr. Henry V.
Bishop.

1878, 1879.
Mr. Henry V.
Mackay.

In February, 1878, appears to have been £2,554 8s. 6d., leaving a balance of £211 15s. 3d., and the account is reached at foot as follows:—

"Having examined the foregoing account with vouchers produced, we find same correct, leaving a balance of £211 15s. 3d., due by us on foot thereof."

In that the same balance on which the overdraft interest is charged?—No; the overdraft interest is the interest charged to me by the bank, whatever it may be at the time. If they charge me with interest I take care that my overdraft shall never exceed the amount of my advance for the trustees—as far as I am I always endeavour to keep the two things separate—I would like to produce the Bank book to show that.

13162. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—I find that on the 30th September, you prepared a summary of the income and expenditure, showing an excess of expenditure over income of £456. The overdraft to the Provincial Bank appears to have been £264—were you paying interest on that sum?—They charge interest on the amount of the overdraft, whatever it might be.

13163. Do the bank allow you to overdraft to whatever extent you please?—They do—on the authority of the trustees.

13164. I find that in 1877 the balance against the charity at the beginning of the year was £230 17s. 1d., while at the end of the year it was £311 15s. 3d.—was there any exceptional expenditure in that year?—If you will kindly refer to the end of the account, you will see a summary of the expenditure.

13165. Yes—the accounts are certainly very clearly and regularly kept, the summary of the account for 1877 shows the gross income to be £1,544 16s. 6½d., deductions are shown for poor rates, income tax, agent's fees, stamps, &c.—£248 14s. 5½d., and then there are charges for gas, rents, water, sent-charges, &c.—£193 11s. 4d.—leaving net income available for the school, £1,107 9s. 10½d. Then on the other side we have the expenditure, repurchase fees, £32 15s., salaries and emoluments, £395 14s. 9d., gardener's wages, and labour, £28 6s. 6d., fuel and candles, £619 4s. 7½d., coal, £34 0s. 11½d., stationery, £25 3s. 1d., clothing, £161 7s. 9d., medicals, £119 2s. 1d., sundries, £23 12s. 6½d.—total expenditure, £1,385 8s. 3½d. Deficit of income to meet expenditure, £230 18s. 4d., add the advance balance at commencement of year, £230 17s. 1d., making the advance balance in February, 1878, £511 15s. 3d.—Yes. I may explain that the principle on which we make out the summary of income is to deduct the charges from the gross rental received, so as to reduce it to the amount exactly available for the school.

13166. The account is perfectly clear—no explanation could make it clearer than it is—I endeavour to make it as clear as I possibly can.

13167. Dr. HARR.—What was the cause of the large deficit?—The increasing expenditure, I suppose.

13168. Were any of the rents lost?—No—the rents were all paid with one exception. These rents have been an increase of expenditure—the expenditure of the organization and reconstruction of the school.

13169. LORD JUSTICE FRANKLIN.—It would appear to have been owing to a temporary falling off in the receipts, for I find, on looking to the next year's summary, that your next receipts for the year 1878, available for the school, amounted to £1,523 4s. 3½d.—that is to say, they were £416 more than in the previous year, while your expenditure was £1,346, as against £1,385, and the result is that you had a surplus income last year?—That was caused in this way: two tenants had got into arrears, they were proceeded against by ejectment, and the arrears were paid up in full.

13170. Then the sum stated in the account for 1877 is not an average year's income?—The sum stated in the account was the actual income—I always put in the account the income actually received within the year.

13171. Dr. HARR.—By taking the income of the two years, and adding the accounts together, you would arrive at the correct average?—Yes.

13172. LORD JUSTICE FRANKLIN.—I will take the accounts for four years. The first in 1875-6 is that year the net income available for the school was £1,347 8s. 5d.; the amount expended, £1,290 19s. 5½d.; surplus income, £56 9s. 4d.; surplus on last account, £130 19s. 5½d.; total surplus, £197 8s. 7½d.; building and improvement account, £390, deficit—balance due by trustees, £23 11s. 5d. in the year. The next year was 1876-7: in that year the net income available for school was £1,417 9s. 5½d.; expenditure, £1,350 16s. 6½d.; surplus income, £56 12s. 5d.; repairs and improvements in this year, £334 18s. 2½d.; deficit on last account, £12 11s. 4d.; leaving balance due by trustees, £230 17s. 1d. The next year is 1877-8, net amount available for school, £1,207 9s. 10½d.; expenditure, £1,388 8s. 3½d.; deficit, £280 18s. 4½d.; advance balance from previous year, £230 17s. 1d.; advance balance 5th February, 1878, £511 15s. 3d. Lastly, we have the year 1878-9, net income available for school, £1,523 4s. 3½d.; expenditure, £1,346 2s. 6½d.; surplus income, £177 1s. 5d.; advance balance from last year, £511 15s. 3d.; advance balance on 4th February, 1879, £234 13s. 3d. You appear to have had a deficiency owing to your expenditure on repairs and improvements?—That was the main cause of it, undoubtedly.

13173. How did it come to pass that there was such a difference between the incomes of 1877 and 1878—one was only £1,207 9s. 10½d., while the other was £1,523 4s. 3½d.?—The arrears which were due by the two tenants I have mentioned would just reconcile the two.

13174. Dr. HARR.—On an average the amount available for the school is about £1,300 a year?—Yes.

13175. In consequence of the rents being in arrears, the amount was £1,100 in one year, and in the other £1,500?—Yes.

13176. If the arrears were about £200, then, on the supposition that they properly belonged to the year 1877, it would make the incomes of both years about equal?—Yes, but I always give in the accounts the sum actually received. The amount received in each year was exactly as I recorded it.

13177. LORD JUSTICE FRANKLIN.—I see that in 1874 you paid to Messrs. Ryan £1,900—what was that for?—For the improvements and reconstruction of the school.

13178. When was that work commenced?—In 1873.

13179. It appears from your books that you paid Messrs. Ryan £1,200 in that year?—Yes.

13180. It would appear that, in round numbers, there was an expenditure of about £2,000 on the building since 1874?—It was fully that, if not more.

13181. In what condition was the building, previous to the expenditure?—It was in a dilapidated condition, it was greatly in need of reconstruction, I believe. I should mention that it was not under my care, so that I cannot very accurately describe the condition.

13182. Under whose care was it?—Under the care of the trustees, the master, and the inspector. I was not under any care; I looked upon the inspector as responsible for that.

13183. Who was the inspector?—Mr. De Bony—he and the trustees and schoolmaster had charge of the building. It was never my duty to inspect the school, it was altogether outside my jurisdiction; I had no authority except to act on the instructions I received from the trustees. I never accepted any responsibility as to the state of the building.

13184. Perhaps, although you do not consider yourself responsible, you can tell us how it happened, that the building was allowed to get into such a state of dilapidation?—Well, it was an old building—old buildings rapidly deteriorate.

13185. We have seen the building, and it certainly is a beautiful structure now, and in excellent order?—Yes, a large sum has been expended on making it so.

13184. Was the school rebuilt altogether, or was it merely repaired and the old fabric preserved?—It was not only repaired but extended and enlarged.

13187. Still it is partially the old fabric?—Yes, the house, I believe, was built previous to 1813. I am not able to say whether much was expended on it before my time.

13188. I will go back to some of the earlier years, to see what the expenditure was. I find that in 1803, the year in which you were appointed, you commenced with £1,500 on deposit receipt, and a cash balance of £25 15s. 1d. ?—Yes, that was placed in my hands by the Bishop when I was appointed.

13189. The expenditure in that year included apprentice fees, £26 10s. 6d.; head and quit rents, £43 1s. 10d.; salaries, £156 2s. 11d.; wages, £18; diet £14 10s. 6d.; coal, £9 18s. 6d.; printing and stationery, £2 6s. 3d.; clothing and necessaries, £240 12s. 4d.; incidentals, £22 10s. 2d.; tithe rent-charge, £55 16s. 7d.; taxes, £59 1s. 8d.; postage, 12s.; lodged on deposit receipt, £309; balance due the trustees, £91 18s. 6d.; that would make your accumulated funds to £2,220 ?—Yes, about that.

13190. There was no expenditure for repairs in that year?—No. I think there was very little expenditure up to the period of the reconstruction.

13191. Then that would account for the dilapidation?—Perhaps so. I became agent in 1808, and the reconstruction commenced in 1813. During the interval very little had been expended on the building, as far as I am aware.

Of course anything that was expended would be through me, and I do not think any extensive repairs took place during the period from 1808 to 1813. It appears to me that the improvement of the school, the enlargement and extension of it, so as to make it more suitable for the purpose, would account for a great deal of the expenditure—it was not merely repairs—so that perhaps, after all, the building may not have been in such a very bad condition.

13192. You and yourself just now that it was in a state of dilapidation?—Well, on consideration, I do not think it was in such a bad state.

13193. Take the account for 1807-70, apprentice fees, £71 2s. 2d.; head and quit rents, £109 1s. 9d.; insurance, £1 13s. 6d.; salaries, £247 5s. 2d.; wages, £36 10s. 6d.; diet and sundries, £414 6s. 8d.; coal, £29 16s.; printing and stationery, £6 13s. 6d.; clothing and necessaries, £140 4s. 10d.; incidentals, £15 0s. 6d.; tithe rent-charge, £53 2s. 1d.; taxes, &c., £61 15s. 6d.; postage, £1; agent's fees, £51 6s. 5d.; balance, £595 15s. 3d.; so that there was nothing expended on the building in that year?—No.

13194. Now, in the next year, 1870-71, you incurred £1,500 in the 3 per cents, and lodged £339 15s. 11d. on deposit receipts?—Yes.

13195. The expenditure was—apprentice fees, £58 4s. 5d.; head and quit rents, £102 1s. 0d.; insurance, £3 6s. 6d.; salaries, £240 15s. 10d.; wages, £36 8s.; diet and sundries, £404 10s. 6d.; coal, £18 18s.; printing and stationery, £1; clothing and necessaries, £293 8s. 2d.; incidentals, £11 18s. 6d.; rent-charge, £57 2s. 5d.; taxes, £41 13s. 6d.; allowance to tenants, £55; postage, &c., £1; agent's fees, £51 17s. 6d.;—there was no expenditure in that year for repairs?—No.

13196. In the next year—1871-2—you invented a further sum of £400 in the Three Per Cents?—Yes.

13197. I need not go through the items of expenditure in that year, there was no outlay for repairs, and at the end of the year there was a balance of £397 6s. 4d. due to the trustees?—Yes.

13198. The next year—1872-3—ended with a balance due to the trustees of £1,046 8s. 10d.?—Yes.

13199. Then, in the following year—1873-4—you lodged on deposit receipt £309, and you began to pay the builders—the repairs had commenced in that year—and you paid Messrs. Ryan £1,300?—Yes.

13200. Did you advertise for contractors for the work?—Yes, I inserted advertisements, by direction of the trustees.

13201. Was the work done under the superintendence of an architect?—Yes, Mr. Fuller, the trustees' architect, came down to inspect it. He had his clerk of works in constant superintendence, and he came down himself from time to time whenever required, in fact, all the payments to the contractor were made on Mr. Fuller's certificate. I brought all that most carefully under the notice of the trustees, and did nothing without their instructions.

13202. We looked over the place to-day, and it appears to be as nearly in perfect order as a building of that era can be. Now, as to the income, can you tell us how the estate is let?—There are only three leases on the rural part of it. The other tenants hold at will, or from year to year.

13203. How are the rents fixed?—I took the rents just as I found them. There has been no change during my time, except a slight addition made on the consent of two of these leases—a slight addition was made to those rents merely to round up the sum of money.

13204. Do you know how long the rents have remained the same?—As far as I can ascertain, they are the same as they were in 1856.

13205. In fact, has the estate been held by the trustees for the last twenty-three or twenty-four years, at the rentals of the last time?—Well, the rents seem to be fair rents, in most cases they are over Griffith's valuation.

13206. Has there been any valuation of the property made for the trustees?—No; not during my time.

13207. Or any ascertainment made with the view of seeing whether the tenants were paying the full letting value of their holdings?—No.

13208. LORD B. CHURCHILL.—When was the last valuation made?—No valuation has been made during my time.

13209. Did you receive from your predecessor any valuation of the estate?—No. A number of books and papers connected with the estate were handed to me by his representatives.

13210. Have you looked at them?—Yes, carefully.

13211. Is there any valuation of the estate amongst them?—Nothing of the sort—that is, there is no valuation by any valuator.

13212. How long was your predecessor the agent?—From 1835, or thereabouts.

13213. LORD JUSTICE FRYDEMAN.—What is the average of the property?—The total acreage is 2,120s. 3s. 10s.; statute measure, according to the Ordnance Survey; according to the statute, it is 1,351s. 2s. 3s. 10s.

13214. Where is the land situated?—Part of it is near Parton. Two of the townlands, Methyl and another, are not far from Carrick-on-Suir. The other townlands are nearer Waterford, on this side of Parton.

13215. Is it all arable land?—No, it is mostly pasture. Part arable, but the larger portion pasture.

13216. Is there any waste or bog in it?—Very little—the proportion of waste is small.

13217. Do you know Griffith's valuation of the entire estate?—The rental which I am having made out gives Griffith's valuation of each holding. I am endeavouring to make the rental as full and exact as possible. It is a thing that requires to be carefully gone over, but I hope it will be complete in the course of to-day.

13218. Do you ever visit the estate?—I do, occasionally, whenever there is any matter to be reported upon, or whenever there is a necessity for it.

13219. Do you collect the rents on the estate?—No, the tenants come and pay me at Waterford.

13220. You have no fixed time for inspecting the estate?—No.

13221. You have two bailiffs—what are their duties?—They call on the tenants, warn them when rent is due, and make themselves generally useful.

13222. How are repairs on improvements carried out?—When any tenant makes an application it is brought before the trustees, and they ask me to report

OCT. 2, 1879.
Mr. Henry V.
Mackay.

upon it. I examine and report on the matter, and the trustees decide accordingly.

18223. Has the number of tenants increased or diminished of late years?—There has been no change in that respect during any time, except in the case of evicted tenants, whose interests were redeemed by their creditors.

18224. Were their interests sold?—Yes, in the Court of Bankruptcy.

18225. Can you state the particulars of these holdings?—One was a lease of the lands of Edinamog, granted to John and Catherine Cullinane for thirty-one years.

18226. How long before the bankruptcy was the lease granted?—A long time before. Arrears of rent accrued, and the tenants were evicted, and their interest sold in the Court of Bankruptcy.

18227. Do you know how much the interest produced?—I cannot say, but I will ascertain it, and let you know the amount.

18228. Was the other interest a leasehold?—Yes, it was a lease to a Mr. John Cullinane. That interest also was sold.

18229. Do the other tenants on the property pay their rents regularly?—Yes, with scarcely an exception, they pay regularly.

18230. Have they large interests in their holdings?—They have fair interests.

18231. It is rather an unusual thing that there should have been no change made in the rents since 1856—have you any reason to believe that there was a change made in them previous to that year?—Well, I can scarcely go back so far. It struck me that the tenants seemed to be paying a fair rent, and I thought it better to leave it so, at the same time, I fully contemplated that, as soon as things righted themselves, there should be a survey of the estate.

18232. What do you mean by "righted themselves"?—We have gone through a number of prosperous years since that time. Was nothing done to ascertain whether the lands were under-let?—I did not quite see my way to recommend a change. The tenants seemed to be paying a fair rent.

18233. Surely that which was a fair rent in 1856 would not be a fair rent in 1879?—The rents were fixed by the trustees and Mr. Roberts, the previous agent.

18234. And you left them so?—I did.

18235. Did you ever bring the matter under the attention of the trustees, that the lands should be surveyed and valued?—No.

18236. May I ask are you agent over any other estate?—I am.

18237. Could you tell me—of course I only want the approximate figures—the difference in value between lands in 1865 and 1877—how much per cent., in your opinion, did the letting value alter in that time?—I never had occasion to calculate that.

18238. Land was more valuable in 1875?—Certainly. Still I always acted on the principle that it was better for the trustees that the tenants should have a substantial interest in their farms, and I did not direct my attention to any increase of rents, although at the same time I fully intended there should be a survey of the estate, and that would probably have led to some revision; but I did not feel the necessity of making any move about it during the present time, because I thought the tenants ought to have a substantial interest in their holdings. That was my feeling about it.

18239. Have the rents been paid this year?—Since the account was closed in February last, the cash actually received from tenants has been £476 11s. 3d.

18240. From what you say as to their never having been any alteration of the rental since 1856, do you apprehend any difficulty in recovering the rents this year?—I sometimes feel rather uneasy about it.

18241. Notwithstanding the fact that you never raised the rents during the prosperous times, you fear that now, in consequence of the depression, there may be a difficulty in collecting the rents?—Yes. The tenants have asked for an abatement, and I am by no means confident that I shall get in the rents. Perhaps it is better not to dilate upon the subject.

18242. Are the holdings large?—Most of them are, but some of them are small.

18243. What evidence have you as to the soundness of the holdings—have you any surveyor?—I have detached surveys of particular townlands, but no complete survey of the whole estate. That has always been a difficulty with me. I did not like to put the trustees to the expense of it.

18244. The Bishop and Dean are the trustees?—Yes.

18245. Who is Mr. Bolton?—Mr. Charles Bolton, of Brook Lodge; he is not a trustee, but he sits at the meetings as a friend and adviser.

18246. I have looked over the meetings of the trustees for the year 1877, and I find that only on two occasions in that year have there been two trustees at any of the meetings—in that so?—I have always recorded the exact attendance; whenever I am in the book is correct.

18247. In July and September the meetings were attended by the Bishop and Dean, and on those occasions only were the two trustees present. On other occasions the meetings were attended by Mr. Bolton?—Yes.

18248. He, I suppose, acted as a trustee?—He gave assistance, at the request of the trustees.

18249. I find in your minute book on 2nd May, 1877, "Meeting of Bishop Pay's Trustees—Present, Charles N. Bolton, Esq., and, although nobody else appears to have attended, yet the affairs of the charity were gone into, business was transacted, and payments ordered to be made to the extent of £108—can you explain that?—The book states just what took place.

18250. Mr. Bolton, although not a trustee, ordered payments to be made to the amount of £108?—If Mr. Bolton had not been there I would have had authority myself probably to make the payments. I would like to see what these payments were—because there are certain payments of course.

18251. I will read you the list of payments that were made—"Mr. Smith's account for diet, £32, Jackson for bread, £14; a proposal to apprentice one of the boys was passed, subject to the Bishop's approval, coal, £5; boots, £8; clothes, £31. Mary Cullen's letter, complaining of treatment from her mother, John Cullinane, brought before Mr. Bolton—'not entertained.' You see these accounts, some of them for considerable sums, were paid on the authority of Mr. Bolton?—I had authority from the trustees to make some payments myself.

18252. But if you had made the payments they would, as a matter of course, have come before the trustees for sanction at their next meeting?—Well, these payments appear to be urgent, and I had the authority of the trustees, where the accounts were correct, and the goods had been supplied on the order of the trustees, to pay the money.

18253. You had authority yourself, but what authority had Mr. Bolton?—That is a matter which the trustees will explain—Mr. Bolton, at the request of the trustees, assisted in the management, but with regard to these accounts, I felt I had perfect authority to pay them.

18254. I find that, in the year 1877, the affairs of the school were almost entirely managed by the Bishop—we may put Mr. Bolton out of consideration, so he was not a trustee—was that owing to the Dean's being unable to attend?—Yes, the late Dean was in infirm health, and was away a great deal.

18255. He died in 1877?—Yes, I think so.

18256. In 1878 have you had a fuller attendance of trustees?—Well, there are only two trustees. The most I could have was two.

18257. Allow me to draw your attention to the Act of Parliament—all through the Act the Bishop of Cashel, the Dean of Waterford, and the Mayor of Waterford are named as trustees—may I ask whether you make leases and other contracts of that nature under the signature of the Bishop and Dean alone?—During my time, and, I believe, for years before, the Bishop and Dean have been the sole acting trustees.

13258. Has the Mayor ever been called upon to act?—I never called upon him.

13259. The Act of Parliament provides that the Bishop for the time being should have the nomination of officers—such as the schoolmaster and schoolmistress—and that they should be confirmed at the Bishop's pleasure, according as he should judge of their well or ill demeanour; and that the Mayor, with any three Aldermen and Sheriffs of Waterford, should quarterly, half yearly, or yearly, according as the scholars should be removed to India or otherwise, for the better information and direction of the Bishop, signify the names of such persons whom they think it to be admitted to the school—therefore the first nomination of pupils is given to the Mayor and Sheriffs of Waterford, and three Aldermen—were you aware of that?—They have never interfered, the charity being an ecclesiastical one; since the civic officers were opened it has never been the practice for the Mayor or Aldermen to take any part in the management.

13260. Is it your opinion that the Municipal Corporations Act deprived the Mayor and Aldermen of their right to take part in the management of the charity?—I should say so. I followed the practice which I found in force long prior to my appointment; the Mayor and Aldermen were never summoned to any of the meetings. I looked upon that part of the Act as obsolete.

13261. Do you consider this part of the Act obsolete?—Bishop Pay left his property for the support of the master, who should be obliged to teach fifty children of the inhabitants of Waterford gratis—do you know how many children there are in the school—was there forty?—I do not know.

13262. Do you know whether the children in the school are children exclusively of inhabitants of Waterford?—I do not believe they are.

13264. I find in the regulations for admission it is stated—

"The Candidate must belong to the city of Waterford, be next to between the age of ten and fourteen years; be well lodged, be furnished with a certificate of the marriage of his parents, a certificate of his baptism, and a certificate of the good character of his family; be well versed in common arithmetic, writing, and arithmetic, and in Holy Scriptures, and in the Church Catechism, and after the examination he must be certified as to good health by the physicians of the school, and must spend a month on trial in the school before he is finally received."

—Yes.

13265. LORD R. CREWELL.—Are these regulations always adhered to?—As far as free pupils are concerned, I believe they are, but I do not think they apply to paying pupils; that, however, is a matter that rests with the trustees.

13266. Does Mr. Bolton now attend the meetings?—He comes whenever he can. I give him notice of every meeting.

13267. Can you tell me whether in your recollection Mr. Bolton has on any other occasion sat by himself as trustee, and ordered payment of accounts?—I should say he has, on more than one occasion, but I think I am safe in saying that the occasions would be few and far between. I should observe that I do not say that he sits as a trustee. I recognise him as representing the trustees, and he attends and gives advice.

13268. Would it not strike you as a strange thing—a gentleman, who was not a trustee at all, sitting by himself and transacting the business?—It might, but we got so accustomed to it. I am sure he has sat on more than one occasion. At the same time, if Mr. Bolton had not been there, these are payments which I would have made on my own authority; and Mr. Bolton has been always most careful to postpone anything that required consideration, and never did anything except what was a matter of course. Anything that was not mere routine business he always directed us to bring before the trustees themselves.

13269. LORD JUSTICE FRYCHAMER.—The Act enables you to give a salary not exceeding £400 to the master—What is his salary?—£100 a year.

13270. And a salary not exceeding £50 to each of the others. What is the salary of the others?—£40 a year.

13271. How many others are there?—One.

13272. The Act also enables wages to be paid to servants, not exceeding £100 per annum?—The master forwards his account for the servants every month.

13273. Does the expenditure on servants exceed £100 a year?—I should say not.

13274. Do you know this account book, which Mr. Smith, the master, has just produced?—Yes. I see it every month.

13275. I observe that the monthly wages of servants are £2 6s. 8d.?—Yes.

13276. I understand that all your leases of farms, and agreements for the management of property, are signed by the Dean and the Bishop?—Yes.

13277. I find the right of shooting over the property was given to Mr. Ambrose Congreve?—Yes, Mr. Congreve, of Mount Congreve.

13278. Was it given to him for nothing?—Yes.

13279. Is there any shooting on the property?—I believe there is. Mr. Congreve seemed to think there would be some, but, not being a sporting man, I do not understand it much.

13280. When the application for the shooting was made did you make any inquiry to ascertain whether it was worth anything?—No, the trustees have always been in the habit of giving it away.

13281. Did you make any endeavour to let the shooting?—No.

13282. Lord Waterford is returned as tenant for 18 acres of the estate at £23 1s. 6d. a year?—Yes.

13283. Who is in occupation of that portion?—I cannot tell.

13284. Can you tell whether Lord Waterford occupies it himself, or is it in the occupation of under-tenants?—I cannot answer that question.

13285. You do not know whether Lord Waterford derives a profit rent out of it or not?—I do not know what is his arrangement about it, but I know Lord Waterford is our tenant.

13286. Is he tenant from year to year?—He is.

13287. And, for all you know, the lands may be in the hands of under-tenants, who pay Lord Waterford a profit rent?—I cannot tell. I know Lord Waterford is the trustees' tenant, and pays the rent.

13288. You do not appear to know what the site of the building is?—No, I cannot answer that question.

13289. As to another holding, Grantstown, the Bishop of Cachel is returned as tenant, at £41 6s. 10d. a year, in the rentals, till 1871. How was that land used?—I think the Bishop occupied it. It is a house attached to the school.

13290. The Bishop appears to have held it, and paid the rent, £41 6s. 10d. yearly, until last November, 1871. In the rental of 1873 it is entered as held by the representatives of the Bishop of Cachel and John Fanning, at £43 10s. 6d.; and in 1873 it is put down to John Fanning, £49 1s. 9d. Who is Mr. John Fanning?—His house and ground adjoin that of the trustees.

13291. Who let the ground to him?—The trustees.

13292. On what terms?—The same terms. They had let it previously to the Bishop, and they did not see their way to taking it into their own hands, so, as the Bishop did not desire to retain it, they let it to Mr. Fanning.

Oct. 1, 1873
Mr. Henry V.
Mackay.

Oct. 1, 1875.

Dr. Henry V.
Mackay

13293. Is he a gentleman of means?—He is.

13294. Was it let to him as tenant from year to year?—He held it for a short time.

13295. I find that his rent in 1873 was £41 4s. 9d., but in 1874 it was only £35—that was a reduction of £6 4s. 9d., under what circumstances was that reduction made?—We had some little trouble in dealing with Mr. Fanning—quarrels arose between him and the trustees, and we had to make an abatement.

13296. In 1876 the rent received was only £38, for what the Bishop had paid £41 for?—We could not make any better terms. We made the best bargain we could with Mr. Fanning at the time.

13297. Do you not say that you had been getting from the Bishop £41 during all those years—good times and bad—and the rent was reduced to Mr. Fanning, first to £35, and then to £38?—We decided according to the circumstances, and did the best we could.

13298. And "the best you could do" seems to have been to lose £16 a year out of £41—nearly 40 per cent?—We could not make better terms. Mr. Fanning was the most eligible tenant, and the trustees did not see their way to do any better.

13299. Now, I observe that in the rental for 1877 that rent disappears altogether?—The trustees took the land into their own hands.

13300. Is that the land which is now included in the school farm?—Yes.

13301. Therefore, in calculating whether the farm is paying its way, we must take into account the letting value as having lately been £41?—Yes, of course.

13302. Can you tell me of your own knowledge—following up the question I put to you about Lord Waterford—whether all your tenants are occupying tenants?—I believe they all are.

13303. Have any of them sub-let?—Possibly some of them may.

13304. Is the estate so managed that sub-letting might exist without your knowledge?—Such a thing might happen. Of course if my attention was called to it I would know of it. I am not prepared to answer the question.

13305. Is there any estate rule against sub-letting?—Not that I know of.

13306. Do you put any clause against sub-letting in your agreements?—The lettings all took place before my time.

13307. I understand the great majority of the lettings are made without any written document?—Yes.

13308. Is there any sub-letting on the estate, as far as you know?—I am not prepared to say that there is not—there may be to some extent—it prevails on properties very generally, and it is not easy to check it.

13309. Is there any sub-dividing on the estate?—I am not aware of any since the commencement of my administration, but I am not prepared to answer that question without previous preparation.

13310. The "preparation" would be the ordinary preparation of going to see the property. I want to ascertain what knowledge you have about it. I will take your rental.—"Kilencragh"—the first name in the list, the tenants are the "representatives of James Rockett"—who pays you the rent of that holding?—John Rockett is the occupier now, he pays me the rent.

13311. The next is Thomas Sheehan, his rent is £160 2s. 4d.—is he in occupation now?—He is; but I cannot say positively that he has so part of it sub-let. I know he recently let a small cabin on the estate.

13312. The next is Peter Wall—£150 18s. 8d.—is he in occupation of his entire holding?—I am sure he is in occupation of the principal portion of it.

13313. The next is "representatives of Emily"—£185"—who is the occupier of that holding?—Miss Anne Carroll.

13314. Have you any evidence of the boundaries of the different holdings? Suppose you were called on to settle a dispute as to the boundaries, what materials have you to decide?—Nothing except the maps.

13315. Have you maps?—I have maps of some portions of the estate. In any case of that sort I would have to deal with it to the best of my ability. I have no special evidence with regard to it.

13316. What is the date of your maps?—Some of them have no date.

13317. Has any map been made since you became agent?—No.

13318. Was there any map made in your predecessor's time?—Some of the maps which I now have in my possession were made, I believe, in Mr. Robert's time.

13319. If you had to settle a case of disputed boundary, what would you do, what map would you set upon?—I would not set altogether upon maps. I would collect the best evidence I could.

13320. Have you any rentals of Mr. Robert's time?—I have the rental he produced at the last inquiry and I have his Account Book.

13321. LOUIS R. CARRUTHERS.—You appear to have regarded the Act of Parliament regulating this chiefly, so far as it appeared the Mayor, Aldermen, and Sheriff as trustees, as obsolete, and also the recommendation that the children should belong to the city of Waterford, so far as paying pupils are concerned,—do you consider the provision obsolete by which the trustees were empowered "to demise the lands by lease for any term not exceeding thirty-one years, or three lives, but no longer, for the best improved rent that could be gotten for the same"—or were you aware of the provision, that the lands were to be let on lease for not more than thirty-one years or three lives, at the best improved rent that could be got for them?—I was.

13322. Have the trustees acted on that?—They have made the three leases I have mentioned.

13323. Three leases on the entire estate?—Three during my time—I am not aware of any other.

13324. What were these three leases for?—Thirty-one years.

13325. What was the rent paid for these holdings before you gave the leases?—It was a trifle under the rent reserved by the lease.

13326. Did the lease take the rent?—Yes, slightly.

13327. LORD JUSTICE FRY.—Only "a trifle" the amount, I think you said?—Yes, to make the rent even money.

13328. LOUIS R. CARRUTHERS.—May I ask why the property is not held under lease generally?—The tenants did not seem anxious for leases.

13329. Is it the desire of the trustees to let the property on lease. Have they offered the lands on lease?—They did; they signified their willingness to give leases, but the tenants seemed perfectly indifferent about it.

13330. LORD JUSTICE FRY.—In the Report of the Royal Commission on Endowed Schools, 1844-5, this passage occurs:—

"As some of this property is let at rates fixed 50 years ago, and some at reduced rates, at which it was let in the years 1851 and 1859, when land was depressed in value, the rate of letting is not uniform: the parties actually are seen to have been let at far more, having regard to the value of land at the time, and the condition in which the farms then were, but the rates are under the present value; so the other hand, some of the farms let 20 years ago, and at which no change has since been made—appear to be let at a high rate, and it is on these farms that serious wars are done."

That was the state of things in 1857. Has any alteration been made since that time to set that to rights?—No, what I said before, I repeat. I believe the rates were fair then, and I believe it to be wise and expedient that the tenants should have an interest in their holdings. I acted upon that view.

13331. Nothing can be more unfair than that one man should hold at the letting of 1857, and another at that of 1827, although to the landlord the result might be that in the aggregate he was getting a fair rent for the whole estate, because some tenants paid too much, and others too little. When you say that the rental is a fair one, are you judging by the rest of the whole estate, or taking each holding separately?—I am judging of the estate generally. The tenants, as a rule, have paid their rents well, and appeared satisfied with them, and I was satisfied with them too.

 Mr. Henry W.
 Mackay.

13332. As far as you know, may it be the fact that some of the rents now actually paid by your tenants were fixed in 1852, and others in 1827?—It may be so. I could not say that it was not so.

13333. LORD R. CRECHILL.—As a matter of fact you do not know when the rents were fixed?—I do not. It occurred so long before my time that I cannot tell.

13334. Was your attention ever drawn to that Report of the Commission of 1857?—I am not aware that I ever saw it until recently.

13335. LORD JUSTICE FRANKLIN.—I will read another statement from that Report:—

"There are some outlier houses on these lands, but not more than what are required to accommodate labourers to work the land; however, some of the outlier houses are in very bad order, and the tenants on whose lands they are, will charge a rent for them, should be required to keep them in proper order."

Can you tell us in what order the outlier houses on the estates are now?—I would require to examine them in order to answer with certainty about it.

13336. The same report states:—

"Some of the tenants on the estates have considerable land houses, but the majority dwell in thickened cottages, which were improvements. They should be encouraged to get better houses; and, perhaps, the best way of doing this would be to allow the rent of the estates and tender to any tenant who would build such a house as the agent approved of. The tenants themselves are usually of the age and unconcerned of having all their houses thickened, and are anxious, as far as they can, to get them straight."

Has any management been made, during your time, as to that?—Allowances have been made. In one or two cases I have allowed sums to tenants who were building.

13337. What steps did you take to see that the value was given to the estate in those cases—that the work was properly done for which the allowance was made?—I examined the work done, and having some experience in that way, I satisfied myself that there was full value.

13338. How far is Ballyquin from Waterford?—About 11 miles.

13339. How long is it since you were on those lands?—It is some time since I have been over them. It is not in my power to go over the estate very frequently.

13340. What do you mean by "some time since"?—How long ago were you over that part of the estate?—It is several years. As a fact, I have been unable to pay as many visits to the tenants as I should like.

13341. Take another townland, Kilmashag. How long ago is it since you have visited that?—That is about five miles from Carrick, and it is, therefore, some to get to it. I have been there more frequently.

13342. How far is it from Waterford?—It is about 12 miles from Waterford.

13343. What about Methel?—That is next to Kilmashag.

13344. Have you been at Hacketstown recently?—Hacketstown is about 9 miles from Waterford. I have been frequently there too.

13345. How long is it since you visited it?—My last visit there was in November last.

13346. I find a notice in your book in reference to the Rev. Edward Ridgway, as to his getting a lease of part of Methel?—Yes. He held some land from the trustees, along with the glebe house of Methel, and he took a lease of it.

13347. What is the extent of it?—The rental which I have been preparing will give full information about that.

13348. Can you tell me the rent?—The rent is £28 6d.

13349. His holding commenced in 1852, at £25 11s. 11d. and the rent remained at that, so that the lease was made at the old rent?—Yes.

13350. Why was that lease made?—The trustees decided to grant it.

13351. What was the advantage to the estate?—I put the thing before them fully, and they decided to give the lease.

13352. What is the acreage of that holding?—I think it is sixteen acres.

13353. Do you know the holding?—I do.

13354. Did you visit it when Mr. Ridgway asked, for the lease?—No.

13355. How could you advise the trustees as to the terms of the lease without making yourself acquainted with the circumstances?—I believed it was a fair rent.

13356. What were the grounds of your belief? How did you form your opinion?—Well, the rent had been fixed before, and it did not occur to me that the granting of a lease should increase the rent. If it was a fair rent before, I do not see why it should be increased on the granting of a lease.

13357. Here, now, in a case of a letting actually made by lease within the last fourteen months, please to inform us what steps you took, in order to ascertain that the rent, £25 11s. 11d. was, in the language of the Act of Parliament, the only one that could give Mr. Ridgway any title whatever, "the best improved rent that could be gotten for the same without fine"?—Well, I did not put that strict construction upon the Act of Parliament that you put upon it.

13358. I am not putting any construction upon it; I am merely reading it:—

"It shall be lawful for the trustees by indenture to demise the trust lands at the best improved rent that can be got for the same without fine."

Are you aware that, unless the lease is in accordance with the statute, the tenant has no title, and the trustees are liable to the Court of Chancery for a breach of trust?—My impression was that the rents were fair rents.

13359. What I want to know is what foundation you had for that impression?—They had been let at those rents for a long time, and the tenants were paying the rents satisfactorily.

13360. Do you consider that, if the rents had remained at the same figures for fifty years, that would be evidence that the present letting value was charged?—I suppose the trustees would not let the lands for less than the value.

13361. Probably not, if they knew their value; but had the trustees any knowledge of the value of the lands?—I should say they had, through the agent.

13362. You were their agent when they granted that lease—did you inform them of the value?—I meant their previous agent. The rent was fixed by him, and I did not see any way to alter it.

13363. Was this rent, £25 11s. 11d., for sixteen acres of Methel, the rent that had been put upon it in 1852, or the rent of 1827?—I could not say. I accepted the rents as I found them, as I believed them to be the fair value.

13364. LORD R. CRECHILL.—Allow me to ask you, do you manage any estates of private gentlemen?—I do.

13365. Are any of them of considerable extent?—No, not very large.

13366. What is the largest property belonging to a private gentleman that you have the management of?—About £200 a year.

13367. About how many tenants are there on that estate?—Between thirty and forty.

13368. How long have you had the management of that estate?—Eighteen or nineteen years.

13369. May I ask whether you are as ignorant of the letting value of that property as you appear to be of this?—I am not aware that I am ignorant of it.

13370. Are you as ignorant of the terms of the agreements with the tenants on that property as you state yourself to be with regard to the property of this charity?—I am not aware that I have stated that I am ignorant.

13371. Then, can you tell us at what time any of the agreements with any of the tenants on that property were made?—I had not the means of ascertaining it.

Oct. 2, 1875.
Mr. Henry V.
Mackay.

13373. Surely a careful examination of the papers in your possession—or an inquiry from the tenants—would have given you the information?—There were matters of detail. I had no immense mass of detail to go through, and I did not feel the necessity of it.

13374. May I ask you are you managing this trust-property in the same way that you manage the estates of the private gentlemen for whom you are agent?—Yes.

13374. In exactly the same way?—Much in the same way.

13375. Can you give us as much information about the circumstances of the charitable property as you can do of the private estate of £200 a year?—Well, not so much, because the trust-property is more extensive, and I have had better materials to work upon and more facilities for obtaining information about the other.

13376. May I ask whether on the estate of £200 a year the tenants are holding under written agreements?—They have leases in many cases.

13377. Have the other tenants written agreements?—I do not think it is the practice to have written agreements.

13378. Is it your practice?—In many cases it is, but not always.

13379. May I ask why that practice has not been carried out on this estate of Bishop Foy's Trustees?—Well, no lettings have been made by me—I just took the lettings as I found them.

13380. What salary do you receive from the trustees?—Receiver's fees, at 5 per cent. on the rental, and £20 a year as secretary.

13381. The Act gives the trustees power to appoint an agent who should receive "one shilling in the pound, to be mentioned in all leases of the said lands," and also the yearly salary of £3?—They seem to have raised that.

13382. You act as secretary?—I do.

13383. When you made the lease the other day did you add one shilling in the pound, receiver's fees?—No, that was included in the rent.

13384. You did not carry out the provision in the Act, that the receiver's fees were to be separately charged?—They were included in Mr. Ridgway's case.

13385. Lord Justice Fitzgerald—Is it not the fact that the remuneration of 5 per cent. paid to an agent usually covers not merely the collection of the rents, but also personally visiting the lands and supplying the owners with information as to the circumstances of the estate?—It does in some cases, in others it does not.

13386. Does it not in all cases where the proprietor chooses to require it?—I think each case should be judged according to the individual circumstances.

13387. Did you ever, in your experience, know a lease to be made for thirty-one years, at a rent which had been fixed at a date nobody knew, and which was merely believed by the agent to be the value, because it had been paid he knew not how long, and without any survey, valuation, or inspection of the lands?—Well, the trustees had the matter before them.

13388. What had they before them, except what you, as their agent, told them?—They all seemed perfectly satisfied.

13389. Lord E. CHURCHILL.—Who do you mean by "all"—do you mean the Bishop and the Dean?—Yes; I believed it to be a perfectly fair rent.

13390. Have you any billiffs on the property?—I have two. The way I looked at it was this.—If the tenant had held on without any lease no change would have been made—he would not have been disturbed as long as he paid the rent, and therefore it did not strike me that granting a lease should make any difference in the rent.

13391. Is it not a considerable advantage to a tenant to hold under a lease for thirty-one years, instead of being a tenant from year to year?—I am not sure that it is. I have heard tenants, when leases have been offered them, decline to take a lease, saying "We prefer holding without a lease, for we know that as long as we hold under you we will never be disturbed, but held on for ever so long as we pay the rent, whereas a lease would run out."

13392. Then, we are to understand that in your ordinary management of property, when you give a lease you do not think it necessary to increase the rent?—Unless there are some special circumstances I would say not. I do not see why I should.

13393. You do not see any advantage in a lease?—Tenants often prefer to hold on without them.

13394. Do you think that that may be because they apprehend their rents would be raised if leases were given?—I do not know that.

13395. Lord Justice Fitzgerald—There is one incidental advantage to the landlord in giving a lease, if the matter is attended to on his part—you are aware the landlord can have the benefit of a covenant as to the part of the tenant not to claim compensation under the Land Act—did you intend that provision in your leases?—In some I did.

13396. Did you insert it in Mr. Ridgway's lease?—I would like to have it before me before I could answer that question.

13397. I observe there are allowances for income tax made to the tenants out of the rent—do you get that back?—The only income tax we pay is what we deduct from the tithe-rentcharge.

13398. Do not you make allowances of income tax to the tenants?—Only to the town tenants—namely the rural tenants. The only income tax we pay is what we deduct from the tithe-rentcharge, and we get it back again every three years.

13399. How does it happen that there is no income tax allowed to the other tenants?—They do not pay my income tax. I pay none certainly. They claim none from us, and we claim none.

13400. What does the town property consist of?—Premises in Armistead-house—the old school-house &c. &c.

13401. How are those premises let?—One house is let to Mr. Nicholas Walton, for thirty-one years, at £21 a year.

13402. I see an entry "Representatives of Flushing, £4 14s. 10d."—what is that?—I have no evidence about that. I have been promised information about it by the Corporation who represent Mr. Flushing. As far as I can make out it is a small piece of ground, eight feet by nine, which the Corporation have agreed the interest in. I do not know the nature of their interest. I have been making inquiry and expect to get some information about it.

[Mr. Mackay subsequently obtained permission to add to his evidence an explanatory statement. Vide Appendix, No. 13.]

Mr. William H.
Smith.

Mr. WILLIAM HENRY SMITH, examined.

13403. Lord Justice Fitzgerald—You are the head master of Bishop Foy's School, Waterford?—I am.

13404. You were appointed in March, 1873?—Yes, and came into possession in June, 1873.

13405. How many boys were in the school when you were appointed?—Forty-two.

13406. What was the condition of the premises at that time?—Scarcely habitable; the whole place was crumbling down—master's residence, school, and all. I have been obliged sometimes to stand in the school-room with an umbrella over my head. As regards the master's residence, I did not get it suitable to live in for three years after I came, and had to sleep in the convalescent room for some time.

13407. What experience in teaching had you before you were appointed?—I have been a school-master since I was sixteen years old. I taught a school under Dr. Jellett, in the county Cork; then St. Luke's school in the city of Cork; then that I was appointed to St. Matthias's school, Dublin, and from that I came here. I was head master of St. Matthias's school for seven years.

13408. I believe the building is now in a state of complete repair?—It is in a very satisfactory condition now, in every respect.

13409. What additions have been made to it, besides repairing the old building?—The present assistant master's room is entirely new, and the basement on which it stands, the wing at the rear, the cloakroom, the washroom, lavatory, and the kitchen under the cloakroom, are all new.

13410. What land is occupied with the school?—Twenty-five English acres, including the house, yard, and everything. I had it surveyed myself, since I came.

13411. How is the land used?—We turn it for the school.

13412. The whole of it?—Yes.

13413. Is that what goes into the accounts as "Farming Accounts" since 1873?—Very possibly. I gather so, from what has been stated here to-day.

13414. DA. HART.—There is a charge in the accounts—so much for the farm, and so much for wages.—I suppose that includes the whole?—Quite so.

13415. LEON JENNINGS FERGUSON.—What do you get out of the farm?—The whole milk account, and very nearly the whole butter account, of previous times, has disappeared. We have all our own milk, and the greater part of our own butter. In addition, we have been able to make every year the amount originally paid for rent. The year before last I netted £51 10s for cattle sold, and I hope to get £50 for cattle next week. We have only to buy some of the grass feeding for the cattle. We have our own hay.

13416. There were forty-two boys when you came—how many are there now?—Forty to-day. This is the time of the year when we are always at our lowest. We receive 50s admission in December. After that we are thinning all through the year, up to the following December, when the vacancies are filled.

13417. The printed regulations you have headed as the regulations at present in force with regard to the admission of pupils?—Yes.

13418. I observe nothing in those regulations as to the poverty of the candidate?—No.

13420. What is the nature of the examination?—It is very elementary, indeed. I may mention that the child who stood first in the list, at the last examination, was a pupil from the Waterford infant school. In order to pass the admission examination a boy should be on a par with the best class of an ordinary infant school, and be able to take the junior rank in a school such as mine. I produce a copy of the questions we put to the candidates on admission.

13421. These questions include simple addition, subtraction, short division, multiplication by three figures, and one time in long division?—Yes, those are the tests in arithmetic. In reading and writing we require them to write a line as a test, and to read and spell, with reasonable facility, any words of three syllables.

13422. Is your examination competitive?—Not necessarily competitive.

13423. What is the average number of candidates for each vacancy?—We had twenty-two candidates last time, from whom we elected four boys, and, a few weeks subsequently, we admitted four more of them, without any additional examination.

13424. Do you know the rule that governs the trustees as to the circumstances of the candidates?—I have never looked into it. I believe they must be of the humbler classes, and resident in Waterford. I have a book here which shows the position in life of the parents of each of the children. They are mostly children of servants and tradespeople.

13425. Were the forty-two boys who were in the school when you went there first, of the same class as those who are there now?—Yes.

13426. This book gives the names and occupations of the parents of each boy?—It does.

13427. The occupations are—No. 1, coast guard; 2, sister; 3, boot and shoemaker; 4, staff sergeant, Waterford Artillery; 5, ditto; 6, master baker; 7, coachman; 8, engine fitter; 9, coal merchant; 10, ditto; 11, foreman iron moulder; 12, tailor; 13, cabinet maker; 14, sea captain; 15, farmer; 16, carpenter; 17, saddler; 18, staff sergeant-major, Waterford Artillery; 19, druggist; 20, master baker; 21, porter; 22, mechanical engineer; 23, foreman iron moulder; 24, painter; 25, bootmaker; 26, coast guard pensioner; 27, master bootmaker; 28, engine fitter; 29, painter, Royal Irish Constabulary; 30, sea captain; 31, farmer; 32, furniture dealer; 33, army pensioner; 34, coast guard; 35, engineer; 36, cooper; 37, coachman; 38, druggist; 39, gardener; 40, shoemaker; 41, brewer's clerk; 42, shoemaker; 43, engine fitter; 44, ditto; 45, army pensioner; 46, druggist. Can you tell me whether the boys were indigent?—I hardly know what you would define as indigence.

13428. I mean boys whose parents would not be able to give them education themselves?—Certainly; they would not be able to pay for their education.

13429. Where had they received the education they had got before they came to you?—Most of them—indeed they all came from three establishments—Waterford Model school, Waterford infant school, and the Protestant Orphan school.

13432. We have had evidence as to an Examination in another part of Ireland, near a large city, where the boys had a habit of running away, and we were informed that it was impossible to avoid it. I wish to know your opinion upon that?—I found it quite possible to avoid it, and you will find it is a considerable time since we had any case of a boy leaving the school. It was rather the result of the state of things previous to my appointment. I brought the matter specially before the trustees soon after I came to the school. Four boys had run away; I requested them to pass it over in that case, with a severe reprimand. I believe my predecessor had not been in the habit of reporting such cases to the trustees at all. The first case that occurred after my appointment I reported to the trustees, and got them to give the boys a severe reproof, and at my request they made a rule that any future case of the kind would be punished by expulsion from the school. We had only two cases after that, which were visited with expulsion, and the result has been we have had none since.

THE SCHOOLS
OF
ST. WITHAM II
SOUTH.

13433. You punished these cases severely, for the sake of example?—Yes, because of the state of things that existed previously.

13434. Then, from your experience, the running away of boys would indicate lax discipline?—Unquestionably. I would say it would be very much my own fault.

13435. What punishments have you in the school?—Scarcely any. I have never flogged a boy in my life, and very rarely have to give a slip. I never go beyond that—I might sometimes take off part of a boy's recreation time.

13436. Your general mode of punishment is to deprive them of recreation?—Yes, but we have rarely to do it.

13437. And occasional corporal punishment of a mild character?—It is very mild; we scarcely know what it is.

13438. The trustees have a fixed time for meeting?—Yes, once a month.

13439. Do the trustees, or Mr. Bolton, the gentleman who audits them, go over the school?—They do, but their meetings are held at the Palace, or at the Denney.

13440. But do they come to the school?—They do not hold their meetings there, but they come to the school frequently. The Bishop was with us yesterday.

13441. Is the school subject to any periodical inspection?—We have an annual examination of the school.

13442. Who conducts the examination?—Examiners who are invited by the trustees.

13443. Do they examine all the classes?—Yes, both in secular and religious matters, and the masters assist. As a rule the written part of the examination is entirely drawn up by the assistant master and myself.

13444. What assistants have you?—One; he is a trained Church Education man, from the Kidderley Training School.

13445. Do the two of you manage the whole forty boys?—We do.

13446. How are the boys divided?—Into four groups. I teach the two upper divisions entirely myself, and generally superintend the work of the junior divisions.

13447. You do not teach classics or modern languages?—No. We are not allowed by the scheme to teach classics. The subjects taught in the school are—reading, spelling, writing, dictation, arithmetic, English history, geography, grammar, Euclid, algebra, mensuration, book-keeping, and music.

13448. You and your assistant are qualified to give instruction in all those branches?—Yes, with the exception of music—the assistant is not qualified for that—I teach it myself, but I make it more a recreation. I teach it outside the regular hours.

13449. What are the school hours?—We begin at 7 in the morning. From 7 till 8 they are engaged in preparing their note books, breakfast half past eight, at twenty before 10 they are again in the school, and remain till 12; then a quarter of an hour is allowed for luncheon, and they are back again to school, and remain till two o'clock; and again an hour in the afternoon, from 4 till 5, preparing their lessons for next day.

13450. What is done in the evening?—It is simply a recreation time. We allow draughts and chess, and books to read, and employ them as profitably as we can. We have also a school band which fills up time.

13451. What is the bed hour?—Nine o'clock.

13452. What are their meals?—Breakfast, bread and cream, supper, bread and new milk. The dinners vary—Sunday, boiled beef and potatoes, Monday, soup, vegetables, and bread; Tuesday, roast meat, vegetables, and potatoes; Wednesday, mutton, hatter, and potatoes; Thursday, boiled beef and potatoes; Friday, soup, vegetables, and bread; Saturday, coffee and bread. For luncheon, bread only, every day at 12 o'clock. During the first season the boys are liberally supplied from the garden, by order of the trustees.

13453. Have the boys been healthy?—Extremely so; but, soon after I came, we had a serious run of scarletina, in consequence, I think, of the defective sanitary arrangements. One of the boys died. I had to accommodate several in the back-house, where we purpose making an hospital. We were in a bad way then; but, except on that occasion, we have been hardly known what it is to have sickness in the school.

13455. How many pairs of boots do they get?—The boots never cost more than two pairs per boy in the year. The original contract for the supply of boots was £1 a year for every boy in the school, no matter whether three months in the school or twelve. I found that arrangement very satisfactory, because the contractors, of course, supplied as few pairs as possible. I found a did not do, and we introduced 5s. contracts at one shilling per pair. While on the subject of contracts, I ought to say, that I am afraid Mr. Mackay conceived the idea that it was Mrs. Smith and I arranged the contracts for the diet, and other necessaries for the school. That is a misapprehension, all the contracts are made with the trustees. The various contractors send in their accounts to us and we enter them in the book which has been produced. This book is submitted to the trustees every month and checked with the dockets—one trustee takes the dockets, the other tells the book, they are compared with each other, and they sign in the first instance "for and correct," and at the end of the next month those accepted dockets are again brought forward and signed.

13456. I see you credit the cash received from Mr. Mackay each month?—Yes. It is exactly equal to the amount of the accounts signed by the various contractors, and checked in the manner I have stated.

13457. Did you send up any of your boys to the Intermediate examinations?—No, I did not send up any. I was doubtful whether I could do so—whether I had any boys sufficiently good to compete at all, with the limited number of subjects we have.

13458. Being deprived of classics and modern languages?—Yes. I was afraid it would be very hard for my boys to succeed, they would have to be exceptionally good in the subjects of our limited course, in order to make up for the want of those subjects. Another disadvantage with us is, that our boys are taken away from the school very early—they are very much sought after at present—I have applications for four boys at the present moment, which I will fill within the next few days, I hope.

13459. You know what the subsequent career of your boys has been?—In most cases I do. We shall be happy to refer you to their employers. I am glad to say we have not had a single instance of complaint against them—on the contrary, they are very well spoken of.

13460. You appreciate them?—Yes; they go either as junior clerks, or are apprenticed to trades.

13461. You give fees with them?—Yes, the trustees do.

13462. Dr. Hare—Do you teach the boys any mathematics, beyond arithmetic?—A little algebra and mensuration.

13463. Do you teach book-keeping?—We do.

13464. Lord Justice FitzGibbon—Is there a contract connected with the school?—Yes.

13465. The boys go to church regularly?—Yes.

13466. What assistance have you in religious teaching?—I give religious instruction myself every day. The catechist is the Rev. Mr. Byles, and he catenches them for two hours, once a week.

13467. Do the boys attend the parish church?—Yes, it is quite close to the school.

13468. There is an arrangement for their accommodation?—Yes; the trustees had out some money on it. The boys are the choir of the church.

13469. Can you tell us how the school house got into such a state of dilapidation before you went there?—I could scarcely say, but certainly I would not be willing to remain in a school in such a condition; I think if the master had a strong feeling on the subject he could have provided on the trustees to have the matter remedied.

13470. Did you experience any difficulty?—None whatever.

13471. I believe there was a change in the trustees of the institution about the time you were appointed?—The present trustees are both new.

13472. When did the present Bishop become Bishop?—The year before I was appointed.

13473. Dr. Hare—I find in the report of the Commission of 1857, the Assistant Commissioner, Mr. Crawford, says of this school?—

"When I visited it, I found the establishment in general good order and in a clean condition. A considerable sum of money has, within the last three months, been expended in getting the house in good condition?"

Very possibly there was very little expended between 1857 and 1873, which would be a very long time.

13474. Can you tell us the chief part of the improvements that were made?—The whole building was re-roofed, and there were the additions I have already mentioned.

13475. Did you see the old roof?—I had reason to feel it as well as see it. I stood under it, with an umbrella over my head.

13476. Was it from want of repairs, or from old age, that the roof was so bad?—It was perfectly rotten from wet. We need the timber for firewood.

13477. What sort of shingles was the old roof covered with?—Very heavy slates, like flags, nearly a half inch thick.

13478. They would not have decayed?—No, but I think they were much too heavy, and would tend to break in any roof—they were slabs, not slates.

13479. In what condition were the offices, and places about the house, at that time?—A mass of ruin. They have all been swept away. The present out-offices, laundry, and dairy, are all reconstructions.

13480. In what state were the grounds, which are now so much?—There was no pleasure ground, nor attempt at any sort of ornamentation; the cattle grazed up to the very hall-door. I have had to drive them out of our hall.

13481. In what condition was the garden?—Very fair, but not as well as it is under our present gardener. I do not know whether it is competent for me to mention a matter that was referred to, during the examination of Mr. Mackay, the reduction of Mr. Fanning's rent. It really commenced with me. I remember going to Mr. Mackay about it. When I became master of the school I found that the boys had not sufficient facilities for recreation over the ground. I found we had no cricket ground, and Mr. Fanning objected to the boys using the ground for recreation, and wrote to the trustees to complain. I pointed the matter again and again, and the result was that the trustees made an agreement with Mr. Fanning that we might make a cricket ground, and they allowed him a reduction of his rent in consideration of it.

13482. That was the case of the reduction from £41 to £35?—Yes. Mr. Fanning surrendered part of the land first and another portion afterwards, which explains the further reduction to £36.

13483. LORD JAMES PRINCIPLES.—In the original agreement, was it not stipulated that Mr. Fanning was to give the boys facilities for recreation?—Yes, and I claimed that as their right under the agreement; but the question was whether the word "facilities" would imply our having a right to make a cricket-ground, and deprive him of a certain extent of grazing.

13484. Have the boys unaccustomed me of the twenty acres now?—Perfectly; they roam over the whole of it in the blackberry season, and play cricket, and football, and everything.

13485. Dr. Hare.—With regard to the profit of the farm—is that in diminution of the expense of diet?—Quite so.

13486. I find that in the year 1873-4 the cost of diet was £533 13s 10d; in 1874-5, £531; in 1875-6 it was £528; and in 1876-7 it was £577 5s 2d; while in the year 1877-8, after the farm was taken, it was £311 6s 6d. That is a reduction of only about £31 from the average of the preceding years?—There is a very considerable saving in consequence of the farm—our milk bill, which used to be £70 a year, has disappeared.

13487. But that saving ought to appear in a reduction of the expenses for diet, whereas they appear to be reduced by only £31?—There must be a greater saving than that, for the grass costs in nothing—the winter feeding costs very little, and we have the land for nothing.

13488. You forget that it costs you the rent which you would receive for it if it was let. You received £41 a year, therefore it costs you that, but you say you gain the amount of your milk bill?—Yes; I think the milk bill used to be between £7 and £8 per month. I find that in June, 1876, which was just before we took the farm, the milk bill was £7 17s 4d.; for the previous month it was £6 11s 4d. I think on an average it was about £8 a month—it cost us somewhere about £100 a year for milk and butter, and I have already stated that by the sale of young cattle we cover the former rent.

13489. Have you also an advantage in regard to the quality of the milk supplied?—Oh, yes, we have just new milk now. Formerly I had again and again to complain of the milk supplied by the contractor—we could not get good milk at all.

13490. How many cows have you?—Three or four in milk.

13491. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—What do you feed on the twenty-five acres?—Three or four cows, besides young stock which we fatten and sell. I should observe that the twenty-five acres include the garden and yard, and the site of the house.

13492. How many acres of grass have you?—I could scarcely say, we put some of the land under tillage; probably about twenty acres are under grass now.

13493. Do you manage the farm yourself?—Entirely.

13494. Do you find that you can manage the farm and attend to the school besides?—Yes; I have not found any difficulty in it—the farm, in fact, has been a recreation with me.

13495. It is chiefly in grass?—Yes, about twenty acres is in grass.

13496. How much of it is under tillage?—Four or five acres. I called your attention this morning to a field of oats—we have potatoes also.

13497. What assistance have you in cultivating it?—I have a steward and gardener, I superintend him and see that he does his work. He lives in one of the two cottages inside the gate.

13498. Do you grow any corn?—We are only beginning at that; we had a little oats last year, and we have a field of oats now—we will sell it in the course of a few days.

13499. Dr. Hare.—The cost of diet appears to have been reduced by only about £30 a year—that is to say, from £530 to about £500, while there is a loss on the other hand of £51 in rent, besides an increase in wages; the wages bill last year was £107, while it ranged only from £45 to £50 before. Is not that so?—I am not prepared to answer that question. I do not know what the £107 for wages includes. You are examining me from Mr. Mackay's book, and I have not seen his classification of the accounts. The sale of farm produce brings in the former rent. I should mention that our expense on the farm in future will, I expect, be less than it has been, for the land had received very bad treatment; we are obliged to look it up now to give it heart.

13500. Lord R. Churchill.—You are breaking up the land to improve the quality of the grass?—Yes.

13501. Was it your steward and gardener who informed you that the best way to improve pasture was to take white crops off it?—I consulted on the matter with the trustees. I called attention to the fact that our ground was in a bad way, that, especially at the back, it was becoming mean.

13502. Did the trustees tell you the best way was to break it up, and take white crops off it?—I took counsel with Mr. Bolton and others, who told me it was absolutely necessary to break it up.

13503. Lord Justice FitzGibbon.—It will be all right, if you measure it afterwards?—We are doing so. We took a crop of oats off it first, and then we measured it and took a crop of potatoes. We did not consider the ground sufficiently turned up, and so we then set in a crop of wheat.

13504. Lord R. Churchill.—What measure did you use?—Our own farm yard manure. I may mention, as one saving by reason of the farm, that the manure for our kitchen garden used to cost us between £13 and £15 a year; we have nothing of that sort to pay for now—that item has disappeared.

13505. Lord Justice FitzGibbon.—You took a crop of oats, then measured the ground, and took a crop of potatoes, then a crop of wheat, and sowed it again?—Precisely.

13506. Is the place more available now for the boys than it was when the farm was in the hands of a tenant?—Oh, yes. In fact, when Mr. Fleming had it the boys were only allowed on sufferance—it was only by great difficulty that I could get permission for them to go on it at all, now the whole place is open to them for recreation.

[Mr. Smith obtained permission to add to his evidence an explanatory statement. Vide App., No. 23.]

The Rt. Rev. Maurice F. Day, Esq. D.D.

The Right Rev. MAURICE F. DAY, B.A., Bishop of Cashel, recalled.

13507. Lord Justice FitzGibbon.—Can you tell us how it happened that Bishop Day's school came to be in such a state of dilapidation as it appears to have been in 1872?—When I came to the diocese I found it in that state; I cannot give any information how it came to be so; I can only tell how it has been brought out of it.

13508. You saw the institution when you came to the diocese?—I did, and was greatly shocked at its appearance.

13509. Was it full of boys at the time?—It was, and I believe the boys were well taught, but the whole condition of the house, and the dress and condition of the boys was very unsatisfactory, and unbecoming, I thought, to such an institution. The house was decidedly in a ruinous state.

13510. Dr. Haist.—It was reported, in 1857, to be in a good condition, so that it must have suffered damage in the interval?—I cannot say.

13511. Lord Justice FitzGibbon.—Had the same master been there for a number of years?—Up to my coming, the same master had been there for many years; I thought it expedient to remove him off and appoint a new master.

13512. You gave him a pension of £35 a year?—Yes, it was the only way we could get rid of him.

13513. By whom was the master appointed?—By the trustees. I believe the appointments made with me alone, but I consulted the other trustees, the Dean, and I also consulted some gentlemen in Waterford who gave me their advice; they all concurred with me that the appointment of a new master was necessary, and though it was a sacrifice of part of the income of the school, we felt it was better to make that sacrifice by pensioning the old master, than to keep him in the position.

13514. Had you the power of dismissing him?—We had the power of dismissing him, but we thought it would be unjust to do so, after his having spent twenty years in the school.

13515. You did not think the condition of the school was due to the master?—I cannot say what it was due to; I felt clear that the only course was to get a new master.

13516. Was the then master a very old man?—Not very old, but I think we all felt that he had got into habits that would not be likely to improve.

13517. What steps did you take with reference to the expenditure on the building?—did you advertise for tenders?—I got Mr. Fuller of Dublin, our diocesan architect, to examine the place, and he asked me which of two courses I would wish to pursue, whether he should draw out a plan for a more temporary improvement of the building, to answer for a few years, or whether I would wish to have such an entire restoration or repair made as would be a permanent and complete improvement. In conjunction with the other trustees, I chose the latter course; we felt that we had money in hand, it was better to make such a complete rebuilding and repair of the school house, as would make it a permanently sound and satisfactory building.

13518. There seems to have been about £3,500 in hand at the time?—Yes.

13519. You also got an advance from the Bank?—Yes, we drew on the amount of the school, we expended altogether about £3,000. I think, including the repairs it came to £4,000.

13520. Were the works done under Mr. Fuller's superintendence?—Yes, all were done under his superintendence.

13522. How do you regulate the admission of the boys in the competitive examination?—do you necessarily take those that answer best?—Not of necessity, but generally we take them.

13523. Do you inquire into their cases before you admit them to the examination?—We inquire into their cases, and the circumstances of the boys.

13524. What do you require as the condition for admission to the examination?—There is no particular standard laid down as to poverty, but they generally are the sons of poor tradesmen, servants, and that class of people.

13525. I see you have in the school sons of non-commissioned officers in the army, and pensioners in the Comptrolery—do you regard them as coming within the conditions?—We do. We consider their children suitable for such a school.

13526. In many cases the fathers of the boys are dead—do you give preference to such?—Where there are boys brought up from an early age in the Waterford City Orphan Institution, an Institution of very old standing, situated about half a mile from the town, we give them the preference.

13527. In reference to the competitive examination, do you apprehend that there is any danger that, by that system, you may be taking boys whose parents are able to give them education without the help of the school?—No. I think all the boys who have been admitted in that way not suitable for admission, on the ground of circumstances.

13528. And you satisfy yourself on that point?—I satisfy myself on that point.

13529. I observe the original trustees included several municipal authorities—the Sheriff, three Aldermen, and the Mayor?—Yes; but it appears that they are now precluded from taking part in the management, by the Municipal Corporation Act, and there are now only two trustees—myself and the Dean. I should mention that we have asked a gentleman of considerable experience and knowledge of various matters—Mr. Charles Bolton—to sit with us and give us his advice.

13530. He is a sort of voluntary trustee?—Yes, a voluntary trustee. Of course he cannot join in, or perform, any legal act, but he gives us his advice.

13531. I find from your minute book that in some instances meetings have been summoned, at which neither of the trustees attended, and Mr. Bolton alone was present with the Secretary, and appears to have transacted business—have you given Mr. Bolton any deputations to act for you, or does he merely act as a matter of convenience?—We have appointed him a trustee with us, as far as we could.

13532. Practically he acts as a trustee, though legally he has no status?—Yes.

13533. The rental of the property appears to be in round numbers £1,600 a year?—Yes.

13534. Mr. Mackay tells us there has been no change in that rental as long as he remembers—is that your recollection also?—Yes.

13535. Has your attention been called to the expediency of taking any steps to ascertain whether the holdings are let at their proper value?—Our attention has been lately called to the subject, by an application from the tenants for a reduction of rent. On inquiry we found that some of the lands have been let at a very low rate indeed.

13536. Until the tenants asked for a reduction your attention had not been called to the matter?—No.

13537. Did you ever read the Report of the Commission of 1857, on the state of the property at that time?—No.

13538. In that Report it is stated that some of the rents had been fixed in 1851 and 1852, the latest years of the last tenure, that they had never since that time been changed, and were therefore much under value, while on the other hand some of the holdings were rather overlet—have the trustees taken any steps to act on that point?—No.

13539. There is another matter as to which we were asking Mr. Mackay—do you know anything of the condition of the estate itself?—No; I do not.

13540. Does the Dean?—I do not think that he does. We have full confidence in Mr. Mackay, who is an excellent man of business, and acquainted with the management of property, and we have therefore left it in his hands.

13541. Mr. Mackay tells us that he has left the rental just as it was when he became agent—that he found it, as he thought, fairly let, and never interfered about it, you have not any annual or other examination to ascertain how the property is let?—Not as to ascertaining the value of the property. We have monthly statements for going through the accounts, and annual statements for going through the rental.

13542. You made a lease recently of part of Methal at £33 13s. 11d. to the clergyman who was in occupation of the adjoining glebe, on the occasion of making that lease did you take any steps to ascertain the letting value?—We asked Mr. Mackay his opinion.

13543. LEAD JUDGE CHURCHILL.—Mr. Mackay stated he gave it as his opinion that the rent was the fair letting value, but he had not particularly examined the holding?—I am surprised at that. We depended on his opinion.

13544. LEAD JUDGE FRYGENTON.—In your dealings with the property you have acted on the advice of Mr. Mackay?—Entirely.

13545. Now, with regard to the school itself—do you find the master efficient?—Most efficient in every way.

13546. The monthly meetings of the trustees are not held at the school?—No.

13547. Have you any fixed time for visiting the school?—I visit it occasionally myself, but not at any fixed time. The schoolmaster visits it once a week, and teaches the boys.

13548. Does he make any report to the trustees?—No; he does not.

13549. He is, I believe, one of the clergymen of the parish?—He is one of the curates of the cathedral.

13550. Do the trustees, either together or separately, examine the boys?—I do; I examine them in religious subjects.

13551. Do you take any steps to ascertain their progress in other matters?—We have, for the last two years, had an annual examination in all the subjects.

13552. Is that examination conducted by a gentleman invited by yourself?—Yes.

13553. Was there any examination of that kind formerly, or is it an improvement?—I am not sure—but there was no examination of the boys from the time I came to the diocese until about two years ago.

13554. There are some funds which appear to be available for the boys in the form of apprentice fees?—Yes.

13555. What steps do you take on the apprenticeship of the boys to ascertain their masters' antipathy?—We inquire about them. The men who apply for apprentices are generally so well known, in the town, that we have no difficulty in ascertaining their suitability.

13556. Do you take any steps to ascertain how the boys get on?—Yes; we encourage them to attend the Sunday school, and they are specially looked after by the schoolmaster.

13557. Are the apprentice fees paid periodically, or altogether?—They are paid in successive portions or instalments.

13558. Before paying each instalment do you ascertain how the boy is getting on?—Yes; we require from the master a declaration that the boy is getting on well and steadily in his employment, and serving his apprenticeship.

13559. Are there a sufficient number of boys belonging to the city, and coming within the description of the endowment, to make this a useful institution?—Certainly.

13560. DE. HARR.—The number is not full at present?—No; we allow the vacancies to accumulate, and at the close of the year we have an examination to fill them up.

13561. You have only forty pupils now?—Forty-five boys.

13562. LEAD JUDGE FRYGENTON.—Have you not accommodation for more than forty?—We have, and in consequence we have admitted five boys, from other districts, upon payment.

13563. How is the payment regulated?—Their friends pay for each boy £20 a year, quarterly, in advance.

13564. Where do those boys come from?—Three from Wicks, and two from Wexford.

13565. Do you calculate that, paying £20 a year, they are any burden to the charity?—We calculate that that sum fully pays both for their board and clothing.

13566. Why have you not taken a larger number of boys on the foundation?—We found our income did not allow of it, especially as we were a little in debt for the building, and also a little crippled by the pestilence to the frame master. I hope that in future we may be able to enlarge the number of boys on the foundation.

13567. LEAD R. CHURCHILL.—The number of boys originally intended was fifty?—Yes.

13568. At the time Bishop Foy gave the property it was not so valuable as now?—No, not nearly so valuable.

13569. Originally it was given for a day school?—Yes.

The R. Rev.
Harcourt P.
Foy, &c.

Oct. 3, 1873.

The Rt. Hon.
MURDOCH F.
Daly, Esq.

13570. Subsequently the property became more valuable, and, in the 48th year of the reign of King George III., an Act of Parliament was passed to make it a boarding school?—Yes.

13571. That Act did not limit the number?—No.

13572. I wish to call your attention to a passage in the Report of the Commission of 1837, when it was suggested by the Dean of Waterford that four Protestant laymen and four clergymen be added to the existing trustees—would you approve of that suggestion?—I would prefer to remain as it is.

13573. Looking to the fact that the institution was originally left to the control of the Bishop, the Dean, the Mayor, three Aldermen and two Sheriffs of Waterford—representing the inhabitants—would you consider it a good thing for the school that the inhabitants of Waterford should be represented on the management in the way the then Dean suggested?—I would not desire that so many should be appointed. I think if there were such a large number of representatives of the inhabitants, it would leave the Bishop and Dean powerless in the management of the school. I would think it very desirable that one layman, such as Mr. Bolton, whom we have associated with us, should be legally appointed a trustee; but I think any further appointments would outnumber those who naturally take the deepest interest, and who, I think, on the whole, are the best managers of the school.

13574. The Bishop in 1857 also stated that he thought the number of trustees should be increased, so that the Bishop and Dean at that time considered that the trustees wanted assistance?—I have said that I would wish one layman to be appointed with us.

13575. You think that would be sufficient?—I think so.

13576. The Report also stated that the school was in need of efficient inspection—you have no inspection conducted by any qualified inspectors?—None, beyond the annual examination.

13577. That is conducted, I understand, by local parties?—Generally, but we have sometimes invited clergymen from other places to take part in it.

13578. You have never had the boys examined by any one accustomed to inspect schools?—No.

13579. Has there been any anxiety on the part of inhabitants of Waterford to take any part in the management of the school, as far as you have observed?—Not in any way that would command weight. There have been sometimes anonymous paragraphs in the papers, but no representation has ever been directly made to me, on the subject.

13580. LORD JUSTICE FITZGERALD.—Have you had recommendations, from citizens of Waterford, for any particular boys, at the time of the examination of candidates for admission, or matters of that kind?—No any of them take a practical interest in the school?—They do not.

13581. Do any of them visit it?—A few do—when invited by me, or by the other trustee.

13582. Is there any assistance given in the household affairs by any ladies?—None. I believe the mistress is so fully competent that it is not needed. I may mention that some time since great interest was taken in the school by a leading gentleman in Waterford—Mr. Abraham Drury—and when he visited the Institution, having asked whether we had any facilities for teaching the boys in manual labour and carpentry work, he gave £50 towards fitting up a carpenter's workshop.

13583. Was the carpenter's workshop fitted up?—Yes.

13584. And I presume since that time the boys, as part of their instruction, learn something of carpentry?—Yes.

13585. DR. HARRIS.—With regard to the trustees, I see in the Report of the former Commission a suggestion by Mr. Crawford, the Assistant Commissioner, which I think concurs with your suggestion:—

"I cannot conclude my report without regarding, as an opinion, that it would much increase the efficiency of the school, if the Board of Governors was increased in number by the addition of some of the residents in the city of Waterford. There are now only two, the Bishop and the Dean for the time being, and who are necessarily absent from Waterford occasionally, and in their absence there is no person who has any authority to enforce proper discipline, or to inspect the school, and the master is left altogether uncontrolled?"

I would be very thankful if there was one layman, or perhaps two, added to the present trustees.

13586. Your predecessor was a man of advanced years, and could attend but rarely, and if the Dean was also absent, there would be no control at all?—Yes.

13587. LORD JUSTICE FITZGERALD.—There has been a change in the Bishopric since Bishop Poy's time, he was Bishop of Waterford only?—Yes.

13588. Since the union of the dioceses, is Waterford the residence of the Bishop?—Yes. Waterford was chosen as the residence of the Bishop, at the time of the Irish Temporalities Act.

13589. Under the present state of things, since the disestablishment of the church, will the Bishop continue to reside in Waterford?—Yes. The Bishop of Cashel and Waterford will reside in Waterford. The house has been purchased and the endowment made up.

13590. Provision has been made for continuing the Bishopric?—Certainly.

13591. Is the Deanery also provided for?—Yes, that has also been made permanent by the purchase of the Deanery house, but the Deanery, by the law of our church, may be separated from the rectory of the parish.

13592. Is the Deanery still a dignity connected with Waterford?—Yes, there is to be a Dean of Waterford.

13593. Has provision been made for maintaining a Dean of Waterford?—Yes.

13594. So that there is no danger that either the Bishop or Dean will cease to exist—there will always be successors in those offices?—Yes. The present Dean has been appointed under the new state of things.

Mr. Edmund
Garnett.

Mr. EDWARD GARNETT, examined.

13595. LORD JUSTICE FITZGERALD.—You are the head master of the Society of Friends' Newtown school?—Yes.

13596. How long have you held the office?—Since 1871.

13597. How many boys are there in that school?—Forty-eight at present.

13598. Is that a fixed number?—No, it varies very much, it is larger now than it has been for the last two or three years. At one time we had as many as sixty-five, but that was only during one year; it never reached such a number since.

13599. I believe the school is maintained by the Society of Friends?—Yes, entirely.

13600. Is there any qualification for admission—are the children necessarily children of members of the Society?—No. The rules have been changed, I think, since the last Commission, and now those who do not in any way belong to the Society may be admitted, at the discretion of the Committee.

13601. What is the nature of the committee that governs the school?—It is difficult to speak of Newtown school by itself, because it is under the same government as the school at Monasterevin, which is entirely for girls.

13602. Both are included in our Commission, you can tell me with regard to both?—Monasterevin belongs to what is called the "Quarterly Meeting of Leinster," and Newtown to the "Quarterly Meeting of Munster." Each meeting appoints a committee, 24 by Leinster, and 18 by Munster, consisting of men and women. They are in office for a year, but practically the same persons are appointed again and again. The girls of the two provinces go to Mountsack, and the boys to Weymouth.

13603 Dr. HART.—In the Report of 1857 it is noted that the school was intended for the children of friends not in affluent circumstances. In those days had providing that such should be the case?—It is intended in the first instance for such children, and if the school were full, and any preference had to be made between candidates for admission, it would be given to such children.

13604 Are you bound by any deed to observe that rule?—I believe so. I know it is one of the original rules of the school.

13605 Have you power to change the rules?—The two Quarterly Meetings may change the rules. They have been modified from time to time, but it is a difficult thing to get a rule changed; the two Quarterly Meetings must concur in the propriety of it.

13606 Lord-James Fitzgerald.—With the Newton school you hold 16 acres of land?—About that.

13607 You have it in fee simple, subject to no rent?—No rent.

13608 Some lettings have been made of portions of the land?—Yes, for building purposes.

13609 How much is returned with the school?—I think about 4 acres have been taken off altogether.

13610 A portion has been let to the representatives of William Port?—Yes, he pays £10 a year.

13611 What is the nature of the letting?—A house for 25 years for building purposes. There is a house built upon it.

13612 The house was built by the tenant?—Yes.

13613 The next letting was to Thomas H. Strongman?—Yes. There is a row of houses on his holding.

13614 Were they built by the tenant?—Yes.

13615 Then there are two other lettings of £15 10s. each?—Yes.

13616 The next letting is to John White at £11?—Yes.

13617 Then there is a portion let for a graveyard at £10?—Yes.

13618 Are all those lettings on long leases, and, with the exception of the graveyard, for building purposes?—Yes.

13619 Who collects the rents?—They are paid to the treasurer direct. I have nothing to do with that.

13620 Who is the treasurer?—Thomas R. White Haven, Samuel White, is practically the treasurer.

13621 How are the 13 acres of land, which are used with the school, managed?—It is in grass, except the park, which is one acre. We have cows, which supply us with milk and butter. We mow some hay, but we never break up any of the land.

13622 Have the boys the use of the ground for recreation?—They have a lawn in front of the house, and a playground.

13623 The next property you have appears to be lease property at Clarendon, producing £11 1s. 6d. a year. Is that a fixed rent?—Yes, it is always the same from year to year.

13624 It is returned as a rent charge, so that it does not require looking after?—No.

13625 The next item of your income arises from a sum of money invested in stock—I see in the former Report it is stated there was £300 invested, producing £9 a year, while you have now £500 invested in four per cent preference stock?—Yes; there has been no increase; the £500 was a special donation to the school.

13626 In whose names is it invested?—In the names of the trustees of the school.

13627 It is stated, in the former Report, that the four offices, and 17 acres of land, held in fee and vested in the trustees, were let for £90 a year—do you know what property that refers to?—That Report was before my time, and I can only speak from hearsay. The first was at one time let, as is stated there, but that arrangement was terminated, as it was not found to be satisfactory.

13628 Then that land, which was let for £90 a year, is what you now occupy yourselves?—Yes.

13629 I suppose you did much the same as was done in the case of Bishop Fy's school?—Yes; we found that the farm being let to a tenant interfered too much with the recreation of the boys.

13630 The endowments which I have mentioned are of course insufficient to keep up the institution?—Quite insufficient.

13631 What other sources of income have you?—The payments of the children, which vary according to circumstances, and also subscriptions, which are raised in the two provinces.

13632 Have you a fixed scale of payments for the children, or are they graduated?—Those who are not members of our Society are charged a fixed rate—£42 for children under twelve years of age, and £45 for those over twelve. Then there are a number of others, who pay what is called the "full cost," and it is judged of by each monthly meeting whether each person is likely to be able to pay the full cost or not—the full cost is £35 for those under twelve, and £40 for those who are over twelve.

13633 You consider that a sum sufficient to support the establishment?—Yes, it represents the average expenditure. Then those who are supposed to be not in affluent circumstances, (for whom the school was intended) are admitted at the "low rates"—£16 and £18 a year.

13634 Are any admitted free?—None free. If the parents of any child are not able to pay the low rate, the payment is made by the monthly meeting—the school must be credited with the money, and if not paid by the parents it is paid by the monthly meeting.

13635 These rates are £16 a year for children under twelve, and £18 for those over twelve?—Yes.

13636 How many such pupils have you at present?—At the low rates we have at present sixteen boys.

13637 Are those rates in many instances paid by the parents?—Mostly by the parents. There are a few instances in which the fees are paid by the monthly meeting.

13638 Can you tell to what denominations the boys belong?—Yes, thirty are Friends, fifteen Protestant Episcopalians, two Presbyterians, and one Methodist.

13639 Then nineteen boys are paying the high rate?—In point of fact nineteen pay the rates charged for non-members. The reason is that one of those, who is charged the rate for non-members, and who entered as a non-member, attends our meetings, and goes to school as one.

13640 Then sixteen are received at the "low rates"?—Yes.

13641 And the remainder, thirteen, are charged the "full cost"?—No. Ten pay the "full cost" for Friends, and three pay intermediate rates, above the "low rate," and below the "full cost."

13642 What is your own remuneration?—Myself and Mrs. Garnett occupy the position of master and mistress—£250 a year is our joint salary.

13643 Mrs. Garnett is the manager of the establishment?—She is, but we have a mistress besides.

13644 You have a residence in the Institution?—Yes.

13645 You have a first class assistant master at £340 a year, a second at £120, a third at £50, and a fourth at £35?—Yes.

13646 Are these all residents?—Yes, all are resident in the house, and have board, lodging, and washing.

13647 You have also a visiting drawing master at £25 a year?—Yes.

13648 At about what age do the children come to your school?—Not many come below ten years of age, though we have taken them as young as eight, under special circumstances. I do not like to take them at so young an age, but our rules allow us to admit them at eight.

13649 How long do they remain with you?—In various. Sometimes up to sixteen years of age.

13650 Of what class is your education?—English and commercial education, suitable for boys who are going to business.

Garnett.

13651. Is that the usual object of the boys who attend the school?—It is so, mostly, they mostly like to go to business.

13652. You teach Latin and French?—Yes.

13653. Is there any extra charge for these subjects?—No.

13654. Did you send any of the boys to the Intermediate examinations?—No. We considered that matter very carefully, and we decided not to go in for them this time. We deemed it better to get an examiner down—a gentleman appointed by the Cambridge Syndicate, and who examines similar schools of the Society in England, so that our schools should be examined in comparison with schools at the other side of the water.

13655. There are attending your school children of other denominations—what provision is made with regard to their religious education?—Our rules are that all are to be treated alike, without any difference with regard to religious teaching or training. They all attend our meetings while they are with us; we make no difference.

13656. They all receive the same religious instruction?—They do.

13657. Do all the children belong to Munster and Leitner?—No, they are nearly all from Munster and Leitner, but we have one or two from Ulster. Any that come from provinces outside Munster and Leitner must pay the full cost. We would not take any at the low rate except from our own province.

13658. What arrangements are made for keeping the building in repair?—All these things are regulated by the committee. The large managing committee that I spoke of as being appointed by the quarterly meetings, besides the practical management of matters to local committees. I produce the book of the local committee, and the proceedings of the managing committee of the two schools.

13659. Has the large committee fixed times for meeting?—Every quarter, alternately at Moorlandfield and Waterford. The sub-committee meet every month.

13660. That would be a half-yearly meeting of the large Committee at each place?—Yes.

13661. How many are on the sub-committee?—Ten, resident in the neighbourhood.

13662. As to the expenditure on the buildings, how is it checked and defrayed?—If there is any necessity to incur a large expenditure it would not be undertaken without the sanction of the managing committee. It is a small matter, such as ordinary repairs, it is done by the sub-committee and myself. After the annual meetings the place is looked over, and reported upon; and any necessary repairs are carried out.

13663. I find in the minute book, you have handed in, a copy of your report as to the Intermediate Examinations—have you any objection to reading it?—Not the least. It is as follows:—

* Report drawn up by Mr. Garnett, at the request of the sub-committee, in reference to the Intermediate Education Act.—In accordance with the request of the sub-committee, I respectfully lay the following statement before them. Soon after the meeting of the school, I consulted with the teachers respecting the desirability or otherwise of shaping our course of study so as to enable our learner boys to compete in the examinations conducted by the Intermediate Education Board for Ireland. Although it was too soon for the results of the late examination to be known, we had met of the printed questions before us, and from a careful perusal of these we came to the conclusion that, as regards the English division, including grammar, composition, Goldsmith's "Traveller," geography, and English history—as far as the year 1400—the first class ought have been successfully prepared for the junior grade; that in arithmetic, the standard, as shown by the questions, was below that usually attained by our first class, which was also the case in algebra, and perhaps in geometry. We thought also that our boys might have passed the examination in French without much difficulty, whilst in Latin the standard evolved by the two papers of the examiners was altogether beyond what has usually been attained at Newtown. In Natural Science our studies had not, except in one section—that of Natural Philosophy—attained with the course marked out by the Board; but in the subject mentioned it is probable that some of them would have passed. On the whole, the consideration of the Intermediate examination paper did not seem discouraging; and yet, after considering a look at the subject in all its bearings, we were unanimously of the judgment that it would be more conducive to the intellectual good of the boys if we adhered pretty much to our usual course of study, without reference to the examinations under the Intermediate Education Act. The temptation to select two or three branches of study in which there might appear a probability of passing seemed a very serious one, and, if yielded to, would result in certain subjects receiving especial attention, to the neglect of others of equal or greater importance. We were strengthened in our resolution by the information that all the English quarterly meeting schools, except one, have recently been exempted by G. T. Sanderson, Fellow of Clare College, Cambridge, and it occurred to us that it would probably be satisfactory to the committee if we could arrange to have the classes submitted to the same examiner at the end of the present school year. Among other advantages of this course, I may mention, that we are left at liberty to arrange our own curriculum, both as to the subjects taught and the text books studied, furnishing a detailed account to the Syndicate of the ground gone over, in time for the preparation of examination papers. The proposal met with the unanimous approval of the teachers, and the work of the class is proceeding, with the expectation, if the suggestion should be approved by the committee, of undergoing an examination by G. T. Sanderson next entrance.

(Signed), E. GARNETT.

—And dated 4th of 8th month, 1878.

13664. You seem to have thought it more beneficial to keep up your own arrangement of study?—We thought so. Of course there is much to be said on the other side of the question. We cannot be very positive in our opinion; but it seemed to us an advantage not to have the subject always under discussion, but to get it settled one way or the other for a time.

13665. With regard to the education given, what is your arrangement as to the boys' time?—They have an hour's study, from 7 till 8 o'clock, before breakfast, then breakfast, then school again from halfpast 8 till 1 o'clock, with half an hour's recess; dinner a little after one, school again from halfpast 2 till halfpast 5; and again, in the winter months, from halfpast 4 till bed-time they devote to school work about one hour.

13666. The remainder of their time is devoted to recreation?—Yes, and pursuing their own studies.

13667. Do they go outside, or is their recreation within the grounds?—Within the grounds principally, but on holiday afternoons they get permission to walk through the country, under proper care.

13668. What arrangements have you made about their diet?—For breakfast they generally get bread and milk—sometimes stout, or their own choice, once a week. We do not like to give it to them too often, as they turn against it. For dinner they usually get meat.

13669. Do they get meat every day?—Not every day. On Thursday they get eggs, and bread and butter, and finish with pudding or pie. Those that do not like it get cold meat. There are some that will not eat eggs. Formerly on two days in the week they got no dinner—Sundays and Thursdays—but now they get meat dinner on Sundays. For supper they have tea, and bread and butter. Our expenditure for diet has increased a good deal on account of changes that have been made. They used to get bread and milk for supper, the same as breakfast.

13670. Who keeps the accounts?—I keep them; I produce the account books showing the expenditure to the end of last year.

13671. Are the accounts made up half-yearly?—No, they are made up yearly, but last year we made a change in the period at which the year should terminate, the consequence is that last year's accounts include only from May to December.

13672. The accounts contain an analysis of expenditure for the year ending 31st of 8th month, 1878, and show that meat, fish, eggs, &c., cost £297 13s. 8d.; bread, flour, meal, and rice, £131 10s. 7d.; milk, butter, and vegetables, £362 7s. That includes, I presume, some charge for what you get out of the land attached to the school?—Yes.

13673. Groceries, £80 17s.; gas and candles, £24 15s. 5d.; fuel, £45 8s. 5d.; laundry, £28 8s. 11d.; repairs of clothing, 5s. 2d.—With regard to the clothing account I should mention that the parents are supposed to clothe the children, except repairs and things of that kind.

13674. Medicine and medical attendance, £9 0s. 3d.; salaries, £215 16s. 8d.; stationary and books, £35 8s. 11d.; servants' wages, £74 3s. 10d.; furniture, £48 15s. 9d.; rent and taxes, £36 0s. 9d.; repairs and alterations of premises, £55 3s. 11d.; incidental expenses, £53 0s. 7d.—making a total of £1,809 2s. 7d. I see you put down the profit on the farm as £128 14s. 2d. That is, in fact, charging back upon the value of the potatoes and garden produce supplied from the farm, and consumed in the school?—Yes.

13675. The expenditure includes £12 9s. 6d. special expenses of certain boys?—Yes.

13676. The total expenditure of £1,809 2s. 7d. was the year's expense of the establishment for forty-eight boys?—Yes, in 1878.

13677. Then the receipts were—See from the boys, £1,468, due for unexpired time last year, £128 14s. 2d.—making £1,615 14s. 2d.; deduct for unexpired time this year, £159 1s. 2d.—balance, £1,474 13s. 6d., net income from the boys. Is the balance between £1,474 13s. 6d. and £1,809 2s. 7d. made up by subscriptions?—Partly, and also from income from legacies, &c.

13678. What you calculate in that account of income was the actual money payments?—Yes.

13679. Are the various accounts paid through you?—A good many of the payments are made through the treasurer. The items are passed by the sub-committee.

13680. Who draws the cheques?—When a monthly meeting of the sub-committee takes place, I lay before them the cash book, with an account of the money that has been expended, the bills that due, and an estimate of what I consider necessary for the next current month. These are examined by the sub-committee, and they then give me an order on the treasurer, I present it to him, and he gives me a cheque on the bank. I then draw the money and make the payments.

13681. What check is there over you as to keeping the building in proper repair?—No check, beyond the resolutions of the committee and the general meeting. Every year there is a meeting, open to all the friends, of the two provinces, to attend, and there is a kind of popular examination of the children; and one committee is appointed to examine the rooms and the state of the household—that committee mostly consists of ladies—another committee is appointed to examine the premises, the state of the building, the farm, the garden, and the offices outside. Those committees inspect the place carefully, and make their reports to the managing committee.

Rev. JOHN S. O'FLANNAGAN, examined.

13695. LORD JUSTICE FRYGROVER.—Are you the head master of the Mount Zion Christian Schools, Waterford?—Yes.

13696. You are a member of the Christian Brotherhood in Waterford?—I am.

13697. Have you two schools in Waterford under the Brotherhood?—Yes; we have two, which enjoy a small endowment, one the Mount Zion School, the other the St. Patrick's.

13698. Are they separate establishments?—They are separate, as far as locality is concerned.

13699. You appear to have a large sum, £3,338, left by a gentleman named Power, invested in stock for the benefit of the schools?—We are only the administrators of it.

13700. In whose names is the money invested?—

13682. Then there is an annual inspection by committees appointed by the Society, who report to the managing committee?—Yes.

13683. With regard to the education of the boys, what check is there upon the progress in that?—At the general meeting a committee is appointed to examine each class, and they make their reports to a later sitting of the general meeting—a detailed report on each subject. You will see it in our last printed report.

13684. Does that committee consist of persons competent to elicit the progress made by the pupils?—Well, they are not professionally trained examiners, but, of course, they are educated gentlemen, who have themselves received the education which we seek to give, and went of them much beyond it. There is also an examination of the school in December, at the close of the year, under the supervision of the committee.

13685. That examination is conducted by yourself?—It is conducted by the masters, under the supervision of the committee, and they take part as it themselves also, as far as they think necessary.

13686. You intend next summer, as I understand, to have a regular examination of the school, by a qualified examiner?—Yes, this will be the third time we have had an examiner from Cambridge; we have had them on two occasions before. The last examination was four years ago.

13687. Did the examiner, on that occasion, make a report?—Yes, a detailed report.

13688. Is that contained in the minute book?—No. I will furnish a copy of it.

13689. I see your committee's reports, as to the state of the education, are as full as they possibly could be, separate statements as to the proficiency in each subject—Bible scriptures, reading, spelling, writing, dictation, history—each class is separately reported on, and I observe each is signed by a different person?—Yes; there are separate committees for each class.

13690. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—How long have you been in charge of schools?—Over twenty years.

13691. Was your experience of teaching altogether gained at this school, or had you been a master elsewhere?—I served an apprenticeship at Ackworth, a school belonging to our Society in Yorkshire, and at the expiration of my time I went to the Flanders College, also an Institution of our Society; from thence I came here.

13692. Then you received a regular training?—Yes.

13693. LORD JUSTICE FRYGROVER.—I think we may say, with reference to what we saw ourselves this morning, that nothing could surpass the neatness and good management of your Institution.

13694. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—I concur entirely in that. It would be fortunate for the Irish people if all their schools were as well managed as yours.

I cannot well answer that question—I think in the names of the Bishop for the time being, the Superior of the Christian Brothers, and the Local Superior of Waterford.

13701. Perhaps you can tell me how the funds arising from that endowment reach the school at present?—All the schools derive from the fund is £70 a year for the support of two teachers—£35 each.

13702. How are they paid?—The money is sent to me from Dublin by one of our superiors, Mr. Thomas Joseph Hearn.

13703. It was stated in the Report of the 1857 Commission to be £69 a year?—The late Bishop raised it to £70.

13704. What is done with the residue of the income of the £25,384.—Some of it goes for masses for the repose of the souls of Mr. Power's family.

13705. You have not got the administration of any part except what is given for the school?—Occasionally there is a small balance, which goes to clothe poor boys.

13706. What number of pupils have you in the school?—It varies from 360 to 450 in the St. Patrick's school. Most of them are of a poor class.

13707. How many Brothers assist in teaching?—Two, and they are aided by novices.

13708. Are the novices selected from the boys?—Yes, from the more advanced boys.

13709. How many novices do you employ?—For 100 boys we have 24.

13710. Are the novices paid?—No; we have no means of paying them.

13711. How do you hold the school house?—Do you pay rent for it?—Up to three years ago we had to pay £18 a year rent, to the Dean and Chapter here. About that time the Church Temporalities Commissioners wrote to me to ask if we would purchase the school house, and said they would give it for £270. I consulted our Bishop about it, and he recommended me to speak to Mr. Kelly, our solicitor, the nephew of it was, that the £280 was paid for the school house.

13712. Is there a boys' school only?—Boys' and girls' school. There is a girls' school conducted under the National Board.

13713. I presume, from the fact that the rent was paid to the Dean and Chapter, that it was Church property?—It was Church property, and the Commissioners gave us the option of buying it.

13714. What was the value of the property you bought in that way?—We paid £250 for it.

13715. Your rent was £18 a year?—Yes.

13716. What was the value of the building?—I cannot answer that question.

13717. Had you a lease of it?—I had not, but I suppose the Bishop had.

13718. How was the money raised?—The Bishop paid the money out of a small sum left for the schools. The building is held in his name now, and in those of three priests.

13719. Was it paid for out of the Power fund?—It was not.

13720. The Mount St. Ignace Institution is in a different place?—Yes.

13721. What is the title to the ground on which that school stands?—Mr. Rice, who was formerly a merchant in Waterford, purchased it. He got a lease for 999 years from the trustees of Wyse's charity at a rent of £2 3s 6d a year, late currency, and it is now held by the representatives of Mr. Rice. Mr. James A. Heare and Mr. Thomas J. Heare are the trustees.

13722. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—There was a sum of money left for the school, which was invested in 129 acres of land in Kilkenny?—Yes, subsequently that was invested in Government securities.

13723. Was the land sold?—Yes.

13724. When was it sold?—I do not know, but I got £22 6s 2d every year for the teachers, and £18 3s 2d to provide books for poor children who are unable to supply themselves.

13725. Can you tell us anything about the investment of the money?—The donor left £10 15s 6d a year, and it appears the principal was invested in the purchase of land in Kilkenny. Was the land afterwards again converted into money?—Yes; I got the money every year regularly, £22 6s 2d for teachers, and £18 3s 2d for books.

13726. What other sums do you receive?—We get Mrs. May Power's charity. She left money in Waterford for the support of the Ladies' Asylum, also for some poor girls in the convent, and I got £40 2s 4d for the education of poor boys.

13727. How does that money come to you?—From the Commissioners of Charitable Donations and Bequests. I have to render them an account every year, and send them vouchers for the expenditure.

13728. Is that sum expended on the boys?—On the teachers. Of course, the boys cannot be taught unless the teachers are supported.

13729. LORD JAMES FRYCHAMPE.—In 1833, it appears the land produced £160 17s. 6d. per annum, so that the income seems to have diminished?—I must refer you to Mr. Thomas J. Heare, Belvidere House, Drogheda, for those matters.

13730. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—In 1857, there was a sum of £50 a year, arising from property left by Mr. Joseph Power—what has become of that?—Joseph Power purchased some houses on the Mall, Waterford, and left them for charity, they went out of lease in 1864, and the property passed out of our hands altogether.

13731. Who was the trustee of that for you?—The property belonged to the "Holy Ghost Hospital Charity"; the trustee was Mr. Matthew Sherry.

13732. I see from your return that there were some smaller bequests, amounting to £236 1s. 1d., which were invested in railway shares, and sold. Were they bequests for the schools?—They were given nominally for the schools, but they were intended for the support of the teachers.

13733. Do you treat those smaller bequests as income?—We regard them as income for the community, unless the bequest is given specially for the schools, for instance, if it were given expressly to supply books for the children, we would not divert it to our own support.

13734. Do you keep regular accounts of the cash?—I do.

13735. Is Mount St. Ignace the residence of the community?—Yes, they all live in Mount St. Ignace, and go to St. Patrick's in the morning to Mass, and return in the evening.

13736. What is the number of your scholars?—There is accommodation for 1,570 in all our schools in Waterford, the average number on the roll is 1,350, average daily attendance, 1,127.

13737. How many attend the Mount St. Ignace school?—About 500; there are ten class-rooms.

13738. So that your endowment of £134 a year—£50, and £42—goes towards the education of 500 poor children?—Yes.

13739. At what expense were the buildings erected?—There is a new house, which has been built since the former Commission held their inquiry, at an expense of £4,000. Part of the old dwelling-house has been taken away, and another part of it turned into schools. There were only six schools formerly—now there are ten.

13740. How many of the Brotherhood are engaged in teaching in the schools?—Eleven in the ten schools.

13741. Was the £4,000 the money of the community?—No; it was collected throughout Ireland, principally in Waterford.

13742. You have this building, which cost £4,000, built upon a site which you had free of rent?—Not quite free of rent. We have to pay rent for the site of our dwelling-house and garden to the representatives of Wyse.

13743. What rent have you to pay?—I think the whole comes to £15 a year.

13744. You have no boarders?—No boarders.

13745. You do not give any advanced education?—It is all primary. Yet we send up some of our boys to the Intermediate examinations, and eleven of them passed.

13746. Do you promote the boys from the lower classes into the higher?—I spend the greater part of my time examining. I spend a week in each class room every three months, that keeps me going from one class to another the whole year round. There is progression of studies for each class, and when a class of boys is, in the opinion of the teachers, advanced up to any of these sections, they are sent to us for examination, and if I find them qualified they are drafted into the next higher room, and so on from class 1 to class 10.

13747. Then I presume it was from your higher those boys you selected those whom you sent up to the Intermediate examinations?—Yes.

13743. How many boys did you send?—Nineteen.

13744. How many of the nineteen passed?—

Eleven.

13745. Did any of them get honours?—Two got honours.

13746. Did any get exhibitions?—No.

13747. Were they all poor?—They were not rich.

13748. Did they get a classical education?—No; they got an English education, and were taught French.

13749. And they passed upon that?—They passed upon that.

13750. Are your schools inspected by a qualified inspector?—Twice a year, by inspectors sent down by our Superior, and they report to him the state of the schools and the condition of the building.

13751. Have you any objection to our inspector, Mr. Moore, looking at them?—None in the world; we shall be very glad to see him.

13752. I see the subjects of education are Christian doctrine, reading, writing, grammar, dictation, geography, history, geometry, measurement, algebra, book-keeping, natural philosophy, drawing, use of the globe, and navigation?—Yes.

13753. What appliances have you for teaching natural philosophy?—We have some models, and sheets of Johnston's, and also a set of chemical apparatus.

13754. Does one of yourselves teach that branch?—Yes; one of the Brothers. I produce a map of the Mount Zion buildings, with lease, and an abstract of title connected with it, also an account of the income and expenditure of the schools.

13755. I see you begin the year 1877-8 with a balance due by the schools, £30 15s 7d, and at the end of the year, the balance due was £17 8s 10d. The expenditure for the year was £179 19s 1d, less by £30 15s 7d, the balance at the beginning of the year?—Yes.

13756. I see an item of 26 3s 8d from Dehuay and Cogswell's charity—what is that?—That comes from the rent of a house in Stephen's-street. I get every year £17 10s, rent for that house, and out of it I am obliged to keep an almshouse in repair, and to pay the head rent. Any balance remaining is divided between the schools, three-fourths to Mount Zion, and one-fourth to St. Patrick's. That was the will of those parties.

13757. When was that endowment first received?—I cannot tell.

13758. I see the amount you get from it varies?—Yes.

13759. In the year 1877-8, a bequest of £15 appears to have been received—did that go into the general fund?—No; it was left specially for the school.

13760. I see the items of expenditure are—rent, repairs, school requisites, premiums, gratuities, and interest on money sunk in the schools?—Yes, that was interest on the money expended by the community. The community sunk £1,100 in the building. The school house was completely remodelled.

13761. Taking the year 1874-5, I find the expenditure is classified in this way: rent and repairs, £20 12s 9d; school requisites, £4 12s 6d; premiums and gratuities, £3 5s 11d; interest and charges, £69 12s 8d. How much is the remuneration of the chaplain?—£10 a year. He has to attend to all the boys for that.

13762. I suppose the services of the Brotherhood are given gratuitously?—Yes. Here is an account of the £40 2s 4d I get from the Commissioners of Charitable Donations and Bequests. I have to send them an account of the expenditure of the money every year, with the vouchers.

13763. You vouch the money paid to you by the Commissioners, by producing the receipt of the Bureau of Mount Zion schools?—Yes, every year.

13764. In these any other matter in connection with the schools that you wish to mention?—No, except that we have not sufficient room for all the boys that are applying to us for education. I am obliged to send them away every week. If we had four, or even six, more class rooms we could fill them all within a week. The children are going uneducated about the streets, for want of sufficient school accommodation.

The Right Rev. MAURICE F. DAY, D.D., Bishop of Cashel, recalled.

The Rt. Rev. Maurice F. Day, D.D.

13770 Dr. HART.—There is another matter connected with the city of Waterford, as to which we would like to obtain information, the Stephen-street Corporation Grammar school—in what condition is that institution now?—I do not think it is in existence at all.

13771. It appears there was a provision made for the maintenance of a school by the Rev. W. T. Price during his life—is he dead?—He is dead, and no provision has been since made for the school.

13772. LOUIS J. COCHRAN, Freeholder.—It appears, by the Report of the Commission of 1867, that there was an exhibition of £15 a year into Irish currency founded by Rev. Dr. Downes for the benefit of the school?—Yes.

13773. The same Report states that the exhibition in question was not under the will of Dr. Downes, but under a deed of 27th September, 1787, and that it was to be paid out of premises in Waterford. By the terms of the deed this £15 a year was to be paid to a student in the University of Dublin who should have been educated in the "Waterford Free School," until of Master's standing, the student to be selected by the Bishop of Waterford, the Dean, the Mayor, the Recorder, the master of the school, and other persons mentioned in the deed—do you know what has become of that exhibition?—It is still in existence. When I came to Waterford first I found there was no exhibition. By the terms of the trust there was an alternative given, that if no exhibition, the fund might be applied in the purchase of books for the Cathedral Library, and for a year or two it was so disposed of. It then occurred to me that as the Waterford Diocesan school was in existence—that was a school founded during the time of the Church establishment, I believe, at the instance of Judge Lawson, by a tax on the beneficed clergy—and as that school stood in the place of the other which had become extinct, it would be carrying out the design of Dr. Downes if I could appoint an exhibitor from that school, under the same conditions that he had prescribed. I found a very distinguished pupil of that school—Mr. Richard Cherry—who entered Trinity College, and I appointed him to hold the exhibition, which he has at present. He has now taken his degree, and is proceeding to the bar, and has obtained a succession of honours in College.

13774. Did the other gentlemen whose names were mentioned in the deed take part in the election of Mr. Cherry?—No; I believe I consulted the Dean, but none of the others took any part in it.

13775. Mr. Cherry was a pupil of the Diocesan school?—Yes.

13776. Does that school now exist?—It does. It has ceased to exist as an endowed school. The last master, Mr. Valentine, compounded, and accepted a position as a master in Peroria school. I was very anxious that there should be a school in Waterford to fill the place of the Diocesan school—at which the same of gentry and respectable shopkeepers might be educated, and I got the Diocese of Waterford and Lismore (not of Cashel) to give up the composition money which £21 to their account from Mr. Valentine's composition—£250. I also succeeded in obtaining subscriptions to the amount of £500 more from persons interested.

in Waterford. That established an endowment of £1,080, which produces £40 a year. Part of it is in the hands of the Church Representative Body—the remainder is invested, I think, in railway shares—we have got an excellent master, and we hope soon to have a school room built.

13777. LORD E. CHURCHILL.—What became of the old building?—The old building in Stephen's-street passed long ago completely out of the hands of the trustees.

13778. LORD JUSTICE FITZGIBBON.—I believe there was no Diocesan school building in Waterford?—No, the school was held in a hired house; I felt that the rent of a house was a very unwise burden for us to undertake. There was at one time an attempt to establish a boarding school, but I have no wish to establish a school for boarders, as there are excellent boarding schools already in the Diocese—what we want is a good day school, and what we intend building is a large room, it will form portion of the premises of the Protestant Hall.

13779. Is the school going on at present?—Yes, in the hired house.

13780. LORD E. CHURCHILL.—Do you propose commencing the exhibition of £15 a year with this school?—Yes.

13781. Where does that money come from?—It is paid by Mr. Symes, the agent of the Diocesan property.

13782. LORD JUSTICE FITZGIBBON.—I believe there was no building in connexion with the Diocesan school in Waterford?—No.

13783. And the collection of a tax upon the clergy, for the purposes of the school, fell into abeyance, until it was re-commenced shortly before the passing of the Irish Church Act?—I believe so, but I was not here then.

13784. You are aware, of course, that under the provisions of that Act, the Diocesan school masters, who had a right to the tax, were enabled to commute and compound?—Yes.

13785. And in that way the provision for Education came to an end?—Yes.

13786. Was your attention at any time called to the circumstance that the Act had treated the income of the Diocesan school master—which was in fact a tax upon the Church property—as if it had been part of the Church property?—Yes; I believe it did.

13787. You are aware that the capital value of (it— or rather what represented the capital value—was over, under the Act, to the Church Commissioners, and only the commutation value of the existing life interest was repaid?—Yes.

13788. Assuming the provision that was made for the Diocesan schools to be still forthcoming, is there a need in Waterford of a classical school, such as the Diocesan school was intended to be?—Decidedly.

13789. And there exists a class of persons ready to take advantage of it?—Yes.

13790. Are you aware the Diocesan schools were not limited to any one denomination?—I was not aware of it.

13791. What provision, besides your school, is there in Waterford for supplying classical education, such as the Diocesan schools were intended to give?—I am not aware of any. I believe there is a school opened up by some Roman Catholic gentlemen in the Stephen's-street school-house, but I know nothing about it.

13792. What provision is there, in addition to the school that you have been establishing, for giving a classical education to Protestants in Waterford?—None that I am aware of. It was that made me so anxious to have such a school established, as without it we would be left utterly without any means of education, suited for gentlemen's sons, in the city of Waterford.

13793. You think the endowment of the Diocesan school could still find a useful scope here?—Certainly.

13794. LORD E. CHURCHILL.—Do you know whether the school in Stephen's-street has taken the place of the old endowed grammar school?—I believe there is a school carried on in the house now, but I really do not know anything about it.

Mr. Joseph W.
Hewitt.

Mr. JOSEPH W. HEWITT, examined.

13795. LORD JUSTICE FITZGIBBON.—You are a solicitor, and the Town Clerk of Waterford?—I am.

13796. How long have you held the position of Town Clerk of Waterford?—Since 1873.

13797. Do you know what was done with reference to an annuity that was formerly paid, by the Waterford Corporation, for an educational institution called the Stephen's-street Endowed School?—I was not Town Clerk at the time that annuity ceased, but it was paid up to the death of the Rev. Dr. Price, the incumbent of the school, in connexion with it was the Rectorship of St. Clare's, which is a small Church attached to the Protestant Cathedral here.

13798. Do you happen to know whether these payments legally ceased at Dr. Price's death, or was it because there was no successor appointed that they stopped?—I am not able to answer that; but, as a matter of fact, there was no successor to Dr. Price, the school in Stephen's-street was given up, and the building surrendered to the Corporation.

13799. What is the title to the house in Stephen's-street?—It was the property of the Corporation, and it was surrendered back to them after Dr. Price's death.

13800. When did they get it up?—Some time in the year 1862. I find by a report of the General Commission, dated 11th June, 1862.—

"The Commission beg to report, that it is inexpedient, under existing circumstances, to continue the payment of the Waterford school, as suggested by the Solicitor-General for Ireland, and in reference to the school-house and dwelling-house, which have been surrendered by the representatives of Dr. Price, we, being of opinion that same should not be used for, or dedicated to any other than educational purposes, recommended that the Council should advertise for tenders for letting the premises for these purposes."

13801. What was the suggestion of the Solicitor-General?—It would appear that he suggested that a successor should be appointed to the Rev. Dr. Price. The Commission declined acting on his opinion, deeming it inexpedient, under existing circumstances, to continue the endowment of the Waterford school.

13802. Do you know whether he gave it as his opinion, that they were legally bound to continue it?—I do not; but I have been informed that a case was laid before the then Solicitor-General to advise whether they were legally bound to do so, and he suggested that they should, but the Corporation resolved they would not.

13803. Have you any copy or record of the Order of the Court of Queen's Bench of 16th June, 1863, by which the endowment was secured?—I have not.

13804. What was the result of the advertisement for tenders?—The result would appear, from the minutes, to have been, that in accordance with the recommendation of the General Commission, the Council directed that the Law and Finance Committee should advertise for tenders for letting the premises for educational purposes; and accordingly the following report of the Law and Finance Committee appears on the books, dated 16th July, 1862.—

"The Committee beg to report that, in pursuance of the resolution of Council of 16th June last, on the report submitted to them by the General Commission, they have advertised for tenders for the premises lately conveyed by the Rev. Dr. Price. One tender only was submitted—that of Right Rev. Dr. O'Brien, Bishop of Waterford, who proposes to take the premises, on lease, at the yearly rent of £30. They recommended the Council to accept the proposal, and grant a lease for such number of years as may legally be given, the Corporation to reserve possession in case the holding shall be at any time used for other than educational purposes.

That recommendation was adopted by the Council, and a lease ordered to be given to the Bishop, for a term of seventy-five years, from 29th September, 1863, at the rental of £20.

13805. Do you know what the rental value of the premises is?—I do not; but I can ascertain it for you. The premises were situated in a back street, in which many of the houses had gone to ruin. At one time it was one of the leading streets of Waterford, but all the houses are now in a bad condition.

13806. Do you know the premises?—I do; they consist of a large school-house, a residence adjoining, and a play-ground attached—not a large play ground.

13807. Has it ever since been used as a school?—It has ever since been used as a school.

13808. What sort of school?—A classical school—rather a high class of education is given in it.

13809. Is it a school for day boys?—For day boys, altogether.

13810. Can you tell what number of boys are attending it?—I have only a hazy idea. I should say between seventy and eighty.

13811. No funds are given by the Corporation to that school?—None.

13812. LORD B. CHURCHILL.—Is Mr. Phelps the head master of the school?—He is. I should mention that the rent was subsequently reduced to £12 18s. 6d.

13813. When was that done?—In the year 1867. I find the following minute under date 7th May, 1867:—

"Resolved.—That the Report of the General Committee of the Council upon the memorial of the Very Rev. Dr. Woodlock, D.D., Rector of the Catholic University of Ireland, praying for an annual grant from the borough funds for the maintenance of a first-class grammar school in the city of Waterford, be and the same is hereby agreed to and adopted by this Council, and that in pursuance of the recommendation contained therein, a lease be granted of the premises in Stephen's-street, now being used for educational purposes, in connection with the Catholic University, to the Right Rev. Dr. O'Brien, Roman Catholic Bishop of Waterford and Lismore, for the longest term that can legally be given, from the 29th day of September, 1863, at the yearly rent of £12 18s. 6d., starting, and that a promise be inserted in the lease for redemption, in case the premises should ever be used for educational purposes."

13814. Then the Council have let portion of the corporate property, by way of endowment, for a denominational school, at £12 18s. 6d. a year, where the premises are worth at least £300?—I have read you the minute.

13815. Have you a copy of Mr. Woodlock's memorial?—I have not—I cannot find it. The only record I have of it is contained in the minute I have read.

13816. Had the rent of £30 been regularly paid up to that time?—As far as I know it had.

13817. Have you received the rent of £12 18s. 6d. regularly since?—Yes.

13818. Had the property between the years 1862 and 1867 depreciated in value?—Well, of course property in that street became very much depreciated, because the houses were let in tenements.

13819. As I understand, there was a lease executed?—No, there was never a lease taken out of it; it has only been held, on the resolution of the Council.

13820. Who is the tenant now?—It was originally let to the Right Rev. Dr. O'Brien, the then Bishop of Waterford—of course the present tenant is his successor. The tenant in occupation is the Rev. Mr. Flahin.

13821. Why was no lease executed?—No lease was prepared at the time, and it has never been applied for since.

13822. Have the Corporation power to grant such leases?—They have power to grant a lease for seventy-five years, but if under the letting value, we have to go to the Treasury and get their sanction.

13823. Did you ever report this letting to the Lords of the Treasury?—I do not think we did.

13824. Has it ever been sanctioned?—No.

13825. Have the tenants expended money on the place?—Yes, I understood a large sum has been expended in improvements. The report of the General Committee, dated 26th February, 1867, states that they have read the memorial of Dr. Woodlock, the Rector of the Catholic University, praying for an annual grant from the Borough Fund towards the maintenance of a first-class grammar school in the city of Waterford, and that they recommended that, in consideration of the large outlay made by the Catholic University upon the premises in Stephen's-street, and the said premises being used for educational purposes, same be let to the Right Rev. Dr. O'Brien, Roman Catholic Bishop of Waterford and Lismore, for the longest term that can legally be given, at the yearly rent of £12 18s. 6d. It was in pursuance of that recommendation that the Council agreed to grant the lease of the premises.

13826. Have you made your tenants aware that if any troublesome citizen filed an information they might lose the premises?—I can only read what appears on the minutes.

13827. It would appear, from the last report you have referred to, that the Council let the premises at the reduced rent in consequence of the outlay that had been made upon the building?—Yes.

13828. And that outlay was made on the faith of the original letting at £30 a year?—Yes, and they applied for a reduction of rent in consideration of the outlay, and the premises being used solely for educational purposes.

13829. The Corporation considered themselves bound to see that the building was used only for educational purposes?—Yes.

13830. The original rent charge has not been paid since Rev. Mr. Price's death?—Not since Mr. Price's death.

[The Commissioners adjourned.]

THIRTY-THIRD DAY.—SATURDAY, OCTOBER 4, 1879.—11 o'CLOCK, A.M.

Oct 4, 1879.

In the Court-house, CORK.

Present.—The EARL OF ROSK, Chairman; and RICHARD O'SHAUGHNESSY, Esq., M.P.; with JAMES CARRIG MURPHY, Esq., B.L.D., Secretary.

Rev. JAMES DOUGLAS, examined.

Rev. James
Douglas.

13831. CHAIRMAN.—You are the president of St. Patrick's College, CORK?—Yes.

13832. How long have you occupied that position?—Since February, 1878.

13833. What staff of assistants have you?—Five priests and three lay professors.

13834. The school seems to have been founded in 1849?—The old seminary, which is distinct from St. Patrick's College, existed longer; but St. Patrick's College is quite distinct from it.

13835. The old seminary was closed at one time, and, after an interval, the present one was opened?—I have no recollection of its having been closed; it may have been.

13836. Give us the history of the Institution?—On the old Seminary, and on the Bishop's residence, a sum of £5,000, including purchase-money, was expended by the Most Reverend Dr. Browne, the then Bishop, and the predecessor of the present Bishop. It was established as a Diocesan Seminary, and its general use was to prepare young men of the Diocese for the priesthood, previous to their entering Maynooth College, and also to give, what I may call, an intermediate education to any boys who came in from the Diocese, and were intended for lay professions.

Oct. 4, 1879.

Rev. James
Dolan.

13837. There was no necessary understanding that a boy when he entered was intended for the priesthood, though it was generally supposed that a boy entered with that object?—That is quite correct. I think it was in 1839 that old College was established.

13838. In the report of the Commission of 1857 it is stated that it was founded in February, 1849?—It was opened in 1859.

13839. The report of 1857 states that Edward Magovern devised 171a. 2s. 99r.—have you that land still?—We have. It is now an endowment for St. Patrick's College.

13840. Where is that property situated?—In the county of Leitrim. The lands are called Ombeg.

13841. That is a long way from Cavan?—Some sixty miles.

13842. Do you hold that land to fee?—We do.

13843. What is its present value?—Its present value is £42 per annum, but the largest sum we ever got out of it is £36 a year.

13844. Is it let to tenants?—Yes, a priest is the district agent, and rents us the rent.

13845. The £36 you mentioned is the net rent?—Yes, after allowing for taxes, annuities, and bad paying tenants; £12 was the last sum received. I suppose the taxes are affecting it like every other place.

13846. Mr. O'SHEAHOUSEY.—Was the £12 for the half-year?—It was for the year. The Rev. Mr. Brady is the Rector of St. Patrick's College.

13847. The report of the former Commission mentions a bequest of the Very Rev. P. O'Reilly?—Yes; he was formerly parish priest of Cavan, and left £400 for educational purposes.

13848. Where is that money now?—It is invested in land.

13849. Where is that land situated?—In the parish of Tonnypont, in the county of Cavan.

13850. Is that land subject to any head-rent?—There is a head-rent of 13s. 4d.

13851. How is it occupied?—There are two tenants on it.

13852. What rent do you get out of it?—About £14 a year.

13853. How do you hold it?—In fee.

13854. CHAIRMAN.—Who are the trustees by whom the land is held?—The Bishop of the Diocese, and the Vicar-General.

13855. I suppose the other land is held by the same trustees?—It is not. It is held by virtue of the will of the Most Rev. Dr. Browne. It was first bequeathed by Edward Magovern to a Rev. Mr. Dumas, to trust for the maintenance and education of boys; Mr. Dumas bequeathed it to Dr. Browne on the same terms on which he got it, and we have it by virtue of Dr. Browne's will.

13856. It must be left in trust to someone?—To the Bishop of the Diocese for the time being.

13857. John Brady, who died 6th February, 1849, appears to have left £300 for educational purposes.—Where is that money?—That is invested in the funds of St. Patrick's College; it is put to the credit of St. Patrick's College.

13858. Is it invested in Stock?—Not in Stock; we have employed it in building, as part of our funds, and we are accountable to the House. We style it one of our barnies.

13859. Mr. O'SHEAHOUSEY.—You, as it were, owe to the Diocese, or district, certain free teaching in respect of it?—Yes, so far as the interest of that money goes.

13860. Your present position is that you hold about 171 acres of land in the county of Leitrim, producing a net income of £36 a year, land in the county of Cavan producing about £14 a year, and you have the present value of the buildings. That is your endowment?—We have an endowment also from what I have called the old Seminary. We receive £100 a year from the lands and houses of that old Seminary, founded by Dr. Browne.

13861. Where are they?—In this town, a few perches from the Court-house. The Roman Catholic clergy of the parish are living there at present.

13862. The building was found suitable for the purpose, and was let to the best advantage, and the you provided yourselves with a house elsewhere?—Yes.

13863. What is the rental?—£100 a year is our net profit from the house, and about six acres of land. I may tell you that we have utilized the old building, and established an intermediate day school there. We opened it in September last. We do not admit day boys to St. Patrick's College, and in order to supply that deficiency we have opened a day school in the old buildings for the accommodation of our people. There boys who would not come as boarders go there.

13864. Will you still get £100 a year for the old house, or will you have to make a reduction in consideration of using the house?—The Catholic clergymen of the parish occupy the land, and farm it as best they can.

13865. In fact, you get £100 a year, which they give for the use of the land and house?—Yes. The principal house is occupied by the clergymen, and a part of the buildings of the old seminary has been done up and utilized as a day school.

13866. I suppose the old school-house and the six acres are held by the Bishop of the Diocese and the Vicar-General as trustees?—Part of it is leased from Lord Farnham, and part of it we hold as tenants at will.

13867. What rent do you pay to Lord Farnham?—About £40 a year.

13868. Is that to be deducted from the £100?—No. We leave that to the occupants to manage. They don't rent and taxes, and hand in over the net sum of £100. We have nothing to do with paying the rent; but that is a private arrangement between ourselves. Of course, we are the accountable parties.

13869. How do you hold the new school-house?—In 1859, the Most Rev. Dr. Cusack, the present Roman Catholic Bishop of the Diocese, purchased two townlands called Cullin and Drumbo, about a mile from Cavan, for £14,000, which, with all the expenses, amounted to £15,000. He got the lands from Colonel Tonnypont. It is fee-simple property, subject to a quit rent of 2s. a year.

13870. What extent is it?—The extent is 569a. 2r. 21s. sixteenth measure.

13871. I suppose that land is let?—Part of it is let to tenants, but, surrounding the College, we have an estate nearly two acres, of that, however, there is a good deal of wood plantation, and about 50 acres of it being so no return. The rest of the land is let to tenants. The rent paid by the tenants is £350, leaving us a profit rent of £351 per annum.

13872. That is only an investment. It is not in immediate connection with the College. Is it squelch from it?—It is separate from it. In course of time it will be an endowment if we were out of debt; but the greater part of our profit rent goes to pay off the interest due on the money we borrowed for the purchase of the land, and for the erection and completion of St. Patrick's College, and we have still a debt of some £5,000, which takes a good deal of our profit rent. The interest alone, at four per cent, would be £342 a year.

13873. Of the £14,000 there was £5,000 borrowed?—I should explain that of the gross sum we expended on purchasing the land and building the College, we still owe £5,000. The land is paid for, the party is paid for, and all the expenses except the £5,000. The building of the College was quite distinct from the purchasing of the lands. We built the College at a cost in the gross of, say, £20,000. The bare shell of the house cost about £12,000; then there were the extras to the builder, the furnishing, and the architect's fees. We had a good many extras for the furnishing of students' rooms, and getting up appendices in lecture halls, students' walks, laying out the grounds, making the principal avenue, planting

12874. Of which you are still in debt to the extent of £5,000?—Yes, and the balance we have paid off from various sources, which I shall explain.

12875. CHAIRMAN.—Is there any income derived from the twenty-two acres surrounding the College?—It is in our own hands. Whatever profit we make of it we apply to the reduction of our debt.

12876. It is farmed?—It is managed by the Bursar of the College, who is present.

12877. What profit do you derive from your own farming?—We do not go very exactly into an account of our immediate income from the farm; but it was not going since five years ago.

12878. Have you looked into the Government valuations of the surrounding 477 acres, to see whether the tenants pay a fair and reasonable rent?—I overruled the Government valuations of the land at all. I have a fair idea of what the lands are let for per acre, some persons being 25s. per Irish acre, others go up to 30s., but none higher than 30s. I should also state we have another farm in our hands, of fourteen statute acres, which a tenant gave up. He was not succeeding, and we gave him his purchase-money, and took the land up from him.

12879. Mr. O'BRIEN.—Is that part of the 400 acres?—It is.

12880. The rental which you have produced shows that the twenty-two acres round the College, which are now occupied for the College purposes, were formerly in the possession of the Most Rev. Nicholas Conaty, and paid £240 a year?—It was purchased by Dr. Conaty, but was in possession of a Mr. Montgomery, who was a tenant to Colonel Tansy, and paid £200 a year rent, and when the sale took place it came to Dr. Conaty.

12881. The old rental of the entire premises, less by the twenty-two acres, was £380, and the present rental of the same minus fourteen acres is £200?—What did the tenant pay for the fourteen acres?—£11 a year.

12882. CHAIRMAN.—Have there been any changes of money since the purchase was made in 1870?—There have.

12883. You have not been able to let to better advantage?—No, we never raised the rent on increasing tenants, and we have given them leases, or terms of purchase.

12884. Are they long leases?—Some of them are for ever, and some for 999 years.

12885. Mr. O'BRIEN.—The Very Rev. Mr. O'Reilly requested £100 to found a scholarship, and stated that a preference should be given to persons of known name—in that money still devoted to the scholarship?—It is.

12886. Is the holder an O'Reilly?—Yes, one of the sons.

12887. Who made the leases to which you have alluded?—The trustees; the property is held in trust by the Bishop of the Diocese and the two Vicars-General.

12888. Did you take fines?—We did.

12889. What amount of fines did you take?—£5 per acre.

12890. How many acres were left?—I do not exactly know.

12891. What was done with the fines?—The fines went to reduce our debt, and to pay off the money due on the creation of St. Patrick's College.

12892. Do you think you are paying off the debt at the rate of £150 a year?—No, we are paying interest at that rate, and then whatever surplus we have we apply to pay off the principal, we try if possible to be within our income from the students' fees, and if we do not succeed in that, we turn back on the other source of income I have mentioned.

12893. What was the original debt?—£7,000.

12894. How much have you reduced it by?—Nearly £1,000.

12895. How long were you paying off that sum?—About five years.

12896. CHAIRMAN.—What fees do your students pay?—£36 a year.

12897. How many students are there?—We have fifty-three inmates.

12898. Do all pay the same?—Yes.

12899. There are no free places or donations?—Some hold what I call bursaries, as, for instance, in the case of the £14 which represents the money left by the Rev. Mr. O'Reilly; the student enjoying that bursary only pays the balance.

12900. They all pay £36 a year, but some of them get exhibitions?—Exactly.

12901. What amount is spent on those bursaries?—They are worth about £51 10s. per annum.

12902. Are your accounts looked over by any one?—They are submitted occasionally to the two Vicars-General, and another clergyman appointed by the Bishop.

12903. Do they audit them at regular intervals?—Not at regular intervals.

12904. Mr. O'BRIEN.—Do they do it as often as once a year?—They sometimes do not do it every year.

12905. CHAIRMAN.—There are to day people received?—Not at St. Patrick's College, but in the old school there are sixteen day students.

12906. You have told us that the teaching staff at St. Patrick's College comprises five persons, and three lay professors?—What salaries are they paid?—My salary is £300 a year, the next gentleman to me gets £20, there are two at £50 each, and one at £40; they are all priests living in the College, and are boarded, and have attendance and washing from the College. Of the lay professors, one who is non-resident has £100 a year, another has £80 a year, with a free house and garden, and some other perquisites; we have also a professor of music at £40 a year, but he is entirely confined to the music department.

12907. Mr. O'BRIEN.—Is he resident?—He is non-resident. The College is accountable to him for the salary I have mentioned, but we try to supplement it by extras for instrumental music. Students at the piano pay a certain sum per quarter, and that helps to maintain him.

12908. CHAIRMAN.—Is that the only extra?—Washing and instrumental music are extras.

12909. What do the students pay for instrumental music?—£1 1s. per quarter. It is only three guineas a year, because the long vacation comes in, in the summer quarter.

12910. Mr. O'BRIEN.—What staff of professors have you for the Intermediate school, in the town?—We have a priest and a lay professor at present. Our agreement, if I may so call it, in starting the school, was to work it by means of the staff of St. Patrick's College. So that, properly speaking, it is not in the hands of any one individual.

12911. Its charts are issued from St. Patrick's College?—Exactly.

12912. And there is no special attachment to the professors?—No special attachment at all.

12913. They have to attend and teach?—Yes.

12914. One of the lay professors at St. Patrick's College teaches science—what do the two others teach?—English, and mathematics.

12915. Is the non-resident master, who receives £100 a year, the English or the mathematical master?—At present he is teaching both English and mathematics. Last year, after the publication of the Intermediate Education programme, we told off one to mathematics solely, and the other to English, but this year we have one teaching English and mathematics in the College, and another teaching English and mathematics in the day-school. He also gives lectures on natural philosophy in St. Patrick's Col. lege. Any professor attending the day-school is not thereby disconnected with the College—he does his work as we require in both places.

13916. Are your boarding students all intended for the Church?—Not all.

13917. About what would you say would be the proportion?—It is very difficult to say, on some boys are left free to choose by their parents. We have ten boys, at present, who have declared that they will not go on for the Church. In our Intermediate school we have now thirty pupils, and sixteen outside; but our numbers are low this year, we had eighty last year.

13918. Do you teach theology in the seminary?—We do.

13919. How many pupils did you send in to the Intermediate examinations?—Twenty names were returned, but two got sick, so only eighteen actually went up.

13920. What was the result?—Six got prizes, and six passes—that is twelve out of the eighteen.

13921. Was much of the money which you have expended collected from the people?—There was.

13922. How much was collected by voluntary subscription from the people, saying nothing about wills or bequests of that kind?—They are so mixed up I could not say.

13923. Would you say £10,000 was collected by voluntary subscription?—I would, I think it would not be oversteering it.

13924. And the balance was derived from wills?—From wills and the bequests of the deceased. I should say the Bishop gave over £800 of the purchase money.

13925. You do not include the subscriptions from the priests in the £10,000?—I do not, I should say over £5,000 was received from the Bishop and the priests. Every parish priest gave £100, and every curate £50, in addition to what came from the people of the Diocese by way of subscriptions.

13926. Was any of the money sent from abroad?—A large sum, over £8,000, came from the United States of America, having been collected there by priests sent out by the Bishop, and one of whom was my predecessor, the Rev. Father Finnigan.

13927. Have you any general suggestions to make on the subject of education, or educational facilities, or State aid, or endowment, or anything of that kind—or of any views to express, which are held on the subject?—I should think that from all we have been doing, and the sacrifices that were made, we ought to have a fair hope of getting some aid from the State. We have no temptation. The Intermediate Education Act is the only stimulus we have got.

13928. Do you think that will stimulate intermediate education?—I think it will have a very salutary effect.

13929. It will create a greater demand for education in the neighbourhood?—I think so.

13930. And it will require additional facilities for education?—It will, and it is indirectly useful to the school, in consequence of the results.

13931. How much do you calculate for results for the boys?—I should think about £12.

13932. Beyond the general statement that you wish for any assistance the State can give, is there anything you wish to add?—I have nothing particular to add. I am not well posted as to what schemes there are of money in the hands of the Government. But if there were a distribution of Government money we should have a fair claim.

13933. You mean some of the State funds?—Yes, because virtually those are now given for denominational purposes in certain schools. But I should not wish to interfere with the vested rights of others, or with the private endowments of individuals, as I should be sorry if my own private endowments were interfered with by the State. But whatever moneys the Government might have in hands for educational purposes, and which are now virtually used for denominational purposes in some of the schools supported by the Government, might be distributed.

13934. Are you referring to the Model school, or the Royal school?—I should not like to refer to any school in particular. I am not well posted on the Government endowment of these schools.

13935. CHAIRMAN.—Do you prepare students first for the Church, without their going to Maynooth?—We do.

13936. Students going through your course are qualified to enter the priesthood at once?—Exactly.

13937. Mr. O'BRIEN.—Then they must remain till twenty-four?—They must.

13938. How many years do they spend studying theology?—Four years of theology; a year of moral philosophy, not included in the four years' theology, and a year of natural philosophy. We go on the lines of Maynooth College.

13939. Before a boy goes into the class of natural philosophy, he is supposed to have left what is called rhetoric?—Yes, he has to be up in his Classics, English, and French.

13940. What is the course in physics?—It includes electricity, galvanism, chemistry, optics, acoustics, and hydraulics.

13941. Does it include pure and mixed mathematics?—Yes, whatever mathematics are connected with mechanics, and plane and spherical trigonometry.

13942. What is done about natural sciences, such as zoology and botany?—We do not include them in the physics year.

13943. Do you teach botany and zoology at all?—We have not taught them up to this.

13944. Have you a chemical laboratory?—Yes, we have a small one, which cost something about £18.

13945. Who is the professor?—One of our lay professors.

13946. CHAIRMAN.—Where did he learn?—He took lectures at the Catholic University, under Professor Casey, and before that he got his education in various places.

13947. Could you give us more accurate figures as to your expenditure?—We have no objection to show you the balance sheets.

13948. When were the gas works put up?—About five and a half or six years ago.

13949. If I had a private residence there, I do not think that I should put up gas works. I should light it with paraffin?—Paraffin is very dangerous for lay schools. We have had no accident from the gas.

13950. There are two Catholic schools in Clonsilla and the Christian Brothers?—Yes.

13951. Are either of them endowed?—I think not.

13952. How is the Christian Brothers' name sold?—I really do not know.

13953. Do you know anything about the new school?—Not so much as to give satisfactory evidence about it.

13954. Mr. O'BRIEN.—How many boys attend your own day school?—Sixteen.

13955. Have you sent any of them in for the Intermediate Examination?—No—it was only on the 5th September that we opened the day school.

13956. CHAIRMAN.—It is a higher class of school, rather above a primary school?—Yes; our object in starting it was to provide an intermediate school—a year in the period.

13957. Is there any National school under the parish priest?—Yes.

13958. Mr. O'BRIEN.—A National school?—Yes, but in town, there are, however, few in the parish.

13959. CHAIRMAN.—The Christian Brothers' is a primary school?—It is a primary school for boys, at the Convent school is for girls.

Mr. THOMAS JONES SMYTH, examined.

Oct. 6, 1876.

Mr. THOMAS J. SMYTH.

13660. CHAIRMAN.—You desire, as a resident in Cavan, to make a statement?—Yes. I find by a circular, issued in June, 1875, that the Commissioners of Education passed the following resolution:—

"That, with a view to giving an impetus to education, in so English and non-English centres, in such papers as are not looking forward to entering on any of the learned professions, money prizes shall be granted to such pupils, at Cavan Royal school, at a public examination, to be held at Christmas or Midsummer, in the following subjects:—reading, penmanship, writing from dictation, writing prices, book-keeping, arithmetic (high class), geography, history, English literature, and French or German for the higher prizes. The amount of the prizes resolved to be granted is as follows:—five prizes—not exceeding £10 each, ten prizes—not exceeding £5 each. All to be given on the grounds of superior merit alone."

That resolution having been passed, I want to know why it has never been acted on.

13661. Mr. O'SHEA.—When the Rev. Mr. Moore was examined before us the evidence given on that point was as follows:—

"(72) Are you aware that the Commissioners of Charitable Works have voted the money that is now allotted for the recent exhibitions to assist boys to be examined at your school?—I am quite aware they have. (73) Did you ever make the suggestion that this should be done?—They made the suggestion to me. When giving school exhibitions to Arragh and Dungannon they wrote me to say they would give certain exhibitions, ten exhibitions to Dungannon and Arragh, and five or six to Cavan. They wrote similar letters to Dr. Ringwood and Mr. Morgan, requesting us to meet and suggest a plan, the nature of the examination, and so forth, under which these free exhibitions should be given. I went to Arragh, as the place was fixed upon, to meet together on the subject. They were given to Arragh and Dungannon, and the Commissioners wrote to me to say that on further consideration the funds would not permit, though they had requested me to publish in the towns—which I did—that the exhibitions would be given."

Is not that the matter you refer to?—Yes. The reason I asked the question is this, I saw by a report of the evidence that a large sum of money has been funded to the credit of the Cavan school. I am rather interested in the question, because I have a boy who would be entitled to one of those prizes. He passed at the Intermediate examination the other day.

13662. CHAIRMAN.—Is he in the Cavan Royal school now?—He is.

13663. Mr. O'SHEA.—Is he a day scholar?—He is.

13664. Are there many day scholars attending there?—I know of six or seven myself.

13665. Are you a Protestant?—I am.

13666. Would you say that there is a general desire for a good commercial education among men of your class?—Quite so.

13667. They desire a commercial as distinguished from a high classical education?—Certainly. I myself have more than one son. To one I intend giving a good English education, and I intend giving the others a better or higher class education.

13668. You want a higher education for them, then the primary schools would give?—Yes.

13669. What primary Protestant schools are there in Cavan?—None at present. The school I send my other children to is under the National Board, and I should like a higher education for them than that.

13670. And that you think you are entitled to be afforded in the Royal school at Cavan?—Certainly. The only school for the Protestant population is at present under the National Board. It was formerly, and until a recent period, under Lord Farnham's direct control and management, and supported entirely and exclusively by him.

13671. CHAIRMAN.—Now that it is a National school, who is the patron?—Lord Farnham, and the Archbishop of Kilmore is the manager.

13672. Is it a mixed school?—It is.

13673. What are the proportions of children of the two religions attending it?—I could not give the proportions.

13674. Being under the rules of the National Board there is a conscience clause enforced?—Quite so. Its management is perfectly satisfactory to the Protestant inhabitants.

Mr. JAMES BRADY, C.E., examined.

Mr. James Brady, C.E.

13675. CHAIRMAN.—I understand you wish to make some statement in reference to the facilities for education in Cavan?—Yes, I would be glad to do so.

13676. Do you live in Cavan?—I have lived in the town of Cavan for the last thirty years.

13677. What is your profession?—I am a Civil Engineer.

13678. What statement do you wish to make?—I wish to state that, in my opinion, the Catholics of Cavan and its neighbourhood have not at all these facilities for education which they require.

13679. You are a Roman Catholic?—I am.

13680. You wish to state the views of the Roman Catholic body?—Yes. They do not attend the Royal school here, and there are no day boys admitted into the Diocesan College.

13681. They are only admitted into the Intermediate school held in the old school-house?—Yes, and those Catholics who are not able to pay as boarders in the Diocesan school, are sent out, I may say, from all other education except the National schools.

13682. Is £35 a year too high a charge for them to pay?—It is too high for a certain class.

13683. In fact they would desire to have a good education at a lower figure?—By far the greater number in the community would do so.

13684. What is the charge for day pupils in the Intermediate school?—£5 a year, but that is only very recently established.

13685. Do you think that that school has, in a great measure, met the want which existed?—It has, to a great extent, done so, for the people who reside in and near the town; but then there is half the country

Cavan, where they have no facilities for boys to attend day schools, or acquire any knowledge of Latin.

13686. There is nothing beyond the National Board school in any country place, unless these happen to be endowments?—No, I remember when we had, in this county, a number of Latin schools very well attended.

13687. They were not endowed schools?—No.

13688. Were they hedge schools?—Yes, hedge schools.

13689. Mr. O'SHEA.—You mean that, to a considerable extent, the boys residing near Cavan would come in every day, if there were a flourishing Intermediate school here?—They would.

13690. I understand there are a couple of classical schools in the county, connected with the College,—one about eight miles from this?—I believe there is one at Ballyjamesduff. It is the only one I know of.

13691. Have you any suggestions to offer, as remedies for the deficiency of which you complain?—I think that the money that is expended for education is not fairly divided, for example, there is a great deal of money given towards the Royal schools. Only one class of the population attend these schools, and the other class ought to have facilities as well.

13692. I suppose you mean that the Catholics, being the great body of the population, ought to be facilitated, to some extent, out of the Royal school endowments?—I think so. The Royal schools are attended chiefly by the sons of gentlemen, who are well able to pay for their education, while the poorer class derive little benefit from them.

13693. From what you know, do you think that five clergymen, some of whom must be very much en-played about the administration of the school, even adequately manage a good Intermediate school in the town, and a theological College in the neighbourhood, with the small staff at their disposal, so as to do justice to both schools?—I understand at present, as far as the Intermediate school here is concerned, that there are only two professors attending it, and those two are not devoting their whole time to it.

13994. If the number of pupils, which is now a small number, would it not require a larger staff?—Certainly.

13995. You think there ought to be some aid for such a staff from some quarter or another?—I do.

13996. CHAIRMAN.—The disappearance of the Latin schools seems to be partly due to people not acting as much about Latin as they used to do?—I think, at different centres throughout the country, if a small sum were given for the encouragement of Latin and Intermediate schools, it would be a great benefit.

13997. Mr. O'BRIEN.—Do not you think that the establishment of large central schools have necessarily had the effect of making the smaller Latin schools through the country less numerous?—Yes.

13998. You think that the Catholic population could not sustain the magnificent establishments they have erected, and the day school too?—The Diocesan school, as I mentioned, is only for the benefit of a certain class—those able to enter as boarders. The sons of farmers throughout the country, if they had within reach the opportunity of obtaining a better education cheaply, would undoubtedly take advantage of it, and would supply an excellent class of Civil servants. If a small salary of, say, from £75 to £100 a year, were provided, for a classical teacher, in any or seven of the better National schools through the country, the pupils paying small fees in addition, great benefits would result to a deserving class, whose interests have hitherto been much overlooked. Such schools would be attended both by Catholics and Protestants, and, in my opinion, instead of injuring the larger establishments, they would act as centres for them.

Rev. Francis
A. Bailey,
&c.

Rev. FRANCIS ALEXANDER SUTTON, M.A., continued.

13999. CHAIRMAN.—You are one of the trustees of the Tullyvin schools?—I am the clergyman of the parish, and as such am local manager.

14000. How long have you been so?—Since November, 1877.

14001. Being local manager you look after the schools?—Yes. There are two schools, one at Tullyvin, and the other at Benbow, under the same endowment.

14002. Who are the other managers?—The Lord Bishop of Kilmore, and Colonel Clements of Ashfield.

14003. Do they ever attend?—They have not done so since I became incumbent. Colonel Clements, in consequence of the health of members of his family, has been living a good deal away, and the Bishop is very much employed with his other duties in the diocese.

14004. You keep the accounts of the school?—Yes. I send in an estimate once a quarter, to the Commissioners of Education, Church-street, receive a cheque from them and disburse the money.

14005. What does the endowment now consist of?—The original bequest of Mr. Moore was £4,000, which accumulated until it amounted to £5,885 17s 3d, and the interest on that sum is the present income. It is in the three per cent Government stock and produces about £269 a year. I produce a letter from Dr. Kyle to my predecessor, which is as follows:—

“The Commissioners of Education in Ireland.

6th day of October, 1875.

8, Glass-street, Dublin.

“Dear Sir,—In reply I beg to state that the original endowment of Tullyvin school by Mr. Moore of Carr was a bequest of £4,000, out of the interest of which to pay a sum not exceeding 250 per annum, as a stipend to a capable master of good character and morals of the Protestant religion, for keeping a public school at or near to Tullyvin for the education and instruction of Protestant children, the residue of the interest of the aforesaid £4,000 to be applied to the purchase of books, paper, ink, shoes, and stockings for the children, and also for the purpose of obtaining and paying for the board and lodging at a moderate rate, proportionate to the endowment, of such Protestant children who own residences in the district from the said school to allow of their daily attendance thereat. Very pecuniary and expensive litigation arose; but the ultimate result was that a sum of £5,885 17s. 3d. Government new three per cent stock became, and now is, the amount of the endowment of Tullyvin. It was long since found that the intention of the founder as to the books and board, lodging, &c., did not work, and was not carried out. Benbow school, in reality, forms no part of the endowment. Mr. O'Brien, however, who was extremely energetic on the subject of education of the lower orders, visited the school house of Benbow, and induced the Commissioners to permit him to open it, and carry it on as an auxiliary to the Tullyvin school, and has ever since appear to have been attended with considerable success. He was extremely desirous that the Benbow school-house should be purchased, and constituted part of the permanent endowment.

The legal claimant to this, however, prevented its being carried out, and Mr. O'Brien, and the other trustees prepared plans for the working of the funds of the Tullyvin endowment, in which the Commissioners did not object. I send you copies of two documents on this subject, which you will have the goodness to return to me. I think it probable if at you will find them entered in some book of proceedings of the trustees. The exact income of the endowment is now £269 12s., being the dividend sent from the said Government funds to the credit of the school. I send you a copy of your list of requirements, with two entries as to Benbow.—First, as to the charge of £1, for the Sunday school. This is quite a new item. And, secondly, 45s. for rent. Now, I send to Mr. O'Brien, and bid him advance instalment of the receipt of £. 25 to pay the rent up to September, 1875. Therefore no further rent will become due until March, 1876. I shall at the earliest opportunity procure the draft of the Commissioners for the salary of the Master and Mistress of Benbow, now due, and besides for the other fees, as my letter from you in reference to them. As to Tullyvin, the salaries, &c., do not become due until the 1st November.

“I am, dear Sir, yours faithfully,

WILLIAM GEORGE KYLE, Secretary.”

14006. Mr. O'BRIEN.—Who was Mr. O'Brien?—The Hon. Henry O'Brien, the then Rector of the parish.

14007. Have you the two documents referred to in that letter?—I have not. I returned them.

14008. How many pupils are attending Tullyvin school?—Fifty boys and thirty girls.

14009. Is the school exclusively a Protestant one?—The rule restricting it to Protestants has been relaxed. We have at present in Tullyvin school seven Roman Catholics in the day school, and we have a night school, for three months in the winter, which is almost exclusively attended by Roman Catholics.

14010. We find it unusual to have Roman Catholics attending a school under Protestant management.—Is there any instrument held out to them to attend it?—It is a very superior school to the other schools in the country, and they get a very superior education for their class.

14011. The Roman Catholics are not compelled to take part in any religious instruction?—None whatever.

14012. Are you acquainted with the Roman Catholic clergyman of the parish?—Yes, I know Father Smith, who lives at Tullyvin.

14013. Do you know if he objects to the Roman Catholic children attending the school?—I never spoke to him on the subject. I should think perhaps he does.

14014. You can tell us, generally, whether there has been any expression of feeling on the subject?—Nothing has ever reached me. We all live peacefully together.

14015. Your belief, that perhaps the priest does object, is a vague surmise of your own?—It is only a surmise founded on the general feeling throughout the country. I have no further reason for saying anything of the kind.

14016. But the general principles on the subject, held by the Roman Catholic clergy, would lead you to think that he does object?—I think with both parties doctrinal schools are rather in force. The Roman Catholics and Protestants in my parish are all very good friends. There is no kind of ill-feeling whatsoever.

14017. When was this change made, by which Roman Catholics became admissible to the Tollyvin school?—It is some years ago. Nothing has been altered since I came to the parish.

14018. Is there any provision, as there is under the rules of the National Board, by which the Roman Catholic clergy can attend and give religious instruction to the children of their own creed?—There is no arrangement of that kind that I know of, and they never have none.

14019. Can you say whether the Roman Catholics who attend the Tollyvin school are the children of parents on any particular estate, or is there any person made use of by their landlords or others to induce them to go there?—There is no person whatever. They merely come for the sake of the education. The people that come to the night school are sometimes given seats. They come for the purpose of learning shorthand, and getting a general education.

14020. Is the reading of the Scriptures made compulsory on all in the school?—No. Roman Catholics are always permitted to leave, and at examinations they are not examined in Scripture. I may add that there is rather a large amount given in promises, and the Roman Catholics get their proportion, independent of answering in religious subjects.

14021. CHAIRMAN.—How is the endowment laid out—what salary do you give the master?—The master and mistress, who are husband and wife, get a salary of £80 a year between them, and £4 a year each for the night school. They also get an allowance of £5 for a servant, and £12 a year for coal. There are promises given in both schools, the cost of which last year amounted to £25. But this year Dr. Kyle thought it prudent to cut them down to £16 in Tollyvin school, and £7 in Benbawn school.

14022. Were these all the expenses beyond keeping the house in repair?—There need to be an allowance, now discontinued, for a lending library, of £5 for Tollyvin, and £2 10s. for Benbawn. There is also £3 given to the examiner's fee in each school.

14023. Who is the examiner?—I examine myself, and I sell in the assistance of some neighbouring clergymen.

14024. Is this examination held yearly?—Yes, generally at the beginning of August. The Rev. Mr. Phillips, who examined on two occasions, made a report in which he says:—

Mr. ROBERT GOOD, examined.

Mr. Robert Good.

14025. CHAIRMAN.—You are the master of Tollyvin school?—Yes.

14026. And your wife is the mistress?—Yes.

14027. How long have you been the master?—Ten years last May.

14028. Where did you receive your education?—I was trained in the Church Education Society's Training School, I was taught previously by my father, who was a schoolmaster.

14029. What subjects do you teach?—English grammar, geography, and arithmetic?—Yes.

14030. Anything beyond those subjects?—Latin.

14031. Any Greek?—I have never had a pupil in Greek, but I could teach it.

14032. Any other subjects?—The religious subjects; the Holy Scriptures.

14033. During what hours do you give religious instruction?—Generally from two to three, at the close of the day school.

"Having taken part in the annual examinations of Tollyvin and Benbawn schools, in the month of July, 1879, and also in July, 1878, I have now to state that those examined by me on both occasions required themselves most creditably in an extensive course of religious and secular subjects, including Holy Scripture, Latin, and Arithmetic, Virgil's Æneid, besides the ordinary subjects of elementary school instruction. The style of answering gave evidence of careful attention on the part of the teachers, and of diligence on the part of the pupils. The knowledge imparted was both extensive and thorough, and I believe that these two schools are carrying out efficiently the purpose for which they have been established, and are affording a sound and useful education of a high class to those who attend them."

14034. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—Can you say, from what you have heard, whether it was under a scheme settled by the Court of Chancery, that the alterations were made permitting the admission of Roman Catholics?—I know there was some application to the Court of Chancery, but I do not know whether it was on that subject. I think the application, which was many years ago, was rather about adding the additional school of Benbawn.

14035. CHAIRMAN.—On what principle are the prizes awarded?—Partly on the answering, and partly on the attendance. The two things are put together. For instance, if a boy or girl answers very well, and the attendance were bad, he or she would get only a small premium. But if the attendance were good, and the answering better than the others, they would get a larger premium.

14036. Have you ever had the school inspected or examined by a professional inspector belonging to the National Board, or the Education Society's Board?—No. We are not in connexion with any Board.

14037. You have not taken any means to test the proficiency of the school?—None, except the examinations by persons not interested in any way, and who are competent to examine.

14038. I suppose there is a rule that Roman Catholics will not be present at religious instruction?—I do not know that there is any rule except the practice—I never saw any written rule.

14039. Is there no rule that there should be a particular hour for religious instruction?—No, generally when we give religious instruction it is in the last half-hour or hour of the day's work, and the master allows the Roman Catholics to go away.

14040. Is religious instruction given by the mistress as well as by you?—Yes, the mistress can answer more particularly for themselves.

14041. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—Do you know if there have been any changes of religion of pupils in the school?—Not that I am aware of,—not in my time certainly.

14042. CHAIRMAN.—What staff of teachers is there in each school?—There is a master in each school, and each master has a wife who is a certificated schoolmistress; the mistresses also have certificates, I think, from the Church Education Society.

14043. I suppose the Roman Catholics leave before that?—They are usually engaged in secular work, in other parts of the room, whilst the Protestant children are at religious instruction. They might leave the room if they wished.

14044. Have you sent any pupils to the Intermediate Education examinations?—I have not sent any, but there have been some from Benbawn school; the schools are three miles apart.

14045. Is there any difference in the course of education in the two schools?—None.

14046. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—You have a large attendance at your night school?—I remember forty-five at one time.

14047. How many now?—There were twenty last year.

14048. Do grown men avail themselves, to some extent, of the night school?—In fact, all the night scholars are grown up young men.

Oct. 5, 1878.
Mr. James
Moore.

14043. Do they seem to prize the advantage of the school?—Very much, indeed, they are generally disposed to avail themselves of it.

14050. There are a good many Roman Catholics attending the night school?—Yes, grown up men; there is no religious instruction whatever at the night school.

14051. Are the boys and girls educated in the same room?—They are. I take the seniors in one room, and my wife the juniors in another.

14052. You do a little of the teaching of the girls, and your wife of the boys?—Yes, we combine. The girls all go up to needlework in the room in which my wife teaches.

14053. Needlework is taught there?—Certainly.

14054. CHAIRMAN.—Are the pupils all free scholars?—Some children of respectable shopkeepers come from Crotchell, and they pay 10s. per quarter for Latin.

14055. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—Is your night school free?—These attending boys, nominally, to pay 1s. a quarter, but they do not pay it. There was not a single one who paid it last year; but the rule was that they should do so.

14056. What occupation do those that come to your night school usually follow?—They are all farmers' sons, and work on the farms.

14057. Do you find that many who come are able to read and write?—Yes, and then they improve. They come to keep up their knowledge. If any of them are going into the police, they like to read up for that. Of course the night school is entirely primary. I may mention that two of the girls have been successful in obtaining first-class certificates in Trinity College, one in 1874, the other in 1878. You asked me if I sent in boys to the Intermediate examinations; the reason I did not do so is, that I sent my boys to compete for scholarships in the Incorporated Society's school at Fins, and I consider those of more value.

14058. CHAIRMAN.—They cannot hold the two together?—They cannot prepare for both, at all events.

14059. They cannot hold both?—They cannot.

14060. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—How many Catholics are there at the day school?—There are at present seven, five boys and two girls.

14061. Do they come from the immediate neighbourhood?—One comes about three miles, another a mile and a half; and the others from the immediate neighbourhood. The latter are small children.

Mr. James
Moore.

Mr. JAMES MOORE, examined.

14062. CHAIRMAN.—You are the master of the Benbawn school?—Yes.

14063. How long have you been in that position?—Twelve years last April.

14064. Were you the first master of the school?—I was not. There were, I think, four before me.

14065. Is the course of instruction English grammar, geography, and arithmetic?—Yes, and book-keeping and natural philosophy. I have also one pupil learning Latin.

14066. Are your pupils the sons of farmers?—Generally speaking they are the sons of farmers; some are children of labourers.

14067. Do you send any of them to any higher school?—Several of them have become National school teachers. Six girls have gone forward as National teachers in my own town.

14068. Do they go to the Model National school?—We send them straight to Marlborough-street.

14069. Where did you receive your own training?—I was taught by my father, who was a schoolmaster, and I was trained in the Kildare-place Training School, Dublin.

14070. Is there any assistance given to the Benbawn schools, beyond the endowment?—None whatever.

14071. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—Have you a large attendance at your night school?—The average last year was twenty; it was larger in former years.

14072. To what do you attribute the reduction?—I think, for the most part, the people have left the country. There are not so many grown up young men in the neighbourhood. The number fluctuates from time to time. Sometimes there are as many as fifty, sometimes the figure is as low as fifteen.

14073. How many hours do you teach each night?—For two hours on five evenings in each week.

14074. Does your wife teach sewing and knitting, in the girls' school?—Yes, plain and fancy work.

14075. CHAIRMAN.—Have you sent up any boys for the Intermediate examinations?—Yes. I had one boy, who passed with credit in the junior grade.

Rev. William
F. Moore, M.A.

Rev. WILLIAM FRANK MOORE, M.A., recalled.

14076. CHAIRMAN.—You wish to make a further statement?—Yes. First, as to the schools you have just been investigating I have known them for many years, and they generally have had very efficient masters. The son of the former master of Tullyvin school, named McCulloch, was mathematical teacher in my school before he entered Trinity College, and he has been a deaconess of the Church of Ireland for some time. He went to America, and the other day was appointed a rector in Toronto.

14077. I understand that you have purchased the approach to the Queen Royal School—some land adjoining?—Yes, I purchased fifteen or sixteen acres from the Rev. Henry Cottingham twenty or thirty years ago. I was driven to purchase it, because they were building cabins even along my avenue.

14078. You altered the approach to the school?—Yes. I took a portion of the land I had purchased to make a wider and better approach. One of the objects I had, in getting the land, was to give a portion of it to make a wider and handsomer approach.

14079. In fact you altered the entrance, from the land belonging to the Commissioners of Education, and diverted it over the land you yourself had purchased?—Exactly.

14080. Did you communicate with the Commissioners before doing that?—Yes, I received a letter, saying that they would not consent to give Mr. Cottingham the £50 he wanted for the piece of ground required to make the alterations. When I got possession I found it absolutely necessary to make a decent entrance into the place. I did it all at my own expense, except the gate, and for the building of the gatehouse they paid £50. But, for the plot of ground, they did not pay anything. If they choose to pay anything for it, I will be glad to receive it, if not, I will give it to the school.

14081. Do you remember whether they gave you any permission to make the alteration?—No, I had given up the ground to them.

14082. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—The old and bad entrance is obliterated?—Yes, it is planted; there are trees growing on it now.

14083. You planted it?—Yes; I planted it.

14084. There is no road to the school-house except the new entrance which is on your ground?—No other, the wall along the avenue was built entirely at my own expense, and was absolutely necessary to keep out a certain set of very disgraceful intruders. The adjoining land goes by the euphemistic specification of the Devil's Half-acre. It would be desirable to give Queen the benefit of the exhibitions which have been attached to it. It is a most monstrous thing that they are withheld.

Rev. Terence Brady, examined.

Oct. 4, 1879.

Rev. Terence Brady.

14083. Mr. O'SHEA.—You are the Rector of St. Patrick's College, Cavan?—Yes.

14084. I believe that, at the end of every quarter, you submit your accounts of the expenditure to the President of the College?—Yes.

14085. He examines them?—He does, and goes through them very carefully.

14086. To whom does he submit them?—To the Bishop.

14087. How often?—It has to be done every quarter, as a rule; but the Bishop, perhaps, might not be at home, so it is not always done regularly.

14088. The Bishop is one of the trustees?—He is.

14089. Does he ever submit to any other trustees?—Yes, frequently to one or both of the other two trustees, and to the Rev. John O'Reilly, parish priest of Virginia; but that has not been done for the last year. I have been Rector since February, 1878. The trustees were asked to audit the accounts after the last retreat; but they had not time to remain.

Rev. James Dolan, recalled.

Rev. James Dolan.

14090. CHAIRMAN.—Why do you separate the seniors from the juniors—is it because one class is theological, and the other lay students, or is it because of the difference of age?—Partly for each of those reasons. In all Roman Catholic ecclesiastical Colleges, the ecclesiastical students are kept distinct from the lay students, as a rule.

14091. In fact it is more mental than physical separation?—Essentially.

14092. You do not wish them to be in contact mentally with the others?—The contact would do no harm, but we wish to keep the education to their own business. To those studying for worldly pursuits I send a daily newspaper. I would not send one to the ecclesiastical students. A theological student does not require to mix in politics; but should study theology, and take care of his soul more closely than those preparing for worldly pursuits.

14093. Of the fifty-three pupils now in the College, how many are theological students?—We have twenty-three students above the intermediate grade—from philosophy up. They rank as theological students, but they are not actually reading theology. They have passed over to philosophy, which with us draws the line of demarcation between the junior and the senior boys. They are not all actually at theology. Of those twenty-three there are seven at natural philosophy, which, in our course, we have placed after rhetoric. We teach Latin to the smaller boys for the intermediate examinations, but we follow the lines of the old Universities, which had placed both mental and moral philosophy after the rhetoric. There are seven in the physics class, and the others are studying theology proper.

14094. You do not teach physical science to the theological and junior students together?—No.

[The Commissioners adjourned.]

THIRTY-FOURTH DAY.—SATURDAY, OCTOBER 4, 1879.—12 o'Clock, Noon.

At the College, Kilkenny.

Present:—LORD JUSTICE FITZGERBON; and ANDREW SEARLE HART, Esq., LL.D.; with G. W. BRADSHAW, Esq., Assistant Secretary.

Mr. James Maxwell Weiss, M.A., examined.

Mr. James M. Weiss, M.A.

14101. LORD JUSTICE FITZGERBON.—You are the Principal of Kilkenny College: when did you become so?—In April, 1874.

14102. By whom were you appointed?—By the Board of Trinity College, Dublin.

14103. Who had been your predecessor?—The Rev. Dr. Martin.

14104. How long was he head master?—Ten years, I believe.

14105. I believe his predecessor was Dr. Brown?—Yes.

14106. In what condition did you find the premises, when you got possession?—In a very dilapidated condition—every window in the house was broken.

14107. Had there been a school there, for some time previously, under Dr. Martin?—No, not for six months or more.

14108. What became of Dr. Martin?—He is now, I think, in the north of Ireland.

14109. Is he still teaching?—He is, I understand, in connection with some Belfast Institution.

14110. Did you know, from the records or otherwise, what number of boys he had?—He had so many as thirty-five, I think, at one time, but he had more at all at the end. I brought fifteen from Limerick.

14111. You found the school had, at that time, practically ceased to exist?—It had ceased to exist altogether.

14112. Where had you been before you were appointed to Kilkenny?—I had a large private school in the Crescent, Limerick. It was a classical school.

14113. Was it an unendowed school?—Yes.

14114. When you opened the College in 1874 how many pupils had you?—I had only the fourteen I brought with me from Limerick.

14115. Had you any day boys at first?—Twelve or fourteen—I have never had more than about fourteen day boys.

14116. Are the day boys from Kilkenny?—Yes, from the town of Kilkenny. A few, that had been day scholars at my school in Limerick, came to Kilkenny and lodged in the town. Some of them were Roman Catholics. I had as many as eighteen Roman Catholics, until they were interfered with.

14117. With the exception of those you mention as having come from Limerick, in order to attend your school, were the other day boys from the town of Kilkenny?—Yes, from the town and neighbourhood.

14118. I believe the boys are all absent from the school at present?—Yes.

Oct. 4, 1879

Mr. James M.
Went, M.A.

14119. I understand that sickness broke out in the school shortly after vacation?—Yes, about a fortnight after vacation, illness broke out, and I thought it better to send the boys home.

14120. How soon do you expect them to be back?—At the latest by lat November. I am having the place thoroughly cleaned up, the walls newly plastered, and the entire building disinfected.

14121. Before the illness broke out, how many boarders had you?—I had nine at the time we broke up for vacation. A good many of them left to enter College, and to go in for different examinations. At an earlier period of the year, I had sixteen.

14122. They were reduced to nine, by boys leaving?—Yes. Some of them were too much grown, and did not want to remain longer in the school.

14123. I suppose after midsummer vacation would ordinarily be the time for new boys to come to the school?—Yes. I was in correspondence with the parents of twelve or fourteen boys, at the time the illness broke out.

14124. Besides the boarders, what day boys had you?—The usual number was about ten.

14125. So that the school consisted altogether of about thirty boys?—Considerably under thirty. Twenty-five I would say this year. It generally increased after the midsummer vacation.

14126. Was that more or less than the number you usually had since 1874?—Less than the number I had all through.

14127. How did the diminution of numbers arise?—A good many went to the Queen's College, Cork, some to the College of Surgeons, and different other examinations, some of them passed examinations for the Baccalaureate. These boys left the school, and new boys did not come.

14128. Where did the boarders come from?—I had three boarders from Meath, some of a resident magistrate there, who was originally a Kilkenny man. I had three from King's County, one of whom died. I had four from Queen's County. I had another from near Nenagh, and I had only one from the county Kilkenny—the son of a clergyman.

14129. You did not find that the sons of the gentry of county Kilkenny came to the school?—No, nor did they, I believe, in the time of my predecessor, except one family, two of whom were here for several years. One of them went in for a Constabulary commission.

14130. Were all your boarders Protestants?—All at present are, but I had four Roman Catholic boarders at one time.

14131. Were those some of the boys that came to you from Limerick?—They were. One of them is now in Trinity College.

14132. You have not had any Catholic boys belonging to Kilkenny?—No, except as private pupils. I have at present some as private pupils.

14133. You and you were appointed by the Board of Trinity College?—Yes.

14134. Are you appointed for life?—For life, I suppose—the same as the clergyman of a parish.

14135. Subject, of course, to the performance of the duty?—Certainly.

14136. What assistance have you from the endowment?—The assistance I have from the endowment amounts to about £120 a year. The highest sum I got in any half year was £63 5s 3d, and I had to pay a half year's rent out of that.

14137. The account which you have produced shows that on 21st April, 1879, you received £63 5s 3d. Is that correct?—Yes.

14138. That was £64 13s 4d for the half year's endowment, less £1 5s 11d income tax?—Yes.

14139. Therefore, the gross endowment would be £129 4s 8d, per annum?—Yes—£140 Irish, but, according to Ledwith, it ought to be £140 English.

14140. That is a fixed sum, payable by the Marquis of Ormonde?—Yes. I have to pay the poor rates. I had to pay fourteen guineas this year.

14141. Was that out of the endowment?—Yes, and I have to pay property tax also.

14142. Then you are liable, I understand, to the full amount of poor rates?—I am liable to the full amount, except the allowance on £5.

14143. What payments have you to make for the house?—It is subject to my rent—£5 a year, and taxes. The poor rate is 3s. in the pound on the valuation; the valuation is £98 on the house and grounds.

14144. Dr. Hart—What is the £5 for?—The headrent of the ground.

14145. To whom is the head rent payable?—To the Marquis of Ormonde.

14146. Lord Justice Fitzgerald—It is stated that the school premises consist of 9a 3p 32r, estate measure—That is what is stated in the former report, but it is not correct—it is about six acres.

14147. Six acres Irish?—No, six acres English. I do not think it is more, if surveyed. I suppose they include in it half the street, and the office. I am told the tradition is that it is eight English acres, but I do not think it is so much.

14148. You have no endowment of any kind—except from fees of the pupils—further than what you have told us?—Nothing.

14149. You have no fund for repairs?—No. I have to do those at my own cost.

14150. What fees do you charge for boarders?—£10 to £15 a year.

14151. In the statement you have furnished to us, you say that the patrons of the school are the Board of Trinity College and the Marquis of Ormonde?—Yes.

14152. The Board of Trinity College have the right of appointing the master?—Yes.

14153. Is the appointment subject to approval by the Marquis of Ormonde, or entirely in the hands of the Board?—It is in the hands of the Board. The appointment has devolved on the Board since 1715.

14154. Your return also states that the vicar of the Lord Bishop of Osnaby and the Provost of Trinity College—has the Provost, as far as you know, ever visited the College?—Well, I can only speak as to my own time—he has not visited since I was appointed master.

14155. Have you had any communication with him in reference to the College?—I have been in communication with Dr. Hart, and other members of the Board, from time to time.

14156. The Provost has not acted as a Visitor?—Not as a Visitor.

14157. The Bishop of Osnaby resides in Kilkenny?—Yes, the present Bishop (Dr. Walsh) has not long been appointed.

14158. Has he visited the College since his appointment?—Not officially, but he has visited as a friend.

14159. Dr. Hart—What is the day of vacation appointed by the statute?—I do not think any day is fixed. The original rule was that it should be voted on the last Thursday in June.

14160. The present Bishop did not come formally as a visitor last June?—No.

14161. Lord Justice Fitzgerald—Did the present Bishop, Dr. Gregg, visit the College?—He did, and examined the pupils.

14162. On the fixed day?—Well, no, it was not on the fixed day. I myself invited him, and other gentry and clergy along with him.

14163. Under the deed, by which the College was endowed, the provision was that children of persons in the service of the grantor were to be instructed free, and children of persons residing in Kilkenny at half the fees usually charged by grammar schools in Dublin—have you had any claims made by persons under that provision?—No.

14164. Are the fees which are charged in the College fixed by yourself?—Yes.

14165. You were first classical scholar in 1801?—I was, and first classical scholar in 1832.

14166. The course of education in your school con-gives Greek, Latin, French, German, English History, geography, and the other subjects of a grammar school education?—Yes.

14163. What staff of teachers have you to assist you?—A mathematical teacher, and a foreign master; but two English masters when I had a larger number of boys.

14164. Is the foreign master resident in the College?—Yes. He has not returned since the vacation. I had to countermand his return in consequence of the illness.

14165. Then, when the school is in operation, all the masters reside in the College?—Always.

14170. On what terms is the resident foreign master engaged?—They are generally got on low terms—it is very easy to get them. I give £40 a year and board. They generally get some tuition in the neighbourhood.

14171. What are the qualifications of the mathematical master?—He must be able to prepare boys for the University examinations.

14172. Is your present master a graduate of Trinity College?—I have had two graduates of Trinity College, but I had trained mathematical teachers from Santry who did the best. My boys have taken, for three years a succession, the first prizes in Quaker's College, Cork. The men who have been trained at Santry are generally very good; they get scholarships only in Trinity College. The master I have at present is a Santry man, and he was the candidate who came next to those who got scholarships. I had him residing with me until the sickness broke out. My foreign master is at present in a school in the County Cork, as I had to countermand his coming here.

14173. What salary do you pay your mathematical master?—£50 a year, with board and residence.

14174. Is the furniture of the College entirely your own property?—It is all my own property, with the exception of one book case.

14175. You have no provision for furniture, or educational appliances of any kind, from the endowment?—No. If I had a provision for prizes I would be very glad.

14176. Are there neither plays nor exhibitions?—None, except what I can afford to give myself. That is the only drawback to the complete success of the College. There is no school in Ireland better situated.

14177. You mean as to the situation of the building?—Yes, and the grounds surrounding it, the view from it, and the healthiness of the site. The rooms are lofty, the dormitories well ventilated, and in every respect the place is well calculated for a school.

14178. I find by the report of the Finance Commission that in 1857, there were forty-seven pupils in the school—do what do you attribute the diminution since?—To various causes, in the first place the means prevailing among our gentry for sending children to England to be educated has increased tenfold since 1857. Then I suppose we must take into account the scarcity of Prelates in the South of Ireland, there are so few Prelate families of a class that can send their boys to such a institution.

14180. Lord Justice FitzGibbon.—Do you think it would be an advantage to the College if it were visited periodically by the Bishop, and by the Provost of Trinity College?—I do, but I think the greatest advantage would be to attach some fund to it for the purpose of exhibitions and prizes.

14181. Did you send up any of your boys to the Intermediate examinations?—Not this year. I had a few who might have gone up, but I understood that they went in, and did not succeed this year, they could not present themselves at future examinations. I have some whom I purpose sending up next year. One boy, who had left me only a few months, went in and got the 50th senior exhibition. He had been under my tuition five years.

14182. When did he leave you?—In the latter end of 1877.

14183. Do you expect that you will be able to send boys up for the Intermediate examination next year?—I am sure of it. I would have sent my son in this year, but he was preparing for entrance in Trinity College, Dublin, and I thought that of more importance.

14184. I understand that you have been in correspondence with a gentleman who takes an interest in the College, and is desirous of endowing it with some scholarships?—Yes.

14185. You have also been in communication with a former pupil who speaks of sending you some boys from America?—Yes, from Illinois.

14186. How many boys in the house capable of accommodating?—More than I would wish to be in it, for fear of illness. I should say it would accommodate 160.

14187. Do you mean one hundred boarders?—Yes, but I think a school of fifty would be a very good one.

14188. Your extra charges are one guinea for medical attendance, and one guinea entrance fee, for necessaries?—Yes, and they can hardly be called extras. We have Dr. Lyne as our medical attendant, but unfortunately he happened to be away at the time the illness commenced, and we had to call in two other doctors.

14189. The terms for day scholars are 8, 10, and 12 guineas per annum, according to class?—Yes.

14190. Do you keep any account of what it costs you to keep the premises in repair?—No. Whenever anything requires to be done I just get it done, and pay for it. I have had a good deal of damage and other matters done, and every year I have more or less expenditure in the way of painting, papering, white-washing, and plumbing.

14191. I presume it cost you a good deal to put the premises in repair when you first entered into occupation?—I got £147 from the Board of Trinity College, but it cost me at the time £290.

14192. Out of what fund was the £147 advanced?—That was deducted from the money I paid to Dr. Martin.

14193. Had Dr. Martin a charge upon the property?—He had. I paid him £463, and out of that they deducted £147.

14194. On what account was that sum deducted?—For disputation.

14195. I suppose Dr. Martin was bound to keep the premises in repair?—Yes.

14196. You paid £463?—Yes.

14197. Was that money paid to Dr. Martin?—No, I lodged the sum in the Bank of Ireland, to the credit of the Board of Trinity College, and gave the receipt to Dr. Hart.

14198. Was that a condition of your appointment?—Yes.

Dr. HART.—It was money paid by Mr. Webb's predecessor to Dr. Browne, the previous head master. Dr. Browne had had out a good deal of money in repairs, on condition that his successor should repay the amount. Of course Dr. Martin was entitled to recover the amount from his successor.

14199. Lord Justice FitzGibbon.—Then, assuming that you vacated the appointment, would you have a claim against your successor?—Yes, my representatives will have a claim for half that sum, £231 10s.

14200. The money bears no interest in the mean time?—No.

14201. To put the premises now into fresh and proper order would cost a good deal of money?—Indeed it would. I dare say it would cost £500 to put them into perfect repair. The roof is in good order, it is sound and free from damp, and the walls of the house are all right, but of course woodwork will not last for ever.

14202. Did you get furniture from your predecessor, or was you obliged to bring it yourself?—I brought

Oct. 4, 1878.

Mr. James M.

my furniture from Limerick here. There was also some bought, by an agent, at the auction for me.

14303. Can you tell us about how much your outlay has been in the way of furniture?—Well, I have it insured for £200. I think that is about the value.

14304. Do the boys board with your own family?—The boys and master board together, but I always carve for them. I preside at the dinner table, and Mrs. Ware or my daughter at the breakfast and supper table.

14305. What are the hours in the school?—From seven to nine in the morning for study, and then from ten till three.

14306. Do the boys breakfast at nine?—They breakfast at nine, then they are at school business from ten till three, and again from seven till nine in the evening.

14307. What is the dinner hour?—Immediately after three.

14308. I suppose they have supper afterwards?—Yes, supper between six and seven.

14309. What is the dietary?—The same as that of our own family; the best of beef and mutton, and groceries of all kinds.

14310. Have they a meat dinner every day?—A meat dinner every day, of course. I have dealt with the principal butcher in the town ever since I came here.

14311. Dr. Hare.—Part of the duty of the Visitors, I observe, is to order any necessary repairs of the house, from time to time, at the annual visitation; they have never ordered any repairs?—Never since I came.

14312. Has there been any professional inspection of the building for the purpose of seeing what repairs are necessary?—Mr. Curdy was the last person who inspected it. He was sent down by the Board of Trinity College in 1873, the year after my appointment.

14313. Was that for the purpose of seeing what you had done in the way of repairs?—Yes, he came to see what I had done, and he approved of it.

14314. I believe he came twice?—Yes, he came first to see what repairs the building would require, and then he came to see what I had done. He inspected every portion of the house, and made a favourable report to the Board; but I have done a great deal to the place since.

14315. Of your own accord?—Yes.

14316. Without any order from the trustees or anybody else?—Yes.

14317. Would it, in your opinion, be satisfactory if the Visitors attended to the direction in the deed, and inspected the College once a year, to see what was required?—Yes, or once every two years.

14318. Do you think it would be of advantage to the school if an interest was taken in it by the Bishop and the Provost?—I do. I think it would be of advantage.

14319. They would relieve you of responsibility, and tell you what was to be done?—Yes.

14320. I believe in the original deed the first charge on the endowment was for keeping the house in repair?—I did not know that.

14321. In the report of 1857, it is stated that the endowment is for keeping the house in repair, and paying the salary of the master?—That is not the way it is stated in Lodwick.

14322. LORD JEREMY FITZGERALD.—Is the land connected with the house all in your own occupation?—Yes; it is all in my own occupation.

14323. Do you cultivate any part of it?—No, it is all in grass. It is not fit for cultivation—it is low, marshy land.

14324. You do not get any assistance in the way of garden produce?—There is a garden, but I rent it—it is a large garden.

14325. How do you deal with the land itself?—I just leave it as it is. I get the grass cut each year.

14326. Do you ever let it for grazing?—Sometimes I do.

14327. You do not manage it yourself?—I was thinking of keeping cows on it, but it is rather a precarious thing to keep cows now.

14328. Have the boys the use of the six acres?—Yes, they have the use of the whole place, they play cricket and foot ball, and amuse themselves on it.

14329. It is suitable for the purpose?—It is.

14330. Dr. Hare.—Are you aware of any similarity the Board of Trinity College have in the school, beyond the appointment of the master?—No.

14331. The Report of the Assistant Commissioner who visited the school in 1854 states:—

"I cannot imagine a more serious expression of duty in the part of a public body than is involved in the sight with which the school has been treated by the Governors and Visitors."

Now, the Visitors have certainly duties imposed upon them, but I do not see that the Governor had any duty except the one of appointing the master?—I think it is sad the Visitors were to come here once a year, and to be entertained with a flat bank taken out of his Grace's Park.

14332. It is said in the Report of 1857 that the duty of the Visitors was completely disregarded, no visitation having taken place for a considerable time—you have no improvement in that respect to report, except the visitation you have mentioned by the present Bishop and his predecessor?—You can hardly call that a visitation.

14333. It was more a visit than a visitation?—Exactly. It was not a formal visitation.

14334. LORD JEREMY FITZGERALD.—Do the men here of the founder's family—the Marquis of Ormonde—take an interest in the Institution?—They do not, that I can see.

14335. I believe the present Marquis resides in Kilkenny, during portion of the year?—Yes.

14336. He has no authority over the school?—No, I think if he had a share in the appointment of the master he would probably take more interest in it. The family lost it by the attainder. It has been entrusted to me that, if he had a share in the appointment, he would take a greater interest in the place.

14337. Do you think it would be an advantage to the school if you had a laud Governor, or patron, of property and position?—I do, I think it would be of advantage to the school, whoever was master of it, and to all secular masters.

14338. Is the residence of the Bishop of Ossory in Kilkenny?—Yes.

14339. Do you know, as a matter of fact, whether provision has been made for keeping up the Bishopric?—I do; it has been settled at £1,500 a year.

14340. So that, for the present at all events, there is no risk of the office becoming vacant?—No, not the slightest, so far as human foresight can go.

14341. Did the Bishop who was here when you were appointed pay any attention to the school?—The Bishop at the time of my appointment was the Right Rev. Dr. O'Brien, who died a few months after I was appointed. He and my father were contemporaries in College. I got a nice letter from him upon my appointment, but he never visited me.

14342. Did you know of his taking an interest in the school?—I heard that he did—I heard that he used to visit here frequently before the time of my appointment, and was on terms of intimacy with Dr. Brown and Dr. Baily.

14343. Do you devote your own time entirely to the school?—I do, between private pupils and the school—I am always in the school from ten till three, and do the classical business myself. In fact I take a pleasure in doing it.

14344. Dr. Baily was the predecessor of Dr. Brown?—Yes.

14345. I believe in his time the school was in a flourishing condition?—It was in a more flourishing condition than under Dr. Brown, I understood. I wish to mention that some of my pupils have obtained appointments in the Indian Civil service, some go off to the army, others are clergymen in the Irish Church, and two are inspectors of schools, having got their appointments by competition. One of my former pupils lately got a senior mastership and gold medal in Trinity College, and another got first gold medal in classics from Queen's College, Cork, last October, in the Queen's University. One of the members of the present Commission (Mr. O'Shaughnessy, M.P.) was a former pupil of mine.

THIRTY-FIFTH DAY.—MONDAY, OCTOBER 6, 1879.—11 O'CLOCK, A.M.

Oct. 6, 1879.

In the Grand Jury Room, Court-house, Armagh.

Present:—The EARL OF ROSS, Chairman; and RICHARD O'SHAUGHNESSY, Esq., M.P.; with JAMES CREED MURKITT, Esq., B.L.S., Secretary.

Rev. WILLIAM MOORE-MORGAN, M.A., recalled.

Rev. William
Moore-
Morgan, M.A.

14346. CHAIRMAN.—The only matter we desire to inquire into now, with reference to the Royal School of Armagh, in addition to the evidence we got from you during your examination in Dublin, is, what has been the success of your pupils at the Intermediate Examination?—We sent in fifty-two boys, all in the first four classes of the school; of those, the names of forty-nine appeared in the pass lists—six got exhibitions, twenty-two got prizes, and twenty-one passed in more than two subjects; I did not alter the ordinary work of the school in the least to prepare for those examinations, the boys went in just as they would have done for the ordinary school summer examinations.

14347. What is the total number of scholars whose ages were suitable for going in for the examinations?—The number that went in included every boy of sixteen and upwards; in fact I may say that almost every boy over fourteen went in.

14348. I suppose if there were exhibitions open to boys under fourteen, you would be able to deem a good many more?—I have no doubt such exhibitions would do the greatest good to the school.

14349. Do you think that the class of schools known as preparatory are very much wanted?—Certainly, to encourage boys who are anxious to rise, if a clever boy got an exhibition at fourteen he might be encouraged to continue his school work.

14350. I suppose you often receive boys who are backward, in consequence of not having received a good early education?—Frequently—I think there is a great want in Ireland of preparatory schools.

exhibitions attached to your school?—Yes, there are two exhibitions each year for boys under fourteen.

14352. Do you attach great value to those exhibitions for junior boys?—They are very useful.

14353. You would not wish to give up the advantage of such exhibitions, unless the Intermediate Education scheme made provision for them?—Certainly not.

14354. Have you also school exhibitions for boys under sixteen?—We have two each year for boys under sixteen, as well as two for boys under fourteen.

14355. In cases where the Intermediate Education Act provides a substitute for school exhibitions, it surely would be unnecessary to maintain the existing local exhibitions?—I think so; they are not wanted now for boys over fourteen and under sixteen.

14356. And if exhibitions were given under the Act to boys under fourteen, the same reasoning would apply?—Quite so, the wider the field for competition the better.

14357. Would you be in favour of throwing the existing exhibitions open to general competition?—I do not say that, but if the Intermediate fund provided exhibitions for boys under fourteen, I do not think there would be any necessity for separate school exhibitions.

14358. How many of the six exhibitions, gained by your pupils at the Intermediate Examinations, have been won by day boys?—Two of those who gained exhibitions were day boys.

14359. How many day boys have you at present?—About thirty-five or thirty-six.

14360. As against how many residents?—Counting those in the masters' houses, about ninety-five.

Rev. JACOBUS SMITH, B.D., examined.

Rev. Jacobus
Smith, B.D.

14361. CHAIRMAN.—You are the principal Presbyterian minister in Armagh?—I am one of them.

14362. There is a school connected with your church?—Yes.

14363. Is it an endowed school?—It was created, in 1838, mainly through the enterprise of a private member of the congregation, assisted by the congregation generally. The building, which cost over £1,200, was left in trust to the minister, and is under the management of an annually elected committee, consisting of nine members, of which the trustee and minister are the chairman.

14364. Is there only one trustee?—That is all. I am the trustee at present.

14365. Did the school cost anything over the £1,300?—The building cost a little over that sum, and a lease in perpetuity of the site was obtained free of rent at an expenditure of, I think, about £100.

14366. Has the school any other endowment?—None. The object was mainly to have what would now be called an Intermediate school. It was not proposed to have it a National school, but an Intermediate school, to supply a classical and commercial education to the boys of the First Presbyterian Congregation and others, according to the trust deed. It succeeded pretty well at first. The Royal school was not so prosperous then as it has been under Dr. Morgan's management. We have now found that the Royal school under Dr. Morgan's management is too close to us, and that our school was not prospering, and so we have had it changed into a National school.

14367. The members of your congregation take advantage of the Royal school, superseding all their wants, so far as regards higher or intermediate education?—No. I would not say that it supplies all the wants. It does in some instances, but not in all.

14368. In what is it defective?—As it is a commercial education?—No, principally for boys that are meant for professional life. For example, if one of our Presbyterian clergymen in the neighbourhood, or any respectable merchant, wished to send his boy to school preparatory to a collegiate education with a view to professional life, he finds that the Royal school is not so suitable for that purpose as some others. It is understood amongst the community that the boys in the Royal school are prepared generally for Trinity College; and we, Presbyterians, do not generally wish to send our boys to Trinity College, so that the Royal school is not available in many instances. I have known Presbyterian boys sent from this neighbourhood to Watte's school, Longun—so the Belfast Academical Institution—and even to Coleraine, instead of to the Royal school here, as a consequence of what I have stated. A few merchants of this town have had their boys at our own school, and most of these have turned to commercial pursuits.

there are infant schools being carried on under the supervision of the clergy of the Irish Church.

14301. What was the fate of that application?—It is still sub judice. The application was made to the Vice-Chancellor, but was opposed by counsel for the Commissioners of Charitable Donations and Bequests, who said they had not been served with any notice, and the Vice-Chancellor directed the matter to stand over.

14302. Was there any local opposition?—No local opposition; and the Secretary to the Commissioners of Charitable Donations and Bequests has informed Dr. Chadwick that they will withdraw their opposition in the matter. Counsel did not direct me to give them notice, and so I did not do it.

14303. Is the locality, to which it is proposed to remove the school, more in want of schools than where it now stands?—It is not, but in the building to which they want to remove it, night schools are conducted, which it appears are very beneficial in the town. The schools are at present, according to the affidavit of Dr. Chadwick, in the Roman Catholic district, and the children would be afraid to go there in the evening to attend the night schools. In addition to the matters I have mentioned, the prayer of the petition was that the schools might be placed under the National Board.

14304. CHAIRMAN.—They are at present independent Church schools?—Yes, relying on the bequest of Miss Delincourt.

14305. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—It will be necessary to keep the accounts of the two schools separate, so as to preserve the identity of this endowment?—Yes.

14306. Does any of the endowment go to the infant school you spoke of?—None of it goes to the infant school.

14307. Is it mixed up in any way with the infant school?—It is.

14308. Has that met with any opposition in the town?—It has not.

14309. Is the locality to which it is proposed to remove the schools a more Protestant district of the town?—It is.

—Mr. MORTIMER PARSONS, examined.

14310. CHAIRMAN.—You are the agent to the estate of the Delincourt school, Armagh?—I am. I have been the agent since my father's death in 1871; he was the agent before me.

14311. Is the Tyrone estate let in perpetuity?—No; to tenants from year to year.

14312. How is the estate in Armagh let?—The estate in Armagh consists of town-parks, which are occupied by two tenants, David Moore, and R. J. Moore, and by the Town Commissioners.

14313. I suppose they are let by the year?—They are let on tenancies from year to year.

14314. How is the county of Down estate let?—That is Skerrinstown, county of Down. Mr. Cleland pays £102 6s. 3d. per annum; he is in the habit of

14310. CHAIRMAN.—I find in the report of the Assistant Commissioners in 1857 this passage:—

"It was stated to me that in 1834 a petition was presented to the Court of Chancery by the Lord Finestra and the then Rector of Armagh, upon which an order of reference to the Master was made to approve of a proper scheme for the future regulation and management of this trust estate, including the school. The Master made his report, which was confirmed, and the present management is in accordance therewith."

Is that the scheme under which the school is managed at present?—Yes, with one exception, which the Vice-Chancellor, when making some remarks respecting the petition, referred to, and that was, that Master Henn's scheme provided for a boarding school for girls, and that has not been carried out.

14311. It was intended that some industrial training should be given. The object of the endowment was stated in 1857 as:—

"For the establishment of a Charity Working School for twenty boys and twenty girls, to be boarded and lodged, and instructed in linen manufacture, husbandry, and housewifery."

Is that adhered to?—That I believe is not carried out.

14312. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—Does the Rev. Dr. Chadwick allege any particular acts of dishonesty on the part of the Roman Catholic neighbours?—He does not allege any specific act.

14313. Or any former acts done?—He does not allege anything of that kind.

14314. CHAIRMAN.—There are no boarders in the school at present?—No boarders have ever been there, as far as we can ascertain.

14315. Is not the number of pupils less than it was in 1857?—Yes, six years ago there was an average of forty-nine boys, and as many girls, the average now is between thirty-eight and forty.

14316. The children are clothed?—They were clothed.

14317. The schools were put under the National Board without the necessity of applying to the Court of Chancery for leave?—Yes, but the trustees wanted also to put the infant school, to which I have referred, under the National Board.

On witness,
Mr. George O.
Cochrane.

Mr. Mortimer
Parsons.

—Mr. GEORGE STROUD, examined.

Mr. George
Stroud.

14320. CHAIRMAN.—You are the master of the Delincourt school, Armagh?—Yes.

14321. What staff of teachers is there in the school?—I am the sole master in the boys' school, having only the assistance of a monitor. My daughter conducts the female school, and is assisted by my wife.

14322. What is the scheme of instruction in your school?—The programme is that of the National Board, with which the school has been in connexion for two years.

14323. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—It was put under the National Board, without the necessity of applying to the Court of Chancery for a scheme to enable the trustees to do so?—I do not know anything of that.

14320. CHAIRMAN.—It is an ordinary English primary school?—Yes.

14321. Is there any industrial training given?—Yes. The girls are taught sewing. The boys and girls are clothed—at least a proportion of them, who make up a certain number of attendances in the year. The girls, under the superintendence of the female teacher, make up the underclothing both for the boys and for themselves. The girls' suits are made entirely in the school.

14322. What fees do the pupils pay?—All are free, both boys and girls.

14323. They receive a free education, and in addition the regular attendants get clothes?—Yes.

14334. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—How many boys are there now attending the school?—There are 47 boys on the roll, and the average attendance for the year 1878 was 39·7, while the average for the quarter ended 30th of last month was 41.

14335. CHAIRMAN.—Is there any land immediately attached to the school?—The school stands in the centre of a piece of ground, about an acre in extent, and I, as the master, cultivate that and use it as a garden, with the exception of play-grounds for the boys and girls respectively.

14336. There is no instruction in agriculture given?—So much of agriculture as is appointed by the programme of the National Board, for the respective classes, is taught.

14337. Your salary is £351?—Yes; and the mistress receives £90, and the assistant mistress £15.

14338. How often is the school inspected?—Annually by the National Board Inspector.

14339. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—Are there any Roman Catholics in the boys' school?—No. I have never had a Roman Catholic in that school, with the exception of two who came for a day or two. There are, however, three Roman Catholic children in the female school.

14340. Is your daughter, the female teacher, certificated, or does she hold a certificate from any authority or society?—She is what is called "provisionally classed" under the National Board at present.

14341. Does that mean she is to go up for the final classification?—Yes.

14342. Under what class is she provisionally classed?—Second.

14343. There is an inscription on the building?—Yes. It reads—

"This Hospital for the education of 20 boys and 20 girls at once to true religion and manual labor, was endowed and erected by Mrs. Dr. Drolan, widow of Dr. Drolan, late Dean of Armagh. His Grace Dr. Hugh Boulton, Lord Primate of all Ireland, with the Corporation of Armagh, granted to this Hospital for ever a fair and convenient domain, 1740."

14344. CHAIRMAN.—Is the school exclusively a Church school, or is it attended by Presbyterians?—

The pupils are principally of the Irish Church, and there are some Presbyterians.

14345. It is not necessarily restricted to Church children?—No. There are 37 Irish Church boys, and 10 Presbyterians, and there is about the same proportion in the girls' school, with three Roman Catholics.

14346. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—Is the school in a good state of repair at present?—Internally it is.

14347. When was it put into repair?—About twelve months since.

14348. Was it, up to that time, in a defective state internally?—It was rather. The trustees about twelve months ago expended considerably over £100 in repairs.

14349. Your answer as to the building being at present in good repair internally implies that everything is not quite right externally—do you mean with regard to the roof, or with regard to other matters?—The roof is sound, but the plaster has fallen off, and needs coating and dressing up. The windows are old-fashioned metal ones, and the trustees contemplate taking them out when the funds accumulate, and putting in new ones.

14350. The Rev. Mr. Elliott wishes me to ask whether the Presbyterian pupils, and I may also add the three Roman Catholics, receive clothing the same as the Protestant Episcopalian?—I have never had an opportunity of seeing what was done in the case of Roman Catholics, for we never had them in attendance before, and I am a little curious to see what action will be taken. I am teacher of the school now for nearly twenty years, and during that time there always have been Presbyterian children, and if their attendance and behaviour came up to the standard required they always received the clothing. There was no distinction whatsoever made.

14351. CHAIRMAN.—Are there any who at present receive clothing?—Yes. There are both boys and girls wearing the school livery.

14352. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—You never know a case of a Roman Catholic child remaining long enough to win any clothing?—No.

Rev. Thomas
Rice, &c.

Rev. THOMAS RICE, R.P., continued.

14353. CHAIRMAN.—You are the manager of the Roman Catholic Chapel-school, Armagh?—I am. It is in a street called Chapel-lane, adjacent to the Roman Catholic Church, and is built on the chapel grounds.

14354. How is the site held?—It is on a leasehold lease, I believe, but I do not know exactly what time it has to run. The lease is not in my possession. I suppose it is in the primate's archives. His Grace the Primate should have it, but I never asked him about it.

14355. It is stated in the report of a former Royal Commission that Rev. Henry Campbell, whose will was proved 2nd June, 1827, left £250 for this school?—Yes. I believe there was a correspondence between your secretary and the teacher relative to that. The teacher came to me about it, and I made all the inquiries I could. I went to an old gentleman in town who was supposed to know a great deal about these matters, but he could not give me the least information; however, he told me that an additional story was built to the school, at the time that money was stated to have been paid. I suppose it was paid over to the Catholic Committee, and went in defraying the cost of the additional story to the school.

14356. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—When was that story built?—About the time the money was stated to have been paid. It might have been fifty years ago or so, but at any rate there is no trace of the money now. I never heard of it till the teacher told me he had received a letter about it from your secretary.

14357. CHAIRMAN.—As far as you know, there is no endowment beyond the house, which is built on land held under a terminable lease?—None. Some time ago I believed the lease was one in perpetuity, and perhaps it is, for all I know.

14358. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—The former Commissioners, who reported the school to have an endowment of £250, producing an annual income of £7 10s appear to have been guided altogether by the will, and not to have made very strict inquiries, owing to the late period of their session at which an extract from the will was furnished to them. Is this the only Roman Catholic National school in Armagh?—No, there is another—an infant school, and then there is the Convent National school, and the Christian Brothers' school, which of course is not National.

14359. Have the Christian Brothers any endowment?—None whatsoever.

14360. How many children are there at present attending the Chapel school?—The average daily attendance is about 245—males and females.

14361. How many attend the Christian Brothers' school?—About 180, and sometimes 200.

14362. I suppose that the course there, as in other Christian Brothers' schools, is primary?—It is a primary course; but I can tell that at present they are preparing for the Intermediate examinations in the coming year.

14363. Then it would appear that there are now attending the Christian Brothers' schools who aspire to intermediate education?—Most certainly there are some. While speaking on that subject, I would like to make a remark on the examination in Dublin of Dr. Morgan, Head master of the Royal school. It appeal by the newspapers that be stated, that a very small fraction of the Catholics of Armagh would take advantage of intermediate education. It struck me that the ratio he gave was entirely below the mark.

14364. You are the administrator of the parish?—Yes, the President of our own Catholic College does not know how many would take advantage of intermediate education, and therefore clearly Dr. Morgan does not know. I would go so far as to say that taking all denominations into account for every two of other denominations, who would avail themselves of intermediate education there would be at least one Catholic. I am sure that a great many Catholics would take advantage of intermediate education if it was afforded to them.

14365. You have got a certain number of Catholics, in a primary school, seeking intermediate education?—I have been told by a fellow priest that there are twenty at present.

14366. Are there any Roman Catholic children attending as day boys, at the Vincentian's Seminary?—Not very many. I do not think the Vincentians are anxious to admit day boys at present. They may however change, owing to the recent Act of Parliament.

14367. Are there in Armagh and its neighbourhood anything like a large number of Catholic farmers and shopkeepers, that would require intermediate education?—I would say there are a good many within walking distance of Armagh that would avail themselves of it now.

14368. Have there been any recent endowments, for intermediate education?—None whatever.

14369. There is a Convent in Armagh?—Yes.

14370. Is there a day school attached to the Convent?—There is a day school, in which there are between twenty and forty children regularly attending, as well as a poor school, at which there is an average daily attendance of 250.

14371. That may be regarded, too, as a proof of the want of a class requiring intermediate education?—I have not the least doubt of it. A great many, whom we do not think of, would avail themselves of it.

14372. Have you any suggestions to make on the subject of facilities or encouragement being given for intermediate education?—I would not be anxious to interfere with any existing endowments at all. I would not like to pull down. We are all Irishmen, and there is room enough for us all. We should all educate ourselves, and turn our education to the best account. As a Christian clergyman I do not see why we should envy others, but I am sorry to say there is a fracture of the community, particularly in the north of Ireland, who oppose anything being given to the Catholics.

14373. You say, in point of fact, that you do not seek for leveling down?—Not at all. I wish for leveling up.

14374. I presume, the Catholics regard the Royal schools as purely denominational?—Most certainly; I am denominational in this way, that Catholics do not go to them. All denominations outside Catholics do, and do attend; but Catholics could not avail themselves of them.

14375. Do you want some assistance such as the Royal school gets here?—Some such. I think it would be of benefit to us, and that we would avail ourselves of it—besides we have a right to it.

14376. You know something of your Protestant neighbours. I suppose the Royal school here educates a fair number of the children of Protestant shopkeepers?—I do not interfere about it, and hence I do not know much about my dissenting neighbours; but I deny the right of others to determine the proportion of Catholics that would avail themselves of intermediate education.

14377. A large number of young men from the neighbourhood of Armagh enter the priesthood?—A good many. I believe it would be a great advantage to them, and a great saving too, if they had an intermediate school to attend.

14378. A good many of them cannot afford to pay the fees of boarding schools?—It is difficult since the disendowment of Maynooth. They are four years in St. Patrick's College, and five or six years in the College of Maynooth. If they had an intermediate school for day boys it would be very useful to prepare them.

14379. Do you think the Intermediate Education Act has stimulated the Catholics?—It has certainly.

14380. You think that it will create a fresh interest for intermediate education?—I believe it will. Suppose a tradesman's son at a Christian Brothers' school completes this year, and be successful even in a small degree it will stimulate, and enable others to go on in the same way; it will create a thirst for education.

14381. The want will bea growing one?—Certainly.

14382. You do not want to interfere with Dr. Morgan's work?—I do not. I wish him prosperity, and success, but I do object to others opposing my just claims for equality, I wish nothing more. I would like to make one remark relative to Mr. Cochrane's evidence, and it is not for the purpose of injuring in any way Dr. Chadwick or his claims. Mr. Cochrane said that one of the causes for transferring the endowment from Charter-Schools to the school to Callan-street school, was that the children were afraid to go to Charter-Schools by reason of the being a Catholic locality. I challenge an instance to be brought forward where Protestants were interfered with by Catholics. But I could bring forward several cases where Catholics were interfered with by Protestants. If it were the case that Protestants were interfered with in any way by Catholics, I would take care that it would not be repeated.

14383. Had the interference by Protestants with Catholics, to which you are alluding, reference to educational matters?—Yes, on their way to evening school, on more than one occasion, particularly about the 12th of July, the children were interfered with, and could scarcely go at all.

14384. You are relying, not upon your fears as to the future, but upon past experience?—Past experience.

14385. I suppose the locality being a Roman Catholic one you would have no objection to the school being removed from it?—Not the least. If Dr. Chadwick thinks it is for the benefit of his people to have the school removed he ought to be allowed to do so. With regard to the three Catholics attending that school at present, they are the children of a mixed marriage, and we have not much claim on them.

14386. Have you anything further to remark on the difficulties arising in giving Catholic children an intermediate education?—It is well known that we are regarded as the poor people, and are endeavouring, out of our poverty, to educate the Catholic children in the best way we can. If any endowment was given we would receive it with thanks, and avail ourselves of it.

14387. With regard to your primary schools, is your poor school, attached to the convent, under the National Board?—It is. They enjoy a regulation allowance. It is a very small remuneration, indeed, for the services given.

14388. As a clergyman of the parish, you do not object to the inspection of the National Board for educational purposes?—Certainly not.

14389. And for seeing that the teachers are comfortable?—I endeavour to keep the teachers to their business, and will not cover them in any delinquency whatever.

14390. Matters of religion are kept apart?—Certainly. I give every assistance to do so, because it is all the better for the children.

14391. There is no personal objection to the mode in which Dr. Morgan conducts his Protestant school here?—No. Sometime ago I had occasion to write to Dr. Morgan about little things that occurred in se-service to some of the students. He kindly and courteously answered me. There are many little things by which young men, in a sort of a not very positive way, may thank Catholic clergymen.

14392. Discontented.—Yes. It has been done pretty often.

14393. Dr. Morgan was perfectly courteous and willing to prevent them?—Certainly.

Mr. Edward V.
Forhall, N.A.

Mr. EDWARD VAUGHAN FORRELL, M.A., Canby, Oregon.

14394. CHAIRMAN.—You are one of the modest students in the Royal School, Armagh?—I am.

14395. I understand you wish to make an explanation in reference to some evidence given in Dublin?—Yes, in reference to remarks made in a pamphlet, which I published when the Intermediate Education Act was before Parliament.

14396. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—Was that before it was passed?—Yes. I was anxious to get an opportunity of saying a word or two about that pamphlet. It was written in a great hurry, and there is a peculiar tone in some parts of it which might be much better away. In one or two instances there are remarks that might be construed into personalities, which I deeply regret. Mr. O'Shaughnessy, who commented on my pamphlet in Dublin, seemed to think a person, occupying the position I do in the Royal School, had trenchant on religious ground, and said things that might offend the religious susceptibilities of Roman Catholics. I can only say I had no intention of doing so. I was criticising the policy passed with regard to education, from a secular point of view—and I had not the least idea of saying anything that would trench upon religious susceptibilities. I think the people who know me in Armagh would say it would be almost impossible for me to do anything of the sort. If I remember rightly, the present Pope had very lately been elected, and there had been rumours about negotiations with the Vatican, and certain informants that had been brought to bear upon him, opposed to the broad view of education that I wanted to enforce, and it was not with reference to any religious view or with any idea of wounding the religious susceptibilities of Catholics that I wrote. As I have said, I regret exceedingly that I was betrayed into a personal tone, and I certainly had no idea of offending anyone's religious susceptibilities in the view I took of the Intermediate Education Act.

14397. As I understand, you say the pamphlet was written in a hurry?—It was written in a hurry.

14398. And that you did not think you were trenching on any doctrine. Perhaps it had not, up to that time, been brought clearly under your notice, that, in certain districts and certain countries, an indisposition to mixed education was very strong religious feeling with Roman Catholics?—I quite understand that now.

14399. I think I may say, that, considering the extreme difference between you and the Roman Catholics, the tone in which you have come forward here and explained that, whatever your language may have been, you did not intentionally or consciously wish to wound their feelings, will be viewed with pleasure?—With reference to the Roman Catholics, I was not conscious that I had adopted a personal tone. With reference to other matters, in which I am conscious I adopted a personal tone, I regret it very much.

14400. CHAIRMAN.—Do you wish to say anything about the position of under masters in the Royal schools?—Nothing except that I mention what I have said in my pamphlet. Another point upon which I have always felt strongly, is that referred to—

“Those of the Commissioners, who do mean, are not anxious to do what they can for the good of the trusts so gifted to them, but they are completely hampered by the limitation of their powers.” For instance, each of the Royal schools has a separate estate for its maintenance, and the Commissioners want the aid, if they have the power to transfer one building from the revenues of any school that is languishing, as in the instance recently cited, to help other schools which are more deserving.”

14401. As a matter of fact there have been transfers of income from one school to another?—I was not aware of that. I wrote under the impression that there had not been. The idea that always struck me was, that it would be better if the funds of the Royal schools were, to a certain extent, merged, and that there was a greater centralization of management. I do not know whether I may venture to suggest this to the Commissioners, or whether it is a possible scheme for the future.

14402. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—How long have you been a master in Armagh School?—Eight years and a half.

14403. CHAIRMAN.—Have you had any counterpart, once with the other under masters?—I have not. It is as to the application of the revenues I am offering a suggestion.

14404. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—Have you any other suggestion to offer?—As regards the position of the head masters of the Royal schools, my view is that the head master should occupy some independent position, that he should be independent of boarders, and have a fixed salary with capitation fees, and that the fees of the boarders, and other people, should be put into one common fund, and managed by the Commissioners, as at Marlborough, and other places. The head master should not have a share in the success of the school, but he should not be transgressed or fettered by boarders. It would give him a more independent position if the revenues of the schools were managed by a Board.

14405. You would hardly suggest that Dr. Morgan with a large number of boys, who apparently appreciate the advantage of going to his school, should get the same salary as the master of a Royal school where there were only fifteen or twenty boys?—The capitation fees would correct that to a certain extent. It appears to me that, in many cases, the personal and pecuniary interest which a head master necessarily have in his boarders, is not altogether desirable. I think it might be possible under some future arrangement, of course with due regard to vested interests, to make beneficial changes in these respects.

Rev. Patrick
Boyle, S.J.

Rev. PATRICK BOYLE, S.J., Canby.

14406. CHAIRMAN.—You are the head master of St. Patrick's College, Armagh?—Yes.

14407. How long have you been in that position?—Two years.

14408. When was the institution established?—When Dr. O'Reilly came to Armagh in 1836 he set about building it. It was opened in 1838.

14409. The foundation is then stated in the report of the Commission of 1857?—

“Archbishop Croke, will, proved 5 May, 1842, devising buildings, offices, &c., and 5 acres of land (nowing a site for a convent), held in fee-farm, at £31 10s. yearly rent.”

In the building adjoining the Convent?—No. Our building is near the Catholic Cathedral.

Oct. 5, 1878.

Rev. Patrick Doyle, Secy. of the Board.

14410. How is it held now?—It is held under a property lease. The Primates, who is the chief trustee, holds the lease.

14411. Is any part of the five acres the site of the school?—No, I think not. There was portion of a taken off, to enlarge the secondary accommodation, in place of that they gave us a house which produces a weekly rent of 2s., but that was done before my time, and I do not know the details of it.

14412. What fees are charged?—The total fees are £11 10s., including all the necessary extras. Of course every student buys his own books.

14413. The students are boarded and lodged?—They are boarded and lodged and taught.

14414. How many scholars are there?—We have a present 51 boarders and 4 day pupils.

14415. What fees do the day pupils pay?—£4 a year.

14416. At what ages do your pupils generally come?—It is hard to form a precise idea. In the four highest classes we have 44 boys only one of whom is under 16 years of age.

14417. Is the secondary intended to prepare candidates for the ministry?—Chiefly. Our course at present is an intermediate course, for entrance to University. We do not refuse a pupil at ten years of age, but we do not care to have children under that.

14418. Is there any competition between those in school for lay professions and those for the Church?—No, they are mixed.

14419. Is it exclusively a Catholic school?—We have never had any application from other denominations. The endowments in Armagh are so good that the boys of other denominations are not inclined to come to us.

14420. You teach Greek and Latin?—We do.

14421. And French?—French, mathematics, geometry, and algebra.

14422. All the English education and book-keeping?—Yes.

14423. Who teaches French?—Two of the priests.

14424. You have not a foreigner to teach French?—No. They, who teach French, read in French for us.

14425. Mr. O'Shaughnessy.—How many clerical positions have you?—In all only three.

14426. You have got other readers teaching duties to students?—Yes, I have the administration of the sick house to look after as well.

14427. You cannot devote exclusive attention to the teaching?—No.

14428. Out of the other priests has also some duties under teaching?—He is procurator or bursar.

14429. Therefore the school has not got the ordinary services of the three allegians?—Not in the teaching line solely.

14430. You have two lay teachers?—We have two lay teachers also.

14431. You find it would be utterly impossible to do more than teach the number of boys you have with 56 staff?—It would be impossible to teach a larger number with the staff we have. If our funds would allow us we would gladly increase the present staff.

14432. I suppose we may take you as agreeing with the Rite on the subject of foundations?—The present Primates feels the want of increased accommodation so much that he got plans drawn, about a year ago, to enlarge the house, at an estimated cost of £15,000, but he cannot well ask his people for means to build in years like these. If we had the enlargement he proposes our school would be comfortable.

Everyone sees it is a work of public utility. All the clergy, and many of the laity, of the whole diocese of Armagh, including the counties of Armagh, Louth, Tyrone, and portions of Down, are educated with us. Anything given to support our College would be a public benefit.

14433. The small number of your teaching staff explains to some extent the small number of your day boys?—We have no accommodation for a day school.

14434. You have been asked if your school was exclusively Catholic? I presume if Protestant boys chose to attend your day classes there would be no attempt to make them take part in religious duties?—I think not.

14435. Do you keep the accounts of the school?—The bursar keeps the accounts. I inspect them once a month, and am responsible for them. We present them to the Primates every half year. I have here copies of the balance sheets of the last two half years. The first is for five months, and the second for seven months. We throw our two months' vacation into the second half-year, to have everything cleared up.

14436. Has there been any expenditure lately on permanent improvements of the school?—We spent on cementing and painting the front of the house £80. In other improvements—play ground, gymnasium, and sports—we have spent over £500, making a total of very nearly £600 within a period of two years, on permanent improvements.

14437. How much of that has come out of the ordinary receipts of the school?—Something over £300 has come out of the profits of the school. His Grace the Primates generously gave us £25 to cement the house, and has promised to pay for the painting £25 more. The balance sheet is merely a cash account. We have no means of arriving at a precise valuation of the farm produce consumed.

14438. CHAIRMAN.—In the balance sheet I find an entry of £51 5s from the Lord Primates—is that an annual grant?—£30 of it was a donation he gave for premiums at the end of last year, and the other £51 5s was a sum he received in charity, to apply to any purpose he liked, and he gave it to the seminary.

14439. The premiums have not been given yet?—They are included under the head of alms.

14440. Do the students work at all on the farm?—No.

14441. It is worked by a steward?—Yes, and servants.

14442. Mr. O'Shaughnessy.—Do you pay rent for all the land that you hold?—We do. We pay £31 odd a year, for the land held under Dr. Crolly's will.

14443. How much is that an acre?—About £6 6s. an acre.

14444. CHAIRMAN.—I suppose that land is near the town?—It is. For the other holdings, consisting of about forty-seven acres, we pay £144 odd. Those lands are in two parts. One part we lately got a lease of, at £40 a year, and the rest is held from Lord Dunsany at a yearly rent of £104 odd.

14445. How far is the farm from the town?—It is ten minutes' walk from the town.

14446. That raises the price?—In Dublin it might; but at a small town like Armagh it ought not.

14447. Mr. O'Shaughnessy.—The school appears to be at one side of the hill?—Yes.

14448. And the cemetery is at the other?—Under the hill near the road.

14449. You have not found any inconvenience from the proximity?—No.

Oct. 2, 1878.

Rev John
Edgar.

Rev. JOHN EDGAR, examined.

14450. CHAIRMAN.—You are one of the Presbyterian clergymen of Armagh?—Yes.

14451. Have you any school under your management?—Yes. I have the Convent Place National School. We have just built a new school-room. It is a vested school.

14452. What sum was spent on building?—£360, of which we got £240 as a grant from the Board. Their rule is to give two-thirds up to a certain amount; but we built a much more expensive school-room than they would contribute for—we got only £240, and we supplied the rest ourselves.

14453. Is there any endowment beyond the building?—There is no endowment.

14454. You hold the site in perpetuity?—We hold the site in perpetuity, and we have vested it in the Commissioners of Education.

14455. I suppose it is a primary school?—It is a primary school, with a first-class teacher.

14456. What fees do the pupils pay?—The ordinary fees, beginning at one penny a week, and increasing according to class.

14457. There is no education beyond the ordinary primary course of the National Board?—None.

14458. Have you any statement to make in reference to education generally in the town?—I have been listening attentively to what has been said here to-day by other gentlemen, and I think, with regard to the Royal school, there is no doubt whatever that it was built in Armagh for the inhabitants of the city and county of Armagh. Anyone who knows the history of the time when the grant was made must be aware that that was certainly the primary object; and in the pamphlet, to which reference has been made already, the author brings out that the day boys should be the centre, and the boarders a secondary element in the school. I think in any recommendations made by this Commission that would be a most important point. There is in the county of Armagh a very large middle-class population, and we want an education suitable for them. I think the great matter would be to have the day boys looked upon as the great object for which the school and the masters and the endowment exist. I personally object very much to the views of those who go in for denominational education. I think the great hope of Ireland would be united education. I am glad to say that during the four years and a half I have been here, I do not recollect any instance of any manifestation of improper feeling towards myself by the members of any other denomination; nor have I seen it on the part of Protestants to others. I think the most delightful sight I have seen for many years was at the Intermediate examinations, when the boys from the Royal school and the boys from the Roman Catholic seminary sat side by side. I myself managed schools in the county of Down and the county of Armagh, where I appointed Roman Catholic teachers simply because the majority in the school was Roman Catholic. I also appointed Roman Catholic assistants and monitors. I think it would be a very great pity if Presbyterians should have a Presbyterian school of the higher class in Armagh, cutting altogether their connection with the Royal school; and that each of the three denominations should train up their boys separately. I do not see what we could then expect when they grew to be men, but that they would look upon each other as out of the same nation. We would perpetuate that feeling, instead of doing away with it, to which I think all our efforts should be directed.

14459. With regard to what was said of Trinity College, do you think that the Presbyterians look upon the College at all in a different light, since the Fellowships and Foundation scholarships were thrown open to all?—I think that it is very much a matter of convenience. Belfast being in the Province of Ulster, our boys go to Belfast.

14460. It is less expensive, irrespective of any religious feeling?—I do not see how there can be any religious feeling now; and if there could be some arrangement made, by which the different colleges would have very much the same course, it would be an advantage. The great majority of the boys at the Royal school are going to Trinity College, because they make their arrangements very much to suit the majority. If the entrance examinations, in the Queen's College, and Trinity College, and others, could be made very much alike—in which I do not see any difficulty—all the boys could read the same course.

14461. I remarked on the absence of a Model Training school under the National Board. Do you think that such a school would be an advantage?—The reason there is no Model school here is, that Armagh is well supplied with elementary schools. We have the school Dr. Smyth referred to as under his own management, Dr. Chadwick's schools, and the school to which Mr. Rice referred. The Methodists have also a school, we have a very high class of National schools in the city of Armagh.

14462. Is that schools which are not absolutely primary, but extend up to the commercial class?—Yes; we have a high class of teachers. There is also a choir school in which boys are educated in choral. It was a wise arrangement to select Lurgan and Monaghan for Model schools instead of Armagh; because, having a higher class of schools and a very large number of elementary schools, a Model school is not needed here.

14463. I believe the Model schools have high reputation?—Very; the teachers in all the schools are of the highest class. They have a large staff of assistants in all the schools, and there are few places in Ireland less in need of a Model school than Armagh.

14464. Mr. O'Brian says—Your view is that the day boys ought to be made the primary feature of the Royal school?—Yes.

14465. Do you think that the great body of the Protestants of Armagh and its neighbourhood, both Presbyterians, and Episcopallians, who seek intermediate education, get it?—I have known many of boys going to Lurgan and Belfast, because they intended to enter the Queen's College, looking upon it that the schools there trained them better for the Queen's College than Armagh.

14466. Do you not think that would be resorted to a large extent, by an alteration in the course of entrance at the Universities, so as to bring everything into the same groove?—Yes; I wish to be understood as expressing what everyone in this city, of every religious denomination, feels, that there could be no school better managed than the Royal school is at present. It has never taken so high a position as under Dr. Morgan. But I certainly think, that the tendency of the school is in the direction of the boarders, who are the sons of the gentry, and come from every county in Ireland. I think everything in the school should, in the first instance, belong to the day boys. All the town boys are excluded from the school grounds. I don't say Dr. Morgan would say "very properly; because it is impossible to keep a large school, and allow the grounds to be open," but I believe every advantage in the Institution should be, first of all, for the boys of the city and county of Armagh, and secondly, for the boarders.

14467. Is there any other matter, like the entrance from the play-ground, which shows the disadvantage to day boys?—No; I cannot say that there is.

14468. You would not say that there is anything in the tone of Dr. Morgan or his manner hostile to the day boys?—No; I think there has been everything possible in the tone of Dr. Morgan to make the school more suited for the community generally than, as far as I know, was the case in the time of any of his predecessors. But there is, what neither Dr. Morgan nor anyone else can prevent in the school, a tone taken by the boys who are boarders and sons of gentlemen able to pay very largely for them, and who can make themselves better, perhaps, than the sons of merchants in the city of Armagh, or the sons of farmers in the neighbourhood.

14465. Do you think that impecuniousness of that kind prevents boys from attending the school?—I could not mention any case that I know, but I am quite sure that is the tendency.

14470. Is that the impression in the community?—That is very much the impression in the community. The school was certainly placed here for the benefit of the people. Its property is in the centre of ground on which there were cantonal habitations, and accretions of territory gained by the English Government, and the school was given primarily for the locality. The school was originally to have been built at Mount-norris, the scene of a great battle, and then, by special Act, it was changed to Armagh.

14471. The Report of the Royal Commission of 1837 states—

"King James, in 1603, made an order in Privy Council, that in the counties of Armagh, Tyrone, Londonderry, Fermanagh, Down, and Cavan, there should be appointed one free school, at least for the education of youth in learning and religion."

And then lands were allotted for their endowment. You have got abundant facilities here for primary education?—I think we have.

Rev. WILLIAM MORRIS-MORGAN, M.D., recalled.

14475. CHAIRMAN.—You wish to make a further statement?—I think there must be some misapprehension about the evidence I gave in Dublin, with regard to the probability of Roman Catholics availing themselves of Intermediate Education.

14477. Mr. O'BRIEN.—My recollection of what Dr. Morgan said is, that he thought the primary misapprehension met the wants of Roman Catholics here, and then, as well as I remember, I put to him the question, whether there were not a good many Roman Catholics here availing themselves of primary education, who wanted Intermediate or secondary, and he seemed to negative that idea to some extent?—I did not refer to Roman Catholics in particular, as availing themselves of the primary schools. I thought there was not a very large number in Armagh of any denomination looking for much more than primary education. The only evidence I gave which refers to the number of Roman Catholics is as follows:—

14480.—"What is the proportion in Armagh of Presbyterians and Church people among the class from whom your pupils would be naturally drawn?—Of the class looking for such an education, I would say not more than one-third would be Presbyterians."

14481.—"And about what portion of Roman Catholics of the same class in Armagh?—On that I cannot speak accurately, but there are decidedly more Presbyterians than Roman Catholics."

14478. Mr. Rice says that, according to the newspaper reports, you would seem to give but a very small ratio as belonging to the Roman Catholics?—I would be very sorry to give such an opinion of all. I hope there will be a great many. Mr. Elliott's evidence as to the attendance of day 14472. Your school and Dr. Smyth's are Presbyterian schools?—They are largely Presbyterian, but we have some Episcopals.

14473. Have you 10 per cent. of Episcopals?—There are 110 pupils on the roll, and about ten of those are Episcopals.

14474. We may take it that while the rules and principles of the National Board are adopted by all communities in Armagh, and while the schools are thoroughly unsectarian schools in the eye of the law, all parties appear in practice to regard them very much as for the benefit of their own denomination?—Practically that is very much the case in cities and towns, but through the country it is different.

14475. CHAIRMAN.—As regards the day scholars, in the return Dr. Morgan sent to this Commission dated February 16th, 1879, it was stated that there were then forty day scholars at Armagh Royal school out of a total of 150 pupils. That shows that day scholars largely avail themselves of the school?—Yes, and several of the highest honours that are taken are gained by day boys. Many of the young men now passing through college, who have taken honours at the Royal school, as well as in college, were day boys.

pupils, I feel it of great importance, not only with regard to Armagh, but all the Royal schools. Mr. Elliott seemed to think that the Royal schools are to be regarded mainly as supplying education for day boys. I do not think that the education given, either here or elsewhere, could be given, unless there were boarders in the school as well as day boys; that is, calculating the amount of fees paid. Take, for instance, the case of a day school of from forty to fifty boys, those boys would require, on account of their ages, varying from ten to sixteen, quite as many classes as a school of from 100 to 120. I had experience of that when I first came to Armagh. I found a very small school consisting of one boarder, and from fourteen to sixteen day boys. I had actually to divide those boys into four classes; as there were only two masters there was very great difficulty, and the boys were not really fairly treated; but with sixty or seventy more boys I was enabled to give all a good education. I have gone into the matter carefully, and suppose we were restricted from having boarders, we could not give to forty or fifty day boys the same kind of education we are now giving. With regard to the school premises and use of the grounds, the day boys have with the boarders the free use of the cricket and football ground, and they frequently play matches together.

14479. There is a cricket and football ground?—Yes. There is also a walled playground, behind the school, which is too small for the boarders.

14480. That is the ordinary ground for the boarders?—It contains the ball courts.

14481. How many boarders have you from the county of Armagh?—Very few. I should say half a dozen.

Mr. DUPRE ALEXANDER SHERWOOD, examined.

14482. CHAIRMAN.—You are the head master of the Mail school, Armagh?—Yes. It was formerly a Model school, under the Church Education Society; it is now an ordinary National school.

14483. It is a primary school?—Yes.

14484. What salary do you receive?—I receive £30 a year from the endowment.

14485. There is a mistress in the girls' department?—Yes.

14486. What salary does she get?—A very small one, much too small. I think she considers herself unfairly treated in that respect.

14487. Have you any assistant?—Yes, one assistant. There are two monitors in my school, and there are also two monitors in the female school. There is also an infant school in connection with the Mail school.

14488. What is the number of pupils in the boys' school?—There are 114 on the roll, about 85 being the average attendance.

14489. Do you know the number in the girls' school?—In the girls' school there are between 70 and 75 on the roll, and the average attendance is about 50.

Rev. John Elliott.

Rev. William Morris-Morgan, M.D.

Mr. Dupre A. Sherwood.

Oct. 4, 1879.
Mr. George A.
Dowdell, C.
D.D.

14490. What fees do the pupils pay?—My fees last year amounted to about £30.

14491. How much per head do you receive from the pupils?—From 1s. to 1s. a quarter.

14492. From what other do your pupils come?—There are some very respectable boys in my school, and some very humble.

14493. Is the building kept in thorough repair?—There is very considerable necessity at present for improvements and repairs. I am also in need of a classroom. This morning I had 92 boys in a room 66 feet by 18½ feet, and it is very difficult to manage so many in a single room.

14494. The school is now under the National Board?—Yes.

14495. Is any portion of the endowment applied to the infant school in Callan-street?—I do not know of my own knowledge; but I think some of the funds are applied to the Callan-street school.

14496. You get £30 a year. What does the assistant get?—He gets nothing but the National Board salary, and his share of the results fees.

14497. Then in your school £30 a year is all that is paid out of the endowment?—Yes.

14498. You do not know how the rest of the endowment is applied?—I know how some of it is applied, but not all. The teacher of the girls' school has £8, and the teacher of the infant school has either £8 or £10. I believe £8 goes to Callan street to supplement the teacher's salary there. Then there are some expenses.

14499. Does Dr. Cindwack supply anything required in the way of painting, or repairs, or school requisites?—He supplies 3 tons of coals in the year to each of the schools. He is supposed to get any painting done; but it is a long time since anything has been done in that way. He supplies the school requisites.

14500. What are the ages of the pupils?—The ages vary from 5 to 15.

14501. Do you teach anything beyond the National school primary course?—The programme of the National Board, including some of the extra subjects.

14502. Is there any Science and Art class?—At present there is an Art class, but no Science class.

14503. Is your school exclusively a Church school, or are there some Presbyterians attending at it?—It is open to all denominations.

14504. Do any except Church children send themselves of it?—There are at present no Roman Catholics. I struck the last little boy's name off the roll a few days ago. There are several Presbyterians, and some Methodists attending. The school is perfectly free, and open to all denominations, and of course their religious convictions are respected.

14505. The school is impacted, in the ordinary course, by the National Board inspectors?—Yes.

14506. You have a certificate from the National Board?—Yes; I am a first class teacher under the National Board.

14507. You went through Marlborough-street Training School?—Yes, I was trained.

14508. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY—What are the extra subjects that you teach?—At present I have 30 boys commencing the First Book of Euclid. A few of them have been over the Third Book. I have the same number in Algebra, and about 12 at Latin.

14509. CHAIRMAN—Is there needlework taught in the girls' department?—Yes; it is one of the subjects for examination under the National Board.

14510. Has the grant to the female teacher been reduced recently?—I think there has been a change. Formerly, when depending on the endowment for her salary, she had a larger sum from the endowment than at present.

14511. Do you know what the difference is?—My impression is, that she had £20 a year.

Mr. George A.
Dowdell.

Mr. GEORGE HILL SMITH, COMMISSIONER.

14512. CHAIRMAN—You are a barrister, and the District Registrar of the Court of Probate; and reside in Armagh?—Yes.

14513. You desire to make a statement?—Yes. I am officially resident in Armagh, and have been so for upwards of six years. I took considerable interest when I came here in making inquiries about the local institutions, and amongst others about the Drogheda and Mall schools. I have heard what has been stated here to-day by Mr. Cochrane, and I do not altogether agree with him. He was asked whether the proposal made to the Vice-Chancellor met with any local opposition, and he said not. The fact was, that no opportunity was given, so far as I understand, to any person to express an opinion on the subject, as the first heard of it in the town was the report of the application to the Vice-Chancellor, which appeared in the public papers. I happened, at the time, to be myself stopping in Dublin, and, taking an interest in what occurred previously, I attended in the Vice-Chancellor's Court when the matter was on, and my recollection is not exactly in accordance with what Mr. Cochrane intimated. The first time the matter came before the Court an objection was made that a copy of the petition had not been sent to the Commissioners of Charitable Donations and Bequests. The Vice-Chancellor, referring to the scheme sanctioned under Minister Haughey's order, in 1834, asked some questions as to whether the recommendations of that scheme had been carried out, and how the funds of the endowment had been applied in the intermediate period; and consequently there was no information on the subject on the face of the petition before him. The matter stood over for further inquiry; and when it came on, a fortnight or three weeks afterwards, counsel for the Attorney-General attended and read the proposition made by the petition. The Vice-Chancellor intimated his opinion, but said he would not make any order until he was satisfied as to how the fund was applied between 1834 and 1879. That occurred in March of the present year, and so far as I know the matter has not been brought before the Court since, and, if I am correct, I do not think it is likely to be. The proposition was to close the Drogheda school, and send the children to the Callan-street school, the fact being that, twelve months before that, the Drogheda school had been put under the National Board, with the immediate effect of releasing the endowment from the payment of the salaries paid to the teachers, and throwing the payment of them on the National Board. The moment the Drogheda school was brought under the National Board, the teachers became the payees of the National Board, and that occurred twelve months before the petition for a new scheme was brought before the Court. Now, if we are to believe public report in the town, the proposition is to close Callan-street schools altogether, and this is regarded as an index of their not going on with the petition, the ground of which was the flourishing condition of the Callan-street schools. Thus, if the Callan-street schools are closed, the whole foundation of the petition falls to the ground. Further, by the original foundation of the Drogheda school, the children were to be clothed, and when I came to Armagh first the school children used to attend the parish church in the clothing of the school. They do not attend at all now. There is a general feeling against that; the old custom may have been revived in the last twelve months, but up to that period there were years during which the clothing was not provided for the children. As regards the Mall schools, the petition they occupy is really this. The endowment was for the two schools—which are on the Mall at present—and for three more, but some years ago an infant school was built in the Church

Wells, at the back of the Mall, by the late Primate, who maintained the school solely out of his own purse, and after his death it was maintained for some little time, I understood, by the present Primate. Then the Mall schools themselves were, in January, 1873, put under the National Board. The funds then had, at that time, from the endowment, a salary of £30, but the moment the school was put under the National Board her salary from the endowment was reduced, and she entered as a teacher under the National Board, entitled to £22 a year from that Board. All she got from the endowment for a couple of years afterwards was £10 a year instead of £30; and all she has at present is £5, the remainder being met from the National Board payment. I am not in the slightest degree authorized by her to state so, but I know that she feels aggrieved, for this reason—that when she went under the National system first on a certain class teacher she went up to examination for a higher class, and she succeeded. The moment she did, thereupon the contribution she received from the endowment was reduced, by the same amount exactly as that she had gained by her success in improving her own standing. This was in fact putting a premium upon ignorance, and trying to say, "It would be better for you to remain a low-down and ignorant teacher; because if by any improvement through your own studies you gain in your classification, and consequently obtain an increased allowance from the National Board, we will reduce the quota from the general endowment, and so lower your salary just the more." A great many people in the air felt aggrieved on her account.

14514. Was there any change made in the master's salary?—He has stated that he gets £30 from the endowment; but as far as I could ascertain there is only £20 paid from the endowment, and £10 from some other fund.

14515. Mr. O'SHEEN.—What becomes of the sum deducted?—That is exactly what nobody in the town has been able to get the slightest information about; moreover, the teacher of the school which was originally maintained altogether by the late Primate, and partly by the present Primate, is one of those who receives £5 a year, and also the Catholic school, which is no particular whatever in the subject of the endowment at all, has had portion of the endowment for its teacher.

14516. Do not you think it is hard on the imperial taxpayer to be obliged to contribute to a purpose for which an endowment was given?—No doubt of it, and that is the keynote to the circumstance that almost every primary school in Armagh is put under the National system. I have not been able to meet with anybody in Armagh who could tell what has become of the endowment. What Mr. Cochran said about there having been no opposition to the scheme here is false when you find that no notice was given.

14517. Was there no notice given of the application to transfer the Dr. Lincourt school?—I do not believe anyone in Armagh, except the solicitor concerned, knew one word about it until I sent down copies of the evening papers from Dublin. I myself might have known nothing about it, but that, by accident, I was present in The Vice-Chancellor's Court when the matter came on.

14518. Was there no notice published, pursuant to a direction of the Court?—None whatever. In addition, of course, the Primate and Dr. Chadwick being the sole trustees had a perfect right to go into Court without giving any notice. I am not questioning the propriety of what they did but merely showing that the absence of opposition cannot be regarded as an indication of what was done.

14519. Has the transfer of the school from the original management, to the management of the National Board, been the subject of discussion, and approval or disapproval, among the people of Armagh?—I do not think it has been, except as a sequence of the endowment, which was previously sufficient to maintain the school, pay the teachers, and provide all accessories, not being utilized for that purpose, and so there is a feeling of curiosity as to what has become of it.

14520. Was there any similar disendowment effected with regard to other schools besides the Dr. Lincourt school?—Not that I know, except the Model school. There is one other point I wish to refer to, Mr. Elliott in speaking of the Royal school mentioned the day boys. There is no doubt whatever—though of course Dr. Morgan is not in the slightest degree responsible for it—that there is a feeling, beyond prejudice, on the part of the boarders with regard to the day scholars, in that, it amounts to persecution. I say that advisedly, because my own boy was a day scholar there for two years, and one of the material elements inducing me to take him away was the continual persecution he was subjected to, in common with the other day boys, by the boarders. Dr. Morgan who is not in the slightest degree responsible for it, has done everything possible to remove it. On one occasion I brought the matter before him in reference to my own boy, and he went into it and removed it as far as he could. But there is that very strong feeling of prejudice among the boarders in the school towards the town people.

14521. You are an Episcopalian Protestant?—I am.

14522. Are there many Episcopalian Protestants in Armagh of a class that would ordinarily seek intermediate education, and that at present do not avail themselves of the Royal school?—I think there are. The only two classes of schools here are the National schools and the Royal school, and until recently there was no opening for a school where respectable young lads from 12 to 15 could get a fair education, qualifying them for entrance to the Royal schools. If they had that they would be able to avail of the advantages of that school more fully. The junior classes in the Royal school have not, and of necessity cannot have the supervision of the Head Master so much as the senior classes. Young lads who are not qualified to go into the senior classes are left in the general run. There was no school to meet that want until the last few months; but now the Cathedral school is on that footing, and the teacher is, I believe, qualified to give that education.

14523. Have not the Episcopalian and Presbyterian elements numbers and wealth enough to maintain a fair intermediate school?—Certainly.

14524. Referring to Dr. Morgan's evidence, as to the necessity of boarders to enable a master to maintain a good staff, do you think the town of Armagh, if an endowment existed, would be able by the fees of its day boys to keep up a good intermediate school?—Certainly, and I think in that way the presence of the Royal school is rather a detriment than an advantage, and I quite agree with Mr. Elliott that the primary objects of the endowment of the Royal schools are the locality, and the day scholars. While it is true that the fees from boarders aid in maintaining a large staff of assistants, this is accomplishing the object in one way to the detriment of the school in another.

THIRTY-SIXTH DAY—WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 15, 1878.—11 O'CLOCK, A.M.

At the Commissioners' Office, Four Courts, Dublin.

PRESENTS.—LORD JUSTICE FITZGERON; LORD RANDOLPH CHURCHILL, M.P.; ANDREW SEAGER HART, Esq., LL.D.; and ARTHUR HILL CURTIS, Esq., LL.D.; with JAMES CROFT MURPHY, Esq., LL.D., Secretary.

Rev. Thomas
Harty, M.A.

Rev. THOMAS HARTY, M.A., examined.

14525. LORD JUSTICE FITZGERON.—You are the incumbent of Culry parish?—Yes.

14526. Is that in the neighbourhood of Sligo?—It is. The Diocesan School is in my parish, but I am here, rather as the representative of the Diocesan Synod of Elphin, who deputed me to lay certain matters before the Commissioners.

14527. Do you desire to say anything with regard to the Diocesan School?—The income for the master dies with Mr. Kedes, and with regard to that, we think, that a capital sum should have been realized, instead of allowing an annuity to be lost upon the fall of a single life.

14528. Was any step taken, in the diocese of Elphin, at the time of the passing of the Church Act, to point out that what, in fact, was not church property, was treated as if it were so?—I am not aware, that even in the united dioceses, they did anything in that direction.

14529. You are aware, that the difficulty arises in consequence of the Church Act?—Yes.

14530. We have had evidence, that Sligo school has not, strictly speaking, any diocesan schoolhouse at all. Elphin was one, but it was sold; and the interest on the capital value of the Elphin schoolhouse, is now given to the master of Sligo school?—That is, given as part payment to the diocesan schoolmaster. What we, as a diocese, say is, that we have a substantial grievance.

14531. Can you give us any information as to the demand there is for such a school in Sligo?—Yes; I have taken statistics as regards the four adjoining parishes, comprising an area of fifteen square miles, and—without taking into account the Roman Catholics, as they would not join in united education—we have 890 children fit to be educated. The number on the roll at the various primary schools, is about 700.

14532. How many of these would require something better than merely primary education?—I have taken an interest in education for the last fifteen years, and I find that about ten per cent. of the Protestant population avail themselves of a higher education.

14533. Are there any Intermediate schools in Sligo?—There is one existing at present, Mr. Kedes's, in which there are thirty boys.

14534. Mr. Kedes gave powerful evidence before us, as to the necessity for such a school?—I have collected statistics for the last six years, and I find that on an average, five out of every 100 boys in the poorer classes of Protestants, raise themselves, by their genius and diligence, above their level, and consequently want the education afforded by an intermediate school.

14535. What proportion do the Roman Catholics in your district, bear to the Protestants?—They are as five to one, in the area already described.

14536. What proportion of the Roman Catholics would require an education higher than a primary one?—It is a very poor district, and so there would not be above 2½ per cent.

14537. Are the majority of those who would look for a superior class of education Catholics or Protestants?—Protestants. My experience is, that the Protestant business classes are, as a rule, more ambitious than the Roman Catholics, and that spirit of ambition leads them to seek a higher education.

14538. Is there, in Sligo, any school in which a higher class of education is afforded to the Roman Catholics?—Yes; the Marist Fathers conduct a very good school there.

14539. What number of boys attends that school?—About fifty fit for the Intermediate Education Examination.

14540. What class of education is given there?—Such as would be required in the middle grade, under the Intermediate Education Act. They do not go to the higher grade.

14541. Do they teach classical?—Yes.

14542. Do they teach any modern languages?—They teach French very well, but not German.

14543. Is there any instruction in modern languages available in Sligo, for Protestants, except what Mr. Kedes gives?—None whatever.

14544. You know the diocesan schoolhouse?—Yes, that is another grievance we have. In five years, it will become the absolute property of Mr. Kedes, thereby alienating it entirely from the diocese.

14545. Do you know how it was originally purchased?—In the year 1828, the house and premises were a charter school, under the patronage and care of the Erasmus Smith's Board. The school at that time received fifty boys from the county Sligo, who were educated by the three Governors living in the manse, and were taught trades, principally the book linen trade. About the year 1830, as the linen trade went down, the school ceased, and the grant was withdrawn. The Erasmus Smith's Board then appointed a Mr. Harvey, as an English and science master, at £100 a year; but I believe that project failed. The condition of the lease, as originally granted by one of the Wynnes, was, that should it fail as a scholastic institution, it should revert to one of the original owners, and, therefore, the lease lapsed; but so anxious was the Wynnes to continue it as a school, that they gave a new lease, which, however, will terminate in five years. About the year 1852, either by an Act of Parliament or an Order in Council, the then master of Sligo had the diocesan school transferred from Elphin—the ecclesiastical capital of the diocese; but, having no Protestant population—in Sligo, which has a large population.

14546. Is the house suitable as a school?—I would hardly think so. I am attached to it, and I consider the schoolroom too small, the ceiling too low, and the fittings bad, and altogether unsuitable; but those matters could be easily remedied.

14547. Is Mr. Kedes the absolute owner of the house?—He is now the absolute owner in fee.

14548. Then, if he were willing to deal with you, it is available to be continued as a school-house?—Yes; its surroundings are admirably adapted for educational purposes, and by breaking down a partition wall, and raising the ceiling, or by transferring the schoolroom outside the main building, it would be suitable. It is most conveniently situated, being on a hill in my parish, within 200 yards of the town, and in the healthiest part of Sligo.

14549. Have you had opportunities of seeing how the school has been conducted?—Yes, both by Mr. Kedes himself and by his deputy, who is acting for him while he is temporarily absent.

14550. Mr. Kedes was greatly distinguished as a scholar?—Yes; he is an excellent classical teacher. He is obliged, by the Act of Parliament, to conduct the school himself, or to supply a deputy to do so; and he is now paying a deputy, who is a very good man. In five years' time, however, the building will be alienated, and on Mr. Kedes' death the only endowment which exists will determine; so that we will be absolutely left in Sligo with 3,500 Protestants, including Dissenters, without a higher grade school; and so had in the feeling produced on the minds of the people by the unsettled state of the master, that they are sending their children away. A nephew of mine, who was preparing for Cambridge, and who could have been educated at home, if we had a suitable school, I sent to England.

14551. Lord R. CHURCHILL.—There is an endowed school in Elphin?—Yes; Bishop Hodson left a sum of money—one-half for the maintenance of Elphin Cathedral, and the remaining half for the education of the people in that neighbourhood. By reason of emigration, and from various other causes, the Protestant population of Elphin has been diminished to about thirty; and yet the money remains there, not sufficient to attract anyone, whereas, if it were transferred to Sligo or Boyle, where day boys would probably attend, it would be a great help to us.

14552. Lord Justice FRYGUESON.—Who are the trustees?—I think the Dean and Chapter.

14553. Lord R. CHURCHILL.—What is being done with the endowment at present?—There is a school at Elphin, but it is carried on by the curate of the parish.

14554. What sort of school is it?—It is a little above a good primary school; but I could not say it is an advanced school by any means.

14555. Are there many pupils attending?—I have not an idea.

14556. Lord Justice FRYGUESON.—The returns furnished to us state—Bishop Hodson's grammar school is situated at Elphin. The existing endowment consists of land given, in 1638, by John Hodson, then Bishop of Elphin, which is not liable to any burden, but is liable to a life rent-charge of £200 per annum, which will expire in fifty years from the date of the agreement with the Commissioners. The pupils consist of twenty-five boys, all day scholars, of whom nine are Roman Catholics, the remainder Protestants, and the fees are only nominal. The course of instruction comprises English, Science, Latin and Greek, French and Instrumental music, when required, when books and appliances suitable to such instruction are provided. The Rev Edward Lewis, is the master. The amount of his salary, from the endowment, is £110 a year, with a dwelling-house and two acres of land. The lands, which are in the county Down, were left by Bishop Hodson, for the purpose of founding a grammar school, but as they had been let on lease, for the making of which fines had been taken, they only brought to the school about £30 per annum, and the intention of the founder was not carried out until the leases dropped. The funds were afterwards accumulated for some years, until 1867, when the buildings erected from those funds (a short time previously) were made available. The returns also state that it was the founder's wish that such a school should be established in Elphin, at which those children, whose parents might not be able to pay school fees, might receive a free education. The buildings are stated to be worth £1,500. Do you know the Elphin School?—I have not seen it, but I know it by report.

14557. Is it a school for the extreme poor?—There is no one else there to go to it.

14558. The middle classes do not send their children there?—Not at all. It is not made attractive enough.

14559. Dr. GOSSE.—It was at one time a classical school?—Yes.

14561. Of how many members does it consist?—I do not know.

14562. What is the distance from Elphin to Sligo?—About twenty-five miles.

14563. Does the Cathedral require any large sum?—No; they do not know what to do with it. They are discussing it very elaborately, and, in my opinion, quite unnecessarily. They are putting in stained glass windows. The Cathedral is very pretty, but there is no congregation. If that fund could be used for educational purposes, it would be a very decided advantage.

14564. You say that one-half of the endowment was given for keeping up the Cathedral—I believe the Bishop's palace was sold some time since, and is now in private hands?—Yes.

14565. Is there a Dean of Elphin?—Yes; the Dean is Incumbent of the parish, and is resident there. But what I say is, that there is not material enough for that small foundation to set upon. If transferred to Boyle or Sligo, where there is a large population, it might be utilized to useful advantage.

14566. Lord R. CHURCHILL.—What is the population of Boyle?—About 4,000.

14567. Lord Justice FRYGUESON.—The returns which we have received, and which is signed by Dean Warburton, contains this important statement:—

"Previous to the current year there were as many as thirty-seven pupils in attendance, and forty-five on the roll. A year ago the Roman Catholics were compelled to leave the school (except a few who still continue to come), as the Roman Catholic curate succeeded to teach classes. Almost all the Roman Catholic parents and pupils informed me it was with regret they left, and some have since been speaking of returning, which, I believe, they will do after a time. Within the last few years the Roman Catholic school have been successful at the Civil Service competitive examinations; twelve of these were Roman Catholic. The school is strictly unsectarian."

So that they appear to be doing work for the endowment, at Elphin?—That work would be equally well done by the National school.

14568. Do you not desire to say something as to the management of the Erasmus Smith's property in your neighbourhood?—Yes, in my parish, and immediately adjoining the diocesan school, there is a very good property, residing between £400 and £500 a year. Of that sum the bulk was formerly—within the last 100 years—spent in the united parishes, but, by a process on the ascending scale, the Erasmus Smith's Board have been eliminating, till about twelve years ago Sligo ceased to benefit whatever from that property, whereas, about the year 1828, the school which is now the diocesan school was kept up by that Board as a Charter school, or rather they subsidised it. When that collapsed they gave £100 a year to a master, Mr. Harvey; and in an adjoining parish they gave £30 a year to a master, and £50 to a female teacher. When Mr. Harvey died the £100 was stopped, and when the other master died, the allowance was reduced to £50, and subsequently to £35, at which it was continued for years, but for the last twelve years they have ceased to contribute anything.

14569. Lord R. CHURCHILL.—Since these donations have ceased to us, and, have not the National Board established schools in Sligo?—The Model schools are there, but they were not at all up to the requirements of many of the boys; for instance, one of the boys educated in the old Erasmus Smith's school will probably obtain a high place as a writer next year in Cambridge. First-class teachers will not come to remote parts of Ireland, where there is not sufficient population to support a boarding school.

14570. Lord Justice FRYGUESON.—I presume the Model school gives as good a primary education as is required in Sligo?—Yes.

14571. What I understand from you is, that the Erasmus Smith's endowment, which they normally gave towards primary schools, was supplied through masters who were able to give a higher class of teaching?—Yes. In Mr. Harvey's time, about 1835, boys were educated in his school for the different professions, which the Model schools cannot do. When he died, through the sagacity, to some extent, of the clergy, the grant was removed.

14572. Where is the nearest Erasmus Smith's school to Sligo now situated?—It is about five miles from Sligo, on St. Henry Gore's estate, but it is only an English school. Our grievance is that the Erasmus

Smith's Board receive £500 a year, which was originally spent in the united parishes, but is now taken away. Had that money been given for a higher school, we would now be in a flourishing condition. In the county Boscawen there is no school whatever to supply an intermediate education.

14573. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—The Erasmus Smith's endowment was originally left to support four Grammar schools—in Tipperary, Kenna, Galway, and Donegal. The governors subsequently established primary schools all over the country, and spent by far the greater part of the endowment on them, to the neglect of the Grammar schools; but the present policy of that Board appears to be to restore the money to the Grammar schools, which it was originally intended to support, and gradually to reduce the English schools, which are supplemented by the National Board?—I see that.

14574. LORD JUSTICE FREDGIMAN.—What you, on the part of the Synod, desire to urge them to do is, to subsidise a Grammar school in Sligo?—Precisely. There is going on, in Ireland, a process of centralisation, all our provincial towns are demanded by that process from having a respectable population. Galway has a Queen's College and a Grammar school, while Sligo, with a much larger population, has no such advantage.

14575. You also is, that Sligo requires something better than primary education?—Yes; at the present day the children are going away. There are boys in Arramagh, and my boys, sons of friends, and my own nephews, are at school in England. I can speak of five boys who, to my knowledge, would be educated in Sligo, if we had suitable provision for educating them there.

14576. Is there any want of a boarding-school there?—Certainly.

14577. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—Twenty-five years ago there was a school at Elphin?—Yes.

14578. Was that school universally attended?—That I cannot say.

14579. The population was very much more numerous then than it is now?—Very much so.

14580. What was the income of the master?—It was adjudicated under the Act at £100 a year.

14581. LORD JUSTICE FREDGIMAN.—There appears to be an Erasmus Smith's school on Sir Henry Gore Booth's property. Do you know that he is a tenant of the Erasmus Smith's Board?—I was not aware of that.

14582. The rental of the Sligo property, belonging to that Board, is £455 3s. 8d., and there are only five tenants on the property—Sir Henry Gore Booth, the Right Hon. John Wyndes, William Clarke, Arthur Campbell, and Edward Walsh?—I know all those gentlemen. Three of them are gentlemen of position. William Clarke is a tenant farmer—a very old man. To show that the Erasmus Smith's Board recognises the claims of Sligo to some assistance, I may mention that the grandfather of the present Mr. Wyndes wrote to that Board to know why the union of St. John's was deprived of the benefits of education, while the Board were receiving from that parish about £500 a year, which was bequeathed for the education of the young of the county Sligo. He got an answer, that if he gave half an acre of ground near Sligo, five or six, they would erect a school-house and pay a master to teach Mathematics and English. He gave the land, and the Board entered into a contract for the building of the house, but when it was half built they cancelled the contract, and stopped the work. That occurred about the year 1836, and they have never done anything since for higher education in Sligo.

14583. All they then offered, was to found a English school?—A higher English school.

14584. What you want is something higher and than that?—Yes, we have really nothing better than Dublin, and are very badly off.

14585. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—What means help the Catholic population of that district of obtaining higher education?—They have very good in Galway. In the district to be benefited, they have three institutions. There is a very good one in Boyle, under the Marist Fathers, a brotherhood who devote themselves to the highest education of youths—they teach principally foreign languages, and are well adapted for so doing. They have also a school in Drogheda which is very good.

14586. Have they good school buildings?—Yes, very fair.

14587. LORD JUSTICE FREDGIMAN.—When was the Marist's school at Boyle opened?—Nine or ten years ago.

14588. How is it held?—The Bishop, Catholic Bishop, Dr. O'Connell, bought it, and gave it to them.

14589. Is it of a Jesuitian character?—Yes, of the nature.

14590. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—Do they board pupils there?—I cannot say. Many of these boys look honours at the recent Intermediate examinations.

14591. LORD JUSTICE FREDGIMAN.—The brotherhood give their services gratuitously?—Of that I am not aware; but fees are charged to the pupils.

14592. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—You said there were three institutions at which the Catholics could obtain higher education?—There are three—one in my own district, the others in Boyle, and Manx brotherhood, which are very near us.

14593. In the school at Manx brotherhood under the same brotherhood?—I think the teachers are independent, but I am not sure whether they are the Marist Fathers. However, the education given is intermediate.

14594. LORD JUSTICE FREDGIMAN.—Are Catholic Protestants attending that school?—Yes; they have schools of their own, except primary ones.

14595. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—What is the Protestant population of Boyle?—I think about 500.

14596. And of Sligo?—About 2,500, including the students. My parish extends five miles out, and contains a rural population.

14597. LORD JUSTICE FREDGIMAN.—In the district of Sligo you speak of, as requiring a grammar school, what proportion, in the class that want grammar school teaching, do the Catholics bear to the Protestants of all denominations?—I would say they are about equal in numbers. The inhabitants of the north and of Leitrim would send their sons to us. I am quite sure that had we a school such as I would wish, we would have 100 boys attending it.

14598. What steps have been taken, by the Diocesan Board of Sligo, to form an Education Committee, to look after educational matters?—We have no education board whatever, except the trustees of that terminable lease.

14599. Have you any regular system of inspection of the schools for Protestant children in your diocese?—No. The model school is in my parish, and the clergymen of the adjoining parishes and myself attend it weekly.

14600. Have you a diocesan inspector?—We have no school inspector in Elphin.

14601. Nor any organized system of supporting schools?—None whatever.

OCT 15, 1878.
Rev. Robert
H. Rogers,
M.A.

14602. LEAS.—Wm. FitzGibbon.—You are the incumbent of the parish of St. John, Kilkenny?—I am the vicar.

14603. There is a charity school in the parish, which was formerly known as the Subscription School?—Yes.

14604. How long have you been resident in Kilkenny?—Twenty-five years.

14605. How long have you had any connection with the Subscription School?—As a clergyman, I was always on the School committee; but I was not a member of the Board, from which its endowment is derived, until I became vicar—about nineteen years ago.

14606. Where was the school, when you became acquainted with it, twenty-five years ago?—In King street.

14607. What did it consist of at that time?—A boys' school and a girls' school; which were distinct.

14608. The schools were established under a deed, dated 1817?—Yes.

14609. What was the nature of the original foundation?—I produced the lease, which Lord Ormonde gave, of that school-house in the year 1817, and a drawing of the school.

14610. The lease which you have produced is dated 1st July, 1817, and is from the Marquis of Ormonde to the Hon. and Rev. the Dean of Ossory, rector of the parish of St. Patrick, Rev. Charles F. Phillips, Rev. Richard Gorman, Rev. Anthony Peck, vicar choral of the Cathedral Church of St. Canice, and impropriators of the parish of St. Canice; Rev. Peter Roe, minister of the parish of St. Mary, and Rev. Robert Shawe, minister of the parish of St. John, all in the city of Kilkenny, and to the successors for the time being of the vicars choral, impropriators, and rectors of the said parishes, and do covenants that the estate, tenement or waste house called the Old Castle in Rock-lane, otherwise the Kingstown, in the city of Kilkenny, to hold for 999 years at the yearly rental of sixpence. The lease contains a covenant by the lessors to keep the premises in repair, and also this clause:—

"Provided always and the great and diverse hereby made upon this express condition, and it is the true intent that if within the space of two years from the date hereof the said Castle, tenement, and premises shall not be put into good and complete repair, and restored fit and convenient for school for the purposes hereof mentioned, unless if at any time, during the term hereby granted, the same shall not continue to be used, or shall be discontinued or be used hereafter as a school or house for the education of Protestant children, as aforesaid for the space of one year, then this indenture and the great hereby made . . . shall null, inoperative, and be utterly void."

The map upon the lease shows that the premises contained 37½ ftm. in front and 50½ ftm. in depth. Are they now used as a school?—No. The school has been removed into John street, to another locality, and the present Lord Ormonde has made this indenture upon the lease:—

"As it appears to the Bishop of Ossory and the other persons interested in the management of the school hereinbefore, on the within demised premises, that the school should, for a time at least, be removed to another place, I hereby consent that the lessors should be at liberty to let the within demised premises, the rent to be got thereon to be applied for the benefit of the school for the education of Protestant children residing in the city of Kilkenny and its liberties contemplated by the within lease. The premises to be on the express condition that the house shall not be let as a public-house for the sale of spirits or the accompanying liquor."

Dated this 6th day of June, 1873.

"Ossory."

14611. Up to what time did the school continue to be carried on in the premises in King-street?—Up to November, 1875.

14612. The report of the Commission of 1857 stated that there was an average attendance of twenty boys and sixteen girls at the Subscription Schools. Did these numbers continue down to the time the school was removed, or did they fall away?—I think the school was falling into debt. It certainly fell away in the end.

14613. What income had it?—There was an annuity of about £9 10s. from a Mr. Pratt. A lease of 16th of September, 1801, was made by the Corporation of Kilkenny to William and Thomas Pratt of a plot of ground in Kilkenny, to hold for 97 years, from the 25th March, 1801, at a pepper-corn rent. That was bequeathed by the will of William Pratt, which was dated 10th October, 1836, for the remainder of the term to the—"Protestant Rector of St. Mary's Parish of the city of Kilkenny for the time being for and towards the support and maintenance of the parochial school, and the Low-line parsonage, both situated in said parish, in and about and properties."

14614. How is that house used?—It is let to a yearly tenant at £28 10s. a year, and after payment of a head rent of £7 2s. 2d., and all other deductions the moiety of the profit which belongs to the school is about £9 10s. a year.

14615. How does it come to be subject to any head rent, since there is only a pepper-corn rent reserved in the lease?—That I cannot ascertain.

14616. To whom do you pay the rent?—To a Mr. Hayden.

14617. Is he the agent, or the owner?—He is the owner.

14618. What has been done with the former school-house?—We have let it at 18s. a month, which comes to £10 10s. a year.

14619. When was it let?—After the school was removed in 1875.

14620. Is that rent as much as you can realize out of the property?—We could not get more.

14621. How are these premises kept in repair?—We keep them in repair out of the rent.

14622. I believe the school has an interest in Evans' Charity. What amount did you receive from that source when you first knew the school?—I do not think there has been much variation in the receipts from that fund. £105 a year was paid at first, and then it came to be £150 a year, &c.

14623. It appears that, in 1857, £160, Irish, was paid to the school and £200, 1864, for apprenticing non-Protestant children who had been educated at the school. Those payments were made under a deed of 1818, confirmed by a private Act of Parliament which was obtained on the 2nd July, 1819. The provision thereby made is an annual sum of £160 to the St. John's Kilkenny Subscription School then established in Evans' Lane, in the City of Kilkenny, for the education of poor Protestant children; and there is a sum of £200 a year provided for paying apprentices fees for ten children, male or female, to suitable trades or businesses, such children to be of the Protestant religion as by law established and to have been educated and to have attended for three years at least at the Subscription School then mentioned or at an orphan school to be established. Whom any such orphan school established?—No.

14624. Then the Subscription School is entitled to the benefit of that provision whatever it may be?—Yes.

14625. Has that been received?—Yes. It is managed and distributed by the trustees of Evans' Charity.

14626. Who are the trustees?—At the present time, they are the Mayor, the High Sheriff, the Dean, and myself.

14627. The Act of Parliament provided that the Dean of Ossory, the Mayor of the City of Kilkenny, the Recorder of the City of Kilkenny, the High Sheriff of the County of Kilkenny, the Minister of the Parish of St. Mary, and the Vicar of the Parish of St. John, in the City of Kilkenny, should be the trustees.—The Dean, and the Minister of St. Mary's is now the same person, and the Recorder of Kilkenny has been abolished, so there are only four trustees.

OCT. 15, 1878.

Rev. Bishop
H. Rogers,
M.A.

14628. Do the trustees meet at any regular times?—Not at stated times; but whenever necessary.

14629. Do they keep a minute book?—Yes.

14630. What led to the removal of the school, which you have mentioned?—There may have been two or three reasons that influenced the School Committee. The Bishop of Cork, then Bishop of Ossory, was particularly anxious that it should be moved. We thought it very right that the children of the poor Protestants in Kilkenny should have the superior advantages which the Model School gave. All we were able to give by way of salaries were £40 a year to the master, and £25 to the mistress, and certainly we could not get first-rate teachers for that, such as they had at the Model School.

14631. You find the Model School gives the class of education that you require for those children?—Yes, and at the same time we were anxious to get the school out of the house it was in, as there was but a very small yard attached to each of the school-rooms, and the drain passed under the flooring of the boys' school, so that there was always an insufferable stench, especially in summer. In 1859 a resolution was passed by the trustees allowing later annuities they were on the subject. The minute states:—

"Present:—The Very Rev. the Dean of Ossory, Rev. F. R. Wynne, Rev. John L. Draper, Rev. J. P. Peacock, and Rev. J. Gorman. Resolved:—That we think it highly desirable to change the site of the parochial school, and we consider the premises in _____ street, of which the Rev. Geo. Shannon is the landlord, very suitable for our purpose; and that we appoint the Dean and Incumbent as a sub-committee to make preliminary inquiries and arrangements for effecting the above object."

This further resolution was passed on Oct. 16, 1860:—

"That a sub-committee be appointed for the purpose of making inquiries as to whether the parochial school may not be transferred to other premises, and to report to the Committee the result at their next meeting."

At that time Lord Ormonde was not of age, and Lady Ormonde said no change could be made until he came of age.

14632. Where have you transferred the school to?—To Evans's Asylum, in John-street.

14633. Was it by the authority of the trustees that that building was used as a school-house?—Yes. It was originally designed as an asylum school.

14634. What number of children are now attending that school?—At present there are 85 on the roll.

14635. How many of those attend regularly?—About 67. The number is increasing every year.

14636. How are the funds of the school expended?—The mistress gets £40 a year, and an assistant £20; and there are many other items. When I got up the schools from my predecessor, Mr. Wynne, the parochial school was in debt £81, and the infant school about £40; so that we found it absolutely necessary to make some change. We could not keep up the three schools.

14637. Thus, have you amalgamated Evans's School, the former Endowed Protestant School, with the Parochial School of St. John's?—There is only the one school now, and it is conducted in a very efficient way, indeed. Before making the change we took counsel's opinion on the subject. I produce a copy of the opinion of Mr. F. T. L. Dunne, &c., dated 21st January, 1876, on case submitted to him. He writes:—

"There is nothing in the trust deed or Act of Parliament which attaches to the Subscription School any particular character, or which requires that it should retain any particular, in order to make attendance there a qualification for the payment of the apprentice fees. Indeed, I suppose the trustees of the charity have not any such direct control over the managers of the Subscription School, which is connected with the charity only in the two ways, viz. —as recipients of the annuity of £160, and as furnishing qualified candidates for apprenticeship fees. The removal of this Subscription School, or its alteration in any character, does not disqualify it in the respect of the annuity, or to furnish candidates for apprenticeship fees. I am of opinion that, save in so far as the resolution of the 16th October last sought to define the qualifications for candidates, it is quite regular and within the powers of the trustees; nor do I think that there is anything substantially objectionable in its resounding purpose of the resolution. There is nothing in the deed or Act to specify the period at which the three years attendance at the Subscription School is either to commence or terminate, and in the absence of any such, I am of opinion that three years' attendance at the Subscription School, under the supposed change of the circumstances of the school, would be within the provisions of the trust deed and Act of Parliament. Of course the trustees will adopt the usual safeguards as heretofore is a prudent application of the money. I may observe that the change as in the school will still leave matters in accordance not only with the letter, but also with the general spirit of the donors' intention, which seems to have been to provide for the placing out in life of some of those to whose previous education the funds of the charity had contributed. Nothing further seems to me to add.—FRANCIS T. L. DUNNE, Esq., Herbert Square, Dublin, January 21, 1876."

14638. Read the resolution of 19th October, 1875, referred to in that opinion.—That resolution, which was proposed by Rev. Mr. Wynne, and seconded by myself, is:—

"That this Board agree that the Subscription School, which has been transferred from Evans's Lane to King's-street, be now transferred to the rooms used in Evans's Asylum, and that the certificate from the teacher that the pupil has attended for three years, and has been well-conducted, and from our examination that the pupil has satisfactorily passed his examination, is a necessary qualification for the apprentice fee."

And to that the Very Rev. Charles Vignoles, the Dean, appended:—

"I disagree with the foregoing resolution, and enter my protest against it."

14639. Was the resolution modified in any way?—No.

14640. What were the grounds of the Dean's objection?—I think he was under the impression that their entire education should be given, to the children attending this school, and that three years alone would not be sufficient. It is stated in the will, and in the Act of Parliament, that they should receive their education in the school, or attend it for at least three years.

14641. The minute book, which you have produced, shows that on the 7th December, 1875, at an adjourned meeting, Dean Vignoles in the chair, the High Sheriff moved, and the Mayor seconded, a resolution:—

"That the opinion of counsel be taken on the resolution passed on the 16th October last, with respect to the transfer of the schools, whether it comes within the meaning of the Act of Parliament, and that the Secretary draw up a short case and lay it before counsel."

Was Mr. Dunne's opinion obtained in pursuance of that resolution?—Yes, and the Dean did not afterwards make any objection.

14642. Is the school now doing useful work?—It is very efficient, and is a first-class school.

14643. Do you balance your accounts at fixed dates?—Yes. They are now audited at the beginning of each year.

14644. Your account for 1876 began with a credit balance of £18 6s. 6½d. from the previous account. Then there is a receipt of £4 from the Marquis and Marchioness of Ormonde.—Is that a voluntary subscription?—Yes.

14645. The year's grant from Evans's trustees entered as £74 2s. 10½d. 1—Yes. We think that was very good. It is not so much this year.

14646. Thus you have not received the £53 it fell 1—No.

14647. The total receipts since to £114 8s. 4½d.—How was that money expended?—The salary to Miss Halston, the principal teacher, was £40, Miss O'neilly, the assistant teacher, was paid £30, and small items for school requisites, coal, pen-cases for collecting the rent of the house—which there is some difficulty in getting—the payment of a caretaker, for keeping the school clean, and other small items, make up the total expenditure to £70 14s. 3½d.

having a balance on hands for the next account of £15 13s. 6d.

14648. Is the school in connexion with any society?—Not now. When Keane's Charity school was an infant school it was in connexion with the Church Education Society.

14649. Is there a diocesan board of education, in the Diocese of Cussey?—Yes.

14650. What inspection of the school is there?—Every year a clergyman is appointed, by the school committee, to inspect the school.

14651. Do the trustees examine it themselves?—No.

14652. Have you visited it at regular periods yourself?—I have visited it very frequently, and all the day of the term do so too, and take an interest in it. They wish to make it as efficient a school as they possibly can.

14653. Are the children charged any fees?—One penny a week, which forms part of the mistress's salary, in addition to her £40 a year. She has also furnished apartments.

14654. Do the trustees pay any rent, to Keane's trustees, for the house?—No.

14655. Do you yourself know anything of the management of the property?—I know it is managed very satisfactorily, and that the trustees are very highly satisfied with the accounts of Mr. Poe. The tenants are very satisfactory, and sometimes there was difficulty about getting the rents paid; but the property was never better managed than it is now. I have the books relating to it in a regular set from 1820.

14656. Of what class are the children attending the school?—They are the children of tradespeople and the labouring class.

14657. Where do they generally go when they leave your school?—To the Model School as we have arranged, and when they are old enough they are apprenticed. Almost all receive the apprentice fee. We always insist on the passing of an examination to test the child's proficiency before we give the fee.

14658. Do you attend yourself to the distribution of the apprentice fees?—Yes.

14659. Are the children all apprenticed in Kilkenny?—No, I think not.

14660. Are you able to find suitable places for all the children you have available?—Sometimes we find it very difficult indeed to find an eligible place.

14661. You are limited to apprenticing them with Protestants?—Yes, to members of the Church of Ireland.

14662. Is there a considerable Protestant population in Kilkenny of the class those children belong to?—Yes. The Protestant population of Kilkenny is about 700.

14663. Does that include a sufficient number of tradespeople to enable you to find masters and mistresses for the children?—We sometimes find it very difficult to do so, but they generally provide themselves.

14664. Do you take any steps, after the children are apprenticed, to watch their progress and see how they are cared?—We do not lose sight of them.

14665. Are the apprentice fees paid at once or in instalments?—By three instalments. There is a resolution to that effect.

14666. Is there any condition, with reference to the payment of the instalments, requiring on the one hand, a certificate that the child is well conducted, or, on the other, that the master is doing his duty by the child?—Inquiries are made into those matters, and if there were any complaint we should be made acquainted with it.

14667. Have you in any one stopped the payment of the instalments?—I think not.

14668. Were you a trustee during the time of Mr. Grace?—No, I was not in Kilkenny at all then.

14669. Do you know from the books what amount of money was recovered from the Bank on foot of instalments with which he was connected?—I know the amount that was lost. A payment of £23 1s. 7d. in 1847 was up to September, 1844. The next payment was £25 in 1854, and in 1856 there was a payment of £161 8s. 11d., which was up to December, 1845. The next payment, £113 6s. 9d., which was made in 1858, is stated to have been on account of £1,108 1s. 11d., due to December, 1857. So that the school lost something over £1,600.

14670. Was any sum afterwards paid out of those amount?—No.

14671. You do not know what was recovered from the Bank of Ireland?—No.

14672. What was the nature of the fraud?—I think frauds had been perpetrated for many years, not only by Mr. Grace but by his predecessors. A Mr. Donnelly, who had been connected with the property embarked a great deal of it.

14673. There is provision made that if there be any surplus rent it is distributable according to certain proportions; but as I understood the account has not even been paid in full?—Never. The amounts that each of the charities to receive is settled by the Lord Chancellor. I produce an account of the income and expenditure of the school, which shows that in 1870 the income was £253 18s. 6d., and the expenditure was £299 6s. 9d. 1871, income, £284 17s.; expenditure, £290 1s. 3d. 1872, income, £285 6s. 4d.; expenditure, £285 8s. 6d. 1873, income, £277 15s. 11d.; expenditure, £289 4s. 6d. 1874, income, £278 2s. 10d.; expenditure, £294 17s. 2d. 1875, income, £273 13s. 11d.; expenditure, £2106 15s. 9d. On the 1st January, 1876, there was a balance due to the treasurer of £31 13s. 10d.

14674. That was the balance which led you to the conclusion that you could not carry on the schools as you were theretofore doing?—Yes.

14675. In the Report of the Commission of 1857 it is stated of the Kilkenny Subscription Boys' School:—

"As regards the state of instruction, this school is almost as backward as any I have visited. Nothing could be more imperfect or slovenly than the reading of the advanced pupils, and it is ridiculous to speak of their knowledge of parsing, or of their having studied English Grammar. I was told, for instance, that in the phrase 'foxes' den,' 'foxes' is an adverb, and 'den' another adverb; nor could anyone in the fourth or third class explain the meaning of the word 'recent.' The general answering is generally very unsatisfactory, but in all the schools the pupils had no little knowledge of principles here as I have met with elsewhere. The handwriting of nearly all the scholars is childish. I hardly know how to account for the great ignorance observable in this school. The number of pupils on the roll is certainly small, but not subject to the same fluctuation as in country districts, where it is difficult to secure the smallest degree of regularity; and inferior as are the books in the hands of the pupils, I have met with schools, less advantageously circumstanced, where very much more seemed to have been learned. Thus I am satisfied, wherever it occurs, to attribute to the accident of the schoolmaster being above the average of parish clerks, although the level is very uniform; but with inferior books, ill-informed teachers, and inspection resulting in the process I have everywhere had to notice, we have no reason to expect a very different state of things."

I believe that the books now in use in the school are the National Board books?—Yes.

14676. The Report of the same date on the girls' school states:—

"I examined the most advanced pupils of the present year. Their style of reading was bad, and their knowledge of parsing very imperfect, although much superior to that of the boys. Their manner of writing from dictation was tedious and slovenly. In one sentence there were several false spellings, which included every variety of spelling for the word 'seems,' such as 'seems,' 'seemes,' 'seems.' The mistress, however, I consider diligent and anxious, and as she has hardly been four months in her present engagement, she is not altogether accountable for the shortcomings of the school."

What qualifications had the present mistress before she was appointed?—She was educated in Kildare-street, and has her testimonials from it.

14677. Is that the Church Education Society?—Yes. She is a very good mistress indeed.

Oct 25, 1875.
Mr. J. P. P.

Mr. JAMES POE, examined.

14678. LEAD JUSTICE FERGUSON.—You are a solicitor, and the Clerk of the Crown for the county of Kerry?—Yes.

14679. You have also the management of some landed property?—Yes.

14680. How long have you been agent to the Evans's trustees?—Since November, 1858.

14681. Were you the immediate successor of Mr. Grace?—No, of Mr. Lane.

14682. How long had he been agent?—Three or four years.

14683. Who was the predecessor of Mr. Grace in the agency?—Mr. Collins.

14684. We have been informed that the litigation to which reference has been made was still going on in 1857. Is that correct?—No. They got an order from the Court, in 1858, to distribute some funds.

14685. Do you know, from an examination of the books or otherwise, what was the nature of the loss that was sustained?—The first agent was Mr. Desroche, and he made away with a good deal of ready money. The money originally left was about £25,000.

14686. Is any of that money forthcoming now?—Only £377 7s. 6d. Government 3 per cent stock. In the year 1856 the trustees increased their landed property. After Desroche, Grace was a defaulter in 1845, but the trustees recovered from the bank £3,300 5s. 4d., part of the money that Grace had made away with: the greater part of that money they have since invested in land.

14687. When was that done?—In 1856, when they increased their estate by £397 a year. Then Mr. Collins became agent, and some further defalcations took place. I can only trace £433. I may mention another purchase which was made, namely, the hundred of Evans's Ayrland for £400.

14688. When was that purchased?—About four years ago. It was a good purchase, as far as they got rid of a payment of about £25 a year.

14689. How did the defalcations by the agent occur?—Desroche got some mortgages paid off, and returned, as I understood, part of the money; Grace forged a power of attorney and obtained, and applied to his own use, money that had been invested in Government stock.

14690. Was not that money recovered?—Not the whole of it. The litigation continued to the House of Lords, and eventually it was left to arbitration. Collins had got some money out of the funds under a regular power of attorney; but he did not apply it as desired.

14691. The net result is, that you have increased your rental and diminished your funds?—Yes, the present rental is £1,316 12s. 7d. a year.

14692. What became of Mr. Collins?—He became bankrupt, and is now dead.

14693. Did he leave no assets?—No. I have here all the rentals of the property. The property is a very difficult one to manage. The holdings are so small.

14694. The rental you have professed shows there are altogether 69 tenants?—Yes.

14695. Where are the lands situated?—In the county of Kerry.

14696. Do they all lie together?—They do.

14697. Then the purchase made was one of an adjoining estate?—Yes, the lands purchased dovetailed into the other lands.

14698. How do the tenants hold?—Three, on the whole estate, have leases—Sir John Blunden, a Mr. James Poe, a nephew of my own, and the representatives of Flynn.

14699. James Poe is returned as holding 97 acres and 30 perches, at a rental of £183 7s. 6d.—Yes. He has a lease for 21 years. There was an increase made in his rent, about ten years ago, on the falling in of his former lease.

14700. Were you the agent, at the time of that letting?—I was. I had the land retained. Two valuers were appointed.

14701. Sir John Blunden holds 107 acres at £390 a year. When was his lease made?—At the same time.

14702. Was that land also valued?—Yes.

14703. Were the two valuers appointed by the trustees?—One was appointed by the tenants and one by the trustees.

14704. It appears that the holdings of the remaining 67 tenants vary from 1s. 25s., which is exceptionally small, up to 95 acres. There are a good many whose holdings are between 2 and 14 acres. Of what class is the land?—It is moderately good land. There are good meadows. Fifty or sixty acres would make very comfortable holdings.

14705. Are the tenantry of a poor class?—They are. Their holdings are too small.

14706. Has there been any reduction in the number of tenants?—I have been trying to reduce them, as far as I have been able. Fifteen tenants consolidated their holdings since I became agent.

14707. Do you think that further consolidation is necessary?—It is.

14708. Have you made any regulations about subletting or subdividing?—I do not allow tenants to sublet.

14709. Are you able to prevent it?—I cannot do all I would wish.

14710. Have you taken any steps to have the holdings valued?—No.

14711. Are you a judge of land?—Yes.

14712. Have you ever yourself gone over the holdings, to ascertain how they are left?—I have. I know every field on the property well. I went over all the property within the past week to see what were the tenants' means of paying their rents.

14713. What was the result?—Then that here tillage on the land was preferable than others, but I do not see how those that have not can do so for a while.

14714. It appears from your accounts that one tenant applied for an allowance for timber and stone for building, and had sunk a pump at a cost of £20 for which he asked for no allowance. What is the system of dealing with the tenants' requests for buildings?—They are allowed the price of timber and stone.

14715. How do the trustees manage, as to checking over the charges for these things?—I do that myself.

14716. Do you bring them before the trustees?—Certainly.

14717. You have a small Board—two clergymen, the Mayor and the High Sheriff. Who are the working members?—The Dean and Mr. Rogers.

14718. Does the High Sheriff attend?—The present High Sheriff has not attended, but the Mayor always does.

14719. Has the Mayor noted whether he was a Protestant or a Catholic?—Yes. He is trustee of a great many charities under that Act of Parliament.

14720. Have you any fixed time for presenting your rentals?—Generally in April, after the March fair. As soon as I can get a meeting I pass my account.

14721. Up to what date do you account?—To April.

14722. The last account, which you have professed, appears to have been examined and found correct as to the 4th April, 1873, and is an account from 50th April, 1873, to the 4th April, 1875, showing that you account up to the day of passing your account?—I do.

14723. Do you keep any money on hands?—There is a small balance left in my hands for the purpose.

14724. The rent received appears to have been only up to 26th September, 1874?—Yes. The tenants had been in arrears as long as I know the property, and the trustees consider they ought not to wipe off these arrears, but it is perfectly useless carrying them on.

They have, however, substantially paid me a year's rent out year since I became the agent.

14735. The arrears remaining due on the 20th September, 1878, were £1,594 18s 3d, while those in the previous account had been only £1,447. So that there is an increase of about £200 in the arrears on that account. When did those arrears begin first to be carried forward?—I got no regular account when I became the agent.

14736. How do you give your receipts?—All the arrears due appears upon the receipts.

14737. So there is carried forward against the tenants a year's rent as in arrears?—Yes, and more.

14738. One of your accounts shows a balance on agent's hands £1,183 14s 0½d, and amount received £1,396 12s 7½d, making £3,540 6s 7½d, out of which there are charges for head-rent. Is the estate subject to any head-rent?—Yes, to £290 17s 3d and to £13 13s 1d.

14739. There are some small payments charged, for example, secretary's salary, £20 2s 3d. Is that a rule of the Act of Parliament?

14740. What poundage have you?—The £20 2s 3d covers everything.

14741. There appears to have been £1,000 allocated to the various charities, and a balance of £356 17s 5d left in your hands?—Yes, £200 of that was to be paid out to the different charities leaving £256 in my hands. That account was passed.

14742. Then in substance you made two years' payments out of one year's interest?—No, because we had mailed forward to that account a balance sufficient to pay the £1,000.

14743. You have a distinct account with the Committee of Management of the Asylum?—Yes. After we got the money from the Bank of Ireland the trustees applied to the Court of Chancery as to its distribution. Some of the charities claimed priority, and Master Litten made a report, allowing the priority to one, but the Chancellor set the report aside, and decided that none of them were entitled to any priority.

14744. It appears that he delivered judgment, on the 9th June, 1858, setting out a number of authorities, on the ground of his decision that there was no priority, and that, in case of the fund being deficient, each charity must share proportionately, and in the event of any of the charities, the objects of the trust, ceasing to exist, the portions belonging to that charity should fall into the general fund?—Yes. Some of them have ceased.

14745. The treasurer of the Charitable Society of Kilkenny was entitled to an annuity of £100. Is that still payable?—It is.

14746. The Benevolent Society was also entitled to £100 a year. Does that annuity exist?—Yes.

14747. The Fever Hospital, Kilkenny, was returned as entitled to £100 a year?—That has ceased to get a share of the funds as the Chancellor said it was not entitled to it.

14748. Does the Poor-house in Leixhore receive a share?—Yes.

14749. And the Kilkenny Subscription School which was entitled to an annuity of £100?—Yes.

14750. What other charities were originally entitled to shares?—The Library Society was entitled to £100 a year. The Public Dispensary, which was entitled to £100 a year, has ceased to exist, and so has the Savings' Bank which was allotted £50. There was also an allotment of £50 a year to the Penny Society. There is also the Asylum which is entitled to £500 a year, the marriage portions fund £100 a year, and the apprentice fund £200 a year.

14751. Then £1,350 a year still remains payable?—Yes; and now we have only about £200 a year to meet that.

14752. I do not find in your last account any entry of the dividends on the annuity in the funds?—They were not got in last year, as the gentlemen who held the power of attorney died. The trustees have given a fresh power of attorney to the Provincial Bank and the two years' dividends will appear in the next account.

14753. Have you any map of the lands?—I have, but I did not bring it to Dublin with me to-day.

14754. Do you keep a survey, so as to be able to tell the boundaries of the various holdings?—Yes. There is a very good map of that part of the property which was bought in the Landed Estates Court; and I have a very large map of the other holdings.

14755. Dr. CURRIS.—What would you recommend with reference to the arrears of rent which are due?—We will never get a penny of them, and I have been always asking the trustees to wipe them off, but they seem to think it is not their duty to do so.

14756. LOUIS JAMES FREDERICK.—Are the lettings up to the average value of the land?—They are under the value.

14757. How much under the value?—Not much. Some are under Griffith's valuation, but they are very small holdings.

14758. Do you know the tenement valuation of the whole estate?—I could not say exactly.

14759. Is it above or below the rental?—It is under it; but Mr. Fox's rent and Sir John Plunket's rent bring up the rental.

14760. There appear to be very large deductions made for income tax.—Do you get that money back?—Some of it. At the end of every three years it is repaid to us.

14761. Is it a part of your duty to keep the books?—It is. I have to keep all the accounts and the minute books, the accounts of the Appraiser Fee Fund, and all.

14762. You are an inhabitant of Kilkenny.—Do you know the school?—I do.

14763. Is it working in a useful way now, as far as you can judge?—I think it is little more now than an infant school. The late Dean objected to the resolution of 1875.

14764. You know the Model School?—I do.

14765. Does that supply the sort of education that you think the children would have otherwise got?—There is no doubt it does, but the reason the Dean objected at that time was, that he did not think the children would get the class of education contemplated by EDWARDS, if the change proposed were made.

14766. Do you find there are applicants enough for the apprenticeship fees?—Up to the present there have been.

14767. In reference to Kilkenny College, have you a copy of the grant?—Yes. I produce it. [File Appendix No. 31.]

14768. This provides——That the master shall keep and maintain the school-house, school, and out-houses in comfort, good, and sufficient repair.

Has that been done?—No. The Marquis of Ormonde does not think that the master has complied with the condition to keep the premises in repair, and he is thinking of taking some action about it.

14769. It has been stated that the entire £140 a year paid to the master would not keep the place in repair?—I think it would more than do so, if regularly so applied. It was a fine school in my time. I was educated there myself.

14770. Is it a place which, if properly kept up, would be required in Kilkenny?—Very much, indeed.

14771. To what do you attribute its falling away?—I do not think the present master is energetic enough to manage it. There are a good many boys in Kilkenny who, I believe, are anxious to avail themselves of it. When I was there, there were thirty day boys.

14772. They do not avail themselves of it now?—No, they cannot. There is not the means of instruction.

14773. Dr. CURRIS.—There was at one time a large

Oct. 16, 1877. boarding-school there?—Yes. There were 70 boarders in Dr. Browne's time.
14764. LORD JUSTICE FITZGERALD.—Were there not, at one time, five Fellows of Trinity College, all of whom had been educated at Kilkenny College at the same time?—I am not quite certain of that.

Mr. Charles W. Hamilton,
27.

MR. CHARLES WILLIAM HAMILTON, J.P., re-called.

14765. LORD JUSTICE FITZGERALD.—You are agent over the Wilson's Hospital estate?—I am.

14766. In what counties is it situated?—Westmeath, Longford, Kildare, and Dublin. I produce the present rental.

14767. In the report of the Commissioners of 1857 the acreage of the property was stated to be 5,881a 0r 16p., statute acres, according to a survey made in 1822. Has there been any change in the quantity of land belonging to the charity since that date?—None.

14768. Has any recent survey of it been made?—Parts of the land have been valued, and a new survey was made of two or three townlands.

14769. What is the present rental?—24,161 19s. 8d. a year.

14770. Have there been any new lettings made, since 1857?—Yes, by degrees.

14771. Are they yearly tenancies?—Almost all of them are. We make no lease.

14772. What steps have you taken, in cases of letting, to ascertain the value of the lands?—I have always valued the land myself, except in one instance where there was a dispute, and then I asked to have an independent valuer appointed.

14773. Was there an increase made in the rent on that occasion?—Very slight, indeed.

14774. The rent appears to be very much the same as the assessment valuation?—It is a very little over it.—I think in general about 10 per cent. The lettings are very moderate.

14775. Do you think the property is let below what would be the ordinary letting value?—No. I think the rent is the fair letting value, and I have often stated as an instance of moderate letting that we kept almost all our tenants during 1847 and 1848, and did not suffer in our income. We did not lose in those years of distress more than 5 per cent.

14776. In the last rental you have furnished, which is made up to the 1st November, 1877, are not the arrears on the estate returned as only £216 5s. 7½d.?—Yes, and that is merely an accidental arrear.

14777. These are the rents usually fully paid up?—Yes.

14778. What is your usual period for accounting?—The last Monday in November is, by Act of Parliament, the time at which I have to account.

14779. The rental you have produced appears to be up to the 1st November, 1877. That was passed, as I understand, in November, 1878?—Yes. There is a hanging gale allowed on the property.

14780. You furnished, at the same time, an account current, beginning October 2, 1877, and ending Nov. 1, 1878, so that your outgoings are charged for a year later than the rental. Does the hanging gale and the half-year's rent in process of collection account for that?—Yes.

14781. Do you make any fixed allowances to the tenants?—No. Half the poor-rate is the only allowance they get.

14782. Is not the estate subject to a rent charge?—Yes, both to quit rent and rent charge.

14783. In the account you have produced this item occurs.—Granted to Mr. S. McCullagh for valuation £20 8s. 3d. What was that for?—I have always valued the lands myself, but since the Land Act I find that, where some question may arise in the future as to compensation or anything of that kind, the agent's valuation is not likely to be worth anything in court, and that has driven me in some cases—as far as I possibly can—to get an independent valuation. The case, to which the only two I have read refer, was one of considerable magnitude, the increase being nearly £150 a year.

14784. Was that letting made on the expiration of a lease?—Yes.

14785. There is also, in your account, a charge of £7 10s. half-year's salary to a bailiff?—Yes.

14786. The account also contains this item.—“Resisted Rev. H. T. Ringwood, surchise for one year ending 31st July, 1878, £3,686 17s. 2½d.” Does that include the terms chargeable to the charity?—Everything; but I have nothing whatever to say to that expenditure. I send Mr. Ringwood, whenever he requires it, £300 an account, and he accounts to the trustees in November. I have here a statement of all the remittances made to him, since 1853.

14787. In your accounts I find this entry.—“To credit of improvement account, one year's allowance, £200.” What is that account?—From the very beginning there were certain little improvements to be done, such as drains, &c., and the trustees thought it was satisfactory to give me the control of £200 a year for that purpose. I pass vouchers for it. There is an order in the book giving me leave to spend money on buildings if absolutely necessary.

14788. You keep that upon a separate account?—Yes.

14789. The agriculturist's year's salary is returned at £10. What are his duties?—He was always called either bailiff or agriculturalist. Formerly we employed an agriculturalist distinct from the bailiff; so when the distressed times came I thought it better the boys should be taught farming, and as we were rich at that time it was thought desirable we should do it.

14790. I believe you take no part in the management of the institution?—I do not.

14791. Have the rents this year, up to the present, been satisfactorily paid?—Very satisfactorily. I may mention that whenever our expenditure was not very large, and when we had more than was really wanted for keeping the institution going, I invested it. In that way we have a large sum invested.

14792. The interest thereon is returned in your account as £157 13s. 5d.—what is the investment?—£8,240 17s., Government Three per Cent. Stock, which is invested in the names of the trustees, but I have a power of attorney to receive the dividends.

14793. There is a damage charge payable out of the property?—Yes.

14794. What is the present letting of Dares?—£692.

14795. It is stated in the report of the Inspectors of Estates to the Royal Commissioners of 1857:—

“Dares contains 461a. 2r. 8p., and is all, except a very few acres, let to one tenant, who uses as much of it as he holds in his own hands as a pasture farm, &c which is well adapted. The trustees expended £225 3s. 6d. two years ago in draining this land, about 70 plantation acres of the plantation has been sown to four or five hundred— a new lease for 21 years of Dares was duly granted, to commence from 1st May last, at a rent of £229 per annum, being £20 6s. 4d. higher than the former rent. It still seems moderately let, as in the present valuation it is valued at £245 12s. including the railway.”

That townland is now let at a higher rent?—Yes. £692 is the increased rent, which was fixed on the expiration of the lease to which you have referred.

14796. Is that land still occupied partly by under-tenants?—The tenant has two or three under-tenants, who hold about 7 acres.

14797. The estate Inspector also reported:—

“There is one plot of ground in the village (Ballybeg) containing 2 acres and 3 perches, plantation measure, which is marked as ‘Frogman’s nap,’ made in 1622, as belonging to Wilson’s Hospital and being at that time held by Hans Herndon, Esq. The plot is at present occupied by a person called Maguire, who is stated to pay rent to Mr.

James Haas Hamilton's agent, but no rent is now received by the Hospital out of this plot of ground. I have no doubt that when Mr. Hamilton's attention is called to this matter he will do whatever is right in it."

Do you know anything of that holding?—I know that there are two or three holdings there that we have never been able to ascertain. Mr. Meeney, the adjutant, states that they cannot be identified.

14795. Then you have not got anything out of that holding since?—Nothing, although we have taken all the pains we could, first through Mr. Kyle, and then through Mr. Meeney to ascertain it.

14799. The amounts paid by the charity vary a good deal from 1873 to the present time. How is the variation caused?—Partly by building, and partly by the enormous price of meat and other food. I may mention that at present the trustees are very anxious about raising the character of the education. They have employed Mr. FitzGerald, the Head Inspector of the National Board, to report to them. We have got a very full report which will be brought before the Archbishop and Bishop in November, and I expect a very good improvement will be made in the character of the education. I produce the original minute book of the charity which is very interesting.

14800. This minute book goes back to 1763?—Yes, and it comes down to the present time. It has been successively under the management of my grandfathers, my father, myself, and now of my son.

14801. The minute record meetings of the trustees as follows:—December 1, 1875—Present: the Primate, and the Bishop of Meath; November 28, 1876—Present: the Primate, and the Bishop of Kilmore; November 28, 1877—Present: the Primate, and the Bishop of Kilmore, November 26, 1878—Present: the Archbishop of Dublin, and the Bishop of Meath, January 29, 1879, a special meeting held for the consideration of the taking an opinion as to allocating a grant for the stipend of Loney Church.—Present: the Archbishop of Dublin, the Bishop of Meath, and the Bishop of Kilmore, when this resolution was passed:—

"Ordered, that whereas, the persons resident in Wilson's Hospital, do habitually attend Divine Worship in the parish church of Loney, and constitute the larger part of the congregation in the church, and whereas, we believe it for the benefit of such persons, that an able and efficient minister be obtained for such church, which cannot be done without a grant from the funds of the hospital, resolved,—that £50 be paid by the trustees of the hospital, to the Rev. R. S. D., as a subscription from the hospital to such Minister, 1879."

—What was the authority for that expenditure?—I took the Attorney-General's opinion as to whether we were justified in expending a certain sum towards repaying the church then in a ruinous state, and in making this payment, and he said we were.

14802. Is that a parish church?—It is.

14803. Is it any part of the property of the charity?—No, but by Act of Parliament the children are obliged to attend that church.

14804. Is there any chapel belonging to the establishment?—There is a chapel in which they are obliged to attend full service every week day, and also on the Lord's Day as often as there shall be no service in the parish church of Loney.

14805. And you now pay £50 a year, and propose to spend a sum of money in keeping the church in repair, so as to have the service in the parish church, and avoid the necessity of having to fall back upon your own chapel?—Exactly, because the chapel is for the week-day service. The Attorney-General gave a very cautious opinion about that. He said he would recommend the trustees to do it only pro hoc vice, and to renew it every year so as not to entail on their successors the payment of the £50 a year. The entry on the building he said they might very fairly mistake.

14806. How much do you propose to expend on the building?—That will be decided at the next meeting, but I think £150 will be the outside. The neighbouring owners and residents are all subscribing, some of them as much as £50. The proposed change will be most useful so far as the way in which the boys are at present seated, the clergyman cannot see them, and they sometimes indulge in playing during service. The Bishop of Meath regards it as of immense importance that the clergyman should have the boys within sight.

14807. Who is the chaplain?—Mr. Ringwood is chaplain and superintendent of the schools.

14808. Upwards of £1,900 stock was sold out in 1868. What was that for?—For building. We have now to consider the great question of the abatement of the rents. I think the tenants will pay their rents; but we are going to lay out as much money as we can on drainage.

REV. GEORGE A. CHADWICK, B.D., EXAMINED.

Rev. George
A. Chadwick,
B.D.

14809. LORD JUSTICE FITZGERALD.—You are the Rector of Arragh?—I am. I was away from home when the Commissioners were in Arragh, and their letter did not reach me in time to enable me to attend before them.

14810. I believe, as Rector, you have acted as trustee of the Declincourt school?—Yes, and also of the Mall school.

14811. What is the history of these two schools?—Mr. Declincourt, the widow of a former Dean of Arragh, founded a school in an outlying corner of the city as which she held property. To support the school she made over property to the Primate. The executive work is in the hands of the Primate and myself, who are both trustees. Mrs. Declincourt's object was the foundation of a Protestant boarding school, in which the children were to be taught linen work and things of that sort; but in 1836 the whole charity was remodelled, and in pursuance of a report of Master Heen's it was settled to be—

"A free and open day school for children of both sexes, to be therein taught the elementary parts of useful learning, and instructed in the principles of the established Church in the system then adopted by National schools of England."

That is now utterly impracticable to work. No human being now knows what the system then was. It approximated to the Kildare-street system which itself is almost dead. The scheme settled in 1836 also provided—

"That in case the funds should permit it, a plain and wholesome report should be daily provided for the scholars," but with liberty to the trustees.

"In case they should find it inconvenient, or to exceed the income of the charity, to give in lieu thereof rewards, books and clothing at their discretion to the most deserving scholars."

"The plain and wholesome report" was very soon given up. Indeed I do not know how long it lasted anything of the sort has been given, but I submit it is no transgression of the order, which gives us free liberty to substitute rewards of books and clothing. Master Heen's report also states, that—

"A certain number of girls at the discretion of the trustees should be selected by them from time to time to be advanced on account of good conduct or literary improvement to the station of boarders, the number to be from time to time at the discretion of the trustees, and to be clothed, maintained, and educated out of the funds, and as opportunity should offer to be placed out in suitable situations, such girls to perform the work of the kitchen and of the household in general, and to be instructed in the various branches of needlework and domestic-making and to assist the mistress in the superintendence and management of the female school."

Ever since 1836 the trustees exercised that discretion by not having any girls as boarders; but we have spent between £40 and £50 a year in clothing, and instead of the old system of teaching the children trades we give apprentices fees to apprentice them to trades. In reference to the subject of clothing I wish to refer to

Oct. 15, 1878.
Rev. George
A. Chalmers,
M.P.

The evidence given by Mr. Smith in Armagh, who, according to the newspaper report of his evidence stated—

"I know when I came to Armagh first, members of the children attending the schools appeared at church every Sunday in the school clothing, and, I believe, that for a considerable time the children have not attended there thus, or been clothed at all until very lately."

That would imply that £40 or £50 a year had been misapplied. The basis for that statement was that in 1874 an attack of scarletina broke out. The master lost a child, and we closed the school for awhile and whitewashed it. It had been up to that time the habit to award clothes to all the children that put in a certain number of attendances. However, I was of opinion that one of the reasons for the reduced attendance at the school, might be the wearing of livery or being persuaded to church and obliged to sit together in ordinary clothes. The master having informed me that there were in this particular year no attendances, reaching the level to entitle the children to clothes, I proposed to give no clothes that year and see how it would work. In that year therefore we gave no clothes, and the numbers in the school fell off so that we found we must resume giving the clothes, but after that we did not persuade the children as ordinary, or require them to sit together in church. I produce my ledger of all outlay of every kind, and it shows that the highest figure to be found in the old ledger has been reached, giving us figures the amount spent on clothes.

14812 Do you note the attendance of the children at church?—I cannot say that I do. Some of them are Presbyterians who, of course, do not come to my church. Some come to Sunday school, and are looked after otherwise, but they are not looked after as the pupils of the Dissident school. The gentlemen to whose evidence I have been referring is also reported to have said—

"I believe the Dissident schools were placed under the National Board more than a year before the petition was filed in court at all."

Now, in reference to that, I have to correct an error made by my own attorney—namely, that I asked for the removal of the schools from their present locality to Callan-street. I have mentioned that Mrs. Drelicourt freed the schools in the corner of the city in which she had an interest. That street is now extremely British; but, in the same district, within two minutes' walk of it there is an unendowed school, called Callan-street school, in a Protestant neighbourhood, and under the National Board. It occurred to me that the best thing we could possibly do with the Dissident school—which has large funds, but is not a successful school, the attendance, though considerable, being a paper attendance—would be to affiliate to it the Callan-street school, as an infant school, using the latter as a sort of feeder, in order to keep the Protestant children together in their own neighbourhood, whilst they were infants, and compelling their attendance there as entitling them to apprentice fees. Therefore, what I asked was that the Callan-street school might be put upon the Dissident trust. The money to do what I wanted, and much more, was to be procured by getting the Dissident school under the National Board: there was no proposal to remove the present school. Now, as to the assertion, made by the gentlemen to whose evidence I have adverted, that the schools were, as a matter of fact, put under the National Board a year before I asked leave to put them under the National Board, the facts were these: I had applied to Dr. Patterson to have the protestants arranged for putting the school under the National Board. I have here the petition which was presented to the Chancellor, in reference to the proposed changes in this school, and in it there are certainly phrases which look as if I was asking leave to put the school under the Board, but I hold, and said so in my petition, that I had the authority to do that, and as Mr. Patterson, after some time, said the school should be at once placed under the Board, I did it; and in my affidavit in support of the petition (which was filed about the date which Mr. Smith mentioned, namely, a year after the filing of the petition), I expressly stated the schools were already under the Board. What I wanted was liberty to work the two conjointly, which was the true meaning of my words. The prayer of the trustees' petition is as follows:—

"Your petitioners, therefore, pray your lordships to order that they may be at liberty to induce the said infant school in Callan-street, within the limits of the said trust funds, and that they may be at liberty to place all said schools under the National system of Education, and to enable the attendance in the management and self-direction of the said schools, as heretofore suggested, with such other alterations, and regulations as may be necessary for carrying the purposes aforesaid into effect."

But on turning to my affidavit, referred to as filed "a year afterwards," it will be found that I then stated—

"The schools in the Dissident schools are at present increased in the estimation of the National Board, in which also the children in the Callan-street school are included. The direction to follow the system adopted by the National Board in England in the year 1826, cannot now be complied with, that system having long passed away, and its methods and appliances having become obsolete. An attempt to follow it at the present date would be frustrated by the changes of professional inspection, even if not otherwise. It was in order to approximate as nearly as possible to the working of the system, that the schools were subsequently placed under the Church Education Society, which has now consented to its future to afford inspection or guidance. While the school was nominally under its control, it was for years without any control or inspection, except by the trustees."

14813 Has any order been made by the National Board taking the schools upon their bills?—Certainly. Just about the date the petition was presented, the schools had been placed under the National Board.

14814. The petition was filed in 1878, and the affidavit you referred to is dated 28th April, 1879.—Yes.

14815. Your petition contains this paragraph:—

"I am advised that the alterations aforesaid are within the scope and meaning of the trusts as so aforesaid imposed in them, but before acting thereon the trustees are desirous of obtaining the sanction of the Honorable Court, pursuant to the Act passed in the 32nd year of his late Majesty King Geo. III., chap. 101."

—Yes, Mr. Smith, according to the newspaper report of his evidence, appears to suggest that the whole thing had been understood. He is reported to have said—

"Of course the Primates and the Bishops had the absolute right as the sole trustees, to apply by petition to the Chancellor without being called upon to give any notice to any one in the town; but that the application to the Court was not opposed, neither very little when no one knew of it till after it was made. I believe the trustees' salaries as are paid by the National Board, and not by the endowment. I know when I came to Armagh first, members of the children attending the schools appeared at church every Sunday in the school clothing, and, I believe, that for a considerable time the children have not attended there thus, or been clothed at all until very lately."

14816 It is right to say that the report that you are reading from the newspaper evidence of Mr. George Hill Smith appears not to be a report of what was taken down in shorthand at the time at all, but something in the nature of a carefully prepared story. This is the report of what actually was said—

"I have heard what has been stated here to-day by Mr. Chalmers, and I do not altogether agree with him. He asked whether the proposed made in the Vice-Chancellor met with any local opposition, and he said not. The fact was, that no opportunity was given, as far as I understood, to any person to express an opinion on the subject, as I first heard of it in the town was the report of the application to the Vice-Chancellor, which appeared in the public papers."

Do you wish to make any observation as to that?—Instead of the application being without anyone in the town knowing of it, when I heard an angry remark in the town that I was going to shut up the school and sell at a great bargain, I brought the matter before the Select Vestry.

14817 Mr. Smith also said:—

"I attended in the Vice-Chancellor's Court when the matter was on, and my recollection is not exactly in accordance with what Mr. Cochrane mentioned. The first time the matter came before the Court an objection was made that a copy of the petition had not been sent to the Commissioners of Charitable Donations and Bequests. The Vice-Chancellor, referring to the summons returned under Master Henry's order, in 1834, asked some questions as to whether the recommendations of that scheme had been carried out, and how the funds of the endowment had been applied in the intermediate period; and obviously there was no information on the subject on the face of the petition before him. The matter stood over for further inquiry, and when it came on, a fortnight or three weeks afterwards, counsel for the Attorney-General attended, and stated the proposition made by the petition. The Vice-Chancellor intimated his opinion, but said he would make any order which he was satisfied as to how the fund was applied between 1834 and 1839. That occurred in the first of the present year; and so far as I know the matter has not been brought before the Court since."

Is that so?—It is not so as to the dates I have already mentioned.

14818 It was not brought before the court until after those affidavits were filed?—That is so. There is another matter to which I want to refer, namely, that as to Mr. Strong and his family. His daughter is the present mistress. His wife had filled the place, and it became necessary that she should be provided in somehow or other, as she could not pass the contention to qualify as a teacher under the National Board. We virtually persuaded her off with the stipulation that she should assist in the school when necessary. She finally still drew £70 a year. They did formerly draw £90.

14819 Out of the trust fund?—Certainly. I have all the accounts vouched by the manager of one of the bank houses. For my own satisfaction, I got him to vouch my accounts. In order to induce Strong to go under the National Board, I said, "You shall have as much, independently of all the profits from the Board," and as he now gets a salary from the Board, as well as what we pay him, he is much better off.

14820 Did the necessity for persuading off Mrs. Strong arise from your wanting to put the school under the National Board?—Yes.

14821 You thought she was not qualified to pass the examination?—She was one of those teachers who passed well enough before the new system.

14822 She was good enough for the Church Education Society, but not good enough for the National Board?—Quite so.

14823 Then the pension, in fact, was to continue to pay a lady, who, though good enough for the Church Education Society, was not good enough for the National Board?—To pension her off.

14824 Mr. Smith, in his evidence, said:—

"The proposition was to close the Dedmore school, and send the children to the Collen-street school, the fact being that twelve months before that, the Dedmore school had been put under the National Board, with the immediate effect of refusing the endowment from the payment of the salaries paid to the teachers, and throwing the payment of those on the National Board. The nearest the Dedmore school was brought under the National Board the teachers became the payees of the National Board, and then occurred twelve months before the petition for a new scheme was brought before the Court. Now, if we were to believe public report in the town, the proposition is to close Collen-street school altogether, and then as regarded as an index of their set price on with the petition, the ground of which was the deplorable condition of the Collen-street schools. Then, if the Collen-street schools are closed, the whole foundation of the petition falls to the ground."

Is that so?—That is simply one of those things which may be said in the town, but there is no truth in it. We have as large an attendance of girls in Collen-street as at Dedmore, although the one has a large endowment, and everything done by clothing and apprenticing; while the other school is virtually starved.

14825 Your proposition is, instead of wanting to close the Collen-street school, to run it as an infant school to work with the Dedmore?—Quite so. In any case, I do not intend to close the Collen-street school. I intend to make the parish pay for it, if I cannot get it allotted to Dedmore. If there is any foundation for the statement it may be this that I said to someone, "You must pay for it yourselves, as there is no endowment, or it must be shut up."

14826 You closed, for a year, to supply clothes in the Dedmore school, in order to try the effect?—Quite so. There is no doubt, as a pauper school, it is doing well; but there is no doubt also, that the endowment of £210 a year ought to give us a great deal more than we are getting from Dedmore. On the other hand Mrs. Dedmore intended the £210, not merely for a school, but for the relief of the poor, and that is being done in the best way by clothing worthy and steady children, and apprenticing them. Passing to the Mall schools, as something was said with reference to money given to the schools by the Primate, I wish to correct a possible misconception. The present Primate and his predecessor, each gave £100 a year, but that amount was simply handed over to the rector for the time being, for the benefit of the Mall and Collen-street schools. I saw the Primate yesterday, and he said his wish always was that the money was to be divided as parished most desirable.

14827 Mr. Smith further said:—

"The female teacher had, at that time, from the endowment, a salary of £30; but the moment the school was put under the National Board her salary from the endowment was reduced, and she entered as a teacher under the National Board, entitled to £25 a year from that Board. All that got from the endowment for a couple of years afterwards was £16 a year instead of £30, and all she has at present is £8, the remainder being met from the National Board payment. She went up for examination for a higher class, and she succeeded. The moment she did through the contribution she received from the endowment was reduced, by the same amount exactly, as that the last quoted by her witnesses in improving her own standing. This was in fact putting a premium upon ignorance. . . . a great many people in the city felt aggrieved on her account."

Was that so?—I do not believe so; because no such thing happened.

14828 What did happen?—The late Primate many years ago joined the National Board, and a vigorous agitation about the National Board was started at the time. The then rector held strongly to the Church Education Society, and as long as he lived the present Primate continued him £100 a year donation to the schools, in order not to drive the Rector into a corner, and appear to endeavour to secure him, from being short of funds, to join the Board. But when the late Rector died, the Primate informed the parishioners, that he did not mean to pay it any longer, but he has undertaken to pay £10 a year by way of pension to the old master during his lifetime. The £100 a year was shared by all the schools. I put them all under the National Board with the intention of economising, so that the teacher might be provided by the Board with that salary which we could no longer give. I then sent Miss Cowan, the mistress, who is a thoroughly efficient teacher, to Marlborough-street to be married, and until we ascertained in what class she might be placed, I managed to give her £10 a year salary, in order to cover any possible loss which might be incurred by the change. She looked upon that £10 as provisional only, and when we saw what salary she was to get from the Board, we finally arranged the various salaries, and here was done at £5. But since then she has risen to the first-class grade under the Board, and has got large recommendations. It is absurd to suppose that we tax this in any way.

14829 It appears that, in 1857, the Dedmore and Mall schools together, had an income of over £300 a year?—You must not confuse the Dedmore and the Mall funds in any way, as they are perfectly distinct.

14830 Have they always been kept separate?—Yes; but the Mall and Collen-street schools accounts were never kept separate. The Mall school is entitled to £35 to 8d., and £22 1s 4d., and out of those sums we give Mr. Simmons £30 a year, Miss Cowan, £5, and two other teachers £8 and £6, respectively. Miss Curran also gets an allowance for a servant, to keep the place clean. And as to the suggestion, which was made, that she was being deprived by my arrangements of the benefits she gained for herself under the National Board, she admitted to me, yesterday, that her stipend last year came to more than double what it was the year before she went under the National Board.

14831. What are the other expenses of the Mill School, in addition to the salaries you have mentioned?—The payment for a servant comes to £8 a year; there is also £8 rent for a piece of land which the master has the use of. Then there are small sums for fuel, repairs, and taxes, for four schools. As a matter of fact, we have been starving the schools in some respects, in hopes of paying off a debt, which I incurred in extensive repairs, when we were putting the schools under the Board, but we have not made a penny head-way towards that.

14832. This passage occurs in Mr. Smith's evidence:—

"(14516) Do not you think it hard on the legal taxpayer to be obliged to contribute to a purpose for which an endowment was given?—No doubt of it; and that is the basis to the circumstance that almost every primary school in Armagh is put under the National system. I have not been able to meet with anybody in Armagh who could tell what has become of the endowment."

Do you wish to say anything as to that?—He never made any inquiries of me. I do not like it to be supposed that my accounts have been a mystery of inquiry. About three months ago, I took an opportunity of bringing before the Select Vestry an account of every penny of church-vestry-money of every kind I had, many of them took notice of it, and if nobody could tell Mr. Smith, that was because he did not ask me, or the Select Vestry.

14833. Dr. Curran.—Is there anything else with regard to Mr. Smith's evidence, on which you wish to observe?—There is another point with regard to the Mill school, on which Mr. Smith is technically right, namely, in saying that the Collan-street school has been treated as a sharer with the Mill school in those matters, but I consider him utterly wrong in speaking of the Church-walk school on that account. The Church-walk school, which adjoins the other—they have a common play-ground—was built simply as an enlargement, to accommodate the infant school. I do not think any red tape could be more ridiculous than to speak of the Church-walk school as a separate school, because it is part and parcel of the same establishment.

14834. Dr. HARR.—Is the Church-walk school merely an enlargement of the Mill schools?—The Church-walk schools were built considerably later than the others and as an enlargement of them, and the infants were removed there, in order to give the advantage of a separate girls' school and a separate boys' school; and it would be absurd to suppose that the endowment for the schools on the Mill was being robbed, when portion was given to the infant school behind them.

14835. The two were always supported out of the same fund?—Always. As regards Collan-street school, which has at a considerable distance, I have no doubt that the reason why the accounts of the funds of the Collan street and Mill schools were kept together was, that the Primate was paying £100 a year for educational purposes, and that sum very much more than covered the Collan-street school expenses, and therefore there was no reason for separating the accounts. I went on in the same way, because I received for distribution two wind-falls of £50 each, one a legacy and the other a donation, and I applied them to the schools as the best way of expending them, and I had also the Primate's former £100 a year to take into account for the Collan-street school; and although technically I quite agree that I should have separated the accounts, I do not believe that any money has really gone to Collan-street school for which I could not produce, if necessary, a written authority for so devoting it. I never intended to keep the accounts permanently together; because, as I was explaining, I have an application in Chancery to put the Collan-street school on another footing altogether. It was merely that I delayed making the change, until I could make a permanent arrangement.

14836. The Drinmore school has a pretty large endowment derived from land—what is the nature of that property?—There is a property at Leganure producing £26 2s. 6d.; there are townlands producing £38 2s. 6d.; and there are two townlands in the county Down producing £93 6s. 6d., making a total of £258 11s. 6d., out of which is to be deducted rent and agent's fees. The available endowment, you may say, is £310 a year. In Master Hunt's report in 1836, it is mentioned that the rents of that time were excessive, and they had to be reduced. The rents are fluctuating.

14837. Are the lands let on long leases at present?—I do not think the lands are let on leases at all. I think I ought to mention that a Mr. Cleland, who is liable to a rentcharge of £92 6s. 6d. a year, charged on a good property in the county of Down, called Stonemont Castle, has disputed the payment, and there is a year's rentcharge now due by him; but, I believe, he will resume payment, without our being obliged to have recourse to law.

14838. The remainder consists chiefly of house property?—No. The house property, including the town park, produces only £28 15s. 6d. a year, and consists of two houses in Armagh. There is also the Leganure property producing £98 2s. 6d.; it is a valuable farm outside Dunganess.

14839. Do you know how that property is let?—From year to year.

14840. Does the school hold it in perpetuity?—Formerly the Dean and Chapter held part of it for their own purposes, and part for educational purposes, but I purchased our share of the property from the Temperance Commissioners in perpetuity for the school. I paid the Church Temperance Commissioners £100 10s. 6d., and I collected out of that £111 7s. in the town. I have laid out in permanent repairs £177. I have paid the Temperance Commissioners over £118, and I have still £100 in hand. So that the assertion that I am wasting the property in any way seems odd.

14841. Is the Drinmore school limited to children of one religious denomination?—The trust is distinctly, that there shall be a Protestant master, and that the children shall be instructed in the Christian religion, and that the school was to be conducted according to the English National system as in 1836. It was then put under the Church Education Society, which, I take it, was the nearest approximation to that system, and was thoroughly Protestant, the state religion and the state education being one, at that time. There is no doubt about the schools having been intended for the Protestants of the poorer class. I think I might mention in what manner I expended the money arising from the endowment between September, 1873, and September, 1879.—Furniture, that is master, &c., cost £70; permanent repairs, £112; taxes, £2 12s. 6d.; apprentice fees, £11; fuel and oil, £14 8s. 6d.; the clothes, about which I have given evidence, £39 7s. 6d.; and machines, £9 7s. 6d., making a total of £255 15s. 6d. I would like to add, as there seems to be some doubt about it, that I have collected how much we gave in clothes for the last five years—In 1875 the amount was, £40 12s. 11d.; in 1877, £38 7s. 6d.; in 1878, £41 11s. 3d.; and in 1879-80, £49 7s. 6d.

14842. Dr. Curran.—What funds are there in hand at present?—I have not all the books here with me, but, I believe, the amount, allowing for outstanding bills, is £80 3s. 6d. I have already mentioned that I had paid over £139 for the purchase of a perpetuity, and have expended £112 in permanent repairs.

14843. Were those sums all paid out of the savings of former years?—Yes, I was indebted a balance of £171 when I was first appointed, which had then accumulated.

14844. Is the house in good repair at present?—The house is in thorough internal repair. I put in new floors and new doors, but it would still require that all the balance in hand should be spent on it. The external plastering is very bad, and the builder has reported to me that before that is done all the window frames must be replaced. Besides the £112 spent this year on permanent repairs, I did what the Commissioners of Charitable Bequests say I had no power to do—but I did not know it at the time—I altered the water apparatus, the school being too near the perry. If it were not for those permanent repairs we would have a considerable surplus, and even if we do get into debt we will work out of it easily. There is a surplus over working expenses, but not sufficient to maintain a boarding school. The apparatus fees are more formidable. They are little more than a dose for the parents when the child leaves school. I intend, when the expenses I have mentioned are over, to raise the amount of each fee, so as to make them what they are called.

14845. How do the funds for the Mall school stand?—When we put the Mall school under the Board, they insisted that we should resort to large outlays. We got into debt then, and never worked out of it since. But if we got rid of Colman-street school, which must shift for itself in some way or another, and, in my opinion, has no right to be a charge upon the Mall school funds at all, then the endowment will meet the expenses of the Mall school.

14846. As I understood, you and the Mall endowments were not charged with the Colman-street schools?—I said there had been two windfalls of £50 apiece; but I cannot reckon on any more.

14847. How much is the debt on the Mall school?—It is £145. However, there is no real reason for being at all uneasy about the Mall school. I do not think the house generally is in bad repair, although in the ceiling of the porch there is a breach, and the house is too small for the master. We undertook to pay the master £30 a year. The school was in such a wretched state when I got it that we had to tempt a good master, and the inspector of schools told me he was worth £260 a year, but we cannot increase his salary.

14848. Do you know of any other endowed schools in Arragh?—There are Presbyterian schools.

14849. Is there not a children's school?—I do not know where the funds come from by which the children's school is supported, though I am a member of the Chapter of the Cathedral. The question of where the money comes from would never come before us.

14850. Do you desire to add anything further?—I think the assertion about the Royal School, that the treatment of the day boys by the boarders amounted to persecution ought to be fully contradicted. When I was in school, with boarders and day boys, there was frequently a shout of "Hurrah for the boarders!"—or "Hurrah for the day boys!" And, I suppose, that is so everywhere; but there is nothing to make the position of a respectable boy attending Arragh Royal School, as a day boy, in any degree uncomfortable, and anything that does exist is boys' play. If a mad were sent there, he would be ridiculed—not as a day boy, but as a cad. Some of the masters have houses in which boys board, in order to attend the school as day boys, and some of the most respectable ladies in Arragh also have boys boarding with them, in order to attend there as day boys. I know numbers of them intimately—boys whom I like, and I would send my own boy there as a day boy, without any hesitation, if he were old enough.

14851. There are residents in Arragh who send their sons there as day boys?—Several; and they take their full share of boarders. Persons who do not like to send their children as boarders, for fear they would be laughed about, send them to live with relatives or others in the town, in order to attend as day boys. I saw only say I never heard a complaint.

14852. Are you aware whether or not they remain playing with the boarders?—I do not know at all. I utterly disbelieve that if a boy were persecuted it is because he was a day boy.

14853. I believe there are very few schools in which there is not some jealousy between boarders and day boys. You do not believe there is anything beyond the ordinary jealousy that exists in other schools?—I am quite sure there is not anything ill-considered.

[The Commissioners assented].

THIRTY-SEVENTH DAY.—TUESDAY, OCTOBER 28, 1879.—10 o'CLOCK, A.M.

Oct. 28, 1879.

In the Courthouse, Cork.

Present.—The EARL OF ROSSE, Chairman; RICHARD O'SHAUGHNESSY, Esq., M.P.; and ANDREW SEARLE HART, Esq., LL.B.; with JAMES CREED MURPHY, Esq., LL.D., Secretary.

Mr. JAMES CREED MURPHY, examined.

Mr. James C. Murphy.

14854. CHAIRMAN.—You are the head master, agent, and secretary, to the Stephen's-worship Blue Coat Hospital?—Yes, I am the only master.

14855. How long have you held your position?—I have been master upwards of twenty-two years, and agent for the last five years. Under a scheme of the Court of Chancery, I have also been appointed to act as secretary, but without any extra emolument. I produce the Minute Book of the Board which commences in 1849, and with the exception of the first few entries all the rest are in my own handwriting.

14856. The charity is managed by a Board of Governors?—Yes.

14857. How are they appointed?—The ten gentlemen who were acting under the trusts at the time of the completion of the Chancery scheme were continued in their position, on the report of the Master in Chancery, but they have all died. The scheme, however, empowers the surviving trustees to elect others in vacuous cases by death or otherwise.

14858. What is the date of the Chancery scheme?—1831.

14859. How often do the Board meet?—They held quarterly meetings on the 1st of March, the 1st of June, 1st of September, and 1st of December, and at other times for special purposes. Five members constitute a quorum.

14860. Dr. HART.—Are the Trustees themselves the Governors, or do they name the Governors?—In former days, the late Common Council were empowered to act as Governors, and by the foundation Deed the Trustees were the Mayor and Constables of the Merchants' Staple. After the late Council ceased to exist it became necessary to apply to the Court of Chancery to sanction a scheme, to confirm the trusts in the surviving Members of the Old Council as Governors and Trustees.

14861. The Trustees now have the government of the institution?—Yes. The number of Governors is fixed at ten.

14862. CHAIRMAN.—Although five is the regular quorum, it appears that at the last two meetings there were only three present, and yet business seems to have been transacted, cheques drawn, and so on.—How was that?—Some gentlemen live at a distance from town, and it is not easy, at times, to get them together, but they attend very well and we usually have five present, and sometimes more. We had the cheque drawn in order to prevent things getting into arrears, and we get the attention afterwards of other members.

14663. How are the cheques signed?—By Union of the Trustees.

14664. What does the property of the school consist of?—It consists of two denominations of land, the one called the "Spital" lands adjoining the establishment, the other denomination is East and West Ballymough.

14665. How are these lands held?—Under lease in perpetuity made about 1712.

14666. How do you collect the rents?—Half-yearly, the gross rental is a few shillings over £420.

14667. Has the school any other property?—Yes. There is a sum of £300 Irish in the hands of the Corporation, the interest on which is paid half-yearly.

14668. Do you lodge the rents as they are collected?—I lodge the rents as they are collected in the Bank of Ireland, and everything is then paid for by cheque.

14669. How does the account now stand?—In September last, the balance in bank was £191 7s 1d, to which I have since added £10, and three payments amounting to £86 8s 3d. have been made, leaving a balance of £114 18s. 10d. in bank.

14670. How is the income of the charity expended?—The master has a contract with the Trustees at £16, Irish, a year, for each boy; in fact it has been the practice from time immemorial that he should have a certain sum to maintain and clothe each boy. I find everything for the establishment with the exception of bed and table linen. I have also £25 Irish a year as master, which amount is fixed both by the Chartery scheme and by the Foundation deed.

14671. What is the present number of pupils in the school?—Sixteen; but in consequence of the great rise in the prices of everything which has taken place in recent times, I get the allowance for eighteen boys. The Trustees conceive that they are empowered under the scheme to make this arrangement.

14672. Is the building kept in repair?—It is in very good repair now.

14673. What fund is there to meet that?—The general funds. We have to pay poor rates which are very high of late, and as the surplus available for repairs, and all other expenses, would not come to £10 a year.

14674. How are the pupils chosen?—Each Trustee has the right, in turn, of nominating a boy whose name is then submitted to the Board.

14675. What qualifications are required?—They must be legitimate born, and as a rule the children of citizens of the Protestant faith, originally as by law established, now called the Church of Ireland.

14676. The school is entirely confined to children of the Church of Ireland?—It is exclusively Protestant, under both the deed and the scheme.

14677. What is the course of instruction?—The course of instruction is necessarily very plain—it is primary—reading, writing, geography, grammar, and such subjects; however, I have myself from time to time instructed smart boys in the rudiments of Latin, and some of them have afterwards improved themselves, and become clergymen, others have filled very important posts in various parts of the world; perhaps no institution has been more successful as a rule.

14678. What books do you read?—The National School Class Books.

14679. What system of inspection is there?—There is no regular Inspector, but from time to time the Trustees have had an examination conducted by an Inspector whose Report has been very favourable.

14680. Dr. Hutt—Is there any limit to the number of boys in the school?—No. If the property improves and the funds admit there will be a proportionately larger number of boys reserved.

14681. CHAIRMAN—Is the examination and inspection annual?—No it is not, being a private endowment we are not under any Board. I have here a letter in reference to the school, dated May 7th, 1860, from one of the trustees:

"Mr Dean Buz.—I have examined very carefully the answers given by the pupils of Saint Stephen's School, and my impression is that the master is a very efficient teacher, and is admirably adapted to the post he occupies. He evidently possesses considerable skill and tact, and has been highly successful in his elementary teaching. I thought it well to recall mentally the attainments of all the pupils, so that should I on a future occasion have the honour of inspecting the school, I should be able to ascertain the improvement made by each individual scholar. Perhaps I should add I have been particularly pleased by the intelligent answering in Scripture, the neat appearance of the copy books, and the prompt answering in arithmetic."

(Signed) HENRY ARNOLD.

14682. Who is Mr. Arnold?—He was at that time the master of the Training School at Bandon.

14683. The boys are chiefly the children of poor parents?—Yes. The Trustees have always considered the trust a special one, and have devoted on educating and admitting the most deserving children.

14684. What pursuits in life do the children who have been educated at the school usually follow?—Of late years they have generally got clerical or mercantile offices.

14685. Do you fit them for such posts, or have they to go to other schools, after leaving yours?—They very seldom go to other schools, except in such a case as I have mentioned of a boy requiring the rudiments of Latin, and having the taste to advance himself to a preference.

14686. Mr. O'SHEA—The deed, under which the charity was supposed to be founded, is, I understand, dated in 1699?—Yes.

14687. Is that deed in existence?—Yes. It is in our iron safe or chest.

14688. The institution is at present a purely denominational one?—Yes.

14689. Do you know anything of the history of the institution before the execution of that deed?—We learn by tradition that it was a Lepers' Hospital.

14690. According to a return received by the Commissioners of 1837, from the Commissioners of Charitable Donations and Bequests, this was originally a charity for the maintenance of a house of entertainment for poor lepers and lepers. It appears that the property was at that time in the possession of the Corporation of Cork, and that subsequently it got into the possession of Mr. William Worth, who was Recorder of Cork?—Not actually into his possession, but he made an attempt to get the property, which it appeared to have served its purpose. The Corporation who were in possession refused to give it up; however, they then allowed him to make a charity, undertaking to consent, on a proper deed being executed, that such charity should be founded and endowed.

14691. The statement made by the Commissioners of Charitable Donations and Bequests was that he obtained from the Crown a patent dated July 21st, 1685, giving him the lands?—I never heard that.

14692. We next find that the Corporation proceeded against him in Chancery seeking to have the patent declared fraudulent. Negotiations then took place between him and the Corporation, which ended by his consenting to have this turned into a charity by the deed of 1699. I want to know what the nature of the deed was?—Simply conveying the lands of East and West Ballymough, and Spital Lands, and twenty-three acres of Chalmers, to the Mayor and Constable of the Municipal Borough, for the maintenance and education of a number of poor boys of the Protestant faith, as by law established, as the Mayor and Common Council of Cork and their successors for the time being should nominate and appoint.

14693. There have been as Reuben Gethro boys there in your time?—Never. I find, from the Register, that one or two were admitted in error, but put out again immediately; that was a century ago.

14694. Is there any attempt made on the part of the managers to have boys there whose parents are Catholics?—On the contrary, both parents must be Protestants.

14895. You were the master of the school at the time of the Royal Commission in 1864?—Yes; but I had not been long so.

14896. That Commission reported that the state of instruction in the school was very unsatisfactory?—It must be recollected that I was not two years in office at the time they visited the school, and a large number of the boys were very young; moreover, the former master had been nearly two years ill, and so I found the school in great confusion.

14897. Is the state of education much better now than it was at that time?—Yes, much better.

14898. How are the lands belonging to the charity let?—They are let upon leases in perpetuity which were made between 1713 and 1714.

14899. The lands are capable of producing a much higher rental if there were any possibility of fresh tenants?—Certainly. The lands at the north side are the most valuable of the property in or about Clerk.

14900. Are those lands also let in perpetuity?—They are let for 919 years. It is said that Baron Worth gave increased leasing powers.

14901. Are there any day pupils in the school?—There are not now, but there used to be before the year 1860, when education was a rare commodity. I understand that, for a number of years, the Trustees permitted the masters to take in a number of day pupils, thereby enabling them to employ retainers. The children on the foundation had the advantage of that arrangement. I think it is a mistake that we have not also paying boys. Day boys would be out of the question now, considering the Model and National Schools, but I have frequently had applications from boarders, who would pay any, £30 a year and upwards. My salary as master of the school is only £25 a year Irish; but, if I might take pay bonaria, I would be enabled, if I got from 12 to 20, to have an assistant, and then we could conduct the school efficiently between us.

14902. You have no power now of taking paying boys?—I have not.

14903. CHAIRMAN.—What number do you consider the school suited for?—There is dormitory accommodation for 29 boarders. The school-room would seat 40. It is a fine room, 36 feet long.

14904. Do the Governors go over the school from time to time?—Yes.

14905. The clothing is managed by you?—Yes. The boys must be clothed in blue cloth.

14906. They are to be sent out with one suit of dress apparel and underclothes—is that done now?—That has been always done.

14907. Are they not always sent out of the school before they reach 15?—We cannot keep them longer than 15.

14908. Dr. HART.—Are the rents regularly paid?—Yes. I make application for them within two months after they become due, and they are paid within four months.

14909. There are no arrears?—None.

14910. How do you calculate the allowance for poor rates to the tenants?—I have always allowed one-half the poor rate on the rent each tenant pays.

14911. According to law a tenant who has sub-let the land for more than the valuation is not entitled to deduct so much?—There are, probably, between 20 and the tenants in possession, ten or twelve persons having derivative interests. I will call attention to the point, but I have only followed the practice laid down by my predecessors.

14912. CHAIRMAN.—Have you received any allowance from the Commissioners of Inland Revenue on account of income tax?—Yes.

14913. How are the repairs of the building managed?—When I find anything requiring to be attended to, before it becomes of greater magnitude I get it done, and in that way our building is kept in thorough repair. Any large repair is done through a contractor.

14914. Dr. HART.—Have the trustees absolute power to decide what repair shall be done?—They have. The building is an extensive one, and we must keep it in repair. It is a substantial repair at present.

14915. Is there any play-ground attached to it?—There is a fine rocky playground, about 80 feet long, and probably over 50 wide, and for 14 or 20 boys that is ample.

14916. How do the boys get exercise?—Sometimes in the summer we play cricket in the park. The boys have had the privilege from time immemorial of going home to their relatives, from Sunday evening till Monday morning.

14917. What are the school vacations?—We have a fortnight or three weeks in summer, a fortnight of Christmas, and a few days at Easter.

14918. Is there any industrial training given?—No.

14919. Mr. O'SHEA.—Is there any intention of applying to the Court of Chancery for an amendment of the scheme so as to enable you to take paying pupils?—I have not yet brought the subject before the Trustees, but it occurred to me within the last few days, as I have had many applications from respectable persons.

14920. Dr. HART.—The change could not be made without the authority of the Court of Chancery?—No.

14921. CHAIRMAN.—Do you know what extent of land the school stands on?—There is a little to the rear of the building, and within a few feet of the southern wall, up to 1796 it was a burial ground in connection with the old Chapel of St. Stephen's, on the site of which the building now stands. The Deed reserves the garden for the use of the master. I have it in cultivation, and it is one of the most valuable items I have in connection with the school. There is over an acre altogether—on one acre and a quarter.

14922. What is the balance in bank to the credit of the charity?—Our present balance in bank is £114 15s 4d, and I have some money in hands to pay for repairs, and such things, which would make the balance about £12 more. The accounts being paid quarterly, I am always three months in advance. Being the equal I must get a little cash blow.

14923. Are there any debts?—Not a penny, and will not be until the quarter day.

Mr. MICHAEL GRICE, continued.

Mr. Michael Grice.

14924. CHAIRMAN.—You are the agent over the estate of Bishop Crox's School at Clonfert?—Yes. I have been so for twenty-five years.

14925. What does the estate consist of?—Houses, and some land, near Clonfert.

14926. What is the net rental?—The rental is £138 7s 6d.

14927. How is the land let?—Generally for sixty years; but some of the leases are for a shorter period.

14928. Are these recently made leases?—Some of them are of a late date—some of 1863.

14929. Have there been any recent lettings?—Yes. There was one in 1871.

14930. What is the Government Valuation of the estate?—I could not say.

14931. Do you think that the estate is let at its fair value?—Yes, except about 65 acres of land, on which there will be an increase of nearly double. It is let on a thirty-one years' lease dated 21st July, 1853. The other tenements are generally leases of house property.

14932. Is there any lease of an older date than 1853 outstanding?—There is one, of a small holding, dated 1840, and another dated 1849.

14933. Are there any arrears due?—Yes. There was a block of houses from which we had to eject the tenant

Oct. 27, 1873.
Mr. Michael
Green.

two years ago, and it has rather involved us in debt to get it into repair, but there are no other arrears.

14934. What is the extent of the property?—There are about 65 acres held by Concessor Litten. The rest is chiefly house property.

14935. Do you collect the rents half-yearly?—I attend weekly, as there are houses let to weekly tenants. The letting of the 65 acres was made in the former time, and that is the reason it was made so low.

14936. What is the rest of that holding?—£65 10s. a year.

14937. What is the usual rent per acre in the immediate neighbourhood?—About 4s.

14938. What is the Trustee's leading power?—I could not exactly say, but it has been the practice on the estate, longer than I have been connected with it, to give sixty years' lease in the town, and thirty-one years' lease of the land.

14939. The payments are made by you for the school?—I receive the rents, and the Trustee sends me in the school bills, which I pay.

14940. Where is the balance lodged?—Unfortunately at present we have no balance, we had a balance and would have been very well off, but the Church Temporalities Commissioners forced us to purchase the school house, which was held under a Bishop's lease, and for which we had to pay £60, and moreover I had to repair the house property, so as to get the rents from the tenants.

14941. There is no rent now payable for the school-house?—None except title rent-charges.

14942. Dr. HART.—What rent did you pay before the present purchase?—£3 odd a year.

14943. CHAIRMAN.—What is the master's salary?—£15 a quarter.

14944. Last year there seems to have been £76 expended, in addition to the purchase-money?—I suppose there was one quarter's salary in arrears, there is a balance of about £80 against the Trustee still.

14945. When are the accounts audited?—Generally after Christmas, but unfortunately not regularly. The clergyman who was the Trustee, being in delicate health, was not in a position to audit the accounts, the Reverend Dr. Moore, who is one of the trustees, lately audited the accounts of the last two or three years.

14946. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—Did two or three years pass without an audit?—Yes.

14947. CHAIRMAN.—Was the whole thing left in your hands for that period?—All was left in my hands. I afterwards produced my vouchers, and Dr. Moore vouched the accounts.

14948. You paid the salary as before?—Yes.

14949. Were the repairs executed?—I got them done, and paid for them.

14950. Are the sums for the "maintenance and clothing of the boys" paid quarterly?—Yes.

14951. How is that managed?—The master sends the accounts to the Trustee, who sends them to me, and then I pay the bills.

14952. Are those accounts for maintenance only, or for clothing as well?—I believe the boys are clothed by their parents.

14953. In the accounts you have produced I find an item of £81 for repairs "to B. Hornbrook's holdings"?—These are the holdings we were obliged to erect.

14954. How was that expenditure managed?—I had a superintendent who saw that the tradesman was doing the thing properly. I paid the bills every week, when I went to receive the rents of the town holdings.

14955. The Trustee do not themselves superintend any of those repairs, but leave them entirely to you?—The Rev. Dr. Moore went over all those different holdings with me. I showed him the improvements and so forth.

14956. Were they done entirely under your direct superintendence, without contract?—I thought it less expensive not to have a contract.

14957. Were there any vouchers furnished to Dr. Moore for payments to tradesmen, and items of that class?—No. I paid the wages and put them down on a sheet which I showed him. I could not get bills from slaters and masons and other tradesmen whom I paid weekly.

14958. The account which you have produced does not show a balance of £80 against the school?—There were some materials supplied that are not yet paid for.

14959. Is there £44 due for outstanding debts?—Yes.

14960. Dr. HART.—Do you know how the allowance for the boys is calculated, have you anything to do with that?—No.

14961. Who makes out those accounts?—The master sends the accounts to the Trustee who sends me the bills and I pay them.

Mr. John E.
Moorehead.

Mr. JOHN EVANS MOOREHEAD, examined.

14962. CHAIRMAN.—You are the head master of Bishop Crooke's School, Clonmel?—I am the only master.

14963. How long have you been in that position?—I was appointed in 1873.

14964. How many boys are there in the school?—At present there are twelve.

14965. What is your course of instruction?—English, and elementary classics for private boarders or any boys that may desire them, that is to say, for boys under ten years of age.

14966. How are the pupils selected?—The boarders on the foundation of the school are appointed by the Trustee. I get a written notice that a boy has been appointed, stating his name, age, and religion, and the boy presents an order from the Trustee for his admission.

14967. Are the boys all boarders?—No; there are six boarders and six day scholars at present; of the six boarders, five are on the foundation of the school, and one is a private boarder of my own.

14968. Those on the foundation pay nothing?—The boys pay nothing, but I am paid for them by the Trustee.

14969. What does that payment amount to?—£20 per annum for each boy, but that dates only from July of the present year. From May, 1873, to July last, I was receiving but £15 per annum for each boy on the foundation of the school.

14970. The other boarder is your own private pupil?—Yes; the Trustee permits me to receive private boarders on my own account.

14971. What accommodation is there for boarders in the building?—The entire residence is as one building, and the school-house is detached; but the dormitory for the boys on the foundation is suitable for eight boys; there are six beds in it now.

14972. Are the day boys on the foundation too?—The day scholars are not, they apply to me for admission to the school, and I permit them to come—the trustees permit me to receive day scholars.

14973. That has nothing to do with the charity?—No. The way I interpret the charity is to make it as useful as possible, for those who wish to avail themselves of the advantages of the school. I have made an analysis of the attendance since my appointment. The Trustee have appointed in all sixteen boys on the foundation of the school, and I have had nine private boarders, making a total of twenty-five boarders that have passed under me. I have also taken twenty-seven free day scholars, and had seventeen day scholars who paid me, making a total of forty-four day scholars.

Oct 25, 1875.
Mr. John B. Morehead.

14974. Dr. HART.—How much do the day boys generally pay?—The payments vary according to class to the junior charge I charge 10s. a quarter. If the boys are fit to be removed into the three senior classes, I charge £1 a quarter.

14975. CHAIRMAN.—The instruction given is of a purely national?—In the case of the private boarders whose parents wish their sons taught Latin, I teach them, and I have had some of my boys in Virgil and Cæsar, but the course of instruction is mainly that of a primary school. The boys I have had under my charge have nearly all gone into business as clerks in merchants' offices.

14976. What classes are they generally taken from?—Generally speaking they are the sons of gentlemen in reduced circumstances, but I have had a coachman's son, a gardener's son, and the sons of farmers. I have also had a bank manager's son.

14977. Is it strictly a Church school?—There are no Roman Catholics in it now. The boarders appointed as the foundation of the school must belong to the Church of Ireland, but I have not been limited as to the religion of my day scholars. I have had Presbyterians, and also two Roman Catholics.

14978. Is the school visited periodically?—Since Dr. Moore's appointment, his visits have been generally two or three times a week. We welcome inspection from any quarter; sometimes the Church Education Society send an inspector, and a gentleman appointed as Diocesan School Inspector also inspected the school as recently on February last.

14979. Are any of the boys apprenticed or any one paid for apprenticeship fees?—Not to my knowledge.

14980. Is the Inspector of the Church Education Society, whom you referred to, a regular paid inspector?—Yes.

14981. Does he examine both in religious and secular subjects?—Yes.

14982. Are these prizes awarded at any examinations held by him?—No, I have frequently suggested that prizes should be given to the boys, but the school funds have not been sufficient.

14983. Dr. HART.—Your last inspection was by the Diocesan Inspector?—Yes.

14984. Have the Church Education Society ceased to inspect the schools?—Yes.

14985. Does the Diocesan Inspector examine in secular as well as religious knowledge?—He does. The school is not under the Diocesan Inspector, but he comes at the invitation of the Trustees, and in a conversation I had recently with the Bishop, he told me he would send Rev. Mr. Forte, as his own inspector, the Bishop being himself the Visitor of the school.

14986. What is the sum of the number it is intended to keep on the foundation of the school?—I believe the number is limited only by the amount of money in the possession of the Trustees. For two years I had seven boys on the foundation.

14987. Mr. O'BRIEN.—Are there many Protestants or Presbyterians in the locality of a class that might avail themselves of the school as day boys who do not do so?—I think there are two or three, but those attend the National school.

14988. What other schools are there in the neighbourhood?—There is a National school conducted by a master holding a first class certificate from the National Board, and then there is Dr. Moore's College, within easy reach of the town.

14989. That is Middleton College?—Yes.

14990. Dr. HART.—Is the National school practically a Protestant or a Roman Catholic school?—It is practically a Roman Catholic school. I should mention that two of the three Protestant children I referred to, as attending it, are children of a mixed marriage, the mother being a Roman Catholic.

REV. THOMAS MOORE, M.A., CONTINUED.

REV. THOMAS MOORE, M.A.

14991. CHAIRMAN.—You have been recently appointed one of the Trustees of Bishop Crowe's school?—Yes.

14992. What is the date of your appointment?—8th of July last.

14993. You had no connexion with the school before that time?—None whatever, except that, being a Canon of the cathedral, taking an interest in educational matters, and knowing Mr. Morehead, I used to go in and see the school, but I have been only officially connected with it for four months.

14994. Can you suggest any improvement in its management?—There are no boys in the neighbourhood to come to the school, except those admitted free. The difficulty is for the diocese of Cloyne at large, and when you bring boys from a distance you have to feed them, and necessarily therefore the endowment appears to do but little. I see by the statement in the school record which I have here that there have been as many as fifty-two boys in actual attendance at one time, but there are not so many boys in the neighbourhood now. Perhaps in a few years a generation will spring up who are now quite too young to attend the school.

14995. I suppose Middleton College, of which you are yourself the head-master, supplies the educational wants of most people in the locality?—Yes, some boys come to me from Cloyne who would, perhaps, otherwise be educated at Bishop Crowe's school. They come to me when they want higher education.

14996. Can you suggest any change that would make the school more generally useful?—No, I do not see how it could be made more useful. In the course of a few years the income will be considerably larger, and then the number of boys may be increased. It appears from a book which I produce, that in 1830 a farm was let at £96 6s., which is now let at about £10 a year less.

14997. Mr. O'BRIEN.—When was that letting made?—I think in 1850, immediately after the famine, when the times were bad. I do not know whether the trustees have power to grant those leases.

14998. Do you know what the valuation of the property is?—I do not.

14999. Dr. HART.—Does the book which you have produced contain any minute of the letting of the holding to which you referred?—I find the entry under date 1850—"By the strong recommendation of Mr. Russell, master and agent, and all other persons, the rent of James O'Connell has been reduced to £1 1s. per acre for seven years, commencing September 29th, each half-year's rent to be paid in full before the succeeding one becomes due, in default of such payment this arrangement to be null and void." It has continued at that ever since.

15000. Is there any minute of a new arrangement in 1853?—I do not think so; there has been no change ever since.

15001. Mr. O'BRIEN.—Who is the present tenant of that holding?—Edward Linton, Esq., &c.

15002. Has he subject the land?—His uncle, Mr. John Linton, put the tenant out.

15003. Dr. HART.—Mr. Green has mentioned that there was a lease of that holding made in 1883; you have no record of that lease having been granted?—Not in the only book I had access to.

Oct. 25, 1879.

Mr. Michael
Gavin.

15004. CHAIRMAN.—To whom was the lease of the holding, to which Dr. Moore refers, originally made?

—To a person named Bardon.

15005. When?—In 1853. He sold his interest to Mr. John Linton.

15006. Dr. Moore has read a minute in reference to a tenant named Giffman—who was he?—I believe he was a previous tenant when the Trustees were obliged to evict.

Mr. MICHAEL GREENE, recalled.

15007. At what rent was the lease of 1853 made?

—At £35 odd, a year.

15008. Does Mr. Edward Linton now pay the full rent reserved by that lease?—Yes.

Rev. Thomas
Moore, M.D.

Rev. THOMAS MOORE, M.D., recalled.

15009. Dr. HARRIS.—The lease of 1853 appears now to have been signed by the trustees without any account of the transaction being preserved in their minute book?—That appears to be so.

15010. Have you a copy of Bishop Crowe's will?

—No, I believe it does not give any leasing powers at all.

15011. Mr. O'BRIEN.—Can you suggest any way by which this school could be better fitted to carry out the intentions of the founder?—The only thing I anticipate is the increase of the funds. There are several boys waiting for admissions now; but finding the property was gone into disrepair, an account of tenants overholding, we were unable to do more, but in a year or a year and a half from the present time we will be quite clear, and moreover, we look to have our rents increased, we intend to take full advantage of whatever there may be obtainable in that way.

15012. What is the average cost of each boarder?

—£20 a year.

15013. For what period are they kept?—For three years.

Mr. John B.
Morehead.

Mr. JOHN EVANS MOREHEAD, recalled.

15014. CHAIRMAN.—Is eight the entire number of boarders you have accommodation for?—That is the number of boys there is room for, in the foundation boys' dormitory, and there is a bedroom which I give up for my private boarders, where there is room for four or five more, and by limiting my private accommodation I could give a larger bedroom if I had more boarders.

15015. Do you desire to add anything?—I wish to say that whenever I had a Roman Catholic pupil I permitted no examination of him in Scripture, as in the Church's formulae, I have had but two applications from Roman Catholics, and I rebuffed the ones to Canon Buckley, the Parish Priest, who permitted the boys to come, provided nothing was done to touch on their religious persuasions. He permitted them to read the Scripture—namely the Deuterium Testament, without note or comment.

Rev. Thomas
Moore, M.D.

Rev. THOMAS MOORE, M.D., recalled.

15016. CHAIRMAN.—You are the head-master of Midleton College?—Yes.

15017. Is it, to a certain extent, under "The Commissioners of Education"?—Yes, they are the managers of the property.

15018. What supervision do they exercise over the school?—None whatever, except that I report to them twice a year.

15019. Did any of them ever inspect it?—It has never been visited by any of the Commissioners.

15020. Practically it is left in the hands of the head master?—Not exactly. There are persons called Visitors or Trustees who appoint the masters, and they vicariously. "The Commissioners of Education" have nothing to do except with the property which is under their management. They have never even sent down an examiner, as they have done to the Royal Schools.

15021. Are the funds of the school under the control of "The Commissioners of Education"?—Yes.

15022. What payments do they make?—£32 a year to the master, and £20 as an allowance for an assistant.

15023. Do they keep the pecunies in deposit?—Yes, whenever I see anything which requires to be done, I obtain a tender for a contract, and bring the matter before the Visitors at their annual inspection, and if they consider the thing necessary they fix it. It is then forwarded to the Commissioners, who sanction it or otherwise.

15024. Do the Visitors meet only once a year?—Only once a year.

15025. They inspect the school?—They inspect everything.

15026. Who are the Visitors?—The Bishop of Cork is the only official Visitor, but the Rector of Midleton, who is always on the spot, and knows the entire of the management, comes up several times every week. Lord Midleton is also a Visitor, and so is the Earl of Shannon. Mr. John W. Scott, representing Lord Midleton, as his agent, was a Visitor when I was appointed. He was constantly on the spot, and of immense service to me. He is still a Visitor, and takes much interest in Midleton school.

15027. Does Lord Midleton visit the school himself when in the neighbourhood?—He does, always.

15028. Are prizes given to the boys in the school?—I had prizes established. Lord Midleton gives an annual prize of 3 guineas. Mr. Scott, Mr. Chester, and Captain Barry also give prizes of two guineas each, and the Commissioners give students entering Trinity College two exhibitions, worth £50 and £20 respectively.

15029. Is it in the power of the Commissioners to grant or withhold these exhibitions?—They have £50 a year to give, and they arranged that the boys who enter Trinity College should be examined for these prizes with the pupils from the Royal Schools.

15030. That money comes out of the balance of the endowment?—Yes.

15031. What number of pupils have you at present?—Eighty-eight now; I have just sent off five to Trinity College.

15032. What proportion of your pupils are boarders?—There are fifty-eight in my own house and eight in the house of one of my assistants, the rest are day pupils.

15033. What staff of masters have you?—Six masters. The school house has been greatly enlarged since the former Commission.

15034. How was that expenditure provided for?—The Commissioners did it. There had been no school for a great many years before my appointment, which caused a saving of £50 or £60 a year, £1,200 was laid out when I took the school, and the Commissioners have lately made an addition of £300 or £400.

15035. Dr. HARRIS.—What was the date of your appointment?—March, 1863.

On 25, 1878
Rev. Thomas
Moore, Secy.

19034. Why do you say there was only a saving of £50 or £60 a year during the period prior to your own appointment—did not they save the whole of the £200 a year?—No, there was a master there, who kept no school, save for some three or four boys, but of course he received the whole £113 a year.

19035. Mr. O'SHEA.—Is there any provision for superintending the master?—No, unfortunately, there is none such in any endowed school in Ireland.

19036. CHAIRMAN.—Has anyone the power of dismissing the master?—No. I find in the minute book that they professed to have appointed my predecessor, Mr. Turpin, with power to dismiss him, but they never exercised that power. They appointed me without any conditions except that I should take the foundation boys.

19037. Dr. HART.—There are some societies who have the power of dismissing and superintending masters?—I was not aware of that.

19038. CHAIRMAN.—What class of education do you give?—A classical, science and English education, adapted principally for preparation for Trinity College, but those from the neighbourhood, who wish to go to Queen's College, Cork, we train too.

19039. Do you provide any special classes for those wishing merely for a good English commercial education?—No, the whole school system is so arranged that it provides everything, and if there is anything special required there is a special class arranged for that.

19040. Is it practically a collegiate school for training for Trinity College?—Yes, and for the Queen's College; but some of my pupils go to Banking business and the Army as well.

19041. Have you sent up any boys to the Intermediate examinations?—Yes.

19042. What number did you send?—Sixteen, of whom twelve passed very well. Those that did not pass had not been regularly educated by me, they came in rather late into their respective classes.

19043. Dr. HART.—Did any of your pupils get exhibitions?—No.

19044. Some were recommended for prizes?—Yes.

19045. CHAIRMAN.—Were there only sixteen boys in your school of the proper ages to go in for these examinations?—There were some more.

19046. Did you only send in those who had a reasonable chance of success?—I sent in all those who were willing to go, and who were of the proper age, whether they had a chance of success or not; I did not care whether they failed or not, so far as the school was concerned. I thought it would be good to encourage them. There were some who would not go in, in fact of all those residing in the house of my master I could only induce one to read for that examination.

19047. Was the course different?—No, we regulated the whole school work to the Intermediate course; but I interfered with the Trinity College preparation. I had to coach my son for Trinity privately, so far as the subjects were different.

19048. Mr. O'SHEA.—Would you join in the suggestion made in other places that the Intermediate and Trinity and other University authorities should try and arrange a less serious contest?—It would be very advisable. We must from the force of circumstances use the Intermediate course. The present variations put upon the schoolmasters additional expense and labour.

19049. CHAIRMAN.—Is there any special instruction given in physical science?—None, except what is required for army pupils. We have no laboratory.

19050. Instruction is given in modern languages?—Yes, all the pupils are instructed in modern languages.

19051. Mr. O'SHEA.—What are the modern languages taught?—French and German.

19052. CHAIRMAN.—Your modern language master is a foreigner?—Yes.

19053. Which do you think is the best teacher of modern languages—a foreigner or an Englishman?—I would rather have an Englishman, or an Irishman, to teach languages. One of my own pupils educated in Madras College was a foreign master in one of the best schools in England. He was thoroughly trained to teach languages. There are very few foreign masters who can teach, unless they get a University training.

Mr. DANIEL FRANCIS LEAHY, D.L., examined.

19056. CHAIRMAN.—You are the agent over Lord Cork's estates?—Yes. The agency has been in my family since an 100 years.

19057. Can you explain the circumstances under which the Endowed School at Charleville has ceased to exist?—There never was an Endowed School at Charleville, at least there was only an endowment for a teacher, as far as I can trace.

19058. There are at present no scholars attending such a school?—No.

19059. Within your recollection has it ever existed as a school?—There has been a school there; but there was no building or land given as an endowment.

19060. Dr. HART.—The Report of the Commissioners of 1857 states that the Earl of Cork made a grant of rent-charge and a house?—That statement was made in error. The house and plot of land have always been occupied under a yearly tenancy, which I can show by the estate ledgers. Every schoolmaster that was appointed became liable to the rent, varying from £15 to £20 a year.

19061. Mr. O'SHEA.—How far back does the state of things go?—At least to the year 1828, when my family became agents over the Charleville estate. They had been agents for the Earl of Cork and other estates for thirty or forty years before that.

19062. CHAIRMAN.—The endowment of the school arising from lands is referred in the report of 1857 as £30 15s 6d a year?—That was an endowment of £40 Irish for the schoolmaster, which was granted by some former Earl of Cork, where I cannot trace—very likely the first Earl of Ormsby. We still pay £40 Irish to the schoolmaster appointed by the Earl of Cork, but there has not been a regular school kept for many years. The schoolmaster has had no pupils for some time past, and for a very considerable period has not even been resident in Charleville.

19063. Dr. HART.—He has no place to take pupils?—No.

19064. Mr. O'SHEA.—In the Report of the Commissioners of 1857, it is stated—

"Charleville school was endowed by the Earl of Cork, about the commencement of the seventeenth century, and the premises of the endowment are at present unknown, the deed of foundation not being forthcoming, having, it is supposed, been burned long since."

And in the tables prepared by those Commissioners it is stated that the foundation of the endowed school of Charleville was made by the Earl of Cork, and consisted of a grant of rent-charge of £36 18s 6d, and of school premises of the estimated yearly value of £4 6s 6d?—That is definitely incorrect as to the house.

19065. I presume that the endowment for the schoolmaster was secured by some instrument, probably a deed?—That I cannot give information upon. I know of none, but we have up to the present year continued to pay the schoolmaster that amount, and for many years a house and garden on the estate were occupied by the schoolmaster, who paid the rent thereof as a yearly tenant.

19066. Did you deduct, when paying the annual endowment, the amount payable for rent?—My course in my transacting business with the schoolmaster was to pay him his year's salary, and get his receipt for the amount so the endowment; and then he used to hand me back the yearly rent of the premises. I have not paid the endowment this year, because with the assistance of the rector of Charleville and some others, I am at present endeavouring to procure a master and establish a suitable school there. This stipend would not go far enough to pay a suitable master, but would render some assistance; and Lord Cock concludes that in the best manner of disposing of the bequest or endowment of his ancestor. Lord Cock is extremely liberal all over his estate, as regards the support of education.

15067. Dr. HART.—How long has the master ceased to occupy the house, to which you have referred?—Probably six or seven years, at that time it was tending down, and there was no means of repairing it.

15068. CHAIRMAN.—Has there been any Board that could call the master to account for not keeping up the school?—Not as far as I know. As long as I can remember—long before I succeeded to the agency myself, during my brother's lifetime and my father's—our wish was that there should be a suitable school, but it seems to have gradually dropped lower and lower. I do not like, as the schoolmaster is present, to say much, but I think there is every probability of there being a good school hereafterward. I think schools of this class in good country towns like Charleville are very likely to meet with considerable support.

15069. Lord Cock recognizes that he is bound to pay £40 a year for educational purposes?—Yes, Lord Cock's wish is that the endowment of £40 Irish should continue to be paid, but, at the same time, he naturally desires that the tenants on his estate should derive some value from it.

15070. Dr. HART.—By whom have the masters been appointed?—I think, by the Earl of Cork. The present schoolmaster, Mr. Cronin, was appointed, by the then Earl of Cork, about 1844 or 1845.

15071. CHAIRMAN.—Have you ever heard of legal proceedings having been taken by a Mr. Daniel Clancy, of Charleville, to enforce payment of the £40 a year?—I never heard of that, and I know Mr. Clancy well. He was one of the principal inhabitants of the town. I looked through some of the accounts this morning, and I know that for many years after 1838, there is entered half-yearly in the rental the rent for the school-house.

15072. Mr. O'BRIEN.—Is there anything in the rental to show whether the payment was for a piece of land only, or for a piece of land and a house that the rent was paid?—I produce the rental of the Earl of Cork's estate, bearing date 18th March, 1838. The denomination is therein described as a house and garden, let to the Rev. Dr. Willis, at £7 7s 8d. half-yearly; and at the credit side of the same account there is entered on December 9, 1839, a payment to

Rev. Dr. Willis, for one half year's salary, in 25th September, £18 9s 2½d.

15073. You spoke of variations in the amount charged for rent, sometimes £15 a year, and sometimes £30—is there anything to show the cause of the variation?—Simply the value of the plot as any other tenancy would change.

15074. Dr. HART.—Was the master a tenant at will?—He was.

15075. Mr. O'BRIEN.—Does that appear by the books?—Yes, distinctly.

15076. How is the site of the former school-house now occupied?—By the rectory.

15077. When was the letting for that purpose made?—On the 25th September, 1871.

15078. Was the payment of this £40, Irish, at any time refused to the master, since you became acquainted with the affairs of this endowment?—I showed you an entry of the payment in the first half year my family became agents for that part of the Earl of Cork's estate, and my belief is that it has been paid ever since.

15079. Was there any objection made to the payment of a master, neither in competition of the school, nor teaching scholars?—There was no objection, that I am aware of; but it is Lord Cock's wish that the tenants on his estate should get some value for it, and we are now in treaty with a new master.

15080. Is the school intended to be started as a day-school as well as a boarding-school?—The matter has been under consideration, but there has been nothing definitely settled yet.

15081. Is there a large middle class population, in and about Charleville, that would be likely to avail themselves of intermediate education?—I should say a very considerable number.

15082. We have received information as to proceedings having been taken about twenty-five years ago by a Mr. Daniel Clancy, of Charleville, to compel the then Earl of Cork to maintain the school. Do you know anything as to that?—Mr. Cronin was the schoolmaster at that time, having been appointed some years before. I have no recollection that there was any difficulty at all at that time. I may mention, as regards the past year's stipend, that it has not been paid; because, as a matter of fact, as has old age Mr. Cronin, the present schoolmaster, is to a great extent beyond his time for such duties. We would not like to deprive him altogether of some salary, and we left the last year's salary in abeyance, for the present, to see what settlement we can make, and what arrangements for opening a new school for the estate.

Mr. W. F. S.
Cronin

Mr. WILLIAM CRONIN, examined.

15083. CHAIRMAN.—You are the Charleville schoolmaster?—Yes.

15084. When were you appointed?—In 1847, by the late Lord Cock. I then opened school with six pupils, and they increased to ten in a very short time after that.

15085. Is that the largest number you ever had?—I had fourteen at one time.

15086. Were they all day boys?—Yes. I never had boarders.

15087. Where was the school held?—In Charleville, in a house taken by myself.

15088. You have no recollection of there being a school-house in existence belonging to the endowment?—I occupied the old house.

15089. Dr. HART.—Did you not pay a rent for it?—I paid £16 Irish a year.

15090. CHAIRMAN.—Was any inspection of the school ever made?—Yes. Mr. SHARPLEY Crawford came there on one occasion, in 1857.

15091. There was no periodical inspection or supervision?—Never.

15092. Was there any Board of Governors?—There was no interference at all.

15093. Dr. HART.—Were you appointed for life?—I was.

15094. CHAIRMAN.—Was there no inquiry made at any time as to the success or efficiency of the school?—None.

15095. Did you receive your salary regularly?—Yes, until the last occasion.

15096. Was there any threat made to stop it about twenty-five years ago?—Not that I ever heard. I got a verbal notice to quit from Mr. John Lesky, who was then Lord Cock's agent and who is now dead. I assented, but Mr. Clancy remonstrated and Mr. Lesky re-appointed me, so I returned again in 1853. I told Mr. Lesky that I was quite satisfied to give up the school if it was Lord Cock's desire.

15097. Why were you asked to give up the school?—Because the National Schools were going ahead so much, that there was sufficient educational provision for the people of Charleville, without keeping up the endowment.

15103. You had no pupils?—I had sometimes only two or three, and sometimes none.

15104. What were the religious denominations of your pupils?—Mixed; the majority were Protestants. I had seven graduates of Mr. Clancy's from time to time.

15105. What fees used you to charge?—Six guineas a year.

15106. In the Report of the Commissioners of 1857, it is stated there were five Roman Catholic pupils in the school. In a large place like Charleville, would there not be more than four Roman Catholics who would pay six guineas a year?—Roman Catholics as a rule did not come. I had usually all the Protestants in the town—at least all that wished for a classical education.

REV. JOHN JAMES BAKER, M.A., continued.

15107. CHAIRMAN.—You are the Rector of Charleville?—Yes.

15108. How long have you been so?—For four years.

15109. Have you any suggestions to make in reference to the educational requirements of Charleville—you know what it is proposed to do as to re-establishing a school which had been in existence for some years?—There has not been, since I came to Charleville, any school kept by Mr. Cronin, whose health was such that he was quite unequal to keep one up. Some time since I asked parties to join me in securing a pension for Mr. Cronin, in order that we might re-establish a school. Lord Cork, through his agent Mr. Leahy, has always been ready to fall in with our suggestions; but there was the difficulty that I had no means of securing a pension to Mr. Cronin, and I did not wish to be a party to depriving him of the small sum he was receiving, although he was quite incapable, from the state of his health, of keeping a school. I am most anxious to have an undenominational school there.

15110. What is the population of Charleville?—2,500.

15111. What proportion are Protestants?—A very small proportion; but there is a very friendly feeling subsisting between the people of the various religions.

15112. I suppose practically there is now no school of a class above the primary National schools?—There is a National school, and also a school kept by the Christian Brothers; but these are chiefly for a lower class of the population. I have no personal knowledge, but I understand that the Parish Priest has lately got a licence, who proposes to open a classical school. I may mention that some little has been offered to us in the evenings to prepare for entrance at the Queen's College, Cork.

MR. THOMAS SANDERS, J.P., continued.

15113. CHAIRMAN.—You live in the neighbourhood of Charleville?—Yes.

15114. You are acquainted with the locality?—Yes.

15115. Can you make any suggestion as to what would be best, to meet the educational requirements of the district?—It is very difficult to tell what would be the result of establishing a new school there. Unless the master was a competent one I do not think he could maintain a school, and even if he were competent it would be some time before he would get pupils to attend; he would meet with a great deal of disunion here, and it would be a mere experiment. The school was rather a distinguished one in former times. Men of eminence have been educated there. In those days the master was always a clergyman, generally the curate of the parish. Mr. Cronin's predecessor, who was a curate of the parish, was not, however, very successful in the management of the school, for which he was unsuitable, and the school went down in consequence; then Mr. Cronin was 15116. Dr. HART.—Did you ever hear of any legal proceedings being taken with reference to the endowment about twenty-five years ago by Mr. Clancy?—I was not in Charleville at the time. It was during my vacation that he remained an attempt that was made to get an end to the endowment.

15117. Who made that attempt?—Mr. John Leahy called upon me and gave me notice to quit, and, as I had no great desire to remain, I acquiesced.

15118. Mr. Clancy resented that attempt to close the school?—Yes. Having had only such a small school all along, persons might fancy that I was not qualified to keep one; but I have here a copy of my testimonials. I was a Scholar and Gold Medalist of Trinity College, Dublin.

DR. HART.
Mr. William
Cassie.

15119. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—In and around Charleville, without making any distinction of religious creed, are there a number of boys who require something more than a primary education?—I think so. There was a master, who rented a school-house from Mr. Sanders, and he had from fifteen to twenty sons of farmers, to whom he taught classics. Some of them were prepared for the nursery of the Roman Catholic Church.

15120. CHAIRMAN.—That was a private school?—Yes.

15121. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—That has ceased to exist?—Yes, about two years ago.

15122. Is the demand for something better than a primary education increasing?—We have had no trial of it yet, but if an opportunity were offered a school might be established there in time. Quite recently a lady living in Charleville asked me if there was any prospect of a school being opened, as she had an offer of two boarders to reside with her, who would attend a day school. It would be very desirable that a master should take a limited number of boarders, but it would be most important to have a good school for day boys. A competent master would probably, in time, establish a very fair school. There is a very friendly feeling subsisting between the members of the Church of Ireland and the Roman Catholic population in Charleville, and I am in hopes that an undenominational school would succeed there. That is the sort of school which, in my mind, ought to be established, and I hope it would succeed. I believe that is, to some extent at least, Mr. Leahy's view also, but I understand he thinks that an undenominational school would not receive the support of the Catholic clergy, and, indeed, that is the great difficulty in the south of Ireland.

appended, and we thought he would prove a great success, as he was a son of very high classical attainments, and a Gold Medalist in College; but he did not devote himself to teaching the elementary subjects, which were required for the class of boys who were likely to attend there, and consequently the only pupils to be had were young men going in for some public appointments, or preparing for the Queen's College. The sons of the shopkeepers and tradesmen in the town and neighbourhood did not go to the school.

15123. I suppose there would hardly be sufficient pupils in the immediate neighbourhood, to keep up a good school, unless all denominations were willing to join?—Unless all were willing to join, certainly not, as I do not think they could now draw boarders from any distance. It is not now the custom to send boys to small boarding-schools. In my youth, however, there were about forty boarders at Charleville school.

15124. Is there anything you can add, as to the past history of the school, beyond what we have heard I—I have heard it said—I do not know upon what grounds—that the schoolroom, which was detached from the house in which the master resided, was a part of the original endowment. The whole lot, including the site upon which the schoolhouse stood, is held in my name, having been leased for a glebe for the chapman of the disestablished Church. The schoolhouse was a building containing but a single room.

Moor, M.P.

Mr. D. P.
Lusk, M.P.

Mr. DANIEL FRANCIS LEAHY, B.A., recalled.

15120. CHAIRMAN.—Can you give any explanation as to the site of the old schoolroom mentioned by Mr. Sanden?—The old map of the estate shows the plot including the detached house, and that the whole was held under the one yearly letting. Mr. Clancy, to whom allusion has been made, was a very intimate friend of mine, and, if any proceedings had been commenced, I would have heard of the fact from him; but, certainly when I was a boy I heard from an old relation of mine, that in former times, about 100 years ago, the annual payment of the endowment had been disputed, and proceedings were successfully instituted against the then Earl of Cork. The present Earl of Cork does not conceive that he is legally bound to this endowment at all, but he is willing to pay it, provided the tenants on his estate derive some benefit from it.

15121. Mr. O'BRIEN.—Has it not been paid from time immemorial?—It has been paid up to the present year, so far as I can trace. Lord Cork, the Rector, Mr. Sanden, and the other principal inhabitants, are most anxious that we should utilize this endowment for the benefit of the town of Charleville and its neighbourhood. It would be a great advantage if you could tell us now that we are at liberty, in any way, to not about establishing what we conceive a proper school. We could give the present schoolmaster an annuity, if we were at liberty to dispose of the Earl of Cork's endowment for the payment of a schoolmaster in the new school. We are endeavouring to establish a school, and, if we consider we are doing anything wrong by alienating this endowment for the schoolmaster of the new school, we would consider ourselves and the thing would have to stay in abeyance, and there would be no school. In that case I do not know whether or not the stipend would be paid at all, probably it would lapse altogether. Although Lord Cork has been regularly paying the endowment up to the last year, there has been little or no value given for it for several years, and the Earl naturally wishes that there should be some. We wish to know if we enter into arrangements now to provide a proper school, whether we will get into any difficulty thereby.

15122. CHAIRMAN.—All we have power to do is to report the facts that have come to our knowledge with regard to the past history of the school, and also, so far as we can gather, what it is supposed will be done in the future. We think it very desirable that the endowment which has been almost of no use for the last twenty-five years should be made useful; but we have no power to authorize you to take any steps. We are quite understood that Lord Cork, who has been paying the £40 a year, would like to see it fully applied, instead of being impeded by—I quite understand you cannot directly authorize any act of ours, but I take it that such an expression of opinion from your Lordship and the other Commissioners, on the existing endowment, would naturally have the approval of those who might hereafter have to question it.

15123. Dr. HART.—We are unanimously of opinion that an arrangement such as you propose would be desirable.—That expression of opinion would be in no way binding.

15124. Mr. O'BRIEN.—Of course you would have to arrange with Mr. O'Brien.—Certainly.

15125. CHAIRMAN.—And endeavour to shape your scheme to the requirements of the locality?—Directly.

Mr. Charles
Dewey, M.P.

Rev. CHARLES DEWEY, M.A., recalled.

15126. CHAIRMAN.—You were formerly the Rector of the parish of Charleville?—Yes.

15127. Can you give us any further information as to the school there?—I may mention a few matters with which I was immediately connected. Not long after I was appointed Rector of Charleville, the present Earl of Cork spoke to me about the difficulty of obtaining a residence for the Rector at Charleville, and said, "I am anxious to provide a suitable and comfortable residence for you, as Rector of the parish." And he afterwards proposed to give the old school house and the land about it. He at first contributed £100, and the materials of the old house, towards building the new rectory, and afterwards he contributed from time to time small sums to get up an entrance gate and other things. I have a letter of his in which he stated he had consulted his legal adviser, and that he was not able to give a longer lease of the place than 99 years, which I believe is the term for which it has been demised.

Rev. Thomas
Moor, M.P.

Rev. THOMAS MOOR, M.P., recalled.

15128. CHAIRMAN.—Is there any limitation as to the religious denominations of the boys attending Mutton College?—None. The school is open to all—and has always been so. Judge Barry, for instance, was educated there; and when I was appointed there was a Roman Catholic boy on the foundation.

15129. What are the religious denominations of your pupils?—At the beginning of this month I had ten Roman Catholic boys in attendance, and one of them was a boarder. I had five Roman Catholic boarders at one time.

15130. Dr. HART.—What is the total number in the school?—Up to the middle of this month the total number was twenty-three.

15131. CHAIRMAN.—Have you had any difficulty with regard to the religion of the boarders?—None whatever.

15132. Or any complaint made?—None.

15133. Do any Roman Catholics go to chapel on Sundays?—Yes.

15134. Have you any Roman Catholic master to go with them?—I have; but they do not require much supervision, as the place is so small that everyone is known.

15135. Has there been any falling off lately in the number of Roman Catholics?—No, they are rather increasing, but that depends altogether on the number available for education. I had eleven in 1879. I have ten now, but one Roman Catholic boy has just gone to a Bank which crosses a vacancy.

15136. Dr. HART.—Is there any religious instruction given in the school?—Yes.

15137. How do you manage about the Roman Catholics in that case?—There is no religious instruction given during the school hours.

15138. How then is it managed?—Before school opens, and after school is over.

15139. The Roman Catholic boys do not appear there?—No. During the regular secular school hours there is no religious instruction whatever.

15140. CHAIRMAN.—Roman Catholic boarders receive no religious instruction, except on Sunday in chapel?—That is all.

15141. The priest never comes to the school?—Whenever the boys are to be catechised they go to him.

15142. Is that on week days?—Yes, whenever they are required.

15143. Do you know anything of the school estate?—It is situated at Kiniside, I have heard, but I know nothing whatever of it. It is leased away for ever. An attempt was made to break the lease under which about 2,000 acres were leased at much less than £200 a year, but it failed. The land is worth, at all events, £2,000 a year.

Rev. Thomas

Mr. JOHN EVANS MORRIS, recalled.

Mr. John E.
Morris

15144. CHAIRMAN.—You wish to make an explanation?—I was asked whether the course of instruction given in my school was primary. I wish to state that I do not know the exact amount of instruction that would attach to the term "primary." I have had boys doing the fourth and sixth books of Euclid, and figures, and I have boys at present whom I am preparing for the next Intermediate examinations.

15145. Dr. HART.—By primary education we mean the kind of education given in National schools?—Very well. With reference to a statement, in the report of the Commission of 1867, that the will of Bishop Creve contained no limitation with regard to religion, I also wish to remark that, on that authority, I communicated with the Trustees, and when applications were made to me for the admission of boys of different religions, I have admitted them.

Mr. WILLIAM JOHN KNIGHT, A.B., examined.

Mr. William J.
Knight, A.B.

15146. CHAIRMAN.—How long have you resided in Cork?—Twenty-five years.

15147. You are acquainted generally with the progress for education in the city?—Yes, I am intimately acquainted with them. I am the principal of the largest private school in Cork.

15148. Where is that school situated?—Bridewell, Cork.

15149. What number of scholars have you?—The average is 80, the attendance ranging between 60 and 70. It is a collegiate and commercial school.

15150. I suppose you prepare boys for the Queen's College, Cork, and for Trinity College, Dublin?—Yes.

15151. And also for commercial pursuits?—And also for commercial pursuits.

15152. In a memorial which you have handed in to the Commission you state that:—

"There exists no Endowed School in the city of Cork, or in immediate neighbourhood, of a higher standard than the National schools."

Is there any endowed grammar school in the county, except the Middleton College?—That is the only one in the county. It is the only one doing for the south what the Royal Schools are doing for the north.

15153. Your memorial further states:—

"There is but one denominational school of this class in the city, which attempts to supply the deficiency. That of St. John, military, naval, and collegiate school has done good service in the cause of education, is evidenced by the number of successes recently gained by its pupils, appended to its memorial, and by the honor list of the Irish Universities. That the advantages conferred by this school might be greatly increased by a moderate endowment which would make the salaries of its masters not wholly dependent on the fees of a fluctuating number of pupils."

Does that refer to your own school?—Yes.

15154. Dr. HART.—Do you mean that your own is the only denominational school, of a superior class, in Cork?—Yes.

15155. CHAIRMAN.—What are the proportions of the various denominations attending your school?—I have nearly about fifty Church of Ireland boys, ten Presbyterians, and twenty Roman Catholics.

15156. Is yours both a boarding and day school?—Yes.

15157. Are there any Roman Catholics amongst your boarders?—I have had three or four from time to time, but I have none at present.

15158. Mr. O'SHEAVENISMAT.—What is your average number of boarders?—Six.

15159. Dr. HART.—Do you teach girls as well as boys?—Yes; young ladies going in for the Intermediate examinations come after the regular school hours.

15160. CHAIRMAN.—Are there not a good many wealthy people about the city of Cork, merchants and so on, to whom a good day school would be an advantage?—A great number.

15161. Is yours the only private school, in Cork, of that class?—The only one for boys.

15162. Are there any ladies' schools?—Yes, there are one very efficient ladies' school in the north side of the city, the Rochelle Seminary, but that is exclusively a Church school, it is intended for the daughters of reduced gentlemen, to prepare them for the situations of governesses.

15163. Is that quite a private school?—Quite private.

15164. Dr. HART.—You say there is but one denominational school of this class, are there many denominational schools?—Yes, there are denominational schools. For instance, there is St. Finian's Roman Catholic Seminary which I believe they call a Dominican School. There are one or two others of that class.

15165. CHAIRMAN.—Is there any Protestant school of the class?—Mine is the only Protestant school, or rather it is undenominational, but it has a Protestant atmosphere about it.

15166. If you had a Roman Catholic boarder would you send him to chapel every Sunday?—Yes, and if required by his parent he could see him at any time.

15167. Roman Catholic pupils are not present when religious instruction is given?—No; that is given before and after the regular school hours.

15168. Have you had any trouble as regards the various denominations?—None whatever.

15169. You have no other suggestion to make?—Simply the modest one I have made by my memorial.

15170. That your school would do better if you had an endowment?—For better.

REV. FRANCIS DE MONTMORISSET ST. GEORGE, M.A., CHAIRMAN.

D 1 15, 1878.
Rev E. & M. St.
George, M.A.

15171. CHAIRMAN.—You are interested in St. Ann's, Shandon, Green Coat Hospital, Cork?—Yes, I am the Rector of the parish of St. Ann, Shandon.

15172. How long have you held that position?—Since 1865.

15173. What position do you hold in reference to the school?—I am treasurer of the school.

15174. Have you anything to do with the management of the estates connected with it?—As treasurer, I collect the rents, and apply them, under the direction of the Board of Governors.

15175. In fact you are agent as well as treasurer?—Just so.

15176. Who are the Governors of the school?—It would be impossible to name all as they are scattered over the world. Everyone that has ever been officially connected with the two parishes, St. Mary's and St. Ann's, since the foundation of the charity, in the last century, has been entitled to be on the list.

15177. It appears from a book which you have handed in, that in 1717 a piece of ground, in the district of Shandon, was given for the purposes of the school. Is Shandon a district?—No, that is the name of the principal parish. Formerly the entire parish was the parish of St. Mary, but subsequently there was a division into the two parishes, St. Ann's and St. Mary's. The Green Coat Hospital is in the portion now included in St. Ann's parish, and when the rector of St. Mary's is mentioned it should be understood now as the rector of St. Ann's.

15178. It is, as fact, now a parochial school for St. Ann's parish?—It is, and should be.

15179. What is the present number of Governors?—I really could not tell you that. There are certain persons whom the Rev. Mr. Clarke is in the habit of summoning monthly.

15180. As Rector, are you ex-officio one of the Governors?—Yes; and I am the only Rector of St. Ann's that has been so. When I was appointed the Rector was simply an elected Governor, but the Commissioners of Christable Donations and Bequests have since made the Rector of St. Ann's ex-officio Governor.

15181. Is there a scheme under which the charity is now managed?—Yes. We follow the scheme as nearly as may be. The education given is exclusively in accordance with the teaching of what was, at the date of the scheme, the United Church of England and Ireland. The terms of the trust are imperative. The master is required to be appointed with the approbation of the Rector, and to attend the services of the parish church.

15182. What number of pupils are in the schools at present?—The master told me this morning that there are 22 on the boys' roll, of whom 15 are in daily attendance, that there are 24 girls on the roll, and between 30 and 40 infants.

15183. Does the school meet the requirements of the parish?—Quite; but I do not think we have a single child from any other parish. When this school was established there was no other school.

15184. There is not any rule limiting the benefit of the school to the one parish?—Not at all.

15185. What is the present income of the school?—From all sources it is about £153 a year.

15186. Is the property of the school situated in the city of Cork?—Some of it is; but our principal estate is Kickenheads, in the parish of St. Donagh, county Dublin, which produces £108 for St. Ann's year. Mr. Jonathan Alley is our tenant for those lands. There is also an old house, on Rushelm's quay, which we are glad to seek. It brings us in only a couple of pounds a year ground rent.

15187. Is not the infant school rather a recent addition?—Yes; it has been reopened lately. It had been closed for some time, as some of the Governors, wishing to economize, thought that the infant school was not within the scope of the charity.

15188. Are the pupils in the schools all free?—Yes, all.

15189. Do they receive anything beyond a free education?—Every Christmas the bishop of the diocese preaches a sermon, and the collection thereat is apportioned among donations, to clothe the deserving children. Last year we gave £10 from the endowment fund for the purpose. Formerly they used to clothe the children entirely out of the charity fund.

15190. What salary does the schoolmaster get?—£40 a year, with apartments in the schoolhouse, and coals.

15191. What are the other outgoings?—The mistress of the girls' school gets £30 a year, and the mistress of the infant school £20 a year. The taxes, head rents, and other expenses, including a servant, insurance, and pipe work, just about balance the receipts. When I first took up the charity it was some hundreds of pounds in debt. Now it is pretty free, but there is nothing to spare after the repairs of the institution are provided for.

15192. Is there any fixed allowance of coal?—Yes, the master gets four tons a year, the mistress the same quantity, and the mistress of the infant school one ton.

15193. The education given in the schools is of a primary nature?—Yes. They are inspected by the Inspector of the Church Education Society. We teach the pupils for business. They are taught writing, arithmetic, English grammar, and, above all, as acquaintance with the Holy Scriptures, for which they generally get prizes at the examinations.

15194. Were both the master and mistress trained in Kildare place?—Neither. The mistress was trained at the Church Education Society's School in London. She obtained a gold medal at the examination. She is a very clever young woman.

15195. Dr. HARRIS.—What is the number of pupils in the school?—About 70.

15196. The boys' school is seated for 120, and the girls' for 130?—Yes. They are large, low, old-fashioned rooms. The infants are put in the boys' old room.

15197. The salary for the master, in 1856, was £31 10s., and for the mistress £21. That has been increased?—Yes, but not during any time.

15198. CHAIRMAN.—Are all the pupils day scholars?—Yes. The school was originally called "The Green Coat"—why, we cannot ascertain. We found it difficult to clothe the scholars in green, and we were advised that there was no obligation upon us to do so.

15199. Mr. O'BRIEN.—Do you clothe all the children that attend the school?—There are some of the better class that do not take clothes. We wash off the children at the end of the year, and those who are deserving, by regular attendance, and good report, get clothes.

15200. Dr. HARRIS.—Have you not also got a widows' almshouse there?—Yes, connected with the hospital, but not with the school.

15201. CHAIRMAN.—Is any portion of the endowment devoted to the support of the widows?—Not a shilling. The history of the widows is this: the Governors give the empty rooms, and the widows are aided out of the parochial funds.

15202. There are more rooms than are wanted for the day school?—They were originally built for the widows. The Act of Parliament requires that widows of a certain class be sheltered to them.

15203. Dr. HARRIS.—There are no children except Protestants in the schools?—None. The school is limited to Church of Ireland children, who are required to attend the church, and to be instructed in the Church Catechism and formularies. There must a week the master must catechize them, in addition to the religious instruction they derive from the clergy.

15104. Is the house in good order?—It is not. It is a very good building, but it requires some funds there we can command to put it in respectable order.

15105. MR. O'SHEAQUEST.—Have you had any difficulties arising about the children of mixed marriages, in connexion with the school?—If they come they understand they must submit to a certain routine, and if they do not like it they must take their departure. Some Presbyterians, however, who attend the school go on the Sabbath with their own parents to the Scotch Church, which we permit.

15106. The school was formerly entitled to a rent charge of £10 3s. 1d. from Francis Edwards, does that still exist?—Yes. We get all our little income without any expense, but the treasurer is always about £50 in advance to the charity.

15107. The original rent of the property on Bubbalo's quay was £3 12s Irish?—Yes, that is the last rent paid. We used to get £15 a year out of it, but it was let go into ruins, and became worthless. I entered and took forcible possession of it.

15108. CHAIRMAN.—Is the £300 Government Stock mentioned in the Report of 1857 still intact?—No. It was expended on repairs. I possess a book showing the cash account of the charity.

REV. CHRISTOPHER HANSEN, M.A., CROSS RD.

Rev. C. Hansen, M.A.

15115. CHAIRMAN.—What position do you hold in connexion with Christ Church Parochial School, Cork?—I am the manager of the school, which is in connexion with the National Board.

15116. Are you the Rector of the parish?—I am.

15117. How the school any endowment, independent of what it receives from the National Board?—The house belongs to the school, and there is about £12 a year, a portion of the Shearman bequest. That is all.

15118. Dr. HANE.—That was estimated in the Report of 1857 as £13 15s 11d. Is it the same now?—Yes. The amount varies because of the income tax, but on an average it is about £12 a year.

15119. CHAIRMAN.—Can you give us any general information as to the will of Mrs. Shearman?—I have here a portion of a copy of it which shows the division of the property.—To the Christ Church, for poor scholars, £30 Irish per annum; for general poor £10 Irish, and for school £15 Irish, equivalent to £13 15s 11d British, and deducting poor rate and income tax there is left about £12.

15120. St. Finbar's school is stated to be entitled to £3 4s 7d. t.—Yes, it is entitled to £10 Irish, which is paid through me. I receive the income, and hand portions to St. Finbar's, St. Peter's, and the Green Coat Schools. The bequest consists of rents derived from the lands of Ballymahugh, North Liberties of Cork, and are paid by four parties.

15121. Are the grants from the National Board, and the £12 you have mentioned, the sole funds for the support of the Christ Church schools?—We have each year to make up in the parish about £80 by subscriptions. There is a residence for the master connected with the schools. I produce the account book of the present treasurer, showing the position of the schools from the time they were put under the National Board, in February, 1852.

15123. How are the repairs carried out?—We had a little reserve fund which we did not touch until we got authority, a sum of £800 had accumulated and was lying in the Savings' Bank, and the Commissioners of Charities allowed us to apply it to the repairs of the premises. One half of the fund had been given to St. Mary's, which we did not at all approve of, but that was the order of the Commissioners.

15124. Who manages the expenditure?—I do, as treasurer, together with the Governors.

15125. Dr. HANE.—The accounts show an item of £6 18s 3d. for clothes?—That was for the children of the school.

15126. Is that about the annual amount expended for clothing?—That money was paid to Miss St. George, who had supplied the Bannel herself.

15127. There is also an item paid for boots £3 10s 1.—Yes. As I stated, we sometimes give out of the funds what we can afford, and the Governors were kind enough to give my wife certain sums, during that year, to expend on the school children.

15128. Are the accounts regularly audited every year?—Yes, you will see by the book that they are. All the books are preserved from the commencement of the charity.

15129. You have a master and mistress?—Yes, and a monitor and mistress. We want another monitor and mistress to work the schools efficiently.

15130. You have three schools?—Yes, for boys, girls, and infants. The girls and infants are generally working in the same room; but they are taken into another room when required.

15131. From the report of 1857 it appears to have been all one school at that time?—Yes, it was all one school then. It was chiefly an infant school in those days.

15132. The will of Mrs. Shearman directs that if possible instruction is to be given in the rudiments of Latin. Is that direction complied with?—No; our master does not teach Latin, but he teaches advanced sciences.

15133. CHAIRMAN.—I suppose a higher class of pupils go to the Model school in Cork—that is those who wish to get a commercial education?—The favourite school of my advanced pupils is St. Luke's National school. Some go to the Model school, with the hope of getting in as inventors and workmen.

15134. Is St. Luke's a higher class school?—It is considered a higher class school than the Model school. That and the Carmichael school seem to be the favourites.

15135. Is St. Luke's a parochial school too?—It is.

15136. Is Latin taught there?—Yes.

15137. Is it an endowed school?—No; there is no endowment connected with it. It is the last paying National school in the city.

15138. How is it supported?—The master, Mr. Crawford, who is a splendid teacher, has £300 a year from results fees, pupils' fees, and salary from the Board. He passed every single boy in every class at the last examination, and he, therefore, received results fees for every boy in the school. The number of his pupils is 130.

15139. Is Mr. Crawford a University man?—He is not. The children attending any parochial schools are of a poor class, and therefore the results fees are very small compared with the numbers attending. The school fees in the female school amounted only to 44 8s 1d. last year, and I could not enforce fees from pupils, because the poorer children could not pay.

15140. What are the fees?—From 2s 6d. a month down to 1d. a week. The master's school fees were only 24 8s 6d. last year. What the master and mis-tees do is this, they apply for the fees and what they get they accept without question. Where there are six or seven children, all belonging to a poor labourer, they could not possibly pay at all. The master and mistress not being able to obtain a suitable salary any congregation come forward and make a special collection.

15235. Are the fees in the Model school on the average high?—Yes.

15236. Do they go down to a penny a week?—I am not sure. As a rule, only those that are able to pay send their children to the Model school. I have had children going right out to shops and different employments without going to the Model school or any place else. Some even come back from the Model school, to be flogged at our parochial school. The master is working very hard, being anxious to take a higher class.

15237. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—Was the Protestant endowment virtually a denominational endowment?—Yes. There is no Roman Catholic child at all attending my school. There are some Presbyterians, but we make no difference as far as teaching goes.

15238. Do the Presbyterians avail themselves of the religious teaching?—A few do—the ordinary religious teaching. They generally do not make any difference about our catechism.

15239. In addition to the denominational endowment the school is supported, and very adequately, by the denominational assistance obtained through sermons?—Yes. People put down their names for so much a year for the school, as well as for the Bazaar.

tion. Prind and the other wants of the parish. They give what they can.

15240. I suppose you scarcely ever have a Roman Catholic in the school?—Not at all. There never was one, since I came to the parish.

15241. You accept all the formal regulations of the National Board about religious instruction?—Yes.

15242.—You find it possible to have a thoroughly sound Protestant school under the National system?—Certainly, with the help of my Sunday school. I would not think that the half-hour allowed on week days would be sufficient religious training for the children, but some friends come in and help me at the house for religious instruction.

15243. You, yourself, attend at the school for casual inspection?—There is hardly a day that either my estate or myself does not visit the school, and I attend regularly every Wednesday, for three-quarters of an hour. I have the whole of the religious training under my special direction.

15244. The National Board, when you sought to place the school under their charge, never objected on account of the strong denominational tone of the school?—I presume not, but it was not in my time that the school was put under the National Board, but during the time of my predecessor, the present Dean of Cork.

15245. You never heard of any difficulty raised about it?—I never did. The school is open for any person who wishes to attend it, but no Roman Catholics, in fact, do so.

Rev. William
P. Sikes.

REV. WILLIAM P. SIKES, EXAMINED.

15246. CHAIRMAN.—What position do you hold, in connection with the Presentation school?—I am Superior of the Monastery.

15247. The Presentation Order is one that has schools in various parts of the country?—Yes.

15248. Where is its centre?—Its centre is Cork.

15249. How long have you been in connexion with this school?—About twelve years.

15250. In a letter, which you addressed to our Secretary, you infer that there is some doubt about there being any endowment attached to your school; but it is returned, in the Report of 1857, as having school premises of the estimated value of £14 a year, and some trust funds, under Thomas Rodford's will, producing £30 a year?—There is £20 a year rent payable for the schoolhouse, which was built by subscription.

15251. Is the schoolhouse the same which existed in 1857?—The very same.

15253. Were those bequests left for the school?—Yes.

15254. Were those sums invested for the permanent benefit of the school?—No. They were all laid out you after year in the maintenance of the teachers.

15255. You looked upon them as so much income?—Yes.

15256. Then the £300 mentioned in the Report of 1857 is the only capital sum you have?—I think that was expended on the schools, so far as I can understand—£300 on the Lancasterian School, and £200 on the Monastery School.

15257. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—Do you mean on the structure of the school and its improvements?—Yes.

15258. Not on the maintenance of the staff?—No.

15259. CHAIRMAN.—Were the other sums, which you have mentioned, spent on the maintenance of the teachers, and not on building?—Yes.

15260. DE HART.—The £300 is mentioned as having been in existence—invested on mortgage in 1857—and producing £30 a year interest?—Perhaps so.

15261. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—At any rate the money was not forthcoming in your time?—It was not.

15262. DE HART.—In 1857 it was producing £30 a year?—The money expended on the schools has been refunded since. In the year 1851, Mr. McWaters paid the entire principal, £500, and refunded £350 at the same rate of interest, six per cent.

15263. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—Can you say what charges and improvements were made for the £500?—I think the money was expended in fitting the Lancasterian Great George's street, house, and the Monastery. In 1831 the bequest of £500 was got, and it was about that time they were finishing the Monastery school.

15264. DE HART.—Does any entry for interest occur in your accounts?—None. Except the £15 a year, the interest on the £250 which I mentioned was lent again at the former rate.

15265. Does that interest continue to be paid to the present time?—It does.

15266. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—Is that £15 a year secured by mortgage?—Yes.

15267. Is it by mortgage on land?—By mortgage on house property.

15268. Who has the deeds of mortgage?—We have the deeds.

15269. How many children attend your school?—The average attendance for the last year was about 550.

15270. Do you mean in both schools?—No; in Douglas street.

15271. How many Brothers have you to teach them?—Eight Brothers.

15272. I suppose the children get an ordinary primary education?—Yes.

15273. Have you any way of giving boys, showing particular smartness or talent, superior advantages?—No.

13274. You have, of course, got no prizes or exhibitions that would aid clever boys to advance themselves to a superior education in other schools?—None.

13275. Do you think it would be useful if you were able to give every year two or three clever boys in the school £10 or £20 a year to pay for their education in some school of a higher grade than yours?—I have no doubt it would be a great advantage.

13276. Are all the boys Catholics?—Yes.

13277. Are the schools connected with the National Board?—They are.

13278. Do you, too, like the Protestant dissenters, feel that you have a thoroughly good denominational school, notwithstanding the hanging up of our own rules, and that your religious teaching is not interfered with?—Not to a certain extent.

13279. Of course you object to certain forms?—Yes.

13280. Are the Christian Brothers' schools connected with the National Board?—No.

13281. Are there many boys attending their schools who can afford to pay for themselves?—I think not.

13282. They are generally of the poorer classes?—They are.

13283. There are also Model schools in Cork?—There are.

13284. Very few Catholics attend them?—Very few.

REV. DAVID H. POWELL, M.A., CONTINUED.

13295. CHAIRMAN.—You are the Rector of St. Mary's, Shandon?—Yes.

13296. You are one of the Governors of St. Ann's School?—Yes, of the Green Coat Hospital.

13297. How long have you been a Governor?—Exactly twelve months. I am an ex-officio Governor, as Rector of St. Mary's, Shandon.

13298. Have you attended many meetings of the Board?—I have about five times.

13299. How often do the Governors meet?—Once a month.

13300. Do you think the schools are as efficient as they should be, or would you suggest any changes?—There was a very favourable report of the state of the schools sent in at the last inspection, but it seems to me, without wishing to cast any slur on the working of the school, that we ought to have a scheme by which the whole of the Protestant education of that side of Cork might be more efficiently carried on. The endowments of the Green Coat Hospital are, as you have heard, very considerable; and St. Mary's, Shandon school has a clear endowment of about £40 a year. It has an endowment of £50, but we have to pay a rent of £25, leaving £25 a year clear. Both the Green Coat Hospital and St. Mary's, Shandon, are small schools. There are about seventy children in one, and about fifty in the other. It seems to me a great pity to have two small schools, with separate endowments, carried on within a few minutes' walk of each other, instead of having them united into one large and efficient school. The school of St. Mary's, Shandon, is under the National Board, and I would not amalgamate my school with a school under any other Board, the education given is so much superior.

13301. You have the advantage of inspection?—Yes; that is an enormous advantage.

13302. And you have also a Government grant?—Yes, and, feeling that, I moved, with the sanction of the School Vestry of St. Mary's parish, after due notice, in the month of April last, that the Governors of the Green Coat Hospital should, as a preliminary measure, ask the Commissioners of Charitable Bequests whether they would allow that school to be put under the National Board. If that were done we would ask the Commissioners to sanction the amalgamation of the two schools. There was a very large meeting of the Gov-

13303. Of course you have considerable knowledge of the Catholic feeling as to education. The more facilities that are possible for Catholics in a school like yours, under the National Board, are not possible for them in the Model school?—Certainly not. And the feeling with regard to the Model schools is different.

13304. Do the boys attending your school make any payment at all?—Those who can afford it pay one penny per week.

13305. Not all?—No; probably two-thirds.

13306. CHAIRMAN.—I suppose the brotherhood are supported out of the property of the order?—Yes.

13307. Are there any collections for the schools on Sundays?—Only a service once a year.

13308. I suppose there are clergymen who go round and collect subscriptions?—We collect them ourselves.

13309. I suppose the schools are directly under the superintendence of the clergy of the parish?—Yes.

13310. State the particulars as to the £250 bequest on marriage?—It is lent to Mr. M'Sweeney, on house property in Cove-street.

13311. Are the brethren appointed by the clergy of the parish, or by their Superior?—By their Superior.

13312. Has he the power of dismissing or removing them?—He has not the power of removing them.

13313. Dr. HANE.—Is that mortgage for the £250 on the same security on which the £500 originally stood?—Yes, the same.

13314. The Bishop took the chair, and my proposition was defeated by eleven to eight. The difficulty that would seem to be in the way of the trustees was, that the Green Coat Hospital was endowed to train children in the principles of the Church of England—of course the Church of Ireland, now, but it seemed to me that having the children who belong to the Church of England, as it were, on the foundation, and regarding them as the proper objects of the funds of the Green Coat Hospital, we might bring other children in, not exactly on the foundation, but to all intents and purposes securing the benefits of it. I might say with regard to the schoolhouse that our schoolhouse is on the quay in a rather noisy position, and not so central as the other schoolhouse, but it is a very good building. I greatly regret that the two schools are going on side by side instead of having one fine school with endowments, say of £500 a year, and £200 a year more from the National Board.

13315. Dr. HANE.—Which schoolhouse would you hold?—I am hardly prepared to answer that off hand. If we should keep the infants at the Green Coat, and have the boys and girls at St. Mary's, Shandon, I think it would be desirable.

13316. CHAIRMAN.—You would be able to utilize both buildings?—Our buildings are decidedly superior. The boys' schoolroom at the Green Coat Hospital could not contain a good school.

13317. Dr. HANE.—Is not your building in a more noisy situation?—Certainly, the other is in a sort of courtyard where there is only a foot passage.

13318. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—The Green Coat Hospital was founded expressly, and in very strong language indeed, for the maintenance and extension of Protestantism?—Yes.

13319. You mention that that should be united to your school?—Yes, amalgamated.

13320. Is not that school at present denominational, to all intents and purposes?—I know there are two Roman Catholics there at present. The schools are carried on de facto under the National Board rules, and, of course, no religious instruction is given to those children.

13321. You say I presume it also a thoroughly Protestant school?—Yes. There are two Roman Catholics attending it. It is a National school with a conscience clause.

15311 Your proposal is that two schools originally intended to be purely Protestant should be put under the National Board?—One of these is already under it.

15312 You have no fear that there would be a crush of Roman Catholics that would take away the Protestant character of the school?—Not the least fear. We will have our own master.

15313 And they would remain thoroughly Protestant schools?—Yes, and if at any time they had done the Trustees could reverse what they had done and sever from the Board.

15314 Then the Trustees could subsequently if they found it was becoming a mixed school retract their steps, and set the National system at defiance?—Yes. The conscience clause, of course, is a difficulty with regard to teaching the principles of the Protestant religion; but I believe with that conscience clause we could teach the principles of the Protestant religion to the Protestant children. Of course if a Roman Catholic child came in now, he would be obliged to receive Protestant instruction.

15315, Dr. HARR—How long is it since St. Mary's, Shandon, School was put under the National Board?—It is about six years under the Board.

15316 Have you any further observation to make as to the Green Coat school?—In any space, the principle of giving clothes is an exceedingly expensive one.

15317 Mr. O'SHEENQUEST.—According to your idea it would be much better to have a larger number receiving separate education than a distasteful number receiving gifts of clothes?—Yes, I may add as an historical fact that the Green Coat Hospital has the name of St. Mary, Shandon, over the door. St. Mary was the name of the entire original parish, and, in 1758, St. Anne's district was separated from the original parish.

Rev. ROBERT F.
CLARKE, &c.

REV. ROBERT FORBES CLARKE, A.B., CHURCHMAN.

15318 CHAIRMAN.—You held the post of Secretary to the Green Coat Hospital, Cork?—I am the Honorary Secretary, and one of the Trustees.

15319 How long have you held that position?—Since the commencement of 1874.

15320 What are your duties?—My duties are to keep the minutes of the proceedings of the Board, to summon the meetings, and to prepare any matter necessary for their consideration.

15321 Can you give the names of the members of the Board?—I could not. I applied to the Commissioners of Charitable Bequests to know when I was to consider as Governors, because there are gentlemen, who were formerly Trustees, still living in different parts of the world—Australia and elsewhere, and it has been laid down for me that any Governor, once appointed, remains a Governor till he either dies or resigns.

15322 You know who they are that are available?—There is a certain number of Governors who for ordinary purposes are available.

15323 How many do you summon?—I used formerly to summon about thirteen, and lately about a dozen, for each ordinary Board. I may mention that, on the occasion to which Mr. Powell referred, when the question of amalgamation was to be brought forward, he required me to summon all who were Governors, and as I did not know how to do so, we arranged that a certain number from the old minute book should be summoned. It was in consequence of that difficulty that I often was applied to the Commissioners of Charitable Donations and Bequests for instructions on the subject. The Secretary replied that unless a case were submitted by the Trustees he could not undertake to answer the question. We have not since had a quorum of the Governors to bring the matter regularly before them.

15324 There are monthly meetings of the Board?—The meetings are summoned usually, but there is not always a quorum in attendance.

15325 How many constitute a quorum?—Five.

15326 Is there any business done, when there are less than five present?—No business is considered as transacted by the Board, but there are sometimes bills for salaries presented. There has been no quorum since June last.

15327 What has been done about the salaries?—It is considered that the treasurer is authorised, when the salaries fall due, to pay them, as the ordinary expenditure of the institution.

15328 The minute book shows that there was a large attendance on April 1, 1879?—That was the meeting to which Mr. Powell referred. There were twenty governors present, including the bishop.

15329 Do you desire to add anything further to the evidence we have already had, as to this institution?—With regard to the schools, as constituted under the Act, it would seem to me that originally the children were to be educated and resident in the establishment. Here is an extract from the act of the fourth year of George I., A.D. 1717, entitled—

"An Act for settling the quarter parts upon the parished clergy of the diocese of Tuam : . . . as also for constituting a charitable foundation in the city of Cork :—

"And whereas several well disposed persons have, with the consent of the minister and church wardens of the parish of St. Mary, Shandon, in the north suburbs of the city of Cork, created two schools called the Green Coat Hospital, of the said parish of St. Mary, Shandon, in which hospital one hundred children of both sexes are daily placed and educated in the principles of the Protestant religion, established by law in this Kingdom, and have also built a house, with suitable accommodation, for the use of one master and one mistress for the purpose of teaching, with a convenient library, and also a decent sick house for eighteen poor decayed housekeepers of the said parish, which several buildings, with the ground belonging thereto which said piece or parcel of ground does now belong to the said minister of the said parish in right of the said church, and was entirely useless until employed in the said buildings : now to the intent and purpose that the said piece of ground may now and be applied to the said pious and charitable uses, be it enacted by the authority aforesaid, that the said piece or parcel of ground, with all the buildings, which now are, or at any time hereafter shall be erected thereon, shall be and are hereby vested and conveyed in and upon the Right Honourable Herbert, Earl of Kildare, and James, Earl of Barrymore, patrons of the said church, and their heirs, the Right Rev. Peter, Lord Bishop of Cork, and his successors, Lords Bishops of Cork, for the time being, the Mayor of Cork, and his successors, Mayor of Cork for the time being, the Honourable Sir John Broderick, knight, Sir Standish Hartington, knight, Francis Edgeworth, of London, esquire, John Rogers, knight, the Honourable Reginald General Robert Skene, Edward Alster and Edward Knapp, esquires, Members of Parliament for the city of Cork, Colonel Robert Rogers, Captain James Maule, Philip Croft, esquire, John Wood, esquire, Edward Brown, esquire, doctor George Rogers, Mr. Abraham Moore, the reverend Mr. Richard Ballin, Mr. John Howlands, Mr. John Carleton, Mr. Daniel Power, Mr. Edward Welles, Mr. William Manney, Mr. Daniel Theobald, and their heirs, and the minister and church wardens of the said parish, and their successors for the time being, to the intent and purpose, and upon this special trust and confidence, that the said piece or parcel of ground, and the buildings thereon, shall for ever hereafter be applied to and disposed of to the pious and charitable uses aforesaid, and that the said several persons, their respective heirs and successors, be and are hereby created and constituted into a body politic, or corporate to that intent only, by the name of trustees for the Green Coat Hospital, in the parish of Shandon in the city of Cork.

"And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, that the above named persons, their respective heirs and successors, or any five or more of them, being met together in the library of the said hospital, the minister of the parish for the time being having notice of each meeting, shall have full power to direct the management of all such estates as shall from time to time be given and received towards the boarding them out apprentices, and paying the respective salaries of the said master and mistress, and towards the support of the said eighteen poor decayed housekeepers, and keeping the said building in sufficient repair, and other necessary uses of the said hospital; and that the said trustees constituted by virtue of this Act, or any five of them, as aforesaid, may be enabled to add and elect from time to time such other trustees, as they shall see convenient; and that the persons so elected shall have like interest, power, and authority, as is hereby vested in the persons above named.

"And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, that this act shall be deemed and taken in all courts and places, and by all and every person and persons, as a public act of Parliament: and that no fees shall be paid or taken by any person or persons for passing the same, saving and reserving to the King's most excellent majesty, his heirs and successors, and all and every other person and persons whatsoever bodies politic and corporate, other than and except the Archbishop of Tuam, and his successors, and other than and except the rector or vicar of the said parish of St. Mary, Shandon, and his successors, all their respective right, title, interest, claim and demand, which they or any of them have or may have, late, or out of the said five hundred acres of land, and the land and building so settled for said charity."

15330 You do not now kind the children out as apprentices?—I am not aware 15331 Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—Do you favour the idea of amalgamation?—I do not, for reasons more than one. One is, that I am not, and never have been, in favour of the National Board. Another is, that I think it a pity to deprive the school of its entirely parochial aspect. It would seem as if it were intended to be under the minister of the parish, and I think it would be better to have it a strictly parochial school, carried on in the spirit, and according to the intention of the founder. There is one thing which would promote its efficiency, and that is, if it were allowable, to receive payments for pupils: at present it would seem that there is no authority to take payment. Payment would supplement the master's salary, and give him more interest in the school. The re-arrangement of trustees might also be acted with advantage. If the interest were more localised there would be a better attendance at the meetings.

Rev. FRANCIS DE MOTMOLONEY Bt. GEORGE, M.A. examined.

15332 Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—Has it been ever suggested to you to take payment, in an indirect way, in the form of donations, from the parents of the children attending the Green Coat Hospital?—The parents like to pay what they can. Some parents would not send their children to a free or parish school.

15333 CHAIRMAN.—Do you get back income tax from the Guardians of the Poor?—Reverend Sir—Some of them we have done so, but not lately.

Rev. THOMAS BRIDGEMAN WARREN, M.A., examined.

15335 CHAIRMAN.—You are connected with St. Peter's Parish, Cork?—I am the Rector of that parish.

15336 How long have you held that office?—Since the year 1873.

15337 Is the school a parochial school?—Yes.

15338 Is it an exclusively church school?—Yes; we have two schools, a boys' and girls' school, and an infant school, both under the National Board.

15339 You have no number of any other denominations in either of them?—No, all the children at present attending are church children.

15340 What does the endowment consist of?—We have got a series of grants, one is Thomas Deane's grant of about £55 a year, and Moses Deane's grant of about £23 a year, Smith's bequest about £47 a year, Archbishop Parnsey's £10 10s. a year, and Shannon's bequest about £8 a year.

15341 Dr. HART.—The report of the Commission of 1867 mentions two different institutions, one in Peter's Lane, and the other in Thomas-street?—Thomas-street school is at present our infant school.

15342 Were the two united?—Yes.

15343 CHAIRMAN.—Has not the Thomas-street school been removed to Peter's Lane?—It has.

15344 There was a school in Thomas-street now?—No.

15345 What has become of the building?—It is held on lease by the parish, from the Rev. Robert Sturley, a clergyman in the Diocese of Dublin.

15346 Has it been given up?—No, the Vestry of the parish hold that still.

15347 It has ceased to be used as a school?—It has.

15348 Dr. HART.—The endowment for the Thomas-street school was, in 1857, returned as producing £9 s. 7d. from land, and £10 12s. 4d. from trust funds?—Yes.

15349 CHAIRMAN.—Do the Vestry of the parish receive anything for the old school-house over the rent paid to Mr. Sturley?—We have a profit. The rent received for the house is £18 a year, and the head-rent paid to Mr. Sturley is £5 13s. 4d. a year.

15351 Why have you not sought for it?—It was my own omission. I found it so difficult to fill and vouch the funds, obtained at the Custom House, that I gave up the attempt. It may be well that I should mention that the school is inspected at present by the Rev. John B. Pate, the Diocesan Inspector, who acts both for the Church Education Society and for the diocese. It has always been inspected by the Church Education Society.

15351 Who is the lessee?—I never understood that accurately. The late Archbishop understands it.

15352 Was it not leased for some special purpose?—It was used at one time for a school, at another as a residence for the sexton of the church, and at another for an almshouse.

15353 The endowment of Peter's Lane school was returned, in 1857, as being £56 a year from land, and £43 12s. 4d. from trust funds?—There are two distinct bequests. Out of Thomas Deane's bequest of £56 a year, £14 is paid for the teachers and £43 for clothing the school children. We receive that money through the Board of Charitable Donations and Bequests. We also have £25 from Moses Deane's legacy, and there is also Smith's bequest of about £47 a year. To this must be added Parnsey's bequest producing £10 10s., and Shannon's producing £8 a year; but these are spent in maintaining the infant school.

15354 Then the total income is about £180 a year?—About that.

15355 Have your schools any other sources of income?—They are under the National Board, and receive grants.

15356 Is there a master and mistress?—A master, a workmistress, and a monitor in the principal school; and an infant schoolmistress in the other school.

15357 Are there any subscriptions collected?—No.

15358 Dr. HART.—How long have the schools been under the National Board?—About five or six years.

15359 CHAIRMAN.—Is the principal school exclusively a primary school, or is it more of a high-class school?—It is not a high-class school.

15360 Do any of the pupils pay fees, or are they all free?—All the pupils are free.

15361 What is the total number attending the school now?—There are about 122 children on the roll.

15362 The school of course is inspected by the National Board Inspector?—Yes.

15363 How often does he inspect?—He holds the examinations for the results five once a year, and becomes in pretty often—wherever he is passing by.

15364 I suppose the children come principally from your own parish?—Yes, almost altogether. Mr. Beames is treasurer to the schools; Moses Duane's money is received from the Corporation. Smith's bequest is paid by the Board of Charitable Bequests.

15365. What salaries do you pay out of the endowment?—The master is paid £50 a year, and the mistress £38. The mistress of the infant school receives £26 a year.

Mr William
H. Beames.

Mr. WILLIAM HENRY BEAMES, examined.

15366. CHAIRMAN.—You are the treasurer of St. Peter's parish schools, Cork?—Yes.

15367. What are your duties?—Merely to receive and pay out the money.

15368. You keep the accounts, and collect the rents?—Yes; the rents are paid very regularly. I should add that I am treasurer only a short time. The late Mr. Ballard was formerly the treasurer.

15369. Is the income, retained in the Report of the former Royal Commissioners as derived from land, a fixed rentcharge?—No, it was paid in, I think years ago, from the Corporation.

15370. Then there is no land belonging to the schools?—In point of fact there is none. Some money was lent to a private individual, and it was recovered, after much difficulty, and invested in the funds, producing about £300, the dividends on which I also receive.

15371. Who are the trustees?—The Rev. Mr. Warren and myself. Mr. Ballard was also one until his death.

15372. Are there any messuages except the rectory of the parish?—The churchwardens are nominally. I should add that the vestry only rebuild the school-house, which is a very fine one, a few years ago.

15373. Where did the funds for that purpose come from?—Some of the endowment money was applied, and I think a small amount of subscriptions.

15374. Dr. HART.—How is the money from the Corporation secured—in there a deed, or is it a rentcharge?—It was never properly acknowledged, but they always paid the interest.

15375. It appears that there was a sum of £1,387 given by Moses Duane. I presume that was lent to the Corporation, and that they pay interest on it?—Yes.

15376. Do the trustees appoint their own colleagues?—Yes. The fewer they are the better.

15377. The school possesses Government stock, as well as money held by the Corporation?—Yes.

15378. Whenever a new trustee is to be appointed, you have to go to the expense necessary for transferring the securities?—The late Archbishop who was one of the trustees, transferred his duties to the Rev. Mr. Warren, when leaving Cork. Mr. Francis Bernard Beames, was the other trustee, and his trust was transferred to me.

15379. Is it always necessary to go to the trouble of transferring?—It is a mere form to be gone through at the bank.

15380. What does it cost?—It costs nothing.

15381. CHAIRMAN.—Are the master and mistress, husband and wife?—Yes.

15382. Do they reside on the premises?—No, we have no house for them at present. They have an allowance for coal, gas, and washing. The only one, strictly speaking, for use in the schools.

Rev. James B.
Dwosan.

15383. CHAIRMAN.—You are the Superior of the Order of Christian Brothers, in Cork?—I had been so, up to about two years ago; but advanced age prevented me from continuing in that office. Indeed I could not do justice to the children, or the public, if I continued longer. I am now properly speaking a Religious; but so far as my health permits I attend the schools, and I look carefully after the expenditure of the endowment.

15384. I believe the Christian Brothers have a good many schools in various parts of Ireland, in addition to those in Cork?—At least sixty.

15385. Is Cork the centre of the Order?—No, the centre is in Dublin.

15386. The Order has a very large school in Cork?—Yes, when the Royal Commissioners were here, about twenty-five years ago, the schools had ten departments, while the endowment was not much over £350. Immediately after that one of the brethren died, and his friends, among the citizens of Cork, raised, as a monument to him, a drawing school which he had been most anxious to have. A short time afterwards, a gentleman in our neighbourhood added considerably to the schools, at an expense of over £1,600. We have now twenty school-rooms, including the drawing school, and a very large examination hall, supplied with mathematical instruments presented by our friends. Among the rest I may mention, our late representative Mr. Romayne, who, a short time before his death, presented us with £50. Another gentleman presented us with £100.

15387. What does the entire income of the school now amount to?—The income now is, from the lands of Coolevoking (Dr. Barry's endowment) £360 16s 8d. per annum, and £36 the interest on a mortgage for £880, bequeathed by a Mr. Kelly.

15388. Are the lands of Coolevoking, held by lease at will?—We have the fee-simple, and a Miss Parsons pays us £400 Irish. She holds under an assignment of a lease, from Archbishop Cox to John Moore, for three lives and forty-one years, at an annual rent of £400 Irish. I possess a book containing an essay of the title to the property, showing that the lease mentioned in the lease have all dropped, and containing a certificate of the death of the last life, which expired in 1869, when the forty-one years commenced to run. The lands produce we understand, about £700 a year.

15389. Dr. HART.—Then the lease, which is outstanding against you, will expire in 1910?—Yes, about that time.

15390. CHAIRMAN.—Are all the schools which the Order possess in Cork situated together?—No, we have twelve rooms, and the exhibition hall, in Parnell lane. We have five rooms in Blaney-lane and three on Sullivan's quay.

15391. Is the principal school in Parnell-lane?—It is. This very week we had 1,000 children in attendance in Parnell-lane school alone.

15392. Is the property belonging to the schools entirely allocated to those in Cork?—It is entirely allocated to the Cork schools, but it does not pay more than half the expenses of the schools, particularly of the books, every article of consumption is so high, and besides the education which the children must receive is quite different from what it was in former times.

15393. The property belonging to these schools is quite distinct from any general property belonging to the Order of Brothers!—Quite distinct. We cannot expend one farthing of that property out of Cork, because it was bequeathed for the schools in the city of Cork, and, moreover, all the money we receive from the citizens we are bound to expend within the city of Cork.

Oct 25, 1878
 Rev. James K.
 Duggan.

15394. What sum do the scholars pay?—Formerly they paid only one halfpenny a week, but we have been obliged, in consequence of the extension of the school and the necessity of providing well for the pupils, to raise the fee to one penny; and some of the advanced boys pay two pence a week.

15395. Is that the highest sum any of them pay?—That is the highest to my knowledge. We have none, with very few exceptions, but poor children.

15396. Where are the children of the wealthier people of Cork educated?—They are educated principally at the Seminary. There are four parents attached to it and some lay teachers. I am not, however, very well acquainted with the state of the middle class education in Cork.

15397. Are the fees at all the Christian Brothers' schools as low as at your schools in Cork?—I think so. In fact, we cannot receive substantial payment for education at all, but I may remark that some very respectable children have been educated in our schools from time to time, and, while they do not pay more than the others, their parents are quite prepared to uphold the Institution. In one case a gentleman, Mr. Michael Sullivan, promised us to receive his two boys, as he considered they required such services as ours. We yielded, after many objections, to his request, and the first year they were in our school he sent £20 as a donation, he sent £10 a year afterwards. At his death he bequeathed us £100, so that if any of the better class are received in the schools, they more than pay for what is done for them.

15398. You have twenty-three Brothers in the schools. Are they distributed among the various rooms?—Yes.

15400. Have you any mention as pupil teachers?—The Brothers were really so overworked that they were incapable of discharging their duties, so we thought, efficiently, and so about twelve months ago we introduced paid monitors. I think they have cost us for the year £117 5s. 3d., but the services they render amply repay the outlay. We could not give the education, which so many poor children require, without such help.

15401. Are the pupils at your schools principally the children of the very poorest class?—Generally speaking they are, but by their ability and acquirements they often rise themselves to very respectable positions. There are a great many instances of their success in the city of Cork.

15402. In fact, you provide education for the lower and middle classes?—We do not take what we call the middle class, strictly speaking, but supply the children of the poor—for example the children of tradesmen. Perhaps some of those may have four, five, or six children, and cannot give them an education to enable them to compete with those in a better position.

15403. How are the Brothers supported?—Have they any funds in addition to those that belong to the school?—The Brothers, generally speaking, bring with them a certain sum, as much as covers the expense of their training. Others bring larger sums. That money is devoted exclusively to the training of young men who may have ability and desire to spend their lives in educating the young, but who perhaps may not be able to pay for their training.

15404. Do the Brothers live together?—We live together in Peaseclose-lane.

15405. Do they go out every day to teach in the other schools?—The Peaseclose-lane schools are quite close to our residence. Four of the Brothers go every day to the Blaney-lane schools, and three to the Sullivan's-quay schools.

15406. Have you any schools in the county of Cork?—We have schools in Charleville, Middleton, Youghal, Doneraile, and a few other places.

15407. Have these schools separate endowments of their own?—Generally speaking they are supported by means of a collection made in the parish, for the purpose.

15408. Are the sums of money brought in by the Brothers, to pay for the cost of their training, common to the order all over Ireland?—All over Ireland. We have one house in Dublin in which all are trained.

15409. There is no training institution in Cork?—No, after they have been some time in the house in Dublin they are sent to us in Cork. I might say their training is perfected in the local establishment to which they are sent.

15410. Have you any supervision over the schools outside the city, or are they managed from Dublin?—We have nothing whatever to do with schools outside our own city. The director of the schools is constantly engaged for three days in the week in Peaseclose-lane, examining the children and giving lectures in some branch of natural philosophy, and he attends one day in the week to the outer establishments.

15411. Who visits the schools—is there an inspector?—The director of the schools is the ordinary visitor—that is the local visitor, but there are in our society at least five who are appointed to examine the schools at certain periods of the year, and the superior of the body examines the accounts, or if he cannot come himself he deputed another to do so.

15412. The director of the schools inspects them periodically?—He is in the Peaseclose-lane school three days in the week, and one day each in the branch schools.

15413. Are his duties confined to the city of Cork?—To the city of Cork alone.

15414. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—You have produced here a book, in which a statement of your various properties is set out?—Yes.

15415. That book contains an account of the title of each property?—Yes, and states where the title deeds may be found.

15416. The latter part of the book refers to certain obligations you are under of having masses said for donors?—Yes, that is known to the community, but lest it might be forgotten it is always registered in that way.

15417. The book also contains a statement of the insurances you have effected on the premises?—Yes. It is necessary for us to insure like every other person. We keep notes of the insurances, their amounts, and the offices at which we insure.

15418. Is the book regularly kept, and are fresh entries made according as new properties are acquired or new obligations arise?—Certainly. It is all in my own handwriting.

15419. CHAIRMAN.—Who are the trustees in whom the property is vested?—Mr. Francis Lyons and Mr. Thomas Lyons, two magistrates of the city of Cork, with two members of our own community, are the trustees for the Oolebrook property, in accordance with the will of the donor.

15420. Is the other property held by the same trustees?—No; that property was bequeathed to ourselves, for the education of the poor, and, generally speaking, in cases of that kind the trustees are members of our own body. There are always at least three trustees for any property we possess.

15421. Those bequests are carefully preserved?—They are.

15422. You use the subscriptions to meet the current expenses?—We endeavour to meet the current expenses by means of the subscriptions and sermons. Anything we can possibly spare we invest, in some way profitable for the institution. Within the last twenty-five years we have built a large number of cottages, which have done immense good.

Oct. 29, 1912.
 Sir James K.
 Piggott.

15432. Was that done as a speculation?—No, indeed. Our object principally was to provide the poor in our neighbourhood with comfortable dwellings, and it struck one of us at least that the completion of a child's education is to send him home to a comfortable dwelling. We have, however, also found it to be a most profitable investment, and during the last twenty-five years I have discovered only two instances of drunkenness on the whole property, and as regards the rents, to the honor of our people be it said, there is nothing due. I compared six months of one year with six of another, and found it was $\frac{1}{2}$ of difference in the profits. The parties who bequeathed these sums of money to us wished to have cottages for the poor, and so the want was very great we felt perfectly justified in supplying it. It was a very profitable outlay too, because the houses produce between 7 and 8 per cent.

15434. Mr. O'SULLIVAN.—What is the length of the training that your Brothers undergo, before they undertake the work of education?—About twelve months in the novitiate, after which they go to a larger house, where they see education well conducted, and take part in it. Two years is the time allowed; but then they render great assistance during the second year.

15435. Is the novitiate devoted to educational as well as spiritual training?—Certainly. They have a training school at Drumcondra, Dublin, into which novices go for three hours every day.

15436. Do you give anything more than a primary education, to the boys attending your schools in Cork?—We do. We teach them every branch of English.

15437. Do you teach them English literature as a form suitable to their probable wants?—Certainly, and also science.

15438. You encourage them in the reading of English authors?—Yes; and I think the late Intermediate Education Act will encourage that very much. Twenty-eight of our pupils were successful at the Intermediate examination—twelve got prizes and sixteen passed.

15439. Did they present themselves in Latin and Greek?—No. In English only, but I may mention that for some time two of the Brothers have been teaching French to boys who may require it. Some lads who were employed as drapers' assistants, and who had been with us formerly, told us they found a great want in not knowing French.

15440. Do many of the boys learn French?—I believe 100 at present.

15441. What branches of science are taught in your schools?—Algebra, Euclid, and some branches of natural philosophy.

15442. I suppose algebra and Euclid are taught only to a limited number of the boys who have reached a certain advanced stage?—They must have advanced sufficiently. There are two classes of children attending on schools. At least one-third of the children attending are very poor, and do not even pay the school fee—one penny a week. Our Brothers have a feeling of delicacy in asking them for it, from their knowledge of the circumstances of the parents. That class of children generally leaves us at the age of thirteen, because their parents are obliged to get them into offices as messengers, or to send them out as shop boys. Some make sacrifices, and keep their children at school up to the age of fifteen. It is a remarkable fact that among the twenty-eight who succeeded at the Intermediate examinations, the first on the list is the son of a carman, and the second, who had lost both his father and mother, is totally dependent on an uncle who has a large family.

15433. That, from a certain point of view, suggests a classification of the boys into two divisions—those who leaving at thirteen, get none but a primary education, and those who, being a shade better off, remain, and avail themselves of the better class of education you give?—Exactly.

15434. Do many of the boys who remain over thirteen or fourteen avail themselves of the teaching afforded in science?—Decidedly, and it is very useful to them in their respective trades. Chemistry, for example, the comparative strength of materials, the influence heat has on metallic substances, and all such subjects are taught to those who are likely to become tradesmen or engineers.

15435. Are those subjects taught more expensively and by demonstration than by the aid of mathematics?—The pupils of course go through a course of mathematics, either preparatory to or accompanying this instruction. There are at least 450 children learning Euclid.

15436. You find that it is better, as a rule, to postpone the teaching of the more abstract subjects until you get a class of boys that can remain with you a longer time, and to confine the poor boys, who have to go away at twelve or thirteen, to the "three R's"?—Decidedly.

15437. You give the more extensive course of primary education to the lumber class that can remain?—That is precisely our practice.

15438. Do you regard that as a solution of the question that science ought to be taught in primary schools?—I do. I would be sorry to get a box at the intellect God has given to our poor.

15439. Do you find that, in a locality like Cork, an education embracing the rudiments of science is a necessity?—It is a necessity at present.

15440. Apart from the Intermediate Education Act, have you any prizes or endowments of any kind, by which you can give clever boys, that would deserve to be promoted to a higher education, the opportunity of paying their fees?—We have not. We merely give prizes in the school, and those prizes are generally taken from the boys' own fund.

15441. Do you believe it would be an advantage, and a useful development of the principle of the Intermediate system, if prizes were given, through the country, to clever boys to enable them to pursue higher studies?—There can be no doubt of it. One instance presents itself. We got a little boy about six years old from the Sisters of Charity Infant School. He remained with us till this year. He got next in the middle class at the Intermediate examination, and is now being educated gratuitously by a clergyman at the Diocesan School.

15442. Do you think that all the poor little boys in Cork go to school?—Indeed I regret to say they do not. Nor is there sufficient school accommodation for the poor, but great efforts have lately been made in order to get that class of children to attend school. Besides the two industrial schools in the north and south portions of the city respectively, one for males, and the other for females, built by the diocese, one gentleman alone has given means to the towns of the North and South Presentation Convents to erect industrial schools. He has also assisted the Sisters of Charity in our neighbourhood, and they have, in consequence, an infant school with 500 children from four to six years old. The boys they send to us at the age of six years, and the girls are drafted to the same juvenile schools.

15443. If there were accommodation and teaching power supplied from one source or another, agreeably to the wants and convictions of the people in Cork, do you think it would be easy to get the great body of the children to attend school?—I do, decidedly, if there were an unobjectionable system of education.

15444. You think the laity and clergy would cooperate to get them to go?—I cannot do better than state a fact. At least one-third of our children are very poor, and that shows the anxiety the poor people have to educate the children, if they have the opportunity.

15445. And, consequently, if there were a perfectly suitable system of education tolerated and favoured by the State, with the assistance and co-operation of the public in getting the children to school, very little compulsion would be necessary?—Very little compulsion.

15446 But at present, although the public have done an immensely in Cork to give schoolhouses there is not sufficient accommodation?—Great efforts, as I said, have been made. In the parish in which that school house is situated, is an extensive school which was built recently by a very zealous clergyman. With regard to compulsory education, I beg to say that I do not think on compulsion in Ireland is prepared for that kind of education. First of all, I fear greatly that the school rate would be too high. I also fear that, to effect the purpose, you should clothe the children, as they do in some continental countries.

15447 There is no formal inspection of your schools by the clergy?—No formal inspection except this, that the clergyman of the parish examines the children thoroughly before they are admitted to their first communion. We begin with children at six years old, when they are sent to confession, and at the age of nine they are prepared for the first communion. The bishop also, himself, thoroughly examines every individual before he gives confirmation. But with regard to the secular department the clergyman do not interfere. They may come in and see what is going on, but anything like an official visit they do not make. The official visits are confined to the director of the schools, who visits every day, and to the governors, members of our own body, who come round from time to time.

15448 Dr. HART—One of the books which you have produced contains an account of the rents of Clonovick?—Yes.

15449 And of those of the weekly tenants?—Yes.

15450 Your account books show that £268 13s. 2d. was the balance to credit at the end of the year 1873, upon the weekly tenants, and £216 3s. 2d. from Clonovick—that would be £485 altogether?—Yes. That is the total amount of the endowment.

15451 Where is the account of the expenditure of the money?—The education of 3,000 children costs twice as much, I should say, as the endowment.

15452 Have you got any books showing the expenditure?—I have not brought them here, but they can be forwarded to you.

15453 As far as the books you have produced go, they show how much money is received, but do not show how it was expended—whether on the schools, or on some other object?—There is no other object with us but the schools, because we cannot make use of our single shilling for our own use beyond a mere plain maintenance. I may add that at the time of the last Commission we were able to support each member of the community for £25 a year, while the cost for that alone is now £40. The maintenance of twenty-five Brothers at £40 a year each would cost £1,000.

15454 Are the accounts audited?—Yes.

15455 Does the auditor investigate every item of expenditure?—He does. I could produce the audited accounts for the last twenty-five years.

15456 CHAIRMAN—Do you think there is any considerable number of children in Cork who peacefully do not get a primary education?—I believe so.

15457 Are there not a good many National schools in Cork?—Not many.

15458 There is the Presentation Brothers' school, the Douglas-street, and the Lancasterian school. What others are there?—There is the National school attached to St. Patrick's parish, and there is another about ten minutes' walk from our schools in Peacock-lane.

15459 Beyond those two National schools there are no others, but the school you speak of?—No; but there are a good many female schools in the charge of nuns.

15460 I suppose but few Roman Catholics go to the Model National schools?—Very few Catholics, I believe.

15461 What difference is there between the position of the Christian Brothers and the Presentation Brothers?—The objects of their institutions are the same, but there is some little difference in the form of government; the Presentation Brothers are I believe generally Dissenters' congregations. Ours are for the whole country, and the colonies. We have several establishments in Australia.

15462 In fact the Bishop has the ultimate control over the schools of the Presentation Brothers, but you are independent?—Independent so far. We cannot of course establish schools without the authority of the Bishop, who always looks after them, and at particular times attends to the public examinations and so on.

15463 But you hold your property quite distinct from any church property?—Quite distinct.

REV. JAMES DOMINICK BURKE, examined.

Rev. James D. Burke.

15464 CHAIRMAN—You are the director of the Christian Brothers' Schools in Cork?—Yes.

15465 Your duties are to inspect and examine the school in Peacock-lane on three days in the week?—Yes.

15466 And on the other days you go to the other schools?—I visit the other establishments in turn, generally on Tuesday the Blaney-street, and on Thursday the Sullivan's-quay school.

15467 Is it part of your duty to teach, or merely to supervise?—It is part of my duty to examine, to inspect, and to see that all things are properly conducted.

15468 You have a general supervision over all the schools belonging to your order, in the city of Cork?—Yes.

15469 Have you the control over the scheme of education, the subjects to be taught, and the books to be used?—The books used are those sanctioned by the Institute. We are at liberty to use others to a certain extent. We can use those connected with the Intermediate course, without any authority for doing so more than the necessities of the case. The course of study is that prescribed for the whole body, but our own scheme we are at liberty to add additional subjects, when necessity requires it; for instance, we have attached to our establishment a laboratory and a large physics hall, where all the branches of physical science are taught. There is also a nice collection of instruments for illustrating physical science.

15470 Have you a special teacher employed for physical science?—The Brothers themselves teach it.

15471 Has any Brother gone through a special training for the purpose of teaching physical science?—I myself conduct the teaching of science and chemistry in the Peacock-lane school, though there are many others who could take my place in one of my absence. The Brothers in the other schools could carry on their themselves. We have in our own establishment lectures for the Brothers from time to time, besides forming part of the course prescribed by the Superior for all the Brothers. There is also a very fine drawing school in the Peacock-lane establishment. There are forty boys in the establishment learning drawing from cards, and they also learn the use of colours. There are five branches taught: outline drawing, drawing connected with engineering, drawing connected with architecture, landscape drawing and drawing from the cast.

15472 Is there any instruction in vocal music?—There is a very large singing class attached to the school, taught on the tone sol-fa system, which is very successful; there are about 200 in the class. A Brother teaches the class himself. We never employ secularists to do any of those things which the Brothers themselves are competent to teach as forming part of their education. Singing is taught in all the junior schools by ear.

Oct 25, 1879
 Rev. James
 D. Baile.

15473. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—Do you think that the number of children in Cork who ought to be attending school, but who are not doing so, is large? I think the number is rather large, but the class of children, as far as I can see, that is not in school is that of the very poor, and I think that perhaps it would be necessary to have special schools for those in order to induce them to come. There must be certain attractions which will be strong enough to induce those children to come to the school, and to keep them there. We ourselves made an experiment on one occasion with regard to the very poor class of children who do not go to school. We selected two rooms in Parnoch-lane for their reception and relaxed the rules a little.

15474. What rules did you relax in order to induce those children to come to school?—In the first place as to the hour of attendance. We are very strict in requiring our pupils to attend at a certain hour in the morning, and for the class to which I am now referring we made the hours rather later in order to encourage them to come. If we were too strict in enforcing their attendance they would not come at all. Then we had to give them such requisites as school books, either for nothing or for part payment. We find as a general rule they set very little value on what they get for nothing, but if they pay even a small part of the cost, they value the books so much the more. Having tried the plan of relaxing the rule as to regular attendance for a considerable time, we found that if we were to persevere in it, it would have had an injurious effect on the establishment.

15475. Why?—Because the irregular attendance of those boys would operate very injuriously on the others. Evil association seems to have a more powerful influence than good, and we therefore felt it advisable not to bring the character of the school down, for the sake of devoting a portion of that class that would not attend.

15476. Undoubtedly it is an evil that that class do not get the education of the community in general?—Of course it is a very great evil. I believe the statistics of crime show that those who are the worst criminals, and the most numerous, are those who are not educated.

15477. From your experience in Cork, what do you think would remedy that state of things, and bring those children into school?—I think that more school accommodation should be provided, and that those schools should be conducted by religious men, who would give themselves up to that class of children, and have a special attraction for them.

15478. Do you consider that there is a class of the community in such a state of poverty, that they really cannot attend your schools?—We have ourselves a very large portion of the very poor class attending our schools, and they are very regular, but they are so poor that they are not able to provide themselves with books or to pay the school penny. There is, however, another portion of that class that cannot be induced to come.

15479. Why cannot they be induced to come?—What seems to me to be the great cause is the want of a sufficient number of infant schools. We find the children who come to us from the Presentation Convent, in Clarendon-street, or the Sisters of Charity, in Parnoch-lane, are principally of that class, and being taken up young by the nuns, and made accustomed to school, they find no difficulty in continuing their attendance afterwards, when brought to us.

15480. You recommend the establishment of more infant schools?—I think that would be a useful step.

15481. And also a properly and judiciously constituted system of assistance by the State, in the giving of books and the providing of school accommodation for those?—Yes. They require to be greatly assisted.

But, I think, any system of education, that is not denominational, will not succeed in effecting the object.

15482. Do you not think that, after a while, the difference would diminish, and it would become a tradition for all classes to send their children to school?—I think it would. I believe the love of the Irish of the very lowest class for books is very great, and if facilities were afforded they would avail of them. We find some of the poorest strutting every nerve to keep their boys at school, and to get them a higher education.

15483. You do not think it would be necessary to employ any stringent compulsion by law, to enforce attendance?—I do not think it would be necessary.

15484. CHAIRMAN.—It has been mentioned that there are very few National schools at Cork. How is that, because there is hardly a country parish in Ireland, that has not a National school, very generally attended by the poorer classes, and Cork ought not to be poorer than the country districts?—I think in the city of Cork it arises from this, that the number of religious establishments is very great. We have 1,063 children on the rolls of our schools. Then the Presentation Brothers, at the south side, have a very large number attending their three establishments. The whole education of the city, I may say, is in the hands of the religious orders. It is in the suburbs that the National schools prevail. On the north side we have a National school. In St. Patrick's there is a National school, and there is a National school for boys and girls in the suburbs of the suburbs.

15485. There seems to be still a want of accommodation, and what I wanted to ascertain was, why that want has not been filled by National schools?—I think the want of school accommodation is for the very poor and the very young poor. I do not think that the National Board would see their way to the establishment of schools for those, unless specially brought under their attention. I think if means were at the disposal of the religious bodies, they would be able to meet all those requirements, and embrace that class of poor children who are about the streets.

15486. How are the annual examinations conducted in the Christian Brothers' schools?—Are papers sent down from Dublin for the higher classes, or are those two or three Brothers sent down to examine?—In the first place, in February or March of every year, a paper is sent by the Superior-General to be filled up and returned, for each establishment in the country. The visitor or examiner coming down in a few months afterwards, brings that paper with him, and tests the accuracy of the statements made therein.

15487. Is that as regards the numbers?—Both as regards the numbers and the proficiency of the children.

15488. Does he examine the pupils?—He examines them in classes, according to the subjects in which they are presented, or the statements made in the returns.

15489. Does he examine every boy?—Yes. It takes a fortnight or three weeks to examine on these establishments. Some subjects are examined in by written questions, and some said case.

15490. Are there any prizes awarded at the result of that examination?—No. We ourselves give prizes from the school penny. Each Brother gets a certain amount of the school pence for prizes for the boys in his own division, and the director or Superior of the establishment has some at his own disposal, which he gives according to his own knowledge of the advancement of the pupils.

15491. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—I believe you do not hold any school on Saturday?—Some boys come and we have examinations for them, but it is not a regular school day.

MR. THOMAS LYONS, J.P., EXAMINED.

Oct 25, 1879

Mr. Thomas
Lyons, J.P.

15492. CHAIRMAN.—You are a leading merchant of the city of Cork, and one of the trustees of some property belonging to the Christian Brothers' Schools?—I am one of the trustees for the Coalbrook property.

15493. Are you trustee for any other portion of the property of these schools?—No.

15494. You take a general interest in the schools, and in education?—Yes, I take a great interest in the Christian Brothers' establishment in Cork, and have done so for many years.

15495. Have you often visited it?—Yes, very frequently.

15496. Is it visited by people from outside?—Very much, it is one of the first places that strangers visit when they come to Cork.

15497. Do you think it a very useful school?—It has been of transverse benefit to the city of Cork, ever since its foundation.

15498. Can you give us any information as to what proportion of children there are going about the city of Cork, and receiving no education?—I am not in a position to give you accurate information on that head, but I think, generally speaking, the poorer classes are fairly provided for, considering the means at the disposal of the inhabitants. Most of the Catholic public institutions in the city of Cork are more or less supported by voluntary contributions from the Catholic population.

15499. We have heard that there are few National Schools in Cork than in most large towns?—I do not know the exact number of National Schools, but within the city there are so many schools in the hands of the religious bodies and of the clergy, that if there are not so many National Schools here as in other places, it is because they are not so much wanted.

15500. I understand that but few Roman Catholics attend the Model Schools?—I believe very few.

15501. Mr. O'SHEAGHNESSY.—As I understand, practically, all the educational facilities given in Cork to the body of the Roman Catholic population are facilities provided by the benevolence of the people themselves?—I think so, more or less, except what are given by the National Board.

15502. And, notwithstanding what has been done, there are a number of children who do not go to school?—The former witnesses, who are more competent to judge than I am, have stated so.

15503. Do you agree with the former witnesses, that as given by the State in a direction agreeable to the people, and suitable to the exigencies of the case, would largely attract those classes that do not at present go to school?—I should think so.

15504. Is there any Catholic infant school in Cork?—The one that I am best acquainted with is that of the Sisters of Charity, in Pencock-lane, quite close to the Christian Brothers' Schools; it is very largely attended daily by children up to six years of age. In addition there are four other similar institutions; one in Clarence-street, and one in Douglas-street, under the care of the Sisters of the Presentation Order; and two others under the care of the Sisters of Mercy. All are numerously attended.

15505. Is the infant school in Pencock-lane attended by boys as well as girls?—Yes, about 500 or 600 attend that school. The boys, when they come to the age of six, are drafted up to the Christian Brothers' Schools.

15506. You are aware that several Protestant schools have been put under the National Board, and are receiving State assistance?—Yes.

15507. Suppose the rules of that Board were altered, so as to come within the spirit of the wishes of the great body of the people, do you not think that would very largely help to solve the difficulty of bringing the population in to receive education, and enable Catholic bodies and authorities to avail themselves of State aid?—Certainly. In reference to the Christian Brothers' Schools, I think it right to state, as it is within my knowledge, that a great number of boys educated in those schools have been enabled to procure for themselves very important positions in life. At the present moment, in three large establishments over which I am permitted to preside, there are about fifty of those boys who have come direct from the schools and attained a position of entire confidence, receiving salaries—some from £200 to £250—and earning in the aggregate above £4,200 a year, or an average over £85 a boy. Such young men rise by degrees, and attain to positions of very great importance, and I may safely say that young men educated in the Christian Brothers' Schools are spread about the city in various other establishments also, and are occupying similar positions.

15508. CHAIRMAN.—There is no endowed school in Cork offering anything above primary education?—I am not aware.

15509. We heard there was a private school, which is practically a Protestant school, kept by Dr. Knight?—Yes.

15510. Are there not also some private schools, attended by the Roman Catholics?—I do not know that there are any private schools in Cork except Dr. Knight's, and one other which is kept by a Mr. Denery; there is a Seminary which is under the presidency of the Right Rev. Dr. Delany, the Catholic Bishop of Cork, and which is managed by some of the clergy of the diocese.

15511. Mr. O'SHEAGHNESSY.—Do the young Catholics of the middle and better classes in Cork, who are intended for lay pursuits, go to the Seminary, or is it principally occupied by ecclesiastical students?—The Seminary has only lately come under its present management, and it is attended by young Catholics of the middle and better classes, as well as by ecclesiastical students.

15512. Was there not a college conducted by the Vincentians?—That is the college which has been now transferred to the Bishop. I could not say the number of pupils at present attending it, but with the exception of it, and the school kept by Mr. Denery, there are no Catholic schools for the children of the better classes in the city of Cork.

15513. There must be a large number of Catholic merchants and shopkeepers in Cork who cannot afford to send their sons to a boarding school. What chance have they of education?—They have not much chance, certainly. Those who can afford it send their children away, but for the class you allude to, there is really no school in Cork, and it is very much wanted.

15514. Do they take day boys at the college?—The lay pupils are all day boys.

15515. Dr. HART.—Is there a high-class education given there?—Yes.

15516. Mr. O'SHEAGHNESSY.—That school has not any endowment?—There is no endowment attached to it.

15517. You do not know what staff it has?—I do not know.

MR. TIMOTHY MABONY, J.P., EXAMINED.

Mr. Timothy
Mabony, J.P.

15518. CHAIRMAN.—You can give some information in reference to the Christian Brothers' Schools in Cork?—My earliest recollections are connected with the Christian Brothers' Schools. I can distinctly recollect them for fifty-eight years. They are established in the neighbourhood in which I was born, and I was separated with the first Brother of the Order who opened a school in Cork, and from that time to the present my impression is, that there could be no possible position of higher merit in the estimation of the public than that in which the Christian Brothers' Schools are held. Many pupils from the schools have obtained most eminent positions. I may mention, in reference to the school of fine art which has been attached to these schools, and which I believe gets a small contribution from the Corporation towards its expenses, that pupils from it have obtained eminent positions in architects' offices, having learned drawing entirely at the Christian Brothers' Schools. Others have advanced to landscape painting, and a former pupil of the school, who resides in Liverpool, gets for his water-colours £500 each. He owes his position in life to the education he received at the Christian Brothers' School. I could also give instances of several leading merchants in the city of Cork who were educated solely at those schools. I have had opportunities very frequently of meeting large numbers of children who do not go to school, solely by reason of their poverty, some on account of the bad condition of their clothing, and many others because they could not be spared from the task of bringing food to their fathers, who are labourers. This is proof of a want which might possibly be supplied, if there was an endowment to provide facilities, which are not at present in existence, for such children.

Oct 26, 1875.
Mr. Timothy
Mahony, &c.

15518. Is there any Science and Art class connected with the South Kensington Department?—The Christian Brothers' Schools are assisted by a Corporation grant. There is at present no connection with the Department at South Kensington, but it is under consideration to arrange for it.

15520. Is there any manufactory in the city that would interfere with the junior classes?—No; the Factory Act, moreover, would not allow any children to be engaged under 13, so that up to that age they would be at liberty to attend school. As regards the infant schools, assistance should be purely denominational, because it would be impossible for any Catholic teacher to accept any money that would put the slightest restriction on the use of Catholic emblems, in any system of Catholic teaching they might think proper to use.

15521. Mr. O'SHANNON.—In fact all classes would wish to see the State apply only the same principles to the infant schools that are now applied to the industrial schools?—Certainly.

15522. CHAIRMAN.—You speak from a Catholic point of view?—Yes; I am a Catholic myself.

Mr. Patrick
Kenney, &c.

Mr. PATRICK KENNEY, J.P., Mayor of Cork, examined.

15523. CHAIRMAN.—You wish to make a statement to the Commissioners?—I did not attend here with the intention of giving evidence; but, having some experience of the Christian Brothers' School, I wish to say that I was myself educated entirely at that school, and being at present Mayor of Cork, I thought it would not be inappropriate to bear my testimony to the worth of the Christian Brothers and their system of education, which has been under my observation from the time I was at school myself to the present moment. With regard to the excellence of the Christian Brothers' teaching, all I can say is, that I endorse all that Mr. Lyons and Mr. Mahony have said; and, perhaps, having been six or seven years at the school myself, I ought to go a little further than either of them. I left school at the age of thirteen and a half, being one of the class described by Mr. Duggan as obliged to leave school early; and all the success I have attained in life I attribute to the early education I received in those schools, and to the connexion I have ever since kept up with the Brothers. I know well the sacrifices they have made for the poorer children. Boys, when I knew myself at that school, are now merchants of the city, and there are many who have attained to high positions in other cities, and now occupy situations of great trust. I have made this statement, considering that it would be interesting to the Commissioners to hear what one who was a pupil of the school, forty years ago, thinks of it.

15524. Mr. O'SHANNON.—Do you agree with the view that there are a large number of children not receiving any education in the city of Cork?—I think there are a good many who do not go to school at all.

15525. If the small endowments the Christian Brothers have were supplemented by something in the nature of payment by rates, not interfering with their religious observances, do you think that that would enable them to make better provision for the large class that are uneducated?—I do not think that payment by rates, or any premiums you could hold out, would attract the class we are speaking of—that is the class that are badly off, and do not go to school. What I think would be better, would be an endowment for infant schools, or if the teaching power in the city were expanded, so as to grapple with the children and keep them in the infant schools, whence they could be drafted to the Christian Brothers' Schools. That would come into operation any endowment you could give the Christian Brothers.

15526. You think the infant schools, properly aided, would make education virtually general?—I think so. I think the accommodation for infant schools in the city is not at all sufficient, more especially in the northern part of the city. I know if they had more accommodation in that way, and were better off, they could teach a great many more younger children than they do now, and the children could be drafted off at six or seven years to such schools as the Christian Brothers'. I entirely concur with Mr. Mahony that State assistance should be denominational.

Rev. George
Webster, &c.

Rev. GEORGE WEBSTER, D.D., examined.

15527. CHAIRMAN.—You are the Rector of the parish of St. Nicholas, and Chancellor of the Diocese of Cork?—I am.

15528. How long have you been connected with the parish of St. Nicholas?—Since December, 1857.

15529. There are four schools, in that parish, mentioned in the returns which have been furnished to us—the parochial school for boys, the parochial school for girls, the infant school for boys, and the infant school for girls. Are these the only schools that are under your supervision?—They are the only ones that are under my control.

15530. Are they the only Protestant schools in the parish?—No; there is the Roselle Bannary, a very excellent school for girls, and there is the Buckingham House Free School. There are also the Model Schools and the Union-quay Schools. The latter are Industrial Schools. There is also the Blue Coat Hospital.

15531. Are those all Protestant schools?—Yes.

15532. What endowment has Nicholas street School now?—The Endowed School in Moses Deane's; it has £160 a year.

15533. That endowment is mentioned in the Report of the Commissioners of 1857 thus:—

"Moses Deane, Will, 2nd October, 1796, £1,200, now increased by accumulation of interest to £5,539 11s 8d, Government Stock, schoolhouse built from proceeds of M. Deane's bequest, at a cost of £370, lease of school premises for forty years, 25th March, 1822, ensuring a 'rest'."

That period has expired. How is the schoolhouse now held?—I have got another forty years. Mr. Aloock Stowell is the landlord, and Mr. Roche, who held under him, got a renewal in 1862. I bought Mr. Roche's interest, so that I have it now for forty years from 1863, at £30 a year.

15534. Are all the schools held in the one building?—Yes; but they are very large buildings now. I have expended £3,000 or £7,000 upon them in the last few years.

15535. Are the schools confined to the one parish, or do you take children from other parishes?—Of course the National schools take children from all parishes, but, as to those on the clothing list, I give a preference to the children of parishioners. Forty children are supposed to be clothed and educated by Moses Donoh's endowment, and I give the money to the children who are the best attendants.

15536. The fees are from one penny a week to 5s. 6d. a quarter, according, I suppose, to the means of the parents?—Yes; and the wishes of the parents generally. The twenty boys and twenty girls who are called free get the money, 5s. 4d. a year, from Moses Donoh's Endowment, and pay the master themselves.

15537. What exactly do they get—a free education and clothes?—Yes; what I do is this: we have got attendance scholarships. When we put the children on the clothing list we had great difficulty in getting them to come at all—they become careless. Now, instead of giving them clothes at the end of the year, we give them according to what we can afford, one penny or 14d. an attendance in actual money, and the parents get the money and pay for the clothes for the year. We have secured the children's attendance, and the clothes are not wanted, while the parents have a feeling in favour of paying for the children. They get the fees and provide the clothes themselves.

15538. Does the same practice apply to the infant school?—There are only two scholarships in the female infant school, and in the male there were four last year. The total attendance of the children in the schools is very large. We have 306 children on the rolls of the schools. Last quarter the average for the four schools was 158.2, and the total on the rolls 317.

15539. Has there been any recent endowment, or has been the new school-house built?—Altogether by voluntary contributions.

15540. How much was expended upon it?—£4,000, or £7,000.

15541. In what trustees is the school-house vested?—The house is made in the name of the rectory and diocesan.

15542. There is no income belonging to the schools, beyond the £304?—We also receive voluntary contributions. In the same institution is my industrial institution also. I have 89 boys under the Industrial Schools Act. They are in a school by themselves.

15543. Is that school-house on ground held under a 999 years lease?—Part of it is. The female National schools are on ground which is held under a lease for sixty years. One part of the building is on the forty years lease, and another on the 999 years, so that I hold under three leases.

15544. Is there any provision under which you can claim a renewal after the forty years expires?—The whole of the property has been purchased by Mr. Brown, a clergyman. On part of it the school-house is built and part forms a new approach or carriage drive to the church. I intend to purchase it from him.

15545. The Industrial School, which you have mentioned, is quite independent of the other schools?—Quite independent.

15546. At what cost was that built?—I should say it cost very nearly £5,000 out of the £6,000 or £7,000 I have spoken of.

15547. Dr. Haug.—How was that money collected?—By voluntary contributions. I publish a report every year in which you should see the whole thing. I give all the information every year about the schools.

15548. CHAIRMAN.—When were those buildings erected?—I began building in 1873 and they were finished in 1877.

15549. Are the buildings all quite new?—Not all; the old ones were made as good as they could be with new work.

15550. Are all these schools exclusively Protestant?—The National schools are not because Roman Catholics may come if they like.

15551. But practically they are?—There are very few Roman Catholics attending the schools, and say that do come as in the infant schools.

15552. In the return made to us they are stated to be "all Church of Ireland"?—That is that they are under my patronage and that I belong to the Church of Ireland.

15553. Are you the manager of any of the National schools?—I am manager of the four National schools.

15554. Have they any endowments?—They have no endowments, except as you observe where there is the site and building, constituting as far as endowment.

15555. Are those schools all full?—They are not full.

15556. Do you think the parish requires so many schools for Protestants as you seem to have?—I think it does fully. There are between 3,000 and 4,000 Church people in our parish. Last December there were 365 Church of Ireland children attending the Model schools.

15557. Are there any Roman Catholics in the Model school?—There are a good many. I should not be surprised if there were a couple of hundred, but I can only judge from the numbers I see going out when religious instruction commences.

15558. Dr. Haug.—The 365 Church of Ireland children are not all from your parish?—Not at all; but a great number are.

15559. CHAIRMAN.—Do you not think that some of the primary schools in Cork might be amalgamated?—I strongly approve of having, for instance, Christ Church schools, which are quite close to mine, are very expensive, and have no endowment, amalgamated with the St. Nicholas schools. It is a great waste of money to have those schools under the National Board. The children that could come to my schools, where we have abundance of room, and the backbone of an endowment.

15560. Would the same staff of teachers do?—My teachers have sufficient to do now. I would have to get additional, but the assistants would not cost as much as the principal teachers.

15561. Dr. Haug.—In the report of the Commissioners of 1857 there are only two schools mentioned as connected with your parish—a boys' school and a girls' school—and the total number on the rolls at that time was fifty-five in the one and seventy-five in the other. All the other schools you speak of now are new?—My two other schools are new.

15562. The total number of children attending was then 129, and it is now over 300?—Yes.

15563. The total endowment is still the same?—Yes, but then I got large voluntary contributions which were not given at that time.

15564. We have heard a good deal of the number of children in Cork who are not receiving any education—is the same complaint to be made as to your parish?—It is something perfectly fearful in my parish. I take the deepest interest in education myself, and I have hundreds of times in the last twenty years counted as many as 400 children whom I met playing about the streets during school hours.

15565. CHAIRMAN.—Were they principally Roman Catholics?—Chiefly Roman Catholics. There are very few Protestant children who do not attend school.

15566. I suppose those about the streets are chiefly the children of the poorest classes?—They are.

15567. Do you know anything about the endowment of the Government's Seminary?—It has some endowment and I am one of the trustees, but we are never called together unless there is some serious change proposed. It is under the control of a ladies' committee, of whom the principal is Miss Whately. The chaplain of the Free Church teaches the girls there. It is a very large and most excellent school. The endowment is something very small, about £1,000.

15568. Has it had no recent endowment to add to that?—They have got large sums of money subscribed voluntarily for building purposes, and have taken a new place since the last Commission—Rochelle.

15568. It may be called a ladies' school, for the daughters of the upper classes?—Yes, I should say so—the upper middle classes.

15570. You do not know anything of the working, or of the details, of that school?—No, except that I know the school has a very good name, and its pupils have been prize in Trinity College.

15571. I believe they were successful at the Intermediate Education examinations?—Yes, very.

15572. Do you wish to offer any further evidence?—There is just one remark I ask your permission to make. Of course I differ in taste from the evidence already given, to you as to what Cork wants. I think what should be established in Cork is another Model school, and so far from having any inducements in the way of rewards, or free teaching or anything of that kind, I think the only cure will be compulsory education; so that any children found about the streets after a certain hour should be taken up by the police and their parents punished. The State should provide another Model school on the north side of the city.

15573. Is the present Model school a success?—Considering the immense opposition given to it, it is a wonderful success.

15574. Is the attendance large, considering the size of the building?—I think if the opposition were withdrawn, and the people allowed to send their children there, the school would be crowded in a fortnight.

15575. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—You do not agree with the evidence given by the two independent Roman Catholics, saying that the people themselves have strong objection to the Model School system?—I do not. Since the last Commission there was a very remarkable meeting held, in February, 1859, and another meeting a few months afterwards at which Lord Sumner presided. The present Bishop of Killarney was present, and I was there myself. The meeting was held in reference to what ought to be done with the £80,000 a year in Ireland for endowed schools. Of course those in favour of denominational schools were warmly in favour of having a denominational grammar school in Cork. But on the other hand the National Board men were equally warm and strong for having a mixed school with a conscience clause. The platform on that occasion was occupied by some of the leading and most eminent Roman Catholic merchants in Cork, such as the late Mr. Nugent and several others, who expressed their sorrow at having to differ from their own bishop. I know I am walking between fires when I am speaking thus; but, I believe, I am pleading for my Roman Catholic fellow-citizens in saying, that I do not believe, if there was a perfectly free expression of opinion, that the Roman Catholic body are so opposed to the system of National Education.

15576. You can hardly pretend that you know more about it than the gentlemen of such character, intellect, and position as those examined here to-day?—The knowledge I derive is from the Roman Catholic gentlemen who spoke at those meetings.

15577. How long ago was that?—In 1859.

15578. That was twenty years ago?—Certainly.

15579. Are you even now so much of the Roman Catholics have got more into the habit of aspiring to carry out their own wishes in reference to the constitution of the country—that there has been a greater tendency on the part of the Roman Catholics to speak out?—On the part of some, there has been.

15580. You propose there should be a large Model school established in Cork, in addition to the present one?—Yes.

15581. And that there should be a compulsory education. A law obliging parents to send their children to that Model school?—To some school.

15582. We have seen there is not sufficient accommodation for a very large number of the children in the schools already existing?—That is the evidence.

15583. And therefore the result of your proposal would be to compel them to go into this new school which would furnish accommodation?—I cannot see any hardship in doing so.

15584. How do you think the people of Cork would receive that proposal?—I think the people of Cork would find out, after a time, that they were greatly benefited by it.

15585. If such a proposal were brought into force within the next year it would lead to violent and sanguinary conflicts between the authorities and the people. From your knowledge of the Catholics of Cork suppose you established a Model school here, and in consequence of the absence of other schools compelled the police to enforce attendance on the part of the Roman Catholics, would it not lead to civil tumults and disorder?—I think it would, if it were as you put it—that a special law were made for the city of Cork.

15586. I am talking of all Ireland. But applying it to the city of Cork, do not you know it would lead to violent discussions between the authorities and the great body of the people?—I do not believe it would.

15587. You think the people would willingly go there?—Of course they would not willingly go there. But the children I speak of are the children of parents who are utterly regardless of the interests of their children, and do not send them to school now.

15588. Do you think the mass of education would be served by presenting it to people under such disagreeable compulsion as that?—I think it would. I do not think anything else would make parents of that class send their children to school.

15589. CHAIRMAN.—Your idea is that the Roman Catholic body are not so universally against the mixed system as is imagined, and that it is only as compromise with the wishes of the bishops they do not send their children to the Model school?—That is my own conviction.

15590. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—Are you aware that lately in Mallow, a town not very far from Cork, the lady expressed strong repugnance to the introduction of the National system, in place of education conducted by a religious body?—I am quite aware of that.

15591. Does not that show there is a very strong feeling among the Roman Catholic body, at least in the town of Mallow, of preference for denominational and religious teaching?—I think there is not a bit stronger feeling among them on the subject than among Protestants. The Church Education people are just as anxious to have the Church Education schools supported in opposition to the National Board, as the Christian Brothers are to have theirs.

15592. There is that feeling on the part of Church Education Protestants, and on the part of the Roman Catholic population?—It is as strong on the one side as the other.

15593. And notwithstanding that you would compel the people by force of law in the absence of religious schools to go to school to institutions to which they objected?—I would let them go to the religious schools, and have no compulsion about that at all. The claims in Industrial schools are not only forced to go to school, but the State feeds and clothes them. In that one I offer no opinion, but still in my own mind I would rather a great deal that even the Industrial schools were not denominational, though I have an Indian school myself. I would very much rather that the Roman Catholic and Protestant children were brought up together.

15594. Dr. HART.—Do you think if that compulsory system were introduced there would be an additional number of denominational schools founded for these children?—I think it is very likely. The Church Education Society and all those other religious bodies would put forth great efforts to save the children from the State school. But the thousands of children getting no instruction whatever and brought up for crimes would receive instruction in the State school, if not in the voluntary schools.

15595. There would be a sufficient number of denominational schools for those who really objected?—I think so. As regards my own schools the late Commissioners ordered two account books to be kept and we have obeyed their order ever since. The accounts are audited every year—both those of Miss Deane's schools and of the National schools.

15596. The accounts show a balance due to you as Treasurer of £26 2s. 5½d.—The Select Vestry have paid that since.

15597. On the whole the expenditure and income pretty nearly balance?—Very nearly. I always get whatever money is due.

15598. CHAIRMAN.—All these schools, both Miss Deane's and the National, are primary schools?—Yes; but my head master teaches a class in Latin, and in the girls' school a little French is taught.

15599. Is that merely a speculation?—It is altogether a matter between the teachers and the few children that learn those subjects.

Oct. 26, 1896

Rev. George Webster, G. S.

Mr. WILLIAM COLVIN, examined.

Mr. William Colvin.

15600. CHAIRMAN.—You are the head master of the Moses Deane's school in St. Nicholas's Parish, Cork?—Yes.

15601. What assistant masters have you?—A second master and a monitor.

15602. How long have you been master?—Since the 1st April last.

15603. The course of instruction is an ordinary English primary education?—Yes.

15604. Do you use the National school books?—Yes.

15605. You have a class in Latin?—Yes.

15606. That is of course an arrangement of your own, independent of the endowment?—Yes.

15607. What fees do you charge the pupils in that class?—5s. a quarter.

15608. Do you teach any other extra subjects?—I teach Euclid.

15609. How often is religious instruction given by the clergyman of the parish?—Twice a week—on Tuesdays and Thursdays from ten to eleven o'clock.

15610. Is there any industrial training?—Not in the National school.

15611. Where were you yourself educated?—I was trained under the National Board in 1875-76, at the Model Training School.

15612. Dr. HART.—What is your classification?—First of third.

15613. CHAIRMAN.—Is your school inspected periodically?—Yes. The results examination was held in February last.

Miss LUCY G. MILLER, examined.

Miss Lucy G. Miller.

15614. CHAIRMAN.—You are the mistress of the girls' school of St. Nicholas's parish, Cork?—Yes.

15615. Have you anything to do with the infant school?—Nothing.

15616. You give the girls, I suppose, an ordinary English education?—Yes, and I also teach singing, drawing, and French.

15617. Where were you educated?—I was educated in a private school until I was trained in the Marlborough-street Training School, Dublin, in 1871.

15618. Is there any visiting teacher to give extra instruction in singing?—No.

15619. I suppose plain needlework is taught in your school?—Yes, and the use of the sewing machine.

15620. There is no industrial training beyond that?—No.

15621. Dr. HART.—Have you any assistants in the school?—One mistress.

15622. Who manages the infant school?—A separate teacher. The rooms are distinct.

Rev. DAVID H. POWELL, M.A., cross-examined.

Rev. David H. Powell, M.A.

15623. CHAIRMAN.—You are the superintendent of St. Mary's, Shandon, School, as Rector of the parish?—I am the manager under the National Board.

15624. How long?—Since about the beginning of April last. I have been the Incumbent of the parish since the beginning of last November, but only received the account of the school from Rev. Dr. Neligan, my predecessor, at the beginning of January, and I only succeeded in getting my appointment recognised by the National Board at the beginning of April.

15625. Are you both patron and manager, or is there anybody who holds the position of patron?—The Select Vestry are a sort of school committee, and they are nominally the patron, but they have no position under the charter. I am the sole person recognised under the endowment. But I thought it wise with regard to the National Board and the welfare of the school that they should be consulted.

15626. You and the churchwardens are the trustees in whom the funds are vested?—No. Miss Deane's trustees are the trustees of the fund. It is in the hands of the Commissioners of Charitable Donations and Bequests.

15627. And they pay it to you half-yearly?—Yes.

15628. How much is the endowment?—The total endowment is £2,001.

15629. What does it produce?—£30 a year. I have only once received the half-yearly interest, £30 6s. 4d., that was on the 7th April, last, and I have written to ask why the October interest has not been paid.

15630. Has there been any sum invested in building since 1871?—There were repairs done, but there was no sum of money invested.

15631. The total endowment is £2,001?—I ought to mention that in the beginning of the present year there was £45 added to that. It was part of a sum of £50 given by the late Earl of Cork to my predecessor, Rev. Dr. William C. Neligan, which he divided between the school and the poor. He lodged the £45 in the hands of the Commissioners of Charitable Donations and Bequests for the benefit of the school.

15632. Is there any rent paid for the school-house?—There is a rent of £30 a year. The lease was made to the trustees of Miss Deane, by Mr. Outhbert Kearney, in 1832.

15633. Have you anything to say to paying the rent?—We pay the rent half-yearly, out of the endowment.

15634. When was the extra £45 handed over to the Commissioners of Charitable Donations and Bequests?—About the month of March last. Dr. Neligan made a communication to the Vestry that it had been done.

15635. You have received no interest on that money yet?—No.

15636. The endowment is spent in the education and clothing of twenty poor boys and twenty poor girls?—Yes.

15637. Do you clothe them, or give them the money as is done by Dr. Webster?—I really have not had the control of it for a clothing season yet.

15638. Do you know what has been done hitherto?—I think in former years a sum of money was always spent in clothing, but I am not aware whether any portion of the endowment was applied to that purpose.

Oct. 29, 1915.
 Rev. Denis M.
 Power, &c.

15639 The number on the roll in your school is sixty-nine?—Yes.

15640 There are very few children in attendance except those on the endowment?—Yes, very few, but the school has been regarded as one, and they all get the benefit of the endowment in their education. The master receives, above his salary under the Board, £40 a year, which with our rent (£30) practically exhausts the endowment.

15641 Are there any school fees paid?—I am sorry to say the fees have been exceedingly small, but I hope we will be able to increase the amount. They go to benefit the master.

15642 Dr. HART.—This is the school which it was proposed should be amalgamated with the Green Coat Hospital School?—Yes.

15643 If the funds of the two schools were united they would make a better school, and bring them into a better situation?—The building of the Green Coat Hospital is in a better situation, because the St. Mary, Shandon, School is on the quay, but on some points is much better than theirs. There might be a difficulty as to where you should put the two schools.

15644 Lord Rosse and I saw the Green Coat School, and we thought it was in a bad situation. There was no approach except through a graveyard?—There is a thoroughfare there.

15645 What do the premises constituting the present school of St. Mary's, Shandon, consist of?—There are two good rooms, fifty-one feet long by twenty-one feet broad, but they stand directly on the Quay. There are also two small sitting-rooms. There is also a large passage with a floor of flags, which I thought could, with very little modification, be made an exceedingly good infant schoolroom.

15646 CHAIRMAN.—Would not the site on the Quay be valuable for those interested in shipping?—I think our site a very valuable one.

15647 Dr. HART.—Would that not be a difficulty on account of the Green Coat Hospital School being more purely denominational than yours?—My idea was to ask the Commissioners of Charitable Donations and Bequests would they allow the funds to be used for children on the foundation. I have been informed that there is a school at Whitegate, near Cork, with an endowment of a similar kind, and that they have made an arrangement of the same nature.

15648 What arrangement did they make?—The benefits of the charity were confined to certain children who were instructed according to the terms of the old deed; but the school, generally, was put under the Board. That is Mr. Penrose Fitzgerald's school.

15649 CHAIRMAN.—What has it been suggested should be done with the site of the old church of St. Mary, Shandon, that was pulled down?—Part of it is churchyard, and I do not think we could use it for any other purpose.

15650 Would it not be a good site for the amalgamated school?—The vaults would be a difficulty, and it is a question whether the Representative Body in whom the site is vested, would allow it. Moreover, it is a noisy place.

REV. DENIS M'BURNET, F.P., examined.

15651 CHAIRMAN.—You are the Parish Priest of Bandon?—Yes.

15652 How long have you held that position?—About a year and a half.

15653 You are interested in the schools in the parish?—Very much, of course.

15654 Have you any schools directly under your management?—Yes. The National Schools are all under my management—two of them in the town of Bandon, and two outside the town in the country district. There are also large schools attached to the Convent, which, of course, come more or less under my management—certainly under my care.

15655 There is no Christian Brothers' School at Bandon?—No. There is also a school, of which I am the head master or owner, lately established by me to meet a want, that I felt, of a higher school for my parishioners; I suppose it may be called an intermediate school. There are two teachers in it—one specially for classics—and they both teach the different matters appertaining to an English education, and they also teach French. That school has been only recently established by me and is certain to succeed. There has been a great want as far as a very large number of the population is concerned—that is, of those that I have particular care of.

15656 What is the population of Bandon?—The population of the town is altogether about 3,000; I do not know the exact numbers.

15657 I suppose a good many of those are Roman Catholics?—There are in the town between 4,000 and 5,000 Roman Catholics, and in the vicinity there are about 2,000 more. The Catholic parish includes two parishes under the late Established Church division, Killeegan and Ballymodan.

15658 Is the higher school, lately established by you, a boarding school or a day school?—Exclusively a day school.

15659 What number of pupils are attending it at present?—It was established only at the commencement of the month, and there are now sixteen pupils. I had for a good while the intention to establish it, and was very anxious to establish it earlier in the autumn of this year; but I was unable to do so, and in consequence quarantine boys were sent to various other schools, so that the numbers are less just now than they would have been had I been able to establish it earlier. But I am certain that at the commencement of next year we will have considerably more.

15660 Mr. O'BRIEN.—You have got no endowment at all for that Intermediate School?—Not for that school.

15661 Have you got an endowment for any other school?—For one of the National Schools there is a sum of money given by His Grace the Duke of Devonshire, £5 a year.

15662 Can he discontinue that grant at any time he likes?—I do not exactly know the circumstances of it.

15663 What is the name of the school?—Laragh. The Duke also gives £45 every year to the Convent schools.

15664 Is that merely a donation?—With the circumstances of that also, I am not perfectly acquainted so far as its permanence is concerned, but I take it for granted that both will be continued.

15665 There is a pretty large population of the rising middle class in and about Bandon?—Very large.

15666 Is it to meet to some extent the wants of that class that your new school has been started?—Yes, altogether.

15667 What fees do you charge?—For boys who learn classics, as well as the English course, 36s a quarter, or £6 a year; for other boys, who merely follow the English course, £4 a year. Both are also taught French.

15668 When you speak of the English course you mean something far beyond the primary course?—Quite so. The primary course is supposed to have been followed before. This course includes all that is necessary to prepare boys for the various examinations—the Civil Service, the Army and Navy, and other professional pursuits.

15669 Do you think that you have got the entire body of the humber Catholic population going to the primary schools in and about Bandon, or are there some that do not get any education, but stay away

15670. I think that comparatively few Catholic children of the parish, either in town or country, actually stay away from the schools. In the Convent Schools there are about 700 on the rolls, but there are some little boys among them. Then Leagh School, which receives the £5 a year from the Duke of Devonshire, is a mixed school for both boys and girls.

15671. The children are on the rolls of the schools; but I take it, according to your experience, that the difficulty is not to get them on the roll, but to secure an adequate attendance.—The attendance is very good too. I think the average daily attendance of these children would be 550 or something more.

15672. Then you have got almost universal education among the lower classes?—Yes. The difficulties are there.

15673. It is easier for a clergyman to enforce education in a rural district, or in a comparatively small place like Bandon, than in the numerous lanes and alleys of a large town like Cork?—No doubt the children and parents are more under the influence of the clergy.

15674. There is not at all the same necessity for compulsion on the part of the local authorities in those districts, that there is in towns?—Well, I do not think there is, and in the country districts the matter of compulsion is a very important question; for children sometimes have to be away from school on indispensable business.

15675. I am not talking of State compulsion, but of the influence of clergyman. Have you been stationed in Cork?—Yes, a good many years. I was in another parish (Carrigrohane) before I went to Bandon last year. I was also formerly in Crosthwaite.

15676. I would like your evidence as a Roman Catholic priest that knows Cork well. In your experience here, did you find that the great body of the laity thoroughly and spontaneously entered into the views of the clergy on the subject of the Model Schools?—As a body, the Catholic laity of Cork always declined sending their children to the Model School, and continued to do so, so far as I could understand, and, moreover, they have a positive conscientious objection.

15677. And it does not require any compulsion on the part of their spiritual directors to induce them to do so?—I never became aware that there was any compulsion or watch possession. It simply became known to the people that those schools were not considered safe for their children to be educated in, and they voted in accordance with that knowledge.

15678. What other intermediate schools are there in Bandon in addition to the one you have stated—is there not a school endowed by the Earl of Cork?—The principal endowed school is that which you designate as endowed by the Earl of Cork. It is endowed by His Grace the Duke of Devonshire. Of the extent of the endowment I am not sure. I would rather that information regarding that endowment should come from parties thoroughly acquainted with it, and conversant with its working.

15679. That school and your new school are intended to be of the same class?—Exactly. I think there is also an Erasmus Smith's School.

15680. That is also an intermediate school?—It is Miss Susan Jane Mullen, examined.

Miss Susan A.
Mullen.

15681. CHAIRMAN.—You keep a ladies' school in Cork?—Yes.

15682. It is entirely endowed?—Quite so.

15683. You took a house for the purposes of the school?—A very large room.

15684. Are you assisted in any way, or is it entirely a speculation of your own?—Entirely a speculation of my own.

15685. What number of pupils have you?—The number at present is only eighteen.

15686. What fees do you charge?—A guinea a quarter for plain English—that is, for the higher English, of course, 15s. a quarter for the junior French, and one guinea for the senior French class. There is also Latin taught by a master.

15687. Is it entirely a day school?—Entirely.

15688. How long has it been established?—Since the 21st October, 1870.

15689. Have you any assistants?—Yes, I only took the English myself. Then I have a staff of teachers for the other subjects.

15690. Is the French master a teacher belonging to the neighbourhood?—Yes.

15691. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—You sent in some of your girls for the Intermediate Examinations?—Yes, two went in, and both took honors.

15692. How many did you send in?—I only sent in two. They were the only ones in the school. It was open only a short time before the examination.

15693. Do you teach music?—Yes; my sister and myself teach it, and we have also a master for the higher branches.

15694. Are there many other day schools, for girls of the better class, in Cork?—Very few.

15695. Where do the great body of young girls in Cork go to school?—A great many of them go to the Model School.

15696. CHAIRMAN.—Is there any higher ladies' school in Cork besides yours?—Yes.

15697. Is there any boarding school?—None except Roselle, and that is exclusive.

15698. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—There are some Convent Schools?—Yes, I think there are.

15699. They are exclusively Roman Catholic?—Yes.

15700. CHAIRMAN.—Is yours in any way an exclusive school?—At present I have none but Protestants.

15701. It is not necessarily restricted?—Not at all.

15702. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—I believe you presented a memorial to the Commission?—Yes. It is as follows:—

"Memorial to the Endowed Schools Commissioners, from the Principal of the Cork Intermediate School for Girls."

—16, Queen's-street, South Mall, Cork.

"My Lord and Gentlemen.—I beg respectfully to draw your attention to the fact that there is not in this city or neighbourhood, an Endowed School for the education of girls of a higher standard than National Schools. This school has been established at my own expense to supply a want long felt in this city, and its efficiency would be greatly increased by a moderate endowment, which would prevent the teachers being entirely dependent on the pupils' fees. Your memorialist, therefore, hopes the Commissioners will advise the endowment of this school from the Sophia Church Funds, or such other sources as their wisdom may deem advisable. And your memorialist will ever pray."

THIRTY-NINTH DAY.—THURSDAY, OCTOBER 30, 1879.—12 o'CLOCK, NOON.

In the Courthouse, Kinsale.

Present:—THE EARL OF ROSSE, Chairman; and RICHARD O'SHAUGHNESSY, Esq., M.P.; with JAMES OMBED MURPHY, Esq., LL.D., Secretary.

Mr. MICHAEL HOGARTY, examined.

Mr. Michael Hogarty.

15703. CHAIRMAN.—You are the Town Clerk of Kinsale?—Yes.

15703. How long have you held that office?—Since June, 1878.

15704. I assume that, during that time, you have become acquainted with all matters connected with the town, and with the present position of the Endowed School of Kinsale?—I have.

15705. The school is closed at present?—It is, and has been so for some years.

15706. When was it closed?—I have examined the Commissioners' minute book so as to it for several years. The Rev. Mr. Purdon, the then master died in February, 1873.

15707. There was a successor to him appointed?—Not for some time. When Mr. Purdon died Mr. Walsh, one of the Town Commissioners, gave notice that a master be appointed to the Endowed School. On May 5, 1873, a committee was appointed to report on the repairs required, the school being then in a state of dilapidation. On October 6, 1873, a master was advertised for, and on November 3, 1873, Mr. E. L. Hogan was appointed.

15708. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—Have you a minute showing what the nature of the advertisement was?—No.

15709. CHAIRMAN.—Have you a copy of the newspaper in which it appeared?—No.

15710. What was the next occurrence as to the Endowed School?—On December 1st, 1873, Mr. Hogan wrote on the Board in reference to the dilapidated state of the school. A committee was appointed to inspect the building and report upon it.

15711. Then, the school-house was, at that time, too dilapidated to hold the school in it?—It was.

15712. What is the next minute?—It is dated July 15, 1874, and records that Mr. Gillman was directed by the Town Commissioners to prepare a case for the Commissioners of Charitable Donations and Bequests: the object was to have the Town Commissioners appointed trustees of the school.

15713. Who was Mr. Gillman?—He was law adviser to the Town Commissioners, and was very slow in formulating that information. It had not been furnished for some years after. The next minute I have taken out of the books is dated January 4, 1875.

"The master of the endowed school was requested to discontinue cutting trees in the garden."

On February 1st, in the same year, Mr. Gillman was again requested to prepare a case with a view to the Commissioners being made trustees of the school, and on June 17, 1875, Mr. Gillman's letter and counsel's opinion were read. We cannot find that opinion of counsel, nor the letter. In consequence of the death of the late Town Clerk, many of the records of the office, and several important documents, have been mislaid. The next entry in the Town Commissioners' minute book shows that on July 5, 1875, the Town Surveyors gave notice to the assessor to have portions of the building which were considered dangerous taken down. The next entry is November 8, 1875.

"School closed for four months. The master left, still keeping possession."

15714. What is the next entry?—December 20, 1875. "Petition to the Court of Chancery to get the school vested in the Town Commissioners as trustees." January, 1876: "Mr. Hogan, the late master, was paid the money that was due to him up to 25th September, 1875, he giving up possession." There was some of the endowment due to Mr. Hogan at the time he left, and he retained possession until the matter was settled.

15715. Is that the last reference to the school in the minute book?—There is another, supplementary to that:—"Daniel Hawkins to pay 8s. 6d. per month for the use of the garden." The garden was let during the late master's time to Daniel Hawkins, and when the late master gave up possession the Town Commissioners still continued Hawkins as the tenant of the garden, and his wife, who is his representative, is still in possession of it. The further entries show that on January 8th, 1877, an estimate of the cost of making repairs to make the house habitable was prepared, which amounted to £300, and on February 1, 1877, the Town Clerk was directed to have the garden valued separately, and the Receiver in that year took the building, which had been valued at £50, off the rate books altogether as dilapidated and ruined. The garden was valued separately at £2 5s. The next entry in February 5th: "Portion of the roof taken down, as dangerous to the public." May 6th: "Part of the roof taken down by the Town Surveyors, as dangerous to the public." That is the last minute on the books upon the subject of the school.

15716. Was the school open in Mr. Hogan's time?—Mr. Hogan had a school there.

15717. How long did it continue open as a school?—He was appointed in November, 1873, and the school appeared to be closed about July, 1875.

15718. There were never any repairs carried out?—Not that I am aware of.

15719. It was in former times a boarding school as well as a day school?—I could not say, as I was not acquainted with the school in former times.

15720. The report of the Endowed Schools Commissioners, 1867, returns the Kinsale School as having dormitories for 22 boarders and a schoolroom suited for 85 scholars; but there were at that time only 14 on the roll?—That was in the time of the Rev. Mr. Purdon.

15721. We are also informed by the same report that the Kinsale Endowed School then had school premises worth £41 8s. a year, and a net annual income of £37 13s. 10d., which was derived from a rentcharge granted by Edward Southwell, 7th May, 1567, what has become of that?—Since the late master left, the money has been lodged to the credit of the Town Commissioners.

15722. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—Was it lodged to a separate account?—No, not until I came into office, when I made the collector lodge it separately on deposit.

15723. CHAIRMAN.—Did Mr. Purdon receive the endowment till he died?—It was paid up to the time of his death. I find that his representative, Mrs. Higgins, applied for the balance due at his death.

15724. Did he receive the whole £37 odd a year?—I think so.

15725. Do you know how in past years the building was kept in repair?—It is completely in ruins now, so much so, that it has been taken off the valuation books altogether as valueless. The garden is the only portion there is any value attached to.

15726. In their report the former Commissioners state:—

"The school at Kinsale was endowed by Edward Southwell, Esq., afterwards Lord de Clifford, in 1567, with £30 a year, and has also been enriched by the Corporation by an annual contribution of £91."

So there appears to have been two grants of money, one an old endowment and one an annual contribution. Was that fixed in any way?—I have no record of that contribution.

18737. You cannot trace when that was discontinued?—No.

18738. The same report proceeds—

"Besides the rentcharge, Lord de Clifford granted a house, garden, and other premises for the support of the school."

Are these the school premises to which you have been referring?—Yes.

18739. The report continues—

"And stated that the grant was made in consideration of the 'friendship and generosity of the Corporation' in transferring to him the right of presentation to a certain living. The master's salary of £20 (late Irish currency) is paid by the present Municipal Commissioners representing the old Corporation, who also exercise the right of appointing the master, though this was reserved to Lord de Clifford and his heirs male by the deed of 1767. It does not appear whether the £20 a year, stated by the Commissioners of 1791, to have been paid to the school, was secured to it."

Have you any deed connected with the school?—The Commissioners may have some deeds in their chest.

18740. The school appears to have been, in 1867, a school school—some Protestants and some Roman Catholics attending it?—That was the case. There was no other school in the town then.

18741. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—Was there any protest against the appointment by the Town Commissioners of Mr. Hogan?—I heard of none. From the minutes it appears that Mr. Hogan was elected almost unanimously. One of the Commissioners proposed a Dr. Burke, but he met with no second.

18742. Do you know who appointed Mr. Purdon, the previous master?—No, I could not say. He was a long time in office.

18743. Who represents Lord de Clifford now?—Mr. Chance.

18744. In what sense does he represent him?—He pays the endowment.

18745. You mentioned a petition by the Town Commissioners for the purpose of having themselves appointed trustees—when was that?—The first minute on the subject was on July 18, 1874, but Mr. Gillman was very dilatory in the matter, and he had to get repeated notices on the subject. I find he was again requested to proceed in February, 1875.

18746. Do you know whether any proceedings were actually taken in the Court of Chancery?—It does not appear from the documents that there were any.

18747. You spoke of an opinion having been forwarded to the Town Commissioners by Mr. Gillman, which he had obtained from counsel as to their rights as claim to be appointed trustees. Has any attempt been made to find that opinion?—I looked for it and could not find it. All the documents, even the vouchers and accounts for the past year, before I came into office, were unfiled and none of these could be had.

18748. Was that owing to the death of the late clerk?—Yes. The evidence I have given has been gathered mostly from the minute book.

18749. How long after the school was closed did the minute book pass on?—I think it appears about four months.

18750. CHAIRMAN.—Have you made any application to the custody of the late clerk to ascertain whether the documents were in their possession?—Repeatedly.

We searched his house for any documents in the possession of his representatives that were required for the audit last year, and also for the plans of the works, and other papers of great importance, that would cost a good deal of money to replace, but we could not find any of them.

18751. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—I see that in January, 1877, the estimated cost of repairs to the school-house was £300?—Yes.

18752. I presume that, owing to dilapidations that have since occurred, it would require considerably more now?—A great deal more.

18753. Would the house require to be rebuilt?—The walls are strong, but all the internal works, and the roof, are in a state of dilapidation.

18754. You told us that since the cessation of the payment to Mr. Hogan, the Corporation have continued to receive £27 a year from Mr. Chance?—Yes, regularly.

18755. And they have put the money in bank?—Yes.

18756. It is only in the last year they put it to a separate account?—I made the collector place it on deposit receipt.

18757. When did Mr. Hogan leave?—In 1875. He was paid up to September, 1875, according to the minutes.

18758. Would the Town Commissioners have any difficulty in reimbursing the amount of the salary, for the subsequent three years, to the purpose of the fund, whenever those purposes come into operation?—It was lodged with other moneys, and mixed with the general accounts.

18759. Are the Commissioners prepared to return those moneys?—I think not; but I am only giving my own opinion about it. Some of the Commissioners hold a different opinion.

18760. Have the Commissioners appropriated the £27 a year so received for three years to any other educational purpose?—No, they did not. It was mixed with their common fund.

18761. For how many years has the sum of £27 been received since Mr. Hogan's departure?—He was paid up to September, 1875. The sum of £27 has been received for 1876, 1877, 1878, and 1879. The last year's sum of £27 has been lodged to a separate account, but for three years the money had gone into the common fund.

18762. It remains to be accounted for?—I think it was looked upon as part of the corporate property, and it appears in the accounts as a corporate debt. The Commissioners, whether they lodged it separately or not, understood they had a claim on it as corporate property. When the school went into liquidation the Commissioners considered it their right to use the money, as it could not be diverted into the channel for which it was originally intended.

18763. Have you any memorandum in your books showing any application by "The Commissioners of Education," Clarendon-street, Dublin, to your Commissioners, since Mr. Hogan's departure, on the subject of this school?—No.

18764. CHAIRMAN.—Has there never been any communication between the Commissioners and the late Dr. Kyle, the Secretary of "The Commissioners of Education," on the subject?—No, not that I am aware of.

MR. RICHARD WALTER KNOWLES, B.L.S., CONTINUED.

18775. CHAIRMAN.—You are one of the Town Commissioners of Kinsale?—Yes.

18776. How long have you been a member of that body?—Not more than a year and a half.

18777. Your knowledge of Kinsale dates further back than that?—Very much further than that.

18778. You can give us some information as to the past history of the Kinsale Endowed School—does your knowledge of it date back to the appointment of Mr. Purdon?—Long before that.

18779. Do you know how he was appointed?—I could not tell.

18780. Mr. Hogan was appointed by the Commissioners?—He was. My information would go rather to show what the school was in former years.

18781. Were you yourself a pupil at the school?—Yes.

18782. Was it a boarding or a day school?—It was both a boarding and day school.

18783. About what was the number of pupils?—Who attended the school in your time?—We had about fifteen boarders of a highly respectable class; and there was a great number of day boys, belonging to all classes and creeds in the town.

15766. The boarders were gentlemen's sons from a distance?—Gentlemen's sons of the highest respectability from various places.

15767. What were the fees charged when you were there?—I do not exactly know what they were, but I have heard my father complain very much of them.

15768. Were the boarders all of one creed or was it a mixed school?—The boarders were all Protestants.

15769. Was it considered a good school?—A first-rate school. There were masters of all descriptions—a French master, a verse master, and a dancing master.

15770. Do you know how the school declined?—I suppose according to Mr. Perdue advanced in years he was not successful?—I believe it was in his time it went down—so I heard?—I do not know myself as I was not there in his time, but in that of his predecessor, Mr. Stuart.

15771. What staff of teachers had he?—I think four or five.

15772. Have you had any knowledge of the school since you were there yourself?—Yes.

15773. Was it an efficient school in Mr. Perdue's time?—I think it was in Mr. Perdue's time it began to decline.

15774. Since his time, under Mr. Hogan, it was only a very small school?—I do not know anything at all about it under Mr. Hogan's care.

15775. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—You are one of the Town Commissioners now—suppose this school were re-established with its £20 a year, have you at all considered whether the Commissioners have the power, in any manner of the will, to renew the old grant of £20 a year for educational purposes?—I could not say.

15776. The question has never been suggested?—No.

15777. You are aware that, under the present system of audit, the Government auditors are very careful to keep expenditure within its regular statutory limits?—Yes.

Mr. William Walton.

MR. WILLIAM WALTON, examined.

15778. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—You were the agent to the Town Commissioners of Kinsale?—I was agent to the Town Commissioners for several years.

15779. You produce a rental of the Corporation property?—Yes, it is dated 1833, and is in my late father's handwriting.

15780. This document refers to the deed of 1767, and describes it as a grant from Edward Southwell of his manse-house, stable, coach-house, and garden in Kinsale, for a school-house, and shows that an estate of £30, to pay the schoolmaster, was thereby charged upon the lands of Boscawen. It appears further that the deed was executed by a letter of attorney signed to it, which points that the consideration for the grant was the transferring to him of the right of presentation to the living of Boscawen?—That is so.

Rev. V. Duns,
Duns, N.B.

REV. WILLIAM DUNN, M.A., examined.

15781. CHAIRMAN.—You are the Incumbent of Kinsale?—I am.

15782. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—The deed from Edward Southwell to the savings and commons of Kinsale, made in the year 1767 for a national school, makes no allusion to the question of presentation at all, but grants the house and garden we have been speaking of, without specifying the purpose for which the grant was made; but it appears by the power of attorney which was executed by Mr. Southwell, that the object was for the purposes of education?—Yes.

15783. CHAIRMAN.—The school appears to have been in past years a mixed school?—It was as to its attendance. I was educated at it myself, and so were my brothers and all the gentlemen of the town.

15784. Did it continue to be a mixed school as long as it was open?—It did up to Mr. Perdue's death.

15785. In Mr. Hogan's time it was comparatively a small school?—It was a very small school.

15786. The premises were then in very bad order?—They were in very bad order, but perfectly habitable. I was often through the house myself. The roof was bad and constantly undergoing repairs, and the master complained of the great expenditure necessary to keep it in proper order.

15787. Do you know how it was kept in repair?—The master told me he had to do it out of his own pocket.

15788. He recovered a free house and garden and £30 Irish a year, and he kept the house in repair himself?—He kept the roof in repair himself.

15789. But he did not keep it in repair sufficiently to prevent it from going to ruin?—I am afraid that would be impossible. It was more or less in a dilapidated state.

15790. Do you think it has fallen into disrepair since neglect?—I think from age. It was an exceedingly old house in 1689 or thereabouts. There are records to show it was then in a bad state.

15791. Nothing short of rebuilding the house would be of much use now?—It is a perfect wreck now.

The mansion are afraid to go into it lest it should come down.

15792. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—Do you think that the walls are solid and available?—I think they are solid, and I do not see why they should not be available; but a great part of the roof was taken off, another part fell, and the place was left in that state.

15793. CHAIRMAN.—In these any other school in the town to supply the place of the Endowed School?—No. We tried to get up a school under the National Board. It was our desire to secure, if possible, the grant that was made to the Endowed School, for the purpose of getting up a good National school, but we failed in doing so. We got counsel's opinion about it, and took several steps, but we did not carry it to any length. The school had always been under Protestant patronage and administered in that direction.

15794. I suppose there are National schools of a primary character in the town?—There are three National schools—one is No. 3.

15795. That school is practically Protestant?—Yes and the other two are practically Roman Catholic—one is the boys' school and the other, which is for girls, is the Convent school.

15796. Is there any Christian Brothers' school in Kinsale?—There is not.

15797. I suppose there are a good many country gentlemen about Kinsale, who could hardly afford to send their sons to a boarding school, and who would be very glad to have a good day school in the town?—A great many. When our school was first started, we had a first-class master under the National Board, who was able to teach classes. We had seventy-five boys, including many sons of gentlemen, on the roll. It was our desire to support a National school of that kind.

15798. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—Have you seen the power of attorney which was produced here to day, and under which the deed founding the Endowed School was executed?—I have not.

15799. That power of attorney refers to the intention with which the grant was made. The grantee says is "infused that a good Grammar School is much wanted for the instruction and education of youth in the town of Kinross." That points to the intention of the grantor to benefit the inhabitants of Kinross?—Precisely.

18718. There are a great many boys of all religions that require something more than a primary education?—There are; but I believe the preponderance of boys who require that are gentlemen's sons in the country round about.

18719. I am talking of the town of Kinross. There are a good many shopkeepers and professional men here, both Protestant and Roman Catholics?—I include all those.

18720. The sons of those people would require a good intermediate education?—They would.

18721. And for them a good day school in Kinross is of the greatest importance?—Exactly.

18722. The language used in the power of attorney points to an intention on the part of the grantor to establish an Intermediate School?—Yes.

18723. You propose to put the school, which you desire to found, under the National Board?—Yes, as being an undenominational system.

18724. You are aware that is a primary system of education?—It is to a certain extent; but there are schools under the National Board that can hardly be called primary. At Queensdown they have a classical schoolmaster under the National Board, and gentlemen's sons attend his school.

18725. You propose such a school as that?—Yes.

18726. Among the shopkeepers, merchants, and professional men in the town of Kinross, I suppose there is a very large number of Catholics?—Yes. I should fancy the members of the two religions are about half and half.

18727. Would not the proportion of Catholics among the shopkeepers be more than half?—I should think not very much more. There are a very large number of Protestant shopkeepers.

18728. There are a good number of well-to-do respectable Catholic farmers in the neighbourhood of the town?—I should think there are.

18729. In the former school, in Mr. Perdue's time, Scriptures were taught to Church children?—Yes.

18730. There never was any interference with Catholics?—Not in the least. There are three or four of Mr. Perdue's pupils who were with me there and who are now priests.

18731. There is nothing whatever in the document of foundation indicating the intention of the grantor that the master should of necessity be a Protestant?—No, except the fact that he gave the endowment in exchange for the advowson of a living, and at that time the Corporation Trusts Act was not repealed, moreover the nature of the school, from the time of its foundation down to the death of Mr. Perdue, were always denominical.

18732. CHAIRMAN.—The endowment was handed over to the care of what was then an exclusively Protestant body?—Precisely.

18733. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—But there is not even a reference to the necessity of Protestant religious instruction in the document?—No; Mr. Jelfett's opinion was, that a proposal such as mine would be carrying out the spirit and letter of the trust.

18734. CHAIRMAN.—Is there anything further you desire to add?—Nothing further, except that the Protestants of the town on their side felt that a higher class National school got up on the principle of the National Board would be an accurate fulfilment of the conditions of the trust.

18735. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—In whom did the Protestants, when they made that move, intend that the appointment of the master should rest?—In the Town Committee. There is a Town Committee in existence at present.

18736. What is the nature of that Town Committee?—Of course as the Roman Catholics have on their side National schools administered by them, this was a Protestant Committee.

18737. Who appoints that Committee?—They are gentlemen who were asked to put their names down. The legal representatives on the Protestant side now are the School Vestry, and then there should of course be gentlemen added to them representing the other Protestant bodies.

18738. You said of two of the National schools at present in operation in Kinross that they were virtually in the hands of the Catholics and denominational?—Yes.

18739. Do you propose then, in order to counter-balance that advantage on the part of the Catholics, to make this a similarly denominational, or virtually a Protestant, school?—We thought to do so. Considering the conditions on which the trust was conceived all along, we thought it would not be an unjust departure from the objects of the trust.

18740. You intend that this should be, although nominally a primary school, virtually a school carrying out the intentions of Mr. Southwell by giving an intermediate education?—Yes, a school giving a higher education.

18741. The two Catholic schools you refer to are purely primary?—Yes, I think so.

18742. Therefore the result of your proposal would be to have then, the only Intermediate Endowment in Kinross, turned into a virtually Protestant one?—That was not my intention. Our hope was to have a higher class National school that would teach all—the poorest children and all.

18743. But that the education should be intermediate?—I do not go as high as that.

18744. But such an education as would suit the good class of shopkeepers?—Precisely.

18745. And that the course of appointment, without laying down any legal rule, would be to give the school generally to a Protestant master?—Yes, but not to put it under the Intermediate Education Act.

Oct 24, 1878.
Rev. William
Dunn, M.A.

Mr. GEORGE DUNN, M.A., examined.

Mr. George
Dunn, M.A.

18746. CHAIRMAN.—You are one of the Town Commissioners of Kinross?—Yes.

18747. How long have you been so?—Since 1875.

18748. Can you give any information in reference to the Kinross Endowed School?—This matter has been before the Commissioners on several occasions, and I always opposed using the grant for any other purpose but the one that it was intended for, and I was also one of those who, at one of the meetings of the Commissioners, opposed the election of the last master, on the ground that it was not fulfilling what I believed to be the trust of the donor.

18749. In what way?—Inasmuch as it was electing a Roman Catholic gentleman to the post, when a Protestant offered who was fitted in every respect. I myself proposed that gentleman, Mr. Burke, of Ferry, a clergyman, but he was rejected. I protested at that time. I represented No. 3 National school as manager, and I suggested to the Commissioners that by giving this endowment to the Protestant Committee of that school they would be fulfilling the trust, as evidenced by the whole history of the post, as nearly as possibly could be. My suggestion, however, was negatived.

18750. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—You spoke about opposing the application of this fund to other purposes than that of education?—Yes.

18751. Have there been discussions at the meetings of the Town Commissioners as to the right to apply the fund to other purposes?—Indeed there have.

18752. Have the Commissioners, after discussion

Oct. 26, 1875.
Mr. George
Dwyer, &c.

determined to apply the fund to their own purposes?—They did not determine to do that; but they would not do what was part of their duty, namely, to keep the building in repair. The roof required repair, but was not at first in a very bad state.

15833. It appears that in January, 1877, £300 would have been required to put the place into repair. Would the gradual application of the £97 a year since the departure of Mr. Hogan have done something substantial to keep the place in order?—I think the £30 (true), a year at that time would have sufficed to keep the roof in order. Patches might have been mended, and thereby the rain would have been kept out, and the total destruction that followed could have been avoided.

15834. When the roof fell it brought ruin on the rest of the building?—The whole of the floors fell with it.

15835. Did you propose that the money should be applied in repairs?—I did. I mentioned the matter, but it was negatived. I do not know if it went to a regular resolution.

15836. Was any opposition raised as to the power to apply the money?—Yes. Some of the Commissioners seemed to think, that, if we touched the building for repair at all, we would involve ourselves in the necessity of keeping it in thorough repair, and might therefore exhaust the available income. It was a mere matter of opinion. Still, it struck me that, so far as the fund itself went, we had a right to use it for the purpose.

15837. I suppose there are funds at your disposal to represent the arrears for the last three years, if it becomes necessary to make good the present?—I hope so. That is however a thing I am irresponsible for, inasmuch as I protested from the first against making the money with the funds of the Commissioners. I suppose we could be taxed, if necessary. At a meeting on the 11th December, 1875, of which I have a newspaper report here, the Town Clerk and the following letter received from Mr. Gillman, solicitor of the Board, dated May 27th, 1876:—

"DEAR SIR.—The Lord Chancellor having made an order for the appointment of new trustees, and referred the matter to his chambers for the sanction of a scheme for the future management of the school, I caused instructions to be given to counsel (Mr. O'Hara) to prepare the scheme. Counsel has written to me requiring further information, and I give extract of his letter:—'I (counsel) want to get the basis of the scheme fully, which the new trustees would wish to have approved of. This should show the proposed expenditure, the available revenue, and suggest how the funds should be obtained. In the new scheme it should set out any charges intended in the charter of the building, or of the school, and show how it is intended to continue it &c.'"

The letter concluded with a request that Mr. Gillman should be supplied by Mr. Dempsey, the then clerk to the Commissioners, with instructions in detail as requested by counsel, after the matter had been before the Board. The clerk said that the subject of the said letter had not been before the Board at their meeting next after the receipt of that letter, and it did not appear that any action had been afterwards taken on it, which caused Mr. Gillman to write another letter, urging the Board to supply him with the required information. Finally the question was practically shelved. One ground of my application that the building should be given to us, who represented No. 5 National school, was, that whereas the other National schools in the place had suitable locations, we had none whatever. We had to hire a house which was quite unsuitable, not being large or convenient enough for our purpose, and we are still under that disability.

15838. How was the other site and buildings provided?—One is leased from Mr. Heard, and the other is in the grounds of the convent. We could not procure a suitable site for our school.

Dr. James C.
Nolan,
M.B.E.C.

Dr. JAMES CASEY NOGGIN, M.B.E.C., examined.

15839. CHAIRMAN.—You are the chairman of the Kinsale Town Commissioners?—I am.

15840. You can give some information with reference to the action of the Commissioners as to the Endowed School funds?—I remember giving orders to our late clerk to make a separate judgment of the school money, but it was not done; when I found that out, I gave orders to our present clerk to make a separate judgment of it, and to let it accumulate for educational purposes. I would be prepared to take steps to start a school if such a thing were signified.

15841. That is, to collect subscriptions?—Yes.

15842. Do you know if Mr. Gillman, or his representatives have been paid the costs of these legal proceedings which have been mentioned?—Mr. Gillman's costs have not been paid. We often applied to him for his bill of costs, but he did not send it in. The Town Clerk informs me that he also wrote to Mr. Sheehan, who was Mr. Gillman's successor, for the bill of costs; but that he never furnished it.

Rev. Patrick
Riordan, &c.

Rev. PATRICK RIORDAN, D.E., examined.

15843. CHAIRMAN.—You desire to make a statement as to the endowment for the Kinsale School?—It appears to me that if the grant were applied, as suggested, to a National Board school, it would, practically speaking, be denominational, and therefore the benefit of it would be applied simply to one small section in Kinsale. It would work just like the other National Schools, and be an exclusive school.

15844. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—As I understood then, you, without being a lawyer, claim that the intention of the founder was to benefit the entire community?—Surely. The inhabitants of the town of Kinsale are mentioned in the foundation deed.

15845. A previous witness has referred to the Roman Catholic school-house; I understood that one of them, the boys school, was built by the parishioners?—Yes, it was built by the parishioners, with the assistance of the National Board, and it has been vested in Trustees.

15846. Is the grant from the National Board ultimately repayable?—Yes, at any time we please.

15847. How did you get the site?—From Mr. Heard.

15848. You pay rent for it?—£5 a year.

15849. Is there any land attached, or is it merely the site of the school?—The site of the school only.

15850. With regard to the other National School, is it in the Convent?—Yes.

15851. And is built on the grounds of the Convent?—Yes, and belongs to the Convent.

15852. How was that site acquired, was it a donation?—The community pay rent for it. It was first a small house and they added to it. Entirely there has been an Industrial School added out of their own funds, or the funds collected for them.

Mr. EDWARD L. HOGAN, examined.

Oct. 26, 1878.

Mr. Edward L. Hogan.

1853. CHAIRMAN.—You see the late master of the Endowed School, Kinsale?—I say; and as to the period during which I was master I have more knowledge of the affairs of the school than anyone else could have. The appointment of the master, before my time, was vested in the old Corporation, as appears by the deed to which reference has been made here today. I was appointed according to a resolution of the Town Commissioners, dated 3rd November, 1873. The endowment, which is charged on the estate of Mr. O'neill, of Rushmore, was regularly paid to me during the two years for which I held the school, and at the end of that time I gave it up, the number of pupils not being sufficient. The highest number was fifteen. I am anxious to bring under the notice of the Commission what I consider the unsatisfactory discharge of duty on the part of the Town Commissioners of Kinsale in their capacity as grant trustees at any rate of the school. I am informed on the best authority, that until about four or five years previous to my appointment the Commissioners had kept the school-house in at least partial repair. On my arrival I found the house in such a state as to be quite uninhabitable. A great part of the roof was damaged, and the building stunk was, with the exception of a few rooms, in a state of dilapidation. I represented this fact privately to some of the Commissioners, and also sent in a memorial on the subject, and it was only in consequence of the very strong position made to me that part at least of the house would be made habitable that I consented to take the post at all. I also obtained, for a short time, from the solicitor of the Town Commissioners a copy of the deed of endowment, which at the request of the Secretary of the Commissioners of Charitable Bequests I forwarded to him, together with a statement of the case and a request that his Board would take the matter into their consideration and deal with it, as I know from previous experience they had power to do. In a few days afterwards I was called upon by the town clerk of Kinsale to return the document, and I was forced to ask Mr. McDonnell to return it. In consequence the Board of Charitable Donations and Bequests professed their inability to do anything in the matter. In consequence of my memorial the Town Commissioners took counsel's opinion, but to what effect the opinion was I cannot say, for on asking to be shown it, I was informed that the solicitor had given directions that the opinion was not to be shown to the master of the school. I was simply told that the Commissioners could do nothing in the matter. Another attempt to induce the Commissioners of Charitable Donations and Bequests to act was equally unsuccessful. Some time afterwards I was served with notice to throw down a stack of chimneys which the Commissioners stated they considered dangerous, in spite of my representation that any such act on my part might involve me in legal difficulties. I was then threatened with legal proceedings, and but for my leaving Kinsale I believe the matter would have been pushed to that extent. Strange to say, after my departure, the anxiety about the chimneys appears to have entirely vanished, because I saw that very stack of chimneys standing this morning. The Town Commissioners some time since had almost the entire of the roof stripped, so that the house has become an utter ruin. It is to be remembered that the Town Commissioners had on my arrival a sum of £40 or £50 of accumulated endowment.

1854. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—You mean the income of the endowment from the time of Mr. Peeshe's death?—Yes, from Mr. Peeshe's death to my appointment in November, 1873.

1855. The town clerk informs me that Mr. Peeshe only died on the 2nd February, 1873, so that the accumulation could have amounted to little more than half a year's income of the endowment. I thought it was longer accumulating. As they did not fill up the master's salary since my departure they should now have £110 or £120 in hand, but it has disappeared at this inquiry that, until very lately, no separate account has been kept of the money, and that it has been treated as the ordinary property of the Commissioners.

1856. Do you desire to add anything further?—I complain also, that during my tenancy of the school the Commissioners interfered in several ways with my efforts to improve it. There is nominally something like an acre of ground attached to the school, but the portion available for tillage was very small. I spent a good deal of money in clearing the ground, and for that purpose had several of the old and useless trees cut down. I was notified by the Commissioners to desist from doing so, although I informed them that the only good tree removed had been cut down by Mr. Stephen Lewis, one of their own body, who sent in his workmen one day whilst I was engaged in the school. As Mr. Lewis who is present denies my statement, it is right that I should be allowed to state the circumstances. One Saturday, on going out from the school, I found two men engaged in cutting down a tree. I asked by whom authority they were there. They stated they were sent in by Mr. Stephen Lewis. I sent a note to Mr. Stephen Lewis and got one in return from him, the exact purport of which, however, I cannot recollect. The Commissioners appeared to have feared that my clearing the ground might be an injury to the place, but the groundiness of that idea was shown by the fact that after doing so I was able to get the garden at £5 a year, and it has been stated, at this inquiry, that it has been set at that rate up to the present time.

Mr. STEPHEN LEWIS, examined.

Mr. Stephen Lewis.

1857. CHAIRMAN.—You desire to say something in reference to the tree which Mr. Hogan has mentioned?—Yes, I will tell you all about it. The Rev. Father Donlon, the Roman Catholic Curate, was sitting on the hill, the tree intercepted the view, and he asked me to have it cut down. I said, "I will not interfere with it. It is not on the Commissioners' ground, but you can do as you please." "Then," said he, "I will take it on myself; I will send men there." I received a letter that evening from Mr. Hogan, threatening to take an action against me for cutting down the tree. I replied to his letter, and he then wrote to Father Donlon about it, questioning my veracity.

1858. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—In your letter to Mr.

Hogan did not you explain the circumstances?—Certainly, but he did not appear to believe me. I got Father Donlon to go to him afterwards on the subject. I had nothing whatever to say to cutting down the tree.

1859. CHAIRMAN.—Do you wish to add anything further?—I have always, as a Commissioner, protested against the school endowment being allocated to any other use than what it was intended for.

1860. Who received the proceeds of the tree?—I know nothing about it.

1861. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—Was it a valuable tree?—It was a specimen tree growing in an old quarry. I would not have given five shillings for it.

Oct 26, 1879

Mr William C
Sullivan, J.P.

Mr. WILLIAM C. SULLIVAN, J.P., examined.

15862 CHAIRMAN.—You wish to make some statement?—I understood it is not the intention of the Commissioners to visit Bandon, and I therefore thought it right to wait on you, to give any information in my power with regard to the want of intermediate education in the town of Bandon.

15863 You are a magistrate for the county Cork?—Yes.

15864 To what do you desire to call attention?—I merely wish to state that Bandon is the centre of a very large district of country, the most important in the south of Ireland. There is a very large population surrounding it—some 30,000 inhabitants—and the want of middle class education has been sensibly felt by the respectable inhabitants, traders, professional men, and others.

15865 There is an Endowed school in Bandon?—There is an Endowed school under his Grace the Duke of Devonshire, which was most successful and excellent up to a recent period. A great many lads, the sons of respectable parents from all parts of Ireland, were educated there, but I am sorry to say that school has dwindled down till it is almost useless as a school in present. The respectable inhabitants of the town have been obliged to send their boys to boarding schools, at a distance, at very great expense.

15866 How is it that the existing school is not efficient now. Is not the master an able man?—However we respect the master as a private gentleman, we must say we do not think that the school is carried on efficiently. The endowment is a very valuable one, £100 a year granted by his Grace the Duke of Devonshire for the purposes of education. I do not wish to say anything at all derogatory to the position and character of the respectable gentleman who manages the school, but I cannot conceal the fact that the school is comparatively useless, so far as the education goes. Mr. Stephen Lewis, who was examined here to-day, says that he was there himself in the year 1830, when there were about ninety boys there, and that it was then the first school in the south of Ireland. He added a wish that they had anything like it in Kinsale now.

[The Commissioners adjourned.]

Dec 17, 1879.

FORTIETH DAY—WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 17, 1879.—12.30 O'CLOCK, P.M.

At the Commissioners' Office, Four Courts, Dublin.

Present:—The EARL OF ROSSE, Chairman; LORD JUSTICE FITZGERSON; RICHARD O'SHAUGHNESSY, Esq., M.P.; and ANDREW SEARLE HANE, Esq., LL.D.; with JAMES CREED MEREDITH, Esq., LL.D., Secretary.

Mr DAVID GAMBLE GRAHAM, M.R.C.S.E., examined.

Mr David G.
Graham,
M.R.C.S.E.

15867 CHAIRMAN.—You were formerly medical attendant at the Tolrid school?—I was, from 1856 till 1873.

15868 What caused you to cease your connection with the school?—I received a resolution from the Dublin Board dispensing with my further services.

15869 You were a local medical practitioner?—Yes; I reside within a mile of the school.

15870 The Board have since appointed an Enniskillen medical man?—Yes; on my discharge an addition was appended to the resolution offering me a gratuity of £5, for what I do not know. I was paid at the end of my quarter.

15871 Was the £5, in addition to the salary, due to you?—Yes, though I did not claim it.

15872 During the time you were medical attendant you had an opportunity of observing the working of the school generally?—A constant opportunity.

15873 Have you any remarks to offer as regards that? I suppose the children were badly and strong?—No.

15874 To what cause do you attribute their not being so?—I attribute it to the want of proper sanitary arrangements, more especially with regard to their dormitories, and to the arrangements connected with them and the lavatory.

15875 The building was sufficiently large for the number of pupils in it?—I believe it was.

15876 But there was not sufficient cleanliness?—No, the lavatory was very defective. At that time there were fifty-eight boys, and the washing arrangements were very defective, not sufficient for the master. The boys were not at all separated as to their washing and drying accommodation. I complained that they had not proper accommodation, they had urinals in the dormitories, and they were not at all in a proper state; I objected to that.

15877 You reported that to the Board?—I did.

15878 Did they do anything to remedy that state of things?—Not at that time.

15879 Not during the time you were the medical man?—No.

15880 Have these defects been remedied since, so far as you know?—There has been an improvement, but I believe the arrangements are not yet satisfactory. I believe there should not be urinals in a place of the kind—there should be separate accommodation for each boy.

15881 Are the urinals in the dormitories?—Yes. They were in my time, and I believe they are still.

15882 Are there any outside?—Yes, at some distance from the school—at the end of the steward's house. The privy accommodation is attached, or adjacent to the steward's house. I objected to that, too.

15883 How far away is that?—There is only a gateway between the steward's house and the school.

15884 Then it is within a few yards of the school house?—Yes. I objected to the position of that privy, but I could not get it removed in my time. After the passing of the Sanitary Act of 1874, I was appointed consulting sanitary officer to the Irvinestown man, and also sanitary officer to the district, and in my capacity as sanitary officer, I reported on it, and it has been since very much improved, but the position is, in my opinion, altogether unsuitable.

15885 Is the school successful as an educational establishment?—No, I believe not. I do not believe the success is at all commensurate with the money expended. I think that is the general opinion.

15886 Is the education better than in the National schools?—Rather the reverse. The pupils do not appear to be fitted for success in life afterwards. For what reason I cannot give an opinion.

15887 Are there sufficient number of teachers, so far as you can judge by comparing the school with other schools with which you are acquainted?—No, I think not, considering the amount of work that the teacher has to perform in addition to his school duties.

15888 From your knowledge of it, you think the school generally is not a success?—No, that is the general opinion, and the gentry of the county have always expressed such an opinion to me. With regard to my previous answer, a former teacher told me that he had to attend to his duties from six in the morning till ten o'clock at night, and that he had not more than an hour at a time for relaxation, which I consider, at the present day, not altogether in accordance with what would be right.

18889. Do you know whether any complaints are made as to the subjects taught?—No; not exactly with regard to the course, but with regard to the effect upon the children in attending. They do not appear able to obtain to that position in the week, that you would expect from an institution of the kind.

18890. What was the nature of the illness that you alluded to a great extent among the children?—Disease of the eyes, ophthalmia, and ringworm. Those diseases, I believe, extend still to a great extent. I have had the testimony of a teacher since on the subject.

18891. Is ringworm common among the children in the neighbourhood, attending other schools?—No, very uncommon. In my time, it was rare to meet a case of a country child with the disease.

18892. Did you take any trouble to separate those that had it from those that had not?—Yes.

18893. It is very infectious?—Yes, and that either could not, or would not be attended to. Unless the children suffering from it were put into a separate primary there was no way of separating them. The whole thing I complained of was the dying arrangements. I believe, for 35 boys, the whole dying arrangements consisted of six rubbers on rollers.

18894. In that way the disease was communicated from one to the other?—I believe so.

18895. Was the inflammation of the eyes, you spoke of, due to defective sanitary arrangements?—I believe that would be to a very great extent due to the children sitting.

18896. I believe the chaplain was positively responsible for the general superintendence of the establishment?—Yes.

18897. And he was manager and superintendent as well?—Yes. His own evidence was that he is not curative of the school, but I know he takes the chair, in the absence of the rector, at the meetings of the Select Vestry. That I regard as a proof that he is still curative, and I have a letter from the Lord Primate, stating that he is not relieved from duty—that he has still to continue to act.

18898. What was your salary as medical attendant?—£30 a year, for attendance once a week, and as much extra as might be required.

18899. When specially sent for?—Yes.

18900. But you always went there, whether summoned or not, once a week?—Yes.

18901. Did the Board give any reasons for your dismissal?—No. I had applied for an increase of salary and received no answer. I wrote again, and in the meantime I heard from a relative of one of the governors, a medical man himself, that they had refused my application, which was made on the ground that illness of a severe character was extensive—the skin disease and eye disease,—necessitating much more frequent attendance than weekly. The Board wanted to make it appear that the place was so healthy they could not see their way to increasing my salary. I wrote, saying I had heard so, but that I believed it was contrary to nineteenth century opinions to refuse my application on that ground. It was assumed that that was resulting to the Board, and they held a meeting in Dublin and dismissed me. I protested, and wished to be heard. As the whole business was managed by local governors the Board had no opportunity of knowing what was going on at the school, and I was refused an opportunity of defending myself.

18902. Since the appointment of the medical attendant in Brompton have you, or any local man, been called in in cases of emergency?—Yes, I attended the last master.

18903. Were you paid by the Board or by the master?—It was at the time of his death, and I was paid by the present Archbishop of St. Patrick who was his executor.

18904. That was in his private capacity?—Yes; but during the time I was the medical officer of the institution I had been often in attendance on him without being paid for it.

18905. Have you been called in to attend any of the people, and been paid by the Board?—No.

18906. The doctor in Brompton always attends in every case?—Yes, but it has been asserted by a late teacher that they did not always send for him when required, that they did without him as well as they could, both on account of the difficulty of sending and the difficulty of his coming. The former teacher, who of course had a right to know, told me so.

18907. Are you the only medical gentleman residing in the immediate neighbourhood of the school?—There is Dr. Bain at Potters, four miles distant, and Dr. Evans at Ilford, five miles away. It has been stated by Mr. Ansell, in his evidence, that Dr. Walsh can be had more quickly, but Brompton is thirteen and a half miles from the school.

18908. Mr. O'Sullivan?—You made an application for an increase of salary?—I did.

18909. Did you get any answer to that application?—None whatever.

18910. Was it after you made the application that you received the order of dismissal?—Yes; I wrote asking for an answer, and that I had heard from a private source (the son-in-law of one of the governors) that my application had been refused on the grounds stated.

18911. How many children are there in the school now?—Something like 70, boys and girls.

18912. Do you know whether the present doctor visits periodically?—No.

18913. He only attends when disease breaks out?—Yes.

18914. It appeared on the minutes of the Board that, in the year 1874, you and Dr. Walsh made a report to the Board, and arrangements were directed to be made for carrying out the improvements suggested, which appeared to the Board to be requisite?—Yes.

18915. What was the nature of those improvements?—With regard to the sanitary arrangements, Dr. Walsh quite agreed with me.

18916. About the urinals?—Yes.

18917. Were those improvements made?—Very little improvements were made. I complained on several occasions after making that report.

18918. It is stated on the minutes that arrangements were directed to be made?—The arrangements were directed to be made, but very little improvements were made. There was some change made, but not at all sufficient.

18919. Were there also water-closets?—Not at all; no.

18920. Were the urinals the only accommodation of the kind in the dormitories?—That was all. The accommodation was just at the end of the dormitory, and could be compared to nothing except a manger.

18921. Was it of wood or stone?—I think it was lined with wood—that is, the improved one.

18922. Did you suggest that that accommodation should be removed from the dormitories?—Yes.

18923. Was that done?—I think not, I think it is there still.

18924. Did Dr. Walsh concur in your recommendation?—I think so.

18925. Is there anything in the position of the school, its relation to the soil, or anything of that kind, to account for the breaking-out of dysentery?—No. I should think not. It is an enormous, and the subject would be healthy. It could not be accounted for in that way.

18926. Is the hospital near the school?—Yes; it is a semi-detached building.

18927. Was there proper accommodation there?—Very little; in my time, except on three or four occasions, we had little occasion to have recourse to it.

18928. Can you say whether those diseases—dysentery and delivery of the eyes—continue to prevail still?—Yes; I have the authority of a late master on that subject.

18929. Have you, in your medical capacity, outside the school, come across any children suffering from those diseases?—No; there are no children from the neighbourhood in the school at all.

15930. No children from the neighbourhood?—I do not know of one at present.

15931. Is the school situated on the estate?—It is.

15932. From what distance, as a rule, do the children in the school come?—From all parts of Ireland; a great many from Dublin.

15933. The school does not appear to be at all, directly or indirectly, appropiated to the benefit of the part of the country in which it is situated?—In no degree.

15934. You speak of the failure of the teaching to turn out children fit for pursuits in after-life?—Yes.

15935. How long were you medical attendant?—Seven years, but I have known the school for twenty years. I was seven years for the previous medical attendant, and at his death I was myself appointed.

15936. Is it possible you cannot point out in what respect generally you think the system is deficient?—With regard to that point, it seems to me the people do not attach to anything beyond motherly care, and some of them have turned out badly.

15937. They are of a class that ought to turn out as servants?—That is not my opinion. A great many of them who have come from long distances, if they were intended for that kind of thing, would not be sent to the school at all; and in the neighbourhood there appears to be some feeling that the school is not up to the mark. There appears to be a hesitation to send children there, and, indeed, few of the tenants apply for admission.

15938. Do you know whether the children are of all denominations there?—Have you ever heard any complaint on matters of religion, in connection with the place?—No; I think they are supposed to be all of the same religion. That was not always the case.

15939. That was not so?—No. I am acquainted with two men, who are Roman Catholics, and always were so, who were educated at the school. I may mention, with regard to the governors, that except Lord Erne, Lord Enniskillen, the Rev. Mr. Scarpie, and the Rev. Mr. Williamson, few of the other governors ever attended at Tubrid, and so they have no personal knowledge of the working of the school.

15940. CHAIRMAN.—Some of them reside a long way off?—Yes. With regard to the management of the estate, the tenants have every confidence in Mr. Maude, but they complain that interference takes place on the part of individual governors.

15941. Mr. O'SHEA.—Do you mean interference with regard to the management?—Yes, as to their farms and other matters connected with the estate; but they have every confidence in the mode in which Mr. Maude conducts the agency. The opinion is that he should be accountable only to the Board, and not to any private individual.

15942. Was the expenditure increased or diminished in consequence of the change in the medical arrangements?—I received £30, and Dr. Walsh now receives £35 a year. It has been said that he goes there once a fortnight; he goes down with the agent sometimes, but I believe that his visits would not amount on an average to twelve in the year. I believe more used to number seventy-five.

15943. He for £25 gives a much smaller attendance?—Yes. I never refused the £30 a year; I was not given the opportunity of refusing it. I did not say I would not hold on at the old remuneration; I merely applied for increased remuneration, and got no answer.

15944. Was there ever occasion to get any further amendment?—No. I never attended any of the school, after my dismissal, except the head-master. But it has been asserted by a previous head-master—and I have his authority for stating it—that they do not send for Dr. Walsh upon all necessary occasions.

15945. There is an increase of expenditure and a diminution of attendance?—There is no doubt about it that the expenditure is increased and the attendance diminished. I am a tenant on the estate myself.

15946. Dr. HART.—Does not Dr. Walsh receive his travelling expenses?—That is so.

15947. The £5 beyond what you got is for travelling expenses?—Yes. He receives £25, while I received but £20.

Rev. Alex. C.
MacIntyre,

Rev. ALEXANDER COMPTON MACINTYRE, M.A., CHAIRMAN.

15948. CHAIRMAN.—How long have you resided in Enniskillen?—I have been a minister of the Presbyterian Church there for forty-three years.

15949. You wish to make a statement in reference to the educational requirements of the various denominations in Enniskillen?—Yes, I am prepared to make a short statement. In the memorial submitted to this Commission by a number of the inhabitants of Enniskillen we complain that we had not sufficient notice of the late inquiry regarding our Royal and Model Schools, and that the evidence given was one-sided and misleading. I myself heard nothing of the inquiry till I saw the report of it in the newspaper, and I believe that nearly all my co-religionists were equally unaware that an inquiry was being held in Enniskillen. Two Roman Catholic clergymen and two Roman Catholic laymen, all of whom are avowedly hostile to those schools, were examined, and not one Protestant. Notwithstanding this one-sided array of hostility, it is surprising that not a scientific or reliable evidence was produced to justify it. Indeed the evidence is all the other way. One witness says—has not who is now a priest, has not suffered as to his faith, by being educated at Portora. It is not alleged that the religion of any Roman Catholic has ever been tainted with that of those schools. The great objection is, we are told, to the system, because it takes the control of education out of the hands of the clergy. Well, in this respect, clergymen of all denominations are fairly upon a par; and, while ample time is provided for all to give religious instruction, none are permitted to mix up denominational differences with secular education.

Both in Portora and in the Model School all have equal advantages and equal protection, and it remains to be proved that Roman Catholic parents cannot with safety send their children to either. If there be any apparent cause for apprehension, so far as the Model school is concerned, it is all on the Protestant side. The head-master of that school is a Roman Catholic, the District Inspector is a Roman Catholic, and the Head Inspector is a Roman Catholic, all able and honourable men, in whom Protestants have full confidence, but who are not considered safe instructors of the children of Roman Catholics. One witness says, "the parents are not influenced by their clergy in keeping them away." Such is not my experience. Intelligent Roman Catholics have repeatedly declined to send their children to those schools, and I have seen the great loss their children sustained in being prevented by their clergy from going to the Model schools, where they could get a really good education. This is definite ground to tread on, but I may give one instance in proof. The wife of a Roman Catholic National school Inspector, whose children as a matter of fact did not attend the Model school, told me, on the occasion of her husband's removal from Enniskillen, that she thanked God they were going to a district where they would not be prevented by the parents from getting their children educated at the Model school, and she added that the children might just as well be at home as at the Christian Brothers' school, where they were just losing their time, as there was nothing there deserving the name of education at all. In a commercial town like Enniskillen the Model school is an invaluable institution, and anything that would impair its usefulness would be a public calamity; while, in the higher walks of literature, Portora completes the education which is so well begun in the Model school. All the schools in and about Enniskillen, with the exception of Portora, and that under the Board of Roman Catholic, have come into existence under my eye, and the only one of them which has been a success is the Model school. As for Portora it is far above the competition of any schools, and necessarily so. In at the day-boys have all the advantages of the extra staff of able masters necessary for such an institution, and the refining influence of the society of the boarders as class-fellows. Year after year it goes on qualifying boys from the humblest ranks of life for the Civil Service and for all the learned professions, some of whom have risen to great eminence, and who, but for it, must have continued in subordinate posts. The man who would disparage or destroy a sort of learning which has been so long employed in disseminating the blessings of education all around it, irrespective of creed or party, is detractor of all the elements which are essential to constitute a public benefactor.

15950. You mentioned that the children of a District Inspector were not allowed by the Roman Catholic clergy to go to the Model School. Do you know whether the teachers' own children attend there?—The master, whose a Roman Catholic has his children there. I believe no objection is made to that.

15951. In the morning at the Model School in Enniskillen a Roman Catholic?—The head master is a member of the Protestant Episcopal Church, but I think the assistant master is a Roman Catholic. There cannot be any complaint on the score of religious discrimination.

15952. Do you think that the day-boys in Portora get far play or compared with the boarders?—I believe they do. I think they get the same advantages as the boarders.

15953. Have you heard any complaint as to the bullying of day-boys?—Very little.

15954. In the case of another school there was a complaint made that the boarders looked down upon the day-boys, and made it unpleasant for them. Did you ever hear of anything of that sort with reference to Portora?—I did hear a little of that, but not more than a misunderstanding among the boys themselves.

15955. Not such as to keep boys away from the school?—By no means.

15956. How is the Model School thought of by the Protestants—as it is considered successful on the whole?—Very successful. Children come by tons from Lisnakea, Fintona, and other adjoining towns to attend it. Some come in and lodge in Enniskillen in order to have the advantage of attending it.

15957. Is there any boarding-house specially established in connexion with that school?—None. I may say that for forty-three years I have had a good deal of experience with regard to education, and I have never known a better managed or more efficient school than the Model School. I think it is of the greatest possible advantage to a commercial population like that of Enniskillen.

15958. Is it the only school of its grade at which the Protestants in the town attend?—The only one. The Roman Catholic schools, with the exception of one little establishment, are chiefly for the children of the poorer classes.

15959. Do any appreciable numbers of Roman Catholics go to the Model school?—Not many now.

15960. Did a large number of Roman Catholics attend there formerly?—My attention was not specially drawn to the matter until the late opposition, but my impression is that formerly there was a considerable number of Roman Catholic children going there.

15961. Mr. O'BRIEN.—You said that, with the exception of a little school, which I understand, has been lately started, all the Roman Catholic Schools in Enniskillen are of a primary character?—Yes.

15962. Are there not a good many Roman Catholic day-boys in the town of Enniskillen?—Yes, a good many.

15963. Some of them pretty well off?—Yes. Some of the most respectable establishments in Enniskillen are in Roman Catholic hands.

15964. Any of those, who wished for a better class of education than mere primary education for their children, had not, until very recently, any school of their own establishment to send them to?—They had not.

15965. You were not surprised to hear that they were dissatisfied with that state of things?—I most confess I was; because I never knew any tangible cause of complaint against Portora. I think, as a Presbyterian, that we had the same advantages at Portora as belonged to the English Church, and the Roman Catholics had the same advantages, too.

15966. They do not complain of Dr Steele's management at all; but, knowing that they hold denominational views with regard to education, you are not surprised at their regretting that they had not an institution of their own in the town of Enniskillen?—Even admitting that to be a fact, I am surprised, because I believe those who go into the higher grade of society—those who would qualify for professions—go to school not to learn religion, but merely to get a literary, classical education.

15967. You are quite satisfied with Portora and the Model school?—Yes.

15968. Those schools give perfect satisfaction to all Protestants in the neighbourhood?—There is just this reservation. Since the recent move has been made by the Roman Catholics, people have asked why should Protestants and Presbyterians have more but Roman Catholic ministers at the Model school. The agitation has done that out more or less.

15969. Are there many Presbyterian day-boys in Portora?—Indeed I could not say.

15970. There are in Enniskillen a large number of Presbyterian boys who require intermediate education?—No, a very small number.

15971. Is there a single Presbyterian boy, a day scholar at Portora?—There are at any rate three or four. All who are at present in Enniskillen.

15972. Are you aware whether Portora has been very successful in the boys that it sent up to the Intermediate Examinations?—I did not look at the last returns.

15973. You mentioned the wife of a school Inspector who expressed her views about the Model school, who was the other Roman Catholic that spoke to you about the Model school—you mentioned that there were several?—I object to mention the names, because this question is rather a hot one in Enniskillen.

15974. I do not want you to mention names at all, but what I want to know is this, are there many?—I have been repeatedly spoken to by Roman Catholics on this subject.

15975. How long is the Model school established in Enniskillen?—I could not say.

15976. You have only individualised one Roman Catholic, a lady who had a sort of vested interest in the Model school, and I believe her for standing up for it as an Inspector's wife. Can you give me any idea of the number of other Roman Catholics of whom you have spoken?—The fact is, I have hardly spoken to an intelligent Roman Catholic on the subject, whether he had a family or not, who did not express the same opinion.

15977. That is hardly answering the question. What I want to know is, how many Roman Catholics have expressed the opinion you have quoted?—Those might be a dozen, I do not know exactly.

15978. Which did they regret, that the parents did not allow them to send their children to the Model schools, or that the Model schools were not made of such a character that they could send them there?—They regretted that they could not send their children to such a good school as our Model school.

15979. Have you made any inquiry as to the success of the pupils of that Model school under the present system?—Not very accurate.

15980. At the last examination it was not, I believe, successful!—The school had been broken up, in consequence of acarietina, in the course of this summer.

15981. You spoke as if the destruction of Portora was being aimed at by some persons. Will you point out to me, in the evidence, where there is a single word about the destruction of Portora?—The whole tone and gist of the evidence given is either to disparage or destroy Portora.

15982 CHAIRMAN.—Have you any remarks to make in reference to the success of Tulrid school?—I hardly know anything about that institution. I always understood it was a school for orphans or very poor children. It had not any great character as a literary establishment. They give an introductory education to qualify boys to learn trades, such as printers and shoemakers; but the education is very limited.

15983. Mr. O'SHEAHENRY.—Is that the reputation it has in the district?—It is.

15984. Do you know of any independence on the part of parents as to their children there?—Quite the contrary. There is the greatest possible trouble in getting boys in there; I have often failed.

15985. You do not complain of any rashness in the selection of the pupils?—I do not.

15986. There are no advertisements issued, when vacancies occur?—I think not; I got one child into that school, because I brought influence to bear.

Mr. John S.
Gunning, M.P.

Mr. JOHN S. GUNNING, M.P., examines.

15987 CHAIRMAN.—You are an inhabitant of Enniskillen, and desire to give evidence before us?—Yes. I desire to make a short statement to the Commissioners. I am a physician and surgeon practising in Enniskillen, was born there and lived most of my life in the town. I consider Portora Royal school of the very greatest advantage to the town and neighbourhood, and that any change made in it, either by taking away the endowment or converting it into an Intermediate school, would be a great calamity. I am one of a family of six sons, all of whom were educated at Portora, and have done fairly well in the world, and who, had it not been for Portora, could never have received a high class education or attained the position we have done, and in stating this, I state the case of many families like our own, both in the past and present. I was at Portora with several Roman Catholics, some of whom were my intimate companions and friends, and I never saw or heard any reason they had to complain of the tone of education given there. I believe that there are equal facilities for both Protestants and Roman Catholics in Portora, and that any of the latter who choose to take advantage of the education given there could do so without the least danger of their religious views being interfered with, as the masters make no distinction between the boys. I do not think there are many Roman Catholics in Enniskillen who send their sons there. I know many Roman Catholics who received their education at Portora, and who have since got on well at their various professions. The Protestant shopkeepers, many farmers, &c., from the country, and many people who come to live in Enniskillen solely for this purpose, take the very fullest advantage of Portora. Most of the business men in Enniskillen could not afford to send their sons away to be educated, and they, had it not been for Portora, could never have received a good education, enabling them to enter the University, the professions, or business. I could name dozens of boys, many of them Roman Catholics, who have risen to distinction, and who look back to Portora with feelings of pride and gratitude, because of the great advantage the education given to them there has been. I know several families of boys who will suffer a most responsible loss if any change is made in the condition of our far-famed school.

15988. You, of course, were a day boy?—I was.

15989. Did the day boys get fair play as compared with the boarders?—The very fullest fair play, and if there was any reason why a boy had to complain, I think it was more the fault of the boy who made the complaint than the way he was treated by the boarders. I myself, and dozens of other day boys, have been in the playground playing football and everything else with the boarders. That has been going on for years and years still.

15990. Can you give us any information as to the relative numbers of Protestants and Catholics in Enniskillen, of that class who would seek the sort of education given at Portora?—I believe that the Protestants are much in the majority. In fact, I believe, there are not more than six or seven Roman Catholic gentlemen in Enniskillen who have sons to send to Portora, or to require a higher class education.

15991. Is the class that send their sons to Portora as day boys, composed entirely of shopkeepers, or are some of them independent gentry?—Some are shopkeepers, and a good many are gentlemen residing in the surrounding county. Moreover, many persons and their children to live in Enniskillen, in order that they may attend Portora as day boys. I know whole families of boys at present attending there. As to the bulk, say, I do not believe that during Dr. Steele's time at Portora there is a single school in Ireland in which less bullying exists than at Portora.

15992. Mr. O'SHEAHENRY.—You spoke about the prospect of Portora being made an Intermediate school?—What I referred to was this: In reply to question 15983, the Rev. Mr. Hackett states:—

"There is a strong feeling among the Catholics of Enniskillen with regard to Intermediate education. They feel the want of it very much, and that no means have been adopted or devised to give them to obtain it."

I maintain in reference to that, that they have equal facilities with the Protestants.

15993. What do you mean by Portora being made an Intermediate school?—Mr. Hackett said:—

"When the Government are disposed to open up every person, they should give us something to enable us to rise in the race with those that are highly educated, or, if not, get all on an equal footing, and let the existing endowment go to the promotion of education under the Intermediate system."

I think that refers to Portora.

15994. Do you not know that Portora is an Intermediate school at present—that they give Intermediate education there?—I believe they do.

15995. In your statement you dwell strongly on the fact that the masters make no distinction. Is there anything in the evidence given by the Roman Catholic gentlemen who came forward, which indicates that the masters did make any such distinction?—In Mr. Kenny's evidence I find:—

"15992. You do not suppose that to any interference in the part of the masters?—Emphatically no; only to the tone."

Now the masters are Protestants, and the tone of the school would mean the tone of the masters and the boys, all combined.

15996. He asserts that no distinction is made on the part of the masters. Do you go to visit the school now?—I have been there, at football and cricket matches with the boys, and I knew a number of them, both boarders and day-boys.

15997. You think there is a perfectly fair and kindly spirit between the boarders and day-boys?—I know that there is.

15998. You said there were very few Roman Catholic gentlemen in Enniskillen that would be likely to send their sons there?—Yes, I think so.

15999. That word "gentlemen" is a very choice wood. Are there not a good many Roman Catholic men in Enniskillen who would be able to pay £5 or £8 a year for the education of their children, as day pupils, if they had a suitable school?—I do not think there are many Roman Catholics in Enniskillen that have got time to send there.

16050. That is a misfortune that may be repaired in time. Is there not a Roman Catholic population in Enniskillen that, under ordinary circumstances, would be very likely to furnish a fair number of children, for whose education they could afford to pay £5 or £8 a year?—I do not think there are many Roman Catholics in Enniskillen at the present time, who are of such standing as to be likely to have children to send to Portora.

16061. Surely there are more than six or seven respectable Roman Catholic shopkeepers in the town?—Certainly there are, but they have not got families.

16062. There are, at present, about thirty day-boys attending the school. Are they not all Protestants or Protestants?—I think there are some Roman Catholic boys at the school now.

16063. As there are about fifteen free pupils among the day-boys at Portora, it comes to this, that there are only fourteen or fifteen Protestant boys in the town of Enniskillen paying £8 a year as day scholars at Portora school, at present. Does this strike you as being a very small number of Protestants and Protestants in the town of Enniskillen to be enjoying the benefit of this institution, considering the wealth and position of the Protestant inhabitants?—I do not really know the average of day-boys at Portora. When I was a boy there were from forty to forty-five there. But all these schools in Ireland seem to have decreased both in boarders and day-boys.

16064. There are fourteen or fifteen Protestant and Protestant boys paying for availing themselves of Portora school. Do you think that the Catholics of Enniskillen—if they had a good school suiting their views—would find fourteen boys to pay any £8 a year each?—I rather doubt it.

Dec. 22, 1877

Mr. John H. Conway, M.P.

REV. DAVID O'LEARY, M.A., examined.

Rev. David O'Leary, M.A.

16065. CHAIRMAN.—You reside at Enniskillen?—Yes. I am the curate of the parish.

16066. How long have you occupied that position?—Seven years.

16067. Do you wish to make any statement to the Commission?—I wish merely to correct some answers that were given by the Rev. Mr. Hackett to Enniskillen, when he stated that the Roman Catholics were a good deal more than half the population. I do not know whether that refers to the civil or the ecclesiastical parish. In the civil parish the Protestants are in the majority, but in the ecclesiastical parish there is a difference of about 700 in favour of the Catholics.

16068. Which is the larger parish?—The civil is larger than the ecclesiastical parish. The civil parish is the parish from which the census is taken. The old baronies of Enniskillen, and, I believe, all the old baronies, are of the same area as the civil parishes. In the civil parish, according to the last census, the Roman Catholic numbered 5,662, while the Protestants numbered 5,720, but in the borough of Enniskillen, which would approximate to the ecclesiastical parish, the Roman Catholic numbered 3,573, while the Protestants numbered 2,644.

16069. Dr. HART.—Does that include more than the town of Enniskillen?—Not very much more. Now with regard to the surrounding parishes, take that in which Portora is situated—Bessy. According to the census returns there were 686 Roman Catholics in that parish, and 1,242 Protestants. Then as the other side of the lake, in Trory parish, according to the same census, there were 243 Roman Catholics, and 998 Protestants. In Killasho parish too, which is in the diocese of Down, the majority are Protestants. In Downish, however, the majority are Roman Catholics. But in the two or three parishes immediately surrounding Enniskillen, the majority are Protestants.

16070. You think that the educational facilities are suitable for the requirements of the place?—I do.

16071. As regards commercial education, have you ever heard any complaints as to that not being provided for?—No, I never have.

16072. Of course, Portora is looked to principally as a school for preparing for Trinity College?—Yes; but I can also speak favourably of the Bessy

Smith's school in Enniskillen, at which there are 150 children attending, and it can bear comparison with any other school of its kind in the neighbourhood.

16073. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—That was formerly a Model school?—It was for a few years, until the present Rector of Enniskillen was appointed to the parish.

16074. That is a Primary school?—Yes, to all intents and purposes it is a Primary school.

16075. CHAIRMAN.—Do you know anything about Tulrid school?—I do, a good deal.

16076. Do you think it is a successful school?—I think it is on the whole successful. I know that there is always a difficulty experienced in getting children to these. A great many parents apply to me to get their children in there, and I cannot succeed.

16077. So far as you are acquainted with the neighbourhood—do you find that the children who have been educated there get on well?—I think, on the whole, they do. Some are apprentices in Enniskillen at present, and, on the whole, those who have been educated in that school are doing very well.

16078. They get a Primary education there equal to that received in the National schools?—I do not see why the education there should not equal that in the National schools.

16079. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—Does it equal it?—I think it does, taking the general run of the National schools. I do not compare it with the Model schools.

16080. Dr. HART.—You mentioned the parish of Downish—what distance is that from Portora?—It is close to Portora at one mile. Portora itself is situated in Bessy parish.

16081. Downish is the only parish you have mentioned, in which there is a majority of Roman Catholics, is that majority very large?—No. There are 2,619 Roman Catholics, and 2,044 Protestants.

16082. Then, on the whole, in the neighbourhood of Portora school the majority are Protestants?—Yes.

16083. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—The ecclesiastical parish that you speak of as the parish in which you at present minister under the Irish Church system?—Yes.

16084. That is the town of Enniskillen?—About the borough of Enniskillen.

MR. WILLIAM RUTHERFORD CONNRY, examined.

Mr. William R. Connry.

16085. CHAIRMAN.—You are a resident in Enniskillen?—Yes, I have been sixteen years at business in Enniskillen, and I employ between sixty and fifty people.

16086. You desire to make a statement?—Yes. At your inquiry, in Enniskillen, in Father Hackett's evidence this passage occurs:—

"12841. Do any of your flock go to the Model school?"

3 Y

Dec. 27, 1873.

Mr. William
H. Conway.

None, but occasionally a few waifs and strays, and the children of mixed marriages or of soldiers; but none of the children of granted Catholics go there, and the parents are not influenced by their clergy in keeping them away."

I know that the Catholic clergy do use their influence to prevent their people from sending their children to the Model school. Parents, whose children were attending the Christian Brothers' school have complained to me of their interference. They told me they would not be allowed to avail themselves of the superior advantages of the Model school, and yet there is religious instruction given to the children of Catholics attending there, by the head master, himself a Catholic. The Catholic clergy too use at liberty to give religious instruction in the Model school to the Catholic children. I believe denominational education fosters religious animosity, while a mixed system, such as we possess in the Model school, tends to promote goodwill between Protestants and Catholics. Catholics attended school with me. I never knew of their faith being tampered with, and the feelings of mutual regard thus established have never passed away, and I hope never shall. The Renskillen Town Commissioners, a mixed body, consisting of Catholics and Protestants, used their influence to obtain the Model school for the town. It is considered a great advantage to the locality, has been fully appreciated by the section of the inhabitants who are not influenced by the Catholic clergy against it, and any diminution of its efficiency or power would be a serious loss to the town and neighbourhood. In the evidence given by the Rev. Mr. Hackett before this Commission, in Renskillen, I find:—

"19036. CHURMAN.—Portora school does not afford any great benefit to Protestants either as a school for the occasional classes, for the great majority of the scholars there are the sons of persons in better circumstances coming from a distance?—They are." 19037. Mr. O'SEAGHAIN.—

—Then you do not consider Portora school of any great advantage to the locality?—From my stand point it is not. 19038. The bounties pay duty gelding a year. Is it a high class school, more for the sons of gentry of large property rather than for those seeking commercial education?—I was always under that impression about it."

I disagree with the opinion that Portora is not an advantage to the Protestants and people of Renskillen. I am an Renskillen shopkeeper, or (as we style ourselves) merchant. I send my sons to Portora to receive their higher education, having previously passed them through the Model school, where they obtained their primary education. The greater number of the better class in Renskillen were, and are, Protestants, and it is principally from this class that children go to Portora. I believe that, omitting Catholics preparing for the priesthood, during my time in Renskillen, nearly all the Catholics of Renskillen who received a higher education received it at Portora. Until the sitting of this Commission at Renskillen, I was not aware that the Catholics had any objection to Portora. Since then I have been in conversation with some of our oldest and most intelligent Catholic inhabitants, and they say they have none. As to the number of Catholics now attending Portora, I wish to draw attention to the fact that Catholic boys were removed from Portora immediately before the sitting of the Commission, and the number was thus diminished. Possibly you will draw your own inference from that.

16037. The number of Roman Catholic day-boys, as stated in the return furnished to us by Dr. Steele, some months ago, was four?—I believe some of those were removed to supply evidence as to the numbers in Portora. I think this fact very remarkable.

16038. What used to be the average number?—I do not know, but my impression was that those boys were removed simply to make a case against Portora. Having Portora, the Model school, and the various other schools, the educational wants of the town and neighbourhood are well supplied. The Catholics of Renskillen possess not only equal but more numerous advantages than the Protestants. They have Portora, where no religious instruction is given to day-boys. They have the Model school, where Catholics may receive religious instruction from the Catholic clergy and from lay teachers. These they can attend in common with Protestants. They have the Convict schools established and subsidised by the people, and the Christian Brothers' schools, also subsidised by the people, and these schools they have entirely to themselves. I therefore maintain that, at the present moment, the Roman Catholics of Renskillen have greater educational advantages than the Protestants. Add to this, increased denominational education to Catholics, or diminish the undenominational or mixed systems the Protestants have now within reach, and you punish the Protestant section of the inhabitants whose amenable to the arrangements made by Government for the education of the people, while you reward those who are in rebellion against a fair and liberal arrangement. Being a shopkeeper myself, I would not consider it good trade to meet Mr. Keany's evidence as to the wealth of my class. However, another gentleman will deal with statistics giving information on that point. I wish to make one remark as to Dr. Steele's evidence. While not prepared to go all the way with Dr. Steele, I can quite understand his being under the impression that Renskillen is almost exclusively a Protestant town. Within the distance from Portora gate to the town, about a quarter of a mile, are situated the greater number of our private homes, and there is but one Catholic occupying a house of any pretensions in all that distance. We have four banks, and the managers are all Protestants. We have six medical men in the town, five of whom are Protestants, and one is a Roman Catholic. Until Dr. Callen came, we were two or three years without a Roman Catholic doctor at all. We have six solicitors. Five of them are Protestants, and one is a Roman Catholic. Then taking the other quarter of the town, where private houses are situated—Alderside-terrace, Albert-rose, and Fair View,—there is not a single Roman Catholic resident. So I can quite understand that Dr. Steele's impression would be that the Protestants were in the majority in Renskillen.

16039. Mr. O'SEAGHAIN.—Are there not a good many Roman Catholic shopkeepers in Renskillen?—About half as many as there are Protestants.

16040. Many of them are prosperous men?—Yes, a number of them.

16041. If the Roman Catholic shopkeepers existed themselves of good Intermediate Education, I presume it is likely their sons would enter into the professions, and that you would have Roman Catholic professional men springing up there in moderate abundance?—My answer to that would be that the demand creates the supply. We have not a large number of Roman Catholic professional men, because the Roman Catholic element does not demand it. Therefore I do not think it would be likely to increase the number.

16042. Surely they must employ doctors and attorneys, just as much as other people?—I think not, because they are not able to pay them. The dispensary doctor attends the principal portion of the poorer Catholics.

16043. You approve of the Model school system, enabling the dergymen of each denomination to attend the children and teach them religion?—I do.

16044. I presume you are very glad as a Protestant, to see your dergymen avail himself of that, and go to the Model school to teach religion at proper hours?—Yes.

16045. At Portora there is no religious instruction given to the day boys?—No.

16046. Contrasting that with the Model school system, does it not appear to be a lamentable fact that religion ferms no part of the course at Portora?—I do not think so, boys go to Portora principally to receive a higher education. Suppose they enter at the age of twelve, by that time I consider they have received sufficient religious instruction to carry them on. They will then become interested in lectures and books, and sermons in churches; and, although it may be thought a singular expression of opinion, I consider it would be a waste of time to take an hour out of their time for secular education; because boys when they go to Portora require to use their entire powers to push themselves forward.

16037. Then you do not consider it necessary for boys of your creed, going in for Intermediate Education, over the age of twelve or thirteen, to devote any special time of the ordinary hours to religious education?—No.

16038. Are you aware that Roman Catholics, both lay and clerical, hold a distinctly contrary opinion, and think that religion ought to enter into Intermediate Education even of boys who have passed thirteen years of age?—I dare say you are right.

16039. You say that the Catholics have greater educational advantages in the town of Enniskillen than the Protestants?—I believe they have.

16040. And, as I understand, you make it out in this way, that they have Portora and the Model school, or as you call them, mixed schools to go to, and in addition their own denominational schools?—Yes.

16041. Are you aware that they support their own denominational schools, at great expense?—They do.

16042. Rightly or wrongly, they will not avail themselves, to any large extent, of the mixed schools, and they will pay for the denominational schools. How now do you point out the advantage?—In the first place, by public subscriptions, they subsidise schools, and the Protestants have nothing of that kind. In addition to that there is another point. There are a number of people, connected with the Roman Catholic religion, who believe it to be a work of great merit to devote their lives exclusively to works, such as education; the Christian Brothers, for instance. The Protestants have no class of men like that, devoting their lives to educating the people. That is another advantage. Then they have the Convent school subsidised indirectly also, because there are a number of ladies there who devote their lives exclusively to works of this kind. Therefore I hold that being subsidised by subscriptions, and with the devotion of the Nuns and Christian Brothers, the Roman Catholics of Enniskillen possess advantages far beyond the Protestants.

16043. And you reckon as I understand the mixed schools as being one feature in the advantage?—I do.

16044. Although they do not to any large extent avail themselves of them?—I do. My impression about education is, that the greater number of schools they have, and the more competition for boys brought up in those schools, the better the children will be educated. And as things stand in Enniskillen at present the children are looked after, and if one school does not catch them another will. At present there is no want of education in Enniskillen.

16045. Dr. HART.—You mentioned that some Roman Catholic boys were removed from Portora before this Commission sat there?—I know to my own knowledge of two having been removed.

16046. Do you suspect there were any more?—I do not think there were.

16047. Mr. O'BRIEN.—Have you any reason to believe—and if so what is the reason—that those boys were removed in order to make out a case, on the part of the Catholics, against Portora, or is it only a surmise?—It is a surmise on my part, since boys who were receiving an education there at 25 a year, were sent away where they could not receive such a superior education under a cost of £40 or £50.

16048. Do you think it is likely that, for the purpose of making a case before this Commission, such an extraordinary expenditure would be undertaken by any one man as Renskill?—I think when we had the statement of Mr. Morris, that if he were told by his clergy to send his children from his own school to the Christian Brothers' school, he would send them out of his own home, anything might be done; and the fathers of the boys in question are well off, and able to make sacrifices of £30 or £40, or even £100, for their church.

16049. Where did they send them to?—I do not know.

16050. When did they send them away?—Before this Commission sat in Enniskillen.

16051. But was it not after the Intermediate Education examinations?—I am not able to tell you that, but my impression is that it was only a short time before the Commission.

16052. That is after the results of the Intermediate Education examination was known. Are you aware that Portora was anything but successful at the Intermediate examinations, as contrasted with the Roman Catholic Seminary at Nisnagham, Armagh Royal School, and other places?—I am aware of that, and I cannot account for it.

16053. Was not that a fair reason for removing them?—No. Those boys were educated in the Christian Brothers' school. They went to Portora and were not expected to compete with boys of superior advantages. I may add that a number of boys at Portora, and one of them my own son, took a low place in the Intermediate examination. The reason was, as he suggested himself, that it would be conscience for him to work, because he already held exhibitions which would preclude him from taking prizes, and he did not, as a matter of fact, work for the Intermediate examination.

Mr. THOMAS RICHARD WHITLEY, examined.

Mr. Thomas R. Whitley.

16054. CHAIRMAN.—You sat the Commission of the Town Commissioners of Enniskillen?—Yes.

16055. As regards the relative position, in Enniskillen, of the religious denominations, have you anything further to add to what the last witness has stated, or do you wish to extract his evidence in any way?—My attention was called to the evidence given in Enniskillen, with reference to the relative proportions of the people of the two religions; and I examined the rating in Church Street and High Street, the two principal streets in the town, and where I believe three-fourths of the business has been done for the last fifty years, and I find that the entire rating of those streets is £2,693. Of that amount the valuation of the houses held by Protestants is £1,513, while the valuation of the houses held by Roman Catholics is £1,180. Further, I extended the area, and applying the rating not to all the houses between the two bridges, which would comprise the entire business part of the town, I find the valuation to be £3,681, of which the relative proportions would be £1,634 on the houses held by Protestants, and £2,047 on those held by Roman Catholics. I was educated myself at Portora and there were Catholics attending there in my time. They had equal advantages with the Protestants. We had a large number of boarders, which I thought a great advantage, as I considered the intercourse between the boarders and day boys an advantage to both.

16056. The day boys received fair pay and were equally well treated both during school hours and play hours?—There were no complaints at that time.

16057. Was the education given a good commercial education?—Certainly. The school was much larger then, than it has been lately. The establishment of the Model school has rather tended to diminish the attendance of boys at the commercial classes.

16058. There have not been any complaints made as to the interests of the commercial classes not being sufficiently considered, as compared with those who go in for the learned professions?—No.

16059. Dr. HART.—Were you yourself a day boy, or a boarder?—I was a day boy.

No. 12, 2079

Mr John
Vernon.

Mr. JOHN VERNON, examined.

16060. CHAIRMAN.—You are a resident in Enniskillen?—Yes. I was reared, and have continued to reside there.

16061. Is there any particular point, on which you wish to add anything to the evidence we have already heard?—I have only to say that my brother and myself were both educated at Portora, and there are two of my own sons there now. My experience of Portora is as has been represented by Mr. Cooney and Mr. Whitley.

16062. Are you engaged in business in Enniskillen?—I am.

16063. Do you think the education given in Portora fits young men for business?—As regards young men preparing for commercial life, I would prefer the Model school, but I prefer Portora for the higher class education.

16064. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—Do you know anything about the reputation of Tubrid school?—I do not.

16065. Dr. HANE.—You found no cause of complaint in the relations between the boarders and the day boys at Portora?—No. I was there for three years, and there was free enjoyment between the boarders and day boys; both in, and outside, the school. I have no sons attending the Model school, and two at Portora.

16066. LORD JUSTICE FITZGERALD.—Are the older boys the ones you sent to Portora?—Quite so. The two eldest have been attending Portora and the five younger the Model school.

16067. Had the older boys been at the Model school previously?—They had.

16068. You use the Model school as a preparatory school for Portora?—Quite so.

16069. Is it your intention to send the others to Portora?—It is. I purpose sending another to Portora, at the beginning of next year.

16070. Do you know whether any parents who send their children to Portora selected them from superior capacity?—I do not know of any. I know many who have been graduated in the Model school all they came to a certain age and standing, and have then been sent to Portora.

16071. That is, one is used a preparatory school to the other?—Quite so.

Mr. Thomas
Gordon.

Mr. THOMAS GORDON, examined.

16072. CHAIRMAN.—You are a resident in Enniskillen?—Yes.

16073. How long have you resided there?—Thirty-five years.

16074. Are you engaged in business there?—I am.

16075. Have you anything to add, or any correction to make, in respect of the evidence given already?—I cannot say that I have anything to add to the evidence given to-day, which I fully endorse. I may mention that I have been a very large contributor to both the schools which have been mentioned, having had nine children at the Model school, and three at Portora.

Mr. John
Lemon.

Mr. JOHN LEMON, examined.

16076. CHAIRMAN.—You are also a resident in Enniskillen?—I am.

16077. Have you anything to add to the evidence we have heard, as to the schools there?—No; I quite agree with the views already expressed, both as to Portora and the Model school.

Mr. William
Teale.

Mr. WILLIAM TEALE, examined.

16078. CHAIRMAN.—You are one of the Town Commissioners of Enniskillen?—I am.

16079. You have been living in that town for a good many years?—For the last ten years. I formerly served my time there, and having left it, and spent ten years in Dublin, I went back there.

16080. Have you anything to add to the statements already made?—Not much. Mr. Whitley and Mr. Cooney said almost all I had to say; the only thing I wish to add is this:—it was stated in evidence before you in Enniskillen that, if there was a higher class school for Catholics, there a considerable number would use it; now in the whole town there are only from six to eight Roman Catholic families that have boys to send to Portora, or that are in a position to receive a higher class education. There may be one or two more, but I think the number is about six or eight; the greatest number of the inhabitants that have boys are Protestants. As regards the fact that there are not so many pupils at Portora as there have been, the Model school has taken a great number of them; but a great number have passed through Portora, and a great number are now going through the Model school, with a view to going to Portora. I myself have one son at the Model school, whom I intend sending to Portora.

16081. I suppose the Model school is looked on as a preparatory school for Portora?—Yes. I look on the Model school as a very great advantage to the town, and I think anything done to the detriment of either school would be very serious, not only to me, but to the county at large.

16082. LORD JUSTICE FITZGERALD.—Where do the six or eight families of the higher class Roman Catholic inhabitants, to whom you have referred, send their children?—Some of them send them to Portora; others to other colleges through Ireland.

16083. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—How many of them have their children at Portora now?—I know two or three had, but I do not know the number now. There are, of course, other Roman Catholics in the town quite in a position to afford the expense of Portora, but they have no families.

Mr. Herbert
Inver.

Mr. HERBERT INVER, examined.

16084. CHAIRMAN.—You are also a resident in Enniskillen?—Yes.

16085. Are you engaged in business there?—No.

16086. You have lived in the town for a good while?—I am a member of one of the oldest families in the town, and have resided there all my life, save while I held a public appointment at Parnassoway, and even then I visited Enniskillen constantly. My family has been connected with the town for nearly 200 years.

16087. Have you anything to add to the evidence already given?—I desire to make a statement as regards the good feeling which existed between the Roman Catholic boys of Portora, and myself and other Protestant school fellows, in my time. I went at Portora Royal School for about three years, and I left it at or about the early age of twelve years; during that period there were several Roman Catholics at it. Pat. Hartman, who died recently, was one of them.

be intended entering the Roman Catholic priesthood, but his health gave way, which caused him to give up the idea. I do not think he ever received an answer from any boy in the school. I am sure if he had there were many boys willing to protect him. I for one would have done so, and so would many others. Another gentleman, Rev. James McMahon, who is now Roman Catholic Dean of Clogher, was also a school-fellow of mine. I have had the pleasure of meeting him several times during the last three or four years. He made several kind inquiries about many of his old Protestant school-fellows with whom he joined in their various arrangements. He was a first-rate head at ball-playing. He was a class-fellow of one of my brothers, the Rev. G. Irvine, who is now and has been for the last eighteen years, the Protestant Rector of the parish of Castleblaney, Co. Monaghan. In a letter I received from my brother some time ago he thus speaks of Mr. McMahon:—

"James McMahon is Roman Catholic Dean of Clogher, and resides in Carrickmacross, where he is parish priest, and is much esteemed, and considered a very learned man. He was in my class at Portora, and was one of the cleverest boys, not only in the class, but in the entire school."

Mr. Hugh Irvine

MR. WILLIAM COWLAND TRENKLE, examined.

Mr. William C. Trenkle.

10088. CHAIRMAN.—You reside in Enniskillen?—Yes. I have lived there since my birth.

10089. Have you anything to add to the evidence already given?—With regard to one or two points I would like to say a few words. At the Model school there are, as I am informed, Roman Catholics attending now, and one of the boys in there with the sanction of Archbishop McMeel. Therefore, the Roman Catholics there cannot be merely "waifs and strays," as stated in the evidence given in Enniskillen. There have always been, during my experience, Roman Catholic boys at Portora, and all the Roman Catholic boys in the town, assumed to be desirous of getting an education at Portora, were there. There was not one omitted. With regard to the bullying which existed about ten or twelve years ago, it was discontinued after my time; it has now entirely passed away. With regard to Roman Catholic boys at Portora, long ago the day boys used to go in to prayers, but ten or eleven years ago that was done away with, and there has been no religious instruction of any sort given to the day boys since.

REV. JOHN DOWDNEY, O.C., examined.

Rev. John Dowdney, O.C.

10090. CHAIRMAN.—Do you reside in Enniskillen?—I am at present living in the Catholic seminary at Enniskillen.

10091. You were educated at Portora?—I was a day scholar, at Portora, for a short time.

10092. How long were you there?—About thirteen months altogether.

10093. To what school did you go, after you left Portora?—I went to the Catholic University, in Dublin.

10094. Did you improve much the education you received at Portora?—Well, the circumstances under which I went to Portora were rather peculiar. I was in need of classical education, and there was no classical day school in Enniskillen, or anywhere near, that I could attend, and my father was not in a position to send me to any boarding school; so I went to Portora because I could not help it. I left it in 1853, and remained in the Catholic University about four or five years.

10095. There was no interference with your religious faith while you were at Portora?—No direct interference.

10096. Your education there was partly secular?—Yes. There was nothing technically called religious education there.

10097. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—You are now connected with the Monaghan Seminary?—Yes.

10098. Has that got any endorsement?—I do not know that it has. I believe it has not.

10099. It has a fine building?—Yes; there is a fine building.

10100. How many students are there?—There are forty-one interns, at present, and ten day scholars.

10101. Are all these boys going to enter the priesthood?—They are not.

10102. The Seminary is both for lay and ecclesiastical purposes?—Yes.

10103. Does it afford accommodation for more than forty-one boarders?—There is accommodation for perhaps eighty boarders.

10104. What is the ordinary pension for the boarders?—£25 a year.

10105. What is the ordinary charge to the day scholars?—£5 a year.

10106. Do you wish to make any further statement about Portora school?—Hearing that the Commission was likely to sit, and that my name was to be mentioned, as a Catholic day scholar at Portora, satisfied with the teaching and tone of the place, I came up, chiefly to hear what might be said, and to make any remarks I thought necessary; and I must now say that the tone of the place was not at all as was represented here to-day.

10107. Do you mean by that,—the tone of the master, or of the scholars?—I would be very far from saying that Dr. Steele, or any of the masters, was to blame, in any sense of the word. I always received from Dr. Steele the greatest kindness, and was not only treated so by him, but by the other professors. There were no subjects in the school programme that might be called of a controversial nature, except English history, but the way that was taught, in the class books we were compelled to use, was such that they could not be safely read by any Catholic, nor was it put before us in such a way that a Catholic boy could safely read.

10108. What book was it that you objected to?—Hume's History of England, and also Collier's History of England.

10109. Were these made the text books of education?—They were.

10110. Was there anything else, besides the use of those books, that you objected to?—Nothing, except that, in the necessary intercourse among the students themselves, I was frequently made to feel remarks against my own faith and religious position.

10111. Is that merely an impression on your mind, or is your statement founded on words used to you?—It is founded on words and facts that occurred, and it caused me to come to a conclusion, which I can never change, that I could never recommend a Catholic to go there for education.

10112. Was it that the boys argued on religious matters?—They were insulting, and ridiculed positions that Catholics held necessary. The youngest Catholics would treat the Catholics very much, and I felt very uncomfortable, for the time that I was there, on that account.

10113. Was that a matter of frequent occurrence, or was it an isolated case?—I would be more disposed to call it frequent.

10114. CHAIRMAN.—Was that during play hours?—Yes, of course.

10115. LORD JUSTICE FRYGEMAN.—You said that

Dec. 15, 1898.
Rev. John
Delany, &c.

the Roman Catholic Seminary at Monaghan is a fine building?—It is.

16116. Of course I ask you to say but very approximately, what the cost of that building was?—I could not really say.

16117. Would it run up to £30,000, or £30,000?—I suspect it would.

16118. How much land is there held with the building?—I believe about thirty acres.

16119. Do you know how the property is held?—There is a rent paid every year.

16120. But I presume that does not represent any part of the valuation of the building?—I think it does not.

16121. Do you know how the money, for the erection of the building, was raised?—I do not.

16122. Is the institution in any way charged for it now, or was it subscribed, or collected, or bequeathed?—I think it was collected, but I know that portion of the building has, within the last three or four years, undergone a total renovation at a cost of £3,000, or £4,000.

16123. Was that money collected?—No. It was borrowed, and has to be paid back.

16124. What funds are available for that purpose?—I cannot tell. I do not know that there are any in actual existence.

16125. You look to collecting the money?—I do not. I am not responsible in that light at all.

16126. Who is the responsible authority—whose property is the place?—The bishop is the responsible authority, although he does not live there.

16127. Is he the legal owner and also the superintendent of the school?—I do not know who the owner is. The bishop is the superintendent of the school.

16128. Does the £25 a year, which you have stated is the sum charged, clear the cost of the boarders?—I think it is just enough not to leave the institution in debt.

16129. But it certainly leaves the institution no profit?—I think not. I am afraid it does not.

16130. The £25 a year, as I understand, would about clear the cost of keeping each boy in the school?—Yes, but remember the thirty acres of land are situated.

16131. So that, in being kept there for £25 a year each, the boys get the advantage both of the buildings and the land, otherwise you could not keep them for that money?—I would say so.

16132. There are only fifty pupils there, while you have accommodation for eighty. How do you account for only half the advantage of education in the place at a low price, and with fine buildings being availed of?—I could not say.

16133. Do you know of any suitable scholars for such a place, who are not going to Monaghan—do there any objection to their going to Monaghan that you know of?—I do not know of any.

16134. Can you suggest any other reason for being only half full, except there not being a supply of boys in the country available for the place?—I could not attempt to give any reason why they do not come. I do not know of any other.

16135. What staff is there?—A president, three priests, and a lay professor.

16136. By whom are they appointed?—By the bishop of the diocese.

16137. How long has the Seminary been established there?—I think about thirty years.

16138. How long is it since the great bulk of the building was erected?—The greater portion was erected since that time. The portion to which I have already referred was erected in the last three or four years.

16139. There have been improvements, what?—General improvements. A range of out houses have been built and works of that kind.

16140. Have the whole thirty acres been in possession for the thirty years?—I think I heard that portion of the land was obtained within the last ten years perhaps.

16141. So there has been both an increase in the land, and an improvement in the buildings, during that time?—There has.

16142. Are you under any control at all, as to education and management, except on the part of the bishop, or have you anything in the way of inspectors regulating your curriculum and matters of that kind?—The professor and president do that.

16143. Are they assisted, except so far as the bishop controls them?—Yes, I would say so.

16144. And none else except the five—the bishop, the president, and the three professors—regulate the management?—I never know of any other.

16145. Who has the management of the expenditure on the daily necessities of the boys, and the supplying of food?—The president does all that.

16146. Were you on the foundation, at Portora, as a free scholar?—I was.

16147. During the whole time you were there?—Yes.

16148. You went to Portora because you could not get the education you wanted anywhere else, at the time, in Enniskillen?—Yes. There was no other school I could go to. As long as I could, I was taught by a priest in Enniskillen. I learned a considerable deal of Latin. I did not go to Portora till after he left.

16149. You went to the Catholic University from Portora?—I did.

16150. In classical education, did you find what you had learned was suitable for the Catholic University?—It was. I never could have any objection to the classical or mathematical education at Portora.

16151. It was suitable to what you wanted?—Yes; I was all the time I was in Dublin at a boarding school, in connection with the Catholic University, and I was under instruction in that institution for nearly all the time I was in it.

16152. You told us that you objected, and perhaps not reasonably, to the English history class books that were used at Portora. What class books in the teaching of English history would you not object to?—In teaching English history myself, I use Liguier's English history, and compendiums of it and of Home.

16153. That is in the full edition of Home you object to?—I do not use his history in representing the correct view of the question; but I think it is better to let them have both sides.

16154. Are you aware that Protestants object to Liguier as being inaccurate, and giving a colour that they do not like?—I do not know that Protestants object to Liguier; but he was not an infidel, at any rate.

16155. Can you suggest any means of teaching history that our demonstration or other would not object to?—I know it is unpleasant for a Catholic to be taught out of those books and impressed with the ideas in them.

16156. On the other hand, do you not think it would be unpleasant to a Protestant to be taught out of other books, and have their ideas pressed on him?—I do not know any Protestant in that position, I cannot say what they might imagine.

16157. Do you happen to know any Protestants that studied English history exclusively from Liguier?—I do not suppose I do.

16158. What was it you objected to in Collier, your objection to Home was his own want of belief?—I do not object principally on that ground, although that is a very fundamental objection, but I object to the way he has treated the facts with regard to the Catholic Church, the influence of the Pope in England, and many other questions. Those matters are decidedly fundamental ones, and it is most important that they should be properly treated.

16159. Mr. O'SHEAHEENY.—Suppose a Protestant was taught in a school out of Liguier's, as you were taught in a school out of Home, do not you know he would object?—He would certainly, if taught as I was; but I cannot agree as to Liguier's being objectionable in itself.

16160. LORD JERVIS: Sir GEORGE.—Can you suggest any possible way of teaching Protestant boys and Catholic boys English history together, by the same

Dec. 27, 1878.
 Mr John
 Deherly, &c.

master, in which the teaching would not be objected to by one or the other?—There might be some way.

16161. You have been engaged practically in teaching, would you think it possible yourself to teach English history, to your own satisfaction, without giving it a religious colour from your own point of view?—There are certainly some portions of it that I could not.

16162. You said the masters at Portora were not in any way to blame for what you complained of with regard to the boys. Do you think it possible to have a number of boys, of whose great majority are of one way of thinking, associating together in school, that there would not be something disagreeable to the minority?—I believe that most Protestants will imagine their sons would experience the same difficulty in connection with Catholics, that I felt in connection with Protestants. Of course I state that it would not arise in Catholic schools, but that is another point.

16163. Mr O'SHAUGHNESSY.—You would not allow it, if you could prevent it?—I would not allow it.

16164. Lord Justice FRASER.—I understand you, that, where the majority were Roman Catholics, it might be difficult to avoid what you objected to in Enniskillen, as having annoyed yourself. We have had a great number of gentlemen from Enniskillen before us, who had sons, Protestants, taking advantage of the teaching there. You yourself experienced some annoyance there. What mode of arranging the education, in Enniskillen, would you suggest, that would have got the difficulty that you felt, without depriving the Protestant boys of the advantages of the education that they had?—I lived in Enniskillen some ten years ago or more, and I have been very little there since. I therefore think that other people from Enniskillen might possibly give a better answer to that question than I can.

16165. The question does not depend on any matter at issue. You had yourself a great number of school-fellows who were Protestants, and of the conduct of some of whom you are complaining. A great number of those were Enniskillen boys?—They were, a great many of them.

16166. Do you think it would be possible, by any arrangement, to get teaching satisfactory to yourself, without interfering with the teaching they were getting, unless there was a second school?—I do not think it would be possible.

16167. Mr O'SHAUGHNESSY.—Your boys at Monaghan, I believe, competed in the Intermediate Education examination?—They did.

16168. Say generally with what amount of success?—We sent thirteen, being all, except one, that we could possibly send, considering the limits. There was another who could best tell himself the reason he did not go in, it was not our fault. Of the thirteen who went in, three were over the limit of age to get prizes. The whole of our pupils passed, five of them getting exhibitions, and eleven prizes.

16169. Lord Justice FRASER.—Sixteen, out of nineteen, passed with honours?—Yes.

16170. What subjects do you send them up in?—Latin, Greek, English, Mathematics, French, and Physical Science.

16171. How many of the nineteen did you send up in Greek?—All except two or three.

16172. How many in French?—I think about eight.

16173. And in physical science?—Perhaps about ten.

16174. So that you had a large proportion of the boys, both in French and physical science, and practically all of them in classical?—All in Latin, and all but two or three in Greek.

16175. How long have you been in Monaghan yourself?—I was for a year a student there, after I left the Catholic University; and ever since I left Maynooth College I have been there.

16176. You know the town of Monaghan for the last five or six years?—I do.

16177. During that time Mr. Hume's school was at its best?—I never knew much about that school.

16178. During the time you have known Monaghan Secondary, have there been any Protestant boys attending it?—No, none.

16179. Were any Catholic boys, so far as you know, attending Mr. Hume's school?—I never heard that there were.

16180. Is there any objection to Protestant boys entering at your college?—I never heard a case of the kind.

16181. You never heard an offer to come?—Never.

16182. Dr. HART.—You say there was accommodation for eighty boys. How long has that been the case?—Since I know the place.

16183. What has been the average number of boarders during that time?—About the same number as at present—forty.

16184. The Secondary has never been more than half full?—There were forty-four, or forty-five at one time; but on the average the place has not been more than half full. As I have been asked a good many questions in reference to the Secondary at Monaghan, I wish it to be understood that I am nothing more than a professor there, and am not in any way connected with the external government of the place.

16185. CHAIRMAN.—Who can give us further information about the Dissecting seminary?—Either the Bishop, or the President.

16186. Mr O'SHAUGHNESSY.—We quite understand that you wish to disclaim any responsibility?—Yes; but I know there is no endorsement.

Mr JOHN S. GUSNESS, M.A., recalled.

Mr John S.
 Gusness, M.A.

16187. CHAIRMAN.—You wish to make a further statement?—Yes; as to what Mr. Deherly said about Roman Catholics being invited by some of the boys at Portora, I was at the school myself with several Roman Catholics, when I knew at the present time, and from my own experience I am perfectly satisfied that if Mr. Deherly was invited there are many Roman Catholic boys who would come forward and state they were never invited in any way in Portora.

16188. Mr O'SHAUGHNESSY.—That would not disprove what Mr. Deherly said?—I do not assert that Mr. Deherly is stating what is not the fact; but I know there are other Roman Catholic boys who would state the contrary.

16189. Lord Justice FRASER.—I suppose there are always boys popular and unpopular, sensitive and unsensitive, at every school?—Exactly.

Mr. ANTHONY CARRUT, examined.

Mr Anthony Carrut.

16190. CHAIRMAN.—You reside in Enniskillen?—Yes, I have lived there for twenty-seven years.

16191. Have you anything to add, or any correction to make, as to the evidence we have just heard?—I have nothing to say against Portora. From what I have learned of Dr. Steele he is a highly respectable man, and manages the school well, and the same remark applies to all his assistants. The great complaint I make is, that Portora is an establishment to which I, as a Catholic, could not send my son. My eldest son was born in Enniskillen, but, of course, I, as a Catholic, would not send him to Portora. I sent him to be educated at St. Stanislaus' College, Tallaght, at an expense of close on £500. Without saying anything against Porters, I maintain that Catholics in Enniskillen labour under a considerable disadvantage in not having an establishment similar or equal to Porters, to which they could send their children with safety to their own conscientious convictions. I know of my own knowledge, based on practical experience of over a quarter of a century, that there are many Catholics in Enniskillen, and in the county of Fermanagh, that feel just as I do. There is only one part of the evidence given here with reference to Porters which I want to contradict. It is utterly untrue that any Catholic in Enniskillen complains that he cannot send his children to Porters in consequence of being opposed by the clergy. As a rule—of course there are exceptions to every rule—but, generally speaking, Catholics will not send their sons to Porters, or to the Model School, no matter what inducements are held out.

Dec. 15, 1875.

 Comely.

16193. LORD JAMES FLEMING.—That is, the lady agrees with the clergy, that it is not a place to which they could conscientiously send their sons?—Presumably so. That is the only thing I have to say in reference to the matter. I have five other sons growing up now, and I will have to incur large expense in sending them away, if there is not something done.

16193. Mr. O'SHEA.—If there was a day school in Enniskillen of which you approved, how many of them would be at it?—Two.

16194. Do you think that the number of Catholic families in Enniskillen who want such a good intermediate school is limited to six or eight?—No; there is far more than a dozen. I believe that about one-third of the inhabitants of the town of Enniskillen would send themselves to it. There is at least one Catholic for every two Protestants. The Protestants are certainly in the majority in wealth, means, and social position.

16195. Your evidence is, that for every two Protestants, whose children would require intermediate education, there is one Roman Catholic?—Yes, about that proportion, but in the entire population the Catholics are in a majority.

16196. LORD JAMES FLEMING.—That is, if you descend into the ranks of those who do not want education of this kind, counting by heads, the Roman Catholics would be the majority?—Yes.

16197. You have sent your son to St. Stanislaus' College, one of the most successful schools in Ireland. What is the charge for him there?—I think about sixty guineas a year, and for the last two years it was close on £100. He passed his matriculation examination, direct from St. Stanislaus', at the London University.

16198. Mr. O'SHEA.—Did he go over to London?—No. The examinations came over from London, and he passed in the first class—in honours, as it is called. He was, for a short time, in Trinity College, Dublin, and took some examinations.

16199. LORD JAMES FLEMING.—So that, for the expense you went to, you got him as high an education as could be got in Ireland?—I aimed at giving him the best education in the land. He is now reading for a profession.

16200. You told us that you, as a Catholic, could not conscientiously send your son to Porters, and that about one-third of the inhabitants of the town were in the same position. What is your objection to my objection is, that I, as a Catholic, would send my son to no college that was not, at least, under the supervision of the clergy of my own Church, both as to religious and secular instruction.

16201. Without bringing the clergy into the question, if any of the inhabitants of Enniskillen happened to be under the impression that they could not conscientiously send their children to any school that was not at least under Protestant supervision, would there be any possibility of making Porters do for both denominations, or should there be a second school?—I think, as Porters stands, there would be no such thing as practically making any compromise. I think it would be necessary to have a second school, and until that second school exists there will be a great disadvantage felt by people of either as I am, and if it never exists the disadvantage will be permanent.

16202. Do you think it will be possible to satisfy the conscientious objection, which you yourself entertain, by anything short of having a separate denominational school?—I say that it is utterly impossible. The Catholics will not send their children to Protestant Colleges such as Porters, or the Model School for the lower grades, except compelled by dire necessity.

16203. Let me put this question—it is a very hypothetical one—if Porters was under the sort of management you desire—under Roman Catholic management—and that the Protestants gave up their objection, and all sent their boys there, do you think it would be an advantage to your son to be in the school, where two-thirds of their school-fellows were Protestants?—Well, I would rather leave my son in a college where his own religion would be attended to by the clergy of his own church, and taught separately.

16204. That is not exactly the question, but supposing Porters to be under Roman Catholic management, such as would suit you in every respect, would you consider it an advantage to your son if two-thirds of their school-fellows were Protestants?—That would depend on circumstances. It would depend upon the clergy, in whose people of my class have confidence, having practical supervision.

16205. That is unless all the boys were practically taught?—Certainly not. I would not attempt to dictate to Protestant boys what they should be taught.

16206. Do you think it would be possible, by any sort of arrangement on the part of the supervising body, to prevent the boys who are in the majority in the way of denomination from making the place less satisfactory to the minority than it would otherwise be?—No. I believe every teacher at Porters exercises one and reasonable diligence to do that, but it is impracticable.

16207. You think a working majority among the boys would be as hard to manage as a majority anywhere else?—There are no Catholics going to Porters at present, and, practically speaking, none have done so for twenty-seven years, in my time.

16208. Is your evidence this—that those only went there who could not get the education they wanted anywhere else, that they ran a certain amount of risk, and to a certain extent put a strain on their consciences to get the education they wanted?—I do not want to judge any person's conscience, but what I say is this, that, practically speaking, no Catholics went to Porters.

Rev. Felix
 Hackett, &c.

Rev. FELIX HACKETT, &c., recalled.

16209. CHAIRMAN.—You wish to make a further statement?—Yes; Mr. Macdaniel has implied that those who, with myself, gave evidence in Enniskillen were there as a hostile band. I desire to state that we have no hostility to Porters, or the Model School, and I do not think we showed any hostility. We know the Commissioners were inquiring into Endowed Schools, and we wished to put before them the feelings of the Catholics of Enniskillen.

16210. Mr. O'SHEA.—You did not want to have Porters shut up?—We do not care what they do with it. All we wanted to state to the Commissioners was, that we felt aggrieved, that the Protestant people have a largely endowed establishment for the purpose of intermediate education, and that we have none.

16211. CHAIRMAN.—In fact you do not consider that what now constitutes, to a certain extent, an endowment for all denominations—namely, the fund

Dec 17, 1878.
Rev. Felix
Hackett, c.c.

at the disposal of the Intermediate Education Commission, meets the difficulty. You think that there ought to be some endowment for your institution as well?—We would simply to show that, I wish the Commission to understand that we do not make any charge against Portora, or the Model School, or any complaint against the management of these institutions as such. We are simply stating what the Catholic view is. Mr. Mackintosh, I think, stated in his evidence that the Model School is the only primary school of any efficiency in the district.

16212. Mr. O'Sullivan.—What is your opinion as to the efficiency of the Model School?—I ground my opinion on the results examinations. The amount paid per head for each child in the school is supposed to be a test of the efficiency of the school. In the Report of the Commissioners of National Education, for 1874, it appears that in the district of Enniskillen there were schools, not far miles from the town, in which the results fee amounted per head to more than they did in the Enniskillen Model School. At Rosdoney School the results fee per head amounted to 10s 7d; and in the same year at the Model School the results fee was 5s 4d per head.

16213. Has that tendency of the Model school to be below the others continued up to the present time?—I got last year's report, but the result is not given in it.

16214. Lord Justice FitzGibbon.—Do you know whether the scale of results fee is the same in Rosdoney as in the Model school?—It is the same.

16215. I thought that in the Model school they required the teacher to attain a higher standard to get results fee?—No; the results fee is the same. There is one school—Gavery—of which the parish priest is the manager, and 180 were presented for examination, the average attendance on the year being 74. The yearly average attendance in the Model school, according to the Inspector's Report, was only 192, that is calculating the male, female, and infant. The teaching staff in the Model school is 23 for 195, while the teaching staff in the school to which I have referred, and which is just three miles from the town, is only three. I know of my own knowledge, but I would not put this forward against the Model school—that children have come from the very gate of the Model school to this school.

16216. That is a Catholic school?—It is, but there are Protestant children going from beside the Model school to this school in the country.

16217. Is the rate of results in that school high?—The results in that school last year amounted to 11s. and a few pence all round.

16218. Mr. Mackintosh wishes to know if the master of that school was licensed in the Model school?—He was not.

16219. Have you any further information to give as to the number of Catholic children attending the Model school?—In 1874 the Catholics in the Model school were very few; at present the head master's children have permission to go there, at least they are not prevented from going there. It is believed.

16220. Were the children of an Inspector of the system prevented from going there?—I suppose not. He would come under the same list as the head teacher of the school.

16221. Mr. O'Sullivan.—Have you found it necessary to exercise your authority as a priest to prevent any Catholics from going there?—Never.

16222. People seemed to chime in with the objection to it?—Yes.

16223. Lord Justice FitzGibbon.—Have you communicated with parents who were sending their children there?—I never knew a parent who sent his child there, except some parent who was a very old Catholic.

16224. Have you spoken to parents, whose children were already at the school, as to the propriety of not keeping them there?—I have.

16225. So that they had sent the children, and you objected?—I should explain. I find very often that parents when their children are corrected at one school—there are the Christian Brothers, two National schools, and the Convent school—send them to another and after a little they go back again.

16226. Mr. O'Sullivan.—Is that done with the authority of the parents?—Yes, by the parents themselves. They think it is a punishment inflicted on the teachers of the school to leave it, and go to another.

16227. You did not in your evidence at Enniskillen, as far as I understand, state the destruction of Portora, or as its ceasing to be an Intermediate school?—All we say is this, that it is against the first principles of Catholic teaching for Catholic boys to go to Portora. There never have been Catholic boys there as boarders. There have been a few day boys, and it has been stated there are some there now; but there have been none since the end of the last academic year. What we say is, that the school is useless for as Catholics in Enniskillen; that it affords facilities for Protestants to get Intermediate education, and that we should have like facilities for the Catholic children.

16228. It has been stated that some Catholic boys left Portora before the sitting of this Commission in Enniskillen. You are a clergyman of the parish?—I am.

16229. Was there any attempt to remove children, in order to make a case before the Commission against the school?—Quite the contrary. I have reason to believe that the person having charge of our little Intermediate school was anxious for his own sake that the boy should not be taken from the school, in order to show that the boy taught at Portora did not get a better education than he was getting to his boys. I know the children to whom Mr. Cooney alluded, when he spoke of boys being taken away for that purpose. I know that no priest interfered in a spoke to the father of those children to take them away. He let them stay there till the end of the academic year, and he then sent them to Rockwell College, county Tipperary.

16230. Lord Justice FitzGibbon.—State the figures from which you made out the 11s. as the average results fee for Gavery school?—I should explain that that is on the supposition that the school is contradictory. A contradictory school gets one-third more.

16231. I want to call your attention to the figures as they appear from the report of 1877. You were comparing the results fee to show the efficiency of the teaching. Then, of course, you must take them on the same scale. In the report of 1877, with 28 boys at Gavery, the whole amount of results fee was £37 1s. 3d, whereas with 35 in the Model school they received £108 10s. 6d, showing that the results fee given for the teaching in the Model school were very nearly three times as great as at Gavery. I asked you whether you were calculating on the scale of results fee being the same, and you told me you were?—If I did I withdraw it.

16232. When the report of 1874 give us the number of children on the roll of Gavery?—I did not compare the Model school with Gavery at all in 1874; I compared it with Rosdoney.

16233. What was in 1874 the number on the roll at Rosdoney school?—One hundred and twelve, but the average daily attendance was only 42.

16234. That average daily attendance is not in the column on which the results fee are calculated. How many were in attendance at Rosdoney?—39.

16235. How much was paid there on results fee?—£66 1s. 2d.

16236. Are you not adding salaries and results fee?—The results fee was only £3 16s. 3d. in 1877. How much were they in 1874?—£20 14s. 6d.

16237. Therefore they got in 1874 £20 14s. 6d. on thirty-one boys. The Model school in that year had twenty-eight boys?—That is the male portion of it.

16238. Would you include the infants?—In every National school there are infants and all mixed.

See 16, 4125.
Re: John
Hagley, &c.

16235. Counting as you suggest, the numbers would be in the Model school 197 altogether. Their results for 1874 are—£293 18s. 6d.—Boswell has gone down since then, but Garvey has increased.

16240. Boswell, in 1877, had only thirty boys, and they only got £28 16s. 3d.—Yes. There has been a change of teachers since 1874.

16241. The Model school in that year had 288 children on the roll.—Here is the report of the District Inspector—

"There has been in consequence a slight decrease in our attendance for the last few years. The average in 1877 was 258.6, while for the year ending 30th September, 1878, it was only 187.4.

16242. The results for 1877, as given at Enniskillen Model School, in 1877, £150 8s. 3d., viz., £108 10s. 6d., for the male school, £29 9s. for the female, and £12 3s. 9d. for the infants, come to very nearly an average of £1 per head. Now take Garvey, in which there was an average daily attendance of seventy pupils, and there the results for 1877 were £37 1s. 9d. The Model School results for 1877 are more than four times the results for Garvey.—I had not seen the report for 1877 before I had only that for 1874.

16243. You stated that you did not want to destroy Portora, but that the Catholics of Enniskillen objected to it as being against the first principles of Roman Catholic teaching. What is the first principle of Roman Catholic teaching?—That Catholic faith be not exposed to danger.

16244. Is it a necessary corollary to that principle that the head teacher of the school should himself belong to that faith?—Well, it would be. Of course the head teacher might be a man who would not interfere with the teaching of the boys at all. He might be a manager.

16245. I am speaking of the actual instructor. Is it a corollary, from your principle, that he must belong to the denomination?—Yes.

16246. That being so, did I understand you to say it was a positive rule that the children of a head teacher, being Roman Catholic, may attend the Model school where the parent is teacher?—Yes. There is toleration given by the bishop, for the children of the head teacher of the Model school to attend the Model school, under the supervision of the teacher himself. The teacher is supposed to be able to take care of them in the matter of faith.

16247. Where the head teacher is a Roman Catholic, and has his own children attending the school, under that permission, does it extend to other Roman Catholics, or is it limited to the children of the head teacher himself?—To the children of the head teacher himself.

16248. Why?—I do not know what reason the bishop had for that.

16249. Mr. O'SHEA.—Do you regard it as a relaxation of the general rule?—There is that toleration. I do not know whether there is a written rule.

16250. Lord Justice FITZGERALD.—I am speaking of rules of practice.—They are tolerated to go there, and nothing further is done. Of course the bishops did not contemplate the case at all. There is no legislation on the matter.

16251. What is there, in the system of the Model

School, that is objected to for the children other than those of the head teacher, where the head teacher is a Roman Catholic?—The Irish bishops have found something in it. I am not prepared to go into that at all.

16252. But still, as you put it, this only an exception to a general rule that the head teacher's own children are thought to be sufficiently safe under his charge?—They are.

16253. Assuming that Protestants also have a preference for having a teacher of their own faith for their children, is there any possibility of arranging Portora so as not to be opposed to the privileges or prejudices of one side or the other?—We want the same facilities as the Protestants. This could not be under a mixed system at all.

16254. Mr. O'SHEA.—About the objection held by the Catholics to the Model schools, you are aware that in the ordinary National schools the bishops allow the children to go, but in those schools the management is generally that of a Catholic clergyman or layman, and there is a voice in the appointment of the teacher, which is not the case in the Model schools?—No. Of course the Model schools are a Board institution, quite under the management of the Board, and the teachers are appointed by them. The Model schools are not managed according to the ordinary rules of the National Board. They give them as many teachers as they like. There is no limit. They have a staff of twenty-five teachers at Enniskillen Model School.

16255. Lord Justice FITZGERALD.—I understand that the principle which you hold, and which you are quite entitled to hold, is this—that a school directly under the control and management of a mixed board, or directly under the teaching of a mixed set of masters, is contrary to what you want?—Yes. The Model school is no good to us.

16256. Because it is under a mixed Board?—Because we cannot touch it, and it is kept there at very great expense, but of course we do not object to that, if we get equal educational facilities.

16257. Is the present master at Enniskillen Model School a Roman Catholic?—He is.

16258. How long has that been so?—The present master has been there since the school was founded.

16259. CHAIRMAN.—There is nothing to prevent the Catholic clergy, like the clergy of other denominations, giving them at a fixed hour to give religious instruction to the pupils of their own faith?—Of course there is not. We have the physical power of doing that, but we will not do it.

16260. Mr. O'SHEA.—The bishops will not allow you?—They will not.

16261. CHAIRMAN.—We have been informed that the Presbyterian Clergyman teaches there once a week. If you were to do something like that, for your own people, might not something be done?—The bishops of Ireland say "No."

16262. Lord Justice FITZGERALD.—And you agree with them?—I do.

16263. Have you a conscientious objection to endeavouring to give religious instruction in a National Model school, under those restrictions? I understood you to say the bishops objected?—The bishops would not allow us to do so. That is all.

Mr. James
Kenny

Mr. JAMES KENNY, recalled.

16264. CHAIRMAN.—Have you anything further to add to the evidence you gave in Enniskillen?—I have to supplement that evidence a little, and to say something in reference to part of the evidence that was given here to-day. The first matter that I will touch on is in reference to the evidence of Mr. Conroy, about the position of Catholics in Enniskillen, as far as education is concerned. He is right in saying we have the Convent and Christian Brothers' Schools. There are two gentlemen to attend the Christian Brothers' School, but they have no endowment of any kind. The average attendance there is 205 boys. In my opinion two teachers is not a sufficient staff for 205 boys; however, we are satisfied even with that, rather than send our children to the Model school. I wish to mention that in the Convent school the average attendance is 223, not 158, and there is no endowment except what is received from the National Board. The Model school is practically useless to the Catholics of Enniskillen. They will not avail themselves of it as a rule. The same observation applies to Portora. As to the matter of the streets, certainly the two streets selected were originally taken, but I am sure not intentionally. It is a well-known fact that Enniskillen belongs, for the most part, to the East of Enniskillen, who is Lord of the soil. It is also well known that Lord Enniskillen will not give a house to a Roman Catholic. In the district referred to, between the two bridges, comprising the most respectable part of Enniskillen, there is not a Roman Catholic occupying a house of Lord Enniskillen's: so that it would not be a fair comparison to take the rating merely between the two bridges. There are on the rate books paying rates and taxes in the borough of Enniskillen 392 Roman Catholics.

16263. What is the total valuation of those 392 Roman Catholic ratepayers?—I do not know.

16264. Without that particular it is not an answer to what has been stated in evidence—no such valuation on one side and so much on the other?—I did not intend that it should be, but I have given my explanation why so few Catholics are rated between the two bridges.

16265. DE HAIR.—There are 302 Roman Catholic ratepayers—How many Protestants are there?—I could not tell.

16266. LORD JUSTICE FRYGUES.—There can be no doubt that of those who want intermediate instruction a large majority are Protestants?—I would not say a large majority, and I will give you my reasons for that.

16267. What is your estimate?—As well as I remember, I stated in my evidence, given at Enniskillen, that one-third of the larger shopkeepers were Roman Catholics. I have nothing to add to that, except that, based upon that assertion, I said that in proportion to their numbers the Roman Catholics were as well off as the Protestants. I abide by that, and make no correction whatever of it. However, I have gone into the matter more minutely since, and calculating all the shopkeepers, large and small, I understated the number of Catholics, as I find the proportion, counting all the shopkeepers, would be about six Roman Catholics to seven Protestants.

16270. MR. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—Considering only the Roman Catholic and Protestant classes that would be likely to want intermediate education, do you think that your former statement that one-third would be Roman Catholics is accurate?—I believe fully.

16271. LORD JUSTICE FRYGUES.—That is what I meant to ask you, without going into each rating or each street in the town. I regard it a large majority to have two Protestants for one Roman Catholic?—I scarcely think that is the case.

16272. What is your own statement?—That had reference to the number of the larger shopkeepers. There are smaller shopkeepers, some of whom have their sons at intermediate schools at present, and those I did not include in my calculations. I do not agree with the assertion that there would be two to one of Protestants as compared with Roman Catholics. I will give you my reason. We have heard that there are at Portora, from Enniskillen, but fourteen Protestant boys paying fees from Enniskillen and the immediate locality there are more than twenty-five Catholics at intermediate schools. We have an intermediate school established in April last by Father McKenna, one of the rectors. He has 11 boys. There are 13 others at Monaghan Seminary, making 24, and there are others at other places, such as Carran. I did not get the names, but of the number I am satisfied. When we compare that number with the number paying at Portora, I am justified in stating it would be scarcely correct to say the Protestants would be two to one as compared with the Roman Catholics.

16273. MR. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—You think those people, if there were a good intermediate school in Enniskillen, would have their children there?—Decidedly so. I have no hesitation in expressing my belief, that, if we had the same facility for teaching that we had the disposal of others, the numbers would be nearly double. I am justified in that belief for more than one reason—first, the standard education would get from those establishments, and next, that we have the material to work on. In Enniskillen alone the majority of Roman Catholics over all other denominations is 708, and in the county of Fermanagh, 10,731.

16274. LORD JUSTICE FRYGUES.—That is counting the whole population?—Yes.

16275. MR. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—Is there any other topic on which you wish to be heard?—Yes, in reference to Portora and the Model School it may be distinctly understood that I have no objection whatever to those institutions, nor do I bring any charge whatever against them. But it struck me that they could be of more benefit than they really are. Portora is an excellent school, and has a first-class staff of teachers, and my own impression, from what I hear, is that if an institution could be made popular in any part of Ireland it would be one presented over by Dr. Steele. But I say so it is practically useless to Catholics. There is a large number of boarders who have come from a distance. These are the sons of gentry not intended for commercial pursuits, and the sons of people who could afford to pay for their children if Portora never existed. On the closest examination I find that the yearly average attendance of day boys at Portora for the past twenty years is about twenty-five. That being so, I hold that in calculating the educational benefits conferred on the district by Portora we must confine ourselves to the day boys, and taking the average attendance of day boys receiving their education at Portora as twenty-five, some of them paying, and some free, and calculating the amount of the endowment, which I believe is upwards of £2,500 a year, I think that the benefit conferred is very dearly paid for, and that Portora is not conferring the benefits on the locality that were would be disposed to believe.

16276. LORD JUSTICE FRYGUES.—You leave out of your consideration entirely the benefits Portora confers on those who come from a distance, and speak only of the benefit to the locality?—Only to the locality.

16277. To apply your test, if we wanted to find out whether Enghly, Winchester, or Harrow, were of benefit to education in England, we should confine ourselves to the villages in which they stand?—I am speaking of the locality, and, so far as I understand, Portora was established to confer educational benefits on the locality. The Model School is practically useless as far as Catholics are concerned. They will not avail themselves of it. The average attendance there last year, up to the 21st September, was 192, they have a staff of twenty-five teachers from the head master down, and the annual cost of the establishment is upwards of £2,000.

MR. WILLIAM RUTHERFORD COCKEY, recalled.

Mr. William R. Cockey.

16278. CHAIRMAN.—You wish to make a further statement?—I only wish to say that, in taking the Main-street, we merely followed your Lordship's question to Mr. Kenny in Enniskillen, and gave the actual state of that particular street. There was no design in the matter.

16279. I merely took the Main-street, as being the one in which the largest shops are situated?—Exactly.

Very Rev.
W. Warburton
D.D.

The Very Rev. WILLIAM WARBURTON, D.D., Dean of Elphin, attended.

16280. CHAIRMAN.—You are the Dean of Elphin?—I am, and I have been for upwards of thirty years living in that locality.

16281. Are you also acquainted with the town of Sligo?—I am not much acquainted with Sligo.

16282. You desire to give evidence, in consequence of the evidence given before us by Rev. Thomas Henry?—I do.

16283. State the points, in that gentleman's evidence, to which you take exception?—At a meeting of the Chapter of Elphin on November 11th, the following resolutions were unanimously carried:—

"Resolved.—That in a report of the evidence published in the Dublin Evening Mail of the 15th October last, the Rev. Mr. Henry is represented as having stated: (1). That he (the Rev. Mr. Henry) attended the Endowed Schools Commission as the representative of the Diocesan Synod of Elphin; (2). That the Protestant population of Elphin (we presume he means the town) and surrounding is 'about thirty'; (3). That the clergy of Elphin did not know what to do with the £200 per annum which Mr. Henry alleges they have for maintaining the Catholic Rectorship in those statements are altogether inaccurate or inconsistent with the facts, we desire to, and hereby do, place on record; 1st, That Mr. Henry had no authority from the Synod to pronounce himself its representative; that he was merely appointed as a member of a committee and in the following terms:—To consider the Dean's proposal as to a boarding house in Elphin, the state of the Diocesan school in Sligo, and to communicate with the Endowed Schools Commissioners regarding the funds taken from the Diocese by the Bishop of Elphin's Board; (2). That the Protestant population of Elphin (we presume Mr. Henry means Elphin town) has not diminished to 'about thirty'; that the exact number is forty-two; (3). That the clergy of Elphin have not £200 per annum for maintaining 'beneficial and advancing' the Catholic, and that so far from not knowing what to do with the money, the Chapter has been obliged to overdraw its balance to enable them to complete the improvements lately effected in the Cathedral, and on a moderate scale, in accordance with the terms of Bishop Hodson's will, as constituting no more than a sufficient allowance to Bishop Hodson's liberality. That the Court of Chancery having already decided, in opposition to the arguments of various counsel, that it would get by in accord with the principles of equity to direct Bishop Hodson's endowment from the purposes to which the testator, in the strictest possible terms, limited the application of its funds, we are of opinion that the Chapter ought to be permitted to discharge its trusts, as they have done for many years, consistently, and with an honest desire to promote to the uttermost the public interests. They are persuaded that Bishop Hodson bestowed this great boon on the people of Elphin, not because they were in bad days more numerous than the people of Sligo, or Bally, but because, having lived amongst them for many years, he took a deep interest in their welfare. And we are also persuaded that if his objects were defeated, which we are of opinion could only be done by Act of Parliament, it would afford a warning to persons in Ireland who might be disposed to benefit the locality with which they are connected, that, if they did so, a future generation would probably lay claim to the funds bestowed by them on the ground that these might be more usefully employed elsewhere. At the same time, we desire to add that if, at any future period, we should have a surplus, after providing for the repairs of the Cathedral, we shall most willingly apply that surplus, with the sanction of the Court of Chancery, to the improvement of Bishop Hodson's Grammar school, this being one of the purposes of the trust constituted to the Bishop, Dean, and Chapter. That a copy of these resolutions be laid before the Endowed Schools Commissioners."

Mr. Henry stated that Bishop Hodson's Grammar school is "a little above a good primary school," and as to that I need only say that the boys who were lately educated from that school, under the Intermediate Act, passed in the Middle Grade in six subjects, —viz., Greek, Latin, English Literature, Algebra, Euclid, and Arithmetic. At Mr. Henry could not inform the Commissioners how many pupils are attending the school, I may mention that the number is twenty-seven. The master is a First Honorary and a First Class Professor of the Dublin University. The school is a classical one to the extent that every boy, whose parents desire it, receives a classical education, and, contrary to Mr. Henry's statement, it is attended by the children of the middle and upper classes, one boy who is being prepared for a junior exhibition in Trinity College, Dublin, takes eight miles to the school, another preparing for the Royal College of Surgeons, rides to the school a distance of six or seven miles, and those who are preparing for various Civil Service appointments come from considerable distances. Some time since a landed proprietor, who is a J.P. and D.L., sent one of his sons a distance of five miles to the school, and a beneficed clergyman sent three of his sons a distance of five miles. A gentleman, who resides five miles distant from Elphin lately told me, that he also intended to send his sons, when they should attain to what he considered the proper age. I enclose a copy of a letter I received recently from the Bishop of Kilmore, who, in a reference to a matter to which I shall presently call attention, writes:—

"Kilmore House, Co. Wick.

"November 11, 1879

"Mr. DEAN DREW.—I approve very much of your plan, adopted by the Chapter, of providing a boarding school in Elphin, at which the sons of poor members of the Church can be accommodated on cheap terms, and so be enabled to avail themselves of the excellent education afforded in Bishop Hodson's Grammar School. I have the pleasure of subscribing £2 towards the cost of repairs, furniture, &c., for

"Believe me, very sincerely yours,

"(Signed), JOHN R. KILMORE

"The Dean of Elphin."

The facts which I have stated show that the work done at Bishop Hodson's school would not be accomplished, as affirmed by Mr. Henry, at a National school. The Commissioners of National Education have made these schools strictly primary, and I am of opinion that Bishop Hodson's school supplies a want which is felt in many parts of Ireland, and which the Government cannot supply. In founding superior schools, the Government must, to a very great extent, be guided by numbers, and as they cannot found these schools everywhere, they must have large tracts of country unsupplied for. It is in these unsupplied tracts that private liberality is most needed. Elphin is the centre of an extensive, rich country. The inhabitants of the town and neighbourhood are, I believe, inferior in ability to none in the kingdom. For generations the Elphin schools have turned out men who have advanced and distinguished themselves in life; and but for Bishop Hodson's school they would no longer have the opportunity of doing so, so there would be no superior school in Elphin. A superior teacher has been provided for the Roman Catholic school there, because, as I believe, by this means alone would the members of that Church have been induced to remove their children from Bishop Hodson's school. And thus a superior education by means of Bishop Hodson's school secured to all classes, without any expense to the State, and on this ground alone in Bishop Hodson's school worthy of support, not as a little friendly rivalry with out its use. If the Roman Catholics cannot get what they want at their own school, they will usually look for it at Bishop Hodson's. These reasons would, in my mind, justify leaving to Elphin this endowment, even if it were the property of the State. But when the property was left by an individual, for the very purpose to which it is applied, I own I think the proposal to alienate it a most extraordinary one, and I think the hope of the Bishop, who exists in the person of Sir George Hodson, would have great reason to complain that his ancestor alienated a property from his family for certain trusts, and that these trusts should be ignored, and yet the property not restored to his family. With regard to the Bishop of Kilmore's letter, which I have had before the Commissioners, it was written in reference to a proposal which the Chapter of Elphin Cathedral unanimously adopted, and through means of which, if carried into execution, I hope the efficiency of Bishop Hodson's school will be greatly enlarged. That proposal was circulated in the following form:—

"Lodging House, in connection with Bishop Hodson's Grammar School, Elphin.

"The want of a suitable residence for the sons of the middle and poorer classes of Protestants in the province of Connaught has been deeply felt, and an appeal is now made to all who feel interested in their welfare for the purpose of supplying it.

"There is on the above town an excellent school which has already, by competitive examination, passed into the Civil Service list of its pupils, unfortunately only one of those was of the reformed faith; this youth, being a native of Elphin, had for years the advantage of this school which was denied to others, owing to their inability to meet the expenditure the residence of their children in Elphin would have imposed upon the parents.

"The object of this appeal therefore is to reduce each expenditure to the lowest point, and at the same time to provide for those who should avail themselves of the proposed institution a respectable home and proper care and superintendence.

"It is proposed to afford lodging and attendance to each boy at the small charge of 1s per week, the parents, either directly or by contract, to supply the food, which is to be prepared for the pupils by the persons in charge of the house.

"It is calculated that £200 will be sufficient to make the necessary alterations in the house, which will be rent free, and to provide building and plan furniture, and it is expected that, in future, the institution will be self-supporting.

"It is considered that there will be very little difficulty in making up the sum of £200 amongst those who feel an interest in the welfare of their Protestant fellow-countrymen, who are, unfortunately, very disadvantageously circumstanced in regard to the education of their children.

"Subscriptions will be received and cheerfully acknowledged, by the Dean of Elphin, who will be happy to give any further information which may be desired.

"October 30th, 1879.

"The Deanery, Elphin."

I borrowed the suggestions contained in that proposal from the Roman Catholics, who send their sons to families in the town under similar conditions; but as, unfortunately, there is not in the town a single Protestant family who would take in young men to live. With regard to Bishop Hodson's endowment, I must add that a clause in the deed of foundation requires that the Chapter should submit the accounts to the inspection of the worthy bishop's heir, if required by him so to do, and, moreover, the property was subject to a charge of £20 per annum in favour of a member of Bishop Hodson's family, which annuity was formally assigned by the consent to the trustee and men of the original deed—so that Bishop Hodson and his committee appear to have done all that human foresight could suggest to prevent any alienation of the property to other uses. In reference to another matter given by Mr. Henry, I beg to observe that the Chapter are not the trustees of the Hodson endowment. Two members of it happen to be the present trustee, and the trustees, as such, are merely the machinery for perpetrating of the trusts. The oversight of the fund is vested in the Bishop, Dean, and Chapter of Elphin Cathedral. My recollection is that two of the trustees are laymen. In reference to the committee mentioned in the resolutions of the Chapter, which I have read, I wish to mention that I was a member of that committee, but I went to the Queen's County on a Saturday, and on the following Wednesday evening, when I returned home, I found a notice had arrived on Monday, from Mr. Henry, for a meeting of the committee on that Wednesday. I would have attended on even one day's notice if I had been at home, so that it is no fault of mine that I did not attend the only meeting of the committee which was held.

16284. Does not Mr. Henry live a long way from Elphin?—He lives near Sligo. I proposed a resolution in the Diocesan Synod, with regard to this boarding-house. Mr. Henry immediately got up and proposed an amendment, and the appointment of the Committee of which you have heard was then agreed upon.

16285. Where are the Catholics in Elphin now educated?—Some of them are educated at Bishop Hodson's School.

16286. Lord Justice FitzGibbon.—I thought they had all been withdrawn?—We have none at present, but several Roman Catholic children were withdrawn. The parents were extremely angry about it, but still the majority of them were obliged to submit to the direction given by their clergy. In my evidence before a former Education Commission, I stated that there was only one way in which the children could be taken from my school—namely, by establishing one as good, or nearly so. I have been for thirty-five years educating Roman Catholic children in this and other institutions, and there has never been a single complaint, or the slightest unpleasantness all that time. A gentleman spoke here to-day of the Roman Catholic clergy objecting to children going to the Model schools. In my own experience I know a case of a very clever young man educated at a National school, and his father asked me to send him to the Model school, Belfast. I applied to the Commissioners, and they gave me a nomination. However, the Roman Catholic clergy were so anxious that he should not go to the Model school, that they absolutely sent him to Amoy, and now he is Editor of a paper there, and has lately become a solicitor and a magistrate. Another man asked me to get his son appointed to the Model school, Belfast. I said, "I would be very glad to help you, but your clergy do not like this kind of thing, and I do not want to oppose your clergy."

16287. CHAIRMAN.—You are at present endeavoring to establish a lodging-house in Elphin, in connection with Bishop Hodson's school?—Yes.

16288. I suppose that would make it a boarding-school for the locality, say for ten or fifteen miles round. You can hardly expect to draw boys away from distant parts of the country?—I think we could attract boys from great distances. It is a peculiarity of our institution that the endowment is a charitable one, and yet we have power to charge for the education, according to the means of the parents. We do that in some cases, although in a great many instances we give the education without any charge whatever. The endowment is for the inhabitants of Elphin, and for teaching gratuitously such of the poor children of the town as cannot pay. We have no fixed charge, but the practice is, when a pupil comes, I ascertain what the means of his father may be, and we charge accordingly.

16289. There has been rather a good school at Sligo, kept by Mr. Ender, but the two places are so far apart they might very well work independently?—Not only that, but they could not possibly interfere with each other. The class we get could not pay eight guineas a year, which I have been informed is the charge at Sligo school. The highest charge in Bishop Hodson's school is £4 a year. At present amongst the pupils attending that school are two policemen, young men who want to better themselves, and who are allowed to study a certain portion of the day when off duty. They are likely to get into some Government situation in consequence.

16290. Is there any other point, which you would like to mention?—Only that, that there is a considerable change in Roman Catholic public opinion about attending schools, for instance, upwards of thirty years ago, when I was leaving Athy, I received an address from all the Roman Catholics of the county round, and in that address one ground of complaint to me was, that I had established a school where persons of all grades could receive an excellent education without injury to any. That address was signed by eight Roman Catholic clergymen, and by two members of lay orders.

16291. There has been a great change in Roman Catholic policy since then?—A great change; but, in legislating on these subjects, I think that one ought to look to the future. I have no doubt in my own mind that those feelings, which now exist, will wear away. I believe that when general confidence is established, as I have no doubt it will be, the people will find they are not injured, and they will ultimately send their children to such schools as Bishop Hodson's.

16292. A copy of the resolutions of the chapter of Elphin, which you have quoted, was forwarded to Mr. Henry, and in reference to them he writes—

"At the diocesan synod, held in Boyle in September last, a committee of the following members was formed for the express purpose, in the first place of laying before the Endowed Schools Commission, the wants of the diocese in middle class educational matters.—Dean Warburton, Rev. J. Burke, Rev. T. Henry, Secretary; Colonel King-Harman, M.P.; Major Robertson, Jeremiah Lloyd, Esq. As Secretary I summoned a meeting in October (I think), at which meeting the members as follows attended, all were summoned.—Rev. J. Burke, Rev. T. Henry, Major Robertson, and Jeremiah Lloyd, Esq. The committee meeting desired me to act as representative of that committee, and therefore as the representative of the synod I was fully authorized by this Committee to say, as I did, that I represented the synod. So much for Dean Warburton's resolution No. 1. Colonel King-Harman apologized for not attending the Dean did not. Why was he not there? Resolution No. 2, 'that the exact population of Elphin, is fifty-two,' is very truly essentially different from my statement, 'of about thirty,' a most appreciable difference in a scholastic institution population point of view. Regarding the 3rd resolution about the repairs of the cathedral, I was credibly informed of what I said, and the prevailing opinion of many is, that the entry on the cathedral was unnecessary. I may add that I have no connection with the Diocesan School, was acting as catechist. I receive no emolument in any way from it, I have no personal interest in any educational establishment in or out of the diocese. My statements before the Commissioners were without local bias or personal prejudice, and solely for the general welfare of the diocese.

"Cully, Sligo

"15th December, 1873."

Have you any observation to make as to this?—The answer to that is a very plain one. I did not get his notice till too late to attend the meeting. His letter was written on a Saturday, and reached my house on Monday when I was in the Queen's County. Had he given me notice I would have attended at any moment of inconvenience; but I do not think that in an important matter of that kind, even the two days' notice, which I would have got, had I been at home, was sufficient.

[The Commissioners adjourned.]

Jan. 27, 1880.

FORTY-FIRST DAY.—WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 28, 1880.—11 o'Clock, A.M.

At the Commissioners' Office, Four Courts, Dublin.

Present:—ANDREW SHARPLE HART, Esq., LL.D.; RICHARD O'SHAUGHNESSY, Esq., M.P., and ARTHUR HILL CURTIS, Esq., LL.D.; with JAMES CARRICK MERRITT, Esq., LL.D., Secretary.

The Right Hon. the EARL OF BELMONT, M.C.B., recalled.

The Right
Hon. the Earl of Belmont,
M.C.B.

16293. DR. HART.—You wish to make a further statement, relative to Vaughan's school, Tulead?—Yes. The evidence given by Dr. Graham, before this Commission, attracted the attention of some of the Governors, who thought some of the statements in it sufficiently serious to be taken notice of, and, in consequence, the Lord Fitzmaurice convened a meeting at Arranagh, last week. It was held at the residence of the Rev. Dr. Robinson who is in feeble health, and as he is by far the oldest Governor, we went to his house to have the advantage of his assistance. There were present a sufficient number of Governors to form a quorum. I will now call attention, seriatim to the different points in Dr. Graham's evidence, which were then under the consideration of the Board. The first passage in that evidence, to which our attention was called, was this:—

"What caused you to cease your connection with the school?"—"I received a resolution from the Dublin Board, disposing with my further services."

With regard to that, I produce the Board's minute book, in which I find a minute dated November 20, 1872, showing that an application was then before the Board, for an increase of Dr. Graham's salary. At that time the Secretary of the Board, and the Solicitor were one—the late Mr. John Linton—who I believe was a brother of Master Linton. The meetings of the Board of Governors used to be held at his house. He kept over papers, and, after his death, some of them could not be found, and unfortunately among them was Dr. Graham's application, but the resolution came to by the Board appears then on the minutes.—

"Proposed by the Rev. Dr. Robinson, and seconded by the Earl of Erne, that in respect of Dr. Graham's application, the auditors be instructed to inform him that the Governors do not consider it right to increase his salary, but that they be empowered to give him extra remuneration in case of any epidemic or circumstances requiring of him extra duty."

I also produce the minute book of the auditors, who held their meetings at Tulead, and in the minutes of their meeting of the 11th May, 1871, on which occasion there were present, The Earl of Ranelagh, the Rev. Edward Scamley, and the Rev. Alexander Erwin, I find the following entry:—

"The resident auditors' book was read, and also the entry in his registry dated 24th February. The Board regard his remarks as unbecoming and censured him, and such as Dr. Graham ought to apologize for having committed his official papers. And the Rev. Edward Scamley is requested to communicate this resolution to Dr. Graham."

16294. Have you a copy of Dr. Graham's remarks, referred to in that entry?—No. At the next Board meeting held on the 28th July, 1871, a letter was read from Dr. Graham, dated 18th May, in which he said:—

"The Rev. Mr. Scamley having read for me a minute of last Board referring to my report and entry of February 24th, I wish to explain that I merely intended to suggest certain matters as of benefit to the institution, and did not intend offence to the Board, or any member thereof."

16295. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—Is the minute stating the receipt of that apology in there anything to show whether it was accepted, or condemned notwithstanding?—The minute is:—

"Dr. Graham having complied with the resolution of the Board, ordered—that his reply be entered on the minute." The motion appears to have been passed over for that occasion.

16296. DR. HART.—Was the nature of Dr. Graham's report, a complaint of the want of proper sanitary arrangements in the school?—I cannot tell you that, because, unfortunately, we have not the text of the report.

16297. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—Is there a report book in which these reports are entered?—There is not, but the annual reports are entered on the minutes, and are so preserved. The next minute, in point of time, with reference to Dr. Graham was his application to the Board (of which I have already given evidence) for an increase of his salary.

16298. DR. HART.—What next occurred as to Dr. Graham?—There was a meeting of the auditors at Tulead on the 3rd February, 1873, and the minutes of their proceedings on that day contains the following entry:—

"Dr. Graham's report and letter read, and we drew thereon both of such importance to the Institution that we shall send copies of them to the other Governors."

Accordingly a special meeting of the Board was held at the house of their secretary, Mr. John Little, on 22nd April, 1873, at which there were six Governors present, viz., The Lord Primate, in the chair, the Earl of Rosslyn, the Bishop of Derry, the Right Hon. Richard Keatinge, Rev. Edward Scampl, and Rev. Andrew Williamson. I may mention that the Right Hon. Richard Keatinge was the person who took charge of the correspondence when it assumed a serious nature. The following minute of that meeting appears in the book:—

"Read the letter of Dr. Graham to Mr. John Little dated 11th inst., together with the following letters accompanying his communication, viz., Dr. Graham's letter to the Archdeacon, dated 3rd February, 1873, the Rev. Edward Scampl to Dr. Graham, dated 23rd February, 1873, Dr. Graham's letter to Rev. Mr. Scampl, dated 10th March, 1873, Rev. Edward Scampl to Dr. Graham, dated 16th April, 1873, Dr. Graham to Rev. E. Scampl, dated 12th April, 1873, Dr. Graham to the Governor, dated 24th April, 1873. Moved by the Right Hon. Richard Keatinge, seconded by the Lord Bishop of Derry, and resolved:—That the medical attendance of Dr. Graham at Trehill School be discontinued on the 30th day of this month, and in addition to the sum of £5, which shall be then due to him, he shall also be paid the further sum of £5 (in case he shall require the same), and that a copy of this order be sent to Dr. Graham before the end of this month."

I may say, with regard to Dr. Graham's letter to the Board mentioned in that minute, that I do not myself know exactly what it contained, but at the Board meeting in Arrang, on Friday last, several Governors stated that they remembered the nature of the letter very well, and I was instructed to say they considered it to be dictatorial and offensive, as coming from an officer of the Board to his superiors. With regard to the further sum of £5 being offered to him, that, I understand, was suggested by Judge Keatinge on account of Dr. Graham having been dismissed without notice, but, in point of fact, Dr. Graham did not claim that £5, and it was not paid to him.

16295. What is the next point to which you desire to call attention?—I quote again from Dr. Graham's evidence:—

"18472. During the time you were medical attendant you had as opportunity of observing the working of the school generally?—A constant opportunity."

"18473. Have you any remarks to offer as regards that, I suppose the children were healthy and strong?—No."

"18474. To what cause do you attribute their not being so?—I attribute it to the want of proper sanitating arrangements, and especially with regard to their dormitories; and to the arrangements connected with them and the laundry."

Now, with reference to that evidence, I will only read Dr. Graham's reports when he was medical officer of the school. In 1846 he wrote:—

"In presenting this, the annual medical report of Youghan's School, I am happy to say that we have passed through a year untroubled by any very serious disease among the children. A pretty general attack of a mild form of influenza during the spring passed away with the usual treatment. One boy (Fury) was removed at my suggestion, he was suffering from taken anasarca, and, I believe, died at home. We have a few cases of sore eyes among the girls. At present they are going on well, and likely to require treatment. Nothing else calling for special remark."

In 1867 he again reported:—

"Governors, I beg again to lay before you my report for the past year. In doing so I must again congratulate you on the very healthy state of the school, in fact, I cannot just do a more deserving of special notice. In a general way I may mention that sore eyes had prevailed for some time during the year, and gave some little trouble to students. However, I have not had a new case for some time past. One boy, Wood, who had suffered most severely from ophthalmia, has not yet returned to the school, he having been removed at my suggestion, for change of air. The attendance paid to the children, so far as food, and fresh air is concerned, accounts for the very healthy state of the school, which is superior to most similar institutions."

"B. G. GRAHAM."

Again, in 1868, he reported:—

"Governors, I give you very great pleasure to again give a favourable report on the state of the school. The first month of the year was marked by the number of cases of sore throat which appeared among the boys exclusively, not a case appearing in the girls' school. The girls at a subsequent period suffered from sore eyes at intervals, but all did well under treatment. All the other cases during the year have been of the ordinary character peculiar to youth, and do not call for special notice."

"B. G. GRAHAM."

In 1869 he reported:—

"Governors, The pleasing duty of presenting you with the report of another year free from any serious disease again devolves upon me. No case of any importance has taken place during the past year. The cure and attention bestowed upon the children has had the success it so well merited, and attention to sanitary arrangements has had the effect (as in each case) of banishing disease, and producing the look of health which we can see in greater perfection at Trehill than at any other institution, where an equal number of children are collected together. Hoping that success may not cease as to relax our efforts to promote the health of the school, but rather stimulate us to further exertion."

"(Signed)"

B. G. GRAHAM."

In 1870 he again reported:—

"Governors, I beg to present my yearly report, and in doing so I may say the past year has not presented anything very terrible from which to form a very heightened opinion. So far as the health of the children is concerned, I think we may safely compare with any similar institution, nothing except the ordinary cases, which occur in juvenile life, having taken place in the school. Several sanitary improvements have been put in operation during the past year, all of which I doubt not will still further add to the security from disease which has hitherto marked the progress of the institution."

"(Signed)"

B. G. GRAHAM."

In 1871 he wrote:—

"Governors, During the past year nothing of a very serious nature has occurred in the school. The usual ill attending the period of youth were the only matters requiring attention, an outbreak of disease of the milder kind being the chief trouble during the early part of the year. There has been quite passed away. Some of the girls have had chicken-pox, some time since, but it is also passing away. I have good pleasure in noticing the great sanitary improvements carried out, in the way of the main supply, and in many other directions, to remove to maximum the report, but all of these reforms is a great degree to the general health of the children of the school. I have no doubt that the state of the institution can compare favourably with any other where the source of supply is so varied, the children coming as they do from all parts of Ireland, and in every possible condition. In conclusion, I may say that I have found very efficient assistants in the officers of the institution who have in every season been most anxious to assist in carrying out sanitary orders, and whom I have ever found courteous and willing."

"B. G. GRAHAM."

In 1872 he wrote:—

"Governors, I have great pleasure in again presenting you with my annual report. The past year has been, I am happy to say, free from all the predominance, except from any disease worth speaking of. We have had, of course, the usual ill of juvenile life, and a good many cases of eruptions, and matters of that sort, but I am happy to say that the latter has been got rid of after some trouble. We have had a couple of cases of law fever, but these were removed to our infirmary, where they are the usual cases, and are now quite well. I beg to state that I have always looked every possible aid from the officials of the establishment, and I have always observed the great care and attention bestowed on the children under their care, more especially during sickness."

"B. G. GRAHAM."

16300. Mr. O'BRIEN—Is it not clear from these reports that there were improvements made occasionally, during that time, in sanitary matters?—Exactly so; but in Dr. Graham's evidence the matter was stated thus:—

"18478. Did they do anything to remedy that state of things?—Not at that time."

The Right
Hon. the Earl

"18579. Not during the time you were the medical man?—
No."
"18580. Have these defects been remedied then, so far as you know?—There has been an improvement, but I believe the arrangements are not yet satisfactory. I believe there should not be urinals in a place of the kind—there should be separate accommodations for each boy."
"18581. Are the urinals in the dormitories?—Yes.
They were in my time, and I believe they are still."

With regard to that evidence, I produce two special reports, [said before the Board last Friday, one by our present Medical Officer, Dr. Walsh, and the other by Mr. John Wray, the Borough Surveyor and Executive Sanitary Officer of Kinsale, who made a special examination of the premises. Dr. Walsh made the following report:—

"To the Board of Governors, Vaughan's Charity.

"MY LORDS AND GENTLEMEN.—I have read over the evidence given by Dr. Graham before the Endowed Schools Commission. I have also perused the several annual reports furnished by him to you during the years he was your medical officer, and I feel it impossible to reconcile the glaring discrepancies between the two. The evidence betrays a remarkable ignorance of the present, and forgetfulness of the past condition of the institution. Dr. Graham speaks of privies as still in existence, whereas, shortly after my appointment, the privies, with their attendant cesspools, were abolished, and latrines fitted with "McAlister's Patent Appliances" substituted, both for the male and female schools. These are connected with drains, and are regularly and perfectly flushed. He also states that there were no water-closets, the fact being that both in his time and now water closets were and are in the immediate vicinity of the male and female dormitories, and I always found them in good working order. I have repeatedly and carefully inspected the urinals complained of both by day and night, and am satisfied they are not a nuisance or injurious to health. They are well trapped, and are carefully washed every morning. Any substitution I could suggest would be open to greater objection. I have, therefore, mentioned their continuance, and still approve thereof. As regards ophthalmia, since 1874 I have had but one case of diarrhoea of the eye, and that is in no way connected with local causes. With that exception, there has been, since the above date, no serious disease of the eye. Since the same period there was a limited outbreak of angina, introduced by a boy who contracted the disease at home during vacation. There have been but a few cases, and we quickly stamped it out. The abolition of urinals are excellent, and every child in the school has been for several years regularly supplied with a separate towel, the rollers referred to being a thing of the past. The sewerage and drainage of the whole premises underwent a careful overhauling some years ago by Mr. John Wray, C.E., and Executive Sanitary Officer for Kinsale, in cooperation with me; and ventilating shafts were connected with the sewers in several places outside the buildings.

"On my recommendation your Board furnished all the dormitories with excellent mattresses and hair pillows, at considerable cost instead of the ticks filled with straw previously in use. One good result of this has been accomplished. I ascribed it, even on my last inspection for any evidence of scab, which previously infested the children's beds. A few days ago I made a complete inspection of the whole buildings and premises, and found all in a very satisfactory and sanitary condition, and the children very healthy and apparently happy. I have always found the authorities most desirous of entering into my suggestions, and carrying them out, for the health, comfort, and welfare of the inmates, and the resident officials very anxious for the accomplishment of the same objects, and most kind and anxious to any children needing special care. I may venture, without much exaggeration, to conclude this report in the words of Dr. Graham addressed to you in 1869:—"The care and attention bestowed upon the children has had the success it so well merited, and constant regard to sanitary arrangements has had the effect usual in such cases of banishing disease and producing the look of health which we see in greater perfection at Tulse than at any other institution where an equal number of children are collected together."
Finally I may mention that while not far from has occurred in numerous instances in the parish during the past year, no single case has arisen in the school—I have the honour to be, my lords and gentlemen, your obedient servant,

"R. PARNELL WALSH, J.P.,

"Medical Officer, Seignior Parnell's Infirmary, and Executive Sanitary Officer for Kinsale, Medical Officer of Portor Royal School."

Mr. Wray, the gentleman referred to by Dr. Walsh, also presented a report, dated the 21st of the present month, which is as follows:—

"MY LORDS AND GENTLEMEN.—I beg to report that I made a careful inspection of the whole of the buildings, and premises in connection with them, at Tulse School, on the 19th inst., and have much pleasure in stating that I found the sanitary arrangements in excellent order. The latrines, constructed some years ago under my superintendence, for the use of the male and female schools and around a dwelling, appear to work in the most satisfactory manner. They were in good order and remarkably free from offensive odour.
The shafts erected some time ago appear to discharge the duty for which they were intended, viz., to carry away foul air lighter than the atmosphere generated in the room, from the latter, and discharge them at a high elevation, and thus prevent them finding their way into the apartments in the buildings. The water-closets, in the vicinity of the male and female dormitories, were also in good working order.
The dormitories and beds were clean, and the latrines comfortable. The lavatory arrangements were in excellent order. There was a liberal supply of water, and I observed that each boy and girl was provided with his or her own towel. The mind in the boys' dormitory appeared to be well trapped, was clean as possible, convenient with the duty it had to perform, almost free from smell, and, in my opinion, much less objectionable than separate rooms discharging the same function. I found the day, lavatory, and laundry clean. I had the opportunity of seeing the boys and girls at dinner. They appeared to enjoy it well, were clean, and apparently in excellent health and comfortable. I may add that I have had an opportunity of visiting several establishments in which large numbers of schoolboys were accommodated, but in none have I found the general sanitary arrangements so good, so little offensive smell, and the inmates apparently so clean and comfortable as at Tulse.—I have the honour to be, my lords and gentlemen, your obedient servant,

"JOHN WRAY, Borough Surveyor, and Executive Sanitary Officer, Kinsale."

18580. Is there any other matter to which you wish to call attention?—Yes. This further passage appears in the evidence of Dr. Graham:—

"After the passing of the Sanitary Act of 1874, I was appointed Consulting Sanitary Officer to the Incorporated Union, and also sanitary officer to the district, and in my capacity as a sanitary officer I reported on it, and it has been since very well improved, but the position is, in my opinion, altogether unsatisfactory."

Now, it is perfectly true that Dr. Graham did make the report that he states, and it is also true that a summons was issued against the Governors, and they were ordered by the magistrates at Kesh Petty Sessions on the 4th May, 1875, within fifty days to remove a privy upon their premises at Tulse School, and close the pit underneath so that none should be so longer a nuisance, and to pay £8 10s. for costs of such proceedings, but I now produce a copy of an entry in the Crown book of Kinsale, which is as follows:—

"County Fermanagh, to wit. At the Kinsale Petty Sessions held on 21st June, 1875, the following appeal was heard and decided by P. J. Blake, Esq., C.C., chairman of the quarter sessions for said county. Mr. A. Collins, solicitor, appears for appellants. Mr. J. Graham, solicitor, appears for respondents. The Governor of Vaughan's Charity appeals, the Guardians of the Incorporated Union acting as a rural sanitary authority, respondents. Appellants suing aggrieved by an order made by the Justices at Kesh Petty Sessions on the 4th day of May, 1875, directing them within fifty days to remove a privy upon their premises at Tulse School, and close the pit underneath, so that none should be so long a nuisance, and to pay £8 10s. for costs of such proceedings, appeal themselves on the grounds.—1st.
That no proper or legal notice to remove the alleged nuisance was issued in the said order, and was only served on the defendants, pursuant to the statute in that behalf. 2nd.
That there was no nuisance within the meaning of the act
4th. That the said order is illegal and erroneous, in that it subjoins and requires the complainants to enter upon the premises therein mentioned, and do all necessary things for removing the order into execution. 5th. That the said order is illegal and erroneous, in that it orders the payment of a sum for costs without showing for what the said sum is payable. 6th. That there was no evidence to support the making of said order. Respondents for appellants.—William Johnston, James Hinepley, Esquires for respondents

—Dr. B. G. Graham, James Allen, James Docherty. Rule — That the order be quashed and reversed.”

That disposes of that portion of Dr. Graham's evidence.

16301. It shows that in 1874 at any rate, whether it was a good or a bad one, the accommodation provided was a priory!—It shows that.

16302. Is it admitted that the alteration from a priory to a latrine took place subsequently to that?—It is.

16303. Dr. HART.—Dr. Graham says it has been since very much improved, but the situation is altogether unsuitable!—The object of putting in that paper was to show that the chairman did not hold the case was proved against the Government.

16304. Where in the report, which, in the year 1871, Dr. Graham and Dr. Walsh made to the Board?—That report Mr. Annesley states is lost.

16305. Alterations were therein suggested, as desirable in the sanitary arrangements!—Yes, and they were subsequently carried out. The minutes of the meeting of the Board, on the 11th May, 1871, record as follows:—

* A report from Dr. Walsh and Dr. Graham was read, and arrangements were directed to be made for carrying into effect such of the improvements suggested therein, as appeared to the Board to be requisite. Ordered.—Messrs. Ross and Murray's estimate, for sanitary repairs and improvements, amounting to £90 be accepted.”

That was in respect of water-supply and sanitary improvements.

16306. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—Did that include alterations of the urinal system?—No. There was no alteration made in the urinals at all, they are still just as they have been for seventeen years past.

16307. Dr. HART.—In the report of 1871, there was a recommendation for alterations?—Dr. Walsh denies that. What we rely on, to contradict Dr. Graham's version of that matter, is his own subsequent report alluding to the improvements made.

16308. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—I asked Dr. Graham “Did you suggest that that accommodation should be removed from the dormitories?” And he said “Yes.” Does that suggestion appear in any of his annual reports?—Not at all.

16309. Dr. HART.—Did it appear in the joint report of Drs. Graham and Walsh, in 1871?—Dr. Walsh denies that it did. He says he never disapproved of the urinals.

16310. The water-closets have been in existence for a long time!—Mr. Annesley knows them to have been there for the last twenty years. They were intended to be accessible to children in cases of sickness.

16311. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—They are connected with the dormitories?—In a room off the dormitories.

16312. The only question is whether or not the urinal system in dormitories is a good one?—It is the opinion of one doctor against another. Dr. Graham says Dr. Walsh concurred with him, which as a matter of fact Dr. Walsh denies. Dr. Graham was asked some questions as to whether the school was successful as an educational institution. Of course his answer is only his own opinion upon a matter of opinion, and with it the Government do not agree. The Government can put in evidence the reports of the Inspector, Mr. Redkin, who is also one of the Inspectors of the Erasmus Smith's Board. In Dr. Graham's evidence this passage occurs:—

* I have seen a sufficient number of teachers, as far as you can judge, by comparing the school with other schools with which you are acquainted?—No, I think not, considering the amount of work that the teacher has to perform in addition to his school duties.”

On that subject, the present master, Mr. Nash, reads this report to the Board of Governors, assembled the other day, at Armagh:—

“Mr. LOUSE and GENTLEMEN, I beg to lay before you a few remarks on the evidence given by Dr. Graham before the Erasmus Smith's Commission.—I, as to the sanitary state.—After coming here I found occasionally an offensive smell in the school-rooms, which was caused by a defective down-pipe. On bringing the matter before the trustees they had it effectually cured by removing the old w.c. and pipes, and by setting up a new one with the pipes leading directly to the yard, and not through the school-rooms as in the old one. 2. Dr. Graham said the master had too much to do. This I deny. I have no duties to perform with school-boys. The trustees give great help both in the school-rooms and at industrial work. No student could be more trustworthy than the head master. There is much to be looked after; but far from this disagreeing with me I am 24 hrs. busier now than I was two years ago. 3. The only thing I have to complain of is, the great and almost total ignorance of some of the children on admission. And as the children are admitted one by one throughout the year, and not in groups yearly or half-yearly, some of them, for a long time after admission, require separate teaching before they can join any class. This is more severely felt when such boys are sent in at the maximum age of twelve.

“I have the honor to be, My Lords and Gentlemen,
“Your obedient servant,
“(Signed), THOMAS NASH, Schoolmaster.”

16313. Mr. Redkin is an officer of the Erasmus Smith's Board?—Yes.

16314. You get him to inspect Tubekil school periodically?—I believe annually, but I cannot speak personally as to that.

16315. Are there any other points to which you wish to refer?—The only other points on the evidence to which I think it necessary to call attention are with reference to whether there were any cases of proselytism, and the absence of many children of the neighbourhood from the school. Now, the general remarks made by the Government the other day I am not at liberty to give, but we had a memorandum from Dr. Robinson, who has known the school sixty years, and we all agreed that the school was intended for the children of indigent parents. We do not consider that as a rule our tenants are indigent persons. That would be one reason why they should not particularly care about their going into the school. Another reason is that they can get them educated at the National school just as well.

16316. With reference to the question of proselytism, I should tell you I received a communication of a vague character alleging something of the kind.—I say vague as not specifying names, but it was undoubtedly from a person who would say nothing that he did not believe.—If you look at the charter you will see that we are bound only to admit the children of parents who are members of the Church of Ireland, and that they should be born in wedlock, and be indigent, too. These are no doubts that, in other times, there were great abuses, and Mr. Annesley could give you the names of several persons in the neighbourhood who are Catholics, and who had been at the school. But for many years past there has not been any Catholic child in the school. Therefore that allegation falls to the ground. At the meeting of the Board of Governors held on Wednesday, 31st inst., it was moved by the Dean of Armagh, seconded by the Dean of Clogher, and resolved:—

* That Lord Bective be requested to appear before the Commissioners of Endowed Schools on Wednesday, the 28th inst., on behalf of the Board of Governors of the Vaughan charity, and that the chaplain, the Rev. J. B. Annesley, be directed to be in attendance as the commission, taking with him in charge all the documents that may be necessary.”

16317. Dr. HART.—The case of Dr. Graham's dismissal was the topic of the letter in which he demanded an increase of salary?—So I understand. I was not present, but that was no doubt the case.

16318. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—In Dr. Graham's evidence this passage occurs:—

“The country here every confidence in Mr. Maude, but they complain that interference takes place on the part of individual Governors.”

You have been Governor for some time and can therefore tell whether that is the case?—That does not refer to me, because I never interfered with the estate, I imagine it alludes to Mr. Scrymgeour, who, as resident Governor, was on the spot, and naturally took a more active part than the other Governors, but I do not know anything about it.

16312. Have you heard any complaint, or suggestion from the tenants, in reference to that subject?—I never heard of any.

Rev. James
Hutchinson,
A.B.

REV. JAMES BLAIR AINSWORTH, A.B., recalled.

16310. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—In the proceedings just read by Lord Selborne there was a reference made to the chaplain. You are the chaplain?—I am.

16311. With regard to the educational matters, referred to by Dr. Graham, how often does Mr. Rudkin inspect the school?—Annually, before our vacation.

16312. What remuneration does he receive?—£5 for each inspection.

16313. How long does he spend on each inspection?—About five or six hours. He makes a thorough investigation of everything.

16314. Does he devote half the time to the girls, and half to the boys?—No; he inspects all together. We have three classes, and the boys and girls answer together.

16315. Does he examine the children promiscuously in various subjects?—He takes one subject at a time with the whole school.

16316. Does he make a report to the Board?—He does. His reports are not entered in the minute book, but I think they ought to be. In his report for June, 1879, he says:—

"The general condition of the school is deserving of high commendation. I was much pleased with the order, discipline, and attention which prevailed. Everything in it seems to ensure the improvement and comfort of the children. The teacher is deserving of the gratitude of all."

That is the marriage gradually.

16317. Has he ever made any suggestions to the Board, for the improvement of the education?—He does make suggestions, and the teacher complies with them.

16318. Has he ever found it necessary to suggest to the Board educational improvement?—He has not. The teacher was under Mr. Rudkin before, and is quite up to his method.

16319. How long has he been the inspector?—About ten years.

16320. Was you connected with the school when the proceedings were taken against the Governors at Petty Sessions, in consequence of the condition of the premises?—I was.

16321. Speaking generally, and without going into technicalities, on what ground did the chairman of Quarter Sessions reverse the decision of the Petty Sessions—was it on a technical ground, or did he hold that this really was not a nuisance?—I cannot be certain as to that. My own impression was that it was on the ground that the proceedings of the magistrates were irregular.

16322. Was it after the proceedings at Petty Sessions, and at Quarter Sessions, that the privy system was changed to the latrine system?—It was either at that time, or immediately after it.

16323. You were connected with the Institution during the time Dr. Graham was in office?—I was, and before it.

16324. He was in office there until a very short date previous to his making the report which led to the legal proceedings?—Within two years of it. He was not sanitary officer at the time he left, not for one or two years afterwards.

16325. Dr. HART.—He left the Institution in May, 1875, and the proceedings took place in 1874?—In 1874 and 1875.

16326. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—Did he, to you, or to any one else, to your knowledge, make a specific complaint of the character of this privy between 1860 and 1874?—No. I inquired of the Resident Governor, and there was no formal report made against those privies during the time of Dr. Graham's holding office as medical officer.

16327. Was there any actual complaint, or one of an informal character?—Not to my knowledge; I have no recollection of it. Nothing of the kind was brought before the Board.

16328. Used you to see Dr. Graham, on the occasion of his visits to the Institution?—I did, generally.

16329. Did he hold conversations with you about the general state of the school?—Yes, but he made no complaint that I can now recollect. His visits were very brief.

16330. You go into the dormitories occasionally?—I do.

16331. Do you not find some smell from the urinal system?—Of course there is some smell, but since the last master was appointed, in October, 1877, they are washed every morning.

16332. Previously to that, this constant dirty case was not bestowed on the urinals?—They were always well washed. One of the urinals has a pipe above it that drops water down.

16333. Has the other urinal such a pipe?—It has not, but they are both trapped.

16334. Dr. HART.—The washing to which you have referred was not regularly done in Dr. Graham's time?—Such great attention was not bestowed in his time as has been given since.

16335. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—Do you remember his making any verbal report to you, or in your hearing?—I do not remember.

16336. Did any other officer make a suggestion to you about the urinals?—No.

16337. Was there any complaint, on the part of the children, of the smell?—I never heard of any.

16338. When did Mr. Wray's visit, and the abatement of the sewers, take place?—I think that was in 1874-75.

16339. Was that in consequence of the report made by Dr. Graham as sanitary inspector?—I think it was in connection with it. The magistrates made an order that their officer should enter the premises and pull down the old privy. The Governors appealed from the order, but undertook to do all themselves; and so they did.

16340. Dr. HART.—As a matter of fact, the order was carried out?—It was carried out under protest. The nuisance was denied.

16341. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—There was room for improvement, and improvement took place, but there appears to be no reference to this nuisance in the first annual official reports of Dr. Graham. Was there any suggestion made to you, or in your hearing, as to the condition of the sewers?—I never heard Dr. Graham object to the condition of the sewers at all.

16342. There seems to have been an inspection made by Dr. Graham and Dr. Walsh in 1871?—Yes.

16343. Why was Dr. Walsh brought in to consult with Dr. Graham in 1871?—In consequence of a report, indeed, I think my own report, in February, 1871. I alluded to the continued prevalence of dysentery; and, after that appeared, an order was given by the authorities to have a sanitary inspection by Dr. Walsh and Dr. Graham. Whether Dr. Graham was satisfied or pleased I do not know. But it was immediately afterwards, on the 24th February, that Dr. Graham wrote the letter which the authorities found fault with, as unbecoming.

16344. You have not got a copy of the report made by Drs. Walsh and Graham?—No, we have not.

16345. Did you see it?—I think I did.

16346. Do you remember it?—I could not trust my memory as to it.

16347. Have you the letter which was alluded to?—I never saw that.

16348. Before you represented to the Board the inability of an inquiry into the cause of the continued prevalence of ringworm in the school, did you speak to the medical attendant on this subject?—Yes. The medical attendant and I had been speaking of it, but he seemed to think very little about the ringworm.

16359. Did you seek any opinion from him, as to the cause of the prevalence of ringworm?—No.

16360. He did not offer any suggestion?—No.

16361. He made no suggestion as to sanitary improvements for the purpose of getting rid of it?—Not that I am aware of. We spoke about it; but I cannot recollect what he said, it is so many years ago.

16362. Dr. HART.—Was the application for the special medical report in 1871 caused by any suspicion of defect in the sanitary arrangements, or by the appearance of ringworm?—I should think by the appearance of ringworm. That was one cause only. There were also some eyes. This is a copy of the medical report that led to that investigation.—

“In consequence of an unusual outbreak of ringworm and sore eyes, we consider it necessary to call in additional medical advice as to the sanitary state of the building.”

16363. Mr. O'BRIEN.—What offices do you hold?—I have been Chaplain since 1863, and in 1875 I was appointed manager. The Resident Governor, Mr. Sempie, had previously to that been required to superintend and visit the institution periodically, and to look after sanitary matters, and everything connected with the school, but since 1875, no future Resident Governor is to have the power of superintending or having anything to do with the management of the institution. That has devolved on the Chaplain.

16364. Did you get an increase of pay?—Not on account of that. On the death of the late master I was appointed to take charge of the accounts, and for that I got an increase of £50 a year.

16365. Who used to do that formerly?—The Resident Governor, but the master would make out some of the accounts for him, and have them all ready. The Resident Governor drew the cheques.

16366. In point of fact, previous to that arrangement, the work was really done by the master, and the Resident Governor merely accepted his accounts?—No, the Resident Governor, as Acting Auditor, attended to the supply of the “Book of Wants,” kept the “Current Account Book” and “Bundara Book,” and examined all accounts for the Quarterly Boards; those for salaries only were drawn up by the Master, who also assisted in getting other accounts, comparing them, and copying minutes.

16367. You now get £20 a year for keeping the accounts?—I do.

16368. And no additional payment for the responsibility of the superintendence of the institution?—No.

16369. What was your former salary?—£100 a year, as Chaplain.

16370. Dr. CURRIE.—Is not Mr. Sempie still the Resident Governor?—Yes, but he is very aged.

16371. Practically you do his work?—I do.

16372. Mr. O'BRIEN.—I find the masters formerly was, not to enter casual reports made by the doctor or other officers. Is there now a system of keeping those reports?—We have had no casual reports or special reports since 1871. We have the doctor's quarterly reports.

16373. Are they preserved?—They have not been preserved hitherto, but perhaps they will be. It would be well to have them preserved. Dr. Graham also refers to my position as regards the parish. There is rather a confusion in his statement. I am distressed from all duty by the rector, with the sanction of the Lord Parents, and that has been recognised by the Representative Body. That was to free me from any duty outside, except what might be laid upon me by the present rector, in order that I might be able to attend to the duties of the chaplaincy.

16374. Dr. HART.—How long ago was that done?—In 1874.

MR. WILLIAM MOONEY, examined.

Mr. William Mooney.

16375. Dr. HART.—You are a solicitor, and the agent to the estates belonging to the Henry School, in the county of Westmeath?—I am.

16376. What is the nature of the estate?—Fee-simple property in that county.

16377. Is it let on long leases?—The trustees have power to let for one life or thirty-one years, and it is let to two tenants within the leasing powers.

16378. At what time were the leases made?—Speaking from recollection, about 1865.

16379. That was at a time when the valuation of land was rather low?—That is so.

16380. Do you think the rent is a fair rent?—I think the rent is in or about a fair rent at the present time.

16381. Since that time the value of land has risen considerably?—There has been such a depreciation, within the last two or three years, that, I think, the land is not more valuable now than it was then.

16382. What is the rental?—In round numbers, about £600 a year.

16383. The expenditure does not come to anything like that?—There was money borrowed by the trustees for building purposes, and there has been a sinking fund, for the purpose of paying that off. The entire debt is now paid off, with the exception of about £450. Except the fund applied as a sinking fund to pay off that debt, the entire income is applied to the schools.

16384. There were large buildings erected some time ago?—Yes.

16385. At what cost?—In round numbers, between £8,500 and £9,000.

16386. Have you a statement of the accounts, showing how the £600 a year is spent?—I have been furnished by the Secretary to the trustees, who is also a trustee himself, with a copy of some of the annual accounts. Here is the account for the half-year ending 1878.

16387. Mr. O'BRIEN.—Is this account, which you have just handed on, an original account, or is it an extract from a book?—I am not certain. The accounts are in the book, but they are copied into it. You will see that account is certified by Dr. Nulty, one of the trustees, as chairman of the meeting.

16388. Dr. HART.—In this account the payment to the Christian Brothers is the principal item of expenditure?—The payment to the Christian Brothers is I believe £240 a year.

16389. The charges in this account are—May 1, 1878, Christian Brothers, £142 18s. 11d.; May 1, 1879, Christian Brothers, £146 1s. 8d., and there is no payment between. This is a very imperfect account?—I am merely the solicitor, and if full information is required the Commissioners had better summon Dr. Nulty.

16390. The half-year's rent appears to be £304, which would give annual income of £608. Whatever the disbursements?—The Christian Brothers get £340 a year, and the man £43, and after paying the usual charges, income tax and so forth, the residue is applied to the maintenance of the house. There is nothing given to the man except the £43 a year. But so far as the boys' school is concerned, the clergy bears the entire expenses of the maintenance of it, and also the necessary school-books, &c.

16391. In this account the payment to the Christian Brothers does not agree with your statement?—I took my statement from the answers which the Christian Brothers have sent up. I find their answer is £340 a year.

16392. It appears from one of the accounts you have produced, that on May 21, 1874, they got

+ A 2

Mr. William
Murray.

£133 13s. 3d., for the half-year, and again in November, 1874, they got £144 1s. 4d. for the half-year. There are also some payments for sundries, and I apprehend those payments included some of the sundries, and that the statement in their answer is correct—namely, £340a year. Mr. Druggan's rent has fallen into arrear, and he was obliged to be quieted, for non-payment of one and a half years' rent, on 1st May last. His lease has therefore been determined by extinction for non-payment of rent.

16393. As soon as the residue of the debt is discharged the trustees will have the whole fund for the school purposes?—Yes.

16394. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—I have now before me the entire account for 1878. It is on two separate sheets, and Dr Hart had only one of them. Hence the apparent inconsistency. We will take the credit side of the account for that year. It begins with a balance to credit of £293 1s. 4d. You see these accounts from time to time?—Not as a rule. The only way that I see them is when I happen to be present. I think the trustees meet twice a year, and the Secretary to the trustees, who is also Treasurer and one of the trustees, produces his accounts, which are audited by the trustees. I have been present on a couple of occasions; but further than that I have no knowledge whatever.

16395. Dr. CURRAN.—Who is the Secretary?—The Rev. Joseph Coyne, Mullingar.

16396. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—How many trustees were present on the occasion when you were at the meetings?—The last occasion was a short time ago. All were present except the then recently appointed trustee, the Most Rev. Dr. Donnelly. The trustees present were—Most Rev. Dr. Nulty, Rev. Joseph Coyne, Sir Walter Nugent, Bart; and Edward Mac-Eivoy, Esq. The accounts were submitted, and every one of the receipts was examined and vouched. That was during the present year.

16397. On the other occasion on which you were present, was the audit conducted in the same way?—Precisely.

16398. In a perfectly business-like way?—Nothing could be more so.

16399. The account for 1878, which commenced with a balance to credit of £293 1s. 4d., shows that Druggan's rent up to May, 1877, was paid on the 16th May, 1878, and amounted to £165 11s. 4d. You stated that he has been since obliged for non-payment of rent?—Yes.

16400. Has he had been quiet?—There was an arrangement, for the settling of it, made at the last meeting of the trustees.

16401. Can you say whether the rent is the same as the former rent?—What occurred was this, he owed 1½ years' rent to 1st May, in respect of which proceedings were taken, and he would owe up to November two years' rent. The arrears had been cancelled, and no redemption had taken place. Druggan had effected very large improvements on his holding, for which he claimed compensation to the extent of £3,000. I have no doubt that was an exaggeration; but the improvements included the building of a very substantial dwelling-house, in which he was living. Up to this period Druggan had been a good tenant, and what the trustees did, having regard to all the circumstances, was to enter into an arrangement with him, by which he on his part relinquished any claims for improvements up to the present time, and the trustees on their part gave up their claim to the one and a half years' rent, and agreed to relet the lands to him at the same rent for another term, either as tenant from year to year, or on lease for thirty-one years, as he himself might elect.

16402. The result of that was to wipe out the claim for the improvements he had made?—Yes.

16403. From a professional point of view, your own knowledge of business and of the locality, do you consider that was a good arrangement?—It was entirely at my suggestion that was done. First of all there would be great difficulty in reletting the holding at all under present circumstances, and I was quite satisfied it would not be relet at a greater rent than he paid.

16404. When did that arrangement take place?—Some time in the course of the present year.

16405. Do you live in Mullingar?—I live in Dublin. I am Clerk of the Crown for the County Westmeath.

16406. You know Mullingar pretty well?—Very intimately.

16407. And these schools?—Yes.

16408. How many boys attend?—About 450 is the average attendance at the Christian Brothers' schools. There is also a classical department, conducted by a priest, at which the average attendance is about twenty-five. The average attendance at the infant schools of the nuns, which are situated out of the town, is about fifty.

16409. Is the nuns' school for grown-up girls situated out of the town?—No.

16410. Therefore the first statement gives education to 450 boys in the Christian Brothers' schools, about twenty-five receiving an intermediate education, and about fifty infant children in the Presentation school?—Quite so.

16411. I find in this account, "Convent school, £13 10s." Is that the half-yearly payment?—No, £21 10s. is the half-yearly payment; but you will see there is another entry of £9. It was the sum that lent the money to the trustees, and the balance is made up of the interest.

16412. What is the remuneration the nuns get from the trust fund?—£55 a year.

16413. The nuns lent some of the money spent on the construction of the boys' schools?—They did.

16414. And the £9 half-yearly represents the interest on that?—On the amount of principal at that period due. The principal is paid off periodically, whenever there is a sufficient fund in hand for the purpose.

16415. On May 1st, 1878, there is charged £143 12s. 11d., paid to Mr. Cullen for the Christian Brothers. Is that their remuneration for the half-year?—I apprehend it is payment for the half-year, and also for some sundries expended by the Brothers.

16416. The next payment I find to the Brothers is on May 1st, 1879, £146 7s. 3d. Do those two items charged in the 1878 account in reality represent two successive half-yearly payments?—They do, unquestionably.

16417. And about £45 of the entire amount is for sundries, in addition to the ordinary expend?—Quite so.

16418. How many Christian Brothers are employed there?—Either five or six.

16419. I see a charge for trees for the college ground, per Mr. Barry?—These were for the ornamentation and shelter of the ground.

16420. Is there very much of that work, for the proper improvement of the place?—The trustees hold the ground upon which the college is built, under a lease from Lord Grenville, and between the ground and the Grand Canal, there was a canal bank that was waste and very much of a nuisance; the trustees succeeded in obtaining a lease of that from Lord Grenville at some very small rent, and they built a wall round it, and also built upon this canal bank itself.

16421. The other items in the account are of the ordinary kind, rent to Lord Grenville, income tax, cleaning of college, tilth-rentcharge, poor rate, grand jury cess, insurance of college. Then follows another payment for Convent school and interest, and that brings up the total to £464. That is an account, it appears to me, for the half-year, except that in the debt also there is something more than the half-year's payments.

16422. Dr. HART.—The accounts do not appear to be made out yearly, or half-yearly; but still pretty regularly?—Quite so.

16423. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—The last account is

Ans. 25, 1850.
Mr. William
Mooney.

not made out on the half-yearly system, but goes down to January, 1850?—Yes.

16434. Dr. HART—That, in fact, covers a period of nearly two years. Is there a meeting of the trustees to pass the accounts?—Invariably.

16435. Are they at regular intervals?—Yes.

16436. The accounts do not show that?—They may not appear to be squared up to a particular day, but they are passed twice a year.

16437. One of these accounts is from April, 1873, to January, 1880, three half years?—Perhaps so. But it does not probably continue the account down to the date of it.

16438. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—The tot of the disbursements is for the whole period, but the tot of the receipts is not?—Because one of the trustees practically did not pay any rent during that period.

16439. One of these accounts shows that in January, 1880, Mr. Cullen was paid, on account, a sum of £200 for the Christian Brothers, and then it is stated in a note that there had been omitted by error the account paid to the Christian Brothers on November, 1st, 1878, £144 15s. 6d., which seems make the account overdrawn and due £310?—I do not profess to be able to give an explanation of these accounts, except happening to be there on two or three occasions, I have nothing whatever to do with them. I know they are very accurately rendered and certified.

16440. Are there any Protestant children attending these schools?—I understand there is but one.

16441. Is that in the male school?—Yes.

16442. When the trustees were making the arrangement for the constitution of the school, was it part of the scheme that there should be suitable premises?—I know from the answers of the Christian Brothers there are not premises given.

16443. With regard to the Convent infant school, was that built out of the funds of the charity?—Either in whole or part it was. I know the cost of the female school was £2,082 6s.

16444. Have the nuns a lease of the ground on which that school is built?—They have. I was concerned in the preparation of it.

16445. When was that lease made?—I do not remember the date, but I am aware that the Christian Brothers' Schools, and all, are held under Lord Greville, as lease.

16446. Is it a long lease?—Speaking from recollection, 91 years.

16447. How many teachers are engaged in the intermediate school, where the 25 boys are taught?—Only one, the Rev. Mr. Brady.

16448. Is he one of the curates?—No, but he reads with the curates. His duties are confined exclusively to teaching in that school.

16449. Are the pupils in that school all intended for the Church?—Primarily, but not exclusively.

16450. Dr. CURRAN.—How many schools are there under the trust?—There are three.

16451. Where is the Intermediate school held?—It is in portion of the same building as which the Christian Brothers conduct their school.

16452. Dr. HART.—The Christian Brothers' school is nearly a primary school?—It is a primary school.

16443. That is the school in which there is a Protestant boy attending?—Yes.

16444. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—Do you know what payment the Rev. Mr. Brady receives?—I do not.

16445. Dr. CURRAN.—Are the payments for the Intermediate school included in the payment to the Christian Brothers?—No. That is quite distinct. In all probability the payment to the Rev. Mr. Brady appears in some of those accounts.

16446. How long has the Intermediate school been established?—For several years.

16447. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—Is that school altogether a day school?—Every one of the schools is a day school.

16448. How much did the school buildings cost?—Between £5,000 and £7,000.

16449. Has that been yet paid off?—That has been almost paid off, so far as the contractor is concerned; but there is a debt due by the trustees, the balance of a mortgage—about £450.

16450. Do the trustees annually pay off whatever they can afford out of their surplus income, after providing for the maintenance of the institutions?—They pay off something, whenever the accumulations are sufficiently large to allow of any payment of principal.

16451. In the accounts the accumulations are put to the credit of the trust?—They are.

16452. In the account for 1874 I find an item of £19 interest paid to the convent?—That was the half year's interest at four per cent on £950, the principal sum then due.

16453. About £570 was expended, in the year 1874, in the payment of interest and ordinary expenses?—There were some exceptional payments in that year. The building of a new wall for instance, and school repairs.

16454. Of course, as soon as the debt is paid off, the sums, which now accumulate for paying off principal, will be available for educational purposes?—Most certainly.

16455. Do you think that there is a growing demand for intermediate education in Mullingar, which will require the expenditure of that surplus?—I should think there is, decidedly. The boys come there from a considerable distance to avail themselves of the education given in the college, and I have no doubt if it were in the power of the trustees to extend it, there would be a demand for education corresponding with the increased income.

16456. Does the college contain accommodation for boarders as well as day boys?—No. It is portion of the same building.

16457. Dr. CURRAN.—How many trustees are there?—There are five trustees, the Most Rev. Thomas Kelly, the Rev. Joseph Ceyne, Sir Walter Nugent, Bart., Edward MacKewy, esq., and the Most Rev. James Donnelly. Under the trusts of the will the trustees must always be two bishops, one priest, and two laymen.

16458. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—Do you know whether any money is given to National schools under that will at present?—I am sure there is not. In fact I think the Christian Brothers have destroyed the National schools. There is no male National school in the town at all.

Mr. T. O'NEAL, S. B. AV., M.A., examined.

Mr. Thomas S.
Shaw, M.A.

16459. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—You are the master of the Curranian Grammar School. When were you appointed?—On the 1st May, 1857.

16460. Is the school now in existence?—Yes, it is partially, and only since the 1st July. Very singularly, showing the impetus that the Intermediate Education Act has given to the country, I was asked for the first time for the past six years to have pupils on the 1st July last, and I have now ten pupils who have come to the school purely to prepare for the Intermediate Examinations. For six years previously I never had an application to take a day pupil. Boarders were out of the question. I was anxious that this Commission would send their inspector to visit the premises, in order that he might confirm my statement that the school is totally unfit to receive boarders. When I first entered on the appointment, I made use of the schoolroom; but did not find it either commodious or healthy. The school must be open for day pupils as long as I hold the appointment; so, under the endowment, the school is a foundation granted by an act of the present Marquis of Bath, Lord Weymouth.

JULY 26, 1882.
MR THOMAS S.
SHAW, K.C.

16461. What is the endowment?—A very small one, only £70 a year; but it ought to be much larger, for it was evidently the intention of the founder that it should be commensurate with the estate.

16462. When was the School founded?—In 1711, by Lord Weymouth, at the suggestion of the good Bishop of Keno. Two schools of a superior class were then founded for the education of the youth of Ireland—Kilkeny College and Carrickmacross School.

16463. The original founder named a certain sum for the endowment of Carrickmacross School?—He did, but he secured it on two townlands, which at that time paid exactly £70 a year, and he gave a very extraordinary liberty to the master, to go in and distraint, if the £70 was not paid. Those two townlands are now paying to the estate about £470 a year.

16464. Are there any school premises attached to the endowment?—There were no premises originally, but the schoolmaster's house; subsequently a one story school-room was built, for the reception of day boys. I believe it is provided by the charter that the master should have liberty to receive boarders, but it must have been intended that they should board outside and attend the school.

16465. Are the premises you have described still in your possession as master of the school?—Yes.

16466. In what condition are they?—Very bad.

16467. Are you able to reside in them?—I reside in the master's house, which is the only building that is a second one. It was standing 170 years ago, and was then given as a residence for the master.

16468. Where do you carry on the classes that now attend?—In what was formerly used as a refectory, or dining room, for the boarders.

16469. That is not in a ruinous condition?—No. That is like a private room attached to the residence.

16470. Are all your present pupils Protestants?—All Protestants. I do not think a Roman Catholic would attend the school. Not that they have any prejudice to me, or to the school, but purely in obedience to the hierarchy of their Church.

16471. As a matter of principle?—Entirely so. I believe, if they had liberty to attend a Protestant master, I would have their attendance as freely as anyone in the kingdom. I live on very good terms with my Roman Catholic neighbours. I think they regret that they cannot make use of the school.

16472. Is there a Roman Catholic school in the locality?—No, there are only two National schools in the town.

16473. Are there Christian Brothers' schools there?—No.

16474. Is there a Convent school for girls?—No. I think that if there was a class of people in the town and neighbourhood sufficiently able to pay, they would long since have established such a school. There is not, however, a population above the wants of an ordinary National school.

16475. You think a primary education supplies their wants?—Of course many now will be stimulated to try and do something better, but they were supposed to be content with a plain education.

16476. Your evidence is, not so much that they ought to be content with a primary education, as that they seemed to be content with it?—Exactly.

16477. There are a good many Roman Catholic shopkeepers in the town?—A good many.

16478. And there are farmers in the vicinity?—Yes, but only small farmers. The average holdings are about sixteen or twenty acres. Very few hold over fifty acres.

16479. You do not find it necessary to employ assistants in teaching?—No. It would not pay me to do so.

16480. What do you consider a fair rate of fees?—£8 8s a year.

16481. What does your course include?—Everything necessary for a University or mercantile education, and to prepare for the Civil Service.

16482. Dr. HART.—It is now twenty-three years since you were appointed master of the Carrickmacross school. For some years I believe there was a tolerably good school?—Fairly so, for nine years. I had as many as thirty-five boarders at one time, but after some years the numbers fell off in fact, as parents visited the school. A parent would say, "Now, Mr. Shaw, my boys have been with you two or three years, I would like to see your school-room." I was then obliged to show the school-room; otherwise I never would do so. One gentleman who had three boys at the school said, "I had no idea this was the place in which my boys were studying," and unfortunately he added, before the rest of the boys, that he would be obliged on the moment to give me notice of their withdrawal, which of course was very injurious to me.

16483. Was there any provision made, when the school was founded, for keeping the school-house in proper repair?—The provision was that the master was to do everything. He had both to teach and keep the school in repair for the £70 a year.

16484. And the latter part has not been attended to?—It could not be done.

16485. Mr. O'BRYEN.—How any overseer; certainly been had with the present Marquis of Eath on the subject?—I do not know. I never held any, and I do not know what communication has been had with his agents. He is prejudiced against the school. The objects for which the school was founded were not attained by it. His treasury are not availing themselves of it. In consequence of that, the agents decline to interfere—they always meet me with a "Can't be done!"

16486. Dr. HART.—The school-room is the same which existed in 1711, when the school was founded, and nobody has been bound to repair it all that time?—No, except the master. It is built against a bank of earth twelve or fourteen feet over the level of the school-room. The slipping of the yards come down causing a dreadful nuisance. The walls are quite green. My predecessor put up a wall-boarding to hide the appearance. It is in such a state that I do not make use of it.

16487. You are appointed for life?—For as long as I choose to hold the place, I suppose.

16488. I believe there was no provision for retirement?—Retirement? None.

16489. Dr. CURRY.—At one time you had thirty-five boarders—did any of them enter college?—Yes.

16490. Were any of them distinguished there?—In my time not more than three of them entered Trinity College, one of whom is now a clergyman. Two of my pupils got second honours in College.

16491. What were those that did not enter Trinity College intended for?—Some for the army, others for the medical profession—another entered the ecclesiastical. They succeeded in their examinations for those, but they did not remain with me long enough to give them for distinctions in college. Three years was a very long time for pupils to continue at the school.

16492. From what class do your present day boys come?—Traders and farmers.

16493. Are they intended for professions?—I think the two senior boys are intended for the medical profession.

16494. Mr. O'BRYEN.—You think that it is the Intermediate Act which has brought them to the school?—I do, indeed. I think if they established school scholarships in connexion with it, it might be some stimulus to the attendance of day boys—£10 a year, or something like that.

16495. Dr. HART.—The only accommodation these boys have in the school-room you speak of?—I am making use of the refectory, or dining-room for the boarders, as the school-room. I could not make use of the school-room. After studying in it for ten years it brought on illness. Sir Dominic Corrigan and Dr. Hudson stated that my bad health was brought on by the unhealthy atmosphere I breathed.

16496. The present school-room is a comparatively good room?—It is, but it is rather low in the ceiling. It is one of the buildings erected by a previous master, seventy years ago.

16467. Dr. CURRIE.—The original intention was that there should be a day school kept?—Yes, for the children of tenants on the estate.

16468. Then, you could hardly expect the Marquis of Bath to lay out money on it for boarders?—I never applied personally to Lord Bath; I did to his agents.

16469. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—What the locality requires is a good day school?—I would say it would be well to do away with these second-rate endowments altogether. They were of use at one time, when gentlemen had a difficulty in finding a place of education for their children.

16490. Dr. CURRIE.—Did the boarders you had come from any considerable distance?—They did, some from about ten miles distant, and others from the north of the county Antrim.

16501. And from the county Monaghan, perhaps?—No; I was better known in the counties of Down and Antrim.

16502. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—As school endowment, that school, when a boarding school, did not do much service to the neighbourhood?—Certainly not. That it was ever of use would not be allowed by the agents to the estate, but they did not attach any value to me for that. When Lord Bath visited his estates, for the first time, in 1866, I thought it was only proper that I, on behalf of the school, should address him, and I claimed for the school some credit, as of use and benefit to the neighbourhood. Mr. Trench, the agent at that time, said, "You must show me what you have in the address to Lord Bath." I did so, and he drew his pen through that paragraph, saying he would not allow that to be represented, or he should be obliged to contradict it.

16503. You spoke of the little utility, to the neighbourhood, of small endowments such as this. How would you suggest, from your long and melancholy experience, to employ these endowments?—I think a good class of intermediate school might be started.

16504. Do you mean a day school?—Yes; but one would not succeed in Carrickmacross, unless entirely Roman Catholic. The few Protestants there would not make a school.

16505. Is the majority of the population Roman Catholic?—Quite the majority. The others are only a fractional part of the population.

16506. Always respecting your vested interest in the £70 a year for your life, which nobody would think of making a suggestion about, would you think it well if small endowments of that kind were devoted to giving prizes in the form of school scholarships?—Something of that kind would be very good. It would stimulate education.

16507. Do you not think it would bring into the master's pocket an amount of fees from scholars that would very soon make up for the application of the £70 to prizes?—Very likely it would. As a boarding-school Carrickmacross never could compete, and never did, with the larger endowments.

Captain GEORGE S. DYER, R.E., recalled.

Captain George S. Dyer, R.E.

16508. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—You wish to give evidence relative to the Ralph Macklin school?—Yes. The first point, to which I will call attention, is, that the transfer of the Ralph Macklin school from Camden-street to Moleworts-street is illegal in two particulars. In the preface to "The Law relating to Charities in Ireland," published by Mr. F. A. P. Macfilden, barrister, this passage occurs:—

"I beg to thank the Commissioners of Charitable Donations and Bequests for Ireland for the protracted information which I have been enabled to acquire in reference to the working of their Board, and I am indebted to their Secretaries for the facilities afforded me for that purpose."

And at page 134 he says:—

"In all cases in which the trustees of any charity are empowered to sell under any of the sections of the Statutes 30 & 31 Vic. c. 84, and 34 & 35 Vic. c. 102 (which sections 1, 3, 9 of Statute 30 & 31 Vic. c. 84, and sections 6, 7, 11 of Statute 34 & 35 Vic. c. 102), where the number of trustees were originally more than one and less than six, the written consent of the full number of trustees must be obtained and lodged with the Commissioners; but if the original number of the trustees be more than six, the written consent of two-thirds of the number will be held sufficient for such purposes; provided always that this majority be never less than six (see 30 & 31 Vic. c. 84, sec. 10)." "

Now, in the case of the Ralph Macklin schools there were three trustees, namely, William Digges La Touche, esq., Alexander Penker, esq., and the Rev. Macarver Bradshaw. The two first-named were promoters of the transfer, but the Rev. Macarver Bradshaw not only has never written his consent, but has written and published in the newspapers, over and over again, his disapproval of the transfer.

16509. Then you first objected to the transfer on a charge of illegality?—That is one. The next is as to the action of the Commissioners of Charitable Bequests, three of whom are required by law to approve of anything of the kind under their hand and seal. They allowed me to appear before them on this matter, and I objected, first, that the transfer of a school for the poor, from a poor district such as Camden-street, to a rich district such as that round Moleworts-street, was perfectly illegal; secondly, that the transfer of the school from a freehold in Camden-street to a leasehold of twenty-one years, at 1s. a year, was illegal; and thirdly, that the transfer of a school for the poor in Camden-street, with about £150 in lease to profits, to a school that was in debt upwards of £200, was also illegal. These three points they decided were legal.

16510. Then, as I understand, in addition to the first point about the non-consent of the third trustee, Mr. Bradshaw, you also rely on those three grounds?—Yes. Those three grounds were incept before the Commissioners of Charitable Bequests, but there is a very important point that was not before them at that time. I am now about to state a document registered in the Registry of Deeds Office. In November, 1869, the trustees of St. Ann's Parochial, Boarding, Day, and Sunday Schools, of St. Ann's parish, transferred, from the Charitable Manual Loan Fund Society, the sum of £2,100 on mortgage on the school. The lease of St. Ann's school was made by the select vestry of St. Ann's parish. The trustees of a school are a fixed body, while the select vestry is a movable body. The select vestry is not composed of the same individuals every year. You will see that the £2,100 was lent to the trustees of St. Ann's school.

16511. Is your charge this, that they borrowed the money, nominally on behalf of the school, on the security of the school property, and did not devote the proceeds of the loan to the school?—Exactly. The money was expended on the Moleworts Hall which is not used for teaching purposes at all, but for concerts, annual meetings, and penny readings.

16512. What is the next ground of objection?—The next is this.—In the evidence of Dean Dickinson this passage occurs:—

"I have, what position do you hold with reference to the Ralph Macklin schools?—I do not hold any official position with respect to them, but they are now situated in St. Ann's parish of which I am rector."

On the 31st April, 1874, the Governors and Governesses of the Highgate Asylum, with the consent of St. Ann's and St. Andrew's rectors, and a proposal was made to them by the Select Vestry of St. Ann's parish, and not by the trustees of St. Ann's Parochial, Boarding, Day, and Sunday School. That proposal states:—

"They will give to the governors of Ralph Macklin's School, a lease for twenty-one years of the premises at Moleworts-street, known hitherto as St. Ann's Parochial,

Jan. 26, 1874.
Captain George
S. Dyer, &c.

Boarding, Day and Sunday School, at a rent of 1s. per annum. Secondly.—The School Vestry will keep the premises in thorough repair, externally and internally. Thirdly.—They will further pay £150 per annum towards the salary of the master and mistress and educational expenses. Fourthly.—They are willing to consent that the school shall be known as Ralph Macklin's School, and shall be under the exclusive authority and control of the Governors of Ralph Macklin's School as stated by the Deemee in Charge.

And yet, in his evidence, Dean Dickinson, who is not a governor, says —“I catched there, as one of the clergymen of the parish,” and in reply to a further question —“£500. In fact you superintend the religious instruction, and also exercise a general supervision over the schools?” he answered, “Yes.” I may add that the Right Hon. William Brooke, who was a governor, stated he was never summoned to that meeting, and that he washed his hands out of the matter.

16513. Then the point is, that Dean Dickinson, not being officially connected with the school, and having no properly constituted authority over it, does exercise a good deal of control?—To be sure. The next point is, that Dean Dickinson, when stating who the governors of Ralph Macklin's Schools are, left out altogether the ladies, and I believe I was the first person that brought this point before the governors.

16514. Are the ladies now admitted to a share in the government?—It appears that they were, for instance, on the 21st April, 1874.

16515. Is there any further ground on which you object to the transfer of the Ralph Macklin School?—Yes. Because the estates of the three parishes were named in the will as assets of the Government and Governors of Ralph Macklin's School, it was intimated that it was to be under their control, and that it was to be localised within a certain area, that is, within the area, as it were, of the three parishes. That was never intended. The minutes of a meeting, held on January 16, 1855, at which the Archbishop of Dublin was in the chair, record —

“The Committee appointed to look out for a site for a school-house are requested to visit the Liberties of Dublin, and report if any eligible site can be had in that part of the city to build, especially in St. Luke's parish, St. Nicholas’

A site for building having been pointed out in the neighbourhood of St. Patrick's Dunn's Hospital, which is in St. Mark's parish, the Board, at a subsequent meeting, resolved:—

“That Major Woodward, . . . be appointed a sub-committee to collect any facts for the opinion of the Board at their next meeting as to the expediency of erecting a school-house in that quarter.”

16516. The fourth objection which you have to the school is its location in a central, and quasi fashionable, place, instead of in a poor locality?—Not exactly, but I submit to the Commissioners facts, which I say are greater than inferences. Dean Dickinson says, the fact of the three curates having been appointed to erect the Governors and Governors, gives rise to the inference that the school must be close to them.

But I show that, in fact, the school was opened in Fleet-street, which is in St. Andrew's parish, and that ten years, until they could find a site on which to build a school. They tried, as I have shown in the first instance, in St. Mark's parish. They then tried in Cork-street, in St. Catherine's parish. They next tried the Coombe, which is in St. Luke's parish, and on the 17th March, 1855, the Governors resolved:—

“That the Committee be requested to communicate with the clergymen of the north side of the city.”

16517. Is there any other point to which you desire to call attention?—This very important point that the religious instruction given in the school was not to be confined to that in consonance with the Established Church. Now both Dean Dickinson and Mr. La Touche stated that every child that comes to that school is required, not only to read the scriptures, but also to learn the Church Catechism. They say that in that school there are twelve children who are what are called Protestant Dissenters. Now, in the Church Catechism, this question and answer occurs:—

“Who gave you that name?—My godfathers and godmothers in my baptism.”

By requiring those Dissenters to repeat that formula, they actually teach the children to tell lies.

16518. What is your next point?—That the curates were not responsible for the instruction given.

16519. What do you say with regard to that?—I say that the Governors and Governors of the Magdalen Asylum are the responsible persons.

16520. Have you any other point to notice?—Previous to 1874, St. Ann's parish was well provided, with boys' and girls' and infant parochial schools of its own, and moreover there is the Church Education Society's school close by. It appears in St. Ann's Parochial Magazine that Dean Dickinson stated in answer to Mr. Young, the Inspector under the former Endowed Schools Commission:—

“I have a boys' and girls' and infant school; and that is quite enough for this parish.”

And yet Dean Dickinson transfers Ralph Macklin's school from Camden-street—and only for the purpose that the children should be qualified to compete for Government posts. Moreover the master of the school as it existed in Camden-street, was dismissed. He had been there eleven years, and got the highest character from the Governors. A meeting of five gentlemen, viz., Dean Dickinson, his two curates, and two laymen, was held on 9th February, 1874. They sent for the master, and said they were going to transfer the school, and must dispense with his services, but that notwithstanding he was a very good man, and that they would give him six months' pay. The Dean told him he would recommend him for a country school. In the school in Moleworth-street there is no accommodation for the master and mistress, while the master and mistress in Camden-street had a residence on the spot. I think it is hardly so that I am not allowed a longer time to bring these various matters before the Commissioners.

Mr. Robert Baker.

Mr. ROBERT SEXTON, readied.

16521. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—You are connected with St. Ann's parish, and have an explanation to make?—Yes. The £5,000, that Captain Dyer refers to, was borrowed to build the Moleworth Hall. The school was built prior to that, and paid for by the subscriptions of the parishes—namely, in 1848.

16522. The Moleworth Hall is not a building for educational purposes?—It is not.

16523. There is an allegation that the money, borrowed for building the Moleworth Hall, has been made a burden on the educational premises. Is it charged on them?—Only in this way, that the whole of the ground, upon which the Moleworth Hall and the school stand, belongs to the parish, and the money could not be raised without including the school-house in the security.

16524. That places a certain burden upon the school premises?—I would say not, because we have had them all valued since.

16525. Is the Moleworth Hall, by itself, value for the amount due on it?—It is value for considerably more. The full valuation is £5,000, of which £2,500 is calculated as the value of the Moleworth Hall.

16526. What is the amount due?—About £1,700.

16527. Dr. HARR.—Does the land on which it stands belong to the school?—It belongs to the parish.

It was purchased in the Insolvent Estates Court for parochial purposes.

16538. I suppose you have very little to say to the management of the school?—I have nothing to do with it, except that, as secretary to the Select Vestry, I pay £150 a year to the governors of the school.

Jan 25, 1858.

Mr Robert
Seaton.

The Very Rev. HERMULES H. DICKINSON, D.D., Dean of the Chapel Royal, recalled.

Very Rev.
Hermules H.
Dickinson, D.D.

16539. Mr. O'BRIEN—You wish to make an explanation?—I thank nearly every statement Capt. Dyer made in narrative.

16540. Without making such an observation, select such statements as you think material?—Well, the statement about the governors of the school. Three of the governors were at the meeting at which the communication was received from the Board of Charitable Bequests, and also from the Select Vestry, and the whole matter was decided; and as the chairman of that day, I find the signature of "William Brooke," whom Capt. Dyer stated to have had nothing to do with the matter. As to the question of legality, that was all entered into by the Board of Charitable Bequests. They had the whole matter before them.

16541. Have you any remark to make as to the removal of the master?—He was removed, by the governors, as incompetent.

16542. Was there any complaint made by him?—He objected naturally to being removed, and Capt. Dyer also did so for him. I ceased to be a governor when I ceased to hold the curacy of St. Ann's.

16543. Have the amounts which it was agreed St. Ann's parish should contribute to the Ralph Maclach School been regularly paid?—They have. The Commissioners of Charitable Bequests add their difficulty was in understanding how the parish could give such liberal terms, and they even asked if there was anything behind the proposition.

16544. I believe Captain Dyer is quite accurate in saying that the learning of the Church Catechism is exacted from every child?—Mr. Le Touche thought so the other day; but he is not exactly accurate. The master, who is present, says he never requires the learning of the Church Catechism from the children of Nonconformist parents.

16545. Or of Roman Catholic parents?—I think there is only one Roman Catholic child in the school. The master tells me he does not require the catechism to be learned formally. But I catechise in the schools a certain number of children, and I cannot undertake to say that I eliminate all distinctive doctrine from my teaching.

16546. Have you anything further to add?—Having known the school when it was in Ship street, and under my government as curate of St. Ann's, and having visited it also in Camden-street, I can say that it is now more flourishing than ever in my recollection, and that goes back twenty-five years.

Mr. WALTER KEANE, examined.

Mr. Walter
Keane.

16547. Mr. O'BRIEN—You are the head master of the Ralph Maclach school?—I am.

16548. How many under masters are there in the school?—Two under masters, and a French master.

16549. Are there any girls attending the school?—There are; in the girls' school.

16550. Has that a separate staff?—Quite a separate staff.

16551. How many boys are there attending the school now?—To-day we have forty-seven.

16552. From what localities in town do those children come?—About one-third are from the parish of St. Ann; the others come from various districts, including a good many if not all the boys who attended Camden-street school before the removal.

16553. You mean the boys from the locality?—The boys from the school itself came originally, but they have gone away now, inasmuch as the school has been opened for four or five years in its present position.

16554. Do you still get boys from Camden-street?—

We do, and the very boys who would attend the school if still in Camden-street.

16555. With regard to the teaching of the Church Catechism, is that enforced?—We have one Roman Catholic boy in the school, and he has never been asked a single question in the Church Catechism. During religious instruction the children go into a distinct classroom, but the Roman Catholic boy never goes in. We never asked him to do so, and never will. As to reading the Bible, every boy reads in. They never objected.

16556. Is it the rule of the school that every boy is to read the Bible?—It is, and I have never known an instance of a boy refusing.

16557. If a boy did refuse, would he be disqualified?—I think so.

16558. And so far the school is denominational?—It is.

[The Commissioners adjourned.]

FORTY-SECOND DAY.—MONDAY, APRIL 12, 1860; 11 O'CLOCK, A.M.

Apr 12, 1860.

At the Office of the Commissioners of Charitable Donations and Bequests for Ireland, No. 2, Kildare-place, Dublin.

Present:—The EARL of ROSSE, Chairman, LORD RANDOLPH CHURCHILL, M.P.; LORD JUSTICE FITZGERSON; ANDREW SEARLE HART, Esq., LL.D.; and ARTHUR HILL CURTIS, Esq., LL.D.; with JAMES CREED MURKIN, Esq., LL.D., Secretary.

Mr. WILLIAM GUNN, M.A., examined.

Mr. William
Gunn, M.A.

16559. CHAIRMAN.—You are one of the Secretaries to the Commissioners of Charitable Donations and Bequests in Ireland, and have looked into the circumstances connected with the property of the Beaufort Charity?—Yes.

16560. We have had some evidence before us as to the way in which the land was let for building. Can you explain exactly how it stands?—As far as I could see from reading the evidence of Mr. Moffat, the agent of the Commissioners of Donations and Bequests, two impressions must have been left on the mind of your Commission: First, that I, as Secretary, took too much upon myself in directing the agent, particularly in reference to the allowance of taxes; and next, that there had been a general want of care in making lettings, and that the property had not been made to realise what it should have done. However, the only course I can make for our agent, who is present, is that he was taken perfectly unawares.

LORD JUSTICE FITZGERSON.—The matter arising

April 15, 1892.
Mr. William
Gordon, M.A.

upon Mr. Maffett's evidence, upon which we wish principally to have your assistance, in as to the general mode of making lettings. The matter about the taxes is merely an item.

16551. CHURCHMAN.—As to the lettings, it seemed to us that large plots were let for building at low rates, other parts being let at a much higher rate.—To begin with, I may state that the very character and standing of the noble lords and gentlemen who compose this Commission should per se be a guarantee that nothing would be done negligently or imperfectly. I will also say that if these gentlemen were themselves the beneficial owners of the property they could not have taken more, and probably would have taken less, trouble in the lettings. Every step in the whole transaction was referred to them, and they did what is not usual, unless in matters of great importance—they referred to sub-committees of their own body to report on each of these lettings.

16552. LORD JERVIS FIRST-GROOM.—Perhaps it would be more convenient to proceed regularly through the rental, beginning with letting No. 1. Can you tell us when the Commissioners became the managers of this property?—It was transmitted to them, as a donation hereditaria, under the 11th section of the Act of 1844, having been previously vested in the Board established by the Statute of Geo. III.; and I have no doubt that they would be very much delighted to get rid of it.

16553. This is a very valuable property. Why should your Board be anxious "to get rid of it"?—I mean to put it into other hands. In 1847, when beginning to make lettings, the Board raised the Stemmen to report on this charity. Accordingly, a report was prepared giving the history of the charity from 1801 down to 1847. It is in Mr. Maundrell's handwriting, and was adopted by the Board. The property had suffered from great embarrassments, both by the accumulation of fines to the Archbishop of Dublin, and mortgages upon it. In fact, it was borne down by so many charges that, at one time, it was very close being evicted. However, by the greatest care and nursing, the Board raised it from being an embarrassed property to produce its present rental. When the charges were partly paid off a suggestion was made to put the charity into operation. The Board likes to see its position very clearly before putting a charity into operation—not to do it by halves, if in a few years it could be put into operation altogether. Hence the Board called for the report, which is as follows:—

"On June 26th, 1801, Peter Bestwood, of Dublin, made his will, leaving, after some legacies, the residue of his property, which he valued at £200 per annum, to establish a charity school of female orphan children, not less than fifteen, in the words of the testator, 'to present and dedicate them to my Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, Who has bought us with His most precious blood, and to give it a proper name, as well seem proper with the assistance and governance of said charity school; and it is my will and wish that at every three months there will be a public exhortation to the children, and that they be well instructed, and with singing, and when come to a proper age to put apprentice to some business, and into Protestant families.' He nominated as executors and governors of this charity school, Messrs. McDuff and Hume, Ministers of Mary's Abbey Meeting House, and likewise the Minister of Waterbury's Church, and of St. Peter's Church, and of St. Nicholas Within, if the said charity school be in said parish, and their executors until the day of time." 1800, June 24.—The testator died 1807, May 12.—Administration was granted to Thomas Bertrand, brother of testator 1807, Nov. 5.—The subject was brought before the late Board, and, it appearing that the administration, Thomas Bertrand, was endeavouring to convert the estate into money and shew the opinion of the Attorney-General was directed to be obtained. 1807, Nov. 23.—Mr. Attorney-General Seame advised that a bill as administrator it should be filed at once. 1807, Dec. 9.—A bill was filed by the Commissioners accordingly against said Thomas Bertrand, praying for an account, that Thomas Bertrand should pay over the sums received by him, and that the fund should be transferred to the Commissioners to be applied to the charity. 1808, March 25.—A receiver, Mr. Peter Waters, was appointed. 1808, July 8.—A decree was pronounced by the Master of the Rolls, declaring that the charitable trusts should be carried out, and ordering a reference to the Master to take an account. 1810, March 9.—Mr. Waters, having filed, Edward Shaw, esq., was appointed receiver, and continued to act till March, 1847. 1812, Nov. 23.—Master Wootley made his report, but it appears that it was never formally signed by him in consequence of his resignation. In that draft report it was mentioned that the property was worth £210 a year, but subject to a mortgage of £1,000, and that Thomas Bertrand had absconded with a sum of £200. The total amount realized to that date from the estate, after payment of costs and expenses, was £848 10s. 8d., which was subsequently paid over (under an order of Nov. 13, 1812) by the Board's solicitor to the agent of the Archbishop of Dublin, to obtain a renewal of the lease for twenty-one years. It appears that the sum demanded by the Archbishop for renewal fines was £1,000, the lease having then but three years to run, and that several of the under-tenants agreed to make up a sum of £210 towards it. The solicitor of the Commissioners advanced a sum of £225, and, with the aid of the £848 above mentioned, the fine was accordingly paid, and a renewal executed by the Archbishop to Sir William Wootley, under whose the charity property was held. 1818, Nov. 12.—The receiver Sir William Wootley was not completed till this date, when Sir William Wootley and Marcella Wootley executed a lease for twenty years and three months to Christopher Wilson, Sheriff, then secretary to and on behalf of the Commissioners. The report is here been subsequently assigned to William Peter Mathews, who succeeded as secretary. 1818, Jan. 3.—The mortgage for £1,000 on testator's property (made 1791) was assigned to George Bonaldi, and a sum of £1,375 was advanced to him then due thereon. 1820, March 5.—There appears to have been no steps taken by any Order or Minute of the late Board after presenting this bill, nor was the subject brought before it from March, 1820, for more than twelve years, when the solicitor reported that they had done from 1807 to 1820. 1820, Oct. 28.—A report was made in due form by Master Ball in presence of the decree of 1807, without referring to the receiver's report of 1812, but following it verbatim, and not accounting for any of the losses subsequently recovered during some years. 1821, June 8, 1822, July 24.—Accounts were filed by the receiver, Mr. Shaw. On the first these appeared to be an error of rates due amounting to £205, on the second to £3,377. 1823, January.—A receiver's account was prepared and laid before the Master, but he refused to pass it as the account of such time amounted to £1,000 on a gross rental of £244. 1829.—Proceedings having been taken against the late Board by Mr. Bonaldi, the assignee of the mortgage for £1,000 executed by testator in 1791, and for huge amounts of interest, the Commissioners applied to have the receiver made liable for these errors, and order was continued in his office, it is presumed that he made good the delinquency; but no documents have been found by the secretaries to explain fully these accounts or transactions. 1830, April 1.—The Archbishop of Dublin executed a renewal lease of the premises to Clement Wootley. 1831, Nov. 10.—Clement Wootley executed a renewal of the premises to the Commissioners only. It should be observed that these accounts to have been no longer directing a transfer of the testator's property to the Commissioners but, after the decree to account, and the appointment of a receiver, they seem to have had some renewal from that time made to their secretary, as then testator. The first trace of this is found in a minute of 1820, but, as there were no minutes entered during thirteen years, and no particulars are given in those which were made, it is impossible to trace exactly the manner in which the property had been vested in the Commissioners. The above renewal of 1831 would seem to be the first made to them directly. 1831, March 26.—The receiver was discharged, and his last account passed, showing a balance of £691. The Charity proceedings then ceased, but Mr. Shaw continued to act as agent till 1843. Copies of these accounts cannot now be found in the office, but from other documents it would appear that the receipts from the estate for twenty-one years were absorbed by the payment of interest and repairs of some portion of reserved lands to the Archbishop, and of very heavy costs to the solicitors, which were largely recovered by several bills having been filed against the Commissioners by tenants and others. It also appears that all receipts and payments of the balances and costs were made through the solicitors, so that no record of them is preserved in the office; nor are there any bills of costs forthcoming and 1825. It may here be remarked that where receipts and payments are not actually made by ledgers in the bank, and drafts from the Commissioners on the bank, they do not appear at all in the accounts of the office. Thus the

was paid in or through the solution do not appear, nor the same paid to the Archbishop, nor the same borrowed by the Commissioners to discharge the mortgage to the Archbishop. The system deserves serious consideration. 1833.—The surplus rents having been created, a sum of £1,192 stock was placed in the hands of the Commissioners, being the first year that appears to have reached their hands directly. Subsequent judgments were made, in 1843 and 1844, of 1845 and 1847. 1848, October 16.—George Rowland assigned the mortgage and various dues thereon to Richard Atkinson. 1848.—On the death of Mr. Shaw, Mr. Thomas Connolly was appointed agent to the Commissioners. 1848, September 21.—2½ months having been taken out for more than fifteen years it was found extremely difficult to arrange with the Archbishop, and the Commissioners after much negotiation were compelled to offer the very high terms of £3,125. As the Commissioners had not that sum at their command in this charity, it was arranged that they should pay £1,000 in hand, and that the remaining £2,125 should be charged as a mortgage on the property, with interest at 4 per cent., and accordingly a number of deeds were executed to give proper legal effect to this arrangement. 1848, February 27.—In further pursuance of above arrangement the outstanding mortgage for £1,000, vested in Mr. Richard Atkinson, was paid off, and assigned to the Archbishop, as father security. The property continued to be managed by the agent of the Commissioners, and the interest lodged to their credit, from which the interest due to the Archbishop was discharged, and payments were also made in instalments on 10th of the principal. 1854, April 23.—The mortgage debt having been reduced to £80,548, but the interest for amounting to £1,033, it was arranged to get a renewed guarantee a mortgage for the aggregate sum of £1,033. 1858, May 6.—A second having been then obtained, and several others were taken out for several years up to this date from the Archbishop to Miss Walsley, and from Miss Walsley by direction of the Commissioner to Mr. Carroll, as agent for the Archbishop, to secure the mortgage debt. 1859, May 6.—Mr. Carroll having given notice that the mortgage to the Archbishop must be paid off, on which time remained due altogether about £2,411, the Commissioners arranged to borrow a sum of £2,400 from Messrs. Munnell at 6 per cent. reducible to 5, and to execute a mortgage to them for that amount, and the debt due to the Archbishop was duly paid. 1859, May 6.—A renewal was obtained, the proper deeds were executed, and it was stipulated that the Commissioners should continue to receive the rents, and should invest the surplus income, after payment of expenses and interest, in Government Stock, so as to accumulate a fund for payment of the principal £2,400 to the new mortgage, the Messrs. Munnell. 1863.—The reserve fund so accumulated, having reached the sum of £1,743 Government New Three per Cent., the Commissioners applied to Messrs. Munnell and received from them permission to apply as stock as might be necessary to obtain a perpetuity of the property instead of the previous accumulative system of Government bonds, so that the Commissioners would be in a better position to make loans, and take advantage of the increasing value of the property. 1866, February 22.—Accordingly the renewal due for such perpetuity was fixed by the Ecclesiastical Commissioners at £1,341 3s., and the Archbishop made a de facto grant to the Messrs. Munnell, who in turn made a de facto grant to the Messrs. Munnell, they executing a deed of assignment to the Commissioners stating that they held and possessed, subject to the provisions for redemption in the deed of mortgage of May 6, 1859, and also undertaking not to call in the principal sum, till the year 1892, if the interest was regularly paid. It is now possible, for the first time, after a lapse of sixty years, for the Commissioners to obtain a clear view of the position of the property, and the prospects of the charity. The value of the premises has considerably increased owing to the general improvement of the neighbourhood of Portland, and nearly all the houses and lands have been set at enhanced prices. The gross rental now amounts to £893 3s. 10d. The perpetuity had rent is £190 6s. The profit rent is £704 17s. 10d. Some of this will not be available for a short time, as where land has been set for building, it is used to allow a year or one and a half years' rent free. Only one plot of building land is vacant, it is at present occupied temporarily, at a rent of £25; but as it is valued at £20, the profit rent may be expected to rise to £215 17s. 10d. From this must be taken the usual deduction, so that a net income of £399 will be available for the charity, so soon as the perpetuity to the Messrs. Munnell shall have been paid off. The reserve fund for that purpose at present amounts to £368 18s. 4d., New Three per Cent., so that only in the year 1870 the Board will be in possession of the property without encumbrances, and available for establishing an orphan school. The Board, therefore, seeing now clearly their position, may consider which of two courses it will adopt. First, it might seek an arrangement with Messrs. Munnell, postponing the payment of their principal to certain number of years, and attaching the application of only one half the net income to the reserve fund, while the other half should be made at once available for establishing an orphan school. After the extraordinary delay that has taken place, the Board might wish to have a hasty meeting of 1873 £250 per annum were devoted to the charity, it would exceed in amount that which the trustees originally contemplated; and there are some advantages in commencing with an establishment on a scale not too large at first, and so being able to extend it afterwards, when some experience shall have been acquired. Secondly, the Board may decide on postponing the establishment of the charity till after the debate paid off, when it will be perfectly unobscured in the disposition of the fund. In that case, however, it may perhaps think proper to institute preliminary inquiries, and take the opinion of the future governors and others, so as to be able to suggest or approve a comprehensive scheme, and take the necessary proceedings to at least avoid further delay. Many questions will have to be considered and arranged, of no little difficulty, of which the following will at once suggest themselves—1. Whether a building should be erected, and, if so, its character and cost, or whether a house should be taken as a rent, at least for a time, while a portion of the interest might be set apart to purchase a building fund? 2. The site of such a school, having regard to the intentions of the testator, which obviously point to the city of Dublin without specifying any, and to the persons whose names he names as Governors, viz., Werburgh, St. Peter, St. Nicholas, Walsh, and "Miss's Abbey." 3. For what class it should be meant, and what should be the extent and character of the education afforded, having regard to the directions that the pupils are to be put apprentice to some business in Protestant families? 4. What should be the number of pupils? It is spontaneously doubted by the will that it should not be less than fifteen, but the increase of the fund would probably justify more, considering that when the testator directed that there should be seven, he estimated his available income at only about £330. It should, however, be considered, on the other hand, that the expense of food and education are higher now than in 1822. 5. Whether the character of the school should not be essentially Protestant, to carry out the declared wishes of the testator? 6. Who should be the governors and managing committee of what would be a large and important institution, and whether they should be limited to those named in the will? 7. Who should allocate the income and appoint the managers? 8. Whether the Board would retain the property, merely receiving the income to the Governors, or whether it should seek to have it transferred to the Governors? It is obvious that it will take considerable correspondence and consultation to arrive at satisfactory conclusions, and it would certainly afford great facilities if the Board would elect the members of all who might take an interest in the subject, and then employ the information thus obtained to frame and suggest a scheme for adoption, and take proceedings to have it ratified by the Court of Chancery."

That report was submitted to the Board on the 21st May, 1867. The Board decided not to carry the charity into partial operation, but to wait until the mortgage was thoroughly paid off. Then arose the question in reference to the bequest. They first got a very comprehensive survey made by Mr. Loeche, an eminent Civil Engineer, who had an office in Molesworth-street, and he also made a report. Mr. Commissioner Pitt, who himself had property in the neighbourhood, and happened to know this property very well, went most carefully over it with the agent, Mr. Moffett.

1854. The report, as I make it out, of the report, for the period between 1808 and 1867, was that when the testator died the rental was £240, subject to a mortgage of £1,000, that during the assignment of the Court of Chancery and of the Inner Court, for the 35 years down to 1845, the charity was in abeyance; the original mortgage was not paid off, but was largely increased by interest, and a further mortgage for £2,125 was issued, which, besides a payment of £1,000 in hand, only represented amount of several times, increased in amount by the accident to keep them down!—Yes; and the Archbishop was pressing very strongly for the renewal fines, and got a mortgage to secure them.

Mr. W. D. M.
Gates, N. Y.

16555 Can you tell us what became of the rents of the property during all that time?—The minutes under the old Board are the most bold and unsatisfactory you can imagine. Sometimes, when they have brought you up to an important stage of a case, they leave you there. But the solicitors, under the old Board, had far too much power over the property. Everything was referred to them, and the consequence was an enormous accumulation of costs. Sometimes the solicitors would not report for six or seven or eight years. Under the present Board scarcely anything is referred to the solicitors. The present Commissioners take advantage of the Secretaries being barristers to refer matters to them when necessary.

16556 Then the rental from 1808 down to 1845 was substantially absorbed in costs paid to the solicitors of the Board, or incurred in suits which were brought against the Commissioners by their tenants, and by the mortgagees?—Yes.

16557 You are aware that there is a section in one of your existing Acts of Parliament prohibiting the payment of any costs without Treasury sanction?—Yes, the Act of 1845 prohibited payment of costs. We got that modified in the Act of 1857, so that the Commissioners can now pay costs as trustees for the administration of charity property; but all our bills of costs are sent to the Treasury every year for their sanction. The first tabular report in reference to the letting of the "Berkeley Charity" property is dated June 30, 1864. The minute is as follows:—

"Mr. Commissioner Pin read a report upon this property which it was ordered should be placed upon the minutes—'Gardens.'—In company with Mr. Moffatt I have inspected the property belonging to the charity in Clerk and Street and Bloomsfield-avenue, &c. Almost all the houses are old, and will require constant attention to repairs, and some would, I think, require as immediate repairs as yet these in good tenable order. Still, I think they are all worth the Poor Law valuation, and, if let by us at that rate, our tenant would, I expect, have a good profit by setting them in single houses, sufficient to enable him to keep them up, if new placed in good repair. I should say that we did not enter any of the houses, but took a general view of the exterior appearance. Mr. Louche's valuation was so carefully made out, and I have no reason to doubt its correctness as to the fair letting value to a solvent tenant from year to year, the landlord keeping the roof, &c., in repair, as is usual in such cases. Below I give the present rental and the Poor Law valuation, showing the increased rent that should be obtained for the charity; the losses which are about to expire should be covered at the Poor Law valuation, though perhaps a higher sum might be obtained in some cases. There are two lots of building-ground which, I think, should not be let to the present tenants. One of these lots, being part of Scally's holding, has 217 feet of frontage to the Circular-road, with sufficient depth, and should be worth, I think, 4s. 6d. to 5s. 6d. per foot, say £48 16s. per annum. The other has 409 feet of frontage to Bloomsfield-avenue, and I have been told that the opposite side of this avenue has brought over 4s. per foot; which would make £81 16s. per annum. It is in Captain Halken's holding. Mr. Moffatt told me that it had been suggested to him by some of those who had seen Mr. Louche's plan of the old Portobello Gardens, that there should be only 12 houses built in front to the Circular-road, in order to leave a wider space for the entrance to the avenue, which would render the lots in the avenue itself more valuable. I think this suggestion is worthy of consideration. If the value of the avenue should be increased 6d. per foot, it might more than repay the £10 or £12 which would be lost by giving up the sites of the two houses next the avenue in front."

Then follows a schedule showing the rent, Poor Law valuation, and Mr. Louche's valuation of each holding. No. 1, James Kavanagh, present rent, £35; Poor Law valuation, £44; Louche's valuation, £64.

16558 That I see was afterwards lost on the 5th July, 1859, for £45 a year?—Yes. No. 2.—Thomas Greaves, now Burke, present rent, £46; Poor Law valuation, £53; Louche's valuation, £54.

16559 That was lost on the 14th July, 1865, for twenty-one years, at £53 a year?—Yes, exactly the Poor Law valuation, but the rent is to be increased from 1885, a building lease having been since given to the present tenant, Burke. No. 3.—Keddy's holding is a perpetuity.—His letting never came before the Board.—It was made a long time ago. No. 4.—Representatives of Scally—present rent, £109; Poor Law valuation, £111; Louche's valuation, £135. Captain Halken—present rent, £116; Poor Law valuation, £115; Louche's valuation, £180. That letting was afterwards split up into a great many. Therefore the total as brought up by Mr. Pin is—present rental, £435; Poor Law valuation, £488; and Louche's valuation, £761.—The Board adopted that report. Subsequently a joint report upon other portions of the property signed by Judge Langford, Judge FitzGerald, and Mr. Pin, was presented to the Board, December 15, 1864, and is as follows:—

"In pursuance of the Board's minute of the 8th December, instant, appointing us as a sub-committee to consider the best mode of making lettings of this charity property, we beg to report that we held meetings at the Commissioners' Board Room, on Monday 12th and Wednesday 14th instant. Mr. Secretary Gorman attended, and brought under various two classes of cases in which lettings are to be made. The first was that of the Portobello Gardens, which have been unlet since the year 1857, since the expiration of the period at which they were held by Mr. John Scally, who occupied them as tenant for the six months during which Mr. Goodhue who had been ejected for non-payment of rent, was entitled to redeem. This period expired on the 11th of June, 1857. The second class related to property in the neighbourhood of Clarendon-street, held by various persons under leases, five in number, of which three will expire on the 25th March, 1865, and two on the 25th September, 1865. First as regards the Portobello Gardens, the Secretary laid before us two proposals, being the only two received since the gardens were advertised to be let. The first was from Mr. John Hogg, of Westminster-street, dated 16th June, 1864, proposing to take according to plan B, prepared by Mr. Louche, about 143 feet fronting the South Circular-road, extending in front from the main Road at the gate entrance of the gardens to the extended new street (as per map), and measuring from front to rear, about 295 feet, at £28 per year, and undertaking to expend £1,000 in building one or more dwelling-houses on the same. As we are unanimously of opinion that it will be more expedient to let the entire premises to one tenant (if such can be procured), we recommended that the consideration of Mr. Hogg's proposal shall for the present be postponed. The second proposal was from Mr. Samuel H. Bolton, South Bloomsfield-street, and was dated the 26th October, 1864. By it he proposes to become tenant for the ground, known as the Portobello Gardens, South Circular-road, at a rent of £180 per year. He undertakes to enclose the ground and form roadway with main sewer, and lay out the ground for building purposes, and build thereon houses suitable to the neighbourhood, the Board giving him a lease for 600 years. Mr. Bolton with his proposed forwarded plans, showing the class of houses he proposed building, and the cost of widening the ground, building sewer, and forming roadway and approach, he estimated at £100. Having regard to the valuation of these premises made by Mr. Louche, we are of opinion that Mr. Bolton's proposal is inadequate, and ought not to be accepted, but we recommended that in the event of his increasing his offer to £150 a year, commencing to spend £1,000 in erecting not fewer than four dwelling-houses, at a sum not less than £300 per house, and also undertaking to expend £400 on construction of roadway, sewer, &c., as proposed, such houses to be built, and such roadway, sewer, &c., to be constructed within eighteen months from the date of his lease, that in such an event, the Board might to grant him a lease for 100 years, rent to commence from the 25th September, 1865. As regards the leases about to expire: 1. The Commissioners to Mr. John Scally. The date of his lease is 25th March, 1856. The term is fifteen years from 25th March, 1856, the annual rent is £109, payable quarterly, and a fine of £200 was paid by the lessee. This lease will expire in March, 1865. It is right to observe that the ground demised by this lease, occupies five acres and a large field, 'promising (according to Mr. Louche's survey) a most desirable building frontage of 217 feet to the Circular-road, with a considerable depth from front to rear; also a frontage to Clarendon-street, of nearly-eight feet, with a good depth from front to rear.' In a report on the subject of this property presented by Mr. Commissioner Pin, to the Board, on the 25th June, and inserted on the minutes of that day, he recommended that in the new lettings, the building ground should be let separately from the houses, and is that recom-

resolution we consider. The Poor Law Valuation of the house held under this lease is distinguished from the building ground in £111; the valuation of Mr. Loeche is £122, of the building ground the Poor Law Valuation is £7, Mr. Loeche's of this is £37 9s; total Poor Law Valuation, £118; total Mr. Loeche's valuation, £159 9s. This is only the middle of the house, Mr. John Scully, has frequently applied to know upon what terms the Board will grant her a new lease of the premises desired to her late husband. We recommended that she be informed that the Board will be willing to consider an offer from her for a lease of the house for a term of 91 years, at an annual rent of £190, with the usual covenants to keep in repair, but that as regards the building plot it will be set apart for building purposes, on lease of 150 years, with suitable stipulations as to building, style of house, &c., that any offer she may be disposed to make for such building plot will be considered by the Board, but if deemed inadvisable that the plot will be adapted for building. 2. The Commissioners to Edward Brien.—There are two leases to that tenant. The first is dated June 17, 1891, for a term of fifteen years from 25th March, 1890, and will expire in March, 1905. The annual rent is £25, payable quarterly. The tenant paid a fine of £100, and covenanted to expend £60 in repairs within six months. The second lease is dated December 14, 1892. The term is fourteen years from September 28, 1892, and will expire in September, 1905. The annual rent is £10, payable quarterly. The tenant paid £50 as a fine, but this lease contains an covenant to expend money on repairs. The Poor Law Valuation of the entire property held under both leases is £85, Mr. Loeche's valuation is £100. A memorial was laid before us from the tenant, Mr. Brien, proposing to take a new lease of the entire premises for 21 years, at the same rent, £25, and undertaking to pay a fine of £20, and to expend a further sum of £80 on improvements. We are of opinion that it will be more for the interest of the charity that the Board should receive a larger rent, without either taking a fine or imposing conditions on the tenant to expend money on improvements beyond the usual covenants to repair, and having regard as the one hand to the Poor Law Valuation, and as the other hand to the valuation of Mr. Loeche, we recommended that Mr. Brien should get a new lease for 21 years, at a rent of £35, with the usual covenants to keep in repair. 3. The Commissioners to Mr. Thomas Green.—The date of this lease is June 20, 1921. The term is fifteen years from the 25th March, 1890. It will expire in March, 1905. The yearly rent is £46, payable quarterly. The tenant paid no fine, nor did he covenant to spend money on repairs. The Poor Law Valuation of this portion of the property is £33, Mr. Loeche's valuation is £44. A proposed deed the 4th November last was laid before us from Mr. John Burke, who appears to have been the occupying tenant of the premises under the Green family for some years past, and with Mr. Burke's proposal was forwarded a letter from Mrs. Green, the widow and representative of the house, stating that it was not her intention to seek for a renewal of the lease, and recommending Mr. Burke as a tenant. It appears that these premises have been for some years, and still are, used as a manufactory for velvets. Mr. Burke proposes to pay a rent of £30 under a new lease (the term of which he does not suggest), and to expend £100 in putting the premises into repair. Having regard to the fact that the value of these premises chiefly consists in their being maintained as a manufactory, and as being kept in repair as such, we are of opinion that in this case it will be for the benefit of the charity that the Board should accept the tenant's proposal to expend money on repairs. We, therefore, recommended that Mr. Burke should get a lease for 91 years at £33 a year (the Poor Law Valuation), and that he should covenant to expend £100 on repairs within six months from the date of his lease. 4. The Commissioners to Mr. Thomas Hilleman.—The date of this lease is May 13, 1893. The term is 124 years from 25th March, 1891, and it will expire on the 25th September, 1905. The annual rent is £210, payable quarterly. The tenant paid no fine, but he covenanted to expend £200 in repairing the house. As in John Scully's holding so in this, there is a building plot, then described by Mr. Loeche in his survey. On the north side (of Blackwell-street) there is a plot of ground having a frontage of 466 feet to the street, with a measurable depth from front to rear. During the past year the Corporation put in a main sewer the entire length of the street, and they are at present erecting on the opposite side a number of neat two-story red brick-fronted houses, without basement, making the ground in this lot most desirable for building on. The Poor Law Valuation of the houses held under this lease, as distinguished from the building plot, is £315, Mr. Loeche's valuation of same is £374. Of the building plot the Poor Law Valuation is £9;

Mr. Loeche's valuation of same is £48 7s; total Poor Law Valuation, £321, total of Mr. Loeche's valuation, £377 7s. No proposal was laid before us from the present tenant, Mr. Hilleman; the Secretary having advised us that some such had been received, it is, therefore, unnecessary for us to offer any suggestion in reference to the terms of future letting, but we recommended that Mr. Hilleman be informed that if he does not submit some specific proposal for the consideration of the Board before the end of January, 1895, this portion of the property will be advertised to be let from the 25th September, 1895. In connection with this portion of the property the Secretary laid before us two memoranda—one from Mr. George Wytheams, of Harcourt-street, Dublin, the second from Mr. William Wynne, of Ashin Park, Galway, but as we were of opinion that the matter of these memoranda was outside the scope of our inquiry, we have referred them for the decision of the Board. All which we certify as our report this 15th day of December, 1894.—(Signed), H. LONGGARD, JOSEPH PIERCE, J. D. FITZGERALD.

Upon that report the following order was made:—

"Ordered.—That the report be received, and inserted on the minutes, and the several recommendations contained in it be, and are hereby, adopted and affirmed, and that the Secretary be authorized to carry same into effect."

10560. When do you come to the lettings?—The lettings were made from time to time. They began very shortly after that report. You see the report of the three Commissioners recommends that the Portobello Gardens should be let to one tenant. The Board applied the test of advertisement to them. They were advertised in several papers, and several most competent builders came forward to bid for them, but not one of them, even Mr. Samuel Bolton, would give more than £150. Having advertised the gardens in the Dublin papers, and experienced builders offering only £125, and refusing to advance, the Board came to the conclusion that the property at the time was not so very valuable, and, having got a good solvent tenant in Mr. Stokes, they set it to him for £150. I have had a letter from Mr. Stokes, stating that he has since taken fourteen acres at the other side of the road for 200 years at £200 a year, while, for our portion, which is only six acres, he pays £150 a year for a lease for only 150 years. Thus, whereas he pays this Board about £25 an acre for six acres, he is only paying about £14 an acre for fourteen acres at the other side of the road.

10561. Do you happen to know whether the fourteen acres include the city land?—I apprehend not. The land is exactly on the opposite side of the road to the Portobello Gardens. I will resume the minutes.

10562. 15th December, 1895, is the date of the report of Judge Longfield, Judge Fitzgerald, and Mr. Finn. What followed that report?—The minutes of December 23, 1894, state:—

"Mr. Secretary Garraway read letter from Mr. S. H. Bolton, dated 21st instant, desiring to increase his offer of £120 a year, and saying that he would not build upon a shorter lease than 999 years."

"Ordered.—That in consequence of Mr. Bolton's refusal to assent to the terms proposed, this branch of the case be referred back to the Committee appointed on the 8th inst., with a request that they would make a further report. That Mr. Moffett be authorized to advertise the premises for letting, in the Dublin papers, either together or in separate lots for building."

One reason of the Board's desiring to set the property in large lots was this, that the charity had so frequently come before them, in reference to small lots, it had really crushed out other business of great importance.

10563. Were the advertisements, which were referred to in the last minute you have read, published?—Yes. The property was advertised, I have no doubt, in publico, or in separate lots. There is a further minute of the same date:—

"Mr. Secretary Garraway read letter from Mrs. Scully requesting further time to consider the proposal to be made by her. Also letter from Mr. Edward Brien, dated 25th inst., agreeing to the terms recommended in the report, namely, a lease for twenty-one years at £75 a year with covenant to keep in repair, and offering if necessary to surrender his second lease which will not expire until 29th September next, so that the term of both shall concur on the 25th March next. Mr. Brien requested that in consequence of his advanced age the new lease should be made to his son-in-law, Mr. Edward Rothé, No. 1, Upper Churchland-street. Also read letter from Mr. John Burke, dated 21st inst. agreeing to the terms recommended in the report, namely a lease for twenty-one years at a rent of £53, and a covenant to spend £100 in improvements within six months. Ordered that the proposals of Messrs. Penn and Burke be respectively accepted on the express condition that in addition to the ordinary covenants there shall be introduced into the new leases such special covenants as are in the original ones, and that the leases be prepared by the Board's solicitor at the expense of the tenants, and that a map adapted from the Ordnance Survey be annexed to each lease. Secondly, that the Board will comply with Mr. Burke's request of making the lease to his son-in-law, Mr. Rothé."

16564. Referring to the rental, the next holding appears to be most valuable, the corner of the Cumberland and Lower Churchland-street, and comprises Nos. 40, 41, 42 and 43 Lower Churchland-street, held by Mr. Edward Rothé. Mr. Moffett's evidence as to this is, "His rent is £75 a year, and he holds only for twenty-one years, from 1865." The assessed valuation of these houses is £70, and the letting value must be more than £75. Mr. Moffett stated that some of the houses were in the hands of under-tenants when the Commissioners let them to a middleman, and adds "they (the Commissioners) did not consult me on that point, or I should not have recommended it." There is no doubt you did let this lot, consisting of several houses, to the same person for twenty-one years in 1863—I may say that Mr. Moffett was most distinctly censured in every single letting, and Mr. Penn commences his report by stating that the agent Mr. Moffett and himself went and inspected the premises. Throughout the whole transaction, when a proposal came into that office I first referred it to the agent for his report, in order to have it for the Board.

16565. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—Do you wish to state anything in reference to Mr. O'Shaughnessy's question to Mr. Moffett, "1866. Do you approve of letting in a large lot," and the answer "I decidedly think such property would let better as small lots?"—The three Commissioners, including Judge Longfield of the Landlord Estates Court, a gentleman of vast experience, thought that the small lots would be exceedingly troublesome to the Board. The tenants would be constantly coming with complaints, and giving trouble, to the prejudice of the other business in the office. For ten years Peter Bernard's charity occupied the constant attention of the Board, at its weekly meetings, and was such a source of trouble that the late Very Rev. Denis Pakenham, whenever he attended, would ask me "Is our friend, Peter Bernard, on the list or day?"

16566. LORD JUSTICE FRYGESSON.—Is not that very much what Mr. Moffett said? "I never would make those lettings in that wholesale way if it were my property, or if I had the sole management of it." Then he is asked "You do not consider that it was the best way to get the full value?" He answers "I do not think so; but it saved me a great amount of trouble and the Commissioners also."—Mr. Penn held a different view. He was one of the three Commissioners, and by being thoroughly acquainted with the locality, stated the place was a kind of wild desert or common filled with every kind of nuisance, so that it would be utterly impossible to let it in small patches without making roads and sewers, and preparing it for building purposes.

16567. What has that to say to wholesale lettings of houses?—I allude to the building ground.

16568. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—Do I understand that, in the opinion of the Board, it might have let for more money if let in smaller lots?—I do not think that, at all events they thought it would be more expedient to let in one lot to a good tenant with a covenant to expend a substantial sum of money in erecting houses.

16569. On the ground that they would get more money, or that it would save trouble?—The Commissioners at every stage took an anxious interest of one and trouble; but these small holdings would not be satisfactory to a Board constituted as this is, and they thought letting it to a solvent tenant, with a covenant to build, would be more satisfactory.

16570. Do you deal with other charity properties on the same principle?—The Bertram property and one other, Caroline Carey's, &c., I may say, the only properties we have. We cannot by our Act of Parliament take property, and indeed the Commissioners feel a disinclination to manage property. Besides the Bertram property and Carey's properties, we have perhaps only a house here and there. These were transmitted from the former Board, under the 11th section of the Act of 1844.

16571. LORD JUSTICE FRYGESSON.—Then it is not the view of the Board that they can, with advantage, manage properties?—So much is that the case that from the draft bill of the Charitable Bequests Act, passed in 1867, they struck out a power, intended to be conferred on them, to accept landed property, and strictly confined it to annuities and money in the funds.

16572. Are there any instances of property vested in the Secretary of the Board as a trustee?—No, that was an exploded system under the old Board. It was never done under this Board, we would not place ourselves in that position.

16573. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—With respect to the letting to Mr. Rothé, it appears the Commissioners let to a middleman, there being occupying tenants in possession. Would that be your usual principle, to let over the heads of occupying tenants in possession?—No, but in this case the tenant requested us to let to Rothé.

16574. LORD JUSTICE FRYGESSON.—Yet, but the tenant who did so was himself a middleman, and had under-tenants occupying seven houses, what Lord Randolph Churchill wants to know is, whether your Board deliberately thought it best to let to a middleman, presumably sacrificing a profit rent, rather than make seven separate leases of these distinct houses?—All was done after most mature consideration, and the Board thought it better on the whole for the charity to let the houses to a middleman, rather than manage the property themselves.

16575. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—Have you any minutes showing the reasons of the Board in adopting that course?—I do not know that it is usual for the minutes of a Board to set out reasons: they contain the decisions and orders of the Board. In this instance, however, the matter had been referred to two of these committees, and they had made reports.

16576. Mr. Moffett was asked "Is it (the letting value) more than £75 a year?" and he answered "Certainly it is. He has a profit on them." Did the Board take any steps to inquire what profit was likely to be made by the middleman upon the seven tenants?—No, those were very minute calculations.

16577. LORD JUSTICE FRYGESSON.—Then is Mr. Leach's report upon this lot?—

"100, a Churchland-street. Edward Brian, No. 40.—A one-story tiled cottage house, with a gateway at side, set many years built, with garden at rear, &c.; Poor Law Valuation 54, letting value, £10. No. 41.—A double cottage house, with rear garden, but no gateway at side; Poor Law Valuation, 50, letting value, £10. No. 42.—A substantial two-story house, three floors high, no basement, a small yard at rear; Poor Law Valuation, £10; letting value, £14. No. 43.—A house similar in height, with entrance hall in centre, two small shops on street floor, with several rooms above stairs, let in sections etc.; Poor Law Valuation, £12; letting value, £20. Churchland-place.—No. 1.—A house three floors high, six rooms, no basement, well-fitted up; Poor Law Valuation, £11, letting value, £16. No. 2.—An old house, with stair and to the Church road, front looking to the road or place of ground between it and the next house, two floors in height, no basement; Poor Law Valuation, £18, letting value, £18. No. 3.—A smaller house very old, with end looking to the road and the first looking to a small piece of ground between it and the last house; Poor Law Valuation, £6, letting value, £10. Total Poor Law Valuation, £86; letting value, £100. The foregoing houses will require continual care and looking after."

As the end be says:—

"I have examined the second holdings as mentioned in this report, and have placed in each, according to my judgment, what each should be for yearly, the tenant paying the rent. As the various houses are of a very profitable nature, and in many cases at the situation of them are only adapted for weekly tenants, a reduction should be made from the foregoing of 15 per cent., for consequent repairs, less in charge of tenants and collecting."

His valuation then would be £85, taking off the £151—

16378. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—The Board really allowed 25 per cent., though only recommended to allow 15½. They took everything into consideration, guided by the opinion of the eminent and experienced men to whom the matter had been submitted.

16379. Would the Board be guided rather by the opinion of the Committee than of Mr. Moffatt?—The agent was before the Committee, and was consulted at every stage. The minutes show that, on every occasion, Mr. Moffatt was consulted.

16380. Does the report give you to understand that Mr. Moffatt approved of the course taken by the Committee?—We had a judge of the Landed Estates Court on the Board, and other able judges as well. I have seen minutes where the agent made certain recommendations which were overruled by the Board.

16381. LORD JAMES PRITCHARD.—At all events, Mr. Moffatt had manifestly forgotten that he had visited the premises with Mr. Pitt?—Yes. On the 12th January, 1885, the proposal of Mr. Stokes for the Portland Gardens was accepted. The minute states—

"Mr. Secretary Gorman read a proposal of Mr. Friedrich Stokes, offering to become tenant of the Portland Gardens as they now stand, at a rent of £150, by lease for 150 years, the first two years from March as the term of rent, and undertaking to expend within two years a sum of £2,000 on substantial buildings, but not to be bound by any other special covenants not necessarily directed by reason of land lease, and to have the option of taking out two leases, so as to divide the rent and expenditure."

"Ordered:—That the secretary be authorized to accept Mr. Stokes's proposal on his agreeing to the following conditions:—That in addition to the covenants in the lease he should enter into covenants not to convert the premises into a cemetery, and not permit any notice of conversion to be entered on them, that the rent shall commence from the 25th September, 1885, being a period of eighteen months from 25th March next, that the expenditure of £2,000 shall be on dwelling-houses, and that the houses, yards, and sewers shall be constructed within eighteen months from the 25th March next."

This was accepted by Mr. Stokes.

16382. You bound yourselves, if Mr. Stokes should so require it, to divide the property into two holdings. Had you, as a matter of fact, any proposal at any time to take this place in separate lots?—I am not prepared to say that. I do not think we had. I read out for part from Mr. Hogan.

16383. In reference to the taxes upon Mr. Stokes's holding, there is portion of Mr. Moffatt's evidence to which I have to ask your attention:—

"7015. Your accounts show deductions for poor-rate and water-rate of over £30 a year. All the holdings appear to be holdings of house property, the greater part of it in the hands of sub-tenants. How is the poor-rate calculated?—If the rental is below the valuation, it is calculated on the rent. If above the valuation, it is calculated on the valuation."

"7018. Are you not aware that, when your tenants have sub-tenants, they are only entitled to deduct from you a sum bearing to the amount deducted from them, the same proportion, that the rent they pay to you, bears to the rent they receive from their tenants?—Certainly."

"7017. Have you allowed deductions upon that principle?—In every case where it would be done."

"7018. The deduction of £30 a year is in the pound?—Very easily."

"7020. How much do you allow Mr. Stokes for poor-rate?—Mr. Stokes deducts the poor-rate on the rent he pays."

"7021. Is not that perfectly wrong?—Yes, and I had a fight with him on the subject. He would not give me any satisfaction as to his profit rent."

"7022. Did you then allow him to deduct the rates on his full rent?—By direction of the secretary, I did so."

"7023. Which of them gave you that direction?—I think Mr. Gorman."

"7024. Do you not think that he directed you to allow the tenant what he had no possible right to?—I am aware of the law."

"7025. Would not the difference be that you ought only to have allowed him about one-third of what you did?—It would make a difference certainly."

"7026. Do you not know that the tenant has no right to deduct anything, except on proving to the landlord that he is entitled to the deduction he claims?—Yes; but Mr. Stokes, for instance, wrote to the Commissioners about it."

"7027. You answer in a complete one—that you were directed to take a rent less than you are entitled to. But I want to know why that was done?—I pointed out, to the secretary, the law on the subject."

Would you give us an explanation of that evidence?—I am able to give a very clear explanation about that. As there are no paid Commissioners, the secretaries must sometimes necessarily exercise discretion, especially during the long vacation, when the Board is not sitting, but they always exercise it with great care and caution. In reference to this particular matter, Mr. Stokes wrote, when the Board had separated for the long vacation:—

"Commercial Holdings,

"12th July, 1878.

"Dear Sir,—I observed in the paper a few weeks back that your Board had adopted the system of renewable leases. I shall be very glad to hear that such is the case, as the Church Temporalities Commissioners' mode of doing business is very satisfactory. Yours is not. I have always paid my rent regularly about the same date since, and on the present occasion sent to Messrs. Moffatt a cheque on 21st of last month which was refused on the ground that they could not allow me the usual poor rates, but that I must furnish them with a statement of my profit rent, so enable them to decide how much they would allow me. It would probably be about two-thirds. I sent it back a second and third time with a written message, that I had allowed every one of my tenants the full poor rate, and that the valuation was about £5,000 a year. I have since received no answer, and the cheque has been refused. I shall instruct my solicitor to make a formal legal tender to the Commissioners, who are, I think, called upon to protect their tenants from this annoyance. I may add that this year is regularly demanded by your agent a very few days after it is due. I don't complain of this as I pay no attention to it, but it is not pleasant, and I shall rejoice to hear that your Board have adopted a more satisfactory system."

Having received that letter I sent for Mr. Moffatt on 21st July, and asked him to explain to me this difference about the taxes, and he did so. I then said:—

"All the Gentlemen I can exercise at the present moment is to tell you, just for this one day of rest, to settle on the usual terms, and you can make a statement to the Board when they meet."

And on the same day I wrote to Mr. Stokes in reply:—

"Dear Sir,—I beg to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 12th inst., on the subject of which I have this day seen Mr. Moffatt, the agent for the Board. As the Board has adjourned its meetings for the summer recess, I have directed Mr. Moffatt to arrange the present half year's rent with you on the basis on which he has hitherto done so. Any views he entertains in reference to an allowance for Free-trade, I have requested him to place in writing for the decision of the Board, and, if found correct, they will, of course, be acted on in future settlements of rent."

16384. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—Was not the effect of that letter merely to postpone the question of poor rates till the long vacation was over?—Exactly, but Mr. Moffatt, I presume, from his evidence before you, fancied it was a general authority, and had forgotten all about it, and only the matter was recalled to his mind by your examination. I probably would not have brought it before the Board.

16385. LORD JAMES PRITCHARD.—But the usual way of managing the rates, as I understand, had been to allow the full poundage on the rent, and what we want to learn is whether that has been set right?—I am going to give you very important evidence upon that.

16386. When was this question of poor rates brought before the Board?—In January of the present year.

April 12, 1880
Mr. William
Gordon, &c.

16587. Do you mean that not only from the original date, September, 1864, down to 1876, but from 13th July, 1876, to January, 1880, after attention had been called to it, the deduction of poor-rates has gone on on the usual terms?—Yes, and if you allow me I will give you a satisfactory explanation of it now. The matter having been brought to Mr. Moffatt's notice, he wrote on the 12th November, 1879, but I had not time or opportunity to bring his letter before the Board till January of the present year. His letter is as follows:—

"24, South Frederick-street, 12th November, 1879.

DEAR SIR,—On a former occasion having endeavoured to introduce, with such tenants of your Board as are in the position of middlemen, the system of allowance for poor-rates, in accordance with the decisions in the cases of Carrapichan, Toulhams respondents (Josh Jones, Vol. 8, p. 37), and of O'Loghlin v. O'Callaghan (Dr. R. C. L., 119), I met with most decided opposition from Mr. F. Stokes, who at the time brought the matter under your notice, but which from some misunderstanding on my part was not followed up. The question has now been raised, by the Endowed Schools Commission, why this system has not been acted on. The decision I allude to is, to the effect that the allowance for poor rates to be made to a middleman should bear the same proportion to the rent he pays as the amount of deductions made by his sub-tenants bears to the amount of rents he, the middleman, receives, which, in cases where the rents paid by the occupiers are greater than the valuation of their holdings, makes a difference, or distinguished from the system almost universally acted on of allowing one half the percentage rate on the gross rents. To carry out this system, which I may term the proportionate system, it is requisite that the amount of rents received by the middleman, and the amount of the allowances made by him, should be ascertained, and thence arises one difficulty, as with Mr. Stokes, for that gentleman would not supply that information, and the question arises in—Can the allowance for poor rates be withheld until such time as that information is given? The foregoing case is on the supposition that the middleman has let his holding to sub-tenants, who pay the taxes on their several holdings and make their deductions from the rent they pay. But another case arises, where the middleman makes his lettings on a lease, frequently adopted, of paying the taxes himself, and receiving from his tenants a rent including the taxes, a mode which, so far as I can see, renders the decision I allude to inoperative, or even should he make his lettings part one way and part the other, I do not see how they can be carried out. The Acts of Parliament bearing on this subject, and which I read you, are—1st & 2nd Vic., c. 36, s. 75, and 12th & 13th Vic., c. 104, s. 11, the latter altering the original system, which nevertheless is, with few exceptions, adhered to; and as examples, and where from some merely by accident or ignorance of the law, I may quote the practice of the Irish Church Temporalities Commissioners, and that in the case of the Earl of Pembroke, in each of whom I pay head rents for middlemen, in reliance to which the question could be raised. I have to request you will inform me in this proportionate system, to be adopted with the tenants of your Board, and, if so, are the sub-tenants that have been made to be re-assessed, and for how long a period back; and can all allowances for poor rates be reduced until the account is gone into and settled? Also, in cases where the middleman pays the taxes on the entire or portion of his holding, can the system be adopted?

I am, dear Sir, yours truly,

WM. H. MARFATT.

To WILLIAM GORDON, Esq., Secretary, Commissioners of Charitable Donations and Bequests for Ireland, 2, Kildare-place.

The entire of that correspondence is abstracted on the minutes of 16th January, 1880. The letters are—first, that in which Mr. Stokes complains, then mine in reply, and then Mr. Moffatt's. The order of the Board is—

"I. That the consideration of Mr. Moffatt's statement be adjourned, but that the Secretary take an early opportunity of bringing it forward for decision. II. That in the meantime the Secretary communicate with the Secretary of the Church Temporalities Commissioners, the agent of the Pembroke estate, and some firm of land agents of high standing, so as to ascertain the practice of making poor rate allowances in each department."

Acting on that order I addressed a letter to Mr. Vernon, to the Church Temporalities Commissioners, and to Messrs. Stewart and Kincaid, as the most eminent land agents in Ireland. I will now read the letter in reply, from Mr. Vernon:—

"POOR RATE ALLOWANCES.

Whitehall-place,
January 16, 1880.

MR DEAR SIR,—On Lord Pembroke's estate, my former rule has been to allow poor rates to our lessees on the actual rent paid by them, irrespective of the fact of their being in many cases subtenants. This practice involves no doubt considerable loss to the estate, but I have always considered that less preferable to the great inconvenience and annoyance which I should be obliged to inflict upon our lessees by following the more strictly legal course. It is also, in the case of Lord Pembroke's estate, to be borne in mind that in most cases the subtenant's interest has been made of great value by the entry of his capital or that of his predecessors. This consideration is what I find in force of the course which I have always followed on this estate, though it may not have the same weight in other estates differently circumstanced.

Believe me, very truly yours,

JOHN K. VERNON.

W. GORDON, Esq.,
Commissioner of Charitable Bequests,
2, Kildare-place."

I received from Messrs. Stewart and Kincaid this letter:—

"POOR RATE ALLOWANCES.

6, Leinster-street, Dublin,
16th January, 1880.

SIR,—In reply to your letter of 15th instant, we beg to say that in general practice we allow a middleman the same poor rate as an occupier, and we do so on the ground that it is almost impossible in most cases of middleman's holdings to arrive at the facts necessary to compute the correct proportion of poor-rates on the principle laid down in the Act 1 and 2 Vic., c. 37, s. 75, and we do not think we would be justified in refusing to make the middleman any allowance, unless he supplied us with the necessary information, which it is often not in his power to do, such instances as the correct amount of poor rate allowance to which his tenant (who may also be a middleman) be entitled. At the same time we must say that in cases where the correct basis of calculation is known, there is no reason why the allowance should not be made in strict accordance with the Act of Parliament.

We are, Sir, yours obediently,

STEWART AND KINCAID.

W. GORDON, Esq."

I also received this letter from the Secretary to the Church Temporalities Commissioners, dated January 18, 1880:—

"SIR,—I am directed by the Commissioners of Church Temporalities in Ireland, with reference to your letter of 15th instant, to state for the information of the Commissioners of Charitable Donations and Bequests, that they allow poor-rate to middlemen, on the same basis as to persons occupying directly under them. They take the course for convenience of collection, though not strictly in accordance with the 75th section of the Act 1 and 2 Vic., cap. 36. The mode of calculation directed by that section is not practicable in the case of ecclesiastical land rents, inasmuch as the Commissioners have no means of ascertaining the amount of poor-rate deducted by the occupiers from their immediate landlord, and this amount is the one to be divided amongst all tenants between the immediate landlord and the owner of the land-tenants both inclusive. In adopting this course the Commissioners follow the practice of the Ecclesiastical Commissioners and the Bishop from whom they derived the property.

I am, Sir,
DEAR GENTLEMAN."

Upon hearing these letters read, the Board affirmed the act of Mr. Moffatt, and directed him to continue to allow the full percentage.

16588. You observe that Mr. Vernon states:—

"This practice involves no doubt considerable loss to the estate."

And Messrs. Stewart and Kinnaird say:—

"In cases where the correct basis of calculation is known, there is no reason why the allowance should not be made in strict accordance with the Act of Parliament."

While the Church Temporalities Commissioners adopt the other course for convenience of collection. Is it the opinion of the Commissioners of Charitable Donations and Bequests that they have any objection to depart, for convenience, from the strictly legal course, where the departure involves loss to the charity?—Another board think they have—namely, the Church Temporalities Commissioners. It would not be for the secretary of a Board to give an opinion upon the propriety or wisdom of the course adopted by the Board. The Master of the Rolls, Judge Fitzgerald, and Judge Fitzgerald were, I think, present when the decision was arrived at.

16588. Let me call your attention to the figures. The rent you ought to get from Mr. Stokes is £150 a year. You have been in the habit of allowing him a percentage, which in recent years has been at the rate of more than 1s. in the £1 on that?—Half the percentage.

16589. Yes, the rate has been from 2s. to 2s. 6d. Taking the lowest figure, you have been allowing him 1s. in the £1 on the whole rent?—The agent has.

16591. That is £7 10s. per annum on this holding alone. If that be that the Poor Law valuations of the premises as they stand now is £4,000 a year, and that therefore that amount is derived out of the property by persons holding sub-interests, are you not for convenience giving to Mr. Stokes something like 2s. or 2s. 6d. a year of the property of the charity, and at the same time, the loss will increase too?—The Board with the Master of the Rolls as the arbitrator, after full consideration of the law and the facts, decided that, and it is not for me to question the wisdom of their decision.

16592. I understand that you have allowed the possessor to take all the benefits at the full percentage rate upon the rent paid, instead of upon the proportion which that rent bears to the entire income derived out of the property, and therefore that with a rate of 2s. or 2s. 6d., a loss approaching five per cent. on the whole income of the charity is involved?—I apprehend that is the case.

16593. Is it not further the case that your allowance to Mr. Stokes may largely exceed all the rates he pays, if he pays only the legal deduction from what he receives?—I presume so.

16594. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—Can you tell us how it happened that this question, which is of some importance with regard to the management of properties, raised by Mr. Stokes in July, 1876, by a formal letter to you, was not brought before the Board until January, 1880. Would it even have been brought before the Board at all, were it not for the Endowed Schools Commission?—Mr. Maffett, in his letter of 13th November, 1879, admits that it was a misunderstanding on his part. He thought I gave him general directions which I never did. I told him to lay the matter before the Board. He misunderstood the thing, and did not lay it before the Board until the latter end of last year, and then the Board affirmed what he had done. It had passed out of my mind—my instructions to Mr. Maffett were to lay a statement of his views before the Board, and that he omitted to do. If you allow me, I will read two passages from the annual reports about this property. In the 25th annual report, that for 1870, it is stated:—

"We have been obliged to resort to the Court of Chancery in order to establish five important charities, and to have schemes framed for their future administration. We are also bringing into operation, in the city of Dublin, a charity school for female orphans, which, though founded and endowed by a benevolent testator early in the present century, was so much pressed down by former litigation, by costs, and accumulations of several fines, that its operations could not sooner be carried into effect. We have not only succeeded in clearing off the various charges and accumulations, but have been able to raise the annual income of the property from a sum below £800, at which it stood at the period of the founder's death, to a practically paid net annual rental of £750. We also obtained a perpetuity of the charity property from the late Board of Endowed Commissioners, thus securing it from all future danger of eviction by a further accumulation of several fines."

And in the report for 1873, being the 27th annual report, it is stated:—

"After considerable litigation we have at length succeeded in bringing into operation an old endowment, created by the will of Mr. Peter Barker, so long ago as the year 1822. This gentleman left his property, consisting of lands and houses in the city and suburbs of Dublin, held under the fee of Dublin, and at the time producing about £800 a year, for the purpose of establishing a boarding school for poor Protestant female orphans. The property having been withheld from its purposes, our predecessors at this Board took proceedings for its recovery and succeeded in restoring it, but from the effects of litigation, and a large accumulation of several fines, it became so much embarrassed that it was found impossible to carry out the intentions of the testator. A few years ago we were obliged to raise money on mortgage for the purpose of paying off these fines, but we have the satisfaction to state that we have not only paid off all charges and accumulations, but by advantageous lettings of the charity property on building leases and otherwise, have succeeded in securing to the charity a well paid annual income of £750. Under the sanction of the Court of Chancery a scheme for the administration of the school has been framed, trustees have been appointed, a commodious house in the city of Dublin has been taken, and preliminary steps have been adopted for the reception of these orphan girls."

16595. LORD JUSTICE FITZGIBBON.—Let us return to the lettings. We have disposed of No. 1. No. 2 is Barker's lease of July 14th, 1845, at £33 a year. That lease appears to have been since surrendered, and a lease with an increased rent of £65 adopted instead. When was this change effected?—The minute is 25th April, 1877.—

"Mr. Secretary Cannon read letter from John Burke, 18, Lower Clarendon-street, dated 18th inst., proposing to surrender the lease which had been granted to him by the Board in December, 1871, for a term of 61 years, and to take a new lease for 29 years at an increased rent to enable him to build on a portion of the ground comprised in that lease. Mr. Burke stated that all the ground comprising his premises had been taken for building purposes, and that it would increase the value of the charity property if his ground was also built upon. Ordered that it be referred to Mr. Maffett, Board's agent, to report his opinion whether the Board ought to sanction Mr. Burke's proposal, and if so to recommend what increased annual rent he should be asked to pay."

The next minute is May 2nd, 1877:—

"Mr. Secretary Cannon referred to last Board's minute, and read a report from Mr. Maffett, Board's agent dated this day, stating that he had viewed Mr. Burke's premises, and that he was of opinion that it would be for the interests of the charity that the Board should comply with his request. Mr. Maffett recommended that Mr. Burke be called upon to pay at the expiration of one year from the present time £15 a year over his rent as it now stands in also what it will be in 1895. A map or plan showing the proposed improvements was laid before the Board. It was ordered that the Board approve of Mr. Maffett's recommendations, and that Mr. Burke be informed that the Board will execute a new lease to him for a term of 99 years at the increased rent suggested by the agent, such lease to be prepared by Board's solicitor at Mr. Burke's expense."

16596. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—Had not the Board, in letting that lot to Mr. Burke at £33 a year in 1863, expressed an opinion that the ground was not likely to be used for anything else, but manufacturing purposes?—Yes, but the whole face of the neighbourhood is changed, transverse go through it now.

16597. In 1865 the Board did not seem to have had any reason before them of forming a correct opinion, because they expressed an opinion, when letting to Mr. Burke at that low price, without asking for information, that the premises were not likely to be used for anything else, but manufacturing purposes?—At that time they were not.

16598. Yet in less than twelve years the property

Mr. William

is covered with houses.—It does not seem possible for my Board to estimate what, in ten years hence, will be the value of property.

16599. That would neither tend against making long leases at low rents?—Yes; but I may mention that, in Belfast, this Board, under the power which it has of enabling trustees to grant leases, enabled certain charitable societies to realise £3,000 a year. The trustees were only able to grant 99 years' leases, and by obtaining power to grant leases for 999 years they were enabled to get £2,000 a year profit. To return to Mr. Burke's holding; there was a dispute between the solicitor of our Board and Mr. Burke's solicitors, which is referred to in the minutes of June 6, 1877.—

"Mr. Secretary Gerrard referred to Board's minute of 2nd May last, and had before the Board the draft of new lease to Mr. John Burke. Read letter from Board's solicitor, dated 26th of May stating that he was under the impression that the full rent of £75 was to be charged from the 25th March, 1878, but that Messrs. Cuthbert and Humphill, the solicitors for Mr. Burke, had allowed the draft by making the rent, payable up to 1885, 42s. and thereafter to the end of the term, £75. Board's solicitor further stated that the new lease stipulated on £1,000 being expended on building within ten years. Report of Board's agent, 2nd of May, read. Ordered—That the Board concurs in the view of Mr. Burke's solicitors, and that the lease be prepared in conformity therewith and that it also approve of the amount proposed to be expended on building."

16600. LEASE-JURIST FRANKLIN.—The next holding on the rental as No. 3, Michael Keefe. That is a petty rent. No. 4 is the same. No. 5 is also an old letting to Mr. Hutchinson. No. 6, Mr. Bonnell, lease for 51 years, from 25th March, 1865. A proposal for another tenant was mentioned on the minute you read. When did Mr. Bonnell get his lease?—The proposal of Bonnell at £100 a year was accepted in 1865.

16601. He got a lease of five houses?—Yes.
16602. Mr. Maffett's evidence about that holding is as follows:—

"1844. That lot comprises one house in Church-street, and five on the Circular-road. How were they valued when he got the lease?—Partly on the rents paid before that, and partly by their appearance, or something of that sort.

"1845. Was there anything of a regular valuation made?—There was no valuation employed.

"1846. Did you negotiate that lease yourself?—I think not.

"1850. Who could have done it?—The secretaries."

Was not this formerly Scully's holding?—Yes.—Scully's case was referred to Judge Langfield, who made this report on the 10th January, 1863:—

"The first succeeded by Scully, in February, 1846, was nearly sixteen years ago, after that he is entitled to the interest of Murtagh McCormick, to whom Peter Berrard, whose interest is now vested in the Commissioners, devised the premises on the 25th May, 1830, for 124 years, with a four-quarter covenant for renewal; rent, £70 17s. 10d. currency. McCormick expended money in building on the premises, and on 27th March, 1848, this McCormick obtained a renewal on payment of a fine of £150 2s. 2d., as his proprietary of the fine paid for the renewal of the lease to the Commissioners. On the 29th September, 1853, he obtained another renewal on payment of a fine of £200 15s. The interest subsequently vested in Eliza Mary McMahon, and in 1845 a divorce took place regarding the amount of fine which ought to be paid by her for a renewal, the Archbishop having demanded a very considerable one as a renewal fine. No satisfactory arrangement could be made, as she could only consent to pay £200, while the Commissioners demanded the sum of £245 3s. 4d., which Mr. Scully in his memorial designated as 'equivalent,' 'extinguishment,' and 'common'; but another Eliza Mary McMahon not the divorcée, John Scully, who became her representative in 1867, took every step to enforce their right to have the amount of the renewal fine settled legally, and the memorial leaves the impression on me that the sum demanded by the Commissioners was the proper and lawful sum. A second memorial was presented by John Scully, in 1851, but it is immaterial. His widow and representative, Frances Mary Scully, presented a memorial, 21st December, 1864, complaining that a renewal granted to her husband in 1850 omitted the four-quarter clause, and objecting to the mode in which the Commissioners now propose to set and divide the land. The only part that seems to me material in her memorial is the statement respecting the omission of the four-quarter clause from the renewal of 1850. Mrs. Scully asserts that this was caused by the delicate health of her husband, who never read the lease, and that this was only one of the reasons that were to be made from time to time in pursuance of the original covenant, and that, therefore, she is now entitled legally to a renewal. I fully agree with her conclusion after statement is true. If the four-quarter clause was inadvertently omitted in the lease of 1850, she ought now to be placed in the same position as if it had been introduced, and I should wish to see the lease and correspondence relating to it in 1850, in order to know the facts accurately. A letter written by John Scully, dated 4th December, 1850, would lead me to conjecture that the proper fine was demanded in 1845, that the parties proposed to let their lease expire rather than pay that fine, and that in 1850 the lease was made to John Scully, omitting the four-quarter clause by the agreement of both parties, and that this lease was granted not on account of the four-quarter clause, but in compliance with his letter of 15th December, 1850, when he asks simply for a preference to himself as the accepting tenant, he being willing to pay the highest rent that any solvent tenant would give. If this should be the case, I do not see that Mrs. Scully has any claim to what she seeks, and if she was aware of the facts I should not consider her memorial a true or honest statement.

M. T. GERRARD, 12, 2.

And upon that report the Board ordered:—

"That the substance of Judge Langfield's report be communicated to Mrs. Scully, and that she be informed that the Commissioners will adhere to the terms recommended in the report of the Commission, and already communicated to her by the secretary.

16603. What happened?—She would not take the premises. The minutes of 9th February, 1863, contain this entry:—

"Read Judge Langfield's report upon the former memorial of Mrs. Scully, also the report of the sub-commissioner and a letter, dated 7th instant, from her, to the effect that she still asked upon a right to a renewal of her lease, proposing for each renewal for twenty-one years, a rent of £108 a year, and a fine of £250.

Ordered.—That Mrs. Scully be apprised that the Commissioners desire to state, in the most explicit manner, that she has not the slightest ground for claiming a renewal of her lease about to expire, and that she be referred to the secretary's letter of the 23rd ult.; but that if she will make an offer of £100 a year, upon lease for twenty-one years to the five houses above, without the building ground, such offer will be favourably considered by the Board, if made before their next meeting on the 16th instant."

16604. We want to ascertain how Alderman Bonnell got the premises for £100 a year?—The minutes of 2nd March, 1863, record:—

"Read letter from Mrs. Scully agreeing to the terms proposed by the Board, but requesting that the new lease should be made to Alderman J. Ouseley Bonnell, who was tenant to two of the houses, and with whom she had arranged to take her place. Ordered.—That the Commissioners will favourably entertain a proposal from Alderman Bonnell for the houses, as requested by Mrs. Scully, when same shall be made in writing, that the building ground be situated for letting by the agent, acquainting him that the Commissioners think it desirable that it should be offered in two lots, namely one lot fronting the Circular-road, and the other fronting Church-street."

16605. Did Mr. Bonnell accept that?—The minute of 9th March, 1864, is:—

"Read proposal of Alderman J. Ouseley Bonnell offering £100 a year for the five houses comprised in the lease to Mr. John Scully upon lease, which he expects will be made to him for forty-one or fifty-one years. Ordered.—That the Commissioners agree to extend the term from twenty-one years to thirty-one years."

And there is a further minute on 16th March, 1865:—

"Mr. Secretary Gerrard read letter from Alderman J. Ouseley Bonnell, requesting an extension of the term of the lease proposed to be given him to forty-one years, and specifying a number of improvements, which he intended to make upon the five houses contained in the lease. Ordered.—That Alderman Bonnell be informed that the Board will adhere to the terms fixed by their last minute."

16606. You did not make any valuation, at that time, of those houses, and the letting was made, under the tenant valuation, to a gentleman who made some arrangement with the previous tenant, Mrs. Scully, the terms of which were not communicated to you?—Mr. Bonnell was probably approved of as a man of rank. On 16th March, Mr. Bonnell offered £53 for the building ground, but the Board—

"Ordered:—That Alderman Bonnell be informed that the Commissioners, having already decided upon advertising the piling question, are determined to adhere to that decision."

16607. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—Did the Board advertise the houses, or were they ever advertised or shown to the public, before concluding the arrangement with Alderman Bonnell, to let them to him for £14 a year less than the valuation?—I am not able to say. I read the minute directing the advertisement of the land, as well as the house. I cannot give you an answer from memory. I really cannot ascertain whether this particular lot was advertised.

16608. There is abundant evidence that the Board ordered the Bedford property to be advertised, but does it not seem most probable that these particular houses were not advertised?—I apprehend that this lot was not advertised. When the Board had solvent people to deal with, they thought it better, for the interests of the Charity, to deal with them than advertise the property.

16609. LORD JUSTICE PUGHMAN.—You made a remark on a particular day, giving Mr. Bonnell an opportunity of making a proposal, and stating you would give him a preference of the houses only, but directing the agent to advertise the land. At the next meeting you previously accepted his proposal. Therefore there could not be an advertisement. Kindly read the minute of the 16th March!—

"Mr. Secy. Gerson read letter from Alderman J. Cussey Bonnell, requesting an extension of the term of the lease proposed to be given to him to 41 years.
Ordered.—That Ald. Bonnell be informed that the Board will adhere to the term fixed by their last minute."

16610. That verifies the conclusion that the houses were not advertised. We may take it now that he did get his lease for £100!—Yes.

16611. What became of the building-ground that is stated by Mr. Moffatt to have been let to Joseph Kelly at £55 a year, with a covenant to expend £3,500?—On the 23rd March, 1865, proposals of £7 for the building-ground were refused. We got into negotiations with the Bathmans railway proposers, so that our dealings in reference to the ground were suspended until that undertaking collapsed. It came to nothing, though for a long time it had the appearance as if it would be carried out. The ground was again advertised, and ultimately Kelly got the remaining plot at £55. On minutes of June 17, 1865, state—

"Office of J. Kelly and Hahalan of £50 for building-ground postponed. Read letter from Alderman Bonnell, repeating his suggestion to close up the present lease, and to make another in Churchman street; and Mr. Commissioner Pin having reported that he had respected the premises, and considered the plans suggested to be a great improvement. Ordered.—That Alderman Bonnell be informed that the Commissioners are ready to meet his views, but that they expect he will bear the expense, and all the responsibility, of the alterations, which can only be effected legally by obtaining the consent in writing of the present occupiers. Also read letter from Mr. Hahalan, reporting he offer £50 for the building-ground at Moorfields in 1865, and £240 for the houses now held by him; and Mr. Commissioner Pin having reported his opinion of the value of the building-ground, and regard being had to the Poor Law valuation of the houses—that Mr. Hahalan be informed that the Board consider his offer inadequate."

The matter was again considered on July 14, 1865, when the agent was again ordered to advertise; and on November 16, 1865, there is this minute:—

"Read letter from Mr. Moffatt, saying that Mr. Hahalan had surrendered his premises, and that all the tenants except two had signed an agreement to hold from the Commissioners at weekly rent, and that the gross rental subject to repairs and taxes was £578. But it appearing to the Board that such tenancies were not satisfactory, and that it was desirable to have more responsible parties holding directly from the Commissioners. Ordered.—That the Commissioners confirm their former minute as to directing Mr. Moffatt to advertise the houses to be let in suitable lots, he consulting with Mr. Commissioner Pin on the number and extent of the lots to be advertised."

On the 14th December, 1865, the Board found fault with Mr. Moffatt for not advertising. On the 11th January, 1866, they advertised Hahalan's holding in five lots. Several proposals were read, and submitted for report of Mr. Commissioners Pin and Judge Longfield; and on February 8, 1866, the following report from Mr. Commissioner Pin and Judge Longfield was read:—

"We have considered the several proposals for the property held by Thomas Hahalan, and recommend that the following be accepted if no objection appear on inquiry to the character and solvency of the parties."

Four lettings amounting to £514 were therein recommended for acceptance, and the minutes record:—

"Mr. Secretary Gerson read report signed by Judge Longfield and Mr. Commissioner Pin, recommending the acceptance of Mr. Luke Mordant's offer of £120 a year for No. 1, and reported that the changes given by Mr. Ord for the same lot had not proved satisfactory. Ordered.—That the offer of Mr. Mordant be accepted, and that Mr. Ord be informed that the Commissioners decline to proceed any further with respect to his proposal. Also read letter from Mr. Kewburgh (whose offer for lots 9 and 1 had been accepted by Board's former minute) repeating that an consideration of the way he had state of repair of the houses, and for other causes he now should commence from the 25th June instead of 25th March next. Ordered.—That the clause made by Mr. Kewburgh be allowed. Mr. Gerson also laid before the Board a certificate signed by Mr. Pin at the feet of Mr. Lord's last measurement, to the effect that he had satisfied himself of the correctness of that measurement in the way requested by last Board's minute; and read letter from Mr. Frederick Stokes suggesting to the Board some made to him by the extension of half a year's rent in full of all claims. Ordered.—That the lease to Mr. Stokes be prepared with all dispatch so that it may be, with the other leases agreed for, ready to be sealed on next Board."

16612. Does that complete the lettings?—I think so. If you would like to see Brock's last lease which was not produced before we can now produce it. We have frequently to transfer our leases to correspondents, Messrs. Maxwell and Weldon.

16613. Was there any other tender got for Scully's plot except Kelly's?—Yes; I think we refused £50 from both Bonnell and Hahalan.

16614. You got in the end £214 a year for the Moorfields piece, for which Alderman Bonnell had offered you £240!—Yes. Until we settled the property by giving leases there was not a Board that we had not "Bedford" before us in some shape or form. Now it does not come before us so often.

16615. CHAIRMAN.—I understood you to say the property was in some respects in a very bad state. Yes, one of the objects was to improve the whole thing. We were glad to get people like builders with capital to improve the property. In fact, the land was a waste common, and below it could be let in lots it was necessary to construct roads and sewers, and for this the Board had no funds. There was, therefore, no alternative but to let it to a capitalist who would undertake the works.

16616. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—Do I understand that the Board now have a disinclination to take the management of real estate?—That is a serious question for me to answer, but I may say this, that the Board have always stated that they have not machinery in their department for managing property, and that when the shift of a bill came before them, proposing that landed property should be vested in them, they struck out the clause, and stated they would not accept it, but they take funds. The two secretaries, a clerk, and a writer, are the staff we have here, to do the whole business of the office, and on account of the secretaries being business, they do a vast deal that used to be referred to the solicitor, so that our solicitors' costs, instead of being £2,000 or £3,000 a year, do not tax to more than £200 or £400. In reference to the letting to Mr. Stokes, I spoke to him one day, and he wrote me a letter in consequence, which I would like to read, viz. —

"4, Yergomont Hall
Clerkenwell, 31st Jan., 1860.

DEAR SIR,—Referring to our conversation to-day, the best answer I can give you is, that I am the owner of the opposite side of the road, which was let about the same time as yours, upwards of fourteen years and a good house for £200 a year for 900 years (I think). The lease of the estate being admitted one, or in settlement, was mentioned by the Judge of the Incorporated Common Court. I heard that Mr. Stokes, the owner, got a small sum, about £100 and read, I produced it subsequently in the court to pay about 200 years rent. The talk about the poor-rate is equal both. I allow the full poor-rate to all my tenants, and so must you. I could give you the exact particulars if I were at home, but these is substantially correct, yours was only six acres and a fraction.—Yours truly,

FRED STOKES.

W. GORDON, Esq."

Mr. Hercules

Mr. HERCULES H. MACDONNELL examined.

16617. CHAIRMAN.—You are also one of the secretaries to the Commissioners of Charitable Donations and Bequests in Ireland?—I am.

16618. LORD JUSTICE FITZGIBBON.—You have given attention to the matter of Hall's Charity, in Limerick. It appears to be a combination of an almshouse and a school, and the property consists of houses, principally in the town of Limerick, which in 1857 produced £360 a year, but returns now only about £165. First I have to ask you for information as to the management of the property from 1857 up to 1870, during which time it was vested by the Dean of Limerick to be in the hands of Mr. McMahon, agent to the Commissioners of Charitable Bequests, who, it was said, did not touch his accounts as he ought to. First I may mention that the property belonging to Hall's school only consists in an annuity of £10 Irish for the master, £10 for the mistress, and £10 for the repairs of the schoolhouse, and the purchase for the pupils of specified books, which include "The Whole Duty of Man," &c. This £30, Irish, a year is the entire of the educational endowment; and, I submit, that having ascertained that income to be forthcoming, the inquiry into the property for other charitable endowments is not for your Commission, but is wholly ultra vires. As, however, such inquiry has been partially made, we are anxious to correct what we conceive to be misstatements, and also afford the fullest information. Though this charity is not so formidable as Bective, it has come before the present Board 124 times, besides involving a very large correspondence. The first point I wish to call attention to, is the important case of giving a lease for repairing the buildings. Mr. McCarthy, a builder, made an offer to take a lease of those houses which, in 1875, were in a state of dilapidation; and Dean Bannery, when examined before your Commissioners in Limerick, stated that the trustees recommended that it should be accepted, while our Commissioners refused to accede to that suggestion, and referred the matter back for consideration. The offer made by the builder was to take a lease "for a term of years to be agreed on," at an annual rent of £50, he consenting to reconstruct the houses, and place them in a respectable and habitable condition, and towards that purpose he was to be allowed a sum of £100 to be paid by this Board. On 17th March, 1875, it was—

"Ordered.—That Mr. Widdes be informed that the Board will grant a lease of the four houses to Mr. McCarthy at an annual rent of £50 for the term of 150 years, and will allow him a sum of £100 out of the money now in hand."

In the month of December following, my solicitor had drafted the lease, but Mr. McCarthy had taken no step and declined to proceed further; and, the case having been brought before the Board, the solicitor reported that Mr. McCarthy, though frequently applied to both by Mr. Widdes, the agent in Limerick, and the Board's solicitor, had not executed the lease, while the draft had been laid before his solicitor and returned. Mr. Maxwell also laid before the Board the draft lease; but, it not appearing, from any portion of the correspondence, that McCarthy had ever agreed in writing to the term of 150 years, it was—

"Ordered.—That the Board be of opinion that the information laid before it does not disclose such a contract as can be successfully relied against Mr. McCarthy, and that the secretary make further inquiries as to whether Mr. McCarthy ever agreed in writing to the term of the lease proposed by the Board."

The case came on again before the Board on the 13th January, 1876, and on that day this minute was entered—

"Mr. Secretary Gordon referred to last Board's minute, and read letter from Mr. Widdes dated the 28th December, stating that he had not any written answer from Mr. McCarthy to the terms proposed for his lease. Also letter of similar import from Board's solicitor dated the 21st inst. Read further letter from Board's solicitor dated the 21st inst., stating his opinion that there was no contract with Mr. McCarthy by which he was bound. Ordered.—That the Board will not set the charity to the cost of a doubtful proceeding against Mr. McCarthy. (Cried.) That the Board's solicitor formally advise Mr. McCarthy by letter that, if within ten days he does not execute his lease, the Board will consider the negotiation with him at an end, and will proceed to set the premises to some other person."

That was very closely considered and the Board thought that the absence of the terms being mentioned was such a legal objection that they could not force Mr. McCarthy to carry out the agreement, and therefore the matter fell through. The Master of the Rolls, Judge Longfield and Judge Trenchard were present. That is very decisive evidence that the statement made by the Dean is a mistake. The Board decided at once to the offer recommended by the trustees, but Mr. McCarthy declined to carry it out, the houses being so very valuable that he would not take the £100 to put them into repair, and pay £50 a year. On the 9th February, 1876, the Commissioners ordered—

"That the local managers be requested to confer together as to the best way of letting the premises, and that the Board will be prepared out of the money in their hands to make an allowance to another tenant, or will apply it to pay for repairs undertaken and executed under the supervision of the local managers."

The overseers passed a resolution—

"That in the opinion of the overseers it would be expedient to remove the dilapidated buildings intended to have been conveyed to Mr. McCarthy, and that the Commissioners be requested to authorize an outlay for the repairs of the above-house generally."

16619. That brings us down to April, 1876. You are aware that the almshouse and the school are in the same building?—I am. I have to come to the history of that part, because it involves the legal consideration of what the Board could do. The whole falling underlying the opinion of the overseers was that we had funds, and could use them as we thought proper. We could not. We were bound by the scheme of the Court of Chancery. I wish to be allowed to say a word in reference to Mr. McMahon, because of the manner in which the Dean speaks of him. The Dean said, "the person is dead; I do not like to mention his name," and then he gave his name. That implies a great deal. The Dean also said that for seven years before 1870 there was no account reached at all. It is right to mention that the manner in which Mr. McMahon was appointed was very curious. In 1859, a bill was filed by the old board, the property being in a terrible state of neglect. In 1865, Mr. McMahon was appointed receiver by the court, and £30 a year was fixed as a reasonable sum to give him, and the property continued to be managed by the receiver until the court still 1865, when, by order of the court, it was transferred to the late Board "on the trusts of the will, and no other." The receiver was then discharged, and Mr. McMahon was made agent, by the late Board, on the same terms on which he had acted for eight or nine years under the court. When the present Board came into occupation, in 1865, they naturally allowed the same amount for some time; but in 1867, the agent's fee was reduced, with Mr. McMahon's full consent and acquiescence, to £30 a year, which was what he always received, from 1837 up to his resignation in 1868. With regard to the landfill who is mentioned in the Report of the Royal Commission on Endowed Schools, 1854-8, the Board, on November 1, 1860, sanctioned his employment for a special purpose, for one year only, at £5. With regard to the agent's accounts, they were always vouched, and the whole of them are here. I have looked over them; they seem very full and very well kept, and when they came to this office they were always gone over. He was always in advance to the charity, and a good deal in personal communication with the Bishop of Limerick, who stated he took a warm interest in it. In 1863, when Mr. McMahon resigned, his account was furnished for five years together, but perfectly full and vouched; and therefore it is a mistake to suppose there was anything wrong in that way.

16120. What the Dean of Limerick said about Mr. McMahon's accounts was that—

"He was managing the property for seven years without being called on by the Commissioners to pass his accounts?"

—That is not correct.

16031. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—You stated four years?—He did not present any accounts for four years at that one occasion.

16032. LORD JUSTICE FRYGEBORN.—In 1868 he resigned?—Yes. Mr. Mannell, who was recommended by the Governors, was then appointed, at 44 per cent as the mortgage, and in May he resigned, on the expense ground that he could not do the business on that amount. On the recommendation of the Bishop of Limerick and the Governors, Mr. Whidson, the present agent, was appointed, because he had been clerk to Mr. McMahon. I wish to read a letter from the Bishop of Limerick, in reference to Mr. McMahon, dated, Algiers, January 28, 1860.—

"My dear Mr. MacDonnell.—It would be very unjust to charge the late Mr. James McMahon with a want of ability, diligence, or honesty, in the discharge of his duty as agent of Jersey Hall's charity. It was not his fault that the house property deteriorated in value, for no funds were available for its repair. Houses, which had been valuable 200 years ago, brought in diminishing rents as they fell into decay, until finally they became so dilapidated that they had to be taken down. For this the agent was not to blame, neither were the owners. Without funds, specially applicable to the purpose of repairing the buildings, they were powerless to hinder the deterioration of the property. Mr. McMahon was agent of the estates of the fee for several lifetimes in succession. He was also agent for the Cathedral Chapter, and was always looked up to, in Limerick, as a man of remarkable intelligence and prudence. This unfortunate charity has furnished throughout its existence of the difficulty which is felt by the Managers of an institution carried on under a system of rules which require local rules and regulations are undergoing constant changes. But the evils would be greater if Managers were left without rules to guide them, and a controlling authority able to enforce the observance of such rules.

Ever yours faithfully,

C. LAMBERT."

16038. Mr. Whidson was examined before us, and appeared to be a gentleman of excellent character, and of activity and intelligence. The next matter is with regard to the condition of the buildings, and to those buildings which have actually fallen?—Let me lead up to that. You are aware that this is house property, 200 years old. We received it from the old Board, and the first minute of the Board upon it is on July 22, 1828, as follows—

"The Secretary reports that having been to Limerick in June last, he visited that institution and found it in a shameful state of neglect. The accumulated dirt of many years was visible in every corner of the premises, and, owing to the total absence of proper management, the building was nearly in ruins."

The solutions were ordered to take the steps I alluded to in 1830. They advertised for repairs to be done, and a sum of £315 was spent upon them. Under date, February 6, 1832, I find this minute—

"The solicitors reported that, under the orders of the Board of the 25th July, the solicitors instructed Mr. McMahon to prepare specifications and estimates for the repairs of the houses in Limerick. In reply he wrote that from the bad state of the premises, no one would undertake to repair them at a specified sum, but recommended that on the site of the house which had been taken down by the sheriff as a nuisance, and of the second house which he has no doubt will be presented at the next session as a nuisance, two new houses should be erected, and that the third house now occupied by Donohoe, who is unable either to pay the rent or repair the premises, should be suffered also to be taken down by presentment as a means of getting rid of a bad tenant."

This shows the condition of the property before we had anything to do with it. The transfer was made to us in 1840, by our Act of Parliament. In the same year, when Mr. Blackburne, then Master of the Rolls, was in the chair, Mr. McMahon sent up a notice that a presentment would be made to take down the houses as dangerous. Judge Keatinge was requested by the Board to take the papers with him and examine closely the rentals. In the following June, Chief Baron Brady was asked to inspect the premises, and report on them, and he did so in the following October. He advised to repair some of the houses, and pull down others. There were a great many advertisements issued by order of the Board, and estimates received for the repairs. One estimate of £485 for the same houses and different other buildings was accepted and carried out. I may add that when Chief Baron Brady became Lord Chancellor his successor, Chief Baron Pigott, took special interest in the matter, and had the papers with him in Limerick. In 1847, the houses were completed. On April 28, 1847, we received offers for the houses, after advertising, and we could get only £30 as the highest offer for six houses. From that out for many years up to 1863, I find nothing but tenants not paying rent, dilapidations and so forth. In 1863, under Mr. T. B. C. Smith, Master of the Rolls, the opinion of the law officers was taken as to proceeding for a scheme. The Board had no powers whatever at that time under its first Act.

16034. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—No power of doing what?—Making alterations in anything, such as have since been given. It was this case, and the legal difficulties of it, which led to the legislation in 1867. A statement was drawn up, which is in the minutes, and it is most singular the series of legal difficulties the Board met with. Mr. T. B. C. Smith took a warm interest in the legal part of the matter, as to how proceedings could be taken at that time, the law was so defective. We got the opinion of the law officers. They detected a certain course. Our counsel thought there was an objection, and the Attorney and Solicitor-General amended their first opinion. Then we had further proceedings, and went under a different Act, Sir Samuel Romilly's Act. It was found that we should have persons who had an interest in the matter. The Board declined to be relations, because in another case of the same kind they were pulled up by the Treasury, and had a sharp correspondence, because they asked the Treasury to pay some costs. There was a sharp conflict between the then Master of the Rolls and Mr Peel. The result was, that they deemed the whole of this long statement of the position of the charity to be sent to the Treasury, which was done, stating the necessity for legal proceedings, &c. in the opinion of the Board the charity could not be managed without a new scheme, and also that the Board was deterred, by the previous decision of the Treasury, from running any risk of costs. In fact, the state of the law, illustrated by this case, made it impossible for the Board to manage this or any other charity that required modification.

16635. I do not understand what the Commissioners wanted to do, that the law did not allow them to do?—To apply to the Court to frame a scheme.—

16636. For what—for the doing of repairs?—For the management of the property.

16637. LOUIS JERVIS FERGUSON.—They were obliged to apply the property as the will directed.—And in no other way. The will directed part of the money to go to a loan fund, part to go to the relief of poor debtors; part for an almshouse, school, and schoolmaster; part for apprentice fees, and also part for buying copies of various books for manual education, "The Bible," "The Whole Duty of Man," and others.

16638. The Board had no power to direct the money from these purposes?—Certainly not. I mention that to show you that for so many years they were powerless. It was this final decision of the Treasury that made them hold their hands. In consequence of this communication—and not only in this case, but in others—the Treasury and they would see about having the law altered. We took an active part in it, and the Act of 1867 was passed. I will now address myself to Lord R. Chancellors remarks, and the fallacy underlying the proceedings of the overmen. It was alleged that the Commissioners of Charitable Donations and Bequests had money on hands, and that the overmen urged them, in the strongest manner, to repair the buildings, but they would not do it. The Commissioners were distinctly of opinion that without an order of the Court of Chancery they could not apply the funds to repairs. The only case in which they can even now do it, is where a thing becomes impracticable. The Board, in this case, was bound to keep £300 for the loan fund, and, in 1863, the overmen having reported that they could not apply that, the Board thought they might then trust that as impracticable. However, they referred it to Judge Langford, to consider the legal question, and he thought it was not impracticable in the sense of being unworkable, but that the overmen themselves did not choose to work it, and if they did, it could be worked. We were also bound to pay £10 a year for the poor debtors, and that could not be touched for anything else. It was suggested in the scheme for the Court of Chancery that this might be voted by the Court. If it was varied by the Court, the funds we had would be set free to apply as the Board might think best for the advancement of the charity. The Court decided otherwise in July, 1870, and the scheme was very specific—it obliged us to keep the £300, and the £10 a year for poor debtors, but it authorized us to advance £150 for repairs, and no more. In point of fact, that was very little aid, because the only funds available, when that scheme was confirmed by the Court of Chancery, after paying the costs, consisted of £216 arrears, and £256 New Three per Cents. After providing for the loan fund and the £10 for poor debtors, there was practically nothing available. In 1874 the overmen sent an elaborate statement, and asked for £450 to repair those four houses; and they calculated that if that was done, the outlay would produce from £40 to £50 a year. Here in the passage, from the citation of November 11, 1874—

"Letter from the Governors stating that four houses belonging to the charity had become so dilapidated that the City Engineer reported them to be taken down; that it would require £450 to put them in tenurable condition, when they would produce from £40 to £50 a year, and the Governors requested that any funds available might be applied."

Before making any decision, the Board desired me to bring the state of the funds before them. On the 18th November I reported—

"That the £300 allowed by the Court of Chancery in 1871 in settling the houses had not been sent to the overmen of the charity; that the Board was bound under the scheme to retain in the loan fund so much stock as was then equivalent to £200 Irish, and that the whole charity funds now consisted of £254 11s. 6d., New Three per Cent Stock, and £216 12s. 6d., Consols. Ordered.—That to the extent of £250 the Commissioners will advance the balance of the amount in their hands, after deducting the stock reserved for the loan fund, if the overmen are of opinion that such advance may be made beneficial to the charity property, either by repairing some of the houses, and putting down the others, or by finding a house who will arrange to get the four houses in repair, receiving the £250, or by such other plan as the overmen may suggest."

16639. It was on that minute that Mr. Carlyle's office came in?—Yes, and the Board assented to it, but declined to go on. The overmen did not send up any statement. In fact, there was a difference of opinion among the overmen as to what should be done with the charity. It was quite obvious that all business of it could not be kept up, and the opinion was, on the whole, in favour of abolishing the school as being really practically useless, and to centre all the fund in keeping up the almshouse, because £18 a year would not keep up a school. Mr. Dawson, who was then high sheriff, wrote a letter on the matter.

16640. He wanted to build houses one story high?—Mr. Dawson's letter shows they were not unbusiness. On November 29, 1876, the secretary laid before the Board Mr. Dawson's letter of December 30, 1876, recommending that the school and loan fund should be kept, but no school, while others recommended that the school should be kept, and no loan fund. The Commissioners sent it back for consideration.

16641. We have nothing to do with the loan fund, but let me ask your attention to the four houses. On the 4th April, 1876, the overmen resolved unanimously that in their opinion it was expedient to remove the dilapidated buildings, and they requested the Commissioners to authorize an outlay for the repairs of the almshouse. On the 15th July, 1876, they were directed, in pursuance of their resolution of the 4th April, 1876, to advertise for and receive estimates on specifications, to be made by a competent person, for the thorough repair of the almshouse and school rooms in Nicholas-street, and Mr. Dawson was to communicate with the Board personally. On the 26th March, 1877, the Board were requested to satisfy the tender for repairs, which the overmen had forwarded on the 23rd October, 1876, and they were respectfully requested to take "immediate action." Why was nothing done upon that?—Because the Board were waiting for some spontaneous decision to be come to by the overmen.

16642. You are mixing up two things—the general scheme, and the buildings, which were all the time coming down, and did ultimately fall?—Not the school-house, which is the subject of your inquiry.

16643. No, but the houses in front, which were part of the charity buildings, and vested in your Board. The overmen say on the 26th March, 1877, that they forwarded to you on the 23rd October previous a tender for repairs, which by your directions they had got under an advertisement, and Doug Buxbury says—

"At the suggestion of the Commissioners, we got estimates for the repairs, but, when the estimates were laid before them, they refused to allow us to have the work carried out."

How was that?—It was obvious that the school was not working, and would not work, and that eventually it should be suppressed by the Court of Chancery, and then, instead of having two or three richly endowed charities, there would be one healthy charity—namely, the almshouse.

16634. But the almshouse and school are under the same roof. Why was it not repaired?—It was in sufficient repair, but the Commissioners wanted the authority of the Court of Chancery to abolish the school, and then they would expend money in re-modelling the house. They naturally said they would consolidate the fund.

16635. The next date we have from Dean Bunbury, is 26th April, 1873, when the overseers addressing the Commissioners state:—

"We further desire to mention that the almshouse is in pressing need of considerable repairs, and beg again to call the attention of the Commissioners to the specification for the work already furnished to them on the 23rd October, 1870, and to the tender of Mr John Gals, which we consider should be accepted."

HAVE YOU ANY MINUTE SHOWING WHAT YOU DID WITH THE TENDER TO REPAIR?—You see it is impossible to separate different branches in that way. We wanted to get a new scheme. The Board were of opinion that the former scheme should be amended. We did not want to deal merely with one branch, and we wanted to get an agreement with the overseers, as to what the new scheme should be.

16636. AND YOU THEN TOOK THAT YOUR COMMISSIONERS DELAYED DEALING WITH THE TENDER FOR THE "PRESSING" REPAIRS, NECESSARY TO KEEP THE HOUSE GOING, IN ORDER TO GET THE OVERSEERS TO AGREE AS TO THE MANAGEMENT OF THE INSTITUTION TO BE CARRIED ON IN CASE THE BUILDING DID NOT FALL?—We were delaying to get an agreement of the overseers as to what would be done with the property, so as not to have fighting in court.

16637. BUT THE DEAN TELLS US THAT THE REPORT CONCERNING THE ACCEPTANCE OF THE TENDER, WAS UNANIMOUSLY ADOPTED BY THE OVERSEERS, SIGNED BY MEMBERS OF DIFFERENT DENOMINATIONS AND WAYS OF THINKING, AND FORWARDED TO YOUR COMMISSIONERS AS A UNANIMOUS RECOMMENDATION. HIS FURTHER EVIDENCE ON THE POINT IS:—

"11920. Has anything been done about it?—Nothing whatever."

"11937. What has become of the house?—Going further into ruin, it is useless."

EXCUSE ME, THAT CANNOT APPLY TO THE ALMS HOUSE, BUT TO THE HOUSE IN FRONT. THE APARTMENTS SUIT FOR THE PURPOSES OF THE SCHOOL ARE SITUATED IN THE "ALMS-HOUSE," WHICH WAS FROM TIME TO TIME REPAIRED BY THE AGENT, MR. WILKINS, AS STATED IN HIS EVIDENCE. THE BUILDINGS REFERRED TO AS "GOING FURTHER INTO RUIN" AND "USELESS" WERE FOUR HOUSES IN NICHOLSON-STREET, WHICH ADJOINED AND WERE IN FRONT OF THE "ALMS-HOUSE," WHICH WERE NOT PART OF THE SAME SCHEME, THOUGH THE "ALMS-HOUSE" IS APPROACHED FROM THE STREET BY A PASSAGE THROUGH THE DISAPPOINTED PROMISE.

16638. Certainly. On the 26th April, 1873, your attention is again called to the matter by the overseers, who say:—

"On the completion of the almshouse, including the school-rooms and the teachers' apartments therein contained, we are of opinion that a suitable school-master and mistress should be appointed, there being now, in consequence of the death of Mr. Russell, the former master, to whom a pension of £10 per annum had been paid, sufficient funds to obtain the service of such teachers or would render the schools efficient and attractive."

WE WERE THERE ON THE 10th OCTOBER, 1870, AND THE DEAN TRULY DESCRIBED THE BUILDINGS AS GOING FURTHER TO RUIN, AND PART ON FIRE. THE SECRETARY, MR. GERRARD, IN STATE, WENT TO LOOK AT IT. THERE IS ALSO A RESOLUTION OF APRIL, 1878:—

"That the overseers approve of the appointment of Mrs. Beasley on the 1st of January, notwithstanding the resolutions of the 24th March, 1877, that vacancies were not to be filled up pending the repairs of the almshouse, which was postponed beyond the expectation of the overseers."

AND ON 26th NOVEMBER, 1878, AFTER MANY MONTHS DELAY, A LETTER WAS ADDRESSED FROM THE COMMISSIONERS TO THE DEAN, WHICH HE PRODUCED TO US AND WHICH BEGAN:—

"YOUR HON. DEAN SIR,—FROM THE PRESSING STATE OF THE BUSINESS OF THIS OFFICE, AND THE NUMBER OF CASES TO BE brought under the attention of the Commissioners, I found it impossible to get this case forward in the ordinary course."

WHAT WE REALLY WISH TO KNOW IS, WHAT TOOK PLACE BETWEEN 4th APRIL, 1870, AND 26th NOVEMBER, 1878, TO ACCOUNT FOR YOUR DISREGARDING THE REPEATED AND MANIFEST COMMISSIONS OF THE OVERSEERS, AND LETTING THE BUILDING FALL INTO RUIN?—THE BOARD WAS DEALING WITH ALL THE BRANCHES.

16639. WE DO NOT WANT TO KNOW ANYTHING ABOUT THE APPLICATION OF THE PROPERTY, BUT THE MAINTENANCE OF THE PROPERTY ITSELF?—PART OF THE PROPERTY WE COULD NOT APPLY WITHOUT THE HELP OF THE COURT OF CHANCERY.

16640. BUT YOU HAD IN 1871, SEVEN YEARS BEFORE, BEEN AUTHORIZED BY CHANCERY, AND ON 18th NOVEMBER, 1874, HAD RESOLVED, TO EXPEND £250 ON REPAIRS, WHY WERE THEY NOT EXECUTED?—THERE IS A MINUTE OF 30th NOVEMBER, 1873, VIZING ALL THAT WAS DONE IN THE MATTER:—

"Mr Secretary Gerrard informed the Board that this case was standing over for many months, and that, according to the other business on the paper, he had been unable to bring a forecast, he had requested the Board to fix the day for its special consideration. He read the scheme as finally sanctioned by the Master of the Rolls, and dated 23rd May, 1871. He stated that of the four branches of the charity as laid down by the scheme, the system was the only one which appeared to have been worked in conformity with it, and that even that had been worked exclusively Protestant. As regards the others, in such changes in the law had rendered it impracticable. The loan branch had never been put into operation, and the £200 set apart for that purpose was still unexpended, and the accounts had frequently expressed their inability to carry it out. The school had not been carried out on the principle laid down in the scheme, and the secretary stated that he had received a letter from which he gathered that the children in attendance, from which it appears that some of them were only two, three, and four years of age, and that for a considerable period there had been no schoolmaster, but only a mistress. The secretary further stated that the Dean of Lincoln had expressed a wish that the schools should be so reconstructed, as to be placed in a position to avail itself of the advantages of the Education Act of last session. Mr Gerrard laid before the Board resolutions passed by the overseers at meetings held in July, 1870, March, 1871, and May, 1873. These had not set out at length the reasons why, in the opinion of the overseers, the loan branch could not be worked, and suggested that the sums desired for this and the children's branch should be set in as much as was available for rebuilding the almshouse in front of the almshouse, which was new roofing and in ruins, and expending their opinion that a sum of eight or ten per cent. would probably work from the surplus, further stating that the almshouses were in pressing need of repairs, and suggesting that on the completion of the repair of the almshouse, including the school and teachers' apartments, it would be possible from the income of the charity to obtain the services of a good school-master and mistress and to make the school efficient and attractive. The secretary stated that with the exception of Mr Charles Dawson, who had held the office of High Sheriff of the city of Lincoln, in 1870, and who had during his year of office taken a great interest in the charity, the Mayor and High Sheriff had not, as a rule, interfered as ex-officio overseers with the working of the charity, although Mr. Hastings, the Mayor for the present year, and Mr. Hunt, the high sheriff, attended the meeting of the overseers in April, 1878, and had with the other overseers signed the resolutions then adopted. The secretary laid before the Board a communication, addressed by Mr Dawson to the overseers, dated 30th December, 1876, stating his opinion that the school was unnecessary as being in close proximity to other good free schools, both for Protestants and Catholics, which did not exist in the time of the master, but suggesting, in the event of its being thought necessary to continue it, that the fact of religious instruction in conformity with the doctrine of the Church of England, should be compulsorily enforced on the school children. Mr Dawson further expressed his opinion that the loan fund could be restricted to assist in young men in Lincoln, who had completed their apprenticeship and who were about commencing business, and he suggested that the action in the position of the charity which ought to be maintained, improved, and extended. The Secretary informed the Board that the income of the charity consisted of an annual sum of about £150 derived from rents of houses, and other deteriorating property, in the old portion of the city of Limerick, and that there was also standing to the credit of the Commissioners in cash, £900 12s 6d, and in new three, £214 10s 5d, and in cash arising from consolidated dividends on those two sums, £44 7s 4d. There is also an accumulated balance of income in the hands of the local agent, of the present amount of which he was not aware. Ordered.—That the Secretary inform the owners that the Board having carefully considered the present position of the charity is of opinion that the scheme will have to be revised, and that the Court of Chancery is also competent to revise it. That a proceeding for this purpose is likely to be attended with considerable expense to the lands of the charity, which will be much increased if the owners do not agree on the modifications and changes that are necessary. That the Secretary request the owners to hold a special meeting to consider the present position of the charity, and to offer suggestions for the amendment of the scheme, and that in order to guide their deliberations, he refers them that the present views of the Board, and that the local fund branch has not become impracticable, or that if it is it is owing to the owners not having taken effectual steps to carry it out. That the school as at present conducted is not in accordance with the scheme. That it is not intended on the one hand to be an infant school, or on the other to be an intermediate one, but that it should be one solely for primary education. That the Secretary throw out for the consideration of the owners, whether the portion of the income intended for educational purposes might not advantageously be applied to the establishment of a National school, and in implementing the wishes of the teachers and other landed purposes. That if, for the reasons stated to the commissioners from Mr. Dawson, or for any other reasons, the owners shall be of opinion that it will not be possible successfully to keep up the school, they ought to consider whether the almshouses cannot be improved, and the benefits of them extended to a larger number of persons. That the debate be continued over for further consideration.

16441. Upon that you will observe that the owners passed the following resolution:—

"That the owners are of opinion, that the efficiency of the charity may be best promoted, by devoting all its available funds to the maintenance and improvement of the almshouse, and with a view to the attainment of this object, they recommend that none of the funds of the charity should be applied, without further loss of time, to the rebuilding of the houses in front of the almshouse, from the rents of which, a considerable consideration to the funds of the charity would arise. Proposed by the Mayor, seconded by the Dean, and carried.—That it is absolutely necessary that a portion of the funds of this charity, be expended on the repairs of the almshouse."

This resolution so passed on 7th July, 1879, which you will observe, is five years after the urgency of the repairs was brought to your notice, and three and a half years after Mr. Quinn's tender had been unanimously recommended for your acceptance. Was anything done to repair these houses?—There was not, because the Board considered it absolutely necessary to manage the charity by a scheme of the sort.

16442. Do you not see that under every proposal the almshouse was to be maintained, and that during your deliberations a portion of the property for the purpose "managed" itself by falling into ruin?—Yes, but not the almshouse.

16443. Let me next call your attention to the evidence of your agent, Mr. Widdess:—

"11378 Have you ever asked the Commissioners for authority to execute repairs, to prevent the premises from falling into decay?—No, I did not ask for authority. What I considered absolutely necessary I got done."

"11379 Had any one come from the Commissioners, to see the premises?—Well, Mr. Gorman, the Secretary, happened to be here on other business, and I showed him the principal part of the property in Nicholas-street, and the almshouse."

Then he said:—

"Mr. Gorman does not understand much about repairs, but he saw the state of the premises, and the confusion the almshouse was in. He was here three or four years ago."

His further evidence on the subject was:—

"11380 Was anything done in consequence of his visit?—Nothing."

"11381 Can you tell us why nothing has been done to remedy this state of things?—Well, I cannot say. The owners have urged the Commissioners several times, but still the thing is put back. They ordered the owners to get an architect to prepare a specification for repairs. I got Mr. Smith, a professional man here, to prepare a specification, for which I paid him £5, and I sent it to the Commissioners for their approval, but they never took any step on it."

"11382 Did he make an estimate of the cost of the repairs, or only a specification?—It was both."

"11383 How much was the estimate?—Between £140 and £160 for the whole repairs of the almshouse, and putting up a new gate in front."

Did your Board receive that estimate from their agent?—Certainly; and the only explanation I can give is, that the Commissioners thought they were always on the eve of settling the whole thing, and getting authority and directions from the Court of Chancery what they were to do with it.

16444. But whether it was to be used as an almshouse or a school-house, or as both, was not this the building which they intended to use for the purpose?—Yes; but you would alter it differently if it were to be a school-house from what would be suitable for an almshouse. What was passing through the minds of the Commissioners was this: "The charity will have to be remodelled, and until it is remodelled by competent authority we will spend no money." Position of the property was a nuisance fifty years ago.

16445. That is, as to the almshouse, a mistake, but what I am asking relates, not to the management of the charity, but to the actual maintenance of the charity property?—The Board asked to have a scheme, and to settle the entire charity. The property is in the old part of the town, where property has deteriorated considerably. My impression was that to repair it gradually was perfectly hopeless, and a very bad investment. I would read a minute of the 18th December, 1878:—

"Mr. Secretary Gorman read the letter addressed by him to the owners of this charity, in pursuance of Board's minute of 30th November, and read letter from Mr. Widdess, the agent, dated 15th inst., forwarding a resolution passed unanimously by the owners at a special meeting, held on the 7th inst. at which Mr. Hastings, Mayor of Limerick, presided, and at which there were also present:—Very Rev. Thomas Baskery, Dean of Limerick; Messrs. Robert Hunt and Robert Voss O'Brien. The resolution reiterated the opinion of the owners that the loan fund could not be worked, for the reasons stated in their communication of 27th April, and conveyed their unanimous approval of the proposal that the income intended for the school should be allocated to strengthen and improve the almshouse branch of the charity. Mr. Gorman also had before the Board a proposal from Mr. Devin Quinlan, of Nicholas-street, Limerick, to take a lease of the premises at present occupied by him for any term the Commissioners might determine, at the yearly rent of £10, he undertaking to expend a sum of £200 on immediate improvements, and the lease to be made at his expense. Read letter from the agent; also a resolution passed by the owners recommending that Mr. Quinlan's proposal should be accepted. Ordered.—That the Board's selector be instructed to carry the scheme of 23rd May, 1875, before the Court, with a view to alterations and alterations in such form as Board view to advise, that the portion pay the Court to rebuild the present school as necessary and impracticable, and to apply the portion of the income heretofore expended on the school towards the payment and maintenance of the almshouse, also that the Board shall be at liberty to expend a sum sufficient to put the almshouse into proper repair, and, if necessary, to enlarge the accommodation, that it take care every year that the portion of the income heretofore set aside for poor debtors shall also be applied in maintenance of the almshouse, that the loan fund (as yet) of the charity, and the loan of the same application by the present owners, be specially brought under the notice of the Court, with a view to its deciding whether it will continue it or alter its future application, that the Board approve of the proposal of Mr. Devin Quinlan for a lease, but require the owners to suggest what sum of years it would recommend to be given to him."

The Vice-Chancellor stopped the case for affidavits as to whether the school could be worked or not.

16446. Up to the present time has anything been done towards making the expenditure on the buildings?—No. The agent has been at liberty to make small repairs which he charges in his accounts.

16647. Only temporary repairs, such as painting and glazing?—Not heavy works, but more than that.
16648. May I ask you some questions as to the powers of your Board, which are, I believe, much less extensive than those which exist in England, or than generally supposed?—Certainly, we are most anxious to point out any deficiency in our powers.

16649. Under your original Act, of 1844, your principal power was to use for the recovery of charitable donations or bequests withheld, concealed, or misapplied, and to apply the same, when recovered, to the purposes intended?—Yes, that was practically our only power.

16650. There was also a power with regard to Roman Catholic churches and globe residences, with which we have nothing to do. In 1867 you obtained power to give opinions, advice, or directions when asked by trustees or persons connected with charities, provided you thought it advisable to do so—has that power been made available?—Very often.

16651. In the case of schools?—Yes; but I could not say how often. In the important case of Joseph Stow's charity we did so, by giving advice to the trustees.

16652. And you have also power to sanction leases and sales?—That we have done frequently.

16653. And also to take proceedings where requests or demands, and to certify to the Attorney-General, in order that they may be taken by him?—Yes.

16654. But all proceedings must be taken in or under the direction of the Court of Chancery?—Often under the opinion of the law officers of the Crown, so the safest course. The Attorney-General brings the information at the request of the Commissioners, under the 4th section. Under the 5th section—enabling us to certify cases to the Attorney-General—in two cases, where it was doubtful whether the Board could sue, he did so.

16655. Under the same Act, of 1867, you have got a power to state cases for the Court of Chancery, with the view of having schemes modified, where it is unlawful or impracticable to apply the funds according to the existing scheme?—We have that power only where the existing scheme is unlawful or impracticable. "Where impracticable" is the only case which has arisen with us, in which we have exercised it. I would ask leave to read the opinion of the Board, very strongly expressed, in its 33rd Annual Report, upon such a case as this would be, because it calls for a remedy:—

"Instances have occurred which illustrate the expediency of larger powers being given for remedying defects of ancient dates, so as to better adapt them to modern requirements. The leading intention of trustees should, as far as practicable, be observed and respected, whilst details of administration might be modified, which by process of time have become unsuitable or obsolete, and which so long as they carry out essentially the charitable objects the trustees had in view. In the lapse of time circumstances so materially change that we think a power of making corresponding changes in the management of such charities might safely be exercised, even though it had not become actually 'impracticable' to follow literally the testator's instructions. For instance, we hold a small fund for the purchase of spinning wheels, now largely. The testator doubtless meant to encourage domestic industry, but he would not wish to do so in a manner now wholly disused in the place in which he designed it."

We are at present limited to what is impracticable, and, while the purchase of spinning wheels is not "impracticable," it may be held that the Act does not apply.

16656. Your powers were at first limited as to testament, but were extended by the Act of 1871 to all cases?—Yes, the first Act was legislative. All alterations must be made by an Act of Parliament. We can do nothing without notice. We publish notices in the papers here, and in the locality, and are bound to receive objections and hear arguments.

16657. But even in those cases you cannot go beyond the scope of the Act, which is confined to "unlawful" or "impracticable" schemes?—Certainly not.

But the old Board had a less limited power. They used to act in camera. That created a prejudice on the part of the Roman Catholics against the Board, under the impression that they might, in camera, divert the intentions of the testator from their original objects.

16658. You have power to take over trust property on the application of trustees?—Yes. That is confined to stock and money.

16659. You do not take land?—Certainly not, and deliberately not.

16660. The Act of 1871 seems to have extended your other powers, and also reduced the quorum of your Board to three. Have you fixed stated meetings?—Every Wednesday at four o'clock, with intervals of vacation.

16661. There is a weekly meeting of the Board?—Yes; allowing for vacations, thirty-two meetings are held in the year. Now that the quorum is three we generally have an attendance of five; because as a rule when no quorum was formed members went away at a quarter after four. When the quorum was five we constantly failed to have a meeting, but now Commissioners drop in, in the certainty that they will find the Board sitting.

16662. You have power to call for books, but no power to require accounts?—No. All powers of inquiry, or of an inquisitorial nature, were purposely excluded as far as possible; practically we have not suffered inconvenience. The Roman Catholic bishops would have resented it, and we did not wish to alienate them.

16663. Under the English Charitable Trusts Act there is power to examine and inquire into charities, their condition and management—have you any such power?—We have as direct power to inquire, except in this way.—A complaint is made that a charity is mismanaged or its funds withheld. We can write to the person charged with this, asking "Have you paid the money? If not, why have you not?" If he does not choose to give information or answer those inquiries, the Board consider whether they should go to the Court of Chancery and compel him. In point of fact when it comes to that we get information, and it seldom occurs that we have to resort to the Court.

16664. Do you ever institute a proceeding by way of inquiry except upon being put in motion by some one else?—Never.

16665. There is no power to call for accounts or statements, or to require answers to any inquiries, or to inspect, nor have you any power to examine on oath?—None.

16666. There is an official trustee of charity lands, and an official trustee of charity funds in England. I understand you to say your Board do not take any lands but do receive funds as trustees?—There is no separate trustee. The funds are put into the corporate name, and we constantly receive funds for charities.

16667. Again, perhaps the most important of all the English powers, that all charities within the Act are bound to keep annual accounts, and submit them annually to the English Commissioners. You receive an account?—We receive them in many cases, as a subsidiary check; but we do not make ourselves responsible for verifying them. It was proposed, but Judge Longfield prepared a minute, showing that we had no machinery for the settling of accounts, the work being insufficient.

16668. What is the provision for your staff as it now stands?—The provision for it is, that whatever is necessary for the working of the office is put upon the Parliamentary votes, with the sanction of the Treasury.

16669. In England I notice they originally started with three paid Commissioners, one secretary, two assistants, and travelling and other expenses were allowed?—Yes, those have been greatly increased, and in addition they have a large number of clerks. Our staff consists of two secretaries, a clerk, a writer, and a housekeeper.

16670. Another jurisdiction conferred in England,

April 12, 1884. In 1850, was one to appoint and remove trustees, and also school-masters and other officers?—We have no number
 Mr. Hyndes power; the power as to trustees might be desirable
 Mr. MacDonnell

16671 Under an Act of 1852, the Charity Commissioners in England can incorporate charities so as to save the expense of perpetual appointments of trustees. Is there any power of that kind here?—No. The Master of the Rolls peacefully carried out that object; for he often suggests that, instead of incurring the expense of going to the Court of Chancery each year a trustee dies, they should deposit the principal here, so that as trustees in succession and no expense incurred. We do not in these cases administer the fund, we simply remit the dividends to the local administration.

16672 That is, indirectly, an attempt to get part of this benefit, but I presume you would not apply it in the case of land or houses, where the expense and inconvenience are most felt?—We should not.

16673 Under the Endowed Schools Acts there is a power to the Court of Chancery in England to extend and regulate the education, to unite schools in the same place (such as is proposed in the Lanesborough case), where each endowment is too small to fit school-masters, and to enlarge the powers of visitors. Are there any such powers under your Act?—No, certainly not. These things are sometimes done by the Court of Chancery in a scheme. One school in the county Month had become from local circumstances, impracticable, and was so changed by the Court.

16674 Lord R. Grosvenor.—But the Court of Chancery would have no power to unite any number of schools?—No, unless it became impracticable to carry on one.

16675 Lord Justice FitzGibbon.—There was a case in Dublin, an attempt to apply the unused funds of the 'Machabes' Charitable Society to keep up the Merchant Tailors' School?—It was not before us.

16676 Among the other English powers over endowed schools there is a power, in the Endowed Schools Commissioners, now transferred to the Charity Commissioners to organize, alter, and add to, the trusts of endowments, subject to the control of the Privy Council, and to apply funds to the purposes of education, &c. Have you any such power?—No direct power, except through a scheme. If these very large and varied powers were attempted to be given it would involve the creation of a separate and additional staff.

16677 Something analogous to the existing staff in England?—Yes, but it could not possibly be done in this office, and I think we are much better employed, and have quite enough to do, in looking after the recovery, and preservation, of funds for charities, and their due administration.

16678 My object was to show that those powers which exist in England, with adequate staffs maintained at the public expense to carry them out, are not in existence in this country?—Certainly, and one reason is the economy. We (the secretaries) introduced some of them into a draft Bill, but the Commissioners would not have them.

16679 We have had several instances before us of great complaints, on the part of different schools, of the great cost of obtaining the appointment of new trustees, and modifications of schemes in Chancery. Is there any course, subject to the control of your Board, by which schemes could be modified, or new trustees appointed, without the expense of going to Chancery?—No, but there is an important provision which is very valuable, and which has been acted on on a few occasions. If the Board choose to promote a scheme they can get it confirmed by the Court of Chancery on a summary petition. But whenever that has been done it has been the result of long parties consequent there has always been a difference between the trustees and local parties as to how things should be done. By dealing with them separately, and by ultimately bringing them together, the fighting which would have taken the form of costly litigation in the Court of Chancery has been avoided. The Board get such to agree, and then go to the Court, and a summary order may be made, the expense of which nobody can complain of.

16680 But this is practically available only when all parties agree?—Yes; but if the income of a charity does not exceed £30 a year, or the capital £300, we have most absolute power to receive applications, and publish a scheme. We constantly exercise the power, and our schemes have all the force of an Act of Parliament.

16681 And has that been considerably availed of?—Very largely availed of—a most useful power. We exercise it at the mere cost of the publications—about 12s. perhaps.

16682 Is there any reason why it should not be extended?—We have not a staff sufficient to deal with all charities.

16683 I had omitted one case of a complaint made to us of the action of this Board. Captain Byre is under the impression that the Board sanctioned the removal of Ralph Modifia's school in ignorance of the existence of a mortgage on the house to which it was removed?—The Board acted in that case after a great deal of deliberation; and the best explanation I can give is to read a letter written on the 1st March last, by the Secretaries to this Board, to Dr. Meredith, the Secretary to your Commission:—

"Sir.—In reply to your inquiry, we think it best to give you a précis of the steps taken in this charity, so far as the Board has had cognizance of them. You will observe that this Board, after very careful investigation, did not 'negate' their assent to the transfer of the school' in the sense in which that phrase is obviously used by Captain Byre, namely, by giving their approval of it. They expressly desired to do so, though they thought such a step would be 'legal' for the Governors. At that time nothing was known by us of the mortgage; nor do we think a knowledge of it would have altered the course taken by the Board, though it might have been very material to the trustees, who should see to the sufficiency of the title they accepted. The only of the Camden-street house became known, even the Governors had received their school elsewhere. It could not be left unoccupied to go to ruin. We return you herewith Captain Byre's letter.

HENRY MACDONNELL, W. GIBSON, Secretaries."

16684 Was the option in that case given under the section of the Act of Parliament that enables you to advise trustees?—No; they applied to us to exercise one of three forms of authorisation sanctioning the exchange of one house for another, in which to hold the school, and they also asked us to give in approval of the plan. We sanctioned the exchange, but said "No" to the request of approval. There was a great deal of consideration given to the subject, and we said, "The trustees have legal power to take this step; but we give you no opinion whatever as to the expediency of whether or not they should do it."

16685 Then you did not investigate title at all?—No, we did not. In that case we simply say, "We allow you to sell your title to such a piece of ground," and they carry that out. But I do not mean to say that the knowledge of that fact might not modify the decision of the Board.

16686 You told them they had power to transfer, or do whatever they wanted, but you did not go into the title?—Certainly not.

Mr. William Gibson, &c., recalled.

16687 CHAIRMAN.—Do you coincide with the evidence given by Mr. MacDonnell as to the powers of your Board?—Certainly. I may say this, that there appears to be much less prejudice, in the Roman Catholic mind, against giving extensions of powers to this Board now, than there formerly was; and what has led to that is, that we do everything in public, and after full notice. We do not change the intentions of trustees in secret.

[The Commissioners adjourned.]

FORTY-THIRD DAY—WEDNESDAY, MAY 19, 1880.—EIGHT O'CLOCK, A.M.

At the Commissioners' Office, Four Courts, Dublin.

Present.—THE EARL OF ROSSE, Chairman; LORD JUSTICE FITZGERSON, RICHARD O'SHAUGHNESSY, Esq., M.P.; ANDREW SHARPLE HART, Esq., LL.D.; and ARTHUR HILL CUNTER, Esq., LL.B.; with JAMES O'NEILL MURPHY, Esq., LL.D., Secretary.

Rev. JOSEPH COVAT, &c., examined.

Rev. Joseph Covat, &c.

16688. CHAIRMAN.—What position do you hold in connection with Hervey's Charity, Mullingar?—I am the agent over the property, and one of the trustees.

16689. How long have you held that position?—I have been the agent since 1873, but I was only appointed a trustee in January, 1880.

16690. Who are the other trustees?—The Most Rev. Dr. Nulty, Bishop of Meath, the Most Rev. Dr. Donnelly, Bishop of Clogher; Sir Walter Nugent, Bart., and Edward McEvoy, esq.

16691. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—Are you the gentleman who furnished to Mr. Mooney the copy of the accounts, which he produced to us?—Yes.

16692. The endowment is derived from the rent of land?—Yes, it is £269 a year. I produce a book showing the items of receipts and expenditure, for each half-year, and the acreage and rental of the land.

16693. From whom was the endowment derived?—From Mr. James Hervey, who made his will in 1825, and died in 1827.

16694. The will declares the trust to be to—

"Apply the rents, issues, and profits of the said lands to provide for the support, maintenance, and education of such and so many of the poor children resident in the parish of Mullingar, in the county of Westmeath, as the said trustees, executors, and assigns shall be sufficient to support, maintain, and fully educate in such branches of Literature, Science, and Theology as my said Trustee for the time being, or the Majority of them, shall think fit, and they do not otherwise, shall think fit, that is to say, with full power to the said trustees, executors, and assigns to remove from the said school, or any Transferee the Majority of them, in case they do not appear, shall from time to time think fit, it being my design and intention that the Majority of age and Trustees shall at all times have power to select and direct the individuals among the poor children of the said parish who are to obtain such support, maintenance, and education as aforesaid, and to move, determine, and execute from time to time, such and so many of the said poor children, and that without appeal or redress, as the Majority of my Trustees for the time being may think fit, and to select others in their stead. Provided, however, that no difference of religion shall be the ground or reason for not selecting, excluding, or expelling any child from the benefit of this bequest. And my intention is that the rents, issues, and profits of the said Lands should for ever hereafter be applied by my Trustees for the time being in the support, maintenance, and education of such poor children as aforesaid, subject to be selected and removed as is aforesaid."

How many schools have been erected under that trust?—Eight, viz., four in the occupation of the Christian Brothers, a classical school, and three under the management of the Protestant Nuns.

16695. Are the four, under the management of the Christian Brothers, all in the town of Mullingar?—Yes.

16696. Are the four under one roof?—Yes, and under the same roof are the dwellings of the Christian Brothers, the classical school, and the apartments of the dayman in charge of it.

16697. You do not mean that there are four distinct institutions?—There are four distinct classrooms.

16698. In ordinary parlance those would be called one school. Is the classical school distinct?—That is a distinct school, quite independent, but under the same roof.

16699. Are those three separate schools under the charge of nuns?—They may be regarded as one school.

16700. Is there any charge for support and maintenance at any of those schools, as provided in the will?—There is, for the support and maintenance of the Christian Brothers, but not of the children, except for meagre fees.

16701. There is nothing done to support and maintain the ordinary children educated?—No.

16702. With regard to religion, have there been any applications, by persons other than Roman Catholics, for admission to those schools?—Certainly; and they have been always admitted. There is no distinction made, but their religion is ascertained with a view, in the case of those who were not Catholics, of putting them out to play or be otherwise absent during religious instruction.

16703. That has always been the course?—Always.

16704. There is a provision in the will for the teaching of theology. I suppose with regard to ordinary Catholic children, not going to be designers or nuns, that is interpreted to mean the Catechism?—Yes.

16705. And notwithstanding the presence in the will of a provision for the teaching of "such branches of theology as my said trustees may think fit," it is not enforced upon Protestants?—It is not.

16706. The will also contains this provision:—

"I do declare the devise of the said lands to upon this further trust, that the said trustees for the time being, or the majority of them, shall be at liberty out of the issue and profits of said lands, and otherwise to build, erect and furnish, and keep furnished and in perpetual repairs, a school or college for the support, maintenance, and education of the poor children aforesaid, the great majority of whom, if not the whole, being Roman Catholics, and upon this further Trust that the Catholic Priest of Mullingar, the said Rev. Patrick Kelly, and, in the event of his death, the Catholic Priest, for the time being, shall be superintendent of said school or college, and shall visit and examine the same at least once in every week, and shall also sign a Book to be kept for that purpose, a weekly report of the state of said school for the inspection of the Trustees for the time being, and I do declare and begeth that such superintendent shall be entitled to receive, and be paid out of the issue and profits of said land, the sum of £40 sterling by two half yearly payments on every 1st of May and 1st of November. On the first payment to be commenced on the 1st of the said days shall first come after the opening of the said school, whether same shall be opened in a House Built by said Trustees or otherwise."

How did the trustees obtain the money to erect the buildings in which the present schools are situated?—From the rents of the lands.

16707. Not directly, I think. Did not they borrow money for building purposes?—Some years elapsed after the death of Mr. Hervey, and the proving of his will, before they began to build. They were allowing the money to accumulate. In 1841 they made a contract for building the Convent school at £2,000, and in 1855 they made another contract for the building of the Christian Brothers' schools, the dwelling-house, and the classical school. They had to borrow £2,000 in order to enable them to pay the amount of the contract. That money they borrowed from the rents, and it has been all paid off except £450.

16708. Then, as I understand, they built both schools out of the accumulation of rents, and a further sum of £2,500 borrowed from the nuns?—Yes.

16709. The mode in which the sum borrowed from the nuns was paid off was by a sinking fund, created out of the income from the land?—Yes, the debt was paid off in sums of £500, according to the contract with the nuns, who receive four per cent. upon the amount remaining due.

May 25, 1889
Rev. Joseph
Copley, Esq.

16710 What was the cost of the buildings you have mentioned?—The cost of the Current school was £2,060, and the cost of the other was over £5,000.
16711. The will also provides:—

"I do declare that my intention is to found a school or college for the support, maintenance, and education of the poor children of the parish of Malling to be freely selected from amongst the children of persons not in open avowedness, and that it shall not be an objection to the selection of any such child, although the parent of such child may have some property, provided he be not in circumstances which can reasonably be called opulent, and I empower the majority of the said Trustees for the time being for ever, to make rules and regulations for the good government, management, or disposal of the said school or college, and the rents, issues, and profits of the said lands. And I do declare such rules and regulations when entered into Book to be kept for that purpose, and signed by the Majority of the Trustees for the time being shall be binding and conclusive in themselves, and shall extend or be changed by any subsequent decision of the Majority of said Trustees, and which alteration or change I hereby authorize the majority of my Trustees to make, so that the Majority of the Trustees for the time being, shall have authority not only to designate and repeal former rules and regulations, but to make and effect or amend new and additional rules and regulations, it being my intention to give the Majority of the said Trustees for the time being, as much power and authority as could be exercised by any visitor or visitors of any endowed school or college. And having with regard to said Town and Lands of Brynastown, no further or other charitable intention or purpose than that which I have heretofore expressly declared, and being decidedly opposed to any Court or Tribunal in this County or within this realm, taking upon itself to regulate, or take upon itself to regulate or make any alterations, or meddling with such my charitable intentions I declare that if any Court shall so intemperate, or if the Commissioners of Charitable Donations and Bequests shall intemperate, or attempt to intemperate, or if any Bill, or information for the purpose of being allowed to intemperate, or if any person shall file any bill or information with the intent of bringing the said Charity within the control or management of said Commissioners, Then and in such case, I revoke all and singular the bequest heretofore mentioned, and the trusts and purposes heretofore expressed, and I do give, devise and bequeath the said Town and Lands of Brynastown unto the said Right Rev. John Cantwell, Right Rev. William Higgins, Rev. Patrick Kelly, and the survivors and survivors of them as Joint Trustees, and to the heirs of each survivor for ever, absolutely and freely, and discharged of every Trust, confidence, charity, use or fiduciary intent or purpose, and so freely and fully to all intents and purposes as if this bequest to them and to the heirs of them, and the heirs and assigns of each survivor were the only intent or purpose expressed or declared in or by this my last will and Testament, it being my express will and intention that either my own rules and regulations, and intentions heretofore expressed concerning the aforesaid Charity shall take effect, or that the fee and inheritance of the said Lands shall become absolutely and simply vested in the said Right Rev. John Cantwell, Right Rev. William Higgins, and Rev. Patrick Kelly, and the survivors of them, and the heirs and assigns of each survivor of them for ever."

What class of children are those in the schools—taking first the Christian Brothers' school?—Primarily children of the humble class, but nobody is excluded. No payment is enforced, but if any money be given it is devoted only for the benefit of the poorer children in the Christian Brothers' schools.

16712 The education is of the ordinary character given in the Christian Brothers' schools?—I think it is a little in advance of the ordinary primary education given in Christian Brothers' schools. In the ordinary Christian Brothers' schools, as I believe, printing is not taught, or pencil drawing, or electricity, or the higher mathematics, and these branches are all taught in the schools connected with this trust.

16713 Why is it that this exception to the ordinary programme has been adopted?—I believe it is because, owing to the receipts from the property, an additional Christian Brother can be, and has been, engaged.

16714 Is now taken that the teaching of these subjects will not interfere with the proper teaching of the ordinary primary subjects?—Certainly.

16715 What is the number of children attending the Christian Brothers' school?—The number on the roll is 450, and the number in actual attendance during the last three months has been 432.

16716 Is there any part of the income of the Charity devoted to prizes?—Not in the Christian Brothers' school.

16717 What class of children attend the intermediate school?—The middle class.

16718 Is that a free school, or is payment required?—Payment is required.

16719 What are the rates of payment?—£4 a year.

16720 Does that include all the ordinary subjects?—That includes English, Latin, Greek, geometry, and history. Perhaps I ought to add, that the clergyman in charge of that school receives no portion of the endowment. His sole remuneration is the income derived from the pupils.

16721 Are we to understand that the sole benefit, which that school derives from the endowment, is the use of the premises?—Yes.

16722 Is any part of the proceeds of the intermediate school applied to the payment of rent for the premises?—No. The rent on the Christian Brothers' schools, and the intermediate school is paid out of the proceeds of the property.

16723 Are there any children in either the Christian Brothers' school, the intermediate school, or the girls' school, coming from the class mentioned by the testator, which without being absolutely poor cannot be called opulent?—Certainly.

16724 Is which of the schools are such children to be found?—In all the schools. Of course in the intermediate school there are no free pupils.

16725 Is the girls' school divided into three classes?—There are three classrooms.

16726 Under what order of name is that school?—The Presentation Order.

16727 Has it been always under the Presentation Order?—Yes.

16728 Lord Justice FRYGESSON.—Do I understand you correctly, that there are no children 'supported and maintained'—that education is what you give, and that only?—Only education. I should say there is an allowance of £35 a year, paid from the property, to the infants' school.

16729 Is that under a separate clause of the will?—It is by direction of the trustees. I must add that this £35 a year is not appropriated by the uses. I went over their books, and I found that from 1841 to 1848 they expended among the poor children not only the £35 a year, but also £700 of their own money, in giving assistance in clothing and food.

16730 Mr O'SHEAHER.—How many children are there on the roll of the girls' school?—320. The average daily attendance is about 320, which is very good.

16731 That school is divided into three classes?—Yes.

16732 With reference to what standard has that division been made?—First, the infants' school, secondly, the children reading the National school books up to the third class, and of course learning to write, and the elementary portions of arithmetic, and then the higher class, where the pupils are taught shorthand, history, and in fact all the higher branches of education, as well as plain and fancy needlework.

16733 Is there any opportunity of teaching household duties, such as cooking and washing?—Very little.

16734 Among the girls who attend that school are there representatives of the non-pauper, and still non-opulent, class?—There are—the large bulk of the pupils belong to that class.

16735 Is there any payment, such as a penny a week, made by the children of that class?—Anyone who wishes pays, but the money is never appropriated by the uses. It is always applied to improving the classrooms, or to the purchase of books, shoes, &c., for the poorest children.

16736 CHAIRMAN.—There is no compulsory payment?—None.

May 15, 1846
Rev. Joseph
Cory, F.R.S.

16737. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—In the scheme book, which you have produced, I find under date of 12th November, 1845, this entry:—

"That in future there shall be an annual public examination of the several children discharging the schools, and at each examination the sum of £30 be distributed to the poorer who shall combine the best answering with the best attendance and conduct during the preceding year, and that of the above sum £15 be appropriated to the female school, and £15 to the boys' school."

Is that arrangement continued?—The sum do not require it in the female school, as they give pensions to that amount, or perhaps more. When the boys' school was put under the Christian Brothers the trustees arranged that every rule should be set aside, in order that the Christian Brothers might carry out their own rules rigidly, and one of their rules is to give no prize from a public fund. The reason I say "a public fund" is that I know they give them from their own resources.

16738. I presume the inspection and examination would be also under the regulation of the Christian Brothers?—Yes, and the schools are open to anyone who wishes to be present.

16739. Mr. O'SHEAQUEST.—The prices given by the Christian Brothers of course consist of books and such things and not of money?—Never of money, but books, pictures, models, and gifts of that class.

16740. Have the Christian Brothers ever, within your knowledge, departed from that rule of not competing for prizes from a public source?—To my knowledge they never have.

16741. They have not sent up children for the Intermediate examinations?—They have not, but they are preparing them this year.

16742. That will be a departure from their particular rule. Does not it seem inconsistent to have a rule set to compete for public prizes, and at the same time to prepare boys?—The fact is that persons have been brought to bear on them, in order to stimulate the pupils, pressure from the bishops, and from those who have control over the resources of the schools.

16743. I suppose you constantly visit those schools?—Pretty frequently. One of the private visits and examines each week. He gives instruction in music and other matters.

16744. You are aware that the course for the Intermediate Education examinations is higher than the primary course?—Yes.

16745. Have the Christian Brothers at all thought it a hardship to be obliged to go so much out of the higher primary course, and prepare boys for the Intermediate examinations?—Not with us.

16746. Do you think it would be desirable to have prizes competed for by that class alone, as more calculated to keep them within the range of the subjects, if there was a separate fund?—Speaking from my own knowledge I think not. A few number would be permitted by their parents, and would be disposed themselves, so to prepare themselves as to compete at the Intermediate examinations.

16747. In the female school connected with the National Board?—It is.

16748. Have rules and regulations been formally made, in accordance with the directions of the will?—There have been alterations as I mentioned. For example, the very fact of relaxing the rules, and permitting the rules of the Christian Brothers to be carried out, was an alteration, probably contemplated by Mr. Harvey in making the will. I will read a sentence of January 25th, 1844:—

"Resolved.—That we now determine on the bequest of Literature and Science, in which the Poor Children of the Parish of Mullingar shall be instructed at the cost and charge of the rents, taxes, and profits of the Estates derived by the late James Harvey, viz. in that purpose. That for the general school the education shall be what is known as a good English education, and consist of Spelling, Reading, Writing, English Composition, Arithmetic (Rudiments, Properties, and Higher rules), Grammar, Geography, History (Ancient and Modern), Book-keeping, Geometry and Trigonometry, Linear Drawing, Mensuration, Globes, Navigation, Algebra, and Mechanics. That in accordance with the General School there shall be a classical department, and there shall be as a reward for good work, prizes for Eight Bards, to be selected by the heads of the school on examination for promotion and evaluation by Trustees. That the General School shall be entrusted to the Christian Brothers as teachers, and to their management and immediate Government, and numbered as a large number of children will be always attending on this school, it will require at least four Brothers and one lay Brother. That Children six years and upwards, being children resident in the Parish of Mullingar, as described by will, as selected by the Trustees, shall be admissible, and that not being of the Roman Catholic religion be no cause for exclusion. That a site for erection of a building for carrying out the foregoing purposes be determined on, and of sufficient extent to allow for an ample playground. That the Building be adapted to the system of the Christian Brothers, and should contain five Class-rooms, an Oratory and Dormitory for the Brothers, and also the necessary accommodations for clerical department. That the funds now accumulated be appropriated to the purpose aforesaid. That there should be a system of suitable pecuniary—books for the young children, and for well-constituted young ladies, appropriate to useful studies. That there should be no infant school attached to the one now in operation, under the superintendence of the Nuns, as that the children might be trained to virtue and goodness, and habits of proper discipline from the earliest period, and at the age of six or seven the Boys should be drafted from the infant school into the general school."

That is a site for erection of a building for carrying out the foregoing purposes be determined on, and of sufficient extent to allow for an ample playground. That the Building be adapted to the system of the Christian Brothers, and should contain five Class-rooms, an Oratory and Dormitory for the Brothers, and also the necessary accommodations for clerical department. That the funds now accumulated be appropriated to the purpose aforesaid. That there should be a system of suitable pecuniary—books for the young children, and for well-constituted young ladies, appropriate to useful studies. That there should be no infant school attached to the one now in operation, under the superintendence of the Nuns, as that the children might be trained to virtue and goodness, and habits of proper discipline from the earliest period, and at the age of six or seven the Boys should be drafted from the infant school into the general school."

The minute also states—

"That there is now to the credit of the Trustees, vested in Government Bonds and a Quaker per Cent Stock, is the sum of Most Rev. John Canevel, Right Rev. Wm. Higgins, and Rev. Patrick Kelly, £1,118 18s. 10d., and in Three per Cent Consols, in the names of the said three persons and Sir Percy Nagels, bart., £200, also cash in bank, £211 9s. 12d.; and a sum of £125 5s. 2d., purchase-money due by the Great Western Midland Railway, £250 by Richard Hine, late a tenant; and half-year's rent by tenants amounting to £329 15s. 6d., which is applicable to the erection and maintenance of such schools."

16749. There are no boardings maintained in the school?—None.

16750. Have there been at any time?—None. It was found impracticable to have them.

16751. Was there an effort made to carry out that part of the will?—The effort was made in the building of the house, but the trustees came to the conclusion that it would be impracticable to carry out that portion of the scheme.

16752. On what grounds?—I think because there were not applications for admission made.

16753. Was provision made in the building for boardings?—There was to a small extent.

16754. Is the provision still preserved in the construction, or have you utilized the rooms for other purposes?—They are utilized by the diocesan having charge of the classical school.

16755. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—He resides in the building?—Yes.

16756. Mr. O'SHEAQUEST.—But there is nothing to prevent the trustees, at any future time, if they find it advisable, from going back to the plan of having boardings?—Nothing.

16757. What is the teaching staff at the Christian Brothers' schools?—Five professed Christian Brothers, and one lay Brother, who does not teach, but resides with them. According to the minutes four were originally required, and a fifth has been since introduced.

16758. What is the teaching staff in the girls' school?—There are, I think, nine Nuns and seven maistresses.

16759. How many of those nine Nuns are actually engaged in teaching?—All.

16760. What is the teaching staff in the intermediate school?—One clergyman.

16761. How many boys has he under his charge?—The average is about twenty-two.

16762. Does he do the teaching in all the benches in that school?—He does all the teaching, save that the more advanced boys assist him occasionally.

Cogan, &c.

16743. As a rule, to what professions, or to what businesses, do the boys in the intermediate school go?—A good many become doctors and clergymen, and a good many clerks in respectable business houses.

16744. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—I observe that the contract for the erection of the new school was completed, in 1856, for £3,000, and that, on that occasion, the proposal of the Bishop of Meath and the Rev. Mr. Kelly, to lend £1,500 at 3 per cent., to be repaid by annual instalments of £200 principal, was accepted; and, pursuant to resolution of January 25, 1854, the following resolutions were adopted on September 23, 1856:—

“(1.) That the schools being capable of accommodating 400 Boys, will require five Brothers to conduct them. (2.) That the Brothers shall reside on the premises, and that the trustees shall always keep their residences furnished and in good repair. (3.) That the Brothers shall at all times have full control over the internal arrangements and management of the schools, in order to carry out their own system of instruction according to their rules. (4.) The time for teaching shall be from nine to three o'clock, or six hours each day, Saturdays and vacations excepted, during which time school-business is altogether suspended. (5.) The Brothers shall be allowed all the time not specified above for teaching for the free exercise and observance of their religious rules. (6.) The Brothers shall have the free application for the benefit of the schools of any power which may be constituted by the children for that purpose. (7.) To supply the immediate want of the Brothers, and to provide a remuneration of each teacher, the trustees will allow the Brothers at the rate of £40 each per annum, to be paid in two equal half-yearly payments on the 1st day of May and the 1st day of November every year, the first payment to be made on whichever of said days that shall first occur after the opening of the schools. (8.) The trustees are to have free access to the schools for the purpose of inspection as often as they please or may deem expedient.”

Is that arrangement, in reference to payment, still in force?—It is, save that the charge is to £40 a year each for five Brothers has been altered, and instead of that they have received, for the last three or four years, £240 a year—that is an increase of £40.

16745. Mr. O'SHEAHERNEY.—Was the increased payment in consequence of the greater expense of living?—Precisely.

16746. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—I observe that the trustees originally appointed were the Right Rev. John Cantwell, Roman Catholic Bishop of Meath, the Right Rev. William Higgins, Roman Catholic Bishop of Clogher, the Rev. Patrick Kelly, Parish Priest of Mullingar, Sir Richard Nagle, and Mr. Gerald Donohoe. Sir Richard Nagle declined to act Mr. Donohoe did so also, but the latter afterwards consented to act?—Yes.

16747. Who are the present trustees?—Under the provisions of the will there must always be two bishops, and two laymen, besides a priest of Mullingar. The lay trustees at present are Sir Walter Nugent, of Donohoe, and Edward McEvoy, esq.

16748. It appears that £1,500, which was borrowed from the sums in 1850, was borrowed to pay a debt due to the Hibernian Bank, for the balance of the cost of the building?—I was under the impression that the original sum borrowed from the sums was £2,000, but I have not been long in connexion with the account. I know, however, that all that was borrowed has been repaid except £450.

16749. The trustees passed these resolutions on the 10th May, 1859:—

“That Pupils attending the Classical Department, residents of the town and Parish of Mullingar, shall pay at the rate of £1 per quarter, if able. That all Pupils attending such Classical Department who are not residents of the town or parish of Mullingar shall not be admitted except on payment of a fee of £1 per quarter. That Father Nally shall be at liberty to retain the annual school fees payable by the Pupils in such school fees do not exceed the sum of £50 Annually, but that if the annual receipts from the Pupils exceed that sum, then that Father Nally be at liberty to retain one-third part of such surplus, and that he hand over the remaining two-third parts thereof to the trustees at the end of each year for the benefit of the charity. That no pupil be received into the Classical Department, being a resident of the town or parish of Mullingar, without payment of the fee above mentioned, except as a previous application to the trustees at the commencement of each Academic Year should a vacancy occur in the course of the year, then Father Nally be at liberty to fill up his place provisionally.”

Have any fees been paid under these regulations?—That has been stated—I cannot say when. I happened to be in the college, two or three years, and that was not the rule carried out then. The only remuneration the priest teaching there has, or has had for a good while, is the £1 a quarter he receives from the students.

16750. Do they all pay the £1 a quarter?—As a rule they do. Some do not.

16751. Mr. O'SHEAHERNEY.—The fees received would amount to about £120 a year!—They would not come to more, at any rate.

16752. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—Under date of 1st July, 1855, this entry appears in the minute book:—

“After mature deliberation, it appeared to the Board of Trustees much better for the Institution to retain all the charges or maintenance to one, as thereby the interest would be reduced from five to four per cent., and for the purpose to borrow from the sum of the Præbendary Convent, Mullingar, the sum of £5,000 instead of the sum of £1,500 as contained in a former resolution, and that the Board of Trustees now assembled, constituting a legal majority, do write a joint letter to the Board, undertaking to repay this sum with interest thereon, at the rate of 4 per cent. per annum, and if required so to do to give to the same such legal security as they may reasonably require, or be advised by Counsel to demand, with liberty, however, to the Trustees to release the principal sum now borrowed by the payment of sums of not less than £200 at the end of every five years by way of instalments.”

That arrangement was carried out?—Yes, on 14th November, 1855, to the extent of £2,000 to 4s. 4d., being all the sums could conveniently lend. A sinking fund of £350 a year was created for the discharge of that sum.

16753. Have the trustees of this charity any stated times of meeting?—Not very precisely. The rule, I think, is generally twice a year.

16754. Have they always a meeting in April?—Occasionally. Sometimes it is held in March, so it suits the trustees.

16755. How are the meetings called?—They are called by letter written by me, under the direction of the bishop, to each of the trustees, asking them to fix a day that would suit them, and suggesting a particular day.

16756. Mr. O'SHEAHERNEY.—You are the treasurer, as well as the secretary?—The Hibernian Bank is our treasurer, but the money passes through my hands.

16757. Do all the trustees, as a rule, attend when summoned?—As a rule they do.

16758. What is the quorum?—Three I think is the quorum.

16759. Have the alterations in the rules been made formally in pursuance of the directions in the will?—They have always been approved of by the trustees.

16760. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—It appears that on the 28th October, 1855, these resolutions were passed:—

“That the Rev. Mr. Nally be now about to resign the situation he has held as Superintendent of the Classical Department. That in consequence of the large expenditure which has become necessary to put the building in perfect repair, the Classical school be now closed, and Rev. Mr. Nally's salary be paid to the close of the half-year. That the Rev. Mr. Nally be requested to make out an account of these scholars in the Classical school who have paid an advance, that they may be repaid their sum when the date of the close of said school.”

When was the school reopened?—In a couple of months after.

16761. The leasing power, contained in the will of the founder, is:—

“Whosoever she and heirs or any part thereof shall happen to be out of Lease then in every such a shall be lawful for the majority of the then existing Trustees to make any name or design of the said premises, or any part thereof for any time or time not exceeding the term of one life or twenty-one years, whichever shall last the longer, and that a shall not be liable to let or demise more than one-half of said premises to one Tenant, and that every such Lease shall be made at the full and fair value payable by a Solvent Tenant, taking into consideration such his solvency."

With reference to the estates, a report was presented in 1854—

"That the said Estates have been let in two divisions, one containing in or about 1985 3s. 10s., to Hugh Deignan, at an annual rent of £310 17s. 3d., the other to Michael McCormack, containing 1372a. 1s. 32s., at an annual rent of £310 8s. 3d., subject to title-mortgages £15 3s. 6d., and an annuity of £50 per annum to Rev. Patrick Kelly, Rector—From 1st May last for life of Andrew O'Connell, eldest son of Right Hon. Richard Moore O'Connell, Esq., or twenty-one years from 1st May."

Is Mr Andrew O'Connell still living?—Yes. We were obliged to evict Hugh Deignan for non-payment of rent.

16783 Is McCormack's lease still subsisting?—It is.

16783 The last entry in your minute book is dated 15th April, 1878. Had you no meetings since then?—We had, but Mr. Mooney has the papers. He took possession of them with reference to executing the leases against Deignan, and also in anticipation of being examined here.

16784 The book contains regular minutes for every year down to 14th November, 1872, and then follows this entry—

"At a meeting held in St. Mary's College, Mullingar, May 29, 1878, . . . minutes of last meeting were read and signed."

That minute appears to have been signed on the 15th April, 1878, and the minutes of the meeting of the 15th April, 1878, appear to have been signed by Bishop Kelly on the 15th January, 1880. How did the meetings come to be interrupted in that way?—They were interrupted principally because the trustees could not get together. Cardinal Cullen was one, and he was unable to go to Mullingar. Sir Percy Nugent was another, and he was very unwilling, occasionally, to go to Mullingar. A third trustee, Robert Kelly, died, and for some time there was a difficulty in supplying his place.

16785 Was there any meeting summoned during the five years from 1873 to 1878?—The meetings were regularly summoned, but we failed to have a quorum.

16786 Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—Or rather your predecessor failed?—I was acting as secretary from 1873.

16787 Lord Justice FRANKLIN.—From the 15th April, 1878, to the 15th January, 1880, there appears not to have been any meeting?—I think that must be a mistake.

16788 Is there a probability of the present trustees being more regular?—It is quite certain that they will be.

16789 It appears that a deed was executed on the 15th April, 1878, appointing Sir Walter Nugent, Edward M'Creay, and the Rev. Joseph Coyne, trustees, the same deed having been previously executed by the surviving trustees, Cardinal Cullen and the Most Rev. Dr. Kelly. Who was appointed in place of the Cardinal?—Dr. Donnelly, Bishop of Cloghlin.

16790 You observe that on the 15th April, 1878, it was resolved—

"That as Mr. Deignan will owe one and a half years' Rent on the 1st May next, Mr. Mooney be directed to inform him that, unless he shall pay one year's rent to the 1st of November last on or before the 1st of May next, Proceedings by Statutes for non-payment of Rent shall immediately after the 1st of May be instituted for recovery of the one and a half years' Rent which will be then due."

That rent fell due during the interregnum when there was no meeting. Do you in any way attribute the arrest of that matter to there being no meeting to call on Deignan to pay the same?—I do not. I should say he is in possession of the land again.

16791 Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—Some time previous to the 15th January, 1880, there was a meeting of the trustees at which Deignan's land was let?—Yes.

16792 Can you say about what date that meeting was held?—I believe on the 15th January, 1880.

16793 How say entry of that meeting been yet made on the minutes?—Certainly. It appears in the rough minute book, kept by Mr. Mooney, who has recently always attended at our meetings.

16794 Does that minute detail pretty accurately what took place with regard to the re-letting?—It does.

16795 When will that be copied into the regular minutes?—Before the next meeting, which will probably be in June or July.

16796 I believe the times appointed for the ordinary meetings were May and November. I suppose the meeting in January was specially called for the purpose of considering this matter of Deignan's?—Yes, and for examining the accounts.

16797 You treated it as one of your half-yearly meetings?—Yes.

16798 Lord Justice FRANKLIN.—I observe that Mr. Deignan, although he apparently looks down as a tenant in 1878, had received very large advances for improvements on his farm, from time to time?—He received two advances. One was a recommendation of £29 a year of rent for twenty-one years till the year of his lease would expire; and he received a loan of £250 from the trustees, for which he was to pay 4 per cent.

16799 Did he repay the loan?—No.

16800 Did he get the advances down at the time of his eviction?—No. I must explain that. At the time of the last meeting, calculating the rent of his farm, the loan of £250, the interest upon it, and the £20 a year that he should have paid in increase of his rent from 1854, he owed in all £800. He declared, and the trustees believed that he had expended of his own money £6,000 on his farm and office; and in consideration of remitting all that debt he, at Mr. Mooney's suggestion, signed away all claim he would have for compensation.

16801 On what terms did he again become tenant?—He became tenant at an increase of £20 on his old rent.

16802 Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—In point of fact, he was let in at the old rent, undisturbed by the statement?—Exactly.

16803 Provided, as appears from Mr. Mooney's evidence, he at once paid a half-year's rent; which he did pay in advance?—On the day of the meeting he paid £163.

16804 Mr. Mooney stated that Deignan was to have his option of a lease for thirty-one years, on a tenancy from year to year, which did he take?—It was left optional to him, and he has made no choice yet. He is in possession, but the option as to a lease is, for one life or twenty-one years.

16805 Lord Justice FRANKLIN.—Did you procure a valuation of the farm before it was re-let?—No. We were convinced that the old rent was high enough, and we were very glad to re-let the land at the same rent.

16806 You are aware that rent was originally fixed in 1853?—It was.

16807 Was the value of land in the neighbourhood of Mullingar, as low in 1878 as in 1853?—It is as low in 1880.

16808 Do you think it is as low in 1880 as it was in 1853?—I do not.

16809 Have you bound yourself, by the letting of 1880, for more than a year?—Deignan was told that he should at the next meeting of the trustees, of which he would get notice, elect whether he would be a yearly tenant or take a lease for twenty-one years, and he was recommended by one of the trustees present not to take a lease just now, as land was depreciated in value, and no one could tell what would take place as to the value of land for a year or so. We are not bound to give him a lease—nor is he bound to take it.

16810. Were you prepared, in 1880, to let the lands to him, for a term of twenty-one years, at a rent fixed in 1833, without taking measures to ascertain that such rent was the full and fair rent payable by a solvent tenant?—We were. The land is well known to the trustees, and they all thought the bargain was very good.

16841. The trustees thought it would be a prudent thing to make a letting, for twenty-one years, at the rent fixed in 1833?—Yes, they were prepared to do so; but one of them advised Deignan not to take a lease.

16812. Mr. O'SHEATHKERRY.—Was the trustee who gave that advice a man of practical experience?—He was the bishop.

16813. Was that advice given at the meeting of the trustees?—It was.

16814. And not dissented from?—No. It was approved of by the others.

16815. Lord Justice FRANKLIN.—In your minute book, I find that, on the 20th May, 1875, the trustees resolved—

"That a sum of £100 will be spent by the Trustees on building an enclosure wall round the land at Canal Banks. It is to be leased to the Trustees, subject to a legal opinion being favourable to their being justified in undertaking such an expenditure."

Was the holding taken?—Yes.

16816. And the expenditure made?—Yes.

16817. As you had no meeting for five years afterwards, under what authority was that carried out?—There was no formal meeting, but there were conversations among the trustees about it, and there was a general confirmation of the expenditure. The £100 was given to the Bishop, as he resided on the spot.

16818. Were you obliged to carry it out in that way, by conversations and the general authority given to the bishop, for the reason that you have already given, namely, that you could not get the trustees to assemble together?—I believe so.

16819.—I wish to call attention to a passage in the will, as to the duties of the trustees:—

"I direct my Trustees, for ever, to keep the enclosed sums (£4,000) vested in the Bank of Ireland for ever, and I do direct my Trustees aforesaid, and for the time being, to pay the same in account of the interest of the same of said Lands, of the interest of said sums, and of any sum or sums which in manner and upon the contingencies hereafter mentioned, may become vested in them, together with the expenditure of the aforesaid, which accounts are to be preserved for ever in a Book."

Do you publish your accounts annually?—I could not say annually; but they are presented frequently, and always explained from the pulpit.

16820. Mr. O'SHEATHKERRY.—The accounts appear to have been regularly kept in a parchment-book, which you have produced, down to the year 1864, the last entry being November, 1864. Where have they been kept since?—In a distinct book.

16821. Who has charge of that book?—I have.

16822. Why was the practice of posting the account into the parchment-book discontinued?—When I was appointed, by the Bishop, to Mullingar parish, he wished that I should keep his general accounts, and he purchased a book on which is printed, "Dr. Nulty in account with Hevey's Charity and general accounts," and that contains an entry of every account, which, if you wish, I will commence.

16823. These are accounts of trusts having no connection with Hevey's Charity?—None.

16824. Why do you not, having regard to the direction in the will, keep Hevey's Charity account in a book belonging to Hevey's Charity?—Perhaps it is wrong.

16825. I presume the book you refer to is the bishop's account?—It is not his private account, but his account with different charities.

16826. Lord Justice FRANKLIN.—The will also contains this provision—

"That the Catholic Priest of Mullingar, the said Rev. Patrick Kelly, and, in the event of his death, the Catholic Priest for the time being, shall be superintendent of said school or College, and shall visit and examine the same at least once in every week, and shall and do sign a book or be kept for that purpose a weekly report of the state of said school, for the inspection of the Trustees for the time being."

And the will provides that he shall for that service receive £30 per annum. Has that book been kept?—No. The first part of that clause has been observed rigidly, as regards visiting the schools. The second part has not, because the Christian Brothers themselves, according to their rules, keep a book of that character. The payment of the £30 a year has not been made.

16827. Then for the visiting, superintending, and examining, and the weekly report on the state of the school, have been substantiated the control and management of the Christian Brothers?—Yes, but the visiting, as I observed before, is attended to by the clergy of the parish.

16828. Visiting as a clergyman, or as an inmate of the school, or as both?—As both, and also as instructor. There is one clergyman, who by direction of the bishop and with the permission of the Christian Brothers, attends to the teaching of vocal and instrumental music.

16829. Mr. O'SHEATHKERRY.—Do the Christian Brothers permit inspection to that extent by the local clergy?—They do.

16830. Lord Justice FRANKLIN.—I find that further entry under date 20th May, 1875:—

"An application was made by Christian Brothers for an augmentation of salary in consequence of the increase in the prices of provisions. Resolved.—That the salary of the Christian Brothers be increased by £50, making the total £450, and further that as soon as the growing grass crop is taken off the College land off the ground in the College enclosure to front of College shall be used entirely for a Play-Ground for the use of all scholars attending the institution. Resolved.—That the Rev. Mr. Cogherty, Secretary to the Board, having left Mullingar, the Rev. J. Cayce be appointed to act in his stead at the same remuneration?"—Yes.

16831. At the meeting in 1875, £300 was repaid to the sums in Mullingar. How were the subsequent payments made, during the time the trustees did not meet to sanction them?—I think there was no payment made since.

16832. Mr. O'SHEATHKERRY.—What is the extent of Mr. Duggan's holding?—The extent of the holding is 19a. 3c. 10c. and the annual rent £227 17s. 3d. McCormack's holding is 177a. 1c. 22c. at a rent of £319 8s. 3d.

16833. They hold at about 43 15a, an acre. Is that the average rent for land of the same class in the neighbourhood?—It is. Some of the land is very good and some very bad.

16834. CHAIRMAN.—The valuation of McCormack's holding is £392 10s. and of Duggan's £292. A Mrs. McCormack holds a separate lot—half an acre—at £1, the valuation of which according to the return made to us appears to be £4. How does she hold that?—I could not say, it is a letting of the trustees.

16835. Lord Justice FRANKLIN.—Is there a building on it?—A small, wretched cabin.

16836. Who receives the rents?—Mr. Mooney.

16837. Does he act as agent, as well as solicitor?—Since we got into difficulties with Duggan he has acted as agent.

16838. Mr. O'SHEATHKERRY.—Does he also act as agent over McCormack's holding?—Yes. McCormack has been permitted to transfer his lease to a gentleman named Nelson. He has not purchased the lease, but has given a profit rent to McCormack for three years if the lease lasts so long.

16839. Do you know what rent Nelson pays McCormack?—I do not. It was a private contract between them.

16840. How are the lands used?—Principally as grazing lands.

16841. Are Duignan's also grazing lands?—Yes, except the garden.

16842. You say Duignan built a house, and expended money. Is there a house on M'Connock's holding also?—A splendid house, built by himself after he got his lease.

16843. Was it in respect of that the allowance was made?—It was. Everyone saw there was a large expenditure on the house.

16844. LORD JUSTICE FITZGERALD.—The account which has been produced is, practically speaking, an account for over a year and a half. It begins with a balance to credit of £28 ls. 4d. on the 10th April, 1878, and ends with an overdraft, £219 13s. 5d., on the 15th January, 1880. The only rents credited are two half-years from Duignan, and one half-year from M'Connock. How much does M'Connock owe now?—Since the closing of the account before you, Duignan has paid £163; and M'Connock, £188 3s. 5d. and £50, leaving to our credit £185 4s.

16845. The last payment from M'Connock, entered in the account, is the rent due November, 1877. You say he has since paid £188 3s. 5d. and £50. Is not the result that he owes up to May, 1880, one and a half year's rent, and a balance of a former half-year's rent?—Mr. Mooney has got security, from Mr. Norton, for the payment of the account due.

16846. When was it that M'Connock parted with the possession to Mr. Norton?—I think, in February last.

16847. Was it made part of that transaction, that Mr. Mooney should be assured the arrears?—Yes.

16848. Duignan had, according to the account, also paid up to November, 1877, and he has since paid £163, practically a half-year's rent?—Yes; but I should explain that his debt has been blotted out in consideration of his foregoing all claim to compensation.

16849. Practically you lost, by that transaction, one and a half year's rent?—Yes.

16850. And one and a half year's rent remains due by the other tenant?—Yes.

16851. How did it happen that M'Connock was allowed to run so much into arrears, so far back as November, 1877?—I cannot say.

16852. Mr. O'SHEAGHNESSY.—But he was getting into arrears?—He was.

16853. Were applications made to him for the payment of his rent?—Certainly.

16854. The assignment to Norton was had recourse to by M'Connock in order to get out of his difficulties?—Yes. He has built a magnificent house and office.

16855. Was he a man who held other lands besides?—He held several other farms, some of which he has lost.

16856. LORD JUSTICE FITZGERALD.—Among the items in the account, I find five bags of coal to the Christian Brothers. Are they supplied with coal?—Yes, for their schools; and also for their residence.

16857. The next item is 4s. for keeping clocks in repair for two years. That seems a large item. Are there many clocks to be kept in repair?—There is one in each schoolroom, one in the hall, one in the clergyman's house, and one outside.

16858. There was an entry of a payment of £5 8s. 10d. for tithe-matches. I understood from the minute with reference to the letting, that the tenants were subject to the tithe-matches?—It has always been paid by the tenants.

16859. A payment of £142 is entered, as having been made to Mr. Caton, for the Christian Brothers. How was that amount made up?—£130 was the half of £260, the annual allowance, and the rest was for things required in the school, copying desks and masters of that sort.

16860. How is the expenditure on such matters checked or vouched?—Vouched by receipts produced to the trustees.

16861. The next item is "Mr. Mooney's account, £8 10s. 4d." What does that mean?—That was his account for costs, in connection with Duignan's matter.

16862. Does he receive a pension, as agent, on the rent received?—No.

16863. Does he collect the rent without charging any percentage?—He does.

16864. Mr. O'SHEAGHNESSY.—Both M'Connock's and the other?—Yes.

16865. LORD JUSTICE FITZGERALD.—There is an item "Trees for the college grounds, £10 ls. 6d. per Mr. Barry?"—Yes.

16866. The next item is "Father Brady's account £17 12s. 4d." What was that for?—That was for coal and gas, and repairing the bedfuges, chairs, and other requirements.

16867. The next item is "Rent to Lord Grenville for canal banks 2s." How much rent do you pay for the banks?—Five shillings a year, but there was a dispute going on between Lord Grenville, the county surveyor, and the railway company, as to the ownership of the banks, and we were recommended not to pay the rent to either until Lord Grenville and the railway company would consent to give a lease for ever. The 2s. was the accumulation of unpaid rents.

16868. There is also an entry of payment of rent to Lord Grenville £7 10s., what is that?—That is for the ground on which the college stands.

16869. How do you hold that ground?—Under lease for ever.

16870. Mr. O'SHEAGHNESSY.—Why have you handed over the receiving of the rents to Mr. Mooney?—On account of the difficulties put in our way by Duignan. Mr. Mooney could deal with him more readily than we could.

16871. LORD JUSTICE FITZGERALD.—You thought a solicitor would be better able to recover the rent than a clergyman?—Yes.

16872. Mr. O'SHEAGHNESSY.—The difficulties have now ceased?—I hope so, but I fear not.

16873. Do the trustees intend to continue the system of having the solicitor as agent?—I think so.

16874. Do you inspect the bank book, to see that the rents are immediately paid into the bank after they are received?—Yes. Mr. Mooney always sends us the bank receipt.

16875. Does the will entitle you, under ordinary circumstances, to delegate the duty of receiving the rents to a solicitor in that manner?—It was not done under ordinary circumstances.

16876. But you say it is to be a permanent arrangement?—What I mean is, there anticipation of some trouble.

16877. I find that on the 8th January, 1880, there was a payment to Mr. Caton, on account, of £100?—That was for the Christian Brothers. Our account was overdrawn, and, as I had no funds, I asked him not to press until we should get money.

16878. When Mr. Mooney states that the sums got £42 a year, that means that they got £25 for stipend, and the balance as the interest on the money due to them?—Yes.

16879. LORD JUSTICE FITZGERALD.—Looking at your account, and writing small items, what has taken place is this: during the last three years you have been unable to collect one and a half year's rent. As to one of your tenants that has been forgiven, as to the other it is carried on, supposed to be guaranteed by the coming in of an assignee, but not yet paid, and, therefore, you are thrown out of your proper balance or state of solvency by the fact that you have been reduced to half your income for the last three years?—Yes.

16880. Had anything of that kind occurred previously?—Not for a considerable number of years, but there is an entry in the book which shows that in 1858 there was a large deficit in the payment of the rents.

16881. Mr. O'SHEAGHNESSY.—By which of the tenants?—Both.

16882. LORD JUSTICE FITZGERALD.—It appears

May 15, 1886.
 R. M. Joseph
 Copyist, &c.

that, on the 13th July, 1887, Mr. Forde, the agent, reported that the annual outgoings were £368 11s. 6d. and the net income £394 17s. 3d. In the annual outgoings he included £200 for the Christian Brothers, £25 for the infant schools, £40 allowance to the Vicar, and £20 annuity to Mr. Kelly. On the 16th October, 1888, there was a balance due by the trustees on foot of their receipts and disbursements of £205 1s., consisting of a balance overdrawn on their bank account of £297 1s. 3d., and due to Mr. Forde on foot of agency account, £8 13s. 9d.; and there was a further debt of £1,017 for principal and £68 8s. 8d. for interest to the Western Bank; a debt to a Mrs. Atkinson of £150; and some other liabilities making a total of £1,891 17s. 3d. What was done as to that large amount of debt?—We consolidated it, in 1890, by the loan from the sum of £2,000 6s. 4d.

16893. Can you tell what the actual cash received for the last three or four years has been?—Mr. Mooney has the account book for the last three or four years.

16894. Have you received anything from the other tenants?—No; not for the last two years.

16895. What is your bank balance at present?—I think we have £185 4s. to credit.

16896. Is there not the balance of the last November half-year due to the Christian Brothers and the whole of the 1st May payment?—Yes, there is, in round numbers, £200 due to them.

16897. Was the money, that your tenants appear to have spent upon those holdings, made by them during their tenancies?—One of them made most of his money in Australia; the other man went into possession, in 1853, with a large capital, that is, large for the farm.

16898. You have had great difficulties in dealing with two tenants having large holdings, and on which they had made great expenditure, and therefore you find they tenants to deal with. Do you consider that a body of trustees, such as yourselves, consisting of two bishops, a clergyman, and two laymen, are in a position to deal profitably for the charity with tenants?—I do. The rents are not low rents, but represent the full value of the land, and if the same could be secured I think that our corporation could deal with the tenants, especially in the hands of a solicitor.

16899. To what do you attribute the great loss that has taken place?—I attribute it very largely to the negligence of both tenants, and also very largely to the losses they sustained in cattle. To my knowledge, McCannock lost £200 in cattle within the last three months, and further back for a long time, and as also with Duggan—moreover, Duggan neglected his business altogether.

16900. CHAIRMAN.—Borrowing on borrowed capital has ruined a good many people lately?—That has been the case for years with McCannock, and borrowing and trafficking in cattle was partly the way that Duggan got into difficulties.

16901. LORD JUSTICE FITZGERALD.—Have you any real means of controlling the tenants?—I think so, if the drainage takes place through a solicitor.

16902. MR. O'BRIEN.—Is not that a very abnormal and unfortunate arrangement?—It is not abnormal; it is the usual way in Westmeath, unfortunately.

16903. DO YOU MEAN WITH PRIVATE LANDLORDS?—Yes. [The Commissioners adjourned.]

Aug. 5, 1888.

FORTY-FOURTH DAY—WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 5, 1888, 11 O'CLOCK, A.M.

In the Commissioners' Office, Poor Office, Dublin.

Present.—THE EARL OF ROSER, Chairman, LORD JUSTICE FITZGERALD, and ARTHUR HILL CURTIS, Esq., LL.D., with JAMES ORRICK MERRITT, Esq., LL.D. Secretary.

Rev. RICHARD GALBRAITH, M.A., continued.

Rev. Richard Galbraith, M.A.

16894. CHAIRMAN.—How long have you been connected with Carrickmacross?—Ten years, as officiating clergyman. The rector of the parish is Dr. Bismarck Robinson, of Armagh.

16895. There is an endowed school in Carrickmacross?—Yes. The school was endowed, nearly two hundred years ago, by an ancestor of Lord Rath's. The endowment consists of a rent-charge of £70 a year, and a house.

16896. What is the present condition of the school as regards pupils?—At present, I think, there are fourteen pupils. For the last year, certainly, the master has been working thoroughly well at it.

16897. It appears from the report of the Royal Commissioners, 1851-3, that there were at times twenty-five boarders attending that school. Are there any boarders at present?—There have been no boarders for the last ten years.

16898. How was that?—has there been any change in the management of the school?—No. The present master has been appointed upwards of twenty years; his account to me was that he started charging too small a sum to his boarders, about £30 or £40 a year. After that his health rather broke down. The boarders are in a dilapidated condition.

16899. They are not in a fit state to receive boarders?—They are certainly not in a fit state now to receive boarders. They are not up to the requirements of the present day.

16900. How was the repairs carried out?—By the master. If the school were successful it would be his interest to expend money on it.

16901. Was there any agreement by him to keep the school premises in the repair in which he found them?—That I cannot tell. I have heard that the use of the £70 a year was that the school should be kept in repair.

16902. LORD JUSTICE FITZGERALD.—Have you been at the building yourself?—Frequently.

16903. Is Mr. Shaw's evidence before us this passage correct?—

"16468. Where do you carry on the above that now attend?—In what we formerly used as a refectory or dining room for the boarders."

"16469. That is not in a ruinous condition?—No. That is like a private room attached to the residence."

"16470. The schoolroom is the main hall existed in 1711, when the school was founded, and nobody has been bound to repair it all that time?—No, except the master. It is built against a bank of earth twelve or fourteen feet over the level of the schoolroom. The dripping of the roofs comes down, creating a damp and ruinous. The walls are quite green. My predecessor put up a wall-paper to hide the appearance."

Is that the condition in which the place is now?—That is the case in one room I know, but not in the room that is being used.

16904. It appears that what they use as a school-room at present was the dining-room for the boarders. What is the state of the rest of the building?—The rest of the building is in a very dilapidated state, and to my mind would not be fit, without a great expenditure of money, for the reception of boarders. It is a question whether it should not be rebuilt.

16905. Is that in consequence of its having been allowed to go into dilapidation, or because it never was fit?—I think the rooms are much lower than would be supposed to be fit at the present day. Two or three of the rooms would hold five or six boys each. These rooms were built by successive masters as they required additional accommodation for their boarding establishment.

18908. Then it was a successful boarding establishment at one period?—I understand there were thirty boarders there in the time of Dr. Hogg, who was brother-in-law of Dr. Darley, the present Bishop of Killmore. Dr. Darley himself had a large school at Dungannon, and, when he had too many pupils, he sent the overflow to Carrickmacross.

18907. To what do you attribute the failure of the Carrickmacross school?—As a boarding establishment, I think, certainly in some degree, to the state of the bairn, and also to the failure of Mr. Shaw's health several years ago.

18906. Has his health improved?—It has. Some years ago Sir Dominic Corrigan, or some other eminent doctor, told him he had heart disease, which frightened him, and made him nervous.

18909. During the last ten years has he been able vigorously to carry on the school?—When I went to Carrickmacross, ten years ago, there were, to the best of my recollection, five day pupils. After a couple of years I sent two of my own boys to the school. They remained two or three years, and certainly they were taught uncommonly well. The eldest went to St. Columba's where he answered superior to boys who had been two or three years under tuition there.

18910. CHAIRMAN.—Does the Marquis of Bath do anything to keep the house in repair?—Nothing.

18911. LORD JUSTICE FRYGEMAN.—Are there any scholars attending the school, except the fourteen you have mentioned?—No, and most of those fourteen have gone there only within the past year, I dare say induced by the Intermediate Education Act.

18912. CHAIRMAN.—Of what ages are the boys?—From seven, perhaps, up to seventeen.

18913. LORD JUSTICE FRYGEMAN.—Mr. Mahaffy, our inspector, found only ten boys there. Have they been increased to fourteen?—I think there are eleven boys there. There are three girls. I did not say there were fourteen boys.

18914. CHAIRMAN.—What are the ages of the girls?—They are between ten and the teen years of age.

18915. LORD JUSTICE FRYGEMAN.—How is the teaching managed with a class consisting of fourteen, ranging from seven to seventeen in age, and including both sexes?—On the same plan as in the National schools. I suppose there are three or four classes for those fourteen.

18916. Dr. CURRIE.—How many masters are there?—None but Mr. Shaw.

18917. I presume all the pupils are taught in the same room?—Yes.

18918. Is that so in the National schools?—Yes, in some cases. For instance we have 100 children attending one Parochial National school, and they are all in one school.

18919. CHAIRMAN.—There is no mistress, I suppose, at Mr. Shaw's school?—No.

18920. LORD JUSTICE FRYGEMAN.—In the return which Mr. Shaw made to this Commission he states:

"In 1867 I seemed to take boarders, and continued to instruct the few day boys that remained, about six or seven Protestants, until 1871, when parents wished the discipline of a larger school, and they were removed."

He says nothing about girls. How long have there been female scholars at the school?—I suppose about twelve months.

18921. Are those young ladies being instructed for the Intermediate examinations?—I believe so.

18922. Is it the Intermediate Education Act that has given a stimulus to the school?—Yes.

18923. CHAIRMAN.—There is no Roman Catholic school in Carrickmacross?—None, except in the person of a National school.

18924. LORD JUSTICE FRYGEMAN.—What fees are charged at Mr. Shaw's school?—28 s. a year.

18925. CHAIRMAN.—Is the education given there classsical, as well as English?—Yes; I myself, think, that Mr. Shaw is an uncommonly good grammar, except in the very high subjects.

18926. Practically that is a Protestant school?—Yes, practically. According to the charter I believe it must be so. I knew the late Mr. Stewart Trevellick was rather dissatisfied, and anxious to make some change. According to the charter the children ought to learn the Church Catechism, but that is not practically carried out.

18927. LORD JUSTICE FRYGEMAN.—In a return furnished to us by Mr. Shaw, and dated February 5, 1873, he states:—

"No one seems to know anything of the school; no interest is taken in it, locally or otherwise. It is useless; and I am told, never has been of much use to the people of the district."

Does that meet with your acquiescence?—No, it has been of considerable use, even to me, in the course of the last ten years. It has been useful to me at night, but generally not more than that, up to the present time.

18928. Dr. CURRIE.—Mr. Mahaffy says the Roman Catholics will not use the school, which looks as if they could do so if they liked?—Oh, they could, and occasionally they have done so, with Mr. Shaw, sometimes in school hours and sometimes at other hours, but after a few months they were forbidden, or at least withdrawn.

18929. How now that is Mr. Mahaffy's report no mention is made of girls attending?—They may not have been there on the occasion of his visit.

18930. LORD JUSTICE FRYGEMAN.—Are they in regular attendance?—Yes.

18931. Do you know what they are learning?—The most junior learn reading, writing, and arithmetic, the more advanced are learning French and algebra.

18932. I observe that the original foundation is:—

"For maintenance of students of a grammar school in the town of Carrickmacross, and for repairs of schoolhouse. Masters to be graduates of Dublin, Oxford, or Cambridge, and laymen in a clergyman without benefice, and no married children of bachelors, and other youth of Boreary of Farmy, gentry, and other people at the same rate of charge as in schools in Dublin and Drogheda, in Church Catechism, in Latin, Greek, Hebrew, civility, poetry, composition (English and Latin), antiquaries, arithmetic, geography, surveying, and practical mathematics, under regulation of masters and visitors, prayers to be said morning and evening; school to be visited yearly by the Lord Bishops, the Vice-Chancellor of the University of Dublin, the Bishop of Clogher, and the Provost of Trinity College, Dublin, or two of them."

Are there any free children taught in the school now?—No, I think not.

18933. Can you say whether in January last there were girls attending that school?—I am under the impression that there were.

18934. Mr. Shaw attended here, on the 28th January, 1880, and gave this evidence:—

"I was asked for the first time for the past six years to have pupils on the 31st July last, and I have now ten pupils who have come to the school partly to prepare for the Intermediate examinations. For six years previously I never had an application for a day pupil. Boarders were out of the question."

He does not there specify the names of his pupils. Are you able to say whether there were ten boys in addition to the girls at that time?—I sorely thank so. I think only one of the girls was there at that time; one I know went more recently. The National school teacher had stirred up the ambition of several of his pupils, and was preparing the one to whom I refer for the Intermediate examination, but he was thought to be unequal to the work.

18935. It comes entirely by surprise upon us to hear that there are girls attending this school?—I am quite sure there were none till lately; because one of them who was there longest has three brothers in the school, and Mr. Shaw, before admitting her, spoke to me on the subject, I suppose because I had my own boys at the school.

1891. As I understand that school affords the only provision for that class of education in Carrickmacross?—The only provision.

1893. So that unless they go there they cannot learn at all?—Not unless they are content with the National school.

1893. Even taking the girls, Mr. Shaw does not appear overburdened with numbers?—He is not.

Mr. Thomas O'Connor.

Mr. THOMAS O'CONNOR examined.

1896. CHAIRMAN.—You are accountant of the Church Education Society?—Yes.

1897. How long have you held that position?—Seventeen years.

1898. State shortly the position of the society, and the changes that have taken place since 1853?—As regards the society itself there is virtually no change, but they have been obliged to relinquish the training school for want of funds to sustain it.

1899. The Irish Church Act had a considerable influence in diminishing the number of your schools?—It had the effect of diminishing the funds, and consequently there was a reduction in the number of schools.

1900. What is the number of schools at present connected with the society?—According to last week's return the number is 501. They are spread all over Ireland.

1901. What is the present income of the society?—The total income last year, for the Dublin branch of the society, according to the report was £1,153 12s. 7d.

1902. That includes some extra subscriptions for the training school. There was a substantial collection made?—There was. It was not on foot as a special collection by the Right Hon. William Forster. The society has had no training school for the last year. The collection was for the Training College, and the £1,153 12s. 7d. contained no subscription to the training department.

1903. How the training school been discontinued?—The training school is no longer connected with the Church Education Society. It is now separate and distinct from it, and under distinct and separate government.

1904. Lord Justice FRYGESSON.—Whose property was the training school?—It was originally that of the Church Education Society.

1905. How did it come to belong to them?—For want of funds they could not carry it on.

1906. How did they make title to it and dispose of it?—The general synod accepted it, as the training school of the Church of Ireland.

1907. Who were the owners, before the change?—The Church Education Society.

1908. How did it become their property?—The Church Education Society was originally established in 1839. They felt the want of a training school, and the bishops and clergy of Ireland founded the training school. It was originally in the parish of St. Peter, but finding the premises too small for the increasing number of teachers, they rented the Eldon-place Society's premises, which they held up to 1878, when the training school passed from the Church Education Society to a new body.

1909. Were these any funds belonging to the training school?—Not a penny. I introduce the deed with reference to the training school, which is as follows:—

"A deed of agreement and declaration of trust made the — day of January, one thousand eight hundred and sixty-two, between the Venerable John Walsby Stokes, Archbishop of Armagh, Anthony Lefroy, of Carrigrohilly, in the county of Longford, esq., m.p.; Robert Richard Warren, of Upper Mount-street, Dublin, one of the Magy's counsel in Ireland; Robert Wilson, of Richmond, Middlesex, esq., and Henry Fitzgibbon Colley, of Leman Lodge, Lanes, esq. Whereas 'The Church Education Society for Ireland' has established in Dublin, a 'Training Department' for the purpose of educating and training persons of both sexes to be masters and mistresses of the schools in connection with the society, and whereas by a resolution of the managing committee of the said society, duly passed on third of February, one thousand eight hundred and sixty-one, it was resolved that it is expedient that a fund should be collected for the permanent endowment of the training schools; that such fund should be invested in Government society or Bank of Ireland stock, in the name of three trustees, to be defined by a deed of trust. And whereas by further resolution of the said managing committee duly passed on the twenty-eighth of August, one thousand eight hundred and sixty-one, it was resolved:—

"That a deed of trust be drawn up, vesting in the training school whatsoever funds may be contributed towards a special endowment fund for its maintenance, and that five trustees be appointed in whose names such money should be held, the interest only to be available. Should a training school cease to exist the money to be applied to the general purposes of the society," and it was also resolved, "that the said parties to these presents be named trustees of the training school endowment fund, and that the fund be invested in the Bank or Government stock." And whereas by a further resolution of the said managing committee, duly passed on the second of October, one thousand eight hundred and sixty-one, it was resolved "That the money sent to the committee for the purpose of forming a training school endowment fund be lodged in La Touche's bank to that specific fund."

And whereas some amounting to all to one thousand and fifty-eight pounds thirteen shillings, . . . were up to the thirty-first day of December, one thousand eight hundred and sixty-one, contributed to the said fund, and same was duly placed to a separate credit in the bank of Messrs. La Touche and Co. And whereas by a further resolution of the said managing committee, duly passed on the twenty-third day of October, one thousand eight hundred and sixty-one, it was resolved "That the sum standing in La Touche's bank to the credit of the 'Training School Endowment Fund' be invested in the new three per cent. stock, in the names of the trustees appointed by resolution."

And whereas in pursuance of the last recited resolution the said sum of one thousand and fifty-eight pounds thirteen shillings was invested in the purchase of the sum of one thousand one hundred and forty pounds and eight pence, Government new three per cent. stock, and transferred in the books of the governor and company of the Bank of Ireland into the names of the said parties herein, trustees as aforesaid. And whereas by a further resolution of the said managing committee, duly passed on eleventh day of December, one thousand eight hundred and sixty-one, it was resolved that a deed of agreement and declaration of trust should be prepared to and executed by the trustees of the Training School Endowment Fund, declaring the trusts on which said funds is to be held in pursuance of the resolution of the committee passed on twenty-eighth of August one thousand eight hundred and sixty-one, and containing powers for the investment of said fund from time to time, in Government funds or bank stock, or in preference shares of railway companies, and for the appointment of new trustees from time to time, upon the termination of the managing committee of the society. Now, therefore, it is hereby agreed and declared, by and between the said parties to these presents, that they the survivors and survivor of them, and their heirs and successors and assigns in the office of trustees in trust for the time being of these presents shall and will hold, and be possessed of the said sum of one thousand one hundred and forty pounds and eight pence Government Stock, now standing in their names in the books of the Bank of Ireland, and of all such further and other sum of stock, money, securities for money and other property as shall or may from time to time hereafter be transferred, paid or assigned to the trustees or trustee for the time being of these presents, upon trust to pay and apply the dividends, interest or annual proceeds thereof from time to time in and towards the support and maintenance of the training department of the Church Education Society for Ireland in such a manner and to such persons or persons in the managing committee for the time being of the said society shall from time to time by resolution direct, but so that no capital or principal shall not be encroached upon or dissipated so long as there shall exist in Dublin a training department in connection with the said society, and upon further trust that in case at any time the training department and Model schools of the said Society, in Dublin, shall be discontinued, and permanently and definitely closed, then and in each case to transfer, pay, and assign all such stock, money, securities and other property towards the general purposes or objects of the said Society, as set forth in the printed form-demanded laws of the said Society, in such manner as the said Managing Committee for the time being shall from time to time by resolution direct. And it is hereby further declared that it shall be lawful for the trustees or trustees for the time being of these presents, with the consent of the said managing committee for the time being provided, by resolution to vary the investment of the funds or securities held upon the trusts of these presents, and to invest any of the trust property in any Government funds or stock of the Bank of Ireland or preference shares of railway companies. And it is hereby further declared that the receipts in writing of the person or persons to whom from time to time any sum or sums of money shall be paid in pursuance of a resolution of the said managing committee shall be effectual discharges for the same respectively to the trustees or trustees for the time being of these presents. And further that whereas any trustee or trustee of these presents whether original or substituted shall die or desire to be discharged from or become unfit to act in the trusts hereof, it shall be lawful for the managing committee of the said society for the time being by resolution to appoint, any other person or persons being a member or members of the said society, to be a trustee or trustees in the place of the trustee or trustees so dying or desiring to be discharged or refusing or becoming unfit to act as aforesaid, and thereupon the trust funds and property shall be transferred accordingly. In witness whereof the said parties have hereunto subscribed their names and set their seals the day and year aforesaid. Signed, sealed, and delivered, &c.

14903. In whose name is that money now standing?—In the names of the seven parties in whose names it was put from the outset, but one of the trustees, Mr. Robert Wilson, is deceased.

14904. Then Archdeacon Stokes, Mr. Anthony Lefroy, Judge Warren, and Mr. Henry W. Colley, are now the trustees of that money?—They are.

14905. How is the interest applied?—To the Church Education Society.

14906. Is it now applied to the general purposes of the Society?—Yes.

14907. Is the training school not open?—Yes, but it is altogether a separate institution from the Church Education Society.

14908. When was it discontinued?—In June, 1878.

14909. When was it "permanently and definitely closed"?—In July, 1878. It is now the Church of Ireland Training College.

14910. How long was the training department closed?—About six weeks.

14911. Was it then re-opened again?—It was re-opened when the Right Hon. Wm. Brodie had collected sufficient funds to meet the expenses against all risk.

14912. All risk of what?—Of being liable for the expenses of the Institution.

14913. Did the same profits return to it?—The very same.

14914. Were the same teachers continued?—Yes.

14915. Has none of the interest of the £1,140 Government stock been since applied to the purposes of the training school?—No. About £700 stock was sold out in order to pay the teachers, who were under contract, a quarter's salary, and the expenses of the Church Education Society's Training School, as it was then called.

14916. How much is there now remaining?—There stands to the credit of the Society £486 9s. 4d. stock.

14917. Is that £486 9s. 4d. stock now applied to the general purposes of the Church Education Society?—Only the interest upon it.

14918. The provision in the deed is:—

"So that the capital or principal shall not be increased upon or diminished so long as there shall exist in Dublin a training department in connexion with the said Society, and upon further trust that in case at any time the training department and Model schools of the said Society in Dublin, shall be discontinued, and permanently and definitely closed, then and in such case to transfer, pay, and assign all such stock, money, securities and other property towards the general purposes or objects of the said Society, as set forth in the printed fund-raising laws of the said Society, in such manner as the said Managing Committee for the time being shall from time to time by resolution direct."

Have you any resolution of the Managing Committee providing the selling out of this money?—Yes. It is on record in the book which I produce. I may mention that the opinion of Mr. Pilkington, &c., had been taken, and it was, that so long as the training school was open, that fund could not be touched—that the school should be first definitively closed.

14919. Read the resolution closing it?—On June 6th, 1878, there was a special meeting convened for the purpose of considering the propriety of closing the training school, and the opinion of all the Directors, Secretaries was taken. The minute of that meeting is as follows:—

"The Venerable Archdeacon Stokes, and the Rev. Henry Irwin, having been anxious to have a legal opinion as to the interpretation of the trust deed in reference to the training school, laid it before Mr. Pilkington, &c., who gave the following opinion:—'The trustees cannot I think apply any part of the principal money towards the debt of the training school, nor is it probable in the problem in closing the school. If the training school be closed definitely the principal may be applied for the general purposes of the Society; and if the Society continues in operation I do not think the principal might be applied in payment of the debts of the Society which appear to me to include the debts of the training school. If both the training school and the Society be discontinued I think the trustees would be justified in applying the interest or dividends on the trust funds in maintaining the training school, although then not connected with the Society, provided the rules and principles of the new government were substantially the Society. It would be a proper application of the fund.' The trustees cannot part with the trust fund. They cannot delegate their trust."

And on June 13th, 1878, the following resolutions were passed.

"That inasmuch as the Central Committee of the Church Education Society for Ireland find it impossible to obtain adequate funds for the support of the training school, notwithstanding all the appeals and other efforts which they have made in its behalf, resolved:—That the training school be definitively closed on the 30th day of June, 1878.

Resolved:—That the trustees of our capital fund be requested to meet the Committee on the earliest day convenient to the trustees, and at such hour as they may appoint, the meeting to be if possible during the month. The Committee deeply feel the great claims which all the officers connected with the training school have upon them on account of their long and arduous services, and earnestly recommended that the trustees give six months' salary to each of the aforesaid officers after closing the training school. N.B.—They were appointed at no much a year."

Again on July 2nd, it was resolved:—

"That Dr. Langer be authorized to dispose of the furniture of these buildings, and of the requisites of the training and model schools at the best advantage either by valuation or otherwise as he may find expedient."

14920. Was that done?—It was.

14921. How was the furniture disposed of?—Messrs. Bennett, the auctioneers, were invited to set a price on everything in the concern, and they were purchased, with portion of the funds collected by the Right Hon. William Brodie, for the new Training College.

14922. What became of the requisites?—The school books and all were included in the purchase.

14923. The next resolution is:—

"That Archdeacon Stokes and other trustees of the Training school fund, be requested to sell so much stock as will produce £231 15s., deducting the cost of the power of attorney, and lodge that sum in the Minister Bank to the credit of the Society."

Was that money sold out?—That was sold out.

14924. I also find this entry in the book you have produced:—

"The Finance Committee having met on the 1st July, 1878, and having considered the accounts and vouchers, recommended that the drafts be drawn, No. 4,025 for £135 or 5d., and No. 4,024 for £231 15s., for payment of current expenses. These drafts accordingly were drawn, the former signed by the Rev. Henry W. Colley, Rector, Dublin, Esq., and the Chairman, and the latter by Henry F. Colley, Esq., the Right Hon. William Brodie, and the Chairman."

What were the current expenses?—There were the accounts for the last quarter, due to underpeople, for the maintenance of the Training school, and a quarter's salary was given to the teachers in lieu of notice.

Aug. 5, 1879
 O'Connor.

16975. The principal part of the money was applied to pay debts incurred by the Training school, and to pay salaries to the teachers due at the time of its closing. The school was closed, but the money was not to be closed in order that it might be used.

16976. The Training school was closed on the 30th June, and the stock was sold on the 30th July. The Training school ceased to be connected with the Church Education Society on and after the 30th June.

16977. The minutes of 2nd July, 1878, also state:—

"The Secretary was requested to inquire of the Kildare-place Society, whether they will accept an immediate surrender of the premises, now held from them by the Church Education Society, the rent being paid up to the day of surrender. That in case an affirmative answer be received to the above question, the premises be immediately surrendered to the Kildare-place Society."

On the 16th July, a letter was read from the Secretary of the Kildare-place Society, enclosing the following resolution:—

"That the Church Education Society be informed that the Kildare-place Society are willing to accept immediate surrender of the premises held by the Church Education Society."

It was then resolved:—

"That a draft be drawn for the sum of £32 5s, being the rent of premises from the 15th March, 1878, to the 15th July, 1878, to be sent to Mr. Gable (the lessee's secretary). A draft accordingly was given, No. 4,225, for £32 5s."

The minutes proceed:—

"The Secretary having laid before the Committee the valuation of the furniture and effects of the Society amounting to £112 4s. 6d., it was ordered, that the Secretary be authorised to pay one-half of Messrs. Brooks's fee for valuation of furniture and school requisites, the other half to be paid by the parishioners, the fee amounting to £5 12s. 6d. Resolved:—that the Rev. Dr. Leeper, having been relieved of his duties as chaplain to the Training school, his salary as Secretary to the Society be fixed at £30 per annum, reduced from the 1st Jan. Resolved:—that the trustees of the Training school endowment fund be requested to sell out so much stock as would produce £181 10s. (in order to pay one quarter's salary in lieu of votes to the two officers of the Training and Model schools), and lodge the amount in the Minister's Bank to the credit of the Church Education Society."

Was that transfer made?—It was.

16978. Where is the money as to whom the furniture and effects were sold to?—The Right Hon. William Brooke paid for them. It was a cash transaction. It appears in the bank book of the Training school.

16979. Have you got that here?—I have not, because I did not think I should give any information about the Training school, seeing it is not connected with the Church Education Society.

16980. What I am seeking is information as to how it ceased to be connected with it?—It ceased to be connected with it because of the trustees' appeal of the Committee of the Church Education Society for funds for the maintenance of the Training school.

16981. On August 11, 1878, this resolution was passed:—

"That the trustees of the endowment fund be requested to lodge all future dividends of the Training stock to the credit of the Church Education Society."

How is the Training school now managed?—It is managed by a Committee of ten gentlemen. The Chairman of that Committee is the Lord Bishop of Meath. It is bound for the Training school of the Church of Ireland, and derives its authority from it.

16982. Is it in any way in connection with the Church Education Society?—Not in any way.

16983. Having parted with the Training school, and retained £486 10s. 6d. of the Training school endowment fund, and having sold out the remainder, what are now the operations of the Church Education Society?—I may say they are the very same—there is no change as regards the working of the Society, if you strip it of the Training school. Their operations are now confined to aiding the poor Church schools of Ireland.

16984. Are the teachers, trained in the new Training school, still appointed as teachers of Church Education Society's schools?—They are trained for any Church School, whether under the National Board or the Church Education Society.

16985. The teachers who train them are the same as before the change?—Yes.

16986. And the school is conducted in the same building?—Yes.

16987. Is there any change whatever in the Training school as a school?—No.

16988. Except that it has ceased to be possessed of its trust fund?—None whatever in the Training staff.

16989. Was it closed for any longer time than the ordinary summer vacation?—No.

16990. Then the time of its definitive closing was at the termination of a term?—It was.

16991. And it required as usual at the commencement of the next term, but under different management?—Yes. Had not Mr. Brooke succeeded in collecting funds it would have ceased to exist altogether.

16992. What then is now the operation of the Society?—The Committee endeavour to aid poor Church schools throughout Ireland. Whatever surplus funds they have in their hands at the end of the year, after paying office salaries, they give to the various Diocesan Associations, for the purpose of aiding poor schools. That money might be applied for inspection, or to buy furniture, or school requisites.

16993. Is it applied by the Society itself in any way for inspection?—No. The Central Society does not inspect, but they give money to the secretaries of the various Diocesan Church Education Societies throughout the country, which they may apply for inspection if they choose.

16994. What salary had Dr. Leeper before the separation of the Training school?—£509 a year.

16995. That was reduced by £160 a year on the determination of the connection with the Training school?—Yes.

16996. Looking at your cash account I find "Office salaries £94 8s. 10d." Does that include the £50 to Dr. Leeper, and your own salary?—Yes.

16997. What is the meaning of the item, "Grants in cash, £306 11s."—That represents grants to nonconformist schools, which made application for assistance.

16998. The next item is, "Grants to schools formerly in connexion with the London Hibernian Society, £216 3s. 10d.—what are those grants?—When the Church Education Society came into existence, they agreed with the Society in England to take those Hibernian schools into connexion, and to pay over to them whatever money was received by the English auxiliaries to the Central Society. They have acted on that principle since—as the Committee receive the money from England they pay it away to the London Hibernian Schools in the various dioceses.

16999. It appears that £223 6s. 10d. was received from English auxiliaries, and that £216 3s. 10d. was paid away. So that practically you are only the agents to distribute that money?—Nothing more.

17000. The next item in your account is, "Grants to poor schools from Lusher's Auxiliary, £300 11s."—The ladies have been in the habit of collecting money to aid the poor teachers throughout Ireland. The collections are allowed to accumulate till the end of the year, when the deans and patrons of Church schools are invited to send in applications.

17001. The next item is, "Rent of rooms half-year £5 11s."—Yes. The Church Education Society now pay the Board of Management of the Church of Ireland Training College £10 yearly for the use of the office and boardroom.

17002. Does the Church Education Society keep its office in the building which was surrendered?—Yes.

17003. In round numbers the income of the Society for the year 1878 was £826, of which £309 was a legacy. Therefore the ordinary income is a little more than £500.—The income of the Central Society, with which I am connected, amounts to something like that sum.

17004. The deed under which the trust fund was held provided that, on any transfer, the money should be ap-pled in accordance with the fundamental rules of the Church Education Society. One of these (No 6) is—

"The funds that are now, or may hereafter become available, within their respective dioceses, to the several Diocesan Education Societies, may be applied, under the direction of their respective Committees, to the support of schools in which the Holy Scriptures, in the Authorized Version, are duly read by all the children in attendance who are capable of reading; but they shall be required to exercise separately to the Committee of this Society a statement, in detail, of their receipts and expenditure, in order to its being embodied in the General Report."

Rule No. 3 of the Society is—

"The objects of the Society are to assist Schools at present existing in the country, and to establish new schools, as an essential system, for the purpose of affording to the children of the Church instruction in the Holy Scriptures and in the Catechism, and other fundamentals of the Church, under the direction of the Bishops and Parochial Clergy, and under the tuition of Teachers who are members of the United Church of England and Ireland."

Rule No. 5 is—

"In order to accomplish the object stated in the second law, the Society will use the following means—1st. It will co-operate itself directly with all the Diocesan Education Societies existing in the country, and endeavour to promote the formation of others, where none have been as yet established, and it will maintain a cordial and co-operative intercourse with them all. 2dly. It will establish and maintain a Model and Training School for the education of Teachers, supply suitable books and other school requisites for the use of Schools established by it, and assist in furnishing and repairing school-houses. 3dly. It will promote the formation and further the maintenance of an efficient and stated inspection of the schools assisted or established by it."

Do I understand you to say that they received the £306, being the amount of the grants in 1879, to the Diocesan Education Societies direct?—They did.

17005. Does the Church Education Society take any part in ascertaining how the money is laid out?—Yes, the Central Society gets receipts.

17006. Is there any efficient and stated inspection of the schools assisted and established by the Church Education Society?—No, not now, by the Central Society.

17007. Then the three fundamental objects have now come down to furnishing funds to Diocesan Education Societies?—Yes. The Committee have been obliged for three or four years past to dispense with the inspection of schools for want of funds. There is no inspection at present in the diocese of Dublin. I do not mean to say they are not inspected throughout Ireland.

17008. This is by another authority. What I want to know is, is it by and at the instance of the Church Education Society?—It is done by Diocesan Societies.

17009. Are there any steps taken by the Society to ascertain the present standard of education in those schools?—They have no means of ascertaining, except from the reports of the various clergymen, who act as inspectors throughout Ireland.

17010. Our Inspector in his report says of the schools belonging to your Society—

"The Church Education Society's schools are far inferior to the National or Emmaus Smith's schools. They are but little use to the country in their present condition, and they should be immediately placed under the control of an efficient board. In their way to view all descriptions of schools, inefficient teachers, vague inspections, with unmeaning reports, a badly-qualified standard of instruction, and inadequate salaries to teachers. The causes of these abuses are numerous; among the most important are—the want of money and the ignorance of the local clergymen in matters of education." It should also be stated, that while the reports of former Commissions have been carefully considered and acted upon, with the greatest advantage, by the Emmaus Smith Board, they have been totally ignored by the Church Education Society, so far as I could judge, and their schools are now little better than they were in 1857.

"The objects of the Church Education Society, the Emmaus Smith Board, and the Incorporated Society, in reference to pecuniary education, are very similar, and I have no doubt that if these three societies would co-operate, they might employ the same inspectors, and use the same standard of instruction, with great advantage. Proper care might then be taken of all those schools which, from poverty in numbers, or accumulation of objections of managers, receive no assistance from the National System."

What qualification, if any, is required on the part of the teachers by the Church Education Society before giving a grant to be spent on the school?—They have no means of communicating with the teachers, except through the patron of the school. The Convention in Dublin cannot even appoint a teacher.

17011. I believe the Church Education Society must indirectly have a fixed standard of instruction?—Yes.

17012. Is that now enforced?—The scale of pecuniary remains unchanged.

17013. Has the Committee of the Church Education Society anything to do with the standard of instruction in the schools through the country?—Not in interfering with it.

17014. Then, of course, they cannot say whether the standard is followed or not?—Except through their agents the Diocesan Secretaries; but they believe the standard must be good, inasmuch as the teachers are not out as trained men and women.

17015. Are not those teachers sent out from Kildare-street?—Yes.

17016. That Institution does not belong to the Society any longer?—It does not, but those who are trained there go out and teach in Church schools, whether connected with the National Board or Church Education Society.

17017. But if the training school is not now under the charge of the Church Education Society, how does that Society ascertain whether the teachers are properly trained or not?—That is ascertained by the commissioners in Kildare-street. The Society knows that the teachers are examined and certificated before they go out. Dr. Lyster is chaplain to the Training College, as well as secretary of the Church Education Society, and nothing can occur there unknown to him.

17018. Do you mean that in his double capacity, as chaplain to the new institution and secretary to the old one, he would report whether the teachers were qualified or not?—Certainly he would report that.

17019. Does not that make a real connection?—No, because the Central Committee in Dublin have nothing to do with the appointment of a teacher in the country.

17020. Does your Society—before making a grant to a school in the country—see that the diocesan board take steps to ascertain that the teacher is in any way qualified, beyond taking the certificate from the new training college?—They have no means of ascertaining that. They must trust to the secretaries.

17021. The two matters that are mentioned by our inspector as the causes of the abuses to which he refers, are "the want of money, and the ignorance of the local clergymen in matters of education." With regard to the want of money, can you tell us the figures in several years to show how the funds have fallen away?—By consulting the reports, issued yearly, the falling off appears. I produce our annual reports.

17022. It appears that in 1867, the income of your Society was £4,019 17s. 4d., less by £47 12s. 3d., balance in hand at the commencement of that year; that in, in round numbers, £3,950, of which £1,896 went to the training and model schools; £225 for salary and travelling expenses of an inspector; £273 for grants for inspection; £346 for grants to London Hibernian schools; £285 for salaries; £192 for printing and stationery; £315 for depreciation expenses; £180 for rent of premises; £50 was devoted to grants to poor schools in the diocese of Dublin; and £100 was given to Brandon training school. Did you maintain a training school at Brandon?—Yes; but when the Brandon school authorities requested to send up their young men and women to be trained in Kildare-place, the Church Education Society discontinued their grant of £100 a year.

17023. The reports of the Society also show that, in 1879, the receipts were £3,853 7s., less by a balance in hand, at the commencement of the year of £34 13s. 8d. The income therefore had practically fallen to £3,610. The expenditure in that year included expenses of training and model schools, £1,540 18s. 8d.; expenses of inspectors in dioceses of Dublin, £111 14s. 2d.; grants to Roman Training school (two years) £300; London Education Society's schools, £338 1s. 14d.; supplementing salaries of poor teachers, £108 11s. 10d.; salaries £270; printing and stationery, £88 19s. 3d.; rent of premises, £145; advertising and other incidental expenses, £45 17s. 3d. In 1877, the income of the Society was in round numbers, £2,390; but that included £549 10s. 3d. fees of students; £439 from London Christian Knowledge Society, for additional training sessions, to twenty-one students; and legacies £338 13s. 6d., and at the close of that year there was a balance of £185 6s. 5d., due to treasurer. What were the fees of students?—Each student pays £5 twice a year.

17034. Are the fees paid in the same way still?—They are.

17035. There is there any change whatever in the school, except in name?—It is not the Church Education Society's Training school now, it is the Training College of the Church of Ireland, that is, it trains men and women as teachers for all Church schools; but, as regards the training staff, it is identically the same now as it was before.

17036. What was the payment by the London Christian Knowledge Society?—At the request of the Archbishop of Dublin that Society made a grant, and the money was received from London when we sent over an account of the numbers that we trained. A great many young persons find it difficult to pay the fee of £5 half-yearly, and this was given as an assistance to them.

17037. In that year the expense of the Training and Model schools was £2,108; office salaries were £143; grants to schools in connexion with the London Education Society came to £265; and the rent of premises was £107 13s. 2d. Had the inspection been given up at that time?—Yes, by the Central Society.

17038. And the Training and Model schools were given up in 1878?—Yes.

17039. Then there is not now any actual educational work at all done by the Church Education Society?—Not in the sense of inspecting schools, or training teachers by the Central Society.

17040. Are there any school requisites supplied by them?—Yes, they give cash grants.

17041. That is not what I mean. Do they supply any school requisites?—No; but the depository next door gives them at a reduction of 30 per cent.

17042. That is a separate institution?—Yes.

17043. In the report of your Society for 1878 I find this passage—

"The Report of the Church Education Society for the year 1877 contained the following statement in reference to the Society's Training schools:—'These Training schools are labouring under such a want of pecuniary support that your Committee are compelled to contemplate the possibility of their being closed, which, indeed, must be the case, unless they are assisted by liberal aid and that without delay.' In presenting this thirty-ninth Report of the Society, the Committee have to notice with regret that the event, which was then apprehended has actually taken place. In the month of June last it was found that the schools were in debt to the amount of upwards of £500, and there seemed to be no prospect of obtaining the funds required to free them from this debt, or to provide for future expenses. Under these circumstances a special meeting of the Committee was held, and the following resolution was adopted:—'Inasmuch as the Central Committee of the Church Education Society find it impossible to obtain adequate funds for the support of the Training school, notwithstanding all the appeals and other efforts which they have made in its behalf, Resolved—that the Training school be definitely closed on the 30th June, 1878.' A capitalised fund of about £1,500 had been some years ago voted in trustees for the benefit of the Church Education Society. The opinion of accountants having been taken, the trustees were empowered to sell such an amount of this capital as was sufficient to clear off the existing liabilities of the schools, the remainder of the money being still held in trust for the other requirements of the Society. It was with extreme reluctance that the Committee felt themselves obliged to take the desperate step indicated in the above mentioned resolution. The Training schools, established originally for the purpose of supplying qualified teachers for primary schools connected on the Scriptural principles which the Society has ever upheld, have long done noble service to the land, and at the time when they were unavoidably closed were in a state of high efficiency. After their cessation with the Church Education Society had been agreed, an effort was made in another quarter to continue them under other management, and the Board of Religious Education of the General Synod consented to undertake the temporary charge of them in the hope that some provision might be ultimately made for them by the General Synod. Although in consequence of the discontinuance of its Training establishment, the Church Education Society is no longer able to carry out one important branch of its organization, the Committee feel that there is still a work for the Society to do. Its efforts heretofore must be concentrated upon the task of supporting and encouraging to the utmost of its power all primary schools throughout the country, which give honour to the word of God by making it the basis of instruction. The Committee would here take the opportunity of mentioning that only in the present year they devoted all the spare funds at their disposal (arising from subscriptions, donations, &c.) to the assistance of such poor and struggling schools as made application to them."

I understood you to admit that there is not now any uniform inspection of the Church Education Society's schools?—No.

17034. Each diocese provides for its own inspection?—Yes.

17035. Are there any dioceses that do not make any such provision?—I am afraid there are; but when returns were called for some time ago, at the request of your secretary some of them sent no returns. I have made an abstract, arranged in dioceses, of all the information we possess on the subject.

17036. Your abstract shows that there are—In Ashbury, 11 schools, but that no return has been received. In Cork, Cloyne, and Ross, 76 schools; local contributions, £384 16s.; number of children on the roll, 3,011, average attendance, 1,401. In Deny, 20 schools; 916 children on the roll; average attendance, 513. In Ferns, 83 schools; 865 children on the roll; average attendance, 339. In Kildare East, 10 schools; 333 on the roll; average attendance, 214. In Kildare, 24 schools; contributed by Diocese Society, £147 10s.; 358 on the roll; average attendance, 268. In Lisnack, 16 schools; no return received. In Ropley, 5 schools; £42 10s. contributed by the Diocese Society; but no other return received. In Waterford and Lismore, 19 schools; no return received. In Tuam, 7 schools; £30, local contribution; total children on the roll, 16; average attendance, 15. Is that correct?—The Rev. Mr. Blandell, the secretary, gave the average attendance at only one school; I believe it is his own.

17037. Then there are 7 schools omitted in that diocese; £39 is contributed locally for one of them, at which there are 16 children on the roll, and 15 is the average attendance?—Yes.

17038. The abstract further shows that there are—In Leighlin, 18 schools; 647 on the roll; average attendance, 438. In Omagh, 20 schools; 407 on the roll; average attendance, 288. In Ardfert, 19 schools; 443 on the roll, average attendance, 316. In Droghda, 45 schools; 2,040 on the roll; average attendance, 1,355. In Kells, 5 schools; 160 on the roll; average attendance, 67. In Galway and Enly, 14 schools; 281 on the roll, average attendance, 181. In Down, 15 schools; 313 on the roll, average attendance, 175. In Carrig, 82 schools; 3,694 on the roll; average attendance, 2,616. In Down, there are 45 schools; 2,364 on the roll; average attendance, 1,118. In Glendalough, 19 schools; local contributions, £244 14s. 6d.; 1,044 children on the roll; average attendance, 425. The local contributions returned to you were—In Cork, Cloyne, and Ross, £384 16s.; in Tuam, £30; and in Glendalough, £244 14s. 6d.; and the only aid returned to you is afforded by the Diocesan Societies, viz.—In Kildare, £147 10s.; and in Raphoe, £43 10s. Did you get no information as to the rest?—No, although we have earnestly sought it.

17039. Then the Church Education Society does not now receive any information from these other dioceses?—We find it very difficult to get any information, because the clergy are moving about.

17040. The entire result of your abstract is, that there are in connexion with the Church Education Society 501 schools; that the amount of local contributions of which you were informed was £36 14s. 6d., less than £2 a school; that the aid afforded by Diocesan Societies, so far as you were informed, was £190; the children on the roll numbered 17,391, and the average attendance was 9,500?—The money figures do not represent the entire contributions. There are only five dioceses from which the figures have been returned.

17041. Then in all the other dioceses the money sent down by the Church Education Society is spent without their control, and there is no return given to them as to how it is spent?—The Diocesan Secretaries give receipts.

17042. Do they vouch the expenditure in any way?—Apart from the receipt there is no other voucher, but we depend on the good faith of the clergy—the Committee never questions it.

17043. Does the Church Education Society now perform any function, except that of collecting funds to be sent down to the dioceses?—No, no other function.

17044. Is the Kildare-place Society, which is the owner of the Training school, the Society for Promoting the Education of the Poor of Ireland?—Yes.

17045. The following letter has been received by our Secretary from the Registrar of that Society:—

"4, Kildare-place, Dublin,
24th January, 1879.

DEAR SIR.—In reply to your letter of the 8th inst., I am directed to state that since the withdrawal of Government aid the resources of the Society for Promoting the Education of the Poor of Ireland have been greatly crippled, and there are not at present, nor have there been since 1867, any schools under the management or control of or connected with the Society. The Society, however, continues to afford such assistance, in grants of books and money, as their limited means permit, to schools and other institutions established for the benefit of the poor.

I am, dear sir, yours faithfully,

CHARLES H. KERR, Registrar.

TO JAMES CARR, M.D., Secy.,
Secretary of Endowed Schools
Commission, Four Courts, Dublin."

Is that Society the owners of the Training College?—Yes. They own the premises.

17046. They say that they have no school connected with them. What is the organisation of the body that manage the Training College at present?—They derive their authority from the General Synod.

17047. Does the General Synod provide any funds?—No, but on various occasions at the meetings of the General Synod in April and May, resolutions were passed.

17048. Do you mean to provide funds for the maintenance of the Training school in Kildare-place?—Yes.

17049. What number of pupils are attending there now?—In the infant school upwards of 100, in the model and day school, 240.

17050. How many teachers are there under course of training?—In rental numbers, the Training College usually has forty women and about ten men.

17051. The Royal Commissioners of 1867 reported:

"As the value of the property, consisting of schools, sites, and schoolhouses still belonging to the Kildare-place Society is considerable, we recommended that provision should be made for placing these endowments under the care of bodies or persons who are directly connected with existing arrangements for education, and who will in consequence be more likely to exercise the activity and vigilance which are necessary for the security of such small endowments distributed over different parts of the country."

Do you know anything of the property of the Kildare-place Society?—Nothing whatever. Though we are under the same roof, I know nothing of their working. They have a separate Committee.

17052. Is there any invested property belonging to the Church Education Society?—No.

17053. Have you not received legacies from time to time?—We have; but the Committee have spent them. They have never invested such legacies.

17054. Then they have no capital, except the residue of this endowment fund?—Not a shilling. I omitted to say that a further sum of £115 4s. 6d. has been invested. So that £436 5s. 6d. does not exactly represent our present fund as there has been an increase.

17055. It appears that on the 12th January, 1869, £114 14s. 6d. Government stock, was purchased for £112 4s. 6d. What was that fund derived from?—I believe it was a balance at the end of the year. A legacy of £200, which was received, increased the fund.

17056. Have you any account of the legacies received?—Yes, all appear in the reports.

17057. Have you a separate account of legacies received?—Yes, in the ledger, which I produce.

17058. Taking each year since 1867, the account shows that there were received in that year four legacies amounting to £2184, in 1868, two legacies, £215 6s. 11d.; in 1869, six legacies, £344 18s.; in 1870, six legacies, £264 10s. 9d.; in 1871, nine legacies, £250 6s. 11d.; in 1872, eight legacies, £776 17s. 9d.; in 1873, three legacies, £150; in 1874, three legacies, £270 8s. 1d.; in 1875, seven legacies, £240 3s. 10d.; in 1876, five legacies, £735 (including one left by Archibald McCosker, £240); in 1877, four legacies, £238 12s. 6d. (including £900 balance of bequest of the late Dean Bernard), in 1878, three legacies, £155; and in 1879, one legacy, £200. Did the Committee ever take legal advice as to whether they could expend these sums?—I do not think the Committee ever consulted any competent legal authority as to the special legacies.

17059. All the legacies were treated as income?—They were. In fact the applications were so many and pressing from various parts of Ireland, that the Committee never held over any sum of money. The legacies were given to the Church Education Society for the schools, and of course the money was expended for that purpose.

17060. There are a large number of schools which are mentioned by the Royal Commissioners, 1864-8, as Church schools in connexion with the Church Education Society, from which we have got no replies to our inquiries. Have you any means of telling us what schools are in existence in the different dioceses, I will not say in connexion with your Society, but that receive assistance from your Society?—None except the nominal list I have handed in. Even in order to present that to-day we had to write three times.

17061. CHAIRMAN.—In fact you send a bulk sum to each diocese, and you have no particulars as to how it is expended?—Just so.

17062. You have no information beyond the total number of schools?—No.

17063. LEAD JUDGE: PRINCIPAL.—Do you know anything of the Training school's present prospects?—It was in a very precarious condition last April. There was a special meeting called to consider the crisis, and the result was that all the officers got three months' notice to leave on the 1st August. Luckily a sum has been raised to tide over the difficulty.

17064. Are you an officer of the Training school as well as of the Church Education Society?—I am. There are ten members on the Committee of Management of the College, which is totally different from

Aug. 8, 1895.
O'Connor.

the Central Committee of the Church Education Society. They are—The Lord Bishop of Meath, Chairman; the Right Hon. William Brooke; Mr. H. F. Colley, J.P.; Mr. W. Barlow Smyth, M.P.; Mr. Pilkington, Q.C.; Mr. Tankerville Chamberlain, M.A.; Mr. J. H. Nunn, M.A.; Rev. Charles King-Irwin, M.A.; Very Rev. the Dean of Loughlin, and Rev. Canon Tunhe, M.A.

17065. Have you any information in your office, or do you ask for any from the diocesan boards, as to the amount of money they are able to collect?—No. In fact the Central Committee have no control over the diocesan boards. They are perfectly independent of the committee. We have no means of compelling them to give us any information.

17066. CHAIRMAN.—You never ask for particulars before granting money to each of the dioceses?—We ask as to the number of schools likely to be in need of money.

17067. You do not ask for the names?—No. The Committee in Dublin are very sensitive on that point.

17068. LORD JUSTICE FRYCHAMER.—How was the £306 which appears to have been distributed last year allocated?—Dublin, £42; Kildare, £30; Glendalagh, £30; Down, Omagh, and Drogheda, £40; Cork, £40; Tralee, £10; Kilkenny and Athlone, £3; Ardara, Lisnack, and Aghashoe, £16; Armagh, £6; Fermagh, £15; Loughlin, £15; Cavanagh, £20; Kildare, £1; Kilmore, £3; Meath, £10; Raphoe, £22; Derry, £3. Waterford and Lismore were omitted by inadvertence from the grant of 1873, but was granted £30 early in 1880.

Rev. Richard
Galebraith, M.A.

REV. RICHARD GALEBRAITH, M.A., recalled.

17069. LORD JUSTICE FRYCHAMER.—Are you a member of the Diocesan Board of Education of the diocese of Clogher?—Yes.

17070. Your Diocesan Board is not one of those that got any sum from the Church Education Society?—No. They do not get much from it.

17071. What is the organization in Clogher?—Our Diocesan Council is the Religious Education Board, and we have a Religious Education Inspector, who is paid chiefly through subscriptions. I think he receives £150 a year.

17072. Does he take any part in inspecting the condition of the secular education, in any of the schools which are not under the National Board?—There are but few such schools; the greater number are National schools.

17073. The inspection is confined to matters of religious education, except where by permission or request an inspection in secular knowledge is given?—Yes.

17074. Who is your inspector?—Rev. Mr. Moffitt.

17075. He was I believe a distinguished scholar of Trinity College, and head master of Boyle College?—He was.

17076. The report of your board for last year shows that there was a balance in hand from 1878, of £77 1s. 3d., and that the total receipts including that balance was £267 19s. 9d. Against that there is salary of inspector £100; travelling expenses £25; stationery, do., &c. £17s. 9d.; results fees £25 1s. 11d. Were these fees all paid in respect of religious knowledge?—Yes.

17077. The other items of expenditure are books for prescriptions, £50 5s. 6d.; printing, £29 6s. 9d.; incidental expenses, £3 4s. 8d.; grant to Central Board of Religious Education £5; grant to Kildare-place Training Institution £5. What is the grant to the Kildare-place Training Institution?—I was not present the day that was granted, so I am not certain, but I think it was a contribution towards maintaining the school in Kildare-place.

17078. Your Board practically takes no part in secular instruction?—None, except inspecting in schools.

17079. Practically, its work is confined to religious teaching?—It is.

17080. Are you able to tell us whether, in the other dioceses, there are similar organisations?—I think there are in most of the dioceses, but not in all.

17081. Are there any Diocesan Boards, so far as you know, that make provision for secular education, or are they all confined to religious instruction?—They are all confined to religious matters.

17082. So far as you are aware there is not now any substitute for whatever assistance was formerly given, by the Church Education Society, for secular teaching?—No. There is no substitute for it. Three years ago, in the parish of Carrickmacross, there were two or three schools under the Church Education Board, but supported locally. They were called "Church Education," because we used Church Education inspection; but that was the sole connexion.

17083. There are no funds capitalised, belonging to your Diocesan Board?—We have not.

17084. Dr. CURTIS.—When was your Diocesan Board formed?—After the Church Act came into operation. Then we were obliged more than ever to put the National Board Schools under the Diocesan Board, otherwise the masters of the National Schools would not direct their attention to anything but secular instruction.

17085. Is there any real difficulty in placing a school under the National Board—obtaining State aid for secular instruction, and at the same time keeping up a religious inspection by an independent body?—There is a difficulty.

17086. What is the difficulty?—The difficulty is to induce the masters to take any pains with religious instruction, and at the same time to induce them to do this, we make the results fees more.

17087. How are you able to manage, in cases where the master is not himself a member of the church?—We have not now any such case. One such case did occur, in which a Roman Catholic master taught, and claimed the results fees we usually allow.

17088. For instruction in religious knowledge?—Yes.

17089. Scarcely in the diocese of Clogher there must be a large number of wretched Protestant children in places where the National school teachers are Roman Catholics?—I think not. I think I am in the most Roman Catholic district of Clogher, and since we put our parochial school under the National Board, all the Protestant children have come to it.

17090. Then you find no difficulty in inducing the parents of the children to adopt the National system of education?—None. The parents have no objection, nor the children either.

17091. Where the teacher is a Protestant, do you find any difficulty in keeping up a substantially efficient religious inspection by your own Board?—No. I think we do not. The inspection is not compulsory. We must get the permission of the clergyman of the parish to inspect his schools as regards religious knowledge.

17092. CHAIRMAN.—I suppose that, practically, they are all glad to have an inspection held?—I am glad certainly, but there are a few who are not—who dislike it.

17093. LORD JUSTICE FRYCHAMER.—Have you any difficulty in obtaining a sufficient supply of properly trained teachers for your schools?—We have such teachers as we like.

17094. Where do they come from?—My present teacher was trained under the National Board, and taught in one of the Board's schools; he afterwards had one of the Bessie Smith's Schools, and then came back to a National Board school. He has a great reputation, and is a most energetic man, though not altogether to my taste, and he inspires the pupils with confidence in his own knowledge. The pupils are of all denominations. When under the Church Education system we had an average of about twenty children, and there were some of our Protestant children going to the National Board schools, which were under the priests' patronage. Now we have an average daily attendance of over 80, more than half of them being Roman Catholics. The Protestant children number 40.

17095. What was the position of the school as to emoluments under the Church Education Society, as contrasted with its present position?—The master's income from various sources is now about £180 or £140 a year; while under the Church Education Society, it was only about £40.

17096. The result of the change from the Church Education Society to the National Board is, that the master's salary has been multiplied by four, and the number of the children by five?—Yes.

17097. Is the teaching better?—It is. There is no doubt as to the secular instruction being better.

17098. Is the religious instruction practically such as to satisfy you?—It does not.

17099. In what respect does it fall short?—I do not think that there is the energy or care that there used to be. We have only half an hour now for religious instruction, and that must be at the beginning or close of school.

17100. CHAIRMAN.—Is that every day?—Every day. Our plan is to devote from ten to halfpast ten to that object, and unless the pupils are very punctual a number lose it. If we had the religious instruction at the close of the day their energy would be tired out.

17101. LORD JUSTICE WYLLIE.—Is it a regulation of your own, or one of the National Board, that compels you to have religious instruction at the beginning of the school hours?—It is in effect a rule of the National Board. Of course we might have it during the play-hour, and possibly before that. The regulation of the National Board is, that it must be at an hour which will not interfere with the convenience of the other pupils. If we had it during the play-hour, it would be unpopular with the children.

17102. The regulation of the National Board is—

"In all National schools there must be secular instruction for not less than four hours upon at least five days in the week. Opportunities are to be afforded . . . to the children of all National schools for receiving such religious instruction as their parents or guardians approve of. Religious instruction must be so arranged, that each school shall be open to children of all communions; that no child be had to parents' right and authority; that, accordingly, no child shall recede, or be present at, any religious instruction of which his parents or guardians disapprove; and that the time for giving it be so fixed that no child shall be thereby, in effect, excluded, directly or indirectly, from the other advantages which the school affords."

Religious instruction, prayer, or other religious exercises, may take place before and after the ordinary school business (during which all children, of whatever denomination they may be, are required to attend); but may take place at one intermediate time, between the commencement and the close of the ordinary school business. The Compendium, however, will not interfere with the usefulness of the school, by preventing children of any religious denomination from availing themselves of its advantages, or by subjecting those in attendance to any inconvenience. With the above exception, the secular school business must not be interrupted or suspended by any spiritual exercise whatsoever. Note.—The Compendium currently recommends that religious instruction shall take place either immediately before the commencement, or immediately after the close, of the ordinary school business; and they further recommend that, whenever the patron or local manager thinks fit to have religious instruction at an intermediate time, a separate apartment shall (when practicable) be provided for the reception of those children who, according to these rules, should not be present thereat.

Have you yourself, in connexion with your work on the Religious Board of your Diocese, had opportunities of seeing the state of the schools, or are you merely a member of the Board?—I am merely a member of the Board.

APPENDIX TO EVIDENCE.

APPENDIX No. 1 (vide evidence, p. 1).

MEMORIAL from the INHABITANTS of CAVAN, to the Lord Lieutenant

To His Excellency, the EARL of CLARENDOFF, Lord Lieutenant and General Governor of Ireland, &c., &c.

THE MEMORIAL of the undersigned INHABITANTS of CAVAN and its VICINITY, respectfully sheweth—

That Memorialists have only lately become aware, that His Majesty Charles I., in the Year 1627, granted certain Lands in the county of Cavan, in trust to the Archbishops of Armagh, in perpetual succession, for the payment of a Master for Free Education at Cavan. That by Act of Parliament in 1813, these lands were transferred with those of other Schools similarly endowed to the Board of Education, by which Act it was provided, that any Rector or Rectors, the Masters and Assistants, and repairs of Schoolhouses, should be applied to the maintenance of Free Scholars.

That Memorialists now respectfully call your Excellency's notice to the non-fulfilment of these trusts, and the misapplication of the Revenues arising from the Land so granted. The Royal School of Cavan is not a Free School—the charges being £24 for board, and 28 for day scholars yearly, are still beyond the reach of many young persons who might otherwise avail themselves of that school.

That Memorialists cannot attach any blame in this respect to the present Master of the Royal School of Cavan, in whom they place the fullest confidence, and who they believe would most gladly carry out the original intentions of the Royal Founder of these if it was in his power—but Memorialists conceive that he has been unfairly and oppressively dealt with by the Board of Education, and unjustly deprived of the means of carrying the Royal School of Cavan as extensively useful to the locality, as they are sure it would be his most earnest desire to make it.

That Memorialists would humbly suggest that while the Masters of other Royal Schools enjoy a Salary of £400 or £500 per annum, the Master of the Royal School at Cavan, should enjoy a proportionate Salary; whereas the Board of Education, wholly unconnected as they are with the Town or County, by Property or otherwise, have without any just or sufficient cause, reduced the Salary of the Master of the Cavan Royal school, to a miserable stipend, quite insufficient to carry out the original intention of the Founder.

That Memorialists find that the original grant of Land to the Cavan Royal School was 1,200 Acres in extent, that at least 400 of these have been alienated from the School by some means of which they are ignorant—and that the Town and locality of Cavan have been illegally deprived of the benefit which they might have derived from the Revenues of these Lands, had they been applied as originally intended in promoting Free Education.

That your Memorialists are aware the Board of Education have established some Exhibitions to Trinity College, out of the Funds of Cavan, Armagh, and the other Royal Schools, that Memorialists cannot believe it was the intention of the Royal Governor of these Lands or the Parliament, that the University already so liberally and consistently endowed, should be still further enriched out of the Funds of the Royal Schools—they rather presume, these Funds were intended to support Free Scholars on the foundation, these Scholars to be elected by a local Board, and to give cheap Education to those Persons who may prefer to it from distant places.

That Memorialists think it strange that there is not a single Member of the Board of Education connected with this Town or County, that Memorialists conceive the Board of Education should be remodelled, and that Local Boards would prove much more efficient in carrying out the intention of the Royal Founder of these Schools.

That Memorialists would recommend an amalgamation of the Funds of the Free Royal Schools, that in each, the Master should receive a liberal Salary—that two Assistant Masters should be paid—one Classical and one Science Master, and that the surplus Funds should be entirely applied to the maintenance and support of Free Scholars, elected from Families resident in the Town and Neighborhood in which the Royal School is situated by a Local Board, who it is presumed will be acquainted with the circumstances of each case, and will act with due discretion.

That Memorialists have only lately heard that a sum of £1,000, was in the Year 1805 and 1806, paid into Bank, out of the Revenues of the Cavan School Lands, and that £400 or £500 per annum, were added to this principal sum for several successive years afterwards, in order to create a Building Fund—the School was not built until 1810, and that, still after a lapse of nearly half a century—the payment for this Building is not completed.

Memorialists therefore, respectfully pray your Excellency to have immediate enquiry made into all these matters, with a view to correcting what Memorialists cannot look upon as any other right than as previous abuses; and also, with a view to the carrying out the intentions of the Royal Founder of these noble Institutions, by providing for the Inhabitants of the Town and County of Cavan "Free Education," under such rules and regulations as will accord with the present state of Society.

And Memorialists will ever pray, &c., &c.

1851.

EXPLANATORY STATEMENT, added to his Evidence, by Rev. WILLIAM STEELE, D.D.

My precise position relative to the expenditure on Portico, since my appointment has not, I think, been clearly brought out in my evidence. It is, in a word, this—I have spent the sum of £5,518 7s., on the schoolhouse and premises, over and above all that the Commissioners expended, as Mr. Paterson's certificate, and Dr. Kyle's letter, evidence; these documents are as follow:—

Office, 17, Kildare street, Dublin
February 24th, 1872.

DEAR SIR,—Having carefully examined the various engagements and improvements to Portico Royal School, which had been carried out by you between the date of your appointment to the Head Mastership of the School, and October, 1867, when my valuation was completed, I hereby certify that upon examination of vouchers for money paid, and a careful valuation of works done, I found that you had expended, in effecting valuable additions and improvements to the schoolhouse and premises, the sum of £4,481 19s. 4d. over and above the sums paid on account of such works by the Commissioners of Nadowed Schools, as fully set forth in my detailed valuation, dated October, 1867.

I AM, Dear Sir, your obedient Servant,
RMS. THOM PATTERSON, C.E.,
Building Surveyor and Valuer.

To the Rev. Wm. Steele, M.A.
Head Master, Portico Royal School, Enniskillen.

"The Commissioners of Education in Ireland,
27th April, 1872

DEAR SIR,—In the summons for yesterday's Board, the case of your present claim for repairs, distinct from improvements, was specially noted, and I fully brought under the consideration of the Board your printed Memorial and Letter; and I reported that the Schedule for expenditure which you forwarded to this office were fully ascertained (with the exception of an error in extraction of £314s. 6d., and which I had, therefore, deducted from your claim, reducing it to £8,096 7s. 8d.), by the members and recomputed that you had transmitted, and which had been carefully investigated in this office."

To the Rev. W. Steele. W. C. KYLE.
The italics in the above letter are Dr. Kyle's.
W. STEELE.

APPENDIX No. 4 (vide evidence, p. 28).

EXPLANATORY STATEMENT, added to his Evidence, by Mr. WILLIAM C. EADEN, M.A.

1. The most pressing want of the existing School (Diplia Diocesan) is not a master for Modern Languages, so much as a thoroughly competent English master; to take sole charge of a class or classes, ranging from eight to twelve years of age. Many of my present-day pupils come home after the holidays, from the National (Diplia) School, where they have been well taught in certain subjects, but have seriously deteriorated in other respects—e.g. correct enunciation, respect for their instructors, and for others as such; i.e. no distinct manly knowledge meant to be directly profitable in their business or profession.

2. As to my Past Pupils.—Of the two who went to the Queen's University, one has by this time joined the Medical Profession with credit—the other, at his Entrance to Galway College, took first Literary Scholarship, and fourth Mathematical Scholarship; besides a Composition Prize in English; and in his second year, 1870, was again first Literary Scholar, an highly distinguished answering. His Latin Prose was highly commended to me by Professor Maguire. This young gentleman, I may add, speaks in the highest terms of the instruction he has received at Galway, in Latin and Greek, from Professors Maguire and D'Arcy Thompson.

3. With regard to myself. At Anagh Royal School, I received excellent instruction (from and under Mr. Gifford), in Elementary Mathematics as well as in Classics; so that I took with ease a high first class, at the "Hills-go." Besides Classical distinctions in T.O.D., I was (twice) valedictorian, and a French prize; a second honour in Logic (S.P.), and in ethics (per. soph.). I passed the Final Divinity Examination (including Hebrew), High in the second Division; and (what seems to me most important to the matter in hand), at the Examination for the Civil Service of India, in 1868 (at which I was twelfth of the successful candidates), my marks in English Composition, History, and Literature, in the Mental and Moral Sciences, and in French and Italian (in the latter I scored over 200 out of 325), were all good.

4. Though I plead guilty as forty-three (43) years of age, I have no wish to be put on the shelf. I like boys; and have (I believe), like me. I enjoy the act of teaching what little I know, and with God's help, could (as I think) manage with success a large Day and Small Boarding School, with adequate assistance. At the same time, I am so prospect of being able to lay by for old age or infirmity, so that the greatest leave that could be offered to me, would be a small retiring allowance, to be granted only as proved incapacity for further work.

EXPLANATORY STATEMENT added to his evidence by Rev. RALPH SADLER, D.D.

Witness, not being aware of the questions he was to be asked, says his answers were merely from memory of what had taken place thirty years ago, and, after having consulted documents which he had at home, wishes to correct his evidence in the following particulars, viz. —

5735. Archbishop Thomas Wall, the then Incumbent, purchased a lease of half an acre of land at Blanchardstown, from Thomas Warren, of Corduff, and built a school on it with money given to him for the purpose, by William Crossstreet, of Kilmarnock, in the parish of Mullaketh, who also left by a registered deed, £10 yearly for ever, arising out of a perpetual Rentcharge, upon Follytown glebe restored tithes of lands in the barony of Screen, county of Meath, in trust for the then Archbishop of Dublin, as a salary for a schoolmaster, for an English Protestant Charter school, in the united parishes of Castleknock, Mullaketh, and Clonsilla. After a school had been taught there for some time, the said Wall provided on Crossstreet to give him and school-house as a residence, Wall having built a school house on his own glebe land, at Castleknock. At present the land belonging to the school is—68a. 10r. 30r., valued with three houses, at £178 5s., let to Mat. Duffy for £184 12s. 6d.; 11a. 1r. 30r., valued with house at £45 15s., let to John Rathbone for £10; 2a. 0r. 10r., valued at 2s., let to the Master for 2s.

5736. I have a letter from the Secretary of the Board of Charitable Bequests, saying that this £10 was given by that Board out of the principal.

5737. A conveyance of the lands of Follytown, from Charles Le Garay, to me, dated 30th June, 1853, is in the Office of the Charitable Bequests Commissioners.

5738. His name is Alexander Kirkpatrick Wilson, son-in-law of Mr. William Tisdall, who left the estate to the school.

5739. There are now eight purely Roman Catholic schools, with the exception of three National schools, at which not more than about three Protestants in all attend.

5740, 5741. Yes, from the late Edward Gaye, esq., q.c., dated 26th December, 1852.

APPENDIX No. 11 (vide evidence, p. 225).

LETTER from Messrs. FITZGERALD, explaining, on behalf of the NUNS of ST. CLARE, certain portions of the evidence given by Mr. JOHN C. KELLY, J.P.

30, St. Andrew street, Dublin,
14th February, 1860.

DEAR SIR,—We are instructed by the NUNS at Harold'scross, to draw your attention to a few matters contained in Mr. John C. Kelly's evidence before the Commissioners which might have the effect of misleading the Commissioners when making up their report. There are also some matters as to which Mr. Kelly was not able to give the Commissioners sufficient information, and which we shall be glad to supply.

Question 6630. The bank stock alluded to in this question was purchased in the years 1805-6, the books of the Convent will show this.

Questions 6635-7. Mr. Kelly is in error here, in stating that the conveyance to the Convent were taken out in the name of the Superiors, the deeds are in the names of four of the Sisters.

Question 6637. The first rule alluded to in this question was meant on re-painting the orphreys, draining the playground and paving it with bricks.

6638. In addition to the visit of Lord Warran, mentioned in Mr. Kelly's answer, the Rev. Mr. Grant visits the Convent annually by direction of the Commissioners of the Patriotic Fund.

6662. The subjects' bill of costs mentioned in this question was chiefly for taking out, from the Church Commissioners, a renewal lease of the fields, and the perpetuity of them afterwards.

6668. The £300 lost on the land, in 1855, was owing to the cattle disease.

6670. The discrepancy alluded to in this question arises from the fact that the greater portion of the farm produce was consumed on the premises, the £18 6s. 8d., representing a small quantity actually sold.

6671. The bill of costs alluded to in this question was for the purchase of the land rent of portion of the convent premises from the Commissioners of Church Temporalities in Ireland.

6676. A separate Account Book is kept by the Nuns of all monies added to or taken from their funds, which can be produced if necessary.

6681. Unless otherwise directed small legacies are used by the Nuns, as incomes, and are not added to the Capital Account.

6687. A strict investigation is always made into the character of persons to whom the children are apprenticed, before they are allowed to leave the Convent.

6691. The mother Nuns look after the apprentices, and visit them from time to time, to see how they are getting on.

6695. Mr. Kelly's answer is perfectly correct, and there is a perfect record of these transactions.

6703. The sisters are visited periodically by the clergy, who examine them, and see if they are up to a proper standard.

6705-6. Now and then girls who lose their place, or from any cause leave the people to whom they have been apprenticed, are taken back into the Convent. There is no house of refuge attached, so few girls return prefer it unnecessary. As a rule they succeed very well in the world.

In conclusion if the Commissioners wish any further information, as to anything in connection with this Convent we shall be happy to obtain it for you.

Yours truly,

D. and T. FITZGERALD

Secretary Endowed Schools Commission,

APPENDIX No. 13 (vide evidence, p. 251).

LETTER from Rev. W. G. BOYCE.

Swords, 4th June, 1873.

MY LORDS AND GENTLEMEN,—Mr. Morrison having stated in his evidence that he had searched unsuccessfully for the word "Boys," I may leave to refer to the following well-known class-books in which the word is explained.

(1) Johnston's Compendious Geography, page 32. This book was published in 1871. The question was asked in 1870.

(2) Sullivan's Dictionary, page 144.

(3) Civil Service Spelling Book, page 5.

(4) Reverie's Spelling Book, page 23. From the use of this book Mr. Morrison seems to have derived considerable advantage; see the annexed advertisement taken from the Journal of the National Teachers.

THE CIVIL SERVICE SPELLING BOOK, revised to suit results, as Board's List, 494—Of this book many flattering testimonials have reached the author, Mr. MERRISON, Head Teacher of Swords National School, writes—"Thanks to your Civil Service Spelling Book, we had not a single failure in spelling out of 101 examined for results!"

From the annexed Examination Paper of 1870, it will be seen that the word "boys" was only one out of ten geographical terms given for explanation, the whole constituting one question, so that if this word was passed over by the pupil he only lost one-tenth of a mark, or the one-hundredth of the maximum number. Reference to the paper will show it to be a fair average paper.

Mr. Molloy assisted Doctor Griffin in the Poor Examination in 1870 and 1871. Taking boys and girls together the Borough school in 1870 took the two firsts and the two thirds, the National school both seconds and both fourths.

In 1871 the Borough school girls took first, second, fourth, fifth, sixth places. The National School girls third, seventh and eighth places. The Borough School boys took second, third, fourth places. The National school, first, fifth, sixth, seventh, eighth places.

Examiner's list. In 1873, National school girl took first in examination. In 1874, National school boy took first in National school examination. In 1877, both firsts were taken by National school children.

During the thirteen years ending 1873 out of 26 firsts (13×2=26), one first for boys and one for girls, the National school took 7. Out of 26 seconds the National school took 10. And out of 26 thirds the National school took 12. The Borough school in each case taking the remainder.

I may state that a National school boy (or girl) although only taking the fourth or fifth place at the examination, yet if he is the best boy of his own school, he obtains the first fee for Entrance, viz., £10. Such a case actually occurred in 1873. The first four places were taken by Borough school boys, but as there were only three fees for them the fourth boy, who answered 54 per cent, was entitled to nothing, the Board, however, granted him a gratuity of £12, but the fifth boy (National school) who only answered 50 per cent was entitled to and obtained the first fee for Entrance, viz., £10. The sixth as 48 per cent got £10, and the seventh on 42 per cent got £12.

I enclose a Requisition about the National Board, by which it will be seen that the class books before referred to are sanctioned by them, and on their list of books.

I am my Lords and Gentlemen,

Your obedient servant,

WILLIAM G. BOYCE,

LETTER from Mr WILLIAM H. MAFFETT

21, South Frederick-street, Dublin,
18th August, 1880.

DEAR SIR,—With reference to my evidence before the Endowed Schools Commission it is only right for all parties that it should be known that I came prepared to give every information in my power as to the present position of the property. I had not the least idea I should have been subjected to such a close examination as took place with transactions extending back over a period of several years, and had not in any way prepared myself to meet it, which was the cause of some inaccuracy in my evidence. In fact I was wrong when I discovered the nature of the information sought, not to have requested to have the inquiry postponed to admit of my doing so.

I am, dear sir, faithfully yours,

WILLIAM H. MAFFETT.

To the Secretary Endowed Schools Commission,

REPORT OF EXAMINATIONS OF ULSTER PROVINCIAL SCHOOLS, LIMBURN.

Queen's College Belfast,
13th March, 1876.

SIR,—According to instructions received from you I continued, on three days towards the end of February, the pupils of the Ulster Provincial School, Limbourn, and I now have to report on the general condition and arrangements of the School as an Educational Institution, and in particular as the proficiency of the pupils in their various courses of study.

The Ulster Provincial School is a Boarding and Day School, established and endowed for the education of the children of members of the Society of Friends. It was opened so long ago as the year 1774. In 1856 the number of pupils in attendance was 95; in December, 1873, 34; in June, 1876, it had risen to 66, and at present it is over 60. It would thus appear that the school stands on the second economic base of supplying something which is really demanded—and increasingly demanded. At present the power of supply is taxed to the uttermost, for, although the public on which it relies for support is a small one, the present school-buildings are barely sufficient (if not, indeed, insufficient) for the accommodation of the pupils and the teaching staff. A unique feature in the school arrangements is that the girls and boys to a great extent are taught in the same classes, and pursue the same courses of study. The school is, in fact, a large family—better ordered, it is true, than most large families, as it would need to be—last still retaining the family outline. From such an arrangement the most beneficial results might be predicted, and, as a matter of fact, these results have been realized.

But I observe, with concern, the very early age at which pupils leave the school. The average age of the pupils in the first class is under fourteen. Now, if the large majority of these go direct from school to commercial life, as I believe they do, and if this be a representative case—i.e., if boys are drafted off from all commercial schools to be drilled into merchants at the same early age—we have the prospect of a distant future, of a commercial community composed of men whose education will have ceased seven years before the time of their majority.

Though the school is primarily intended for pupils who are to earn their livelihood in commercial pursuits—in fact, what is called a Commercial School—yet the narrow curriculum of such a school is by no means that which is followed. While great attention is paid to these studies which have a direct bearing on commercial life, these other studies which are universally allowed to have a much higher educational value are not only not neglected but are prosecuted with energy, and, I am happy to add, with considerable success. I note with extreme satisfaction that all the boys, and a few of the girls, learn Latin; that 28 pupils (9 being girls) study Physical Science (Arithmetic, Latin and Heat, &c.); that 30 in a school of about 60 learn French; that a considerable number learn English and Algebra; and that all are taught Drawing. As regards the school curriculum, I regret (1.) that Greek finds no place in it. The pupils are thus deprived from the great educational advantages which the study of Greek affords; they are also prevented from looking directly from their studies in this school to the higher studies of a university—a knowledge of Greek being in most cases necessary for entrance. (2.) In the list of Physical Sciences I should like to see Chemistry, the study of which, useful in so many respects, is of very high educational value.

The results of the examination may be stated in few words. Taking first the group of subjects which are thought of when we speak of an "English Education," I observe that the examination was in all cases satisfactory and, in some cases more than satisfactory. The proficiency of the pupils in Arithmetic—particularly in those parts of the science which have a practical bearing—is quite remarkable, and this especially true with regard to Mixed Calculations, which they perform with extraordinary ease and accuracy. In this subject, as indeed in all, the first class is not only absolutely, but relatively, by far the best, which shows that, when the teachers have sufficient time, they can turn out good work.

The Reading is clear and intelligent, and the pupils speak with a good accent—a French, better accent than the accents of the province—and yet without tainting or affectation. I have not noticed the fault referred to by a former Examiner—that the girls read too fast. It has probably disappeared. The Writing is good, and of a good style; and I am glad to see that the girls are taught the same bold, legible hand as the boys. As regards Geography—the first class can answer pretty stiff questions not only in Political but in Physical and Mathematical Geography, and in all the classes it is evident that the study of the Map forms a part of every Geography lesson. The Grammar is good, particularly among the boys of the first class; but I should like to see it taught less with an eye to practical results—which, if the Grammar be English Grammar, are next to none—less, in fact, than it is at a school, and a reliance of the highest educational value. The History also is good, but the course is rather narrow, being too much confined to the genealogies and dates of the kings and the principal events. As regards Grammar and History, the introduction of works on the Logical Analysis of Sentences, and of such a book as Green's History of the English People, is a step in the right direction. Spelling (tested by passages dictated to the several classes), and Composition (written off-hand on a prescribed theme) both satisfactory.

Turning now to the more advanced group of subjects, in which so much proficiency cannot be expected, I observe that in Latin the pupils in the first class are able to read, construe, and parse a rather stiff passage from the First Book of Aeneid, to read off into Latin some easy sentences from their exercise book, and to state the general rules of the Syntax. The second class is still struggling with the forms. I hope soon to hear that the "new" pronunciation of Latin has been introduced; I will very willingly give my assistance in introducing it, if such should be desired. In French, the upper class can read and translate at sight (with a little help) an unprepared passage, and can answer very fairly on the Grammar. The lower class shows to some advantage on practical questions that on theoretical ones, I mean the pupils can understand a sentence when spoken to them better than they can explain the construction of it. This is to be expected—in fact, is altogether as it should be. Some of the pupils seem to me to speak French with a remarkably pure accent. The Occult and Algebra are as yet very elementary, but, so far as the pupils have gone, the work is satisfactory. The Drawing is far more than satisfactory. Some of the Boys—of which, by the way, are from the model as well as from the district—are most creditably exhibiting first class lines, and showing on the part of the pupil, accuracy of eye, a knowledge of the general laws of Perspective, and considerable taste. On the whole, it may be said that nothing prevents this group of scholasticism being worked up to something very creditable but the early age at which the pupils leave school.

Whilst two or three of the girls in the first class are perhaps better than any two or three boys—all subjects of study being taken into account—yet the girls, as a whole, are not equal to the boys as a whole. This is partly due to the fact that the girls have to devote a considerable portion of their time to learning housewifery and domestic duties, which is with them no amateur work, but a duty which has to be done in good earnest. Their backwardness in class, therefore—while, after all, is very trifling—does not represent a positive loss. The boys also give assistance in the garden, &c.

The favorite amusements of the boys during play-hours, when they are not out of doors, are turning and carving, in which they exhibit wonderful skill and industry. I have seen some beautiful specimens of their work. They seem to be very happy, and to have a real regard for their teachers. They are loyal and obedient, and (an important point) their teachers seem to accept all that the pupils can give of obedience and affection. Honest work seems to be done in this place, and to be attended with success. I have only to suggest that the great advantages of the School—by which I do not mean the endowments, but the good derived from the labours of energetic and conscientious teachers—are not within the reach of a larger number of boys and girls.

I have the honour to be, Sir,

Your obedient servant,

S. J. McMILLAN, M.A.

STATEMENT handed in by Rev. ABRAHAM S. HUTCHINSON, M.A.

SEVERE REASONS to account for the small number of Boarders attending CHARMEL ENDOWED SCHOOL.

1. The school having been discontinued as a boarding school for twenty-six years.

2. The complaints so generally made of the Irish gentry sending their sons to English Schools, which is very much the case in this neighbourhood.

3. The fact that there is another middle class school in a neighbouring town, the master of which being, as I believe, deservedly popular, had secured most of the sons of the gentry in this and the neighbouring counties, before my appointment to the school.

4. The want of opportunity there has been so far of pupils from Charnel Endowed School obtaining University distinction, the great majority of them being destined for the Civil Service, Banks, &c.

APPENDIX No. 19 (vide evidence, p. 440).

STATEMENT by Mr. HENRY VINCENT MACKENZIE, the AGENT of BISHOP FOY'S TRUSTEES, of the circumstances and conditions under which he holds the agency.

1. Mr. Mackenzie is a Solicitor and holds other agencies.

2. In the year 1869 Mr. Mackenzie was appointed by the late trustees to be their agent, Secretary and Treasurer. During these times his duties in the two latter capacities were such as to leave him at liberty to visit the property and to examine into its condition, which he proceeded to do, and was making fair progress, spending the whole available day on the lands (some of which are about twelve miles from Waterford, and none nearer than about nine miles) each time.

3. Under the present trustees, Mr. Mackenzie's duties, as Secretary and Treasurer, became so heavy as to absorb much of the time and attention which were previously available for visiting the property, but he has, nevertheless, gone there from time to time to inspect improvements and for other special purposes.

4. The Commissioners, when examining Mr. Mackenzie, intimated to him that it was, in their opinion, his duty to have exercised a constant supervision over the property by going over all the farms at regular intervals, inasmuch as his Receiver's fees covered the discharge of that duty. Mr. Mackenzie, however, submits that such Receiver's fees, together with his £50 a year as Secretary and Treasurer, were, in fact, no more than an equivalent for the general work done, and the general responsibility sustained, and that such supervision was scarcely possible under the existing arrangement.

5. Mr. Mackenzie would gladly promote the making of a special arrangement for that purpose.

2. If not, how are the school premises held?
3. Has the school any land, other than that upon which the school buildings stand?
4. If so, how is such land held? By whom? How is it used, and for whose benefit?
5. Is any money invested for the benefit of the school? If so, how much? and when was same invested? In whose names and in what security does it now stand?

6. Is the school entitled to any annuity or rent-charge? If so, how much, and by whom, and at what date was the same granted? and upon whose estate is it now charged?

7. Is the school entitled to any endowment or property not mentioned above, other than the grants it receives from the National Board? If so, state amount and other particulars.

I certify the above answers are correct, to the best of my knowledge and belief.

Endowed Schools Commission,
Office, Four Courts, Dublin,
—1879.

SIR,—The Commissioners appointed by His Grace the Lord Lieutenant to inquire into the endowments, funds, and actual condition of all schools endowed for the purposes of education in Ireland have been informed that you are able to give them information in reference to—School, No.—on the Commissioners' list. May I therefore beg of you, at your earliest convenience, to fill up the enclosed List of Questions and Tabular Summary, and return them to me.

I am, sir, your obedient servant,
JAMES CROFT MEREDITH, Secretary.

No. 17.—CIRCULAR LETTER surrounding the Appointment of INSPECTOR of PRIMARY SCHOOLS.

Endowed Schools Commission,
Offices, Four Courts, Dublin,
1st day of September, 1879.

SIR,—I have the honour to inform you that the Endowed Schools Commissioners, with the view of carrying out fully the duty imposed upon them by the warrant of His Grace the Lord Lieutenant, a copy of which I herewith enclose, have decided upon having an inspection made, by an officer appointed by them, of a number of schools which come within the scope of His Grace's warrant. They have therefore appointed Mr. Hugh Koye Moore, Scholar, Trinity College, Dublin, as one of their Inspectors; and I am to inform you that Mr. Moore will visit your school at some time during the autumn, and I am directed by the Commissioners to express their hope that you will afford that gentleman every facility in the discharge of his duty.

I am, sir, your obedient servant,
JAMES CREED MERRIDITH, Secretary.

No. 18.—LETTER from SECRETARY of the IRISH SOCIETY for Promoting the Scriptural Education and Religious Instruction of the Irish-speaking population, chiefly through the medium of their own language; in reply to circular letter No. 7 supra.

17, Upper Sackville-street, Dublin,
January 23, 1879.

SIR,—In reply to your communication of the 8th inst., I am directed by the committee to state that there is not any school under the control of this Society, or connected with it, which has any endowment whatsoever.

I am, sir, your obedient servant,
WILLIAM FITZPATRICK, Clerical Secretary.

No. 19.—LETTER from SECRETARY of the SUNDAY SCHOOL SOCIETY, in reply to circular letter No. 7 supra.

Sunday School Society for Ireland, 17, Upper Sackville-street, Dublin, 22nd Jan., 1879.

SIR,—In reply to your circular of the 8th inst., requesting "a list of all schools endowed with property of any kind which are under the management or control of, or connected with the society of which you are secretary, together with the name of the head master of each such school," and also "a list of any such schools which, since 1857, may have been discontinued, with the date of such discontinuance."

I beg to inform you that there are no schools of any kind under the management or control of this society. There are 3,340 Sunday schools connected with this society, but the connection is merely the fact of having obtained aid in grants of books, and the sale of books at reduced prices to the managers of such schools. We know nothing of the endowments, if any, of the schools.

This Society has no control over the Sunday-schools connected with it, and does not interfere with the management; but gives aid, as before mentioned, when, upon the statements made in the applications, assistance seems necessary.

Our funds consist entirely of voluntary contributions.

I shall be happy to give any further information in my power, if the Commissioners require it.

I have the honour to be, your obedient servant,
HENRY M. PRITCHARD, Hon. Secretary,
Sunday School Society for Ireland.

Schools Commission, Four Courts,

Irish Church Missions, 11, Buckingham-street,
Adelphi, London, W.C., 29th Jan., 1879.

SIR,—The Society for Irish Church Missions has no Endowed Schools or Institutions, far, of course, an orphan school, having a house or land purchased by money collected for the purpose, as in no case an Endowed School, and there are no others which possess anything.

I remain, yours faithfully,

H. C. COST, Doctor of Divinity, and at present acting as Secretary of Irish Church Missions.

No. 21.—LETTER from WOODROFF COMPANY of DRAPEES, in reply to circular letter No. 7 supra.

Drapers Hall, London, E.C., 31st January, 1879.

SIR,—I have to acknowledge the receipt, this day, of your communication of the 28th instant. In reply I beg to inform you that the Drapers' Company has not any school in Ireland endowed with property under its management or control, or connected with it.

I am, sir, your obedient servant,
W. PHILLIPS SAWYER, Clerk.

No. 22.—LETTER from Rector of the CATHOLIC UNIVERSITY, in reply to letter of 8th January, 1879.

Catholic University of Ireland, 36, Stephen's-green, Dublin, 14th January, 1879.

SIR,—I am directed by the Right Rev. the Rector to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 8th January inst., in which, on the part of the Endowed School Commissioners, you request him to inform them of the names of any schools with which he is officially connected, or which are in any way connected with this University, and which may appear to him to come within the scope of His Grace the Lord Lieutenant's Commission.

Dr. Woodlock regrets that he is not in a position to give the information the Commissioners desire. He believes that no school connected with this University has any public endowment; neither does he know anything about the private property of these institutions.

Believe me, faithfully yours,
THOMAS SCARLETT, Secretary.

No. 23.—LETTER from WORSHIPFUL COMPANY OF IRONMONGERS, in reply to circular letter No. 7 supra, Ironmongers' Hall, February 10th, 1879.

SIR,—In answer to your circular letter, dated 25th January last, I beg to inform you that there are not any Endowed Schools in Ireland under the control or management of the Worshipful Company of Ironmongers of London.

I am, sir, your most obedient servant,

S. ADAMS BECK,

J. C. Meredith, Esq.,

Endowed Schools Commission, Four Courts, Dublin.

No. 24.—LETTER from the AGENT of the WORSHIPFUL COMPANY OF IRONMONGERS, in reply to circular letter of March, 1879, addressed to MANAGERS of NATIONAL SCHOOLS.

Lined Manor, Ballymossney,
March 26, 1879.

SIR,—I forward to-day replies to the questions asked with regard to the National Schools, under my management, on the Estate of the Worshipful Company of Ironmongers, London, and I think it right to say, for the information of the Endowed School Commission, that negotiations are in progress for vesting all the remaining schools (Drogheda is already vested) in the Commissioners of National Education, on leases of sixty years, at nominal rents. Although there are no endowments, the Company contribute towards the Teachers' salaries by yearly donations of £12, 29, and £6, according to the teacher's classification.

I am, sir, your obedient servant,

EDMOND BRIDGES,

Agent of the Ironmongers' Company.

The Secretary, Endowed Schools Commission,
Four Courts, Dublin.

No. 25.—LETTER from Rev. W. B. KIRKPATRICK, D.D., in reply to circular letter to Presbyterian Clergy, dated 8th January, 1879.

48 North Great George's-street,
15th January, 1880.

SIR,—I have received a communication from you, as Secretary to the Commissioners appointed by the Lord Lieutenant, to inquire into the condition and character of Endowed Schools in Ireland, asking me for information respecting any such schools, at present existing, or which have existed, within my district.

In reply, I have to state that my congregation is not contained within any parochial boundary, being composed of persons residing, many of them, in distant parts of the city, and in the suburbs. I have no specific district under my superintendence, nor any school. The congregation of Rutland-square, of which I am senior pastor, worshipped formerly in Mary's-abbey; and with the church in Mary's-abbey there were connected male and female day-schools, for children of parents of respectable character, but of limited means. These schools, being effectively conducted, were highly appreciated by the class of persons for whose benefit they were mainly designed. Since the congregation was removed to Rutland-square, fifteen years ago, we have had no week-day schools connected with the congregation, not having been able to procure a suitable site on reasonable terms. There were two small annuities, amounting to £6, together with some additional legacies, enjoyed by these schools. Altogether there is a sum of upwards of £600 in the hands of the Congregational Committee to be applied to educational purposes, as soon as a fit opportunity is found.

I am, sir, your obedient servant,

WILLIAM B. KIRKPATRICK.

No. 26.—LETTER from Dr. KYLE, SECRETARY of "The COMMISSIONERS of EDUCATION in IRELAND," to the Endowed Schools Commissioners.

"The Commissioners of Education in Ireland."

8, Clarendon-street, Dublin,
16th March, 1879.

SIR,—In reference to your letter of the 4th ultimo, I beg to state that, having laid before my Board the intimation therein contained that your Commission proposed to commence its public inquiries in the week beginning March the 31st, I am directed to state that this Board has no desire to make any observation in reference to that proposition.

As to your having, on the part of your Commission, power to examine the various Minutes, Accounts, Letters, and other books and documents in this office, you have already been made aware that the utmost facility in my power shall be most cheerfully afforded to you to do so.

The List of the Royal Schools prepared by the Royal Commissioners, and published in their Report, page 62, and dated 1858, is correct, with the exception of Carydact Royal School, which is omitted therefrom.

The Table of their respective Endowments, and published by the same body, cannot be considered to be accurate; and on this topic reference is very respectfully made to a recent report, presented by this Commission, dated February 15, 1878, in obedience to an order of the House of Commons—a copy of which returns is herewith sent.

The List of Schools of Private Foundation, set forth in the same Report of 1858, pp. 122–2–4, may be taken as being generally correct. And as regards the Endowments of these schools, reference is requested to a special note on this subject in the aforesaid Parliamentary Return.

As regards the schools of Waterford, New Ross, and Kinsale, the authority of this Board may be considered as somewhat doubtful.

As regards the Diocesan Schools, a tabulated return is herewith furnished, showing the present condition of each school and its premises.

In the Annual Report from this Commission for the year 1877–8, the particular attention of the Government was directed to the subject of the Diocesan Schools—a copy of which report is now forwarded. And subsequently to that Report, a special memorial and statement in reference to the Diocesan Schools and school premises, now, April 9, 1878, transmitted by order of this Board to the Chief Secretary for Ireland, the receipt of which memorial was acknowledged May 29, 1878. A copy of said memorial, &c., can be made from our books, and furnished if desired.

The Report of the Royal Commission, 1858 (to much of which, however, Mr. A. J. Stephens, &c., one of the Commissioners, took strong exception, publishing a separate report), contained many very important and valuable suggestions, the greater number of which it was considered could not be adopted without new legislation, which was hoped for and fully expected by this Board.

The want of the power to appoint and to pay Inspectors who should constantly inspect and report upon all Endowed Schools has been always felt, and has to a great extent paralysed almost every function of this Board.

That this Board has not this most necessary power is distinctly stated by the Select Committee of the House of Commons, which took evidence on Irish Foundation Schools. It reported—A.D. 1858, p. 64—thus:—"The Commissioners have no authority to appoint or salary Inspectors under the existing Statutes."

Mr. Stephens (one of the members of the Commission which reported in 1858), in his letter to the Secretary of State for the Home Department, reports, p. 8, as follows:—"But Statute 53 Geo. III., c. 107, and 3 Geo. IV., c. 79, do not give the Commissioners any power of inspection; and, consequently, any Inspectors appointed by them would not have any right or power to inspect."

Every investigation into the constitution and working of this Commission has remarked on its deficiency of powers, and recommended its complete reconstitution. And this Board, being fully convinced of the necessity of the reorganization and extension of powers, has frequently and urgently, in the Annual Reports, brought this subject under consideration of the Government, making suggestions and calling special attention to the principal points on which new legislation was, in its opinion, absolutely required. It is, however, to be regretted that neither the recommendations of the Select Committee of the House of Commons, nor of the Royal Commission (1858), nor the frequently-repeated Suggestions from this Board, have, as yet, led to any legislative reforms.

No. 57—EXTRACTS FROM ANNUAL REPORTS OF "The Commissioners of Education" enclosed in Dr. KYLE's letter of 10th March, 1879 (supra, p. 610).

EXTRACT FROM ANNUAL REPORT, 1869-70.

Having concluded our General Report, we now take the liberty most respectfully to submit to your Excellency's consideration certain suggestions, which, if carried into effect by the Legislature, would, we are convinced, be of considerable advantage.

The necessity for the attendance at our meetings of one of the Commissioners who are, virtute officii, Members of the Board should no longer be required to give legality to our acts, or to the affixing the Corporate Seal to any document.

Any three of the Commissioners assembled in pursuance of a general notice for a meeting should form a quorum for the transaction of business, as fully and effectually as if all the Members of the Board were personally present.

Except in the cases of private patronage, this Commission should have the power to appoint, to promote, to remove, and to superintend the various masters and teachers of the respective Schools.

This Commission should be distinctly empowered to appoint Inspectors of Schools, and to pay them such sums as may be fixed by resolution of the Board.

The necessity which at present exists for confining University Exhibitions to certain Schools, whose funds are ample for that purpose, should cease.

The Commissioners should have the power to apply the funds of all Public Schools for Exhibitions in connection with any School or Schools they may think fit to select for that purpose.

The Commissioners should have the power to apply the funds of largely Endowed Schools to the maintenance in aid of the funds of those Schools which are not so largely endowed, generally, and in any manner that may seem to be expedient, and should have complete power to remove Schools of Public Endowment to whatever localities may seem to be most advantageous to the public.

The Commissioners should have the power to select, determine, and alter the course of instruction, and the hours at which it shall be given, in the various Schools; the times and duration of the School vacations; the amount of School fees to be paid by daily pupils; and also should have power to appoint a certain number of daily pupils, who shall receive gratuitous instruction at each school.

EXTRACT FROM ANNUAL REPORT FOR 1870-71.

That having in our previous Annual Reports brought under the notice of Government the fact that the powers conferred upon us are very defective, we felt coerced by a sense of duty to bring this matter specially under your Excellency's consideration in the Report presented by us last year; in it we took the liberty to press upon the notice of your Excellency certain suggestions, the adoption of which appeared to us to be absolutely necessary to enable us properly to discharge the duties of our office. We then urged the advantage that would arise from conferring upon this Commission such enlarged powers, such as that of appointing, removing, and superintending the Masters and Teachers of the different Schools, and a greater extent of control over the School proceedings, and their arrangements generally. We stated that in our opinion the Funds which constitute the respective Endowments should be fully devoted to the maintenance of this Board, and that the Commissioners should have power to employ them for the benefit of such other Schools as they might think judicious, and not to employ them to individual Schools, as is now the case; that the Exhibitions and Scholarships conferred by us should not, as is under the present Law necessary, be restricted to pupils educated at particular Schools, but should, under certain regulations, be thrown open to a general competition amongst youths educated at other Schools. That this Board should have ample powers to appoint and to pay Inspectors and Visitors, who should, under its direction, from time to time, visit and report on the Schools under our supervision; and we beg most earnestly, but respectfully, to call your Excellency's special attention to the recommendations we were specially at fault in our Report for 1869 and 1870, and having done so, we beg to submit a general report of the Proceedings of the Board since the presentation of that Report.

EXTRACT FROM ANNUAL REPORT FOR 1871-72.

In many of our former Annual Reports, but especially in those for 1869-70 and for 1870-71, we took the liberty to submit to your Excellency's consideration suggestions (which appear to us to be most important) for the varying and the enlargement of the various powers conferred on this Commission, in reference to the funds which form the Endowments of Schools committed to us; and also as to the selection, control, promotion, and superintendence of the Teachers. We urged the necessity that exists for the appointment of paid Visitors or Inspectors of the Schools and Establishments generally; and we pointed out certain alterations in our constitution which, in our opinion, would be of great public advantage; and having heretofore brought these matters specifically under your Excellency's notice, we feel that we now sufficiently discharge our duties in respect to these suggestions and modifications by respectfully, but urgently, calling your Excellency's attention to the Annual Reports alluded to.

EXTRACT FROM ANNUAL REPORT FOR 1873-74.

The fact that our Annual Reports are characterized by a great degree of earnestness and generosity has been frequently brought under the notice of the Executive Government of the day, and by is attributed to the inefficiency of the means conferred on this Commission, and upon more than one occasion, but especially in our Report for the year 1869-70, to which we beg respectfully to refer your Grace, we called special attention to this important circumstance, and, at the same time, urgently pressed certain suggestions, which, if adopted, would, in our opinion, by improving and enlarging our powers, enable us to discharge our duties in a manner much more advantageous to the public.

In our Annual Reports for the year 1870-71, and for 1871-72, we again specially referred to the same subject, but we regret to state that as yet our often-repeated suggestions have been wholly unproductive of any result, and matters have been permitted to remain in the same unsatisfactory condition as heretofore.

No. 29.—ANNUAL REPORT OF "The COMMISSIONERS of EDUCATION in Ireland," for the year 1877-78, enclosed in Dr. KYLE's letter of 10th March, 1879, (supra, p. 610).

To His Grace JOHN, DUKE of MARELBOROUGH, K.G., Lord Lieutenant General and General Governor of Ireland, &c., &c., &c.

We, "the Commissioners of Education in Ireland," constituted by Acts of Parliament passed in the reigns of their late Majesties King George the Third and King George the Fourth, respectfully submit to your Grace a General Report of our proceedings during the year 1877-78.

Before entering into the details of our Report, we think it not improper to request your Grace's special attention to an extract from our Annual Report for 1869-70.

"We now take the liberty most respectfully to submit to your Excellency's consideration certain suggestions, which, if carried into effect by the Legislature, would, we are convinced, be of considerable advantage."

"The necessity for the attendance at our meetings of one of the Commissioners who are, ex officio, members of the Board, should no longer be required to give legality to our acts, or to the signing the corporate seal to any document."

"Any three of the Commissioners assembled in pursuance of a general notice for a meeting, should form a quorum for the transaction of business as fully and as efficiently as if all the Members of the Board were personally present."

"Except in the cases of private patronage, the Commissioners should have the power to appoint, to promote, to remove, and to superintend the various Masters and Teachers of the respective Schools."

"The Commissioners should be distinctly empowered to appoint Inspectors of Schools, and to pay them such sums as may be found by resolution of the Board."

"The measures which at present exist for confining University Endowments to certain Schools, whose funds are ample for that purpose, should cease."

"The Commissioners should have the power to apply the funds of largely Endowed Schools to the assistance and aid of the funds of those Schools which are not so largely endowed, generally, and in any manner that may seem to be expedient, and should have complete power to remove Schools of Public Endowment to whatever locality may seem to be most advantageous to the public."

"The Commissioners should have the power to select, discontinue, and alter the course of instruction, and the hours at which it shall be given, in the various Schools, the times and duration of the School Vacations, the amount of School Fees to be paid by daily Pupils, and also should have power to appoint a certain number of daily Pupils, who shall receive gratuitous instruction at each School."

Recommendations to a similar effect were urged in our Report for 1870-71, and referred to in all our subsequent Annual Reports, without, however, any result. The operation of the Irish Church Act gives, we most respectfully state to your Grace, additional force to our suggestions for certain changes in the constitution of this Board.

The consideration of questions which constantly arise in connection with the several estates vested in us, and which are managed by Land Agents generally resident within short distances of the respective properties, and the keeping in good repair the School Buildings of such Endowed Schools as possess funds under our control, necessarily engage much time and attention on our part.

We beg to report to your Grace that the Royal Scholarships founded by us, in connection with certain Royal Schools, in Trinity College, are not confined to any religious denomination; they can be obtained solely as rewards of successful Competition at a severe Examination, held by a Board of Examiners in Trinity College, and they become forfeited unless the holder obtains in each year of his College Course a certain number of honours prescribed by us; and we beg to refer to a Copy of the Programme specifying the Course of the Examinations for these Scholarships, and of our Regulations in connection with them, which is attached to this Report.

We submit a list of those at present holding Royal Scholarships.

The system of School Exhibitions recently established by us at certain Royal Schools, and of Prizes for the encouragement of a Mercantile Education, is now in full and satisfactory operation.

The periodical Returns made to us by the respective Schoolmasters show that in most of the Endowed Schools a high standard of instruction in Classics, in Science, and Modern Languages is afforded.

ANAGH ROYAL SCHOOL.—We beg to report that the new School and Class-rooms, stated in a former Report to be in course of erection, have, during the last year, been completed, and have been handed over to the use of the School. And we, acting on the advice and under the supervision of our Architect, have caused the School premises to be insured against fire for a much larger sum than heretofore. The half-yearly Returns made to us by the Master show that this School is in a very satisfactory condition.

DUNAGANNON ROYAL SCHOOL.—The School buildings at Dungannon are reported to be in thorough repair, and are capable of accommodating a much larger number of pupils than at present avail themselves of this Endowment.

As regards the Dungannon Royal School Estate, we beg to report that the negotiation between this Board and the Dungannon and Coalstown Railway Company has been fully carried out, that we have been paid the amount of the purchase-money, and have invested it in Government Funds to the credit of the Dungannon Endowment.

The Commissary General's Department being desirous to make arrangements for an Artillery Shooting Range on the shores of Lough Neagh, have applied to us for a lease of a small plot of ground, portion of this Estate, on the shores of the lake; and we are now taking such measures as we expect will enable us to comply with this application.

ENNISKILLIN ROYAL SCHOOL.—The latest half-yearly Return made to us by the Master of this School shows that a considerable increase in the number of the Pupils has taken place during the past year. The School premises, which are very extensive, are in excellent repair, and are available for a larger number of Pupils than are in attendance there.

CARRAN ROYAL SCHOOL.—The Returns from this School do not present during the past year any such variation from the usual condition as calls for any special notice to your Grace. The School premises are reported to be in a very satisfactory state.

BARROW ROYAL SCHOOL.—This School continues to be as numerously attended as could be expected, when its very unfavourable situation is taken into consideration. The Report of the Examiner who presided at the recent Examination for School Prizes granted by us, expresses a very favourable opinion of the method of teaching at this School, and of the answering of the Pupils.

BALLYMOR ROTAL SCHOOL.—Possesses only a very small Endowment, but exhibits during the last year a considerable increase in the number of its pupils. And we beg to report that we are in treaty with the landlord of the School premises for a renewal of the lease which is about to expire.

It may be right here to state to your Grace, that at all these Royal Schools, the payments yearly made by us for the salaries of the Assistant Masters, are supplemented (and in some instances very largely) by the Head Masters themselves.

CARLISFORT ROTAL SCHOOL.—Is very poorly endowed, and is, virtually, a Primary School, situated in a mountainous district of the County Wicklow. As regards this School, there is nothing calling for special notice, beyond the fact that the Master has reported that he has recently opened his School at night for such pupils as are unable to attend it during the day-time.

SCHOOLS OF PRIVATE ENDOWMENT.—The Clonard School at one time was a very successful establishment, but during the incumbency of the late Master became, at last, a snare in his hands. It is now, however, reported to be gaining public confidence, and is well attended under the superintendence of a gentleman recently appointed to the Head Mastership by the Patrons. The School-house has been by us put into a good state of repair.

The School at Midhurst, in the County Cork, continues, under the management of its present able Head Master, to be very largely attended, and the local Governors report to us that at a recent visit they were fully satisfied with the Establishment, and found every department in a most creditable condition. And we have to report to your Grace that the additional School Buildings which, as stated in our last Report we had commenced at the strong recommendation of the Governors, have since been completed, and handed over to the Master.

The Schools of Navan and Ballyvaughan, endowed by the Preston family with the Cappaghlinagh Estate in the Queen's County, never have been successful, the Teachers appointed to them from time to time having, for the most part, been inefficient for the discharge of their duties as Schoolmasters. This remark, however, does not apply to the present Head Master of Navan School, who is young and energetic, and who passed his university course with great distinction. The Ballyvaughan branch of this Endowment is situated in a most unfavourable locality. And we beg to report that in conformity with the directions of the founder, and of the provisions of 53 Geo. 3, c. 107, s. 14, we every year pay over to the Governors of the Hospital of King Charles II. at Omandown, Dublin, four-sixteenths of the net rents and profits of the Cappaghlinagh Estate.

The Primary School established by us for the tenantry of this Estate is largely attended, and is reported to be very successful.

BRACKENRATH (County Galway).—The Endowment is somewhat in amount that the Patrons report to us that they found great difficulty in inducing any competent person to accept the Mastership, which is at present vacant.

The Tullyvin Endowment, in the County of Cavan, which is for Primary Education, has been by us, at the urgent request of the Local Managers, greatly extended, and is by them reported to be a very great advantage to the humbler classes resident in that district.

ATREMORE.—The small sum annually paid by us to the Master of this School represents only the interest on a sum of money paid over to us by a former Lady Castlemaine, as arrears of this Endowment, and placed by us in the Government Funds; the interest on which is regularly paid by us to the account of the Patrons, from whom he directly receives the rest of the Endowment.

The above-mentioned Schools of Private Foundation comprise all those whose Funds are under our control, and are administered by us.

The private endowments of other Schools are generally of very small amounts, and the payments pass directly from the Patrons to the parties entitled to them.

The provisions of the Irish Church Act have, virtually, abolished the Diocesan School system, and most of the Schools have now no existence, and we beg to report to your Grace, that in all cases where old dilapidated Diocesan School-houses had been sold by us, the monies produced by the different sales were invested by us in the Government Funds to the credit of the respective Diocesan School Accounts; and the dividends are paid to such Diocesan Schoolmasters as continue to discharge their functions as such. But in the cases where such Diocesan Schools have lapsed, the dividends on the monies funded and accumulated are by us invested to the credit of each respective School, awaiting instruction to us as to what course should ultimately be adopted in reference thereto.

As regards the School-houses still in existence "for Diocesan Schools only," and where Schools have either already wholly ceased to be carried on, or are about to cease, we have to report that we have experienced considerable difficulty as to the proper course to be adopted by us with regard to them.

They are as follows:—That for Armagh and Connor, at Ballymena; for Down and Downmore, at Downpatrick; for Kilbane, Rathfriland, and Clougher, at Monaghan; for Killybeg, at Nass, and for Limerick, Killybeg, and Killybeg, at Limerick.

And we most respectfully state to your Grace that we are strongly of opinion that some legislation is absolutely necessary both with regard to the funds arising from the sale of old Diocesan School-houses, and the houses themselves, in cases where the nature of the trusts under which they are held render the sale of them impossible to us. Legislation is also required with regard to the other suggestions set forth at the head of this Report.

All which we beg respectfully to submit to your Grace as our Report.

ROYAL SCHOLARSHIPS IN T.C.D., AND SCHOOL EXHIBITIONS AND FELLOWSHIPS.

REGULATIONS OF "THE COMMISSIONERS OF EDUCATION IN IRELAND," for 1878.

"THE COMMISSIONERS of Education in Ireland" have founded thirty-five Exhibitions, called "Royal Scholarships," for students who shall enter Trinity College from the Royal Schools of Armagh, Dungannon, Enniskillen, or Cavan—viz. five of £40 per annum, and five of £30 per annum, for each of the Schools of Armagh, Dungannon, and Enniskillen, and five of £25 per annum, for Cavan School.

These Scholarships can be obtained by each student only as have been three years in all, previously to their entrance into Trinity College, pupils in some case or other of the Royal Schools. It is not, however, hereby intended to prevent pupils from moving from one of these schools to another, but the Scholarships founded for the respective Schools of Armagh, Dungannon, Enniskillen, and Cavan can be obtained only by students who have entered the University from the schools for which such Scholarships have been founded.

The Scholarships are tenable for five years, subject to certain conditions hereafter mentioned.

The Provost and Senior Fellows appoint Examiners in each year, to examine, on the first convenient day after the second entrance, in the month of October, such students as have entered from the said four Royal Schools, and shall offer themselves as candidates for these Scholarships.

In 1873 the examinations will be in the following subjects:—

- I.—Greek and Latin Classics (500 marks).
Three Greek Authors to be examined et cetera sec.
Three Latin Authors to be examined et cetera sec.
Unseen Greek and Latin passages, for translation in writing.
Greek and Latin Prose Composition.
Ancient History and Geography.

The Greek and Latin books selected for et cetera sec are as follows:—

- Homer, Books I, II, III, VI.
Euripides, Hecuba.
Ktesiphon, Anabasis, Books I, II, III, IV.
Virgil, Æneid, Books I, II, VI, VII.
Horace, Satires and Epistles, Book I.
Livy, Books III, IV.

II.—The English Course (100 marks), will consist of:—

- French, English, Past and Present. Student's Manual of English Literature, Chaps VI, VII, VIII, XI, XII, XV, XVII, XIX, with corresponding portions of Smith's Specimens of English Literature.
Milton, Paradise Lost, Book I, and Shakespeare, Merchant of Venice.
English Composition.
History of England (Student's History).
Modern Geography (Clyde).
III.—Modern Languages (50 marks).
French or German.
IV.—Science (100 marks).
Arithmetic.
Algebra, to the end of Quadratic Equations.
Euclid, with easy Deductions.
Plane Trigonometry.

Note.—The course of examination for Royal Scholarships will be varied, from time to time, by the Commissioners.

Candidates may present themselves for examination in any of the five preceding courses, or in all of them. The result of the examination will be determined by the aggregate number of marks obtained by the several candidates; the number affixed to each course denoting the greatest number of marks obtainable in that course.

No fellow-commoner can be admitted as a candidate for a Royal Scholarship.

No person shall be admitted as a candidate for a Royal Scholarship who shall not have remained at one of the Royal schools to which the Scholarships are attached till an entrance examination in Trinity College, in the month of October next preceding the examination for Royal Scholarships.

No scholar shall be admitted as a candidate who shall not have remained at each Royal School till the entrance examination (immediately preceding the examination for Royal Scholarships) of which he may be a candidate.

No student who shall have attained twenty years of age shall be permitted to become a candidate for a Royal Scholarship.

No student shall be elected a Royal Scholar unless he shall have, previously to the examination, produced to the Secretary of the Commissioners a certificate, signed by the Master of the Royal School from which he shall have entered Trinity College, certifying that such candidate is duly qualified according to the above-stated rules, such certificate to be subsequently handed by the candidate to the examiners.

The candidates from all the schools shall be examined together, and a return made to the Commissioners of their positive merit, and also an arrangement of the candidates according to their answering, without distinction of schools; the Commissioners reserving to themselves the power of suspending or diminishing one or more Scholarships, if sufficient merit has not been shown.

In cases of equality of merit in all other respects, the priority of a candidate will be taken into consideration. A student who has once been a candidate shall not be eligible on a subsequent occasion.

A Royal Scholarship becomes forfeited by the holder of it incurring any heavy collegiate censure, such as public admonition, or restriction, failing to proceed regularly with his class; or failing to obtain in any year either one honour of the first rank, or two honours of the second rank.

The election itself to one of these Scholarships is reckoned as equivalent to one honour of the second rank; a University Modernship, a University Scholarship, the Berkeley Gold Medal, the Vice-Chancellor's (Latin) Gold Medal, the Lloyd Exhibition, the Wray Prize, success in the first Indian Civil Service (competitive) examination, or at the Woolwich entrance examination, as equivalent to a University honour of the first rank; and obtaining a readership, or success at any of the subsequent Indian Civil Service examinations, as equivalent to a University honour of the second rank.

The Exhibitions become due half-yearly, viz., on the 1st of May and on the 1st of November. Payments will be made in May to such students only as have obtained in the preceding part of that year at least one honour of the second rank. A half-yearly payment, held over in May, will be made in November, provided an honour has been obtained in the meantime, and payment for the entire year will be made in November to such students as had not qualified for the May half-year's payment, and shall have then fulfilled all the requisites for the entire year.

In cases where very distinguished merit has been shown during their undergraduate course by students holding minor Scholarships, and where Scholarships for the same school remain suspended, or have been forfeited, the Commissioners will, at the close of each year, reserve monies from such students for an increase of their stipend.

The names of Royal Scholars are placed on the College books immediately after the names of the University Scholars, without, however, altering their degree of seniority amongst their class-fellows.

MIDDLETON SCHOOL.

"The Commissioners of Education in Ireland" will grant annually two prizes, one of £30 and one of £20, to such junior freshmen as shall, subject to the rules prescribed for the Royal Schools, have entered Trinity College, Dublin, from Middleton School, and, having been examined along with and in the same course as the candidates for the Royal Scholarships, shall be recommended by the Examiners as deserving candidates.

SCHOOL EXHIBITIONS AND PRIZES

The Commissioners have founded ten Exhibitions—viz., five of £25 and five of £15, in each of the Schools of Armagh, Dungannon, and Monkstown, tenable by boys at school.

One Exhibition of £25 and one of £15 shall be awarded in each year, to be competed for by boys under the age of fourteen years, whether they have been previously pupils of the school or not. These Exhibitions to be tenable for two years.

One Exhibition of £25 and one of £15 shall be awarded each year, to be competed for by boys between the ages of fourteen and sixteen years, who have been at least one year in the school. These Exhibitions to be tenable for three years.

No boy can hold two Exhibitions at the same time.

DISCERNING SCHOOLS.—The Provisions of the Church Disestablishment (Ireland) Act virtually extinguished the Discerning Schools; a very few of them, however, are still in existence.

No. 32.—LETTER from DEAN of RAPHON, dated 15th October, 1879, containing Information relative to "Robertson's Endowment." Co. General.

But,—I beg leave to remark that you will be so good as to lay before the Endowed Schools (Ireland) Commissioners, the following reply to their queries:—
For the history of the foundation of the Robinson schools, I beg leave to refer to the copy of Colonel Robinson's will . . . and to a . . . pamphlet, in which will be found copies of the Lord Chancellor's Decree (1803), of the Master's Report (1805), with an account of the working of the charities up to 1846.

The number of schools is now, and has for some years past been thirty-one, as at first, the Committee having found that they were going beyond their powers in making any grants to persons other than the thirty-one originally included, and having withdrawn such grants accordingly.*

A table is submitted, showing the schools now on the list, distinguishing those which are not in operation, and in each case noting the cause. In same table will be found the total numbers on the roll of each (distinguished as to religious denomination) and the average attendance according to last half-yearly return.

* Notes—The School of Tollypore was for some years admitted to participate, but that parish being (from a date long prior to date of the will) ecclesiastically united to Aylesford, it appeared to the Committee not to be entitled to a several grant. On reconsideration of the case, accordingly, the grant to Tollypore School was discontinued.

It appears from this table that 24 schools are in operation, and that of the 5 which are suspended, one has only just been closed, one is about to reopen, one will probably reopen next half-year, and two remain for which nothing has as yet been done.

In cases of schools thus closed, the Committee place the pay grant to credit of the parish—usually as a building fund. Particulars (if further required), of the schools that have thus been suspended will be readily furnished by me, so far as my information extends.

The 16 schools in operation have on their rolls 1,557 children, viz.—891 of Irish Church, 303 Presbyterian, 361 Roman Catholic.

Fifteen of these are in connexion with the National Board of Education. I may add, that Killybegs school, when re-opened, will likewise be so connected. Of these schools (as well as the others), the clergyman is in every instance the patron, except (I believe), Raynamterdoney, of which school Mr. Olphert, of Ballysmall, became patron while the parish was vacant, and continues to be so.

The schools are inspected half-yearly, in January and July, by clergymen of the diocese, appointed by the Committee. I enclose the form of Report which is filed and sent in by such inspectors, submitted to the Committee at their half-yearly meetings, before the teachers' salaries are paid. In cases of National schools, the inspector may (and usually does) confine himself to examining the Protestant children in the course of religious instruction. In the rest, he examines in the secular course as well.

The rules contemplate a certain amount of religious instruction for Roman Catholic children.

In practice, however, no child not being a member of the Church of Ireland is obliged either to receive instruction, or submit to examination, in religious knowledge. The Report form shows that the Committee only inquire into the religious proficiency of the Catholic children.

The Committee consider that they are bound to apply the grant in such case to one school in the parish, and have no power either to divide it between two or more schools, or to transfer it in whole or part to another parish. They understand the will to declare, not that Roman Catholic schools are to share equally with Protestant schools, but that Roman Catholic children, equally with Protestant children, are to share in the benefits of the "Robertson school" in each parish. At the time when the Endowment was made, it does not seem to have been contemplated that more than one school would be found necessary in any parish. And it appears that the school which is to benefit by the bequest is to be under the supervision of the clergyman of the (late) established church in the parish, and that the school-house and premises are to be held in trust by the Dean and Chapter of the Diocese (now represented by the "Representative Church Body"). The powers, therefore, of the Committee, even in transferring the grant from one school to another within any parish, seems to be very strictly limited.

The fund, amounting to £14,584 12s., New Three Per Cent Stock, stands in the names of the trustees to the charity; and the dividends thereon are received by Messrs. Ball, Bankers, of Dublin, free of Income Tax, and paid by them half-yearly to the Committee's Bankers ("Provincial Bank," Lendallery).

I have the honour to be, Sir, your obedient servant,
JOHN GUYER, B.D., Dean of Raphoe,
(Hon. Sec. and Treas. to the Robertson Committee).
